

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. CONSTITUTION OF CALIFORNIA.

CONSTITUTION.

ADOPTED BY THE CONVENTION, OCTOBER 10, 1849; RATIFIED BY THE PEOPLE, NOVEMBER 13, 1849; PROCLAIMED, DECEMBER 20, 1849; AND AMENDED, 1862.

PREAMBLE.

We, the people of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure its blessings, do establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE I. DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.
II. RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.
III. DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.
IV. LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.
V. EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
VI. JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.
VII. MILITIA.
VIII. STATE DEBTS.
IX. EDUCATION.
X. MODE OF AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.
XI. PROMISCUOUS PROVISIONS.
XII. BOUNDARY.
SCHEDULE.

ARTICLE I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. Inalienable rights.
2. Popular government.
3. Jury trial.
4. Religious worship, and liberty of conscience.
5. Habeas corpus.
6. Excessive bail, fines and punishments.
7. All offenses bailable—one exception.
8. Personal rights, and rights of property.
9. Liberty of speech and press, and law of libel.
10. Popular assemblies.
11. Uniformity of general laws.
12. Military power.
13. Quartering of soldiers.
14. Representation.
15. Imprisonment for debt.
16. Laws prohibited.
17. Rights of foreigners.
18. Slavery prohibited.
19. Search warrants.
20. Treason defined, and how punished.
21. Popular rights retained by the people.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing, and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

SEC. 3. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate forever; but a jury trial may be waived by the parties, in all civil cases, in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require its suspension.

SEC. 6. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishment be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained.

SEC. 7. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident, or the presumption great.

SEC. 8. No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime (except in cases of impeachment, and in cases of militia when in actual service, and the land and naval forces in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in time of peace, and in cases of petit larceny, under the regulation of the Legislature) unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury; and, in any trial in any Court whatever, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend, in person and with counsel, as in civil actions. No person shall be subject to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor shall he be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions on indictments for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right freely to assemble together to consult for the common good, to instruct their Representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by this State in time of peace; and, in time of war, no appropriation for a standing army shall be for a longer time than two years.

SEC. 13. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 14. Representation shall be apportioned according to population.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in cases of fraud; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed.

SEC. 17. Foreigners who are or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State.

SEC. 19. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue, but for probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 20. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 21. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

SEC. 22. The Legislature shall have no power to make an appropriation, for any purpose whatever, for a longer period than two years. —[Amended, 1871.

ARTICLE II.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

SECTION 1. Who are or may be electors.
2. Privileges of electors.
3. Militia duty, when not to be performed by electors.
4. Residence of voters, gained or lost.
5. Who are not electors.
6. Election by ballot.

SECTION 1. Every white male citizen of the United States, and every white male citizen of Mexico who shall have elected to become a citizen of the United States, under the treaty of peace exchanged and ratified at Queretaro, on the thirteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State six months next preceding the election, and the county or district in which he claims his vote thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or hereafter may be authorized by law; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the Legislature, by a two-thirds concurrent vote, from admitting to the right of suffrage Indians, or the descendants of Indians, in such special cases as such a proportion of the legislative body may deem just and proper.

SEC. 2. Electors shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the days of election, during their attendance at such election, and going to and returning therefrom.

SEC. 3. No elector shall be obliged to perform militia duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 4. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas; nor while a student at any seminary of learning; nor while kept at any almshouse, or other asylum, at public expense; nor while confined in any public prison.

SEC. 5. No idiot or insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector.

SEC. 6. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

ARTICLE III.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

SECTION 1. Three separate departments.

SECTION 1. The powers of the government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments: the legislative, the executive, and judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

ARTICLE IV.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. Senate and Assembly, and enacting clause of laws.
2. Sessions of the Legislature.
3. Election and term of Assemblymen.
4. Qualifications of legislators.
5. Election and term of Senators.
6. Number and classes of Senators.
7. Number of Senators, when increased.
8. Organization of legislative Houses.
9. What number constitute a quorum.
10. Rules for their government, and expulsion.
11. Each House to keep a journal.
12. Members privileged from arrest and summons.
13. Vacancies, how filled.
14. Open doors, and secret sessions.
15. Adjournment, how long and where to.
16. Origin and passage of bills.
17. Bills to be approved by the Governor or return vetoed; passage over the veto.
18. Assembly to present and Senate to try articles of impeachment.
19. What officers liable to impeachment. Judgment in what.
20. Member ineligible to office created during his term of office.
21. Persons holding lucrative offices under the United States Government, etc., ineligible to office under State Government. Proviso.
22. Embezzlement or defalcation of public funds by officer. Penalty.
23. Public moneys and accounts, how disposed of and kept, and published with laws.
24. Compensation, how fixed.
25. Title of laws; how revised and amended.
26. Divorces shall not be granted by Legislature.
27. Lotteries prohibited.
28. Census, when and how taken. Basis of representation.
29. Apportionment of legislators.
30. Congressional, Senatorial, and Assembly Districts.
31. Corporations to be formed under general laws.
32. Dues of corporations, and individual liabilities therefor.
33. What are corporations. Their powers and duties.
34. Banks of deposit authorized.
35. Banks of circulation prohibited.
36. Individual liabilty of corporation for debt.
37. Organization of municipal corporations.
38. Legislative elections to be viva voce.
39. Amendments to Article IV, not to affect official incumbency.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence on the first Monday of December next ensuing the election of its members, unless the Governor of the State shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than one hundred and twenty days.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 3. The members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Wednesday in September, unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature, and their term of office shall be two years.

SEC. 4. Senators and members of Assembly shall be duly qualified electors in the respective counties and districts which they represent.

SEC. 5. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly; and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State and of the county or district for which he shall be chosen, one year next before his election.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 6. The number of Senators shall not be less than one third, nor more than one half, of that of the members of the Assembly; and at the first session of the Legislature, after this section takes effect, the Senators shall be divided by lot, as equally as may be, into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half shall be chosen biennially.

SEC. 7. When the number of Senators is increased they shall be apportioned by lot, so as to keep the two classes as nearly equal in number as possible.

SEC. 8. Each House shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members.

SEC. 9. A majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

SEC. 10. Each House shall determine the rule of its own proceedings, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

SEC. 11. Each House shall keep a journal of its own proceedings, and publish the same; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House on any question shall, at the desire of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 12. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, and shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

SEC. 13. When vacancies occur in either House, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

SEC. 14. The doors of each House shall be open, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the House, may require secrecy.

SEC. 15. Neither House shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

SEC. 16. Any bill may originate in either House of the Legislature, and all bills passed by one House may be amended in the other.

SEC. 17. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both Houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each House present, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevent such return.

SEC. 18. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for that purpose the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members present.

SEC. 19. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the District Court, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall, nevertheless, be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law. All other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office, in such a manner as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 20. No Senator or member of the Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this State which shall have been created or the emoluments of which have been increased during such term, except such office as may be filled by election by the people.

SEC. 21. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or any other power, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State; provided, that officers in the militia to which there is attached no annual salary, or local officers and Postmasters, whose compensation does not exceed five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

SEC. 22. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State; and the Legislature shall, as soon as practicable, pass a law providing for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

SEC. 23. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature.

SEC. 24. The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a compensation to be fixed by law, and paid out of the public treasury; but no increase of the compensation shall take effect during the term for which the members of either House shall have been elected.

SEC. 25. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one object, and that shall be expressed in the title; and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised or section amended shall be reënacted and published at length.

SEC. 26. No divorce shall be granted by the Legislature.

SEC. 27. No lottery shall be allowed by this State, nor shall the sale of lottery-tickets be allowed.

SEC. 28. The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be taken, under the direction of the Legislature, in the years one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two and one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and at the end of every ten years thereafter; and these enumerations, together with the census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty, and every subsequent ten years, shall serve as the basis of representation in both Houses of the Legislature.

SEC. 29. The number of Senators and members of Assembly shall, at the first session of the Legislature holden after the enumerations herein provided for are made, be fixed by the Legislature, and apportioned among the several counties and districts to be established by law, according to the number of white inhabitants. The number of members of Assembly shall not be less than twenty-four, nor more than thirty-six, until the number of inhabitants within this State shall amount to one hundred thousand; and after that period, in such ratio that the whole number of members of Assembly shall never be less than thirty nor more than eighty.

SEC. 30. When a Congressional, Senatorial, or Assembly District shall be composed of two or more counties, it shall not be separated by any county belonging to another district. No county shall be divided in forming a Congressional, Senatorial, or Assembly District so as to attach one portion of a county to another county; but the Legislature may divide each county into as many Congressional, Senatorial or Assembly Districts as such county may by apportionment be entitled to.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 31. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act, except for municipal purposes. All general laws and special Acts passed pursuant to this section may be altered from time to time, or repealed.

SEC. 32. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the corporators and other means as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 33. The term corporations, as used in this article, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships. And all corporations shall have the right to sue, and shall be subject to be sued in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons.

SEC. 34. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but associations may be formed, under general laws, for the deposit of gold and silver; but no such association shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, or the paper of any bank, to circulate as money.

SEC. 35. The Legislature of this State shall prohibit, by law, any person or persons, association, company, or corporation, from exercising the privileges of banking or creating paper to circulate as money.

SEC. 36. Each stockholder of a corporation or joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for his proportion of all its debts and liabilities.

SEC. 37. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses in assessments and in contracting debts by such municipal corporations.

SEC. 38. In all elections by the Legislature the members thereof shall vote viva voce, and the votes shall be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 39. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of the amendments proposed to Article IV by the Legislature of eighteen hundred and sixty-one, no officer shall be suspended or superseded thereby until the election and qualification of the several officers provided for in said amendments.—Amended, 1862.

ARTICLE V.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. Governor is vested with supreme executive power.
2. Election of Governor and term of office.
3. Qualifications and eligibility to the office.
4. Returns of, and counting the vote for Governor.
5. Governor to be Commander-in-Chief.
6. Transact all executive business.
7. See to the execution of the laws.
8. Fill vacancies not otherwise provided for.
9. Convene special sessions of the Legislature.
10. Executive messages.
11. Adjourn the Legislature when the Houses disagree.
12. Must not be Governor and hold other office.
13. Reprieves and pardons for offenses.
14. Keeper of "The great seal of the State of California."
15. Sign and seal grants and commissions.
16. Of the Lieutenant-Governor.
17. When powers of Governor devolve on the Lieutenant-Governor.
18. Election and terms of other State officers.
19. Duties of Secretary of State.
20. Election of State officers for the first term by Legislature; thereafter, as in section eighteen provided.
21. Compensation. Not to be increased or diminished.

SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of this State shall be vested in a Chief Magistrate, who shall be styled the Governor of the State of California.

SEC. 2. The Governor shall be elected by the qualified electors, at the time and places of voting for members of the Assembly, and shall hold his office for four years from and after the first Monday in December subsequent to his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 3. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor (except at the first election) who has not been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this State two years next preceding the election, and attained the age of twenty-five years at the time of said election.

SEC. 4. The return of every election for Governor shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of government, directed to the Speaker of the Assembly, who, shall, during the first week of the session, open and publish them in presence of both Houses of the Legislature. The person having the highest number of votes shall be Governor; but, in case any two or more have an equal and the highest number of votes, the Legislature shall, by joint vote of both Houses, choose one of said persons so having an equal and the highest number of votes, for Governor.

SEC. 5. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia, the army, and navy of this State.

SEC. 6. He shall transact all executive business with the officers of government, civil and military, and may require information in writing from the officers of the Executive Department, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

SEC. 7. He shall see that the laws are faithfully executed.

SEC. 8. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have power to fill such vacancy, by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Legislature, or at the next election by the people.

SEC. 9. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Legislature by proclamation, and shall state to both Houses, when assembled, the purpose for which they shall have been convened.

SEC. 10. He shall communicate by message to the Legislature, at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

SEC. 11. In case of a disagreement between the two Houses with respect to the time of adjournment, the Governor shall have power to adjourn the Legislature to such time as he may think proper; provided, it be not beyond the time fixed for the meeting of the next Legislature.

SEC. 12. No person shall, while holding any office under the United States, or this State, exercise the office of Governor, except as hereinafter expressly provided.

SEC. 13. The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons after conviction, for all offenses, except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason, he shall have the power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall communicate to the Legislature, at the beginning of every session, every case of reprieve or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of the pardon or reprieve.

SEC. 14. There shall be a seal of this State, which shall be kept by the Governor, and used by him officially and shall be called "The Great Seal of the State of California."

SEC. 15. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of The People of the State of California, sealed with the Great Seal of the State, signed by the Governor, and countersigned by the Secretary of State.

SEC. 16. A Lieutenant-Governor shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the Governor; and his term of office, and his qualifications of eligibility, shall also be the same. He shall be President of the Senate, but shall only have a casting vote therein. If, during a vacancy of the office of Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor shall be impeached, displaced, resign, die, or become incapable of performing the duties of his office, or be absent from the State, the President of the Senate shall act as Governor until the vacancy be filled or the disability shall cease.

SEC. 17. In case of the impeachment of the Governor, or his removal from office, death, inability to discharge the powers and duties of said office, resignation, or absence from the State, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the Lieutenant-Governor for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease. But when the Governor shall, with the consent of the Legislature, be out of the State in time of war, at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue Commander-in-Chief of all the military forces of the State.

SEC. 18. A Secretary of State, a Controller, a Treasurer, an Attorney-General, and a Surveyor-General, shall be elected at the same time and place, and in the same manner, as the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, and whose term of office shall be the same as the Governor.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 19. The Secretary of State shall keep a fair record of the official acts of the legislative and executive departments of the Government, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all matters relative thereto, before either branch of the Legislature, and shall perform such other duties as may be assigned him by law; and in order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of the amendments proposed to said Article V by the Legislature of eighteen hundred and sixty-one, no officer shall be superseded or suspended thereby, until the election and qualification of the several officers provided for in said amendments.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 20. The Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Surveyor-General, shall be chosen by joint vote of the two Houses of the Legislature at their first session under this Constitution, and thereafter shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor.

SEC. 21. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Surveyor-General, shall each, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected; but neither of these officers shall receive, for his own use, any fees for the performance of his official duties.

ARTICLE VI.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. Judicial powers.
2. Supreme Court, how constituted. Three Justices necessary to transact business.
3. Election of Supreme Court Justices.
4. Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

Digitized by Google

SECTION 5. Judicial districts; Judges' terms; absence.
6. Jurisdiction of District Courts.
7. County Court; Judges; terms and powers of the Court, and Probate Judge of San Francisco.
8. Jurisdiction of County Court.
9. Justices of the Peace, their powers and duties.
10. Jurisdiction of Recorders' and other inferior municipal Courts.
11. Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerk, and other officers; their powers and duties.
12. Terms of the Courts, how to be fixed.
13. Fees and perquisites of judicial officers.
14. Decisions of the Supreme Court to be published.
15. Salaries of judicial officers, how fixed.
16. Ineligibility of Judges for other offices.
17. Charge of Judges to juries.
18. Style of "process."
19. Amendments to Article VI not to affect official incumbency.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, in County Courts, in Probate Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and in such Recorders' and other inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, excepting such business as may be done at chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at special elections to be provided by law, at which elections no officer other than judicial shall be elected, except a Superintendent of Public Instruction. The first election for Justices of the Supreme Court shall be held in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-three. The Justices shall hold their offices for the term of ten years from the first day of January next after their election, except those elected at the first election, who, at their first meeting, shall so classify themselves by lot that one Justice shall go out of office every two years. The Justice having the shortest term to serve shall be the Chief Justice.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; also, in all cases arising in the Probate Courts, and also in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any District Court, or any County Court in the State, or before any Judge of said Courts.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 5. The State shall be divided, by the Legislature of eighteen hundred and sixty-three, into fourteen judicial districts, subject to such alteration, from time to time, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to both Houses, as the public good may require; in each of which there shall be a District Court, and for each of which a District Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district, at the special judicial elections to be held as provided for the election of Justices of the Supreme Court by section three of this article. The District Judges shall hold their offices for the term of six years from the first day of January next after their election. The Legislature shall have no power to grant leave of absence to a judicial officer; and any such officer who shall absent himself from the State for upwards of thirty consecutive days, shall be deemed to have forfeited his office.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 6. The District Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars, and also in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for. The District Courts and their Judges shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, on petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, in their respective districts.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 7. There shall be in each of the organized counties of the State a County Court, for each of which a County Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, at the special judicial election to be held as provided for the election of Justices of the Supreme Court, by section three of this article. The County Judges shall hold their offices for the term of four years from the first day of January next after their election. Said Courts shall also have power to issue naturalization papers. In the City and County of San Francisco the Legislature may separate the office of Probate Judge from that of County Judge, and may provide for the election of a Probate Judge, who shall hold his office for the term of four years.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 8. The County Courts shall have original jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance, and of all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for, and also such criminal jurisdiction as the Legislature may prescribe; they shall also have appellate jurisdiction in all cases arising in Courts held by Justices of the Peace and Recorders, and in such inferior Courts as may be established in pursuance of section one of this article, in their respective counties. The County Judges shall also hold, in their several counties, Probate Courts, and perform such duties as Probate Judges as may be prescribed by law. The County Courts and their Judges shall also have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody in their respective counties.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 9. The Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in each city and township of the State, and fix by law their powers, duties, and responsibilities; provided, such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record. The Supreme Court, the District Courts, County Courts, the Probate Courts, and such other Courts as the Legislature shall prescribe, shall be Courts of record.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall fix by law the jurisdiction of any Recorder's or other inferior municipal Court which may be established in pursuance of section one of this article, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the Judges thereof.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 11. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officers, and shall fix by law their duties and compensation. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record in and for their respective counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment by the several District Courts of one or more Commissioners in the several counties of their respective districts, with authority to perform chamber business of the Judges of the District Courts and County Courts, and also to take depositions, and to perform such other business connected with the administration of justice as may be prescribed by law.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 12. The times and places of holding the terms of the several Courts of record shall be provided for by law.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 13. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace, Recorders, and Commissioners, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 14. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient; and all opinions shall be free for publication by any person.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 15. The Justices of the Supreme Court, District Judges, and County Judges, shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected; provided, that County Judges shall be paid out of the county treasury of their respective counties.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 16. The Justices of the Supreme Court, and the District Judges, and the County Judges, shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 17. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may state the testimony and declare the law.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 18. The style of all process shall be: "The People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 19. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of the amendments proposed to said Article VI by the Legislature of eighteen hundred and sixty-one, no officer shall be superseded thereby, nor shall the organization of the several Courts be changed thereby, until the election and qualification of the several officers provided for in said amendments.—[Amended, 1862.

ARTICLE VII.

MILITIA.

SECTION 1. Organization and disciplining of the militia.
2. Officers, how elected or appointed.
3. Governor to call out the militia.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide by law for organizing and disciplining the militia in such manner as they shall deem expedient, not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall from time to time direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor.

SEC. 3. The Governor shall have power to call forth the militia to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

ARTICLE VIII.

STATE DEBTS.

SECTION 1. Restriction on the legislative power to contract debts.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not in any manner create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except in case of war, to repel invasion, or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by some law for some single object or work, to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means, exclusive of loans, for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years from the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all money raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created. And such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each judicial district, if one be published therein, throughout the State, for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people.

ARTICLE IX.

EDUCATION.

SECTION 1. Superintendent of Public Instruction.
2. Duties of Legislature to promote and encourage education. Proceeds of school lands. School Fund.
3. To provide a system of common schools.
4. University Fund; how created, managed, and applied.

SECTION 1. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall, at the special election for judicial officers to be held in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and every four years thereafter, at such special elections, be elected by the qualified voters of the State, and shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first day of December next after his election.—[Amended, 1862.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of intellectual, scientific, moral, and agricultural improvement. The proceeds of all lands that may be granted by the United States to this State for the support of schools, which may be sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States, under an Act of Congress distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools, by which a school shall be kept up and supported in each district at least three months in every year; and any school district neglecting to keep up and support such a school, may be deprived of its proportion of the interest of the public fund during such neglect.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall take measures for the protection, improvement, or other disposition of such lands as have been or may hereafter be reserved or granted by the United States, or any person or persons, to this State, for the use of a University; and the funds accruing from the rents or sale of such lands, or from any other source, for the purpose aforesaid, shall be and remain a permanent fund, the interest on which shall be applied to the support of said University, with such branches as the public convenience may demand, for the promotion of literature, the arts and sciences, as may be authorized by the terms of such grant. And it shall be the duty of the Legislature, as soon as may be, to provide effectual means for the improvement and permanent security of the funds of said University.

ARTICLE X.

MODE OF AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1. Proposals of amendments. Submission to the people.
2. By what authority, and how a constitutional convention is called and acts, and how its acts are ratified.

SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this Constitution may be proposed in the Senate or Assembly; and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature then next to be chosen, and shall be published for three months next preceding the time of making such choice. And if, in the Legislature next chosen as aforesaid, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each House, then it shall be the duty of the Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people, in such manner and at such time as the Legislature shall prescribe; and if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments, by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the Legislature voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of the Constitution.

SEC. 2. And if at any time two thirds of the Senate and Assembly shall think it necessary to revise and change this entire Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors at the next election for members of the Legislature to vote for or against a convention; and if it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting at such election have voted in favor of calling a convention, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide by law for calling a convention, to be holden within six months after the passage of such law; and such convention shall consist of a number of members not less than that of both branches of the Legislature. The Constitution that may have been agreed upon and adopted by such convention shall be submitted to the people, at a special election to be provided for by law, for their ratification or rejection. Each voter shall express his opinion by depositing in the ballot-box a ticket, whereon shall be written or printed the words "For the New Constitution," or "Against the New Constitution." The returns of such election shall, in such manner as the convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the votes so certified to him. If, by such examination, it be ascertained that a majority of the whole number of votes cast at such election be in favor of such new Constitution, the Executive of this State shall, by his proclamation, declare such new Constitution to be the Constitution of the State of California.—[Amended, Nov. 4th, 1856.

ARTICLE XI.

16. Eighth article does not apply to expenditures of the first Legislature.

SECTION 1. All rights, prosecutions, claims, and contracts, as well of individuals as of bodies corporate, and all laws in force at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, and not inconsistent therewith, until altered or repealed by the Legislature, shall continue as if the same had not been adopted.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall provide for the removal of all causes which may be pending when this Constitution goes into effect, to Courts created by the same.

SEC. 3. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of this Constitution, no office shall be superseded thereby, nor the laws relative to the duties of the several officers be changed, until the entering into office of the new officers to be appointed under this Constitution.

SEC. 4. The provisions of this Constitution concerning the term of residence necessary to enable persons to hold certain offices therein mentioned, shall not be held to apply to officers chosen by the people at the first election, or by the Legislature at its first session.

SEC. 5. Every citizen of California declared a legal voter by this Constitution, and every citizen of the United States a resident of this State on the day of election, shall be entitled to vote at the first general election under this Constitution, and on the question of the adoption thereof.

SEC. 6. This Constitution shall be submitted to the people for their ratification or rejection at the general election to be held on Tuesday, the thirteenth day of November next. The Executive of the existing Government of California is hereby requested to issue a proclamation to the people, directing the Prefects of the several districts, or, in case of vacancy, the Sub-Prefects or Senior Judge of First Instance, to cause such election to be held on the day aforesaid in their respective districts. The election shall be conducted in the manner which was prescribed for the election of delegates to this convention, except that the Prefects, Sub-Prefects, or Senior Judge of First Instance, ordering such election in each district, shall have power to designate any additional number of places for opening the polls, and that in every place of holding the election a regular poll list shall be kept by the Judges and Inspectors of Election. It shall also be the duty of these Judges and Inspectors of Election, on the day aforesaid, to receive the vote of the electors qualified to vote at such election. Each voter shall express his opinion by depositing in the ballot-box a ticket, whereon shall be written or printed "For the Constitution," or "Against the Constitution," or some such words as will distinctly convey the intention of the voter. These Judges and Inspectors shall also receive the votes for the several officers to be voted for at the said election, as herein provided. At the close of the election the Judges and Inspectors shall carefully count each ballot, and forthwith make duplicate returns thereof to the Prefect, Sub-Prefect, or Senior Judge of First Instance, as the case may be, of their respective districts; and said Prefect, Sub-Prefect, or Senior Judge of First Instance shall transmit one of the same, by the most safe and rapid conveyance, to the Secretary of State. Upon the receipt of said returns, or on the tenth day of December next, if the returns be not sooner received, it shall be the duty of the Board of Canvassers, to consist of the Secretary of State, one of the Judges of the Superior Court, the Prefect, Judge of First Instance, and an Alcalde of the District of Monterey, or any three of the aforementioned officers, in the presence of all who shall choose to attend, to compare the votes given at said election, and to immediately publish an abstract of the same in one or more of the newspapers of California. And the Executive will also, immediately after ascertaining that the Constitution has been ratified by the people, make proclamation of the fact; and thenceforth this Constitution shall be ordained and established as the Constitution of California.

SEC. 7. If this Constitution shall be ratified by the people of California, the Executive of the existing government is hereby requested, immediately after the same shall be ascertained in the manner herein directed, to cause a fair copy thereof to be forwarded to the President of the United States, in order that he may lay it before the Congress of the United States.

SEC. 8. At the general election aforesaid, viz: the thirteenth day of November next, there shall be elected a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, members of the Legislature, and also two members of Congress.

SEC. 9. If this Constitution shall be ratified by the people of California, the Legislature shall assemble at the seat of government on the fifteenth day of December next, and in order to complete the organization of that body the Senate shall elect a President pro tempore, until the Lieutenant-Governor shall be installed into office.

SEC. 10. On the organization of the Legislature, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of State to lay before each House a copy of the abstract made by the Board of Canvassers, and, if called for, the original returns of election, in order that each House may judge of the correctness of the report of said Board of Canvassers.

SEC. 11. The Legislature, at its first session, shall elect such officers as may be ordered by this Constitution to be elected by that body, and within four days after its organization proceed to elect two Senators to the Congress of the United States. But no law passed by this Legislature shall take effect until signed by the Governor after his installation into office.

SEC. 12. The Senators and Representatives of the Congress of the United States elected by the Legislature and people of California, as herein directed, shall be furnished with certified copies of this Constitution, when ratified, which they shall lay before the Congress of the United States, requesting, in the name of the people of California, the admission of the State of California into the American Union.

SEC. 13. All officers of this State, other than members of the Legislature, shall be installed into office on the fifteenth day of December next, or as soon thereafter as practicable.

SEC. 14. Until the Legislature shall divide the State into counties and Senatorial and Assembly Districts, as directed by this Constitution, the following shall be the apportionment of the two Houses of the Legislature, viz: The Districts of San Diego and Los Angeles shall jointly elect two Senators; the Districts of Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo shall jointly elect one Senator; the District of Monterey, one Senator; the District of San José, one Senator; the District of San Francisco, two Senators; the District of Sonoma, one Senator; the District of Sacramento, four Senators; and the District of San Joaquin, four Senators. And the District of San Diego shall elect one member of the Assembly; the District of Los Angeles, two members of Assembly; the District of Santa Barbara, two members of Assembly; the District of San Luis Obispo, one member of Assembly; the District of Monterey, two members of Assembly; the District of San José, three members of Assembly; the District of San Francisco, five members of Assembly; the District of Sonoma, two members of Assembly; the District of Sacramento, nine members of Assembly; and the District of San Joaquin, nine members of Assembly.

SEC. 15. Until the Legislature shall otherwise direct, in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution, the salary of the Governor shall be ten thousand dollars per annum; and the salary of the Lieutenant-Governor shall be double the pay of a State Senator; and the pay of members of the Legislature shall be sixteen dollars per diem while in attendance, and sixteen dollars for every twenty miles traveled by the usual route from their residences to the place of holding the session of the Legislature, and in returning therefrom. And the Legislature shall fix the salaries of all officers other than those elected by the people at the first election.

SEC. 16. The limitation of the powers of the Legislature contained in Article VIII of this Constitution shall not extend to the first Legislature elected under the same, which is hereby authorized to negotiate

THE ENABLING ACT.

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR A CONVENTION TO FRAME A NEW CONSTITUTION FOR THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

[Approved March 30th, 1878.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. An election shall be held on the third Wednesday in June, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, of delegates to meet in Convention to revise the Constitution of this State and to frame a new Constitution. No other question shall be submitted to the people or voted on at such election, any statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding. All other elections called for the same time shall be held at the next general or special State election.

SEC. 2. The number of delegates to be chosen to such Convention shall be one hundred and fifty-two, to be apportioned as follows: The Counties of San Diego and San Bernardino shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of San Diego shall elect one delegate; the County of San Bernardino shall elect one delegate; the County of Los Angeles shall elect three delegates; the Counties of Santa Barbara, Ventura, and San Luis Obispo shall each elect one delegate; the Counties of Tulare, Kern, and Fresno shall elect one delegate each; and the Counties of Mono and Inyo shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Mariposa, Merced, and Stanislaus shall jointly elect one delegate; the Counties of Mariposa and Merced shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Stanislaus shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Santa Cruz, Monterey, and San Benito shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Santa Cruz shall elect one delegate; the County of Monterey shall elect one delegate; the County of San Benito shall elect one delegate; the County of Santa Clara shall elect five delegates; the City and County of San Francisco shall elect at large thirty delegates; the City and County of San Francisco at large, jointly with the County of San Mateo, shall elect one delegate; the County of San Mateo shall elect one delegate; the County of Alameda shall elect five delegates; the Counties of Contra Costa and Marin shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Contra Costa shall elect one delegate; the County of Marin shall elect one delegate; the Counties of San Joaquin and Amador shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of San Joaquin shall elect four delegates; the County of Amador shall elect two delegates; the Counties of Tuolumne and Calaveras shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Tuolumne shall elect one delegate; the County of Calaveras shall elect one delegate; the County of Sacramento shall elect five delegates; the Counties of Solano and Yolo shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Solano shall elect three delegates; the County of Yolo shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Napa, Lake, and Sonoma shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Napa shall elect one delegate; the County of Lake shall elect one delegate; the County of Sonoma shall elect four delegates; the County of Placer shall elect two delegates; the Counties of El Dorado and Alpine shall jointly elect two delegates; the County of El Dorado shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Nevada and Sierra shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Nevada shall elect four delegates; the County of Sierra shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Yuba and Sutter shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Yuba shall elect two delegates; the County of Sutter shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Butte, Plumas, and Lassen shall jointly elect one delegate; the Counties of Plumas and Lassen shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Butte shall elect two delegates; the Counties of Mendocino, Humboldt, and Del Norte shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Humboldt shall elect one delegate; the County of Mendocino shall elect one delegate; the County of Del Norte shall elect one delegate; the Counties of Siskiyou, Modoc, Trinity, and Shasta shall jointly elect one delegate; the Counties of Siskiyou and Modoc shall jointly elect one delegate; the Counties of Trinity and Shasta shall jointly elect one delegate; the County of Tehama shall elect one delegate; the County of Colusa shall elect one delegate; and thirty-two (32) delegates shall be elected by the State at large, eight (8) residents of each Congressional District.

SEC. 3. All persons entitled by law to vote for members of Assembly shall be entitled to vote at such election in their respective election districts, and not elsewhere. Such election shall be by ballot.

SEC. 4. The following regulations shall apply to the aforesaid election, to be held on the third Wednesday in June, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-eight:

First—The said election shall be held and conducted by the proper election officers of the several election districts of this State, and shall be governed and regulated in all respects by the general election laws of the State in force at the time of said election, so far as the same shall be applicable thereto, and not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

Second—At the special election to be held under this Act, if no other provision for printing or using new Great Registers or Ward Registers shall have in the meantime been made by law, the copies of the Great Registers which were in use in the several counties of this State at the general election held in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-seven shall be used. The Boards of Supervisors must furnish the Boards of Election of each precinct in their respective counties before the day on which said special election is appointed to be held, at least one copy of the aforesaid Great Register. If the Boards of Supervisors cannot otherwise obtain a sufficient number of copies of the Register for the purpose, it must take the copies filed in the office of the County Clerk, in pursuance of section one thousand two hundred and sixty-eight of the Political Code. If the copy of the register which shall be furnished to any precinct shall have been used at a previous election, the character "X" may be used instead of the word "voted," as required by section one thousand two hundred and twenty-eight of the Political Code. It shall not be the duty of the Boards of Election to post copies of the Great Register, as required by section one thousand one hundred and forty-nine of the Political Code. The voter, when he offers his ballot at a polling place, shall not be required to announce his number on the Great Register, as provided for in section one thousand two hundred and twenty-five of the Political Code.

Third—The officers of the several counties of this State, whose duty it is under the law to receive and canvass the returns from the several precincts of their respective counties, as well as the City and County of San Francisco, shall meet at the usual place of meeting for such purpose on the second Monday after said election. If at the time of meeting the returns from each precinct in the county in which polls were opened have been received, the Board must then and there proceed to canvass the returns; but if all returns have not been received, the canvass must be postponed from day to day until all of the returns are received, or until six postponements have been had, when they shall proceed to make out returns of the votes cast for delegates to be members of the Convention; and the proceedings of the officers whose duty it is to make out said returns shall be the same as those prescribed for like officers in the case of an election for Governor, except that the returns shall be transmitted to the Secretary of State. The person receiving the highest number of votes at such election shall be elected, except in the case of persons voted for as delegates at large. Of the persons so voted for as delegates at large, the eight persons, residents of any one Congressional District, who shall have received a plurality of votes over all other persons, severally, who reside in the same Congressional District, shall be declared elected such delegates at large.

Fourth—The Secretary of State shall, as soon as the returns of said election shall be received by him, or within twenty days after said election, in the presence of the Governor and Controller of State, open and compute all the returns received of votes given for members of the Convention, and the Governor shall forthwith issue his proclamation, declaring the names of the persons who have been chosen members of said Convention.

SEC. 5. The delegates so chosen shall meet in Convention in the Assembly Chamber at the Capitol, in the City of Sacramento, on the twenty-eighth day of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, at twelve o'clock M. They shall by a viva voce vote, and the vote shall be entered on the Journal, elect one of their number President, and such Secretaries and other officers as they may deem necessary. After the said Convention has met and organized, it shall have power to adjourn to and hold its meetings at any place in said City of Sacramento other than the said Assembly Chamber, and all committee rooms of the State Capitol building shall be under the control of said Convention. The President of the Convention may appoint not exceeding one Doorkeeper and four Pages. The Convention may select Phonographic Reporters, and fix the amount of their compensation; also a Sergeant-at-Arms and one Assistant. The delegates to the Convention shall receive the same per diem and mileage as members of the Legislature; provided, no compensation shall be allowed delegates after the expiration of one hundred days. No pay shall be allowed for any recess longer than three days at one time. The Secretary shall receive eight dollars per day, and his assistants each six dollars per day, and the Doorkeepers, Pages, Sergeant-at-Arms, and assistants shall receive the same compensation as provided by law for similar services and attendance on the Assembly. The amount of pay shall be certified by the President of the Convention, and shall be paid by the Treasurer of State, on the warrant of the Controller, in the same manner as members of the Legislature are paid. It shall be the duty of the Governor to attend said Convention at the opening thereof, and to administer the constitutional oath of office to the delegates, and to preside at all meetings thereof until a President has been elected and taken his seat, but the Governor shall have neither the casting vote nor any other vote therein. The Secretary of State shall also attend at the opening of the Convention and call the roll of delegates. All public Officers, Boards, and Commissions shall furnish such Convention with such information, papers, statements, books, or other public documents in their possession as the said Convention shall order or require for its use from time to time while in session. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of State to furnish the members of said Convention with stationery to the amount provided by law for the Legislature while in session, and to the Convention such stationery, manual, file boards, and other like things as are furnished to the two Houses of the Legislature. Said Convention may adopt such rules and regulations for its own government as a majority of its members may determine, and said Convention shall be the judge of the election and qualification of its own members.

SEC. 6. A journal of the proceedings of the said Convention shall be kept, and shall at the final adjournment thereof be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and the Constitution agreed to by the Convention shall be recorded in his office. A majority of the Convention shall constitute a quorum to do business. The doors of the Convention shall be kept open, except when the public welfare shall require secrecy. Every delegate to the Convention shall have the like privileges from arrest and from civil process as members of the Legislature now have by law. For any speech or debate in the Convention the delegates shall not be questioned in any other place. The Convention shall have the power to expel any of its members, and to punish its members and officers for disorderly behavior by imprisonment or otherwise; but no member shall be expelled until the report of a committee appointed to inquire into the facts alleged as the grounds of his expulsion shall have been made. The Convention shall have the power to punish as a contempt, and by imprisonment or otherwise, a breach of his privileges, or of the privileges of its members; but such power shall not be exercised, except against persons guilty of one or more of the following offenses:

First—The offense of arresting or subjecting a member or officer of the Convention to civil process, in violation of his privilege from arrest, as heretofore declared.

Second—That of disorderly conduct in the immediate view and presence of the Convention, and directly tending to interrupt its proceedings.

Third—That of publishing any false and malicious report of the proceedings of the Convention, or of the conduct of a member in his delegated capacity.

Fourth—That of refusing to attend or be examined as a witness, either before the Convention or a committee to take testimony in the proceedings of the Convention.

Fifth—That of giving or offering a bribe to a member, or of attempting by menace or any other corrupt means or devise, directly or indirectly, to control or influence a member in giving his vote, or to prevent him from giving the same.

In all cases in which the Convention shall punish any of its members, or officers, or any other person, by imprisonment, such imprisonment shall not extend beyond the session of the Convention. Every person appointed to the office of Secretary of the Convention, shall, before he enters on the duties of his office, execute a bond to the people of the State, with such security as the Controller shall approve, in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, conditioned that he shall faithfully perform the duties of his office and account for all moneys which may come into his hands by virtue thereof.

SEC. 7. The Constitution framed by such Convention shall be submitted by the Convention to the people, for their adoption or rejection, at a special election to be held on the first Wednesday of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and every person hereby entitled to vote for delegates may vote at that election, on such adoption or rejection, in the election district in which he shall then reside, and not elsewhere. The said Constitution shall be voted on as a whole; no other question than the adoption or rejection of the proposed Constitution shall be submitted to the people, or voted on at such election, any statutes or law to the contrary notwithstanding. The Convention shall prescribe the publication of such Constitution, and the notice to be given of the election. The ballots or tickets shall have printed or written upon them the words "For the New Constitution," or "Against the New Constitution," and all the provisions of law now or at that time existing in regard to general elections shall be applicable to such election, except that the provisions of the first and second subdivisions of section four of this Act shall also apply to said election. The canvassing and returns of the votes cast upon such question shall, in such manner as the Convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the votes as certified to him. If, by such an examination, it is ascertained that a majority of the whole number of votes cast at such election be in favor of such new Constitution, the Executive of this State shall, by his proclamation, declare such new Constitution to be the Constitution of the State of California, and that it will take effect at such time as the said Convention may have in its discretion, by resolution, or in said Constitution itself, fixed. If said Convention fix no time for said Constitution to take effect, then it shall take effect immediately upon such proclamation being made.

SEC. 8. All willful and corrupt false swearing in taking any of the oaths prescribed by this Act, or by the laws of this State made applicable to this Act, or in any other mode or form in carrying into effect this Act, shall be deemed perjury, and shall be punished in the manner now prescribed by law for willful and corrupt perjury.

SEC. 9. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of State to cause this Act to be published once a month after its passage, until the election of delegates herein provided, in not more than five of the public newspapers published in this State—one of said publications to be in some newspaper published in the City and County of San Francisco, and one in the City of Sacramento, and one in the County of Los Angeles, and one in the County of Nevada, and one in the County of Tulare; and the expense of publishing the same, and all other legal expenses incurred in printing for the Convention, shall be audited by the Controller and paid by the State Treasurer according to law.

SEC. 10. All the printing necessary for the said Convention, under the provisions of this Act, shall be done and performed at the State Printing Office.

SEC. 11. In case any vacancy occurs by reason of the death, resignation, or otherwise, of any delegate elected to said Convention, the same shall be filled by the Convention.

SEC. 12. The sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the State treasury to pay the expenses of the Convention provided for in this Act.

SEC. 13. This Act shall take effect immediately.

PROVISIONAL ACT.

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR THE PUBLICATION OF THE DEBATES AND PROCEEDINGS OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

[Approved March 31st, 1880.]

The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The State Board of Examiners are hereby authorized and directed to enter into a contract with E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton, for the transcription into long-hand writing of the short-hand notes taken by said E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton, of the proceedings, transactions, and debates of the Constitutional Convention which assembled on the twenty-eighth day of September, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, in the City of Sacramento.

SEC. 2. The contract entered into by and between the said Board of Examiners and the said E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton, shall stipulate for the immediate, consecutive, full, and accurate transcription into long-hand writing of the transactions and debates had in the Constitutional Convention and in the Committee of the Whole of said Convention. And the compensation to be paid to the said E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton for such transcription shall be twenty cents per folio of one hundred words; provided, that the entire amount to be paid for said transcribing the entire transactions and debates of the said Convention, and of the Committee of the Whole of said Convention, shall not exceed the sum of eighteen thousand dollars; and provided further, that the said Board of Examiners shall not be required to receive and examine manuscripts covering less than five thousand folios, or audit any claim for less than one thousand dollars at one time, and shall not authorize the payment of more than seventy-five per cent. of any claim audited or allowed, until the entire work of transcription shall have been completed and placed in their hands.

SEC. 3. The transcription of the said short-hand notes shall be made of the proceedings of consecutive days of the said Convention, beginning with the first day, and all installments of manuscripts delivered to the said Board of Examiners shall be of continuous and consecutive days' proceedings, in plain, legible, long-hand copy, properly prepared for the printer; provided, that either House of the Legislature shall, upon the passage of this bill, be entitled to call for a transcription of such parts of the transactions and debates of the said Constitutional Convention, and of the Committee of the Whole thereof, as may be designated in a resolution calling for said transcription, and the transcription called for by either House shall be made and furnished without delay; but the manuscript of transcription called for by either House shall be returned to said Willis and Stockton, but shall not be by them presented to the Board of Examiners until they are reached in their proper connection by a consecutive transcription of the short-hand notes.

SEC. 4. Said Willis and Stockton shall verify the transcription of the report presented by them to said Board of Examiners, by an oath to be administered by the Governor.

SEC. 5. The said Board of Examiners shall have such power and authority as may be necessary to carry out, in good faith, the purposes and objects of this bill.

SEC. 6. The State Board of Examiners shall cause to be printed, at the State Printing Office, such numbers of copies of the said reports of the proceedings, transactions, and debates of said Convention as may be by them deemed advisable, under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Printing, at a cost which shall not exceed the sum of eighteen thousand dollars. The Board of Examiners shall copyright said publication, to the end that the State may be protected. Such copies, when printed, shall be placed in the hands of the Secretary of State, who shall dispose of them as follows, to wit: Ten full sets of volumes shall be filed in the State Library, for the use of members of the Legislature; one set shall be sent to the State Library of each of the States which have furnished the State Library of this State with volumes of the transactions and debates of the Constitutional Conventions held in such States; one full set of the volumes to each of the Justices of the Supreme Court; one full set of the volumes to each Judge of a Superior Court in this State. The remainder of the volumes shall be sold at a sum to be fixed by said Board of Examiners, but which shall not exceed fifteen dollars per set of the volumes.

SEC. 7. This Act shall take effect immediately.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

SATURDAY, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA. SEPT. 28, 1878.

IN CONVENTION.

FIRST DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Saturday, September 28, 1878.

Pursuant to an Act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "An Act to provide for a Convention to frame a new Constitution for the State of California," approved March 30th, 1878, the delegates elect to said Convention met in the Assembly Chamber of the State Capitol this day, at 12 o'clock M., His Excellency Governor William Irwin presiding.

Upon calling the Convention to order, Governor Irwin said:

The hour having arrived for the meeting of the Constitutional Convention to frame a Constitution for the State of California, all persons on the floor of the Chamber whose names do not appear in the proclamation of the Governor as having been elected delegates to the Convention, will please retire outside the bar of the Chamber. Gentlemen whose names are mentioned in that proclamation will please take the seats assigned them by the Secretary of State.

Article X, Section 2, of the Constitution, provides: "And if at any time two thirds of the Senate and Assembly shall think it necessary to revise and change this entire Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors at the next election for members of the Legislature to vote for or against a Convention; and if it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting at such election have voted in favor of calling a Convention, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide by law for calling a Convention, to be holden within six months after the passage of said law."

At the Legislature of 1875–6 two thirds of both branches voted to recommend to the people of the State to vote for calling a Convention to amend or revise the Constitution. At the next general election a majority of those voting voted to call the Convention.

In pursuance of this section of the Constitution, the last Legislature passed an Act calling this Convention. In that Act it is provided as follows: "It shall be the duty of the Governor to attend said Convention at the opening thereof, and to administer the constitutional oath of office to the delegates, and preside at all meetings thereof until a President has been elected and taken his seat; and the Governor shall have neither the casting vote nor any other vote therein. The Secretary of State shall also attend at the opening of the Convention, and call the roll of delegates."

In pursuance of the power conferred by this Act of the Legislature, I have now called this Convention to order, and I will direct the Secretary of State, Mr. Beck, to proceed and call the roll of delegates. Delegates will answer to their names as the roll is called.

The Secretary of State, Hon. Thomas Beck, then called the roll, and the following delegates answered to their names:

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The members of the Convention have all responded to their names, except four; there being a majority of the Convention present we will proceed to the next business in order, which will be to swear in the members. The Secretary will call the names of members in groups of four, in alphabetical order, and when their names are called members will come forward and take the constitutional oath of office.

Delegates then came forward in groups of four to the right of the President's desk, and took and subscribed to the following oath: "I do solemnly affirm that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California; and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of member of the Convention to frame a new Constitution for the State of California according to the best of my ability."

The delegates subscribed to the oath in the following order:

A RESIGNATION.

GOVERNOR IRWIN—Gentlemen of the Convention: I have a paper here which has been handed to me, which purports to be a resignation of one of the members, or a gentleman who was elected as a member of the Convention. I will read it, and it will lay upon the table until the Convention shall be organized:

SAN FRANCISCO, September 14, 1878.

To the President and Members of the Constitutional Convention of the State of California—Gentlemen: I hereby resign my position as Delegate to your Convention from the City and County of San Francisco.

THOMAS MORRIS.

Witness: CLITUS BARBOUR.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. It will lay on the table until after the organization of the Convention, when the Convention can take such action as it may deem proper.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I move now that the Convention adjourn until Monday morning at eleven o'clock, in order that members may have an opportunity to confer with each other in regard to the organization.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Mr. Dudley moves that the Convention now adjourn until eleven o'clock on Monday.

MR. HUESTIS. I second the motion.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move to amend that resolution so that it will read that we do now adjourn until three o'clock this afternoon to assemble here and proceed to business.

MR. FREUD. I second the motion.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The question comes on the amendment to the motion to adjourn until Monday at eleven o'clock. The amendment is that the Convention adjourn until three o'clock this afternoon.

The question was put, and before the Chair decided MR. BEERSTECHER demanded the ayes and noes.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. It requires three to call for the ayes and noes.

MESSRS. O'SULLIVAN and WHITE called for the ayes and noes.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Do you understand the question? The original motion was that the Convention adjourn to meet at eleven o'clock on Monday. To this an amendment is offered to adjourn until three o'clock this afternoon. The question now is on the adoption of the amendment. Those in favor of the amendment will say "aye" as their names are called, and those opposed "no."

MR. HAGER. I move to amend the amendment by substituting twelve o'clock on Monday.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. It is the opinion of the Chair that action on the adjournment to the shortest period will take precedence.

MR. HAGER. Not by any general rule we have before us. We have adopted no rule. Ordinarily in legislative bodies they have such a rule that a motion to adjourn to the shortest period shall be put first, but that is by an express rule of that body, not by any general parliamentary rule.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The Chair has decided, and if he desires to take an appeal he has got the privilege of appealing from the decision of the Chair.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Chair has not finally decided. The Chair will decide in due time.

MR. HAGER. Then I might reply that the gentleman himself is out of order, as there is no rule that applies to him. I presume that the correct rule would be to put the propositions as they regularly come up. If I should offer a substitute which would be allowed by parliamentary rule, I might offer as a substitute that we adjourn to another period. My object is merely to test the sense of the Convention in the shortest and most expeditious way.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. If the Convention does not see proper to adopt the amendment they will vote it down, and the question will then come on the motion to adjourn until eleven o'clock on Monday. The question is now on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, to adjourn until three o'clock this afternoon. The members in favor of the amendment will answer "aye" as their names are called; those opposed will answer "no." The Secretary will call the roll. I beg that members will maintain perfect silence during the call of the roll, otherwise it will be impossible to hear the responses.

THE SECRETARY called the first name.

MR. HERRINGTON. I rise to a point of order, and object to the calling of the roll.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The roll is being called. The gentleman will take his seat. The roll call will proceed.

The roll was then called, with the following result:

AYES.

Andrews,	Doyle,	Joyce,
Ayers,	Evey,	Kenny,

Hale,	Noel,	Winans—89.

During the call of the roll, when MR. HERRINGTON'S name was called he said:

Mr. Chairman, I believe I am now in order.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. How does the gentleman vote?

MR. HERRINGTON. I vote "no," upon the ground that I do not believe that the Chairman of this Convention has any right to adjourn this body.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will please take his seat. The Secretary will proceed with the roll call.

The calling of the roll was then finished.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Ayes, 57; noes, 89. The Convention refuses to adopt the amendment. The question is now on the original motion, to adjourn until 11 o'clock on Monday.

The motion prevailed, and the Governor, at 1:40 P. M., declared the Convention adjourned until Monday at 11 A. M.

THIRD DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Monday, September 30th, 1878.

At eleven o'clock A. M., pursuant to adjournment, GOVERNOR IRWIN called the Convention to order and requested all persons not members or who had not seats assigned them on the floor, to retire outside the bar of the chamber.

The Secretary of State called the roll and the members were found in attendance as follows:

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The next business in order will be the reading of the minutes of the meeting on Saturday. The gentleman who kept the minutes will read them.

THE SECRETARY.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I desire to call the attention of the Convention to a matter which several have spoken to me about. It appears to me, sir, that the law under which we are convened here has made one omission. The Legislature undertook to give us a temporary organization, but they have only gone so far as to say that the Governor shall preside until the permanent President shall have been elected, and they say nothing about the Secretary, except that he shall be present and call the roll of delegates. For the purpose of correcting that omission I move that the Secretary of State be requested to act as temporary Secretary of this Convention, and upon his acceptance that he be declared the temporary Secretary of this body until the Convention shall have elected a permanent Secretary.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Act does not specifically say that he shall continue to act until a permanent Secretary shall have been elected, but it is fairly implied, and is understood. That is the construction that both the Secretary of State and myself have put upon the Act, with reference to his duty, and I suppose he will continue to act.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: What is the question?

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I understand that the first business in order is the election of a President of this Convention, under the statute. The adoption of a resolution for the nomination of officers might be in order if we had any precedent or any authority under any known parliamentary rules. As it is, I suggest that the first business in order is the election of a President of this Convention. Let us proceed in the usual order, as the statute indicates. Let us proceed to elect a President and then a Secretary of the Convention.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. President: There are three of the members who have not as yet been sworn in. I think that should be the first order of business.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: If there be any doubt as to whether the Secretary of State is entitled to act as Secretary until a permanent Secretary has been elected, it would do no harm for this Convention to declare that he shall act until we shall have elected a permanent Secretary, and I don't see how there can be any objection to it. In my opinion, the resolution should pass.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: As there seems to be a doubt about the matter, let it be put to a vote of the Convention, and that will settle the matter.

[Cries of "Question, question."]

OTHER DELEGATES.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. President: If I understand it, we cannot act upon that resolution until these other members are sworn in.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. It will be proper for them to be sworn in first. Gentlemen of the Convention, there are some two or three members, I understand, who were not present on Saturday, and have not yet been sworn in, and this matter will remain in temporary abeyance until these three members shall have been sworn in. The matter will lie on the table temporarily. The members who have not yet been sworn in will now please come forward and take the oath.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I object to David S. Terry being sworn in, and base my objections upon this——

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Section seven of article eleven declares——

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will take his seat—he is out of order. The law makes it my duty to swear in the persons elected to the Convention. Then any objection to the eligibility of members can be raised. The power to determine who are members rests in the Convention, and not in the Governor, who presides temporarily.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I think we have the right to enter our objections——

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will please take his seat, he is out of order.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I think so also, and I protest against the gentleman taking his seat.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will take his seat; the gentleman is out of order.

[D. S. Terry, of San Joaquin, Alexander Campbell, Jr., of Alameda, and Daniel Inman, of Alameda, were sworn in and subscribed to the oath of office.]

THE SECRETARY AGAIN.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Gentlemen of the Convention, the Chair will hold that the law providing for the meeting of this Convention has provided for a provisional organization, and one of these provisions is, according to the construction of the Chair, that the Secretary of State shall act as Secretary of the Convention during the provisional existence of the Convention. That is the ruling of the Chair. If the gentleman who made the motion desires to except to the ruling, the Chair will put the question on appeal.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I appeal from the decision of the Chair; not that I desire to make any factious opposition, but merely that the Convention may give an expression of opinion on it.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: According to the statutes which I have here, "the Secretary of State shall attend the Convention and call the roll of delegates."

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Has an appeal been taken from the decision of the Chair?

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I second the appeal.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Gentlemen: The ruling of the Chair on this point, to wit, that the Secretary of State is authorized to act without being appointed by the Convention, has been appealed from, and the question now is upon sustaining the decision of the Chair.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: As I understand it, the question now is, shall the decision of the Chair stand as the decision of the Convention.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Yes, sir.

MR. ANDREWS. Does not the Act require that the vote shall be taken by ayes and noes?

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Not on a question of that kind.

The question was put, and the Convention sustained the ruling of the Chair.

SUBORDINATE OFFICERS.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Chair will take occasion to announce that it has appointed the following gentlemen to act during the continuance of the provisional organization: Minute Clerk, A. J. Dobbins; Sergeant-at-Arms, J. M. Farrelly; Watchman, James Saltry; Doorkeeper, B. F. Alexander; Porter, Hiram Clock. Their terms of office will expire on the organization of the Convention. I have here, also, a communication addressed to the members of the Convention, which I will pass to the Secretary. It will lie on the table until the Convention shall have been organized.

MR. BARBOUR. I desire to ask about the appointment of these officers.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. They will continue to act until the Convention shall have been organized.

MR. BARBOUR. I wish to know if that is the decision of the Chair, so as to take my appeal and prevent——

GOVERNOR IRWIN. I will state to the gentleman that this action was taken by the Chair because it was deemed necessary that such officers should be in existence. For instance, it is desirable to have the minutes of the Convention properly kept. It was necessary to be done, and the Chair, recognizing the necessity, took the responsibility of appointing these officers.

MR. BARBOUR. I desire to know by what law or authority it is done.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Has the gentleman any motion to make?

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I desire to appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now proceed to ballot for President.

MR. MURPHY. I second the motion.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. It is moved and seconded that the Convention proceed—

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that the election is not to be by ballot at all, as the Act says it must be viva voce.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I have a resolution which I desire to offer.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The question is on taking a ballot for President of the Convention, or taking a vote. The motion has been seconded. Gentlemen, are you ready to proceed to vote for President of the Convention?

MR. BARTON. Gentlemen of the Convention: I trust that you will act in this matter in a channel that is proper and respectable, quietly, and not proceed to vote for candidates for President until they have been properly presented to the Convention, thereby giving the members of the Convention an opportunity of knowing who are the candidates.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The question is on proceeding to vote. Are you ready for the question?

The motion was put by the Chair and carried.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I call for my resolution now.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Convention has just decided to vote now for a President of the Convention. That business is now in order.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I understand that it is to nominate candidates to be voted for.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Convention has just decided to vote.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: As I understand it, the only order of business now is to present names to be voted for.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. That is not strictly in order; every member can vote as he chooses.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: Would it not be a part of that order of business to present names to be voted for, if any gentleman sees proper to present them?

Digitized by Google

GOVERNOR IRWIN. If the resolution had been put in that form, it would have been proper, but it was not. The resolution is that the Convention proceed to vote.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I call for the reading of the resolution I have sent up to the desk, which is in reference to this very matter of proposing the names of candidates.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman is out of order.

[Cries of "Call the roll."]

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I would like to have some gentleman point out wherein I am out of order.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Convention has decided to proceed to vote for a President of the Convention, and the gentleman will take his seat.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I call for the reading of the resolution.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will please take his seat.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I wish to appeal from the decision of the chair, upon the ground that I have offered a resolution in reference to this very subject-matter, requiring the candidates to come forward and define their position upon the true and only questions before this Convention, and I insist upon it before a single vote is cast. [Calls of order.] I deny your right to silence me, sir. I want to know your authority. I am elected here by the sovereign people of the State of California, and you are not. [Applause, loud and uproarious.]

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will come to order.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hold my seat on this floor by better authority than you do yours, and I want to know where your rules of order are. I hold my seat on this floor by virtue of the sovereign will of the people of the State of California, and I know no rule of order. [Applause.] I want to know where your officers are to enforce those rules. I hold that you have no rules; there have never been any adopted.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. BARBOUR. I am in order.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman is out of order, and must take his seat.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I second the appeal, and indorse every sentiment the gentleman has uttered here.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I also hold that he has no right to be silenced.

MR. O'DONNELL. I do the same.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentlemen will take their seats; I desire the Convention to——

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I call for the ayes and noes on the appeal.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I also call for the ayes and noes.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I second the call for the ayes and noes.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The ayes and noes have been called for by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan, the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, and the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. I wish to make a remark to the Convention. It is necessary to preserve order in order to proceed with business, and there must be no applause. It is not the proper thing to either express approbation or disapproval by persons in the lobby, nor is it, strictly speaking, by members of the Convention. Gentlemen who are members of the Convention shall have their rights respected. I desire now, before this vote is taken, to state the position of the question. The gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Tully, moved that the Convention now proceed to vote for a President of the Convention. That question was put. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, sent up some resolutions to be read. The Chair ruled that the resolutions at this time were out of order, and from that ruling the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, takes an appeal. The question now is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the decision of the Convention?

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I ask that the resolutions be read for information. I would like to know what we are voting on.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I second that motion.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The question is properly upon——

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: The gentleman is out of order. The question is now whether the decision of the Chair shall stand as the decision of the Convention.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The decision of the Chair is based on this: After the Convention had decided to proceed to vote these resolutions are introduced, and the decision is that they could not be read at that stage of the proceedings, after the Convention had determined to proceed with the ballot. After getting through with the ballot if the gentleman chooses to call up the resolutions they will then be in order. [Cries of "Call the roll."]

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll, with the following result:

ORGANIZATION.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to ask the Chair whether it is now in order to make any nominations or whether there is anything in order, except to proceed to vote?

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Nothing is in order but to proceed to vote.

MR. LAINE. Then, Mr. President, it seems to me that we should proceed decently and in order. We are occupying no ordinary position here. It is not an ordinary Convention, but it is a Convention called by the sovereign will of the people of the State of California, and the eyes of the whole State are upon us here. We should allow no haste or anything to control us in this matter. We should remember that upon the floor of this Convention we are all children of the State of California—called together by her behest—not to represent any branch of her family or any particular interest or ism. But the sovereign State has determined in her wisdom to reconstruct, so to speak, the political fabric in which we have been dwelling for over a quarter of a century. And in order that this matter may proceed decently, in order, it would be highly proper that we have regular nominations in this Convention, that all may be advised how to vote and for whom they desire to vote. Many of us are strangers to each other; all from distant parts of a State that has a very large territory. In order that this matter may get properly before the House, in my judgment it would be proper that we have nominations. But we seem to have arrived at a position where we can only proceed to a vote. I think that perhaps the House did not vote understandingly upon this question. I did not vote at all, because when the question was voted on I believed that it would place us in some confusion, and I did not desire to spring up and make any noise in the Convention, or to say anything. I am satisfied that the House did not vote understandingly, and in order that we may do so, I now move to reconsider the vote by which we determined to proceed to an immediate vote.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. I understood the gentleman to say that he did not vote. If any gentleman who voted in the affirmative on that proposition will move to reconsider it will be in order.

MR. LAINE. I believe the rule is different in the case of a viva voce vote.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. That is so.

MR. MCCALLIUM. I second the motion to reconsider.

MR. ESTEE. It strikes me that no member will object to knowing who the nominees before this Convention are to be.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention decided to proceed to a vote.

MR. MURPHY. I move that the order of business be temporarily suspended in order to give gentlemen a chance to put candidates in nomination.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. If there be no objection to that suggestion it will be done. If there is any objection, however, we can only proceed to a vote.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I object to it. I desire to have the motion reconsidered.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: The law clearly defines the whole procedure in the organization of this House, and I believe, sir, in the interest of order, it is best to follow the letter of the law as nearly as possible. It provides that we shall vote viva voce. The provision requiring the vote to be taken viva voce supposes that each member in this Convention shall nominate his own candidate. A nomination would be entirely superfluous. It is not established by any precedent of parliamentary usage whatever, and would only occupy time. Each gentleman of the Convention is sovereign in regard to the individual for whom he may vote and to make his own choice. I hope the motion to reconsider will not prevail.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I hope we shall not reconsider this vote. It is true, as has been stated by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, that we come here as the children of the State to revise our Constitution. Let us not then adopt any of the ways of the politician; let us go at it and take a vote without any nominations at all. Let the vote of each member be his individual preference for President. I shall vote for some gentleman as presiding officer, not because he is the nominee of any particular party or clique, but I shall vote for him because I believe he is the best man to preside over us in this Convention. I believe that this is not the place to make nominations, and that we should go on and vote, and vote for the best man.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: My position is that the vote ought to be reconsidered. And when the gentleman who has just preceded me stated that he objected to the reconsideration of this vote, and that we ought not to adopt the ways of the politician—which are the exact words that he used—I clearly and emphatically say that that is just the reason why I desire to have this vote reconsidered. If we go into nominations we know who the men are, and we can vote intelligently. If we vote in the dark, we vote a cut and dried ticket, made and manufactured by the political tricksters and wire-pullers who have seats in this Convention. And therefore, Mr. President——

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I beg to call the gentleman to order. My point of order is, that he says that political tricksters and wire-pullers have seats in this Convention. No gentleman in any deliberative body has a right to use any such language.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I desire also to enter my protest. Everything that has been done here, except by the particular party with which the gentleman is associated, has been done openly and aboveboard.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will take his seat. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, will keep himself within the bounds of parliamentary usage so far as language is concerned.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I did not intend to bring that remark of mine to bear upon any individual at all. I made it as a general remark, and I am sorry that the coat fits some persons. As I said before, I am in favor of having the vote reconsidered and the nominations brought to the attention of this Convention.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. There never has been a vote taken upon the question. The question was to sustain the decision of the Chair.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman's point of order is not well taken. The vote was taken, and a motion has been made and seconded to reconsider the vote, and upon that question the gentleman is speaking. The gentleman will proceed with his remarks.

MR. BEERSTECHER. For my part, I cannot see what the objection would be. I do not see that any gentleman can urge any tangible objection to our knowing exactly who are advanced here for the Presidency of this Convention. I hope that the motion will be sustained and that the persons may be publicly nominated here, and that we may know exactly what we are voting for on the very first ballot, and that we may clearly and distinctly know the different aspirants. I am free to say that I do not know the different aspirants, and I should like to vote intelligently. I desire to have the candidates brought up here publicly, that I may vote in daylight and not in darkness.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: I believe that the decision of this matter is of great importance. The President of this Convention holds an office of great importance, in the appointment of committees, and we should know the status of those who aspire to that position. The eyes of the people of California are upon us, and if there is any attempt to gag the minority of this Convention, the people will know it.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President and fellow delegates: This Convention constitutes an important event in the history of the world. The circumstances which brought it into existence are well known to the world. The people were suffering great social and political wrongs. There was sloth in the mart and schism in the temple; corruption in office and out of it. Murmurs of discontent arose among the people. In Pennsylvania and other Eastern States these murmurs ripened into deeds——

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is not talking to the question at all.

MR. O'DONNELL. I am.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. I do not think the gentleman's point of order is well taken. The gentleman from San Francisco will proceed with his remarks.

MR. O'DONNELL. I was about to say that two years ago the people, without leaders and without organization, arose and wreaked vengeance upon the overshadowing monopolies which they truly regarded as the authors of their calamities. It is therefore certain that this sentiment of popular distrust and discontent is not local nor peculiar to California. It is widespread and pervades the entire nation. Mr. President, you and I will be able to see the party of the people take the reins of power. I assert that they are at this moment in a vast majority, not only in this State, but in all the States of the Union. The circumstance that their delegates are nominally in a minority in this Convention is due solely to a want of organization in the counties remote from the metropolis. In many counties the Workingmen had no tickets printed for the voters, and they were perforce compelled to select from the candidates on the opposition tickets in the field. San Francisco is true to the core—true to the principle of popular liberty. She is the great center from which our organization takes its impulse, and its grand forward movement in this political revolution.

MR. INMAN. I rise to a point of order, that the gentleman is not talking to the question before the house. As the gentleman has his speech written I would suggest that he send his manuscript up to the Secretary and have it read. It is certainly not to the question.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The Chair cannot undertake to prescribe just what latitude a member may take. He may intend to bear upon the question. [Laughter.] It is left to the judgment of each individual. I rule that the point of order is not well taken, and the gentleman will proceed with his remarks.

MR. O'DONNELL. If it be conceded that the Workingmen's party represents the popular sentiment, and that it is numerically in the majority, then it will be well for this Convention to respect it. And we ask all delegates who sympathize with the mass in striking a blow for liberty and justice to unite with us in sustaining the measures which we propose to incorporate into the new Constitution. We demand a popular government—not in theory, but in practice. We demand that the mudsill of society shall be respected as much as the pillars of the edifice which the mudsill supports. I ask that the party we have the honor to represent, though nominally in a minority on this floor, be allowed to divide with the majority the honors in organizing this Convention. Let us consider, sir, that the eyes of the country are upon us; let us consider that this Convention is the initial movement of the great Presidential campaign of 1880. Every word uttered on this floor will be re-echoed and——

MR. REYNOLDS. If the gentleman will allow me a suggestion, I would move that the further reading of his speech be dispensed with, and that fifty copies be printed. [Cries of "Second the motion."]

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The gentleman will proceed with his remarks.

MR. O'DONNELL. I do not wish to detain this Convention one moment, but I want a fair deal. That is all I ask. I say that every word uttered on this floor will be re-echoed and reproduced in the distant East, and from this body the revolutionary party will take its cue. Our battle hymn will be their battle cry. And if we intend to lead in the revolution we must engrave upon our flag thoughts that breathe and words that burn, and they will find an echo in the hearts of the people. Mr. President, all I ask is a fair deal in this Convention. We want to make our nominations, and put these candidates upon that platform, and know exactly how they stand before the people. We bring a candidate before the people on popular principles—on anti-monopoly; and I understand that the Non-Partisans will put up one that is a monopoly man. And for that reason I want these candidates to get upon the floor, so that we may see precisely how they stand. We have got to make our record right here.

MR. ESTEE. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that when the question was first raised the Non-Partisan element were in favor of making nominations. I suggested myself to the Chair that undoubtedly no gentleman would object to placing candidates in nomination for the Presidency. Instead of that the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, objected, and for that reason the gentlemen have made speeches and attempted to show that there was opposition to it on the part of the Non-Partisans, when there was none. The Non-Partisans do not object to that measure. We are anxious and more than anxious that the fullest investigation should be made as to every man's character who shall be brought forward on this occasion. They have nothing to conceal or hide. We are not here to make speeches, but to work. And now, if the gentlemen desire to put their names before the Convention, in God's name let them do it. There can be no objection, and I am sure none will be made.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: It occurs to me that if the gentleman's advice is followed, who has just taken his seat, that the parliamentary tactics he has endeavored to enforce would be simply carried out. Instead, therefore, of arriving at the opinions and views of the candidates presented before the Convention, it would be simply held by the Chair that this Convention has no particular business but to proceed with the ballot, and the very object and purpose of such reconsideration would be cut off. Now, if it is possible to get at the views and opinions of these candidates in reference to measures which are to be introduced in this Convention and embodied in the Constitution—if that idea can be reached as easily by the suggestion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, as by a reconsideration—I can see no possible objection to it. But if the parliamentary tactics which are sought to be engrafted on this motion to defeat a reconsideration are carried out, the precise order of business which the Chair has held to be in order will be re-inaugurated, and the Chair will decide that nothing is in order but to proceed with the vote, and we shall hear nothing more from the candidates on this floor; and we would not understand a single solitary measure that he would endeavor to enforce, and it would be said to us, "It is not to be presumed that any gentleman occupying the high position of Chairman of this Convention would do anything wrong; it is not to be presumed that he would treat any portion of the Convention unfairly, or that he would be biased in making up the committees," and I know it would be high presumption in me to say that any distinguished gentleman occupying the position of President of this body would descend to favor the majority and oppress the minority. That is the way that business is usually conducted. It is always so exceedingly on the square that no man can object. When a distinguished gentleman occupies the high position of President he can do nothing wrong; he cannot stoop to appoint committees that would do anything unfair. But unfortunately it so happens that in carrying out their views they generally appoint their particular friends on committees, and by that means strangle the very best measures that are put forward in the Convention. Now, it is simply a fair deal that we want. We do not ask for anything more. We want to understand what the gentlemen's views are who are put forward for President of the Convention. When we have their views we will understand distinctly what we are to expect when they occupy that chair. There are many distinguished men in this Convention who are more or less warped by party prejudices. They are all more or less affected by it. They are all more or less striped in that regard, and I don't pretend that I am wholly devoid of party prejudice, and I admit that if I should happen to occupy a position of that kind—and God forbid that I ever should aspire to it—I admit that I have some party feeling, as far as my own party measures are concerned, that would affect the Constitution. I would like to see my friends upon the committees, and I believe the gentleman from San Francisco would likewise. That is the only question. We simply want to know what these candidates think; what their views are; what their feelings are; what they intend to do as to measures that shall be sought to be engrafted on the Constitution. If they will voluntarily get up and state clearly what their views are—if they will do this, I will consent that the motion shall be reconsidered. Otherwise, I want to know, before I vote, the changes they propose to make in the old instrument, or what ideas they have in reference to the revision of it.

MR. RINGGOLD made some remarks, but owing to the noise and confusion, it was utterly impossible to hear them at the reporter's desk.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I have no doubt, sir, that a large majority of this Convention, by whomsoever they may have been elected, desire to arrive at a speedy result upon the pending question. I respectfully submit that there are only two ways to get out of it, in view of the objection raised by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, to have the candidates come forward and express their views, and have them nominated. I submit, with all deference, that the difficulty arises on the misconstruction of the motion adopted. In all cases, when a Convention resolves to proceed to elect, in legislative bodies as well as elsewhere, it is parliamentary usage to make nominations. It is true that the general resolutions read: "That we now proceed to vote." If the author had left out the word "now," it would mean the same—that we proceed to vote. But the rule has been in all bodies of this kind to proceed and nominate, without objection from anybody. But as the Chair has ruled the other way, unless the Chair sees proper, with the unanimous consent of the Convention, or with a majority consent, to change that unusual construction, the only way out of the difficulty is to reconsider, in which case we must also vote down the original resolution, and then proceed to put some final resolution which will express what is evidently the desire of the other members on this one point; that gentlemen may be nominated in the usual manner, and that they be presented and allowed to speak to the Convention before being voted for.

The motion to reconsider was put and carried.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. The question is now upon the adoption of the original resolution. If there is no objection the candidates will now be placed in nomination. The Chair hears no objections.

NOMINATIONS.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I nominate for President of this Convention W. J. Tinnin, of Trinity County.

MR. BROWN. I do not think it necessary to speak in extraordinary high terms of any gentleman I may nominate before this Convention, or to say that he is superior to any other man, or to say that this Convention cannot succeed without his services as Chairman of it; nothing of that kind. But I would present before the Convention a gentleman that I consider, in parliamentary tact and good judgment, at least the equal of any man that may be named in this illustrious body. I therefore present the name of Volney E. Howard, of Los Angeles.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I have the honor to place in nomination for the position of President of this Convention a gentleman long a resident of this State, having occupied official position by the choice of the people; a farmer connected with the agricultural industries of the country, whose record we submit in detail and as a whole to the consideration and the most careful scrutiny of this Convention. We challenge the fullest, fairest investigation into each and every of his actions, and into his opinions. We ask the same right as to all the other candidates. The issues, I may say, the issue, that is depending upon this event, sir, has been perverted, and is being industriously perverted all over this State. It is not the issue, now at least, between the so-called Workingmen, Republicans, Democrats, Independents, or Non-Partisans, but the line of demarcation is now drawn, and we draw it between monopoly on the one hand and anti-monopoly upon the other. We mean it, sir, in its broadest sense. When I say "monopoly," I mean any and all of those means whereby one man, or one combination of men, protected and governed by laws, or by the constructions that are placed upon laws, appropriate to themselves and hold as against the balance of mankind that common stock given by the Creator for the preservation of their lives, their comfort, and the support of those that are dependent upon them. By "monopoly," in its broadest sense, we mean every and any form of special legislation. By "monopoly," we mean the denial in any form, and in every form, to the people, in their sovereign capacity, of the entire and absolute control of each and every of their creations. By "monopoly" we mean that system whereby, in the State of California especially, a wall is being raised up higher and higher between the different classes of the community; on the one side luxury, magnificence, and wealth, governing and controlling legislation, warping the judgments of Courts, corrupting conventions and undermining the very foundations of society, and thus carrying devastation to the fair fields of labor, prostrating all the industries of the country, creating paupers where there never should be paupers, and creating destitution and misery where there never should be destitution and misery. We present a candidate who is devoted to the rights of labor, who respects the rights of capital, and against whom no taint or suspicion can justly be maintained at all. We present a candidate who, like Cæsar's wife, is above suspicion. There is his record, sir, made in the legislative halls. Scrutinize every vote; scrutinize every declaration; scrutinize every act. We invite it; we invite it fully, and we ask gentlemen upon the opposite side if they are willing to do us equal justice. We say, I repeat it again, that the line here is not between the Workingmen, the Democrats, the Republicans, the Non-Partisans, or what not, but monopoly on the one hand and anti-monopoly upon the other. When I took my seat in this Convention, when I became qualified as a member of the Convention, the mantle of party falls from me, sir, and I undertake to represent the people of the State of California and my constituency of the City of San Francisco. Thirty-three thousand voters of this State have expressed by distinct and positive and written propositions what they want us to do here. Now, sir, on behalf of the people, on behalf of those electors, I demand that this Convention be organized in the interest of what I understand to be the wishes of a majority of the people of the State of California; which are, that the power of corporations shall be restrained; which are, that monopolies shall be broken up; which are, that the Chinese nuisance shall be abated; which are, that political corruption shall be expelled from our public places. These, sir, are the great propositions which we are to embody, or which ought to be embodied, in the new Constitution. All the others are secondary. These are the main propositions. They tell you that the Workingmen's party is revolutionary; they tell you that it entertains wild and Communistic ideas; that it proposes to break the foundations of society; that it proposes to level and to disorganize. But I assure you, sir, it is untrue. It is that system of misrepresentation whereby the public mind has been poisoned with regard to the spirit and purposes of this people. They are men, sir, in rebellion I admit, but as righteous a rebellion as ever was sanctified by the blood and tears of a suffering people. They are rebels, I admit it; but they have rebelled, sir, against the oppressions of those very things that we are here to restrain; this corrupt greed, these monopolies, the Chinese curse, and political corruption. It is a rebellion that we are engaged in, and that rebellion will go on until it is triumphant, and then it may become revolution. If we are revolutionary that way I am willing to concede it; no further. Now, Mr. Chairman, I don't propose to trespass upon the time of this Convention, but I will say this to the gentlemen here: I have no desire and no design to go one quarter of an inch outside the Constitution of my country. I entertain no un-American ideas; I have no desire to root out the foundations of society or throw down the social structure, or to impair any of the well known interests of our country. What I want to do, sir, is to restrict and reconstruct the fabric which has been eaten into, and whose usefulness has been impaired by reason of the causes I have stated. That, sir, is our purpose, and that is all our purpose. In order, now, that justice may be done, in order that the truth and the light may be let in upon this whole proceeding, and, as one gentleman stated, the eyes of the State are upon us, which I admit, let us act in view of that fact, concealing nothing, suppressing nothing, voting openly and fairly after full consideration and reflection. Then the people will be satisfied, otherwise not. If gentlemen are prepared here with a cut and dried programme, to rush it through whether or no, it will be done, and the victim, I suppose, may be prepared for the sacrifice; but, sir, it shall not be done without my protest, which shall go upon the record along with the act. But I hope better things, and when I state objections, or any gentleman states objections, to any candidate here to-day, or when I propose a question, I hope no gentleman will raise a single objection to that question being answered and to that gentleman being satisfied. He shall be as to my candidate or I will withdraw him. That is all I ask upon that. And in conclusion, sir, I have the honor to place in nomination a gentleman who concurs with the views I have just stated; one who is distinguished, competent, experienced, and who fills the bill, as I claim he will fill the bill completely, and that man is Henry Larkin, of El Dorado. [Applause.]

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I rise to second the nomination of Mr. Larkin; and in seconding the nomination of Mr. Larkin, as one of the delegates from San Francisco, I desire to say that I recognize Mr. Larkin as being the exponent of those principles that we came here to represent. We have been basely and grossly misrepresented. We are not agrarians, and we are not barn burners, and we are not disorganizers, and we are not levelers, but we came here for the single and solitary purpose of reconstructing the laws of this State, and to give the people of this State a better organic law than they possess to-day. If the people of this State were satisfied with the organic law that they have, they certainly would not have voted to have another one substituted in its place. But it is because the people are not satisfied that this Convention has been called, and the delegates from San Francisco, who recognize Mr. Larkin, the gentleman just nominated, as the exponent of their position in this Convention, came here for the purpose of giving to the people of the State of California an organic law that will be an improvement upon the present one. We have not come here to create dissention; we have not come here for the purpose of jumping upon the floor at every motion, and to occupy the time of this Convention, and I hope I may be excused if, in the preliminary organization of this Convention, I have risen more frequently than some gentlemen have thought necessary. But I hope that hereafter such will not be the case. Yet, the matter of electing a President of this Convention is an important matter in every sense. The President of this Convention will be the figurehead of the Convention, and we desire to stamp this Convention as the Convention of the people, and not as the Convention of monopoly. We desire, and we came here for the purpose of restricting monopoly, but not for the purpose of disorganizing. We can see that corporations have rights, and we are willing to give them rights, but we also desire to have the rights of the people recognized. We came here for the purpose of joining with members from all portions of the country, from all parts of the State of California, for the purpose of making a crusade against the aspirations of railroad companies and land monopolies, gas and water monopolies, and the lottery called stock gambling. We came here for the purpose of making a crusade against the Chinese, and for the purpose of reforming the taxation system, and the interest system, but we do not come here for the purpose of taking away any property that any man has honestly acquired. We do not come here for the purpose of confiscating the property of any man, but we come here for the purpose of stopping the legalized system of confiscation, namely: by exorbitant rates of interest, by which men's property is being confiscated every day. We come here for the purpose of organizing a right system of taxation; we come here offering to the country members to join them in their fight against their oppressors. We recognize that the Granger element in this State has exactly the same fight to make that the honest artisan and mechanic in the City of San Francisco is making. And, gentlemen, I wish to make a prophecy before this Convention, and that is this: Before ten days have gone by, the sheep and the goats will be divided in this Convention, and you will see that the Workingmen's party, as represented here from San Francisco, will belong among the sheep, and not among the goats; you will see that the Workingmen's party are honestly opposed to these oppressions and burdens that now rest upon the people, and you will see these very men who came here with fair promises and fair pledges, will be pitted against the interests of the people, as they always have been pitted against the interests of the people. Now, gentlemen, a man's record ought to have something to do with the vote you are casting here to-day, and perhaps to-morrow. There are gentlemen who will be offered, who have had it in their power for the last thirty years to make this the most prosperous State in the Union. There are gentlemen who will be offered here for your indorsement or your rejection, who have had it in their power to prevent the oppression of the monopoly and the misuse of corporation powers, but they have not done it. They have not lifted their fingers against anything of that kind. The hard times that are upon us, and the oppression of the people, could been arrested by these men, and they have not been willing to arrest them. We offer Mr. Larkin's record as the exponent against oppression and against monopolies in all its forms. We challenge any gentleman to come up here and say aught against Mr. Larkin's public life. And in conclusion, let me say that the record that will be made by this Convention is a record for life and for political death to every member here. We may put a Constitution in the field that the people will reject, and if they do reject the definitions or provisions contained in that new Constitution they will be repudiated and rejected by the people. The people have reasoned, and they have said there must be a revision of the laws of this State, and the same people who have called this Convention here will repudiate the men who stand upon this floor in favor of monopolies and corporations, and oppressions generally. Gentlemen, I call your attention to the fact that it is important that we place a figure-head here, right upon the first day, whom the people can indorse. If we do not do this, if we oppose the will of the people, we are opposed to the current of a Niagara, and it is sure to swamp us in the end. This will be our political life or death in this Convention, and I hope that, as we offer Mr. Larkin to you, you will accept Mr. Larkin. I am confident you will find us from San Francisco standing side by side with you, fighting against all the monopolies that I have enumerated. I repel and repudiate the idea that I am a communist and disorganizer. I came here to vote for the interests of all the people of this State. I came here representing the poor man, and I came here representing the rich man; I came here for the purpose of protecting the poor man's interest, and also for the purpose of protecting the rich man's interest. I do not desire the confiscation of property, and therefore let us, in our first act, stamp this Convention as the Convention of the people. Let us not put up some old fossil, who has been in the interest of corporations and monopolies ever since he was born, some time when this century was first commenced. Let us place a live, sterling, energetic man here, a man whom the people have sent here with a handsome majority, and don't place any gentleman who is better known abroad than he is in his own home, who has been repudiated by the people in his own home, and is obliged to be elected by the people on the outside, who don't know his ways.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I rise to indorse the nomination of Mr. Larkin. From what I have heard regarding him, why he certainly must be a saint, and Mr. President, I certainly cannot help voting for a saint as President of this Convention. I am wedded to no clan. I know no friends, I have no enemies in this vote. I came here to deal out justice to my constituents, as near as I can interpret what justice means. And, Mr. President, in dealing out justice, I am only trying to carry out the will and the wishes and the dictates of my constituents. I came here representing my constituents in their sovereign right. I came here, not to indorse anything that will ruffle their prosperity, or that will cast a shade of gloom over the community.

My position in this fight is simply to look from the Sierras to the sea; is simply to look from San Diego to Siskiyou and try and throw the mantle over my constituents—because I hold that I am representing the people of the State of California at large—to throw a mantle over them that will be impervious to monopoly and political chicanery. We claim that the people of the State of California have been robbed of their rights, robbed of everything that God Almighty provided for the comfort of man. We come here not to represent any clique or clan, but we come here to represent the people. The people demand that we shall do right. The people demand that these abominations that to-day govern California and are dragging her down into the depths of misery and ruin, that they must be eradicated and that the people have the power to clean them out and preserve themselves and their sacred institutions. Mr. President, all I demand of this Convention I demand in the name of the imperial people of San Francisco. I demand that every man in this Convention get up on this floor and state his views on all questions that now agitate the public mind. By so doing, Mr. President, I will know for whom I am voting. But if you don't grant us this privilege, if this Convention tries to curb our rights here, Mr. President, we will cripple the Constitution when it goes before the people for ratification.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I assume, in the very beginning, that all gentlemen who occupy seats upon this floor are the representatives of the people of the State of California, not of any ism, not of any party, not of any creed, but represent the people of the State in their organized capacity, embracing every man, woman and child, and interest, within the State. I should not feel it to be entirely manly—and it would be a species of egotism on my part—to undertake to drill and instruct them here. They are answerable to the whole people of this State for whatever course of conduct they may take while in this august body. And I assume further, that all the men who are here, whether they be young men in the vigor of life, with all those promptings of ambition that are just enough to make them firmly believe that their conceptions are the brightest, the purest, and the noblest of all, for that is the fault of young men, and I can hardly say that it is a fault, because, without the spring of ambition and some inspiration even of egotism they will not accomplish much—but, while tolerating that, I have been taught to reverence the wisdom that age brings; I have learned, from the very earliest periods of my life, that it is only age and experience that brings cultivated wisdom. It was said, in olden times, of that great commonwealth: "Young men for war, and old men for council." We should have a President of this Convention, allow me to say, in my judgment, whose age and experience we should reverence, and whose learning and ability should challenge our admiration, because I have seen, in the short exhibition that we have had here, that there will be storms and whirlwinds in this Convention; that there are many here who imagine that they are crusaders, with lance in rest, against the crescent, or something else. I have no doubt that in these feelings they are as honest as I am. I do not desire to impugn anybody's motives. It is not the language of parliamentary debate or discussion, nor is it the feeling of a heart prompted only for the public good; and in these matters I beg you, now, gentlemen, to create no parties and no factions. I care not from what country a man may come, what constituency sent him here. Put it in good old English; let me know your proposition, and then, if it be wrong, I will be able to reason with him and point out to him the errors of it, or he me. But we are not to judge of a man or measures until we have heard them fairly discussed; and it is a wrong conviction, in my judgment, to imagine that we represent any particular ism or constituency. I come from the good old County of Santa Clara. My election there was unsolicited. I am not sent here to work for the County of Santa Clara, but, to the best of my ability, to watch over the interests of the entire State. They will not be satisfied with any speeches of mine; they will point to my works, and will say, "Where is the work of your hands? Show me what you have created." The candidate that I shall propose in this Convention, I shall wait until his labors are performed, and then point to those labors. Without further prolonging what I have to say—because I find frequently that long talk does no good—I desire to bring to the attention of this Convention a gentleman ripe with age, decision, and fitness of character. I need not tell you that I refer to Colonel Hoge, of San Francisco, that I now nominate for President of this Convention.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Are there any other nominations?

MR. BARBOUR then called up his resolutions, which were read by the Secretary, for information, as follows:

Resolved, That all persons proposed as candidates for President, and President pro tem, of this Convention, shall be required, before being voted for, to come forward and define their position on the following propositions: First—Whether the State has the power to control railroad corporations, in the regulation of fares and freights; in preventing and prohibiting discriminations; in prohibiting the consolidation of parallel or competing lines, directly or indirectly; in preventing the watering of their stock; in requiring frequent sworn public reports of the proceedings of their Directors or Trustees and of their business; in requiring them to allow the agents of the State appointed for that purpose, and the stockholders, to inspect their books; in requiring all intending corporations to file an executed acceptance of such provisions of a Constitution prior to granting them any charter, and in debarring all existing corporations from all future privileges or legislation unless they also file such acceptance; and whether the candidate is in favor of the exercise of such or similar power? Second—Whether he is opposed to land monopoly, and in favor of using the power of the State to wipe it out? Third—Whether he is in favor of subjecting all incorporated companies furnishing water or gas to incorporated cities or towns, to the control of such cities or towns, in respect to the rates they shall be allowed to charge for these necessaries of life? Fourth—Whether he is in favor of prohibiting all lotteries, and declaring stock dealing on "margins," "puts and calls," and similar devices, lotteries? Fifth—Whether he is in favor of abating the Chinese nuisance, and using the whole power of the State to do so? Sixth—Whether he is in favor of taxing mortgages and reducing the rate of interest?

The Chair ruled that the resolutions were not in order for action, but that any gentleman could express his views if he desired.

No one appearing desirous of speaking, the roll was called with the following result:

Mr. Hoge received 74
Mr. Tinnin received 73

Mr. Hoge having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared duly elected President of the Convention.

Before the announcement of the above vote MR. BARBOUR said:

Mr. President: I challenge the vote of Eugene Fawcett, on the ground that he is presumed not to be here, as he is District Judge of one of the Judicial Districts of this State.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I also challenge Judge Fawcett's vote.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I challenge the vote of Judge Terry.

The Chair then announced the result of the vote, which was received with applause.

MR. EDGERTON. I move that a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to escort Colonel Hoge to the chair.

Carried.

The Chair appointed Messrs. Edgerton, Tinnin, and Larkin.

Colonel Hoge was conducted to the Speaker's desk between Messrs. Tinnin and Larkin.

GOVERNOR IRWIN. Gentlemen of the Convention: Allow me to introduce to you Colonel Hoge, who has just been elected President of this Convention. [Applause.]

THE PRESIDENT'S REMARKS.

COLONEL HOGE. Gentlemen of the Convention: It would be affectation in me not to admit that I feel very highly honored by the distinction which you have conferred upon me. I return those gentlemen who have stood by me during the whole of this contest, my thanks. I certainly have no unkind feeling as against any gentleman who voted against me—not the slightest; and you will all find that I shall do everybody justice in the performance of the duties of this office which you have conferred upon me. I shall know no section, no party, no creed. I shall endeavor to perform the duties of this office with entire impartiality—with complete justice. I shall recognize the interests of every section upon this floor. This is not an ordinary convention. We have been sent here from every section of the State for the very great purpose of framing a new system of government for this glorious young State of ours—a Constitution which shall protect every interest of every section of the State. Justice to all; favors to none. [Applause.] We are all standing upon the plane of the Constitution with equal rights, with equal responsibilities. Such, I have no doubt, will be the opinion of this body, and I say, as it is my duty, so will it be my pleasure to coöperate with you for these great ends in the performance of all your duties. We have met, gentlemen, at not the most favorable time for making a Constitution. For many causes there seems to be very great depression in the business and industrial enterprises of the country. To some extent we have fallen upon evil times, but, gentlemen, the energies of this country and of our people I think already begin to open the chances for relief, and while I do not believe that Constitutions will make men rich, or that laws will prevent men from becoming poor, yet, with a Constitution which is based upon justice, and which bears equally upon all interests throughout the entire State, with the recuperative energies of our people, with the vast resources at our command, with the integrity of our people, with their faithfulness to principle, I think we may safely—in the language of a statesman, now no more, delivered on a former occasion—commend our country and our State to the common parent of us all. Gentlemen, I do not deem it proper to detain you longer with any remarks, and will proceed now to the further organization of this Convention.

MR. HILBORN. I move that the Convention do now adjourn until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

The motion prevailed, and at three o'clock and twenty minutes P. M. the Convention adjourned.

FOURTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Tuesday, October 1, 1878.

The Convention assembled at ten o'clock A. M., pursuant to adjournment, President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called and the following members present:

Moffat,	Soule,	Winans,
Moreland,	Stedman,	Wyatt,
Morse,	Steele,	Mr. President.
Murphy,

The minutes of yesterday's proceedings were read and approved.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: There is no record of the objections which I made to Judge David S. Terry taking his seat on this floor, and also the objections to Judge Fawcett. Objections were made in both cases.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary informs me that the Chair failed to recognize these objections.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I desire to call attention to the fact that the proceedings of Saturday have not been read yet, I believe.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the minutes of Saturday. The Chair will state to the members of the Convention that, for the convenience of the reporters and of the Secretary at the desk, any gentleman rising will please give his name and the county until the Chair becomes familiar with the members, so that the Secretary and reporters may get them down correctly.

The minutes of Saturday's proceedings were read.

THE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the approval of the minutes? If not they will stand approved. The Chair hearing no objection the minutes are approved.

FURTHER ORGANIZATION.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That the Convention do now proceed to its further permanent organization and elect the following officers in the order named: First, a Vice-President; second, a Chief Secretary; third, a Phonographic Reporter; fourth, an Assistant Secretary; fifth, a Minute Clerk at the desk; sixth, a Journal Clerk; seventh, a Sergeant-at Arms.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The minutes have not been approved, and I desire to have placed upon the record the objection that was made at the time of calling the roll by myself to the making of a record by the Clerk, that he had no right at the time in this Convention either to make or to certify. Whereupon the Chair ruled that I was out of order. I desire that it should be made to appear upon the record that I entered my protest at the time against the ruling of the Chair.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair stated, when the minutes were read, that if there was no objection to them they would stand approved. There being no objection the minutes were approved. The gentleman is too late.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I rose in my place at that time—the minutes were not approved at that time. I was still standing when the gentleman, Mr. Tinnin, obtained the floor.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair overrules the gentleman's point of order. The gentleman was not recognized by the Chair. The minutes are approved, and of course the gentleman is too late.

MR. HERRINGTON. I rose in my place before the minutes were approved.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has decided the gentleman's point of order not well taken.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I would like to suggest an amendment to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Trinity, that it be made to read: Eighth, the nomination and election of an Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms.

MR. TINNIN. I accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I would offer an amendment to the resolution by substituting "Secretary" instead of "Vice-President." We will then have completed the organization contemplated by the Constitution. My amendment will stand to all the officers. The office of Vice-President is not named in this Act. I move this amendment, and, if the gentleman will accept it, I think it will expedite business.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: In order to obviate the difficulty we are now in, I move to strike out the words "Vice-President" in the resolution I offered, which will comply with the request of the gentleman from El Dorado.

MR. LARKIN. I withdraw my amendment in consideration of that motion.

Mr. WATERS. Mr. President: I would like to hear the resolution read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Convention do now proceed to its further permanent organization and elect the following officers: First, a Chief Secretary; second, a Phonographic Reporter; third, an Assistant Secretary; fourth, a Minute Clerk at the desk; fifth, a Journal Clerk; sixth, a Sergeant-at-Arms; seventh, an Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I move to amend the resolution by inserting the words "Sergeant-at-Arms" immediately after the words "Chief Secretary." It seems to me that we should first elect a Secretary and then a Sergeant-at-Arms. Then you have the heads of your departments. We should elect a Secretary and then a Sergeant-at-Arms. I move to amend by inserting the words "Sergeant-at-Arms" immediately after the word "Secretary."

Mr. TINNIN. Mr. President: That seems to me to be out of the order of business heretofore practiced by legislative bodies. The Sergeant-at-Arms comes after these officers. I have named them in the usual order of legislative bodies.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move a further amendment by striking out the words "Phonographic Reporter," for the reason that there is no provision in the law whereby the compensation of a phonographic reporter is to be fixed. I want to understand, Mr. Chairman, what is to be the contract or compensation for reporting the debates of this Convention, before I can vote understandingly upon the appointment of reporters. I move that a committee be appointed, to whom shall be referred the matter of phonographic reporting for the Convention, and I think that the Convention can act understandingly upon such a report as shall show what it will cost, and who the different candidates for the position are, and what their different bids are. I am in favor of this matter of reporting being conned well, and I want to see it done as cheaply and economically as possible. These are my reasons for moving the amendment.

Mr. TINNIN. Mr. President: I think all the trouble of the gentleman can be obviated with this understanding—and I have no doubt that the Convention will take that course—that is, to appoint a committee who shall have the power, with the concurrence of this body, to fix the pay of all these elective officers. This is the action that is always taken, and I think this body will take the same course. I have an idea that many of these salaries will be fixed, some of them lower than is now anticipated, but it can all be done by committee.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I think that the objection as to now going into the election of Phonographic Reporter is well taken. The subject is not well understood by the delegates to the Convention, and gentlemen can only be posted upon it by experts. The compensation to the other officers is fixed—that is, the amount allowed to similar officers of the Legislature. The Act provides that the Convention shall fix the amount of their compensation. The correct method to have the reporting done is to have those who are competent to judge of the work of phonographic reporters appointed to examine those gentlemen and then to make a contract. That is the proper way to protect the treasury, giving the work out to those who will do it right and take it on the most favorable terms. Therefore I support the amendment.

The PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

The PRESIDENT. This is the original resolution, gentlemen. Mr. McFarland moves to amend the resolution by striking out the seventh provision as to the election of a Sergeant-at-Arms and inserting it as the third provision, following that in reference to the Chief Secretary. The first question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento.

Mr. HAGER. Mr. President: It is, perhaps, not a matter of very much consequence how we elect these officers, but I think the statute provides the manner in which the selection shall be made. As the statute reads, the Convention shall meet and organize, as I understand it, by the selection of a President and Secretary. After that organization is completed, then the Convention is open for other business, such as the election of a Sergeant-at-Arms, a Phonographic Reporter, and the like. They shall elect one of their number President, and "such Secretaries and other officers as they may deem necessary." That is the first provision. Then it proceeds to say that "after the said Convention has met and organized"—and I say that the organization is by the election of a President and Secretary; a presiding officer, and a Secretary, to record what is afterwards done; that should be done preliminary to any other work. After the Convention is organized "it shall have power to adjourn and hold its meetings at any place in said City of Sacramento other than the said Assembly Chamber, and all the committee rooms of the State Capitol building shall be under the control of said Convention. The President of the Convention may appoint not exceeding one Doorkeeper and four Pages." And then this clause: "The Convention may select Phonographic Reporters and fix the amount of their compensation; also, a Sergeant-at-Arms and an Assistant." The interpretation, sir, that I think is the correct one to be put upon that statute is to select our President and Secretary as preliminary to any other business, that the acts of the Convention may be recorded upon the Journal. After we have organized by the selection of a President and Secretary, then we proceed to the election of other officers. I move to amend this resolution to confine it for the present to the selection of a Secretary.

Mr. CROSS. Mr. President: Judge Hager has read the statute of the Legislature of the State passed in reference to this Constitutional Convention. The statute is good until the Convention is organized. When this Convention is organized by the election of a Chairman and Secretary, the power of that legislative body to say what this Convention should do is at an end, and if they did not understand it when they made the law, they should understand it when this Convention acts: that when this Convention is organized it is not to be controlled by any Act of the Legislature as to what minor officers it shall appoint, or what shall be the order in which it shall appoint them. Judge McFarland makes a proposition in which the order proposed is different from that suggested by the law. I take the ground that this Convention is, in no manner, bound by the provisions of that Act. [Cries of "Question," "Question."]

The PRESIDENT. The first question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento.

A VOICE. What is that?

The PRESIDENT. To strike out "Sergeant-at-Arms" from the seventh provision and insert it so as to make it the third.

The amendment was lost.

The PRESIDENT. The next question is on the motion by the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager, to strike out all after the word "Secretary."

Mr. HAGER. Mr. President, I move, as a substitute, that we proceed now, first in the order of business, to the election of a Secretary, in order to perfect our organization.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco.

The substitute was adopted.

The PRESIDENT. Under this resolution we now proceed to the election of a Secretary for this Convention. Are there any nominations?

NOMINATIONS FOR SECRETARY.

Mr. BIGGS. Mr. President: I place before this Convention the name of a gentleman who has not a superior on this coast as Secretary. We want a good Secretary. The gentleman I have the honor to name is known to every member of this Convention, Marcus D. Boruck, of San Francisco.

Mr. EAGON. Mr. President: I rise to second the nomination of Marcus D. Boruck. I do not wish to be understood as doing so on any personal grounds, or friendship, or on account of any political or other sentiments which that gentleman has. I do so, sir, merely on the ground of his peculiar fitness for the distinguished position to which he has been nominated. I care not what his sentiments may be upon politics; I care not what his opinions may be as to the great questions coming before this Convention; I care not whether he is Democrat or Republican, Workingman or Non-Partisan; I care not whether he quite coincides with me on the great question of taxation; I care not whether he agrees with Kearney or not on the great question of Chinese immigration and Chinese cheap labor. These things make no difference to me. I see around me a number of gentlemen who have occupied positions in the Legislature of this State time and time again, and, like myself, they all readily see that a great deal depends upon the efficiency and the ability of the Secretary. In fact, sir, it will be almost impossible for a body of this kind to get along without one who thoroughly understands the business, whose voice can fill this very poor chamber for persons to hear in, one who knows the duties of the position, and if we have such a man for the position the duties of the members will be greatly relieved and the interest of the State will be looked to more than if we had a man in that position who did not understand it. I do not wish to speak, sir, in a derogatory manner of any gentleman who has been nominated before this Convention here for that position, because I believe there are many men who can fill it ably; but I am satisfied that none have been tried so thoroughly as Mr. Boruck. His voice is such that the delegate in the most remote seat from the Secretary's desk can hear everything that is read from the desk; and members will take notice that is a very important thing, in order that they may properly discharge their duties, and vote intelligently upon questions coming up in this body. This seems to me a good reason why we should vote for him. In regard to the gentleman's views, as I have already taken occasion to state, I care not what his political convictions may be, because I do not intend that any gentleman at that desk, or on this floor, shall control my action on anything coming before this Convention; and I would be grieved to think that there is a single gentleman on this floor who would be so controlled. All we have to look to is, will he efficiently and faithfully discharge the duties at the desk? and if we do that, my impression is he will be the unanimous choice of the Convention.

Mr. SHOEMAKER. Mr. President: I place in nomination for the office of Chief Secretary, A. M. S. Carpenter, who was Reading Clerk in the Assembly during the last Legislature. He is the peer of any man in this State as a Secretary.

Mr. TINNIN. Mr. President: It is essentially necessary that in all deliberative bodies their proceedings should be kept with fidelity and ability. It is a matter that every member of this body is interested in; it is a matter in which the people of the whole State have an interest. They desire to have a gentleman placed in that position who will perform these duties faithfully, and to the satisfaction of the people of the entire State, whom they serve. I am very well aware, Mr. President, that it is a most important position, and requires a peculiar fitness to discharge the duties of the office; and, Mr. President, while I do not desire to detract in the least from the honor, integrity, or ability of any gentlemen named as candidates for that office, I do not believe, sir, that an All-wise Providence has been so illiberal in His dispensations as to confine these qualities to only a few persons. I believe, sir, that they have been distributed around. I believe that the gentleman whom I have the honor of nominating is fully competent, and that he can discharge the duties with ability; and I believe that he will do it in the interest of this body, that he will do it to your entire satisfaction, advancing the interests and convenience of the members of this body. I nominate for the position of Chief Secretary, W. S. Redding, of San Francisco.

Mr. LARKIN. I rise to place in nomination another gentleman. Agreeing with the gentleman from Trinity, that there is more than one man in this State capable of discharging the duties satisfactorily and intelligently at that desk, I desire to place a man there who has had experience in legislative departments, whose qualifications no man can doubt. While I believe that candidates should have all these qualifications, it is not so much what kind of a voice he has; but what we want to know is, that the man will not be governed by any private interests; that he will not turn the leaves for the benefit of you or me, or this man or that man. This man comes here untrammeled, and will stand there and discharge the duties without fear or favor. I desire to place such a man in nomination, and many of you already know to whom I allude—F. J. Clark, of Alameda.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I desire also to place before this Convention a gentleman for the office of Secretary; one who, I have every reason to believe, is fully competent to fill the position, and without taking up the time of this Convention I shall simply state that the gentleman I refer to is Mr. J. A. Johnson, of Alameda. He comes here substantially the representative of the southern portion of California—a place where he has been residing some years—and it seems to be but fair, though I am from the northern portion of the State, that the southern portion of the State should be considered in the distribution of these positions; and it seems no more than fair that San Francisco should not come here, like Alexander, taking all there is and weeping because there is no more.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I rise for the purpose of seconding the nomination of Mr. Johnson, announced by the gentleman from Placer. He is now from Alameda, though, more strictly speaking, he is identified with the southern portion of the State, having been a resident of Santa Barbara County. He has resided in Alameda County about one year, where he is engaged in the business of journalist, where he is well and favorably known as a gentleman of high character, and I am sure that I think I can say that he is well qualified for the position he seeks. He is affable and able, and has had large experience as a Secretary in bodies of this kind. I cannot speak from personal knowledge as to that, but I have heard him as a public speaker, and I know that he has a clear and distinct voice, and I am informed by those who have heard him that he is an able reader, which is a very important thing in a Secretary. That, Mr. President, is all that I deem it proper to say at this time. I rose not for the purpose of indulging in any fulsome eulogy of the candidate, but simply to say that he is able, affable, and honest.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I second the nomination of Mr. Clark. He has never solicited the appointment; he is not here now log-rolling and wirepulling for the election. For that reason I support him.

Nominations closed.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: Before proceeding to take another vote, I desire to make the point of order that the presiding officer of this Convention is not entitled to vote for these candidates, with all due deference to the Chair. This is my understanding, except in cases of a tie, and where the roll is called by ayes and noes. It is not a matter to my taste, but it seems to me I am correct.

THE PRESIDENT. Does the gentleman raise that as a point of order?

MR. BARBOUR. Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair overrules it as not being well taken. The Secretary will call the roll. [Laughter.]

MR. NOEL. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do now adjourn to half-past one o'clock.

The motion was lost.

At the conclusion of the fifth ballot and before the result was announced, many delegates changed their votes from Clark to Johnson. So much confusion arose in regard to the changes that it was decided by the Convention to call a new roll.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I raise this point of order: I understand there was a roll call, and before the announcement of the vote, a motion was made to call the roll again. I suggest, sir, that this is out of order. There was a vote cast here, and it has not been announced. The gentlemen voting are entitled to an announcement of that vote, whatever it is. It may be that a candidate was elected, and if so, he is entitled to his election, and he is entitled to an announcement before there is any further roll call. If we are to proceed in this manner of calling the roll, and then getting into confusion, and calling the roll again; and if we are to ascertain by keeping a private record, what ones are elected, and then getting into a snarl and have the roll called again before the announcement of that vote, when will we ever know that there has been an election here, and how is it to be known what candidates are elected? That is the point of order—that we are entitled to the announcement of the vote.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: Does there seem to be any muddle there at the desk? I rise to a point of order, and it is this: The Chair has the power at any time before the announcement of the vote, where there are many changes, to order a new vote. It is supposed that the vote is taken for the instruction of the House through the Chair. And when by any means the Chair is not informed, or there is a mistake, he has the power to direct the Secretary or Clerk to call the roll anew. Now the Chair has that power, and if he desires he can exercise it.

THE PRESIDENT. Mr. Johnson having received the majority of all the votes cast, I pronounce him the Secretary of this Convention. [Applause.]

At twelve o'clock and fifty-five minutes P. M., on motion of Mr. Smith, of Santa Clara, the Convention adjourned to three o'clock this afternoon.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at three o'clock P. M., President HOGE in the Chair. Roll called and one hundred and forty-two members present.

J. A. JOHNSON, Secretary elect of the Convention, came forward to the President's desk and took the oath of office, the same being administered by President HOGE.

FURTHER OFFICERS.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. Mr. President: I have a resolution which I desire to offer.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will send up his resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the President appoint a committee of seven, to report the designation and number of officers other than President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms, as, in their opinion, are necessary for the transaction of the business of this Convention, and the compensation to be paid to each where not fixed by law.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: I offer that resolution because the law authorizes this Convention to appoint such suitable officers as it may deem necessary for the transaction of its business, and I understand from gentlemen of greater legislative experience than I have, that we need certain specific officers; and, to have it clearly before the Convention, I think it would be better to have a committee to report what officers would be necessary, and their compensation, where that is not fixed by law. For instance, I understand that we shall need a Journal Clerk. Some other gentleman thinks we shall need an assistant or assistants; that we shall have a number of doorkeepers, and gentlemen differ as to how many. Some think that we should have two Phonographic Reporters; others think that one will be enough. The resolution I have offered is simply to bring the matter intelligibly before the Convention, and I move its adoption.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I second the resolution of Mr. Wilson. I believe, sir, that such a committee ought to be appointed. Of course, the action of the committee will not be binding upon the House unless adopted. I second the resolution.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move to amend the resolution by inserting at the end thereof the words "except a Phonographic Reporter." I do so, because I believe that the committee who has in charge that matter ought to be experts. They should take the matter into consideration, and decide whether the work should be done by contract or a reporter elected.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I second the amendment.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: Under the resolution which I offer, the committee can only recommend how many would be proper. This committee is only to recommend what officers, in their opinion, are necessary for the proper working of the Convention, and their compensation.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I offer as a substitute for the whole matter the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Convention now proceed to the election, first, of a Phonographic Reporter; second, a Sergeant-at-Arms; third, an Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms; fourth, Minute Clerk.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: While I agree with the sentiments of the original resolution, as offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, I take it for granted that the officers named in the substitute are positively essential to the organization. While the officers I have mentioned are necessary, it is more than likely that if we go on blindly, and elect all the officers, we will elect officers which are not essential. I know there are candidates here for most of the offices of which it is usual to fill in legislative bodies, and having their friends they will be placed in nomination, and the Convention will likely proceed to elect them without stopping to consider whether we really need them or not. My idea is—or I take it for granted—that we need the officers I have mentioned, and I am in favor of proceeding at once to the election of these officers, and then provide for this committee asked for in the original resolution. In other words, I would go as far as the election of these officers that we know that we need, and then have this committee appointed to see what further officers we need.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I understand that the resolution was this morning that we proceed to the election of Secretaries. That resolution has not been reconsidered.

THE PRESIDENT. That resolution has been carried out and the Secretary elected.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I call your attention to the fact that the resolution specifies Secretaries in the Journal. The word used was Secretaries.

MR. WILSON, of First District. In one portion of the law it says Secretaries, and in another place it says Secretary. I think we had better have the report of a committee on the officers needed, and have their compensation fixed, and then we can go ahead.

THE PRESIDENT. The original resolution will be read again.

The Secretary read the resolution.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move to amend by adding "except the Phonographic Reporters."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is now upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

MR. WATERS. Do I understand the Chair that the question will be upon the amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. The original resolution was offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson. Mr. Barbour moves to amend by adding the words "except the Phonographic Reporters." Mr. Filcher has also offered a substitute, and the Chair rules that the question is now on the amendment.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I then appeal from the decision of the Chair.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman from San Francisco offered the original resolution. The gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, offers a substitute, and the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, offered an amendment to the resolution. The Chair decided to put the question on the amendment first, from which the gentleman from San Bernardino appeals. The question now is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the decision of the Convention?

MR. ESTEE. I hope the appeal will be withdrawn, and that the Chair will change his views, because, according to all parliamentary usages, a substitute takes precedence—takes the place of the whole matter, including the original resolution.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not change his opinion on the question.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I concur with the views of Mr. Estee. A substitute is in the nature of an amendment—of a second amendment—and that comes first. If the substitute is adopted, that takes the place of the whole matter. There will be no necessity of amending the first proposition if the substitute is adopted.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I take the appeal with no feelings of captiousness, but from the fact that I have seen that ruling made here three or four times in as many days, and it appeared wrong to me. I am firmly of the opinion that the ruling is wrong. Now, in order that we may not settle down into error in the very beginning, I raise this question now, and I think it behooves us to change that ruling. If we go wrong in a matter as trivial as this, if we start in in error we must follow it up. It is clearly the fact that the substitute offered by the gentleman from Placer is in the nature of an amendment; the substitute in reality is an amendment to the amendment. Now, the question is upon the amendment to the amendment, or the substitute. We had better right ourselves now, and refuse to sustain the Chair.

Mr. McFARLAND. I will ask that the substitute be read again. Mr. President, there is always a great deal of learning expended upon questions of order at the opening. In my opinion the substitute is out of order. The main proposition of the original resolution is that a committee be appointed for the purpose of determining what we need. Upon that an amendment was offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, that a portion of the resolution be stricken out. That was in order. That was germane to the original proposition. And then comes the substitute. You call it a substitute, ignoring the whole proposition, and opposing any committee at all, and assuming that the Convention shall go on and elect its officers. I don't think it is a proper amendment at all. I do not think that any amendment ignoring the original proposition entirely, and saying that the Convention shall go on and elect officers, is germane to the question at all; it is out of order. If the Convention is not in favor of it, the proper way is to vote down the amendment, and then comes the proposition of Mr. Filcher, to proceed to elect officers. I do not understand that I can introduce a substitute that ignores the original subject-matter entirely. Therefore, I make the point of order, that the substitute is out of order.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair will assign his reasons for his decision. I understand that we have no rules yet and therefore we are governed by the general parliamentary law. I understand it to be well settled that the friends of a resolution have a right to put it in the shape they desire, perfect it by amendments and get it into the shape they want it. Then, if any one wants to move a substitute for it, it may be done; but the vote is first taken on the amendments to the original resolution.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: From what little experience I have had, I had arrived at the same conclusion as expressed by the Chair, that the friends of a resolution have a right to perfect it before a substitute can be considered; and I will state to the other gentlemen, Mr. Waters and Mr. Estee, that their impressions are derived from a rule of the Assembly and Senate, that is always understood to be a modification of the general principles of parliamentary law. It is a special rule of California.

Mr. FILCHER. Mr. President: In order to facilitate matters, and to prevent this tangle, as the object can be obtained in another way, and I had no further object in view than to elect the officers we know we have to have now, I will withdraw the substitute.

Mr. WATERS. In that case, I will withdraw my appeal.

The PRESIDENT. The question is now on the amendment as offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, to add the words, "except the Phonographic Reporters."

The amendment was lost.

The PRESIDENT. The question now comes on the original resolution of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President: I move to amend the resolution by adding after the words "Sergeant-at-Arms," the words "Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms."

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President: The reason I put it in that shape is, that we may want more than one Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms. This resolution does not change the power of the Convention at all.

Mr. HALE. In that case I will withdraw my amendment.

The PRESIDENT. The question is now on the original resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

The PRESIDENT. I will appoint as such committee S. M. Wilson, J. E. Murphy, Volney E. Howard, Henry Larkin, Joseph C. Brown, Walter Van Dyke, and Patrick Reddy.

TO FILL VACANCIES.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That the President appoint a committee of five, whose duty it shall be to inquire into, and to whom shall be referred all matters concerning the eligibility of members and the filling of vacancies, and that such committee shall be required to report at the morning session on Thursday next.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: I move to lay the resolution temporarily on the table.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: That resolution refers to a matter of considerable importance, and to questions that should be settled at as early a day as possible. I do not wish to precipitate it with any undue haste, but merely introduce the resolution that the subject to which it refers may be referred to a committee appointed for that purpose, and the matters referred to the committee, so that such action may be taken as the Convention may deem necessary, in order that they may report to the Convention as early as possible. This Convention, Mr. President, seems to me to be organized in a very informal and unusual manner; but we will let that matter rest for the present. We have never had any Committee on Credentials; there never has been a report to this body, nor in any manner have we officially ascertained who are members of this Convention. It has been conceded that there are some vacancies, and I am sorry to say, by the hand of death, but there is no official knowledge of that fact, and I know of no way to arrive at it, other than the way I have indicated. It has been conceded since we met, that there were questions of the eligibility of the sitting members. Now let us have a committee appointed to whom the whole thing may be referred, with instructions to report at as early a day as possible. I think that is the best way to come at it.

Mr. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: It strikes me that the gentleman's motion is entirely premature. He suggests as a reason for offering it that we do not know who are the members of the Convention. The law designates that those who are proclaimed members by the Governor are entitled to be sworn in and take their seats and exercise their duties until inquired into, usually by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which I presume this body will in due time appoint. That generally follows after a body is organized. Therefore, I think that the resolutions are premature now. In reference to the appointment of it, he said he did not know that we have any evidences of vacancies here. It is a universal rule that the suggestion to a Court is sufficient in reference to the death of any party. It is sufficient in this Convention, and a single suggestion on the part of any member here is enough to establish that fact. That is the custom of Courts, and therefore it is not necessary that a committee shall be appointed for that purpose. As I remarked, we will evidently have a Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: I quite agree with the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, on this matter, that we do not need to appoint any committee for the purpose of ascertaining that which, if it needs to be made known officially to the Convention, can be made by the suggestions of the delegates from those Congressional Districts where those vacancies exist. It is enough, it seems to me, to state that in the Second Congressional District there is a vacancy created by the death of a delegate at large, the Hon. H. H. Haight; that in the Counties of Merced and Mariposa there is also a vacancy created by the death of G. M. Hardwick. As to the vacancy caused by the absence of the member from San Francisco, the Convention has had that information communicated through a letter signed by Thomas Morris, who was elected at the recent election, and the signature to it was witnessed by one of his colleagues from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. As far as that matter is concerned, sir, it seems to me that the resolution is out of order. Perhaps at the proper time, when the Convention shall have been fully organized, when these vacant districts shall have been represented and shall be represented here, it will be proper to make inquiries as suggested by the gentleman from San Francisco as to the eligibility of all gentlemen claiming seats in this Convention, but so far as vacancies to which I have alluded are concerned, I think we have now got to that point when these vacancies should be filled, and, therefore, preliminary to introducing a resolution on that subject, I move to lay the resolution temporarily on the table.

Mr. ESTEE. Mr. President: I second the motion. Such a motion as that I never before heard of in any legislative body. The idea of a Committee on Credentials I never heard before.

The PRESIDENT. This is a motion to lay on the table, and is not debatable.

The motion was put and carried.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That this Convention do forthwith proceed to fill the vacancies in this body, created by reason of the death of the Hon. H. H. Haight, of the Second Congressional District, and the death of the Hon. G. M. Hardwick, in the Counties of Merced and Mariposa, and by the resignation of Thomas Morris, of San Francisco.

Resolved, That the nominations for candidates to fill that vacancy be named and made in the order named in this resolution.

Mr. HOWARD. I rise to a point of order. The organic Act fixes the order of business until the officers mentioned therein are elected. We cannot proceed to any other business. That is the only rule under which we can proceed; it is the only rule that we have now in force. It seems to me very clear that no other business of the Convention on any of these matters can be proceeded with until that order of business shall have been executed.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: In respect to the resolution I will say my reasons are these: the Convention is now sufficiently organized to fill vacancies existing in this body—known vacancies. Each of the Congressional Districts have a right to representation on this floor. Matters are coming up now on further organization of the Convention, upon which Congressional delegates are entitled to represent their constituency here. For that reason I suggest that before any further business is done we proceed to fill these vacancies. That is the object of the resolution.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that the Convention is now sufficiently organized by the election of a President and Secretary; that it has power to go on now and fill any vacancies in the body. The Chair overrules the point of order taken by the gentleman from Los Angeles. The question now is on the resolution offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I desire to pay the gentleman the same compliment that he paid me. I therefore move to lay the resolution temporarily on the table. My reasons for so doing——

The PRESIDENT. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable; the gentleman will please take his seat.

On the motion to lie on the table, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard, Ayers, and Huestis. On the call of the roll the motion was lost by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention refuses to lay the resolution on the table. The question is now on the resolution.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope that resolution will not be adopted at this stage of the proceedings. It seems to me rather soon to go into that matter. This Convention is vested with the power to act in behalf of the people represented by these delegates. It seems to me that we should not exercise that power in the midst of the confusion consequent upon organization. It seems to me that we should have an assistant at that desk, and a Sergeant-at-Arms elected by this Convention. It seems to me that we should have a Minute Clerk. And I hope that the resolution will not be adopted at this stage of our proceedings.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I have a resolution to offer:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to examine, as experts, into the qualifications of the candidates for Phonographic Reporters of this body; also, as to the probable cost of the reports, to report to-morrow.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer this resolution, sir, because I wish to have competent reporters appointed for this body; and I want a committee of gentlemen who are capable of judging as to their qualifications, and also because I have heard on the streets that there is a job in this—twenty-four thousand or twenty-five thousand dollars is to be made out of it. If there is any such sum in it, it must be a steal, and I want to see no stealing.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move to lay the resolution on the table, for the reason that in my judgment the subject-matter is covered by the resolution of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, passed by this body.

Carried.

RULES AND ORDER OF BUSINESS.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of nine be appointed by the Chair to draft rules and an order of business, and report the same to this Convention for its consideration.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I move to amend by adding, "and that the committee report what standing committees shall be formed."

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. As I understand parliamentary law, the duty of designating committees always falls upon the Committee on Rules. That is the rule in the Senate and Assembly in this State, in the House of Representatives, and in the United States Senate, and as far as I am advised, of every State in the Union. It is universally the custom for the Committee on Rules to designate the committees.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I think it is a perfectly proper amendment and makes the matter perfectly clear.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I withdraw my point of order; it is a very small matter.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: The amendment does not do any harm, though it is not necessary; I accept the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is now on the resolution as amended.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I would offer a resolution as a substitute to that resolution: That the following standing committees be appointed by the Chair—First, on rules; second, privileges and elections; third, printing; fourth, accounts and expenditures; fifth, preamble and bill of rights; sixth, legislative department; seventh, executive department; eighth, judicial department; ninth, elective franchise; tenth, education; eleventh, public institutions; twelfth, public debt and public works; thirteenth, militia; fourteenth, county and township organization; fifteenth, apportionment of representation; sixteenth, revenue and taxation; seventeenth, municipal corporations; eighteenth, corporations other than municipal; nineteenth, miscellaneous subjects; twentieth, amendments to the Constitution; twenty-first, schedule; twenty-second, intoxicating liquors; twenty-third, enrollment; twenty-fourth, revision; twenty-fifth, agriculture.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I offer the resolution at this time as a substitute, and I believe that the Committee on Rules should be a standing committee. I am not particular about the adoption of the substitute at the present time, but I think the experience of this Convention is that the Committee on Rules should be one of the standing committees of this Convention, and I move the adoption of the substitute.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: It is entirely unusual to adopt a resolution in that way; it is the universal custom with resolutions of that character that they be referred to the Committee on Rules, because it is necessary for us to fix the number, and it is one of the most important duties of this Convention. I would ask the gentleman to let the original resolution be adopted, and then refer his resolution to that committee for its consideration.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I accept the suggestion of the gentleman.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order that I would like to have decided at the commencement; it is, that the substitute is entirely out of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The substitute is withdrawn, sir.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move to amend the resolution of the gentleman from San Francisco by inserting the word "fifteen" instead of "nine," so that the committee may consist of fifteen members instead of nine.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I accept the amendment.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. President: I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Convention are tendered to his Excellency, Governor Irwin, for the very able, impartial, and courteous manner in which he has discharged the duties of presiding officer of this Convention; also, that the thanks of this Convention be tendered to Secretary of State Beck, and the other officers who have rendered services during the organization of the Convention.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I now move that that resolution which I offered be referred to the Committee on Rules.

Carried.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do now adjourn until ten o'clock to-morrow.

Division was called for, and the Convention, at four o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

The minutes of yesterday's proceedings were read and approved.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, asked two days' leave of absence for Mr. Laine. Leave granted.

TO FILL VACANCIES.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, First—That the delegates at large from the Second Congressional District, and the delegates from the City and County of San Francisco be, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to name the persons to fill the vacancies in their respective delegations, caused by the death of H. H. Haight and the resignation of Thomas Morris, and that the persons thus proposed be considered the choice of this Convention.

Second—That the vacancy in the representation from the Counties of Mariposa and Merced be filled by an election to be had therefor by this Convention.

Third—That the Convention reserves its right to reject any person proposed as above provided, who may be found ineligible or deemed unworthy.

MR. DUDLEY. Mr. President: I move that we lay the resolution on the table.

MR. BARBOUR. I call for the ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were also called for by Messrs. Beerstecher and White.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I think the resolution cannot be entertained, because it is delegating to a member of the Convention a duty that can only be performed by the whole Convention, namely, the election of persons to fill vacancies.

THE PRESIDENT. The law provides that all vacancies shall be filled by the Convention. The Chair therefore decides that the point of order made by the gentleman from Solano is well taken, and that the resolution is out of order.

MR. BARBOUR. Is it not the action of the Convention to authorize a committee to fill vacancies?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has decided the question; does the gentleman take an appeal?

MR. BARBOUR. Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution that has just been offered to the Convention has been read. The decision of the Chair is that the resolution is out of order, inasmuch as the law provides that the Convention itself shall fill all vacancies. The Chair decides the point well taken, from which decision the gentleman from San Francisco takes an appeal. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the House?

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: By permission of the House, I would like to read Section 11 of the Act of the Legislature which provides for this Convention: "In case any vacancy occurs by reason of the death, resignation, or otherwise, of any delegate elected to said Convention, the same shall be filled by the Convention."

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has stated the question and the ayes and noes have been ordered.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: Before this vote is taken I wish the Chair would read that portion of the law for the information of the House.

THE PRESIDENT. "In case any vacancy occurs by death, resignation, or otherwise, of any delegate elected to said Convention, the same shall be filled by the Convention."

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I do not consider that that resolution would make it incumbent upon this Convention to vote for the candidates who are to be presented. It is merely a mode to get those candidates before the Convention. It is not final, nor would that nomination be binding upon this Convention.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: Those who sit in the rear of this assembly would respectfully request of those who enjoy proximity to the Chair, to bear in mind that what they say is of as much interest to us as him, and therefore would respectfully request that whatever is observed to the President be spoken in such a tone of voice that we may be able to hear at least an occasional word.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: It appears to me from the reading of that resolution, that the matter would be final, and that what some of those interested in this matter decide upon and report to this House, the report is final in the case.

MR. AYERS called for the reading of the resolution, and it was again read by the Secretary.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: If gentlemen had not been so anxious to suppress debate, I would explain the resolution. I think I understand this law. It does not point out any particular mode in which the Convention shall fill vacancies. As to the Counties of Mariposa and Merced, the death of their representative, I believe, leaves no delegation from those counties except jointly with some other counties. I think the resolution does not confine the Convention to the nominee of this committee filling these vacancies, for they have a reserved right to pass on the member after he is nominated by this delegation. In the first place the proviso is that they shall name the person to fill the vacancy, and report the choice to the Convention. My object in making this proposition is to take that struggle out of this Convention. I believe it is conceded on all hands, at least by a majority of this Convention, that this is a proper mode to proceed to fill those vacancies. If that be the case, my resolution is only to obtain the sense of the Convention upon this proposition; and if they nominate persons acceptable to the Convention they can be notified of their nomination and come here and take their seats. I think it is the first and proper order of business that we should do so. There is no intention to bind the Convention. If they have already agreed upon the candidates, well and good; if not, let these delegates get together and name persons acceptable to their constituency. That is my object in presenting the resolutions. I have nothing to conceal. The San Francisco delegation have agreed unanimously on the man they propose to present; his name is John R. Sharpstein, who received the highest vote of any man in San Francisco. We claim that it is our privilege, and if the other delegates are ready we are willing to concede to them the same right. If they are not ready we will wait for them to present a candidate. We claim that the person called upon to fill a vacancy of this kind ought to correspond in sentiment, in political affiliation, as near as may be, with the person whose death has caused the vacancy. I see nothing, sir, wrong in that. It seems to be a matter of justice, and we place it on the grounds of justice, and we ask it of this Convention as a matter of justice.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: As I understand this question, this resolution, divested of all circumlocution, means simply this: that the San Francisco delegation of thirty members shall elect a delegate representing that district. That is all it means, and just what it means, because the only power it leaves in the Convention is to reconsider their action if the member they recommend is ineligible. Now, sir, of course the thirty representatives from San Francisco, known as representing the workingmen of that city, so-called, will not present anybody here who is not qualified under the Constitution. Second, there is no power left in this Convention if the resolution should be adopted that the San Francisco delegation of thirty shall elect a delegate in the place of Mr. Morris, who has resigned. Now, that should be the resolution, and the question comes squarely before us. I hope it will not be adopted. I believe that this whole Convention should pass upon the qualifications of every member who is placed before the Convention.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I agree with the gentleman who has just occupied the floor. It appears to me that in this case the matter to be considered is, whether or not this body, according to the law under which we are acting, has a right to commission the delegates from San Francisco, or from any other portion of this State, to elect to fill vacancies that have occurred. This appears to me to be a plain proposition that is before us. If we find the men that they have elected, set forth, to fill these vacancies are ineligible, or that there are constitutional objections to their filling this place, we can expel them afterwards. But it does appear to me that the principle is plain in the law with regard to this matter, that it is the duty of this Convention not to set the San Francisco members, or any other members, to the transacting of business which this body is responsible for according to the law, but that this Convention itself should attend to this, as the law itself plainly requires.

[Cries of "Question, question."]

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: In this matter I shall vote to sustain the Chair and for this reason: I believe that the law which provides how this Constitutional Convention shall be composed, plainly provides that all vacancies shall be filled by the Convention, and that that takes away from this Convention the power to say that the presiding officer shall fill vacancies, or that Governor Irwin shall fill vacancies, or that the San Francisco delegation shall fill vacancies, and I trust, sir, that the right feelings that exist in a majority of this Convention, that their feelings of justice and their disposition to require the law to be complied with—I say I trust to the right feelings of this Convention to elect men who will be satisfactory to the men who elected Mr. Morris.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I withdraw my appeal.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is ruled out of order.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. President: I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be requested to distribute to each member of the Convention a copy of the Statutes of 1877–8, if he has a sufficient number.

JUDGE HAGER stated that any member could obtain the Statutes from the Secretary of State or State Librarian, on application, and Mr. Smith thereupon withdrew his resolution.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

THE PRESIDENT here announced the following Committee on Rules and Order of Business: Messrs. Estee, Edgerton, Overton, Mansfield, Schell, Berry, Fawcett, Reynolds, West, Holmes, Murphy, Dudley, Pulliam, Tinnin, and Waters.

ABOUT PAY.

MR. WYATT. I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That the President of the Convention be instructed to appoint a committee of five, whose duty it shall be to ascertain and report to this Convention on Saturday, at the forenoon session thereof, the amount due each member of the Convention for mileage and per diem to date of report.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that the resolution will meet with the unanimous vote of this Convention, and I have but little question but that it will. I was induced to offer it myself because I was aware of the known timidity of the members of the Convention on that subject, and, therefore, in order to relieve them, I took the responsibility of offering it myself. I believe that the committee proposed by the resolution adopted yesterday and appointed this morning do not contemplate the duties mentioned in the committee which I propose, and it is for that purpose, to supply that omission, that I offer the resolution.

MR. VAN DYKE. Is there really any necessity for that resolution? The law fixes the compensation and mileage of every member here; it is simply a matter of computation. I don't see the necessity of the resolution.

MR. EDGERTON. I move to lay the resolution temporarily on the table, for the reason that the Code fixes the mileage and per diem of members of the Convention at the same rates as of members of the Legislature, and also fixes the distance from each county seat to the City of Sacramento.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: If the gentlemen know the fact that a member can step into the Treasurer's office, or into the Controller's office, or into the office of the Secretary of State, or into the office of some other authorized State official, and draw his money, then I am satisfied that the resolution lay upon the table. But unless he can answer that that is a fact, then I want some way that this Convention can unlock the strong box of the State and get at some of that one hundred and fifty thousand dollars that is lying there rusting; and, as I understand it, Mr. President, there must be some authority from this Convention as a basis for those officers to act upon. I do not understand that I can step into the Controller's and say, "My name is Wyatt. I am a member of the Constitutional Convention. I am from Monterey County; my legal distance is one hundred and ninety-six miles. I have been here ten days, and I want a warrant for one hundred and thirty dollars, or one hundred and ninety dollars, or one hundred and seventy-five dollars, as the case may be." I understand that this Convention is to certify to what I am entitled to receive from time to time.

MR. HAGER. It is well enough to understand this question at this time. I will inform the Convention that the statute provides how this money shall be drawn from the treasury. The amount of pay shall be certified by the President, and shall be paid by the Treasurer, on the warrant of the Controller, in the same manner as members of the Legislature are paid. The President may now certify that there is so much due any member, if he sees fit to do that. The mileage question is generally ascertained by a Committee on Mileage and Expenses, which is generally a standing committee. When the Committee on Rules make their report, there will be a provision for a Committee on Mileage or Pay, or a committee that will control that question, and then they make a general report in regard to all the members. The per diem allowance that may be due, can be drawn upon the certificate of the President. I would therefore suggest to the gentleman to let the matter rest until the Committee on Rules make their report, when the proper committee will be named that will have the power to regulate this matter.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I second the motion to lay on the table, for the reason that it appears to me that this knocking at the doors of the treasury before we are organized is in bad taste.

The motion to lay on the table prevailed.

A motion by Mr. Noel, to grant an indefinite leave of absence to Mr. Campbell, was lost.

REPORT ON ORGANIZATION.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: The Committee on Further Organization desires to report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your committee, to whom was referred the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President appoint a committee of seven to report the designation and number of officers other than President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms, as in their opinion are necessary for the transaction of the business of the Convention, and the compensation to be paid to each when not fixed by law—

Beg leave to report that they have found the following additional officers necessary: First, a President pro tem.; second, two Assistant Secretaries; third, one Minute Clerk; fourth, one Journal Clerk; fifth, one Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms; sixth, three Doorkeepers; seventh, two Porters; eighth, eight Pages; ninth, one Postmaster; tenth, one Mail Carrier; eleventh, one Phonographic Reporter and one assistant. We recommend that the following compensation be allowed to the officers: First, to the Assistant Secretaries and Journal Clerk, $6 per day; second, to the Minute Clerk, $8 per day; third, Doorkeeper, $5 per day; fourth, to the Porters, $4 per day; fifth, to the Pages, $3 per day; sixth, to the Postmaster, $4 per day; seventh, to the Mail Carrier, $100 per month; eighth, to the Reporters, $10 per day and 20 cents per folio for transcribing. We also recommend the election by the Convention of the following officers: President pro tem., one Reporter, two Assistant Secretaries, one Minute Clerk, one Journal Clerk, one Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms; the other officers named to be appointed by the President of the Convention. All of which we respectfully submit. S. M. WILSON, Chairman.

October 2, 1878.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: Before that report is adopted I would like, if it is not out of order, to move that the price be reduced from twenty cents to fifteen cents per folio for transcribing.

THE PRESIDENT. The first question is upon the reception of the report.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the report be received.

The motion prevailed and the report was received.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I did not observe that there was any provision for a Night Watchman. That is one of the most important offices about the building. It is essentially necessary. I move that the report be amended so as to include a Night Watchman, with a salary of three dollars per day.

MR. LEWIS. Mr. President: I would ask for information, what is the duty of the Night Watchman?

MR. SHOEMAKER. Mr. President: The Night Watchman provided by the Secretary of State occupies the corridor below. It is very necessary that there should be somebody here to look after our desks, because any key will unlock our desks, and there should be some protection for our papers.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I understand that the per diem heretofore paid to the Night Watchman has been five dollars, and I ask to amend so that the compensation shall be five dollars instead of three dollars.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: It has been the rule to have a Watchman for the day as well as for the night, and I therefore move to amend by having a Day Watchman also.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman from Butte can make the motion as soon as the present one for a Night Watchman has been decided.

The motion prevailed.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I now move that we have a Day Watchman at four dollars per day.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: The Door-keeper can keep charge of the hall during the daytime when not in session.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I would like to know why we intend to employ three Door-keepers, a Sergeant-at-Arms, and an Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, if they are not to perform these duties in the daytime at the salary they are to receive.

MR. BIGGS. I withdraw the motion to save discussion.

THE PRESIDENT. The question now recurs upon the adoption of the report.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I shall renew my motion, that the figure for reporters' transcripts be reduced from twenty cents per folio to fifteen cents per folio. The figure now allowed by the State for the Reporter of the Supreme Court is twenty cents per folio, and the work there is not constant, but occasional. In this case we shall have a very large and important piece of work that will last perhaps for a hundred days, and I think that the compensation of fifteen cents per folio will amply repay the gentlemen who may be chosen as Phonographic Reporters.

MR. FREUD. I second the motion.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: The committee, in fixing the compensation for reporters, made some inquiries upon that subject, and the price fixed is the price allowed by Courts for making reports of judicial proceedings. It seems to me that the labors of reporting the proceedings of a legislative body are much more difficult and arduous, and this is only the same rate allowed for Court reporting. The difference is very small between fifteen and twenty cents per folio. We thought on fixing it at the ordinary rate because it was more arduous than Court reporting; that it would be fair to the Convention and economical to the State. We made inquiries and learned that to be the fact. I think, therefore, that it ought to remain in the report as it is. We require them to be in constant attendance, we require the best skill, and I believe every gentleman will want the proceedings written up very particularly. Under these circumstances, it seems to me that the compensation should remain as it is in the report.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I will merely state, in reply to the gentleman, that there certainly cannot be any difference in the labor of transcribing the proceedings of this Convention and in transcribing judicial proceedings. It is a mere mechanical process. The fact that there will be a great deal of work will only make it necessary to have more men to do the work. I think the price paid to amanuenses throughout the State is ten cents per folio for like service. That will leave the persons who are going to be stenographers a clear gain of five cents per folio. If the proceedings should be printed in octavo form, there would be seven folios on a page. The debates of the Pennsylvania Convention occupied nine octavo volumes. The difference between the charges of twenty cents per folio and fifteen cents would save to this

State from two to three thousand dollars, perhaps, and I think we would have the work just as well performed for fifteen cents as for twenty cents.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: Much depends upon what these reporters are to report. If it is intended to make a verbatim report, including all the speeches that are made, the expense will be something enormous, and twenty cents a folio would be too much, and I hope that the fifteen cent proposition of the gentleman from Los Angeles will be adopted. Why, I find here that if our reports will be as large and voluminous as they have been, the reporting and transcribing for this Convention will cost over thirty thousand dollars, according to a careful estimate. I do not think it is wise to make such a disbursement. I am aware that to transcribe from a reporter's notes requires professional skill; an ordinary scribe cannot do it. I think fifteen cents a folio, where the work is so large, is most ample.

MR. WILSON, of First District. We accept the amendment.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I move to amend the report of the committee by striking out the words "and one assistant." One competent reporter can take the notes of this Convention, and if he is allowed fifteen cents per folio for transcribing those notes he will come under bonds as a responsible party, and thus make this Convention secure.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I now move that ten cents per folio be the compensation.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I will state I understand that the reporters will not accept fifteen cents, and also that two will be necessary. The Convention would not like to elect two in conflict with each other. We, therefore, proposed that one should be elected, who should select his assistant, and that would be necessary, in order to prepare the reports that we intend to have. It will require two.

MR. FILCHER. Do you allow the reporter's assistant ten dollars per day?

MR. WILSON, of First District. Undoubtedly, the reporters will each receive ten dollars per day; each will receive the per diem. It will require two reporters to do the work.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I will go as far as any gentleman on this floor, where the best interests of the people and this Convention are subserved, and I desire to say that this committee considered this matter. We want a report that will be reliable, and we desire a reliable man to make it. I think that fifteen cents per folio is none too much, and I hope there will be no change in the report of the committee, and that, as amended, it will be adopted by this Convention.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This, sir, is a very important question, and I do not know how we can, at this time, act very intelligently upon the subject. Those who are acquainted with bodies where the proceedings are reported, know what an enormous job the reporter has before him. Now, take the proceedings of Congress, which are reported verbatim, every morning following the debates, filling a quarto volume of one hundred pages, and sometimes more, being a full report of everything that occurs. For this work the reporter's compensation ought to be adequate. When the report of the debates of this Convention are taken, as it is too great a labor for one man, they have to be written out in longhand by stenographers who can read the notes. In other words, the persons that have to write out the shorthand should be just as competent as those who take the notes. I think there ought to be a committee appointed to ascertain in advance what portion of the proceedings we wish to report. Certainly we don't want them to report the committees, or to report resolutions every time they are read by the Secretary. In that way the volume would be swelled to enormous dimensions. I do not think myself that twenty cents per folio is too much. The most important parts to be reported, perhaps, are the debates, because they illustrate the opinions of those who speak upon the propositions that come before the Convention. The proposition itself will be embodied in the reports, and the debates will be an illustration of what the views of the members were on the subject debated. And as for the writing out, I will move that for the time being we elect the reporters, and do not undertake to fix the compensation until we first ascertain, through the committee, what the stenographers are to report.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The Convention perceives now the very difficulty which I pointed out yesterday. So far as the per diem compensation is concerned I have no objection; it is not too much. But the important question for this Convention to determine is what shall be reported and what the compensation shall be for transcribing in longhand those shorthand notes. It will make a very great difference to the treasury of this State what action is taken upon this matter. If everything is taken down and the proceedings reported in full there will be an immense amount to transcribe. That ought to be regulated. I, therefore, second the amendment for the appointment of a committee skilled in the business, if you can find them.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I move not to appoint the committee at this time, and to strike out the compensation to be allowed for transcribing into longhand.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: It seems to me that we had better adopt this report. Let the committee then undertake, deliberately, to ascertain how far the debates shall be reported, whether there shall be any limit at all, or report the entire proceedings.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I observe, in looking over the proceedings of the Constitutional Convention of the State of Illinois, held in eighteen hundred and seventy, that the Convention provides, first, for a phonographic report of the debates. Likewise the Convention provides for the publication of those debates, furnishing to the members of the Convention, each morning, so many copies, such a number to be filed with the State officers, and also providing for the publication, in the form of Congressional debates, all the debates in the Convention. A Committee was finally raised to receive propositions to make such reports and to publish them. The whole matter was finally concluded, and the final result of their efforts in that behalf, by common consent and common understanding, was that they had saved a large amount of money to the State, and at the same time secured a faithful report of the debates of the Convention published officially in the manner that I have indicated. Each member was furnished a copy, so many was furnished to the library, and the balance was deposited with the Secretary of State; copies were likewise provided to be furnished to the various States in the Union. It seems to me to be the part of wisdom that we shall take some action here that shall look to the accomplishment of a like result. As I have not heard the report on this matter, I would ask the Secretary to read so much of the report as applies to it.

The Secretary read the eighth clause of the report.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: It seems to me that by the adoption of the suggestion of the gentleman from San Francisco, the most important feature in that resolution and the most important action on the part of this body will be lost sight of. If the report taken by the reporters of the proceedings of this Convention be taken down in phonographic character it will remain as Greek to this Convention and to the world. When that reporter is called upon for his longhand report of his transcription of the record, he will say to this Convention, "Gentlemen, it is under lock and key; pay me one hundred thousand dollars for what is on that paper, and I will take it." Now I don't pretend to say that the reporters would say that; they are all gentlemen, these reporters, every one of them; but, Mr. President, I do not choose to accept the will of any gentleman to a contract after he has performed a portion, and left it in a condition where it is utterly useless to us unless it is transcribed, and he then fix the price. The proposition is now that we make a contract with these reporters to take the notes, not knowing at what rate it will be transcribed, and then to trust to what figures they may choose to place upon it after that is done. This is not the wisdom that should characterize this Convention—to make contracts in that way. I submit that this Convention will not act the part of wisdom to make any such agreement. If we intend to make any arrangements with these reporters, let us make a definite, certain arrangement, whereby the transcription of these reports shall be made out at a certain fixed price, and not trust to what may be done afterwards after the report has been made up.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I move that we strike out all relating to reporters—and, as an amendment thereto, I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That there be employed by the Convention a competent reporter, whose duty it shall be to make an accurate and faithful report of the debates and daily proceedings of the Convention. That a Committee on Reporting be appointed, who shall be authorized to invite and receive proposals from gentlemen qualified to discharge the duties of reporter as to the terms upon which they will undertake to perform said duties, and that said committee report to the Convention the proposals received, with such recommendations in respect thereto as may be deemed expedient

MR. HAGER. The amendment that I offered is before the Convention. I think it has precedence.

MR. ESTEE. I hold in my hand a report of the proceedings and debates of the Constitutional Convention of the State of Illinois. Their expenses were fifty-seven thousand five hundred and fifty-two dollars and fifty cents; so you can see how necessary it is to take this matter into serious consideration.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment that is offered is to the eleventh clause, which reads "one Phonographic Reporter and one assistant." The gentleman from Placer moves to strike out "and one assistant."

MR. REYNOLDS. I hardly understand the intention of the question at present. I hope that amendment will not prevail. I speak from some experience, and I know that it is physically impossible for one man to report the proceedings of this entire Convention. The reporter must attend the morning session. It is as much as that man can do during the remaining part of the day to transcribe, or read to amanuenses, his notes. His assistant must come in at the afternoon session and do the same thing. We must therefore have two competent shorthand reporters; certainly not less, perhaps more. As to the compensation. There is no question about the per diem. The only question is about the cost of transcribing. Now it will cost ten cents per folio to hire the writing done. There remains but five cents per folio to compensate the reporter for reading notes, for writing his portion of it, and for overseeing the whole matter, and that is certainly not much. We do not want any second class work done. We cannot peddle it out to the lowest bidder. This Convention must choose the best workmen, and then pay them their price. I hope these amendments to cut down prices or let it out to the lowest bidder will not prevail, but that the report, with the amendment which the committee accepted, will be adopted.

MR. LARKIN. I have an idea that it is not necessary to perpetuate all the discussions in this body, but only such matters as pertain to the debates or propositions to amend the Constitution. The reasons why we adopt the Constitution is the only matter that should be reported—only just matters that are necessary to show to the future generations the reasons why this or that amendment was adopted, is all that should be paid for by the State, or declared by this Convention proper to be paid for as a record of this Convention. All this trifling debate, all these idle matters, are not necessary to be perpetuated.

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. It is evident that this question is one of great importance, and it is also manifest that the members of this Convention do not thoroughly understand it; therefore I move that the subject-matter be referred back to the committee with instructions to report to-morrow, and that it be made the special order for to-morrow at two o'clock P. M.

MR. WHITE. We do not understand how this question stands now. We are anxious that the Stedman resolution be read and referred to that committee with them.

MR. PRESIDENT. Regularly this report would be read clause by clause, and would be open to amendment upon each clause. No amendment being offered to the first clauses, the first amendment was by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, to amend the eleventh clause by striking out "and one assistant." That is the first question in order, originally.

MR. HAGER. I move that we adopt all that portion of the report with the exception of that relating to Phonographic Reporters and their compensation.

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I suspend my motion.

MR. FREEMAN. I think that twelve Pages are more than is necessary. The report provides for eight additional. That is too many. The statute provides for four.

MR. HAGER. By the statute the President has the power to appoint four Pages, and if the committee report four additional that would make eight. As it now stands we would have twelve.

MR. FREEMAN. I move that the word "eight" be stricken out and "four" inserted.

MR. VAN DYKE. There seems to be some misapprehension in reference to that word "additional." It means additional to the President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms, with those specified in the statute. It does not mean eight additional Pages added to the four specified in the Act. That is not what the report means. It means eight Pages in all. It is additional to the President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms. That is what the resolution was that was referred to the committee. It was to report what officers, other than President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms, would be necessary. So in reference to Porters, Doorkeepers, etc. It is not in addition to those specified in the Act.

MR. PRESIDENT. The chair has so understood it. It provides for the entire number of officers of the Convention other than President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: It was the obvious intention of the committee to have eight Pages in the aggregate, and three Doorkeepers. At most it can be only a clerical error. It is not necessary to reach by resolution that which can be met by a simple correction of their report.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. The entire number was the intention of the committee, in addition to the President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move that the report be taken up seriatim.

MR. EDGERTON. This subject has already occupied the attention of the committee for a long time. It seems to me that the most judicious disposition to make of it is to sustain the motion to recommit the whole subject-matter to the committee.

THE PRESIDENT. There was no such motion. The motion was simply to refer the matter of Phonographic Reporters.

MR. EDGERTON. I move to amend by recommitting the whole subject-matter to the committee, with instructions to report this afternoon by three o'clock.

MR. HUESTIS. This is a question that the Convention will have to meet, and they are probably as well qualified to meet the question and deal with it justly and intelligently now as at any future time. Many of the objections that have arisen here if it is deferred will come up again, and the result will be much more consumption of time. I hope this matter will be disposed of now.

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I accept the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton.

MR. McCALLUM. I would suggest that instead of three o'clock it be amended so that the committee can report before three o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. I move to amend so that the committee be instructed to report as soon as practicable.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is that the report be recommitted to the committee, with instructions to report at the earliest practicable moment.

The motion prevailed.

MR. BARTON. Pending the deliberations of the committee I move that the Convention now proceed to the election of a President pro tem.

Mr. Graves offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Convention have printed for the use of the members of the Convention, five hundred sheet copies of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for a Convention to frame a new Constitution for the State of California," approved March 30th, 1878.

MR. AYERS. I believe that is the most economical way to place every member in possession of a copy of the law.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. BLACKMER. I move that this Convention do now adjourn until two o'clock.

The motion prevailed.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock; President Hoge in the chair. Roll called and one hundred and forty-two members found to be present.

On request of Mr. Van Dyke, Mr. Campbell was granted leave of absence for the balance of the week.

REPORT.

Mr. Wilson submitted the following report of the Committee on Attachés:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your committee, appointed under a resolution of the Convention, to report the designation, the number of officers other than President and Secretary and Sergeant-at-Arms, as in their opinion are necessary for the transaction of the business of this Convention, and the compensation to be paid to each where not fixed by law, beg leave to report that they have found the following officers, other than President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms, necessary: First, President pro tem.; second, two Assistant Secretaries; third, one Minute Clerk, fourth, Journal Clerk; fifth, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms; sixth, three Doorkeepers; seventh, two Porters; eighth, eight Pages (two of whom shall be detailed from time to time by the President as paper-folders); ninth, Postmaster; tenth, Mail Carrier; eleventh, one Phonographic Reporter and his assistant, to be by him selected. We recommend that the following compensation be allowed to said officers respectively, viz.: To Assistant Secretaries, each six dollars per day; to the Minute Clerk and Journal Clerk, eight dollars per day; to the Assistant Sergeant-at Arms, eight dollars per day; to the Doorkeepers, each, five dollars per day; to the Pages, each, three dollars per day; to the Postmaster, four dollars per day; to the Mail Carrier, one hundred dollars per month; to the Phonographic Reporter and his assistant, each, ten dollars per day and such additional sum for transcribing into longhand as the standing Committee of the Convention, to whom the same shall be referred, may determine. The matter to be transcribed to be also determined by such Committee. The officers above named include as well those specified in the statute as the additional ones deemed necessary, and only the President, Secretary, and Sergeant-at-Arms. We also recommend that of the foregoing, the following be elected by the Convention, viz: First, the President pro tem.; second, Assistant Secretaries; third, one Minute Clerk; fourth, one Journal Clerk; fifth, one Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms; sixth, one Phonographic Reporter; and that all the others named above be appointed by the President of the Convention, except the Phonographic Reporter, who shall appoint his own assistant. All of which is respectfully submitted.

S. M. WILSON, Chairman.

October 2d, 1878.

MR. HOWARD. I move that the report be received.

Carried.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

MR. BIGGS. I desire to detain this Convention but a few minutes. As we have come here for retrenchment and reform I propose to offer amendments to that report. And the reason I propose to is this: the people of this State are oppressed by taxation now beyond endurance, and I want to strike out the Phonographic Reporter, notwithstanding gentlemen may say it is an old fogy and exploded idea. Now, I ask this Convention if they want to pay forty thousand dollars or fifty thousand dollars for these debates when they would be published in the papers and sent all over the world. I undertake to say that you may have these debates published at the expense of the State, and you may send them out, and there is not one man in twenty that will ever read them. If the members want their speeches printed and sent broadcast to the world, I ask them to pay for it out of their own pockets. I am for retrenchment and reform, and I don't propose to saddle a burden upon the people of this State, when we can obviate it by striking out that portion of the report of the committee.

MR. WHITE. I rise to second the motion.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that it proposes to take up this report in the regular parliamentary way. I shall state each clause of it, and shall await any motion to amend. We will reach the proposition that the member from Butte desires to amend in due course, and I will then receive his motion.

MR. BIGGS. Then I understand the report will be taken up seriatim.

THE PRESIDENT. Yes; clause by clause. The first clause proposes to elect a President pro tem.

The President read each clause. When the sixth clause was reached.

DOORKEEPERS.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move to amend that by saying two Doorkeepers, instead of three.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I second the amendment.

MR. FILCHER. I move to amend the amendment by striking out "Doorkeepers," and I would say that I understand, from probably as good authority as there is in the State, that under the arrangement of the report of the committee we are likely to need absolutely no Doorkeepers. A gentleman who has been here for two terms asked me if we proposed to appoint Doorkeepers; and if so, what we proposed to do with the Porters. He said that the gate at this central aisle was the proper position of the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, and that the Porters might take their positions at the other entrances to this floor. Although I was thoroughly imbued with the idea that we needed Doorkeepers, and took strong ground with him, he made it plain to my mind that the necessity for these Doorkeepers does not exist.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I accept the amendment.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: If that amendment should prevail, it will not be long before the committee will ascertain that if they would keep this hall free from all sorts of invasion, from the importuning of members for all sorts of things, that it is necessary to have a Doorkeeper at each of these gates. Such has been the experience of everybody who has been in the Legislature of this State, both in the Senate and Assembly. That disposition to come in and see members has been carried so far, even when they have had Doorkeepers, that it has been necessary, repeatedly, to pass resolutions that nobody be permitted to come upon the floor without leave obtained from the Chair.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It seems to me that if the necessity arises, and it becomes apparent that we must have three Doorkeepers, that we can place them here at any time; but until that necessity becomes apparent, it seems to me that this clause ought to be stricken out of the report as a matter of economy. As far as invasion of the hall is concerned, if a member rises in his seat and states that gentlemen are requested to leave the floor, I am sure that they will retire beyond the bar. If we have a Sergeant-at-Arms and an Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, we want them for practical purposes, and not as ornaments. I am in favor of striking out this clause entirely.

MR. BARBOUR. I shall support the amendment, and I do so upon the ground that I believe there is no necessity for more than the one Doorkeeper authorized by law. I intend to propose, when the organization of this Convention is completed and we are ready for business, that, inasmuch as the space is all occupied, that the space outside of the railing shall be kept clear. Then it will take but one Doorkeeper at the center door. I think that is the wish of members, on account of the size of this Convention. If that is true there is no use for three Doorkeepers here; one Doorkeeper will be enough.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. I can only say that upon the committee I had associated with me five gentlemen of very large legislative experience, one of them in the Federal halls, and all of the others in the different State Legislatures—Messrs. Larkin, Murphy, Brown, Van Dyke, and Howard. The different officers we have selected as necessary were the combined judgment and unanimous opinion of the entire committee. I think that any economy upon this subject will be very poor economy in the end. We require this entire hall, and you will not get it unless you have a Doorkeeper at each gate. We will be annoyed with persons and messengers constantly coming into the Convention. I think, and the committee unanimously think, that three Doorkeepers will be necessary. Two Porters are required, and their duties, as understood by every person, will be quite sufficient for the pay they receive. I think the officers recommended will be found to facilitate the business of the Convention and enable us to get to our homes sooner.

Mr. LARKIN. As a member of that committee I concur in the action of the committee, and for three reasons: We have galleries here that there will have to be order kept in; and the lobbies there, and there must be order kept in them. As soon as the Convention is organized you will have to have some ten or twelve committee rooms; and those committee rooms will have to be attended to—have to be kept clean—somebody to attend to them. My experience in this matter is, that this economy in the start, in not selecting the proper number of officers, has not worked well. I, as a member of the Senate, and acting on the Committee on Contingent Expenses, found that I had a pile of resolutions for this employé and that, offered by gentlemen of the Senate. You will find on this floor, if you do not appoint the number you want, it will be necessary within a week—you will find they will each have a friend that they want a place for, and you will find resolution after resolution; and in two weeks you will have double the number we ask for now. I am not in favor of paying one dollar here more than what is absolutely necessary; but I do not propose to make any attempt to get along without this man or that man for the purpose of getting a reputation, when I know that the necessity will arise for all these men. I think it is proper, and I think it is economy, that we proceed to elect these men.

Mr. NOEL offered the following resolution, which was read for information:

Resolved, That the hearing of speeches of members pertaining to the organization of this body be made the special order of business for Sunday, the sixth instant, and that all speeches be deferred until that time, and that the Convention do now proceed to effect the organization and the transaction of legitimate business. [Laughter.]

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

Mr. FREEMAN. I move to strike out the eleventh clause. It has already been shown, by reading from the report of the Constitutional Convention of Illinois, that the report of the proceedings of that Convention cost about sixty thousand dollars. Let us assume, for the sake of argument, that the report of the proceedings of this body will cost only half that sum. The question now being upon the appointment of a reporter, we come down to the proposition whether it is desirable to have this great amount of expenditure. I will remind members, in the first instance, that the appropriation made for this Convention is less than enough to pay the per diem and mileage of the members for the time that we shall probably be in session; therefore, the incurring of any great expenditure would leave us without sufficient means to go on with this Convention to the end. This is a large expenditure to incur; and I would ask what there is that will justify so great an expenditure? We do not propose to publish these proceedings; we do not propose to establish a newspaper; we do not propose to distribute them among our constituents. The only useful object which they can answer is, that other persons desiring to investigate constitutional questions may be able to read the debates which here occur, and gain what wisdom they can from them. This may be a good purpose, but I do not think it is warranted. So far as the proceedings of the Convention are concerned, we have no need of such an officer. There is no such an office in connection with the sessions of the Legislature, where the debates are of a greater variety than they will be likely to be here. We have a Journal of our proceedings, which will at all times show all that was actually done here. The most that these reports can do is simply to flatter the personal vanity of the members in connection with these proceedings.

Mr. BARNES. I hope the motion made by the gentleman from Sacramento will not prevail. It seems to me, sir, that if there is one expense more than another that ought to be incurred, it is this; and if it costs even more than the amount estimated by the gentleman, who appears to have investigated the subject, I shall still be in favor of it. Bear in mind, Mr. President, we are about to consider some hitherto untried experiments in government, and some are threatened which have been tried and rejected elsewhere, and their incorporation in the organic law of this State will be urged and earnestly pressed. The construction of our present Constitution has occupied the attention of the Courts of this State for many years. It is not unlikely that the Constitution which will be adopted will be subjected to similar judicial criticism and discussion. In view of the important subjects to be here discussed, in view of the laws we propose to establish for municipal government, with reference to corporations, with reference to the tenure of land and of other multitudinous reforms, none of which I need mention, it will be most useful to preserve in the records of this Convention, not merely a bare skeleton that shall indicate what was transacted here, not merely the Constitution as it shall go forth to the people, but what was the thought and the reasoning of this Convention upon these propositions. It is of course absurd to say that the swarm of speechlets made upon microscopic points of order and other immaterial subjects should go upon this journal to be kept for us by the Phonographic Reporters and be published. Such a consummation is to be devoutly deplored. If I understand the proposition of this committee it is to have such portion of the debates preserved as shall be directed by the Convention or a committee appointed for that purpose. For myself I desire that every vote I shall give here upon these important questions shall have a reason behind it. If I shall vote contrary to the prejudices of my constituents, I desire that the reasons which have controlled me shall be photographed. Let our records be crystallized in these reports, that we and all men may see not only what we have done but the reasons for our action. Lawyers, I am sure, are aware that when we seek the construction of a clause in a Constitution it is of great assistance to resort to the debates of the Convention which adopted it. What does it amount to? Suppose it cost fifty thousand dollars to enable the Courts and those who come after us to understand the reasons which brought us to the conclusions to which we shall arrive, and preserve forever a record of all the views and opinions of those who shall take part in this great work? This subject might be greatly enlarged upon, but for the present I respectfully urge upon gentlemen that they should preserve not merely the fact that we voted so and so, but the whole record, plain and clear. If there is anything to be done by the gentlemen who proposed to establish these promised radical reforms, I desire that others who may wish to adopt Constitutions, perhaps like this, may have the benefit of these debates, and that they shall remain in the great libraries of every State, and be to them what the proceedings and debates of the States of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, and Michigan have been to us in the preparation for our work, and that our record shall stand side by side with theirs.

Mr. McFARLAND. I believe there is some misunderstanding here. I understand that by adopting the report of the committee we only say that we will employ two reporters at a certain salary per day. That costs but twenty dollars per day. They record in shorthand all the proceedings of this Convention. Now, when you come to transcribing it we come to a matter that is not determined by this resolution. That is left to the future judgment and action of this Convention. I certainly would be opposed to transcribing into longhand and keeping a journal of everything that occurs here, although I think a great many things ought to be so kept. The report simply provides for taking down the proceedings in shorthand. If we want them written out hereafter it can be done. If you adopt the motion of the gentleman from Sacramento and strike this out of the report, you simply determine now that there shall not be any shorthand reporter. I do not think the Convention is now ready to take so decided an action as that. Let us adopt this report, elect the reporter, and hereafter, by means of a committee appointed for that purpose, or if you choose to change that by the judgment of the Convention in some other shape, determine how much we want transcribed.

Mr. BIGGS. I would ask if the reports were taken down and transcribed into longhand, who upon this floor would read them? It is a waste of that much time and public money. I want to deal with plain facts. I am for retrenchment and reform, notwithstanding my friend here says I am the watch-dog of the treasury. Gentlemen, God knows, that from the way we have been progressing since we have commenced here last Monday, I think it will need a little closer watching than I am able to do.

Mr. HEISKELL. I am a producer. I represent a producing constituency. I heartily concur in the ideas of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes. I have no fears that the expenditure of this money will ever meet with the disapprobation of the people of this State. I will say to the gentleman from Butte, Mr. Biggs, let him join in this Convention in producing a Constitution that will do justice to the producer and put some restraint upon the money powers, and he will never hear a word from the people against him for this appropriation, even if fifty thousand dollars should be necessary to publish the debates of this Convention.

Mr. WHITE. I wish to say that I also represent a producing constituency, and I am satisfied that not one man in a hundred will sanction an appropriation of fifty or sixty thousand dollars for this business. I am satisfied that they want men that will oppose it. They know that the Supreme Court of the State of California decides these questions without any reference to the debates of the members on the floor. Do you suppose they rule in this way: "Mr. So-and-so proposed such and such a thing in this Convention?" I had no idea that it would cost more than seven or eight thousand dollars; but it may come up to one hundred thousand dollars, and it can't be less than thirty or forty thousand dollars. I trust and hope that every man that is opposed to this taxation which is breaking us all down and ruining the country, will stand by us and vote down that proposition.

Mr. HUESTIS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Convention elect one Phonographic Reporter, and that he be allowed such assistants as he may deem necessary; that the reporter of this Convention be required to furnish verbatim reports of its proceedings, and that he receive five thousand dollars in full compensation for his services as such reporter.

Mr. ESTEE. I would suggest that the question of Phonographic Reporters be made the special order for to-morrow, at eleven o'clock. My reason, if I may be allowed to give the reason, is that the last resolution introduced is too indefinite. If the Convention should proceed upon that theory it ought to prescribe when these reports are to be written out. If they are to be written out it should be done so that they could be laid on the desks of members the next morning. I move that the eleventh clause of that report be made the special order for to-morrow, at eleven o'clock.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I wish to make a little calculation in regard to the cost of reporting the debates of this Convention. If the gentlemen who have been talking about forty and fifty and sixty thousand dollars will look at this morning's issue of the Record-Union they will find a full and complete report of yesterday's proceedings, which makes five solid columns of solid nonpareil. Now let us look at that and see what that cost. I have made an actual count and find it amounts to ninety-four folios, which, at twenty cents per folio, would be eighteen dollars and ninety cents; add to that a per diem of twenty dollars would make thirty-eight dollars and ninety cents for reporting yesterday's proceedings. To-day we have spent the entire session in talking about it. Perhaps a full report of to-day's debates would amount to ten columns, making the total cost of reporting to-day's proceedings about eighty dollars. There seems to be a great misapprehension in regard to the expense of this reporting. The gentlemen have quoted with interest from the Illinois debates to show that it will cost fifty or sixty thousand dollars. Let us come right down to the figures. Here is an actual example of what it will cost a day, and we will base our calculations upon that. I concur in the remarks of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes, in regard to the propriety of publishing these debates; and it seems to me that we should publish a verbatim report or none at all. This idea of garbling a report, cutting out and putting in this thing and that, of this member or of that, will create great confusion, and in the end lead to difficulties. Let us have a verbatim report. The State of California can afford to pay for it at these rates. Here we are talking away two thousand dollars a day, while the total cost in the difference we are contending about will only amount to a few hundred dollars in the end. Let us adopt the report as it came from the committee, to appoint a reporter and one assistant, pay him a fair price for good work, stop this talk and get to business. [Applause.]

MR. HARVEY. I desire to add a proviso to the resolution:

Resolved, that the notes shall not be written out unless the Constitution framed by this Convention be adopted by the people and the transcribing and printing thereof provided for by an Act of the Legislature.

MR. HERRINGTON offered the following resolution as a substitute:

Resolved, That one reporter and assistant, to be selected by the reporter, be employed at a per diem of ten dollars each, for taking the proceedings of this Convention in shorthand, with the understanding and agreement that each day's proceedings are to be transcribed at a cost to the State of not exceeding six thousand dollars transcribing the entire proceedings of the Convention.

MR. HERRINGTON. I am satisfied of the importance of preserving the proceedings of this Convention, but I am unwilling that the cost attending its preservation shall be uncertain and left to contingencies in the future. I am satisfied that the work can be done for that price. If I am correctly informed a party who is reporting the proceedings of this Convention says, that if that amount is set apart to secure the pay that it will be done for that amount or less, and that is why I offer this resolution, so that we may fix a limit.

MR. AYERS. I am afraid, judging from the range which this discussion has taken, that the gentlemen of this Convention have become somewhat confused on the topic. They have, it seems to me, mixed the printing of the report of the debates with the reporting of the debates. This question does not reach to the length to which the gentlemen seem to believe it does. If this Convention should make matter to the extent of ten solid columns of nonpariel every day, the transcription at twenty cents per folio would amount, in the one hundred days, to exactly five thousand dollars. It is impossible that the reporting of this Convention can reach any such sum as has been suggested by Mr. Estee, after looking at the Illinois reports.

MR. ESTEE. That was for paper, printing, and reporting.

MR. AYERS. We have a State Printing Office here which takes charge of the printing, and the expenses of that printing will not come out of the appropriation which belongs legitimately to the expenses of this Convention. Hence, if you appoint reporters at the regular per diem, and you place the charge per folio at twenty cents or fifteen cents, there can be no great extravagance in the matter, because I do not believe if we talked all the time we could possibly talk more than ten columns.

MR. MURPHY. I move that we adopt all of the report except that portion of it in relation to Phonographic Reporters.

The motion prevailed.

MR. MURPHY. I move that the question in regard to Phonographic Reporters be referred to a committee of five to be appointed by the Chair. It is understood that I do not want to be on that committee, although I make the motion.

MR. NOEL. It seems to me that we might settle the question in regard to these reporters without any further delay. We have been discussing that question all day. We want a proposition that we can understand, like that of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington; one that is reasonable in its terms; a proposition by which the work is to be done in gross. Gentlemen of the Convention will then distinctly understand what compensation the reporters are to receive. If it can be done for any sum lower than that, I will vote for that. We certainly need a reporter.

MR. HERRINGTON. It seems to me that we will be in the same position after the appointment of the committee that we are in now.

Mr. Murphy's motion prevailed.

MR. BEERSTECHER offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That this committee of five upon reporters be appointed by the Chair, also draw and submit a contract to this Convention for its approval, whereby the reporters will be bound in a certain penal sum to perform their duties according to the wishes of this Convention, and which will secure such reports written out in longhand for the use of the State.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I offer this resolution for the purpose of protecting the State. If we merely appoint a Phonographic Reporter, and he takes the reports in shorthand, of course we have not got the advantage of the reports so taken, and after the reports are all taken these gentlemen can turn around and say, "Here are the phonographic reports and I desire to have my compensation for the work that I have done;" or, "If you desire to have the reports made intelligible you have got to pay." It is a well known fact that each reporter has a peculiar way of his own. In a matter of this kind a question might arise, and after we had expended the sum of five or six thousand dollars we would not have anything but a hieroglyphic document that no one could read but the man who wrote it. But the moment that it is written out in longhand the State can have a copyright of that longhand report. In other words, I desire that this report of the official reporter be in longhand copies, and let the title to it be in the State, and the work in an intelligent form.

MR. FREEMAN. That resolution is premature. The Convention has just provided for a committee. If they recommend that we have a Phonographic Reporter, and we decide to have one, then the resolution will be material. Therefore I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

MR. BARNES. I understand that this whole subject matter has been referred to a committee. I submit that the discussion is out of order.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move that the resolution be referred to the committee.

The motion prevailed.

FURTHER ORGANIZATION.

MR. MURPHY. I move that we proceed to the further organization of this body by the election of a Sergeant-at-Arms.

The Chair announced that nominations were then in order.

MR. FREEMAN nominated Mr. B. F. Stewart, of Sacramento.

MR. DUDLEY nominated Mr. A. J. Ross.

MR. REDDY nominated J. M. Farrelly, of San Francisco.

MR. MASON nominated C. J. Mosely, of Vallejo.

MR. McCOMAS nominated Albert French, of Santa Clara.

MR. BELCHER nominated T. J. Sherwood, of Marysville.

MR. BARBOUR nominated M. H. O'Connor, of San Francisco.

MR. WATERS nominated J. T. Knox, of San Bernardino.

MR. BOUCHER nominated D. B. Hayes, of Butte County.

MR. TINNIN nominated Harrison Jones, of San Francisco.

Hale,	O'Sullivan,	Mr. President.

ABSENT.

Campbell,	Eagon,	Terry.
Casserly,	Laine,

THE PRESIDENT. The Chief Secretary being ill, I will request Mr. Marcus D. Boruck to read the Journal of yesterday.

MR. RINGGOLD. I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Lost.

MR. BORUCK proceeded to read the Journal.

MR. HEISKELL. I desire to know by what authority and in what capacity the gentleman is reading.

The PRESIDENT. He was requested to read the Journal by the Chair.

The Journal was read and approved.

SUBORDINATE OFFICERS.

These persons were appointed to subordinate positions by the Chair: Postmaster, Michael Barnes; Mail Carrier, Frank Laine; Doorkeepers, M. F. Maloney, W. H. H. Fellows, and William Fleming; Pages, J. D. Ricks, H. D. Durner, August Rose, Mark Shipley, William Campbell, J. E. Doak, Cary Goods, and E. H. Morris; Porters, Henry Jones and William Galt.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

Mr. MURPHY presented the following report from the Committee on phonographic reporting:

To the President and members of the Convention:

Your committee appointed to examine into the subject of reporting the proceedings and debates of this Convention, beg leave to submit the following report: That the Convention elect a Phonographic Reporter, who shall be empowered to select his assistant, and the two to be the shorthand reporters of this Convention, and to be entitled to the per diem fixed by law for their services. That the reporters so selected be required to furnish a longhand verbatim report of the proceedings of this Convention, on the following terms, to wit: at the rate of twenty cents per folio, with the further provision, that if the Convention last one hundred days, the entire compensation said reporters shall receive for transcribing their notes into longhand shall not exceed six thousand dollars. That the reporter who may be elected by this Convention shall enter into good and sufficient bonds, in the sum of ten thousand dollars, for the efficient and faithful performance of his duty, and guarantee the State against recovery by him of any compensation for his services in this connection, exceeding the gross sum of eight thousand dollars, including the per diem of himself and assistant, and cost of transcribing, for the entire session, should it last one hundred days, or twenty cents per folio for transcribing into longhand their notes, should the session not last one hundred days.

JAMES E. MURPHY, Chairman.

The report was received.

Mr. BEERSTECHER offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Convention, recognizing the fact that the people of this State are groaning under the burden of grievous t xation, hereby determine to dispense with paid phonographic reports of its proceedings, and with the services of paid Phonographic Reporters.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I move its adoption.

MR. HAGER. We could not hear the resolution at this end of the hall.

MR. LARKIN. This was made the special order for eleven o'clock, I believe.

The PRESIDENT. It is moved and seconded that this whole subject be made the special order for eleven o'clock. If there be no objection, the whole question will stand over until eleven o'clock.

So ordered.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

MR. ESTEE, from the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, made the following report:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Rules, Order of Business, and Standing Committees, beg leave to report the following committees, and number of each, to consider the several parts of the Constitution which relate to those subjects respectively, which may be referred to such committees: First, on Preamble and Bill of Rights, to consist of nine members; second, on the Right of Suffrage, eleven members; third, on Legislative Department, fifteen members; fourth, on Executive Department, nine members; fifth, on Judicial Department, nineteen members; sixth, on Military Affairs, eleven members; seventh, State and Municipal Indebtedness, fifteen members; eighth, on Education, nine members; ninth, State Institutions and Public Buildings, seven members; tenth, on City, County, and Township organization, fifteen members; eleventh, on Apportionment and Representation, eleven members; twelfth, on Revenue and Taxation, fifteen members; thirteenth, on Corporations other than Municipal, fifteen members; fourteenth, on Miscellaneous Subjects, nine members; fifteenth, on Future Amendments, nine members; sixteenth, on Schedule, eleven members; seventeenth, on Revision and Adjustment, nine members: eighteenth, on Water and Water Rights, fifteen members; nineteenth, on Agriculture, Mining, Manufactures, and Commerce, fifteen members; twentieth, on Immigration, fifteen members; twenty-first, on Reporting and Printing, five members; twenty-second, on Privileges and Election, fifteen members; twenty-third, on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, nine members. The appointment of said committees shall be made by the President. Respectfully submitted.

M. M. ESTEE, Chairman.

The report was received.

MR. HAGER. I move that there be another standing committee, to be composed of the Chairmen of all the other committees, to be called the Committee on Schedule.

MR. ESTEE. The report provides for one now.

MR. EDGERTON. That report is only a partial report. The committee agreed upon the designation and number of these so far. Two or three committees have just occurred to me that are not provided for there, for example, a Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. The committee report these in order that the President may go to work, and I hope that the report, so far as it goes, will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. This is a partial report from the committee.

MR. HERRINGTON. I move that a committee, consisting of fifteen members, be added, to be called the Committee on Federal Relations.

MR. TINNIN. That subject is included in the Committee on Immigration, which includes also the Chinese question, and is so understood.

MR. KEYES. I think it would be well to make one Committee on Agriculture and one on Mining.

MR. ESTEE. There is very little that can be put in a Constitution on these subjects, while a great deal can be put in a statute. We found by examining the proceedings of other Constitutional Conventions that they were usually in one committee, and then they had very little to do. We examined it with a good deal of care. This is only a partial report, but it was made this morning so that it could be printed, and so that the President could go on with the work of forming the committees. It will be found by examining the proceedings of Conventions in other States that where there were only eighty or ninety members they usually fixed the number of members on each committee at seven or nine. Here there are one hundred and fifty-two members, and the committees range from seven to fifteen. On the most important questions there are fifteen members.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. It is well known that there is a serious conflict, real or apparent, between the agricultural and mining interests, and it strikes me that it would be well that there be different committees, and that the Committee on Agriculture should not include the Committee on Mining. They should be separate and distinct.

MR. BLACKMER. I would ask the Secretary to read the section regarding the Committee on Agriculture and Mining. Does it include agriculture, mining, and commerce?

MR. ESTEE. That is what it includes.

MR. BLACKMER. There is no objection to combining the subjects of agriculture and commerce, but the subject of mining should be delegated to a separate committee. It is very true that in other States, where they have made Constitutions, these subjects have been put into the hands of one committee, but we have a State here in which the mining interest is larger than in any State where they have made a Constitution. As the gentleman has said who preceded me, there is a real or apparent conflict of interest between these two industries of mining and agriculture. I move that a separate committee be appointed on the subject of mining.

MR. ESTEE. It was understood that there would be a conflict of interest, or that there was a conflict of interest, and for that reason the committee decided to do as they did in Pennsylvania, where the mining interest is six times as much as it is here in California, so that the provisions of the Constitution should harmonize. It was supposed that by making the committee large, these questions could be discussed in the committee, and the differences settled and adjusted in the amendments reported by them. We found that in Pennsylvania, New York, and in other leading States in the Union, they adopted this rule. The committee thought it well to follow well established precedents in arranging the committees, and we say to you, this is what other Conventions have done upon this subject, but if the Convention desires, this portion can be recommitted and the balance of the report adopted.

Mr. BLACKMER. The point I made was that the mining interest was of vital importance and that it came in conflict with the agricultural interest. I supposed the gentleman would take into consideration the character of the mining here. If they mine gold in Pennsylvania upon the plan we do here, then it is a parallel case. I do believe that this question ought to be separated.

Mr. DUDLEY, of Solano. I move to amend the nineteenth clause by striking out the words "mining, manufactures, and commerce."

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. I move that we consider the whole report seriatim.

Mr. EDGERTON. I do not see any particular affinity between the subjects of mining and manufacturing. The Chairman of the committee, when he says that it was supposed that it would be judicious to bring the friends of the mining interest and the friends of the agricultural interest together in consultation upon this subject, that by a comparison of views they might arrive at some solution of the question, has touched upon a point worthy of careful consideration, and I hope that the gentleman from Solano will withdraw his motion for the purpose of having this clause recommitted and considered further. There is certainly an affinity between these subjects, but if it is deemed advisable to separate them and have a standing committee on mining alone, they can make that report.

Mr. DUDLEY, of Solano. With the understanding that that part of the report is to be recommitted, I withdraw my motion.

Mr. EDGERTON. I now move that that part of the report be recommitted to the Committee on Rules, and that the remainder of the report be adopted.

Mr. WICKES. The action of other States on this important question in their Constitutional Conventions could not be a precedent for us. Mining is a large and important interest in this State, and would seem to call for a special Committee on Mining. I do not see that there ought to be any conflict between the mining and agricultural interests, and we should endeavor to harmonize them as much as possible; therefore, I second the motion to recommit.

The motion of Mr. Edgerton prevailed, and the President announced the report adopted, with the exception of the nineteenth clause.

The PRESIDENT. The question now recurs on the motion to recommit the nineteenth clause to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. BARBOUR. I did not understand the motion to be to adopt the report.

The PRESIDENT. The motion was regularly made and has been carried by the Convention. The question now is on recommitting the nineteenth clause to the Committee on Rules.

The motion prevailed.

Mr. BARNES offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That when the rules and order of business for the regulation of this body are adopted and the standing committees appointed, five hundred copies thereof be printed for the convenience of members, and that the names and residence in Sacramento of the members be also printed therewith; that the cost of such printing be paid out of the money appropriated by law for the expense of the Convention.

Mr. HAGER. The law provides that the printing shall be done at the State Printing Office.

Mr. BARNES. I withdraw the last part of it.

Mr. TINNIN. I move that the resolution be referred to the committee on contingent expenses. That is a portion of the contingent expenses.

The motion prevailed.

FURTHER ORGANIZATION.

Mr. WATERS. I move that we proceed to the election of Assistant Secretaries.

Mr. BARNES. There is a special order for eleven o'clock.

The PRESIDENT. It is moved and seconded that the Convention proceed to the election of two Assistant Secretaries.

Carried.

Mr. EDGERTON. I place in nomination E. F. Smith, of Sacramento.

Mr. WYATT. I desire to place in nomination for the position of First Assistant Secretary, the name of R. D. Pitt, of Los Angeles County.

Mr. HOWARD. I second that nomination. I have known Mr. Pitt for some time, and I regard him as every way competent and worthy of the place.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I nominate George A. Thornton, of Sonoma.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I move that both Secretaries be voted for at the same time.

Mr. FREUD. I would ask if these two Secretaries are to be voted for together.

The PRESIDENT. Not unless the Convention so orders.

Mr. HUESTIS. I offer a resolution.

Mr. EDGERTON. I understand they are designated in the law as Assistant Secretaries. I move that each gentleman voting vote for two at a time.

Mr. HUESTIS. I have introduced a resolution on that subject.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That in the election of Assistant Secretaries of this Convention, two candidates be voted for at the same time.

Mr. LARKIN. That will produce confusion, and delay this Convention more than double the time it would take otherwise, unless there has been a caucus and the matter is cut and dried by our friends on the opposite side of this contest. I hope this Convention will proceed to elect one at a time.

Mr. EDGERTON. It is quite refreshing to hear the gentleman talk about caucuses, but my object is to secure an organization of this Convention at the earliest practical moment. We have been here four days in securing two officers. By a mathematical calculation it will take about a month longer to organize, voting in the way we have heretofore. My experience teaches me that voting for two at a time greatly facilitates business, when it takes the Secretary three quarters of an hour to call the roll once.

Mr. LARKIN. We are not responsible for the delay. We have not come here for the spoils, and we do not ask for any of them. We wish to organize this Convention and proceed to business.

Mr. McCALLUM. I ask to have the list of candidates read.

The Secretary read the list.

Mr. Huestis' resolution was adopted.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I would ask whether, under this resolution, it is necessary to put them all in nomination now.

The PRESIDENT. Put them all in nomination before the vote commences.

Mr. FREUD. By request, I have the honor to nominate for Assistant Secretary of this Convention Jas. J. Flynn, of San Francisco. Mr. Flynn is a young man of exceptional ability and integrity and a native of California. I hope this nomination will receive your generous consideration.

Mr. AYERS. I rise for the purpose of placing in nomination John McComb, Jr., of San Francisco, a young man who has had experience in public clerical office, and is well qualified to perform the duties of Assistant Secretary.

On motion of Mr. Estee, the special order for eleven o'clock was postponed until after the election of officers.

At the request of the President, Mr. Boruck came forward and called the roll.

Mr. O'DONNELL. I do not think the gentleman has a right to call that roll. He is not an elected officer of this Convention.

The PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order.

The result of the ballot was as follows:

Mr. SHERWOOD was declared to be duly elected Sergeant-at-Arms.

MR. O'DONNELL. I now move that these clerks that were elected walk forward and take their seats at the desk.

MR. EDGERTON. The law requires that these gentlemen shall execute a bond before entering upon the discharge of their duties, and that bond has to be executed.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will proceed to the election of a President pro tem.

MR. BARNES. I would suggest, as the Secretary has a very bad cold, that until the balloting is over Mr. Boruck continue at the desk.

THE PRESIDENT. It is so ordered.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. I have the honor to place in nomination for the position of President pro tem., a gentleman so well known throughout the State of California, and to all of us here, that any eulogy upon him seems to be entirely a matter of supererogation. I refer to the Hon. Isaac S. Belcher, of Yuba County. His character is so well known for probity, honor, fairness, and impartiality, that he cannot but make us an excellent President pro tem. I therefore place him in nomination before this body for that position.

MR. LARKIN. I rise for the purpose of placing in nomination for this position a gentleman from the southern portion of the State, who has been an old resident of the State, and if elected to that position I believe will make an excellent officer. I believe that he is a representative man of the interests of the State, a true man in all the walks of life. I nominate N. G. Wyatt, of Monterey.

MR. CAPLES. I rise, Mr. President, to place in nomination for the position of Minute Clerk, E. L. Crawford, of El Dorado County. I believe I may be permitted to say, Mr. President, that Mr. Crawford is eminently qualified to fill the duties expected of him in this position. He has served several terms in a similar capacity in this chamber, and I believe that gentlemen who are conversant with his record and his ability will bear me out in the assertion that he is eminently qualified to discharge the duties of that position.

Mr. CRAWFORD was declared duly elected Minute Clerk.

Mr. HALL. I beg leave, sir, to present to the consideration of this Convention, for the office of Journal Clerk, the name of George E. McStay, a resident of the County of San Joaquin. I can vouch for him myself, personally, as being a man of honor and probity, and one that, in my judgment, is altogether qualified to discharge the duties of this position. He is not widely known, sir, but he is favorably known where to be favorably known is the highest honor—among his friends and neighbors at home. I believe, sir, that if George E. McStay shall be the choice of this Convention you will find in him an honest, painstaking, faithful, and efficient officer. I ask for him the favorable consideration of this Convention.

Mr. BARRY. It would seem like a waste of time for any gentleman upon our side to mention any one for a position in this Convention, but at the same time I have a gentleman who is eminently fitted for this position by nature, education, and experience. For several years prior to coming to this State he filled the position of Assistant Secretary in the Nebraska State Senate, and discharged the duties of that position with credit to himself and that body. The gentleman I place in nomination is J. R. Patrick, of Sierra County. He is a gentleman in every sense of the word, and I am satisfied that if he were selected by the members of this Convention as Journal Clerk, he would discharge the duties in an efficient and able manner.

The roll was called, with the following result:

FOR MCSTAY.

MR. CHAMBERS was declared to be duly elected Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms.

ON ADJOURNMENT.

MR. ESTEE. I move that when we adjourn to-day we adjourn to meet on Monday, at one P. M. The reason for my motion is this, that the Chair has had no opportunity to appoint committees. There would be no reason for sitting here; there is nothing that could be done. I hope that the motion will prevail, as it will take at least a couple of days to complete the rules. The rules that govern a body of this kind are very different from the rules that have been adopted by the Assembly, and therefore I hope that this action will be taken by this Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would call attention, sir, to the provision in the clause, namely, section five of the Act calling this Constitutional Convention: "Provided no compensation shall be allowed delegates after the expiration of one hundred days. No pay shall be allowed for any recess longer than three days at one time." I desire to oppose this motion, and call for the ayes and noes.

MR. ESTEE. I wish to state, first, that there are only three days; and, second, that I do not know as anybody wants any compensation if they do not do anything. It is only three days from now until Monday.

MR. HAGER. The rule that has been adopted heretofore in the Legislature, with the same clause in the statute, has been that an adjournment for more than three days could only be had by a concurrent vote of the Senate and Assembly, but in the other case it requires a mere vote of either chamber. It was held there, on various occasions, that we could adjourn from Friday until Monday; but if we adjourn to-day, it is beyond the three days. Sunday counts as a day. I would therefore move to amend so that when we adjourn to-morrow morning at recess, we adjourn until Monday. We may probably not get through with this Phonographic Reporter matter until to-morrow morning; and if it is late this afternoon, nobody could go down to the city. I propose that we adjourn to-morrow, after the morning hour, until Monday.

MR. BARBOUR. I shall vote against this proposition to take this recess until I see a better reason assigned than want of time to prepare rules. I presume there is not a gentleman in this Convention that cannot in an hour's time prepare, from the innumerable rules already in the State Library, a set of rules sufficient for the government of this Convention. I maintain, sir, that we have no right, unless for a more potent reason than that of our own business, to adjourn over, and to draw the pay from the treasury for being here, there, and everywhere, when we are expected to be here performing the duties we have been called to perform, and that is, preparing a Constitution. I further object, sir, to this adjournment, because this Convention is not yet properly or sufficiently organized. There are vacancies here to be filled, which ought to be filled. Portions of the people of this State are unrepresented. I insist that these vacancies ought to be filled. Therefore I shall oppose this motion. I cannot see any reason for this adjournment that is worthy of consideration.

MR. WINANS. The language of the Act is, that members shall draw no pay for an adjournment of more than three days. If we adjourn on Thursday afternoon until Monday, the recess is during Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, because we meet again on Monday. By no possible interpretation that I can comprehend, can that be construed into a four days adjournment—from Thursday afternoon until Monday morning. There are but three intervening days. If we leave here on Thursday, or cease work here on Thursday afternoon and resume on Monday, we have a recess of more than three days. It is certainly very important that there should be an opportunity for completing our organization, and the reason for the adjournment is as much on account of giving the President time to arrange his appointments as for the Committee on Rules. Three days would be none too long. I shall therefore support the resolution, and I think that every member, on reflection upon the subject, when he considers how much there is to be thought of outside of the action of this body, will see that three days is not too long for us to consider what to do and take steps to complete our organization by getting a full report of this committee, and the action of the Chair in reference to the appointment of committee.

MR. ESTEE. I will withdraw my motion.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman cannot withdraw a motion without consent of the Convention. The question is, on the adoption of the resolution offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

MR. MCCALLUM. I cannot agree at all with the idea that there is not work enough for the balance of this week, however pleasant it may be for us who live in the neighborhood of the Bay to visit our homes. With such a presiding officer as we have, we can, in fact, proceed without special rules until the work of the Convention is laid out. And, sir, the special rules—if there is always parliamentary law for all parliamentary bodies—these special rules can be adopted, I undertake to say, in a session of two hours of the Committee on Rules; my idea is that that committee ought to report to-morrow. These rules will perhaps involve some discussion. That will take some time. That ought to be settled this week. I think, further, that these important committees ought to be appointed before the adjournment this week. I believe further, sir, that these vacancies ought to be filled before these important committees are appointed. So it cannot be that the adjournment is wanted for want of business to do, if we want to do it.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. I find that in some cases we make haste by moving slowly. I am satisfied that this adjournment embraces but three days; we are here to-day, Thursday; we will be away on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday; we will be here again on Monday. It will not be an adjournment for more than three days. It is really a question of only Friday and Saturday, because we would not work on Sunday. I have obtained from the Chairman of the committee on standing committees a memorandum as to the number of appointments the President has to make upon these committees. There are some twenty-two committees, involving the appointment of two hundred and seventy-three members. Now, if anybody thinks the Chair has not got quite an arduous duty to perform, he is mistaken. The Chair will desire to select men of experience as Chairmen of these several committees. He wants to distribute the labor among these several gentlemen that are here. For Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture he wants a gentleman experienced in that line of business, and so with the other committees. I should not myself like, in two days, to arrange the organization of these committees, and who would announce himself as able to fill properly these committees within two days time? Besides that we have the rules and regulations. The law does not require us to work nights and Sundays, but we worked pretty faithfully since last Saturday. We have been here days and nights and I think we will save time by taking the adjournment. I think we will save money by it, and we will be in a better condition on Monday to facilitate business than if we proceed to-day.

MR. LARKIN. The position the gentleman takes as to the duties imposed upon the President, is obviated by the fact that we have a distinguished gentleman as President pro tem. The Chair can turn over the duties of that position to him, and then we can proceed; and the main reason why we should proceed, is to fill these vacancies. These vacancies should be filled before these committees are made up. We should proceed to that work of filling the vacancies. The Chair, during the time, can prepare the committees, and the President pro tem. can fill the chair.

MR. REYNOLDS. It seems to me that there is no need of adjourning over until Monday. There is a vast amount of business on our hands here that can just as well be disposed of now as any other time. Here is not only the question of filling vacancies in the Convention, but also the matter of reporting and printing the debates. That is a question which will require, perhaps, one, or two, or three days to settle, if the experience of yesterday is any guide to go by. We have to determine first, whether we will have a reporter or not; whether he will report the debates verbatim or not; and then we have to make provision for printing them. That is another question.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I move we now take a recess until two o'clock.

MR. HAGER. A motion to adjourn itself is a privileged question. A motion to adjourn to a fixed time is not, and we have a question pending.

MR. EDGERTON. I move that the matter under consideration be made the special order for half-past two o'clock this afternoon.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. We had better make it two.

MR. MURPHY. Make it two o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. I accept the amendment.

The motion prevailed.

On motion of MR. LARKIN, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock and fifteen minutes P. M., President Hoge in the chair. Roll called and a quorum present.

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I desire to ask for a privilege, and to take your attention for a moment. A gentleman on this floor is reported in the morning papers of San Francisco to have made a most unwarrantable attack upon about one third of the members of the Convention, and I desire to say a word in reply.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. It is not his privilege to make a speech, but to state the matter of complaint, or submit it in writing.

MR. WHITE. I ask the Secretary to read the passage of which complaint is made.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will please state his question briefly, without any remarks.

MR. WHITE. I ask the Secretary to read the remarks, and then I will say a few words.

The Secretary read the following, being a quotation from the San Francisco Call's report of last night's Non-Partisan caucus:

"S M. Wilson said that members of all the different parties had been elected in opposition to the Workingmen's party, and they had fifty-one solid votes on every question, being well organized. Thus, every day, two thirds of the Convention are beaten by one third, and the reason is they did not know one another. All have a common cause against Socialists and Communists, who are endeavoring to undermine the State. Do we know what is taking place among those Communists who are meeting in other chambers? Of course not, because they are in private. The small number wields for good or evil the destinies of the Convention. It is proposed to harmonize views, and see if we cannot elect the best men, without wrangling."

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that this is not a question of privilege, having been spoken outside of the Convention.

MR. WHITE. Very well, sir, I appeal from the decision to the house on that question.

MR. WYATT. I second the appeal.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, O'Sullivan, and Wyatt.

MR. HALE. Is the question debatable?

THE PRESIDENT. I will state the question. The gentleman from Santa Cruz rises to a question of privilege, and has read an extract from a public journal, purporting to be a report of remarks made by a certain gentleman outside of this Convention. The Chair decides that it is not a question of privilege, and from that decision the gentleman takes an appeal to the Convention. The question is whether the decision of the Chair shall stand as the judgment of the Convention, and upon that the ayes and noes are demanded.

Mr. HOWARD. Is the appeal debatable?

The PRESIDENT. I think it is, sir.

Mr. WHITE. My object is, sir, to set a portion of this Convention in good feeling and harmony with the others, and my only object is to produce harmony. If we were what we are described in that paragraph we would be unworthy of positions on this floor.

The PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order. The question is upon sustaining the decision of the Chair. You will confine yourself to that question.

Mr. WHITE. I presume this ought to be a subject for consideration here. We ought to be allowed to relieve ourselves from accusations coming from individuals as well as from public journals. In Congress, members frequently rise to questions of privilege, on account of articles appearing in the public journals. It is done in Congress constantly, and I hope, gentlemen, you will stand up and allow us to have the privilege of explaining. We mean nothing unfair. All we ask is a fair show, and to be treated as equals.

Mr. McFARLAND. It seems to me that the Chair should be sustained, for this reason: I suppose we are likely to be pestered with questions of personal privilege. Now, I understand that question arises when some charge or statement is made about some individual member of the body. I don't understand that any gentlemen here has a right to rise to a question of personal privilege because some political party of which he is a member has been assailed. I might say I belong to the Republican party, and that certain gentlemen in this house had called that party a set of thieves, but we certainly could not hold that to be a question of personal privilege. If these are to be considered questions of privilege, you might spent the whole of the session here in that way. If there had been any allusion to the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, I would have no objection. But it is not about the gentleman, but about his political party, and that certainly is not a question of personal privilege.

Mr. WHITE. It is about fifty-one of the members of this Convention, and they are individually alluded to as the fifty-one members from the other side of the room.

Mr. INMAN. I think this whole thing is out of order, and to settle the thing right here I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, O'Sullivan, and White, and the motion to lie on the table prevailed by the following vote:

Mr. BEERSTECHER. There must be a mistake in the count, as I have kept it myself, and it does not tally with that of the Secretary.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

The PRESIDENT. The next thing in order is the special order in relation to an official short-hand reporter, and his compensation. The report of the committee is before the body for their action.

Mr. AYERS. I call for the reading of the report.

The report was read as follows:

To the President and members of the Convention: Your committee appointed to examine into the subject of reporting the proceedings and debates of this Convention, beg leave to submit the following report: That the Convention elect a Phonographic Reporter, who shall be empowered to select his assistant, the two to be the shorthand reporters of this Convention, and to be entitled to the per diem fixed by law for their services. That the reporters so selected be required to furnish a longhand verbatim report of the proceedings of this Convention on the following terms, to wit: at the rate of twenty cents per folio, with the further provision that if the Convention last one hundred days, the entire compensation said reporters shall receive for transcribing their notes into longhand shall not exceed six thousand dollars. That the reporter who may be elected by this Convention shall enter into good and sufficient bonds, in the sum of ten thousand dollars, for the efficient and faithful performance of his duty, and guarantee the State against recovery by him of any compensation for his services in this connection, exceeding the gross sum of eight thousand dollars, including the per diem of himself and assistant and cost of transcribing, for the entire session, should it last one hundred days, or twenty cents per folio for transcribing into longhand their notes should the session not last one hundred days.

JAMES E. MURPHY, Chairman.

Mr. ESTEE. At the request of several members, I move that Colonel Barnes be added to the Committee on Rules, as he has had experience in that line.

The motion prevailed.

Mr. ESTEE. The first thing in order is the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, that when this Convention adjourns to-day, it adjourn until Monday, at one o'clock P. M.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I move that it be postponed.

Mr. McCALLUM. I move that it be laid on the table—the motion that when we adjourn we adjourn to meet on Monday.

The motion prevailed, and the motion laid on the table.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. President: In explanation of this report I will state to the members of the Convention that under this arrangement by no possibility could the expense of reporting and transcribing the proceedings of this Convention exceed the sum of eight thousand dollars. That would be the limit that it could reach for a session of one hundred days. If, however, the session should be shorter, the State would have the advantage of the economy in the amount of matter that would have to be handled. The committee have examined the question thoroughly, and if its report is carried out, and the bond executed, the entire expense of the Convention will not exceed that laid down. That, however, is entirely disconnected from the printing. The printing will be done at the State Printing Office, and as I understand it there is a separate appropriation to pay for it. I have made a hasty estimate of what the printing will cost. A volume of eight hundred pages, of about the same size as the Illinois and Ohio debates, in the same form and same type, will cost for one thousand copies perhaps two thousand dollars. The entire cost, therefore, of the reporting and transcribing, and the printing of the debates and proceedings, will not exceed that sum.

Mr. FAWCETT. How many volumes will this report fill if the Convention should last one hundred days.

Mr. AYERS. I hold in my hand the debates of the Ohio Convention, and they consist of two volumes: the one before me having one thousand three hundred and thirty-three pages. I don't know how long that Convention lasted, but my estimate is made on eight hundred pages, of about that size [showing], perhaps smaller type.

Mr. FAWCETT. I venture to say that it will be a physical impossibility, if this Convention remains in session one hundred days, to put the debates in what small a space. In my judgment it will require at least three volumes.

Mr. AYERS. I understand from Mr. Van Dyke that the Ohio Convention was in session for one hundred and ninety days, and the reports only fill two volumes.

Mr. EDGERTON. I hope the gentleman will allow me to answer the question as to the time covered by these reports. I see this volume covers a period intervening between the third of May and August eighth—three months—and still there is another volume.

Mr. FAWCETT. I proceed upon the theory that the debates will fill five volumes. The debates and proceedings cannot be fairly compressed into one volume, unless we lay down very stringent rules as to what shall be printed. Now, if we undertake to print these debates, I think the sentiment of the Convention will be in favor of full reports; that no committee and no reporter can be entrusted with the power to say what matters shall or shall not be printed, and I say it will be impossible to compress the debates in one or two volumes. It will not do to proceed upon that idea, so that it is safe to say that the total cost will exceed ten thousand dollars. Let that be understood. There is no question about it. The total expense will be at least as much as fifteen thousand dollars. I am desirous of getting at the facts of the case, and the cost of the work before voting upon it, and I don't desire to vote upon it under any misapprehension. The gentleman cannot point to a single instance in the United States where the reports of the debates and proceedings of a Convention of this kind have not exceeded the figures which he has made. He has had a great deal of knowledge on this kind of work, but the proposition that the composition, printing, and binding of these reports can be embraced within the sum of two thousand dollars strikes me as absurd.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. President: I merely wish to say that, in speaking of the cost of printing in connection with this report, I have done so from hasty calculations. I would suggest that if it is necessary for the Convention to know what the printing will cost in connection with the report, it would be well to appoint a committee for that purpose, and let them examine into the thing thoroughly, and that will make a report reliable on the subject.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I have not the Ohio debates before me. My recollection is, that there were four volumes. By turning to the appendix you will see that the members received pay for about two hundred and seventy days, or a little over eight months. I may be mistaken, but I do not think I am. We are limited to one hundred days. I think if a judicious discretion is used in chopping out irrelevant matter, that the proceedings can be got in about two volumes.

MR. FILCHER. I rise to a point of order. The report of the committee only contemplated the securing of a longhand copy of the debates and proceedings. The question of printing was not mentioned in the report, and my point is, that the gentlemen who are discussing the printing are going away from the point. I insist upon my point of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair cannot undertake to limit the gentlemen in their remarks. The point of order is overruled.

MR. SWING. The Ohio Convention was in session, actual session, one hundred and eighty-eight days, and the reports were published in full. The reports comprise some speeches which have no more in them than a great many speeches made in this Convention, and the actual cost of the reporting and transcribing amounted to thirteen thousand six hundred and ninety-five dollars and seventy-eight cents. The printing amounted to a little over eight thousand dollars. That statement reached up to the eighth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and the Convention adjourned on the eighteenth day; so that it does not comprise the last ten days, but it would give reports for one hundred and seventy-eight days. Now this Constitutional Convention cannot be in session more than seventy-five or eighty days, and I believe these reports will be contained in two volumes, and that will bring the expense within eight thousand or ten thousand dollars altogether.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I believe I offered a resolution on this subject this morning, and I desire to call it up in connection with the report of the committee. I desire to offer it as a substitute for the report of the committee.

MR. FREEMAN. There seems to be so wide a difference in regard to the probable cost of doing this printing, that I move that a committee of five be appointed to ascertain the probable cost of printing the reports of this Convention, and that the report now under consideration be deferred until we have the report of the committee to be appointed.

MR. ROLFE. I think the gentleman from Sacramento is out of order. I think I was myself the one who spoke about the printing. It is the reporting we have now before us. This matter of the printing is another thing, and can be taken up at another time. We can print it ourselves, or leave it to the Legislature, or not have it printed at all.

MR. LARKIN. I move to lay the whole subject-matter on the table until we get further information.

MR. HAGER. If this motion is debatable, I want to say that under this Act we are bound to elect a reporter. If it goes to the table the rule requires two thirds to take it up again.

MR. McCALLUM. The motion is to lie on the table until we get farther information as to this subject, and there is no proposition made to get that information officially.

THE PRESIDENT. It will only require a majority vote to take it from the table.

MR. INMAN. These gentlemen are not going to stop here for a month and report our proceedings for nothing. I would like to know the gentleman's object. I can't see no reason for such a motion. I would like to have him state the object. If it is only for delay I hope gentlemen will see the impropriety of it. Let us get down to business. This is only buncombe. For my part I have had enough of their buncombe.

MR. LARKIN. I will withdraw the motion to lie on the table, and ask to have it referred to some committee to make an estimate, or have it referred back to the same committee to get the information.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. If it is true, as suggested by the gentleman, that we have no authority to print these reports, but that is to be dependent on the Legislature, then I don't see that we have anything to do with that part of it. I suppose the law means that we are to report the proceedings, and leave it to the next Legislature to publish them or not. In that case the question of the cost of printing is not one for us to consider.

MR. AYERS. I would say that it will be useless for this Convention to have the proceedings reported unless they are to be printed. We cannot read the shorthand notes. We have authority under the law to print them, and it is necessary that they should be printed.

The motion to refer back to the committee prevailed.

On motion of Mr. Van Dyke, at three o'clock and nine minutes P. M., the Convention adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

SEVENTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Friday, October 4th, 1878.

The Convention reassembled at ten o'clock A. M., pursuant to adjournment, President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

Eagon,

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the Journal will stand approved as read.

CORRECTION OF JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Upon the motion to lay Mr. White's motion—being Mr. White's appeal from the decision of the Chair—upon the table, I find, upon examination, that the gentleman who kept the account at that time has made a number of errors in the vote that was taken at that time, and I would like to have the ayes and noes called as he has got them.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention has disposed of that question.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am down in the ayes and noes as voting "aye"—to lay the appeal upon the table. I desire to have it corrected. I voted "no." Mr. Volney E. Howard is on the roll as not having voted at all.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order. The Chair has announced ——

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would like to have my vote corrected. I do not desire to change my vote. I voted not to lay the appeal upon the table. With due deference to the Chair ——

THE PRESIDENT. The question was disposed of finally.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I merely desire to have corrected ——

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has announced that it cannot go back to what was done yesterday.

MR. HEISKELL. Do I understand that these proceedings cannot be corrected? I supposed that the proceedings were read for that purpose.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. HEISKELL. I appeal from the decision of the Chair and call for the ayes and noes.

MESSRS. BEERSTECHER and O'SULLIVAN also called for the ayes and noes.

MR. McCALLUM. This gentleman had no opportunity to have his name corrected yesterday, because the names were not read as recorded. Now, I understand that any gentleman has a right to have his vote corrected. This is the first opportunity that he has to know that his vote is incorrectly recorded. I think the Chair misunderstands the gentleman. The gentleman simply desires to have his vote corrected, and this is the first opportunity he has had to correct it.

THE PRESIDENT. I understand the gentleman that he wanted to go back to the whole question. If the gentleman's vote is improperly recorded it can be corrected.

MR. JOYCE. I would like to have my vote corrected, as I understand I have been incorrectly recorded.

MR. EDGERTON. The question is whether this Journal correctly represents the vote as cast. These gentlemen may have voted under a misapprehension.

MR. JOYCE. I would say that I voted "no."

MR. EDGERTON. Then the Journal ought to be corrected.

MR. STEDMAN. I hold in my hand a tally of that vote yesterday, which I kept, and the motion to lay the appeal on the table was lost according to that tally. I being a young man I did not like to get up, but there is the tally, sir.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I am satisfied that there was eight errors in the voting.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is any gentleman desires his vote corrected he can apply to the Chair and have his vote corrected.

MR. SWENSON. I would desire to ask how my vote is recorded?

THE SECRETARY. Swenson, "no."

MR. SWENSON. That is all right.

MR. DOYLE. How am I recorded?

THE SECRETARY. "No."

MR. DOYLE. I wish to have it changed to "aye."

MR. JOYCE. How am I recorded?

THE SECRETARY. Recorded as voting "aye."

MR. JOYCE. I voted "no," sir; I want it so recorded.

MR. WATERS. I would like to have the Secretary announce how I voted.

THE SECRETARY. Recorded as voting "aye."

MR. WATERS. That is wrong; I voted "no."

MR. HUNTER. How am I recorded? I voted "no."

MR. KLEINE. How I am recorded?

THE SECRETARY. "No."

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: If upon any occasion I vote "no" and I am found to be recorded "aye," I have a right to correct that vote next morning with the consent of the body. There might be a question of fact as to how I voted. I might not vote as I intended, and then certainly I cannot change my vote next morning. If I am misrepresented, of course, with the consent of the Convention, I may have the correction made. It depends entirely upon a question of fact. I understand that some gentlemen are somewhat in doubt as to how they did vote.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has permitted these corrections to be made.

MR. TINNIN. That is a privileged matter with the members of this body. These votes go forth to the world, as the acts of the individual members of this body, and they have a right to be placed right on that record. A mistake of a clerk ought not to be allowed to misrepresent a member. It is a personal right and every one who has voted has a right to be placed on that record as he voted.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Have it read over.

THE PRESIDENT. If any gentleman desires to correct his vote he has an opportunity to do so.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. It is for the reason that the men don't understand how they voted yesterday. They claim, sir, that it is a mistake of the Secretary. I claim that the motion yesterday to lay on the table was lost.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. There is nothing before this House for discussion. The Chair has announced that if any gentleman's name is not recorded correctly, that it may be corrected. All he has got to do is to say so.

THE PRESIDENT. Does the gentleman from San Francisco desire to have his vote corrected?

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. I don't know whether my vote is recorded properly or not.

THE SECRETARY. Mr. Smith is recorded as voting "no."

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. That is correct.

MR. WICKES. I move that the vote as recorded be read.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection the Chair will allow the vote to be read.

The Secretary read the roll call.

MR. STEDMAN. For the information of this house I would like to hear the result of that corrected vote.

MR. VAN DYKE. This is simply to correct the vote of each gentleman. Now this proceeding shows the danger that we are liable to fall into by following this plan. I understood some gentlemen distinctly to vote as recorded by the Secretary. Afterwards it is called to their attention that they inadvertently voted different from what they intended, and then, of course, it is thrown on the clerk. Of course every man has a right to be on the record as he votes, but he has not the right to come here the next morning and vote as he intended to vote but did not vote.

THE PRESIDENT. If there are no more corrections the Journal will stand approved.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

MR. MURPHY, from the Committee on Phonographic Reporting and Printing, presented the following report:

To the President of the Convention:

SIR: Your committee on reporting the proceedings of the Convention, having had its powers enlarged so as to take in the subject of printing the reports, beg leave to make the following report on the whole subject: That the cost of reporting the proceedings and debates in shorthand, and transcribing them into longhand, ready for the printer, will not exceed eight thousand dollars for the session, if it last one hundred days, and this sum includes the per diem of the reporters; that if the session does not last one hundred days, the cost of transcribing will not exceed the sum of six thousand dollars, and the State will have the advantage in such less cost as may be incurred in case of a short session, by only paying for the transcribing by the folio at the rate of twenty cents per folio. That the cost of printing the proceedings and debates in the form of the Illinois reports will amount to four thousand six hundred and forty-three dollars and sixty cents per volume of nine hundred and fifty pages; this for one thousand copies, bound and complete. That the cost of printing five hundred copies of five hundred pages of the Journal will reach one thousand and thirty-nine dollars. That the cost of printing the daily Journal for the use of the members will amount to about two hundred dollars for the session.

JAMES E. MURPHY, Chairman.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection the report will be received and be before the Convention for action. So ordered.

MR. WYATT. For the purpose of disposing of this question and ecting the sense of this Convention upon this subject, I move the indefinite postponement of the report of the committee. I do this because I am opposed to a reporter. I am opposed to employing this Phonographic Reporter with the expense that it is thought will be incident to it. I was astonished the other day when it was announced in the Convention that reporting the proceedings of the Illinois Convention had cost that State fifty-seven thousand dollars. We, sir, in the point of expense, exceed Illinois as much as we do in the size of our trees. If to report the Illinois Convention cost that State fifty-seven thousand dollars, in my opinion, before the State of California gets through with the reporting and publication in bound volumes of the debates of this Convention, the treasury of this State will have been depleted to the extent of one hundred thousand dollars. I know that my remarks seem extravagant as compared with the statement of the committee upon that subject. It seems absurd, as it were, but without being a prophet or the son of a prophet, I am willing to offer that suggestion to this Convention. We are not going to cut down upon the cost of the Illinois Convention. We are not going to cut down upon the cost of the Eastern States upon that subject. It will cost us in the proportion as the expenses of the Pacific Coast exceed the expenses of the Eastern States in all the cost of things of this character. But when we employ Phonographic Reporters to report this Convention, if they are employed, I want it reported as the Ohio reports are, that everything shall be reported, even to the prayers of this Convention, if we have prayers. Sometimes the very smallest thing either points a moral or adorns a tale, and I don't want it left to a select four, or five, or six of this Convention to say what shall go into the reports and what shall not. If the proceedings are reported let it be verbatim. If it is intended to show to posterity how able we are as statesmen, it should all be in there; if it is intended to show that we were able to frame and mould a new form of government that is to be the admiration of the world, all should go in there; if it is proposed that it shall stand as a warning beacon for future generations, then all should go in there. I do not want it clipped one line. I do not want the crossing of one "t" or the dotting of one "i." I do not believe, sir, that the reporting of this Convention will be worth the cost of it. I do not believe that my constituents care to have the money expended that it will cost to do it; hence, for the purpose of making it a test question, I have made the motion that I have.

MR. AYERS. There may, perhaps, be some force in the parallel drawn by the gentleman from Monterey. It has been asserted in this Convention that the reports of the debates and proceedings in the State of Illinois cost in the vicinity of fifty-seven thousand dollars, I believe. How two volumes like that (holding up the book to the view of the Convention) reported and printed, and printed to the extent of one thousand copies, could have cost that sum I cannot divine. There must have been a great steal in it. Legitimate work could not have cost that sum. Your committee, with the aid of the State Printer, and I will here remark in parenthesis that no job is possible, so far as printing is concerned, in this State, because we have a State Printing Office here of which this Convention, by statute, has the control; the use of the material is at our service; the presses, the type, and whatever is in that establishment is at the service of this Convention. It is, therefore, only necessary in estimating upon this work to find out what will be the cost of the material upon which the work shall be printed; what shall be the cost of the labor connected with the press-work; what shall be the cost of the composition. All of these items are easily arrived at. The cost, per page, of the composition (I am speaking now to the printing), cannot exceed three dollars. The measure is there, and it cannot be enlarged or contracted. The cost of nine hundred and fifty pages which that volume contains (the reports of the Illinois Convention are contained in two such volumes) would be two thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars. The cost of the press-work for one thousand copies would be two hundred and eighty-five dollars and sixty cents. The cost of paper for one thousand copies—one hundred and thirty reams—eight hundred and fifty-eight dollars. The cost of binding one thousand copies, at sixty-five cents per copy, six hundred and fifty dollars, and I defy any man, with the State Printing Office at our command, to enlarge these figures. Therefore the whole matter would resolve itself into this: if the session of the Convention should last long enough so that we should make matter that would fill two such volumes as that, the entire cost of printing, including a daily Journal and the bound Journal at the end of the session, would be as follows: four thousand six hundred and forty-three dollars and sixty cents per volume for two volumes of the reports; one thousand and thirty-nine dollars for the Journal; two hundred dollars for the daily Journal, to be printed and laid on our desks, making a total cost of printing amount to ten thousand five hundred and twenty-six dollars and twenty cents. That is the extreme limit, providing we only make two such volumes of matter in this session. The reporting and reproducing the notes into longhand can only cost eight thousand dollars; the whole extent of this entire work would be eighteen thousand five hundred and twenty-six dollars and twenty cents, for reporting and printing everything connected with this Convention, so far as regards the matter in hand as reported by the committee. Now, if any gentleman here is afraid that this expenditure may reach to any colossal sum, as it was reached in the State of Illinois, I would like to have him point out to me where is the leak; where is that India rubber flexibility that will enlarge eighteen thousand dollars up to fifty-seven thousand dollars. It could only be if we had the power, and we have it not, to let this matter out by contract; then the stealing might come in—then the favoritism might come in—but as long as we have control of that establishment over there, and have our work done there, there can be no such thing.

MR. FREEMAN. We might as well understand as clearly as we can the limits of this thing at once. Yesterday the computations, as made by a member of the committee, suggested, I believe, the sum of two thousand dollars.

MR. AYERS. I beg leave to make a correction. The gentleman will recollect that, at the suggestion of Judge Fawcett, I estimated that an octavo volume of eight hundred pages would not cost over two thousand dollars, or about two thousand dollars. It was a hasty calculation. I said I had not made that estimate in relation to this sized volume, neither in form or matter.

MR. FREEMAN. That is just about what it was; the computations were hasty. What is the use of talking about the proceedings being reported in a volume of nine hundred and fifty pages? The Illinois Convention, to which reference has been made, consisted of eighty-five members, and was in session ninety-five days. Now, I do not believe that these one hundred and fifty-two men here will allow any eighty-five Illinois men to do more talking in ninety-five days than they can do in one hundred days. I believe, sir, that the reports of our Convention will be as much larger than the reports of the Illinois Convention as one hundred and fifty is larger than eighty-five. Now, in making the computation made by the State Printer, the committee saw proper to select less than one half of the Illinois report for their estimate. They have selected the smallest volume, which contains nine hundred and fifty pages, instead of the first volume, which contains one thousand and seventy-seven pages. Now, these Illinois reports, it must be admitted, is the very smallest limit with which our reports can be put, contain over two thousand pages; all three columns; each column contains eighty-four lines; each line about seven words; making thirty-five thousand two hundred and eighty folios, at least, to be transcribed at twenty cents per folio would cost seven thousand and fifty-six dollars. I wish to say this, in regard to the computations that are now made, that it rarely happens that the estimates at the beginning of any job realize what it amounts to at the end. I desire here to call the attention of this body to work that has already been done in the State Printing Office, for the purpose of making an estimate. Now, in the report of eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, we have the cost of printing the statutes of eighteen hundred and seventy-five-six, and it is stated to be six thousand three hundred and eighty dollars. By an actual estimate, I find that these statutes contain just one fifth of the matter contained in these volumes of the Illinois reports; hence it would require about thirty thousand dollars to put forth a volume containing as much as the two Illinois reports. I will ask again what I asked the other day, why do we want a Phonographic Reporter? Gentlemen have alluded to the fact that there were questions of importance to be discussed here. I will admit that, and that they will be ably discussed; but the substance of these discussions will be sent out to the world and read by the people carefully long before any official reports of the proceedings of this Convention can be made. Why, we propose to print a thousand copies. That is not for public information. Why, if we print at all, if we want this as a matter of publicity, we should go into the newspaper business, and send them abroad to the State and to the world. If the real object of this be to give people information upon constitutional questions, then they should be like a newspaper, sent broadcast. But the very newspaper which this morning tells us to proceed to the election of a reporter, tells us in the same article that whether we elect one or not it will give a full report of our proceedings, and we have no occasion for a reporter. The question is now to indefinitely postpone this report. This seems to me not the proper way to act upon the report of the committee. Upon the indefinite postponement I shall vote "no," but when the question comes whether we shall employ any Phonographic Reporter, I shall vote against it.

MR. SHAFTER. Do I understand the gentleman that the question now is upon the indefinite postponement of this report? There is no proposition in this report of any kind to be acted upon; none whatever. They simply report that certain services will cost a certain sum of money. They recommend no action of any kind. I submit as a question of order that there is nothing in the report that recommends any action.

MR. MURPHY. I move to take up the resolution upon which this resolution is based—the resolution providing for a Phonographic Reporter—and have the matter disposed of.

MR. AYERS. I would suggest that the report of the committee yesterday and the report to-day are connected; that this is a subsidiary report to that. In that there is a clear proposition made.

MR. MURPHY. I move that this report be adopted and then we will vote upon the resolution.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President, I desire to offer this resolution, for the purpose of presenting the matter in a shape that will disclose the sense of the Convention on the substance of the report:

Resolved, That this Convention do now proceed to the election of a Phonographic Reporter, whose duties and pay shall be governed by the provisions of the reports of the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: When the question of phonographic reporting first came up before this body, I was in grave doubt about the propriety of the action of this body in regard to it. I certainly think that we ought to have a report of the proceedings of this body. Nearly every other State of the Union which has had a Constitutional Convention, has submitted in a permanent form to the world its deliberations, and I have only been deterred from advocating the matter myself by a consideration of cost. I knew nothing about it myself, and have been waiting for information from those better informed. Now, it seems to me that we have come to a fair calculation of one portion of the cost, and we certainly know, if we adopt this resolution, the bounds which the reporter shall not exceed. It says that the whole cost of reporting and transcribing shall not exceed eight thousand dollars, and that the gentleman we shall select shall give bonds that he will present no bill exceeding eight thousand dollars. We know, therefore, how much that will cost at the outside. Now, the only additional cost is the cost of printing. It seems to me we ought to consider, to some extent, where that money is going. I understand that the expenditure of public money, when it goes to an individual on a claim that is doubtful, is a very different thing from the expenditure of the same amount of money when it is distributed through a large class of persons. Political economy is composed of two great departments—first, the creation of wealth; second, its distribution. One party now seems to be greatly exercised about the distribution of wealth. I, sir, am not in favor at all of any of those wild schemes that have been lately agitated and presented, such as that the State and municipal corporations should expend money merely for the purpose of giving employment. Some have gone so far as to say that it would be right to employ men to wheel stones from one part of the city and back again, simply for the purpose of giving employment to labor. But, sir, in estimating the cost of printing, it is certainly fair to consider that nearly every dollar of it, all of it, in fact, except the mere price of the paper on which it is printed, goes to a set of as worthy and industrious and as hard-working workingmen as there are in this State. [Applause.] There is no set of men in the State of California, I don't care who they are, that do more hard work for the same amount of money, than the printers of this State. They are workingmen in the truest sense of the word—men who do more work, do harder work, do work at the most unseasonable hours, do work that tends more to the destruction of the faculties, both of the body and mind, than any other class of workingmen in the State of California. Now, sir, every dollar of the expense of printing will go to that class of workingmen of the State. But, sir, when we come to consider the cost of printing, I do not see how it is going to be very great; I do not see how it can be. The gentleman from Alameda presented this matter fully. According to his calculations, I cannot understand how the amount of money to be paid out to these printers is going to amount to any very large sum. I certainly think that we can obtain the proceedings at a cost not exceeding eight thousand dollars for the reporting and transcribing, and the cost of the whole at fifteen thousand dollars, which is seven thousand dollars for the printing, and that money going to a worthy class of workingmen of the country. I do not believe, sir, that the people will object to the printing of these debates in this way.

MR. LAINE offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Phonographic Reporter be allowed fifty dollars per day, and no more, for his per diem and that of his assistant, for reporting the proceedings of the Convention, and transcribing the same into longhand, ready for the printer.

MR. FREEMAN. First, let us determine whether we will have a shorthand reporter. I think the first question that we ought to decide is whether we will have Phonographic Reporters. We can then get the sense of the House upon that question. Then we had better take a little time before the contract is let. I would like the question to be divided, so as to first put the question as to whether we shall elect a Phonographic Reporter.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution of the gentleman from Placer covers the point and brings the Convention to a direct vote.

MR. FREEMAN. If I remember it, that would make the arrangement according to the report of the committee. That is the part I object to. Let the first part be put, that is, whether we employ or do not employ a Phonographic Reporter. If it should be carried, then I will call attention to the defects in the report of the committee and we will have it obviated. Perhaps the gentlemen on the left will consent to have the proposition divided in that manner.

MR. HAGER. Will the Secretary please read that resolution.

The Secretary read:

Resolved, That this Convention do now proceed to the election of a Phonographic Reporter whose duties and pay shall be governed by the provisions of the reports of the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is not capable of division.

MR. FREEMAN. I desire to call attention then to the fact that the report says that the reporter shall be entitled to the per diem fixed by law for their services. There is no law fixing their per diem. There is no per diem fixed by law for Phonographic Reporters of this Convention. The next proposition yesterday was that the reporter be required to furnish longhand reports.

MR. EDGERTON. I would inquire if the reference in this resolution is to the report of yesterday or to-day.

MR. FILCHER. Both reports. It says "reports." I see in looking over the report yesterday, which was written very hastily as the Convention was being called to order, that it is a little ambiguous.

MR. FREEMAN. That is the reason I asked for a division of the question.

MR. FILCHER. This point, however, was made clearly in the subsequent report this morning, and it will be seen that in no possible event shall the cost for reporting and transcribing exceed the sum of eight thousand dollars.

MR. HOWARD. I move to amend the resolution by striking out all after the words "Phonographic Reporter."

MR. EDGERTON. I did not know until this moment that the report contained the proviso that in no event should the cost of printing——

MR. FILCHER. The reporting and transcribing shall not exceed eight thousand dollars.

MR. PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard, to strike out the words "whose duties and pay shall be governed by the provisions of the reports of the Committee on Reporting and Printing." The resolution would then stand:

Resolved, "That this Convention do now proceed to the election of a Phonographic Reporter"

MR. HAGER. I have said heretofore that I thought by the Act of the Legislature we were substantially instructed to appoint Phonographic Reporters. The Act reads: "The Convention may select Phonographic Reporters and fix the amount of their compensation; also, a Sergeant-at-Arms and one assistant." Now it is true that perhaps we may not select Phonographic Reporters under a fair construction of this Act, but

I look upon it as equivalent to an instruction so far as the Legislature is concerned, they having evidently thought that we ought to select Phonographic Reporters to make a report of the proceedings and debates of this Convention. That is the view that I take of it, that it is an instruction from the Legislature, and so far as any one feels bound to follow that instruction, I think it is his duty to obey it in voting to have these proceedings reported.

MR. AYERS. In order to place the whole subject more clearly——

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I am not done. Now, in regard to the printing. We are not instructed in regard to the printing one way or the other. If we simply conclude to have the reports made they will be placed on file, and a future Legislature may order them printed or not. Now the Convention may take that view of it, to have the proceedings reported and to allow them to be placed among the archives, to be published hereafter if they see fit. I presume that by the Act we are authorized to order the printing, inasmuch as it provides for the printing of any other matter that may be necessary for the Convention. I should say that they should be printed so that they could be placed upon our desks the morning after the debates occur. That can be done. That is the course in Congress. If they are printed at all during the session they should be placed on the desks of members on the following day. I have no desire to perpetuate my name through the printed debates of this Convention. Let it be printed or not, it is immaterial to me. I do not know that I would vote for the printing. Men can be immortalized in books, and I understand there is a gentleman getting up the biographies of members here so that they can acquire immortality in that way. It is not necessary that we have these proceedings published, but the question is whether it is most desirable. I think, perhaps in most views it is desirable, but so far as personal considerations are concerned I do not care a snap of my finger whether they are published or not. I would wish now to make an amendment to the proposition of the member from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard. I offer this amendment: "That in the opinion of this Convention Phonographic Reporters should be appointed to report the proceedings of this Convention." That will bring the question directly before the Convention. If this resolution should pass, I should then be in favor of appointing a committee to interview the different reporters and then report the names of those who are competent and the price for which it can be done. I would like to have the question first decided whether we will have Phonographic Reporters. I offer this resolution:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Convention, Phonographic Reporters should be appointed to report the proceedings of this Convention.

MR. MCCALLUM. I rise simply for information. I heard the report of the committee, but there have been some amendments offered since that I did not hear.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles is to strike out the latter clause of the resolution, so that it will simply proceed to the election of a Phonographic Reporter.

MR. MCFARLAND. We do not know, from the resolution, what the reporter is going to do, or what pay he will receive. It does seem to me that the fairest way is to vote upon the original resolution.

MR. BIGGS. I want to see the gentlemen come right square up to the question, whether they are in favor of reporting their speeches. The resolution offered by Mr. Filcher brings that question to a direct issue. And I want it understood that I am opposed to the election of a Phonographic Reporter; and I must say, that I am very much surprised at the delegate from San Francisco, Judge Hager, to come here and advocate the taxation of the downtrodden people of this State. The law says we may have a reporter; he says that it is implied that we should have one. Then he goes on and says, so far as he is concerned, he don't care whether the proceedings are reported or not. He cares not whether his name is handed down to posterity with the last declaration; he don't care whether he cinches the people of this State thirty or forty thousand dollars.

MR. HAGER. If my friend will allow me, I said that, so far as I was personally concerned, I did not care a snap of my finger whether the debates were printed or not; but so far as the expenses are concerned, I care just as much about them as the old watchdog of the treasury. [Laughter.]

MR. BIGGS. I accept the appellation. I came here pledged to the people of California, of the whole State, that I will coöperate with the men of this Convention that they shall not be taxed to death. I propose to notice the remark of the distinguished gentleman from Sacramento, Judge McFarland. He says every dollar is paid to the printers, and goes to the working men. Who pays the money into the treasury? Who puts it there to be paid out? It aint the bondholders and mortgageholders. It is the working men that puts this money into the treasury, and I want it to remain there and go out to legitimate purposes. This will amount to more than eighteen thousand dollars. I tell you, you go on and it will soon come up. Before you have spent such an amount for the purpose of having these reports—the debates reported—and they will all be lost, unless you make a further appropriation. I want the Constitution so plain that you don't need to spend fifty-seven thousand dollars, like the Illinois Convention. And I ask this Convention to place themselves on the record for retrenchment and reform, and against robbing the State of twenty or thirty thousand dollars; and I ask my friends to stand by me, and stand by the State, and save the State that large amount of money.

MR. DOWLING. I would like to understand if that resolution determines first, that we have a reporter, or that we are going to determine about the salary, or what the reporter will get. Now, Mr. President, if that is so, the proper way is, to determine what the whole thing will cost, and then let us have a reporter afterwards. But it seems to me, Mr. President, that California, ever since she was admitted into the Union, was never in a condition that she was better able to dispense with the services of a Phonographic Reporter than she is at this date. I think, sir, that she trembles from San Bernardino to Siskiyou from the amount of taxation that is already piled upon her, and I, for one, will positively, first, last, and all the time, vote against piling any more taxation upon this State. I do it, sir, because jobs of this kind have been attempted many a time before, and were carried out very successfully, in order to defraud the public. Now if we get started in this reporting business it is only an entering wedge. We cannot tell where it will stop. This reporting will cost, the lowest sum is eighteen thousand dollars.

MR. AYERS. Including the printing.

MR. DOWLING. I say eighteen thousand five hundred and twenty. Is it not paying for the shadow of the substance? Is not the Constitution going to be the substance, and these debates and deliberations are to be the shadow. It is simply throwing money out of the treasury to immortalize a few eloquent men on this floor, who will have speeches in there to transmit to posterity. I hanker after no such notoriety, though I will help to build a Constitution that will protect that posterity and keep them from being robbed even now. I want to build it so strong, so compact, that it will be like a stone wall; and then, Mr. President, when it is built I want it plastered over, so that there won't be a crack in it, because these corporations and monopolies would run a locomotive or steamboat through a keyhole. When I hear these men advocate in this House, I hear it from the great buglers of corporations; and anything I hear from them, I will object and protest, first, last, and all the time against them. Now, Mr. President, I contend that the minutes of this meeting are sufficient for us to refer to in future years. My vote is my record. When I leave this Convention I go back to the obscurity from whence I came. I don't want to deify any man. I vote against this thing first, last, and all the time.

MR. SHOEMAKER. The question of printing the debates is an entirely different one from that of the reporting. It has nothing to do with it whatever.

MR. BARTON. Inasmuch as the Chair has decided that the report of the committee is not subject to division, I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard, will prevail. I think that this is a useless waste of time. I do not rise for the purpose of making a speech. We will have ample time for that when the matter comes before this body in its proper light. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles, or the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, will prevail, and that we will bring this matter squarely before this body.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: While I do not come here to make any buncombe speeches on matters of reform, economy, etc., yet, if any member of this Convention can point out to me clearly where I can save to the people of California a dollar, without restricting their rights, I stand here ready and willing to do so. At the same time, since the economical feature of this matter is being discussed, I rise to state that it presents itself to my mind in a different light than it seems to have done to some of the members. As I understand it, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars have been appropriated by the Legislature of the State of California to defray the expenses of this Convention. And it would seem to me that if we expend that money in simply wasting our time here in debating and wrangling, and then the result of our action should be repudiated by the people, then the people whom we represent have not one solitary dot to show as a return for the expenditure of their money. On the other hand, if we extend our liberality and manifest a little more generosity, we can devote this money, or a portion of it at least, to handing down to the people the ideas we have suggested, if, perchance, they may be of any use to them in the future in considering important constitutional matters. To my economical friends, the Workingmen, and my distinguished friend from Butte, who would save to this State every dollar they can—and I believe that they are honest in their convictions—it would seem at a glance that they want to gobble up all of it to pay salaries and not let a dollar of it go to the poor printer.

MR. BIGGS. I call the gentleman to order.

MR. FILCHER. I do say that it seems that these gentlemen who are opposing this proposition on the ground of economy, it would seem to me, that their motives must be that they wish to exclude the printers and reporters and all outsiders from getting their hands on any of this money in order that it may be retained in toto among the members in their per diem. Now, for my part, Mr. President, I repeat that I want to save every dollar possible to the people of the State of California, but since it is possible that we may expend this money and have nothing left to show for it, it seems to me that we should let the people know what is said upon this floor, and place them in a position that they can use our words here, and put them in a shape that will be of some service, and I offer the resolution, knowing what I do, in order to bring this matter to a head. I know that the State Printer is now sitting on the anxious seat to know what the Convention is going to do—whether we are going to print these reports or not. The reporters are also on the anxious seat waiting to know whether or not they are going to work. They are waiting here on time and expense. I know that there are a large number of printers in Sacramento anxious to know if the reports are to be printed. It is definitely understood from the most liberal calculations that the reports—the verbatim longhand reports—of the proceedings shall not in any event, cost the State over eight thousand dollars, if the outside limit is attained, and if the session does not last one hundred days, the reports cannot cost more than six thousand five hundred dollars.

MR. CAPLES. I desire merely to make a suggestion. There has been talk enough upon this subject in its present shape, and I merely desire to suggest to the members that before we consume any more valuable time in discussing this question, we had better decide whether we want a reporter. If it be a fact, and probably it is, that a majority of this Convention have predetermined against the employment of an official reporter—have predetermined that they will save the State this expense, why, then, it must be apparent to every member that this is a waste of time. My suggestion is simply this: let us first determine whether we want an official reporter. If we determine that we do want an official reporter, then let us discuss the details; but if we don't desire an official reporter, it is, as I remarked, a waste of time. Therefore, I think we should first determine whether we want an official reporter. Having so determined, then let us go into the details.

MR. TULLY. This is a subject that I know but little about. I listened to the statement of Colonel Ayers, who, I am informed, is a practical printer and newspaper man, and he assures this Convention that the whole proceeding would not cost the State over eighteen thousand dollars in round numbers. The Hon. Mr. Edgerton, the gentleman from Sacramento, I believe is a gentleman of large experience in these matters, rises and says that it would be about eight thousand dollars. Another distinguished gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Freeman, who I am sure is a sound, practical, and safe man, assures us that these proceedings involve an expenditure of about thirty thousand dollars. Now, I am not willing to vote upon such an uncertainty as that, and I think gentlemen of this Convention should know what they are voting upon. Another gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, desires making this appropriation for the benefit of his constituents—hard-working printers and such. I, for one, am not disposed to be niggardly on any of these questions. I think that there should be a decent record made of the proceedings and of the debates of this Convention, and I for one am willing to vote for the proposition, provided I can be assured with some degree of certainty what the proceedings are going to cost. Some gentlemen have argued that we should first elect a reporter, and then ascertain what it is to cost. It seems to me that we should first ascertain what the cost of the proceeding will be. I think that, in a very great degree, will determine the fact of whether we elect a reporter or not. It seems to me that the friends of this report are taking the very measures to defeat themselves, because I shall certainly vote against this resolution with the light I now have, and I will rely upon the newspapers to report all that I may wish to say upon this floor. I will make me a scrap-book and have my children set down at nights and read what I had to say in this Convention. I presume some of the gentlemen desire to have the debates printed and bound in leather, that their grandchildren may read the grand speeches that their grandfathers made here. I certainly shall vote against the proposition as it now stands.

MR. AYERS. I merely wish to call the attention of this Convention to one feature of this debate. Gentlemen rise in their seats and speak about fastening upon the people of this State a heavy debt for this printing. I will say that as far as I have learned, this expense has to come out of the one hundred and fifty thousand dollars appropriated for this Convention. The one hundred and fifty thousand dollars will be used up in any event, and if a portion of it is used for printing, I do not see that any further taxation will be placed upon the people for that purpose.

MR. BARBOUR. I agree, sir, with the suggestion of the gentleman from Sacramento; that we should come to a direct vote upon the question whether we will have Phonographic Reporters or not. That disposes of all the rest of the matters that have been discussed here this morning. Of course, if the Convention decides against having Phonographic Reporters, that settles it. I am opposed, in the present attitude of this Convention, to the employment of Phonographic Reporters; and now that I have the floor, I will state my reasons. I do not believe it to be a useless expense, but I do believe it is not worth it. It is an expense that will not repay the people of this State an equivalent. Gentlemen have presented to us figures here in regard to the expense; but, Mr. President, these figures will come out exactly as the estimates did in the Illinois Convention, and fall about one half to two thirds short of the estimate. That committee was composed of practical printers. The chief of the committee was Mr. Joseph Medill, against whom no man could suggest anything; Mr. Cameron was another, both of them men whom, to say, in the West, that they would countenance any jobbery, would excite ridicule. They presented an estimate to that committee that the reporting, transcribing, and printing would cost in the neighborhood of twenty thousand dollars. It is said that the gentlemen are practical printers, and have presented a report that the cost will be about eighteen thousand dollars. But it turns out, the event shows, that in that State the cost was fifty-seven thousand dollars; and I have no doubt that if we undertake this business here we will find that it will approximate that, perhaps more, and I will tell you why. In Illinois it was let by contract. The contractors were bound to the contract in bonds. They could not go behind it. Here the work is given out to the State Printer. I say, therefore, that the responsibility for this thing, if any loss arises to the State, should be placed where it belongs—that is, upon the Legislature, which crippled this Convention. We cannot abandon our labors in the middle, for the want of anything in the treasury to go on with them. We cannot. We must go through. We must have the means to go through. Gentlemen talk about giving employment to working men. That is all buncombe and claptrap. If that is not buncombe politics as a motive here, I know of none such. You cannot catch Workingmen with propositions of that sort. The only question is, whether it is a proper expenditure. Is it a right expenditure? Now, sir, I would not have the great State of California practice an absurd economy or be niggardly. I would not have it to be behind other States in employing all the arts and improvements of modern invention to make its labors complete, but I see that other States have dispensed with this thing. Only half have their debates all printed. They are useless unless they are printed. The great argument offered here in support of the proposition to have shorthand reporters, is that the questions that may arise after the Constitution is adopted may be illustrated and exemplified by an examination of the debates. I know that the Courts examine custom, tradition, and everything else, but I do not know that Judges go into constitutional debates for the true intent of a constitutional provision. I undertake to say it would be a bold Judge who would go in there to find what the sense of this Constitution would be. I know that this proposition to dispense with this work is rough on the orators of this Convention, and I should like to gratify these gentlemen in that manner, and hand them down to my posterity in good shape, but I beg them to remember that Demosthenes and Cicero had no reporters. They did not even have the benefit of the press. I suggest to our orators to write their great speeches out on buckskin, and file them in the archives of the State. Now, I want to call attention—I am a sort of printer myself. They have spoken about the cost of composition, and I find in the report of this Committee of the Constitutional Convention of Illinois a suggestion that is very important to consider, and that is, that the printing of these reports is altogether different matter—estimated altogether different from ordinary composition. I will refer to the report: "It was further agreed that the debates should be printed and placed in newspaper form on the desks of the members of the Convention at twelve M. of each succeeding day, punctually; that two proofs of all speeches, resolutions, etc., should be furnished to members for correction and revision; and that all corrections, alterations, and revisions of 'copy,' should be done at the expense of the contractors; that after the debates have been printed in the newspaper form and furnished to members, all further corrections that may be made by members of the Convention for the Globe form shall be made at the cost of the contractor." This is an additional expense, as there will be everlasting revisions and alterations, which will multiply the work of the State Printer and increase the expense.

But, sir, I oppose this resolution upon other grounds. I have a very serious apprehension in my mind that the work of this Convention will be an abortion. It seems so to me now, sir. The inharmonious elements here, it seems to me, will be unable to agree upon and present to the people of this State a Constitution which they will adopt, and for that reason I wish to be upon the safe side, and save to the treasury every dollar that we can possibly avoid the expense of. We are reported sufficiently, I believe, by a newspaper published in this city, which has announced that it proposes to furnish full reports of this Convention. I refer to the hippodrome paper—the dead-alive paper called the Sacramento Record-Union. It is true, sir, that nobody reads it if he can avoid it, but the debates will be there, and that is enough for me. Any gentleman can order a thousand copies, if he wants to. They can put an antidote in the poison, and it is all right. Therefore I shall vote for the resolution to divide the question.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The effect of the previous question will be to bring the Convention to a vote upon the amendment, and then upon the resolution offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher. The first question is on the amendment offered by General Howard.

MR. JOYCE. I would like to have the motion again read before the previous question is put, so that the people will know what they are going to do.

MR. HAGER. The original proposition is the report of the committee, as I understand it. The next proposition is the amendment of the member from Los Angeles. To that is another amendment which I offered. If the previous question is ordered, the first vote will be upon the proposition which I have offered as an amendment. The next vote will be upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles; after that upon the original proposition of the committee.

THE PRESIDENT. The first vote will be upon the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles.

MR. HAGER. It is contrary to all rules I ever heard.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is very sorry to differ with the gentleman. The motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles is to strike out a portion of the resolution. The motion of the gentleman from San Francisco is to strike out the whole of it and insert something else.

MR. HAGER. My motion is to amend the clause left standing. If the proposition is adopted, my amendment fails, because then by a vote of the House the first proposition has carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair differs with the gentleman.

MR. HAGER. Here I have the law: "All amendments of which a proposition is susceptible, so far as form is concerned, must be effected in one of three ways, namely, by inserting or adding certain words; or by leaving out certain words; or by leaving out certain words and inserting or adding others. These several forms of amendment are subject to certain general rules, which are equally applicable to them all." One of these rules is: "Whatever is disagreed to by the Assembly cannot be afterwards moved again. This rule is the converse of the preceding. Thus, if it is moved to amend A B by inserting C, and the amendment is rejected, C cannot be moved again; or, if it is moved to amend A B by leaving out B, and the amendment prevails, B cannot be restored; because in the first case C, and, in the other B, have been disagreed to." That is the case here. That is, the authors of a measure may perfect what is left standing by a motion to strike out before the motion is put, otherwise if we vote to strike out they have no opportunity to perfect it. We cannot recede from it unless we reconsider.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman has not moved to strike out anything. The gentleman from San Francisco moves this resolution: "That in the opinion of this Convention Phonographic Reporters should be appointed to report the proceedings of this Convention." The gentleman has not moved to strike out anything.

MR. HAGER. The Chair does not understand the point I make. I only wish the Chair to correct what he has already stated.

THE PRESIDENT. I think I have corrected it already. The gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, offered a resolution. The gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard, moves to amend by striking out the latter clause. The gentleman from San Francisco makes this motion: "That in the opinion of this Convention Phonographic Reporters should be appointed to report the proceedings of this Convention."

Mr. HAGER. My proposition——

The PRESIDENT. The gentleman will wait until the Chair has finished. Now, after the motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles, the gentleman's motion will be put. He offered it as a substitute. If the motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles does prevail, still the gentleman from San Francisco is in order to move to strike out the balance of it and insert, so that his vote is after that of the gentleman from Los Angeles, and the third vote is upon the original resolution. The previous question will bring the Convention to a vote in the order I have stated it.

Mr. HAGER. Now, Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT. All debate is out of order.

Mr. HAGER. The point I raised was as to the correctness of the statement.

The PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. HAGER. I merely wish to state that the Chair has not correctly stated the proposition that I made. The effect of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, as I understand it——

The PRESIDENT. The gentleman is now discussing the point——

Mr. HAGER. No. But——

The PRESIDENT. The question is—is there a second to the call for the previous question?

Mr. WATERS. I second the call for the previous question.

Mr. McCALLUM. I second the call.

The PRESIDENT. The gentlemen who second the call will rise to their feet. The main question is ordered. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, to strike out the latter clause of the original resolution. If that vote prevails the resolution will stand:

Resolved, "That this Convention do now proceed to the election of a Phonographic Reporter."

The amendment was adopted.

The PRESIDENT. The question now recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, as either a substitute or a motion, to strike out and insert: "That in the opinion of this Convention Phonographic Reporters should be appointed to report the proceedings of this Convention."

The ayes and noes were demanded, and the amendment lost by the following vote:

Mr. McCOMAS, at twelve o'clock and forty minutes P. M., moved to take a recess until two o'clock.

Lost.

Mr. SHOEMAKER offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms of this Convention be and he is hereby authorized and directed to receive from the Controller of State, and to receipt therefor, all warrants due to the members, officers, and employes of this Convention for per diem and mileage.

Adopted.

Mr. MURPHY offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is authorized to draw his warrant in favor of the following persons in the amounts set opposite their names, payable out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention, for services rendered during its organization: A. J. Dobbins, Minute Clerk, $18; J. M. Farrelly, Sergeant-at-Arms, $56; B. F. Alexander, Doorkeeper, $20; Hiram Clock, Porter, $24.

Adopted.

Mr. WILSON, of San Francisco. I move that when this Convention adjourns to-day, it adjourn until Monday at one o'clock.

Mr. WHITE. I move that we adjourn until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

Mr. Wilson's motion was lost by a standing vote of seventy ayes to seventy-one noes.

Mr. EDGERTON, at twelve o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., moved that we now take a recess until two o'clock.

Carried.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock, President Hoge in the Chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

On motion of Mr. TULLY, Mr. Laine's leave of absence was extended until Tuesday next.

On motion of Mr. EDGERTON, to correct a mistake, the Convention reconsidered its action in regard to the per diem of the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, and fixed it at six dollars instead of eight dollars, so as to comply with the law.

Mr. HEUSTIS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and is hereby authorized to draw warrants in favor of W. T. Beveridge and Aaron Wilson in the sum of eighteen dollars each, for services rendered as Pages, pending the organization of this Convention, payable out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention, and that the State Treasurer is hereby authorized to pay the same as above provided.

Adopted.

FILLING OF VACANCIES.

MR. TINNIN offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Convention now proceed to elections to fill the vacancies in the following order: First, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Thomas Morris, of San Francisco; second, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of H. H. Haight, from the Second Congressional District; third, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of G M. Hardwick, from the Counties of Merced and Mariposa.

MR. McCALLUM. I move to amend that by making the election for the delegate at large first; by filling the vacancy caused by the death of Governor Haight first.

MR. EDGERTON. I move to amend the resolution by striking out the word "now" in the first line, after the word "Convention," and insert "at two o'clock P. M. on Tuesday next."

MR. TINNIN. I offered that resolution in good faith and for the purpose of advancing the labors of this Convention. In drawing the resolution I had no preference for any individual, and if other parties here have made agreements about which election shall come first, I have no knowledge of them. Now, sir, in answer to the last motion made, we have been here for three or four days simply doing nothing. It has been a contest here without seemingly accomplishing anything, and it is essentially necessary that this election be had in order to fill the vacancies, that the President in making up his committees may know the individuals he is to place on the committees. The President does not know who is elected. He does not know what peculiar capacities these persons have who will be elected. It is essentially necessary that he should know before he makes up his committees, and for this reason I contend that we should immediately go into this election. If gentlemen desire to go to San Francisco on private business I see no reason why this Convention should delay its labors.

MR. VAN DYKE. I hope this body will take this matter into consideration and force this election at the present time. I hope the mover of the resolution will accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda. It seems a matter of propriety that a delegate at large should be elected first to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Governor Haight.

MR. EDGERTON. I withdraw my motion.

MR. McFARLAND. If we are going to pass this resolution I do not see any reason for changing it. There is no particular object in it. I do not see why the delegate from San Francisco should not be elected first as well as the one from the Second Congressional District.

MR. CAPLES. It appears to me that there is a misnomer, perhaps unintentional, in the original resolution. The word "resignation" is used instead of "ineligibility."

MR. TINNIN. I see no point in that. That gentleman did resign. His resignation was read from the President's desk, and there can be no object in this only to hold forth certain ideas concerning the individual.

MR. CAPLES. I think that no man can resign what he does not possess. It is a misnomer, an abuse of language or terms. I therefore insist on my amendment.

MR. TINNIN. I do not care to enter into any debate, but I wish to say that the Governor of the State of California, by his certificate, declared that Thomas Morris was a member of this Convention, and considering that fact his resignation was in order. It was legal under the circumstances, and was a fact that we all know, and I see no reason for debating it here.

MR. HALL. The member from Sacramento proposes to amend the resolution by substituting "ineligibility" for "resignation." I suggest, Mr. President, that if the word "ineligibility" is substituted for the word "resignation" it would seem to me, in the present state of the law, that the resolution would show upon its face that there is no vacancy whatever. If Mr. Morris, who is prima facia a delegate by the proclamation of the Governor, was, by reason of not being a citizen of the United States at the time of the election, ineligible, then it seems to me that there was no election. The election would be void, and he has not become an incumbent of the office. Never having become an incumbent of the office he has not resigned the office, of course. The provisions of the law in our Political Code provides for cases of this kind. It declares what shall be deemed a vacancy in office. It goes on to say that vacancies shall be created by the death of the incumbent, by the resignation of the incumbent, and so on. But in this case he has never become the incumbent of the office, because it appears this resignation was presented to the temporary President prior to the organization of the Convention. Hence he has never been admitted to a seat in this body. He has never become an incumbent of the office. Now, sir, the question has arisen before the Supreme Court of this State in a case in which I was personally connected, in a case decided not very long since, and I presume will be reported in the next volume. It was the case of Carver vs. Dunbar, and it is with respect to the office of County Superintendent of Public Schools in the county. Mr. Dunbar received the highest number of votes, Mr. Carver having received the next highest number. But Mr. Dunbar, at the time of election, held the office of Inspector of Customs of the United States, at the city of Stockton, and the question arose whether or not he was eligible. The Supreme Court decided he was not eligible, and the result of his ineligibility was that the election was void—entirely void. So, the election being void, Carver was not entitled to it, and the Board of Supervisors proceeded, under the direction of the Supreme Court, to declare a vacancy, but the declaration of the vacancy preceded the action of the Board. After the office was declared vacant the Board of Supervisors proceeded, as by law directed, to fill that vacancy. Now, sir, applying that principle here, it would seem, upon the facts before this Convention, that Mr. Morris was not eligible to the office at the time of the election.

MR. BARBOUR. What provision of the law prescribes that?

MR. HALL. A general provision of the Political Code.

MR. BARBOUR. What section?

MR. HALL. I cannot say what section; but there is a general provision in the Political Code, and a qualification which requires citizenship as one of those qualifications required to hold office by this law. That being a qualification necessary, and he not having that qualification, it would seem to me that he was ineligible, and I respectfully submit to the Convention that he never did become an incumbent of the office. He never was elected to the office. It was absolutely null and void. Again, sir, in this Convention, I may be permitted to say, inasmuch as we are on the question, that some action should be taken, if we do not want to cast a cloud upon the title of the successor of this gentleman. It would seem that his resignation has not come before this body. It was addressed to the President and members of this Convention. Now it would seem, sir, to me, that he ought to pursue the course prescribed by another general provision describing the manner in which resignations may be made. There is a general provision covering his case, requiring him to file his written resignation with the Secretary of State. There is such a general clause existing in our Codes touching and concerning subjects of this kind. That resignation has not gone to that officer yet, so far as I am informed. He has never been admitted, and his resignation is not legal. Again, sir, a vacancy may be worked out in another way. There is a provision in our Code to this effect: that an officer elected at the hands of the people, who fails to present himself and qualify within ten days after the performance of that act is required by the law, is equivalent to abandoning the office. But these ten days have not as yet expired, sir. It strikes me, Mr. President, in the state of the law, that there is no vacancy existing in that office, but the honorable gentleman from Sacramento has proposed an amendment to the resolution by which the word "ineligibility" is substituted for "resignation," thereby setting it as a matter of record that we have proceeded to fill a vacancy where no vacancy existed at all; for, if he was ineligible, I do maintain, according to the decision of the Supreme Court, the election was null and void, and there is no vacancy.

MR. MURPHY. I think a great deal of time is being wasted here on this amendment. It is a matter of no consequence whether he is eligible or not. There is a vacancy to fill, and I move we proceed to fill it, and on that I move the previous question.

MR. CAPLES. I will withdraw the amendment.

The motion to transpose the first and second clauses was lost.

The question recurring on the adoption of the resolution, it was adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. Nominations are now in order to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Thomas Morris.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I have the honor to name Judge J. R. Sharpstein as a candidate to fill the vacancy in the San Francisco delegation, caused by the resignation of Thomas Morris. I present this name in obedience to the request of the San Francisco delegation as their unanimous choice, and I present him as the choice of the majority of the electors of the City and County of San Francisco, whose will was expressed at the last election. The usual course in the other States upon the happening of these vacancies appears to have been to order a special election to fill the vacancy. That is the true democratic method, because thus the will of the people is ascertained. The Legislature of this State has seen fit to clothe this Convention with power to fill these vacancies, not, as I should be sorry to believe, to be exercised arbitrarily, and reckless of the popular will, but in strict accord therewith. I have here the figures, taken from the official record, to show the votes cast and the general majorities given for each candidate. The majority given for the candidate which I present, Judge Sharpstein, is thirteen thousand nine hundred and thirteen votes out of a total of twenty-seven thousand votes. Nearly fourteen thousand out of a total of twenty-seven thousand. That of his opponent, M. M. Estee, was eight thousand three hundred and ninety-two votes, leaving a plurality in favor of Judge Sharpstein of five thousand three hundred and eighty-seven votes. Some have objected to him as a candidate because he was on the ticket at large, while Mr. Morris was on the local ticket. I would remind the people that at large or at small, it is only a difference in names. They were both on the same platform, were voted for by the same men in San Francisco, they are to sit in the same Convention, and the objections as to the difference in names I deem unworthy of consideration. It has been said that I am, as it were, presenting the name of a man who has been repudiated by the people of the State for a seat in this Convention. It is not true, sir. It is for the people of San Francisco, and not for the people of the State, to name the men to fill the vacancy. I suppose it will be next claimed that it is a man's misfortune to be popular and strong at home, and that the true test of his qualifications is to be popular abroad and weak at home. The whole question is summed up in this inquiry: Would the same vote, the same majority, have been given to Judge Sharpstein on the local ticket as on the ticket at large? That is certainly a fair, sensible construction. The question as to the eligibility or ineligibility of Mr. Morris, whose vacant seat is to be filled——

MR. EDGERTON. I raise the point of order that this is not a legitimate subject for discussion.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken.

MR. BARBOUR. I say it is a proper matter for discussion, but I was proceeding to show, when interrupted, that we had taken the proper course in selecting a candidate. The San Francisco delegation, upon the first intimation that Morris was not a citizen of San Francisco, drew from him, after an examination, his resignation. We might have brought him here with his certificate of election under the proclamation of the Governor. We might have voted him here upon all the propositions of the organization of this Convention, as the gentlemen well know, and might perhaps have changed the results. We might have stood on the ground that his non-citizenship did not disqualify him from taking a seat on the floor of this Convention; his case would not have been passed upon until after the organization had been completed. But, sir, I say we stood not upon any of these technicalities. We said we went by the spirit of the law, and the spirit of the law was that this Convention should be composed of citizens of the United States. That the people voted for him thus under the impression that he was a citizen of the United States, and since it turns out that he was not, the delegation resolved not to stand by him, and we exacted a resignation from him. The delegation want the spirit of the law carried out, and hence they announced the candidate they intended to propose weeks ago in San Francisco. That name was before the people for their consideration, and I believe the universal verdict is that he ought to have the place. The people never intended by their votes to elect a non-citizen, but they did not intend to elect anybody else. Therefore, as a matter of right and justice, we demand that the seat be given to the man we present as the unanimous choice of the people of San Francisco.

Mr. CROSS. Mr. President: It is my privilege to second the nomination of Judge Sharpstein. I shall state the reasons why he is a candidate, and why he should receive the votes of this Convention. I will state them briefly. He is a man who is well able to fill this position. If the constituency which elected Mr. Morris could be heard here, they would speak in favor of Judge Sharpstein as representing their views. When they elected Mr. Morris from San Francisco they did so because he was a representative of their views. But when Mr. Morris proves to have been ineligible, by reason of not being a citizen, then it becomes a proper question whether it is not our duty as well as our privilege, to respect that sentiment. It becomes a question whether the man who is chosen to fill this position should not be a man who is able to represent the sentiments of the people of the particular locality. We claim that the Workingmen's party of San Francisco and of the State has been greatly misunderstood. That some of the gentlemen on this floor have a wrong impression in regard to the principles and purposes of the Workingmen's party.

Mr. BARNES. I call the gentleman to order. He is not speaking to the question.

Mr. CROSS. I hold that it is germane to the question, and I will come to the bearing of it. Now, to the delegates in this Convention, let me say that it is not merely for the interest of the Workingmen's party that Judge Sharpstein should hold this position, for really the results cannot be changed by Judge Sharpstein's vote, for we stand fifty-one to one hundred; but since we have, unfortunately, very few in our delegation who are able to present before this body, in a clear and plain manner, the real sentiments of the Workingmen's Party of California; and since there is standing back of Judge Sharpstein a strong public sentiment; and since that public sentiment is now misunderstood in this body; and since this candidate is a man of the kind who will be able to bring before this body, in its true light, the real views of the party, thus enabling any member of this Convention to be properly informed as to their wishes, and intentions, and purposes, before they vote—for these reasons, I say, Judge Sharpstein is the proper man for this place. He is not a Communist; he is not a Socialist; he is a man who will be able to represent the views and sentiments of this party—the Workingmen's Party, as it is called—in this Convention, in such a way that this Convention, whenever it acts upon any of the propositions which the party proposes, they will be able to know what the wish is, and know the true sentiments of the people who stand back of him. When this sentiment is clearly expressed, as Judge Sharpstein can express it, then this Convention will have that information as to the intentions and purposes of the party which will enable them to vote intelligently upon all propositions which shall be presented here. Let me say, farther, that the Workingmen's Party not only claim their right to be thus represented, but they concede the same right to the Non-Partisans, and are ready to vote for their nominee upon the same principle. The people elected Mr. Haight to represent them and their particular views, and the same people now have the right to have a man elected who will carry out those views, and faithfully represent their sentiments on the floor of this Convention. So, Mr. President, with regard to the other case; the Workingmen's Party proposes to vote for a man who will represent San Francisco. We place this case upon the same principle. Judge Sharpstein would be the choice of that people. He would be able to represent the views of the Workingmen's Party in such a way that it could not be misunderstood.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: It is true, as the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, has said, that it was determined by the local delegates from the City and County of San Francisco to insist that they and they alone had the right to be heard in this Convention, and were crowned with some immortal principle of representation that should enable them to stand here and demand from the Convention its support for Mr. Sharpstein.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not speaking to the question concerning the nominations we have made.

The PRESIDENT. The point of order is overruled; the gentleman will proceed.

Mr. BARNES. This is that same spirit of intolerance and self-assertion which has found expression sundry times upon this floor; which found expression when the delegate who named the gentleman, addressed the Governor of this State, when presiding over this Convention, in a manner to which I will not refer, but which every gentleman on this floor remembers; a spirit which found expression in the resolution which proposed, in effect, to give the power to appoint a delegate to this Convention to one portion of the delegates from the City and County of San Francisco. Now, sir, I contend—and I think the proposition is unanswerable—that if the law calling this Convention together had designed to bestow upon the delegation from San Francisco the absolute and indefeasible right to name the candidate to fill the vacancy created upon the local ticket, it would have said so. We are not to go outside of the law; we are not to stand here and argue it upon any vague or general principle, or assumed vague and general principle, that finds expression in the speech made by the gentleman who declared that wherever or whenever he heard anything coming from what, in his own expressive language, he called the corporations' jugglers or fuglers, he would vote against it. I suppose he went upon the principle which actuates gentlemen from the happy land from which he comes, at Donnybrook Fair, "Whenever you see a head hit it." I submit that it is unfair for the gentlemen from San Francisco to be forever arrogating all virtue to themselves, and denouncing in unmeasured terms everybody else. I submit that the proof of work is in the work itself. And in rising to propose a gentleman for this place I desire once for all to enter my protest against the spirit manifested here by my colleagues from San Francisco on the local ticket. I say it is unworthy of them, and unworthy of the cause which they represent. Now, sir, the proposition seems to be that one portion of the delegation from San Francisco has the sole right to be heard on this floor. There are eight gentlemen here from San Francisco, and though voted for all over the State, are equally the representatives of the people of the First Congressional District—gentlemen at least as distinguished as those who have made this demand. We have a right to be heard. We have a right to stand upon the law and to say that if this statute had intended that the local ticket in San Francisco should nominate and fill vacancies when occurring, the statute would have expressed it so. Mr. President, it does not belong to them; it belongs to you all, gentlemen. It is for you to say who shall fill these vacancies. It belongs to no locality. No man has a right to claim it. No man who ran on the ticket at large and was defeated has the right to say that because he got a plurality of votes in one portion of the State it belongs to him by sovereign right, and that the right to reign and rule, like the sacred oil poured upon the heads of kings, has made his claims indefeasible. The statute says the Convention shall determine that subject, and the members of this body, sitting in calm deliberation, have a right to look beyond the results of the upheaval that occurred in San Francisco—or, as it has been expressed, the wail of universal discontent—and select the best man. As to selecting a man for this vacancy, the Convention has a right to go to Shasta or San Bernardino. The Convention has the right, if it can obtain the services of some able, distinguished man—some one whose wisdom, experience, and ability would guide us through the difficulty—to go to San Bernardino and bring him here. If it is to be determined upon by the number of votes, then I contend, without discussing the question whether Morris was eligible or not, we have the right to present some proper person coming from San Francisco for that position. On the local ticket there was a vacancy. The gentleman claims credit for not perpetrating a fraud—credit for not perpetrating a political crime—and for demanding the resignation of a man who had been standing on bogus naturalization papers. That is not the point. The question is, who is the best man? There was no election. That is clear enough. Judge Sharpstein was not standing upon the local issues of San Francisco. As far as appears the Workingmen didn't want him as a representative at all. He was put on the ticket at large, and it is a matter of political history, pretty well understood from the outset, that the men who were put on the ticket at large were put there for the purpose of giving them something in the shape of a complimentary testimonial, but it was never intended, expected, or anticipated that they would be elected. If local votes on local candidates is to be the test, I hold in my hand a certificate of Louis Kaplan, Registrar of Voters, saying that R. H. Lloyd received the largest number of votes after Mr. Morris. As a legal proposition it may be laid down that when a candidate was voted for, at the time ineligible, the vote was thrown away, and the man having the next highest vote was entitled to the place. I don't base it on any such grounds. I am a representative at large, and a representative of a very large voice of San Francisco, so far as personal votes are concerned, and, as a representative from San Francisco, I claim that Mr. Lloyd is entitled to the suffrage of this Convention. I ask this Convention to vote for him, because I know him. I also know Judge Sharpstein. I knew his history before he came to the State. I know it now. I knew him as a Democrat. I knew him again as a red-hot Republican, when Booth came to the surface. I knew him as the Judge of the Twelfth District Court, and I know that when he came up for reëlection he was defeated.

Mr. DOWLING. I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not speaking to the question before the House.

The PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken. The Chair understands that the gentleman is speaking to the precise point.

Mr. CROSS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. Mr. Barnes objected to Mr. Barbour speaking upon this very same branch of the question, and the Chair held that Mr. Barbour was out of order when he was speaking to the eligibility of Mr. Morris.

The PRESIDENT. I don't recollect that there was any such ruling.

Mr. BARNES. My friend is mistaken about that, as he generally is. Now, Mr. President, they claim this nomination upon the ground that Judge Sharpstein has the unanimous indorsement of the people of San Francisco. I deny it. The people of San Francisco know, and every lawyer knows, that while on the bench in San Francisco, he gave universal dissatisfaction. He was caught up like a chip upon the surface of this great wave of popular discontent, and was put upon the ticket at large, where he had no possible hope of being elected. Now the only time I know when the people of San Francisco had any opportunity to express their approval of him was in the judicial canvass. I have no charges to make, but every lawyer knows that he gave universal dissatisfaction. The gentleman speaks about his being the representative of the Workingmen's party. Now, the most remarkable decision that I ever knew Judge Sharpstein to make was made in the interest of the Spring Valley Water Company, and the Supreme Court reversed his decision from the bench. That is his record upon the subject of corporations. He had ridden the Democrats, he had ridden Booth, and now he jumps on top of the Workingmen's movement. For these reasons, if there was no other candidate here, I would not vote for him. So far as his record is concerned, he has favored those corporate monopolies of which complaint is made; and right here I want to say one word on that subject. The gentleman alluded to the corporation bugler, against whom he was going to vote. When we shall have finished the work of this Convention I think it will be apparent who are the men about whose necks the corporation collar stands. It is not upon mine, and I hope the gentleman will not repeat what he has said this morning. I believe in the right of the State to control every corporation in it. It has the right and should have the power, and such a provision should be put in this Constitution that shall hold them with a grasp of iron, so that never again in this State shall there be any unjust discriminations, any outrage or wrong inflicted upon persons or communities from the day this Constitution takes its place as the organic law of the State, until time shall be no more. [Applause.] I am not going to be put down as a corporation bugler. The charge is not correct, as the result will eventually prove. Mr. Lloyd has been a resident of San Francisco since boyhood. He was an errand boy in the office of Sharp & McDougall, and did the work of the office from day to day, and month to month, and year to year, and educated and trained himself. No university has put its degree upon his head, but he has honest manhood and self-culture, and is as good and careful a lawyer as there is in San Francisco. He has the approval of every lawyer who ever knew him. No human being can say a word against him. If you take the best man, I know he will be elected. He was a candidate on the Non-Partisan ticket, and had the support of all classes of men, Germans, French, and Americans—thank God there are a few left. [Applause.] Mr. Lloyd has always had their sanction and indorsement. No man can lay charges at his door, and I commend him to you, gentlemen of the Non-Partisan party. And I ask you whether you are going to be dictated to and controlled because the representatives from San Francisco represent one political party, or whether you will in your consciences and on your oaths select the man who shall seem to be the best qualified for the place? I know of no indorsement that could be given higher than to Mr. Lloyd. Nothing better could be said of him than that he is an honest man, a self-educated and trained lawyer, of thorough good sense, of perfect capacity, of perfect honesty, and even in this time he ran far ahead of the Non-Partisan ticket, and was the next in order to the gentleman whose seat has been relinquished. I ask you, gentlemen of the Non-Partisan party, to give him your suffrages, that you will not entertain the idea that because there is a large delegation here from San Francisco, that the minority from that city and county have no right to be heard. The law puts the power in your hands; that if it had designed to give it to the gentlemen on the other side of the House, it would have said that the vacancy should have been filled by the gentlemen from that locality. I think it is fair and just to take the best men. I know both candidates, and I think there is not a delegate on the ticket at large who does not know both. There is no comparison between the fitness of the two. It is altogether and in every way in favor of Mr. Lloyd, and I hope he will be elected.

MR. BROWN, of Tulare. Mr. President: I think in so important a matter as this there should be a great deal of latitude given to members who make nominations, so that the character and standing of the gentlemen presented before this body may be known, so that we may be able to vote intelligently. I rise before you to present before this body the name of a gentleman that you all know, and with whose family you are all well acquainted; it is a family whose name is connected with the early history of California, and for such every old settler in this State, at least, must have some degree of respect. I refer to Major José R. Pico as a representative native Californian.

MR. BARNES. I would inquire if Mr. Pico was not also a candidate as delegate at large on the Workingmen's ticket?

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Pico was repudiated by the delegation. [Applause.]

MR. BROWN. I will proceed further. I know that party sentiments are in conflict here. Men are in favor of certain men. It is not for me to say to you whether or not this feeling runs so high as to endanger justice and right. That is a matter for this body to take into consideration. As range has been given to some extent, I presume it will not be out of the way for me to refer to some extent to the Pico family and their ancestors. Now, I don't intend to take up as much time as has already been taken up here. I shall be brief in my remarks; and if I am not too frequently interrupted, shall soon bring my remarks to a close. Mr. Pico's father was in the Constitutional Convention—that great Convention which brought forth the Constitution under which we have been living for so many years. He took a prominent part in the proceedings of that body, and all of us remember his name with some degree of reverence. We all remember him as a philanthropic man, whose donations to the State mark him as a liberal as well as a wealthy man and most worthy citizen, one to be admired and loved by every person. Now, for instance, we find that he had donated to this State a site for a State Capitol, in San José. We find that this illustrious man, almost forgotten in the heat and strife of political contests, presented the grounds for the State Prison at San Quentin. Is this all he has done? Had he stopped at that he would have been worthy the honor of being a member of this Constitutional Convention; but he went farther, and gave to this State the grounds for the Insane Asylum at Stockton. This has been the manner of this illustrious man from that time down. Here, to the Capitol of this State, he gave stone worth five hundred dollars. Now, these are acts which show the intentions and good feelings of the man. Now we have before us Major José R. Pico. He is a gentleman of refinement and a scholar. I shall not advert to the lands given by this gentleman to the State, which lands are now worth one thousand dollars an acre. Mr. President, I would say that it is a matter of some consequence that the members of this Convention take into consideration the claims of this gentleman. I believe he is the only man of that race, that once possessed this whole country, that is on hand here, and I believe none of the representative Californians are here in this House; and I would state that the Spanish and Mexican population amounts to twenty-three thousand. They are in that respect without representation; and I think they should be allowed a representative on this floor. Now, it does appear to me that in all justice and fair dealing, that a family that has done so much for this State, so much for the welfare of this State, should be recognized, and that one of the family at least should occupy a position upon this floor in the councils of the State. It seems to me to be reasonable that we should consider the matter in this light. I am fully convinced that in this case it is proper that we should give this office to this honorable gentleman. He is a gentleman of refinement. He is a gentleman of ability and learning. His name is now before you, and I hope his claims may be fairly considered.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I would not again trespass upon the time of the Convention, but I should feel myself recreant to my trust if I did not rise to defend the name of the candidate presented by me. In presenting my candidate, sir, I never felt it incumbent upon me to assail the candidates of any other party. The gentleman I have named for this position has been attacked. It is an outrage upon the delegates here, and upon the candidate himself, who is not here. He has stayed at home, tending to his business, relying on his friends here. The other has been here and his friends have been digging into the records and laboring to find some way by which his repudiation by the people of San Francisco could be transformed into an indorsement. Not finding that, he has gone back home and left the gentlemen here to assail our candidate here by making statements to this Convention which we are not prepared to deny and which we had no reason to anticipate. How does it appear to this Convention? Certainly it is unjust. It is disgraceful, and I stand upon that statement. Judge Sharpstein is known, and respected and honored by the people of San Francisco, and that ought to be enough. The vote shows it. The vote is a complete refutation of the statements made by the gentleman from San Francisco, and I state now to him that it would have been in far better taste to have allowed that statement to have come from somebody who could bring a better indorsement than that.

Now I have a word to say, and I did not intend to have said it, and should not have said it, but the gentleman's own candidate, I have no doubt, is an attorney for the Spring Valley Water Company to-day. He is a partner and relation—a son-in-law—of Senator Sharon, and they have all that business, and know all about the monopolies of the deepest and blackest dye. I don't wish to go into his character, or to know anything about it; I don't care anything about it, or to make any statement here in regard to this matter, and if the gentleman had left our candidate alone, I would never have said anything about it. I admire his spunk, but it was not necessary for him to assail the absent.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: We don't make this nomination in the spirit of intolerance. We don't make this nomination for the purpose of forcing upon this Convention the person of Judge Sharpstein, nor the purpose of any other man. If we did come here with any such object it would be ridiculous and absurd in the extreme. We come here simply naming this man. Simply presenting the claims of Judge Sharpstein for your consideration, nothing further. We don't deny the right of this Convention to choose a man to fill this vacancy, one that they believe to be the best qualified and the most proper person for the place. But we do come here presenting the name of Judge Sharpstein, not in any partisan spirit, but because he is a gentleman who has the indorsement of a majority of the voters of the City and County of San Francisco. Judge Sharpstein received thirteen thousand nine hundred and thirteen votes in the last campaign. Mr. Lloyd received eight thousand five hundred and twenty-six votes. Judge Sharpstein has a majority over Lloyd of five thousand three hundred and eighty-seven votes. The total vote cast in the City and County of San Francisco was about twenty-seven thousand, and Judge Sharpstein has received, not a plurality vote, but he has received a majority, an absolute, positive majority. We come here appealing to you, and saying to you that we recognize these grand principles which underlie this system of government, which is that the will of the people must be respected; that the people are the source of all power, and that when they indicate through the medium of the ballot their choice, their choice ought to be respected. Gentlemen, we don't come here saying to you that you must take Judge Sharpstein. We don't desire to be understood that we are attempting to force any solitary man upon you, for that would be an absurdity. We simply present the claims of this gentleman, saying that he received five thousand three hundred and eighty-seven more votes than were received by the other candidate, Mr. Lloyd. I have nothing, gentlemen, to say against the character or reputation of Mr. Lloyd. Nothing at all. Absolutely nothing. That is a matter for your consideration and inquiry. Nor do we come here presenting the name of any one who would be unfit to sit in this Convention along with us. Nor do I think Col. Barnes would present any one here who was not qualified and worthy to sit here. I urge nothing against the candidate he has presented. The San Francisco delegation urges nothing against him. But we do say that Judge Sharpstein is the choice of the people of San Francisco, and the man who has received a majority of all the votes cast should be chosen. With all due deference to the gentleman from San Francisco, Col. Barnes, I do say that the express indorsement of the people of San Francisco is better than the charges that the gentleman has brought against Judge Sharpstein, and we ask that Judge Sharpstein be elected to fill this vacancy. I ask it as a matter of justice. We appeal to you, representing the majority of the people of San Francisco; and, gentlemen, the vote here will determine whether we respect the voice of the people as the voice of God, or whether we expect to vote from a partisan spirit in this campaign. I am free to say that if Mr. Lloyd had received the indorsement of the people of San Francisco, as Judge Sharpstein has received that indorsement, I should vote for Mr. Lloyd. Though I was elected on a partisan ticket, I am prepared to vote for your choice from the County of Merced, as I am prepared to vote for your choice in the other case, because these vacancies belong to you. You received an express indorsement of the people in that part of the country, and we respect and honor that indorsement, and we ask you, as a matter of simple justice, as a matter of right, involving the democratic principle upon which our system of government is based, that Judge Sharpstein receive your indorsement.

Mr. WINANS. Mr. President: I do not intend to participate in any of the altercations or eulogies of this debate. But when one member says that Judge Sharpstein is the choice of the people, meaning the people of San Francisco, he himself forgets to tell you that the voice of the people of San Francisco has no expression on the floor of this Convention. The old political parties were divided and split among themselves. The result was brought about by unhappy dissensions among the old parties. The present local delegation does not represent a majority of the voters of San Francisco. We divided among ourselves and fell a victim to our own dissensions. Had it not been so this local delegation would never have been here. They do not by any means represent the majority of the people of San Francisco.

Mr. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I would take great pleasure in supporting Mr. Pico, the nominee of the gentleman from Tulare, if I could do so with propriety and safety. I am a man of exceeding timidity, and am apprehensive that I should be exposed to considerable personal danger from Mr. Pico, were he a member of this Convention. In his canvass, Mr. Pico declared his intention to bring his lasso here, and with it, subject all the thieves and rascals in the State and Convention to the discipline of that instrument. As he includes me in his inculpatory terms, I think I have a right to increase my chances for security by excluding him, if possible, from this Convention. In republican governments, there seems to be a propriety in not bestowing too much honor upon one family. Those familiar with the public life and conduct of Pio Pico will, I think, all agree that he has given sufficient distinction to his family, at least for this generation. It is said, however, that Mr. Pico gave lands to the State for the purposes of our State Prison, and that we owe him some return for such generosity. I am quite familiar with the State title to its prison property. The title to the lands in question never was in any of the Pico family, and the State paid to its grantor all such land was worth.

The nomination of Judge Sharpstein is of somewhat different character. I have known this gentleman for twenty-six years. In eighteen hundred and fifty-two, he was in the State Senate of Wisconsin, while I was Speaker of the Assembly. He was subsequently District Attorney of the United States. I have known him since his residence in San Francisco. First a Democrat, he became a Republican, when that party became dominant, and he has returned to his wallowing at the earliest opportunity. He was assailed for malpractice in Wisconsin, as shown by its law reports, though it is but fair to say that it is claimed his conduct was fully explained at the time he was appointed Judge by Governor Booth. Nothing that I have seen or heard, however, has created with me confidence in him. Leaving doubtful objections, there are some which put him beyond the pale of favorable consideration. After the termination of his appointment, the people preferred another candidate for Judge. Neglected by both Democrats and Republicans, Judge Sharpstein turned with great celerity to the sand lots. In a speech made on that classic ground, in language somewhat different in form from the coarseness of Kearney, though the same in virulence, he attributed to the Government of this State, and the influences controlling our people, to the Executive, to the Judiciary, and to the profession of which he was a member, every wickedness and villainy. These charges and assertions were unaccompanied by any explanation or specification; they were simply examples of vindictive vituperation. This violent and vile language was used by this man (long engaged in judicial business), and was uttered to a mob, utterly incapable of reason, already heated to the point of threatening the lives and property of quiet men and good citizens, and was apparently used for the sole purpose of still further exciting the mob to riot, violence, and bloodshed. Every gentleman must use his own judgment as to these nominations; mine forbids me to vote for a man who casts dishonor upon himself, his profession, and the institutions created for the purpose of securing the public peace. It is said we ought not to attack Judge Sharpstein in his absence. It is difficult, at least for me, to see a more proper time and place to investigate the character and claims of a candidate for office than the time when, and the place where, they are submitted to, and are to be acted upon, by those who have the power of election or refusal. It seems to me that a man who makes such assaults upon the character and conduct of those occupying the highest official positions in the State, and upon the whole legal profession, to a mob where an attempt at defense would be met by howling insult, if not with personal assault, is a very poor case to challenge decent and quiet discussion here. I beg to suggest to the gentlemen from San Francisco that they instruct their candidate, that if he is to give blows, he might expect blows in return, and that they earnestly endeavor to reform the sand lots, of which they are the fruit, so as to entitle them to the courteous treatment they claim, and which they have hitherto refused to all with whom they have disagreed.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President: I don't rise, sir, for the purpose of seconding the nomination of any of the gentlemen who have been placed in nomination here. Neither do I intend to make a lengthy speech, but simply to give to the delegates in this Convention the reasons for the vote which I intend to cast. I occupy a position probably different from most of the members on this floor, having been elected as an Independent. Not having received my nomination from any party, whether Non-Partisan, Democratic, or Republican, or Workingmen, but being supported by the great majority of the district which I have the honor to represent here. Now, sir, I claim it to be the duty of the members on this floor to throw aside all partisan prejudice and vote according to the dictates and will of the majority. The question presented here for our consideration at the present time, is to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Thomas Morris, of San Francisco. The question whether he was eligible or not does not enter into the contest at the present time. I claim, sir, that the seat should be filled by a representative of the same constituency which he represents. I don't claim that any body of men upon the floor of this house—the Workingmen—have the right exclusively to name the man to fill this position, but I do claim that the wishes of these gentlemen should be respected. I understand that the people of San Francisco, at the last election, indorsed the principles and the platform upon which this man Thomas Morris was elected, and I intend, as far as I am concerned, to act independently of all parties, and cast my vote for Sharpstein. [Great applause on the Workingmen's side.]

Mr. JOYCE. Mr. President: I rise to indorse the nomination of Judge Sharpstein. I don't intend to occupy your attention for any long length of time, by any long speeches. It is a well known fact that this famous sand lot that the gentleman speaks about is the declared enemy of all forms of monopolies, bank rings, railroad monopolies, land monopolies. [Applause.] That is the reason, Mr. President, that these men are not going to sit still and allow the name of Judge Sharpstein to come up without a fight. That is the reason they bring it up.

Mr. SMITH, of Kern. Mr. President: I do not rise for the purpose of seconding any nomination, but for the purpose of explaining my vote. I was elected as a Non-Partisan delegate at large, and I deem it necessary for me to explain the vote I shall cast for Sharpstein. I believe that this Convention has the legal right to choose any man it sees fit to fill this vacancy, but I do not believe the Convention has the moral right to ignore the expressed will of the majority of the voters of San Francisco. I believe that I have never met Judge Sharpstein. I know I do not know him personally. I am personally acquainted with the other gentleman nominated here, and I have all confidence in him, and all respect for him. If I but consulted my own wishes and opinions in this matter, I would cast my vote for the other gentleman; but respecting the will of the majority of the voters of San Francisco, I shall cast my vote for Sharpstein. [Applause.]

Mr. HAGER. Mr. President: I rise, sir, to place in nomination another candidate for this position, and in performing this pleasant duty I have nothing to say regarding the other gentlemen who have been named here. I have known Judge Sharpstein, not intimately, and I have nothing to say against him, for I know nothing of my own knowledge. As to Mr. Lloyd, I have known him for twenty-five years, as a bright student at law. But after the eulogy pronounced upon him by Colonel Barnes, it would be unbecoming of me to say one word against him; on the contrary, I rather feel proud of him. But I desire to place another candidate before the Convention, and inasmuch as there is a lack of harmony among the San Francisco delegation, I am in hopes that I can pour oil on the troubled waters by presenting a man against whose character and qualifications nothing can be urged, as far as I know. I present the name of J. C. Burch, a gentleman who has been honored by the people with a seat in the Legislature of this State, and a position in the Congress of the United States; a gentleman who was appointed by Governor Haight a member of the Code Commission, which position he filled with peculiar ability. He is particularly well qualified for the duties which he will be required to perform if elected to a seat in this body. I am not inclined to indulge in words of praise, or to pass any eulogy upon Judge Burch, but his name is associated with the early political history of the State. It has been said—I have heard it reported—that Judge Burch sought a nomination in the Non-Partisan Convention in San Francisco. He informs me that such is not the fact. He did not seek the nomination of the Non-Partisan Convention; did not seek the nomination of any Convention. He was placed upon one of the local tickets—the ticket of the party to which he belongs—and defeated. But he did not seek that or any other nomination.

Mr. TINNIN. Mr. President: Nothing short of a public duty would induce me to inflict a speech upon this Convention, for I am satisfied that they have been sufficiently talked to. But I shall claim a few moments indulgence to state the reasons why I second the nomination, and will support Mr. Burch for the position to which he has been nominated. I have known the gentleman, and been almost constantly associated with him, for twenty-six years in this State. I knew him first as County Clerk of Trinity County; afterwards as District Attorney of the same county; afterwards as a member of the Assembly, then as a member of Congress from the northern part of the State, and afterwards as a member of the Code Commission, which office he filled for about four years. In all these positions in which he has been intrusted, he discharged his duties honestly and faithfully, and with marked ability; and I am satisfied that from his long experience and long association with the people of this State, he will fully comprehend what is wanted in the organic law. I think in the discharge of that arduous duty he will give satisfaction to the people of this State.

Mr. HEISKELL. Mr. President: It gives me great pleasure to second the nomination of Mr. Burch. He is a life-long Democrat, and has held high and responsible positions, and has filled them with ability. He does not come here with long petitions in his behalf, but his spotless record is his shield, and on that he rests.

Mr. HARVEY. Mr. President: It may seem preposterous, in view of all that has been said, and the eloquence that has been expended in behalf of the several candidates, for me to name another gentleman for the position of delegate to fill this vacancy. But I shall do so, nevertheless. I have the honor and the pleasure to nominate for this position Mr. Smith B. Thompson, of San Francisco; and in placing this gentleman in nomination, with all due deference to the legal gentlemen on this floor, allow me to say that the legal fraternity is well enough represented, and in nominating Mr. Thompson I will say that he is a carpenter by occupation, and is known as such throughout the City of San Francisco; and I will say further, that he has received the indorsement of a large number of the business men of San Francisco, as well as of members of the Bar; and in connection with his occupation I will state that I believe him to be a true working man, and he is in all respects well qualified to fill the position. It is an old saying, but a true one, that too many cooks spoil the broth. I intend no reflection upon the legal fraternity here, but as long as they are so ably represented, and as their marks will appear so frequently in the Constitution, let us have a carpenter to plane down these little technicalities.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. EDGERTON. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That when the Convention adjourns it will be until Monday next at half-past twelve A. M.

MR. WHITE. I move to amend that it be until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the resolution of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton.

MR. McCALLUM. The question is on the shortest time—on the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. According to the opinion of the Chair the question is on the adoption of the resolution. The motion of the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, is a separate and distinct motion.

MR. EDGERTON. The question is on the longest time first. By a special rule here in the California Legislature it is the shortest time, but not so in general parliamentary law.

The ayes and noes were demanded, and the resolution lost by the following vote:

Weller,

MR. HILBORN. I move that we do now adjourn until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock. On this I demand the ayes and noes.

MR. WHITE. I move as an amendment, that when the Convention adjourns to-day it be to meet to-morrow at ten o'clock A. M.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. I move as an amendment, to adjourn until eight o'clock this evening.

MR. McCALLUM. A motion to adjourn now cannot be coupled with a motion which fixes the time. It must be fixed first before we adjourn.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, moves that when this Convention adjourns it adjourn to meet to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

The motion prevailed.

At five o'clock and thirty minutes P. M., on motion of Mr. Hilborn, the Convention adjourned.

EIGHTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Saturday, October 5th, 1878.

The Convention reassembled at ten o'clock A. M., pursuant to adjournment, President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

One day's leave of absence was granted to Messrs. Lewis and Glascock, and leave of absence during the morning session was granted to Mr. Blackmer.

The Journal of yesterday was read.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. STEDMAN. I notice that we have never had a full Journal read. Now, it is evident to the minds of all this Convention, and there was conclusive proof yesterday, that mistakes will occur, and that they will disagree. I submit that it is proper, when the ayes and noes are called, that they should be read the following morning for correction. I understand that it is customary in all legislative bodies to do so. I would call for the full reading of the Journal.

THE PRESIDENT. If the Convention desires to have the ballots read over, the Secretary will read.

MR. ROLFE. I move that the further reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Carried.

PRINTING OF THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the daily Journal of this Convention be printed by the State Printing Office, and that five copies of the previous day's proceedings be placed upon each member's desk in the Assembly Chamber each morning during the session of the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It seems to be a proper thing, in view of the fact that it would show each member exactly how the ayes and noes are recorded on the previous day's Journal. He can take up the printed Journal that is upon his desk, and he can examine the previous day's proceedings, and if there is any errors in those proceedings he can call attention to the fact, and he can have it corrected. Of course the daily Journal we expect to have printed, and it is proper that it be printed and placed upon our desks the succeeding morning after the proceedings are taken. I believe that has been the regular course in the Senate and the Assembly.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: In view of the fact that the people of this State are groaning under the burden of taxation, and that the mover of the resolution, as well as myself, is here for the purpose of preventing any public expenditure of any form or description, whether necessary or otherwise, I move that the resolution offered by my friend from San Francisco be referred to the Committee on Expenditures and Contingent Expenses, to ascertain and report the probable cost of the extravagance proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco. [Laughter and applause.]

MR. REYNOLDS. My facetious friend from San Francisco has talked away five dollars worth of time upon that point. Perhaps I will exceed him in expense to the State. The Act calling this Convention provides that the Convention shall keep a Journal, and print it. Now there are two objects in printing the Journal. One is, that it may be kept for the daily use of the members; the other is, for preservation. Now we do not incur any additional expense if we cause the Journal to be printed daily, and the proof-sheets laid on the desks of the members, to show what were the proceedings of the previous day. Afterwards the forms will be made up and a sufficient number—whatever number the Convention orders—will be struck off, and, at the end, bound for preservation. When the Secretary reads the Journal there at the desk in the morning, half of the members in this hall cannot understand a quarter of what is read. The Journal is read, and now and then a member moves to correct something, but two thirds of the members are unable to hear half that is read, and so the matter goes over and we know nothing about what is in the Journal. At my desk I could not hear a dozen words of the Journal read this morning. I am unfavorably situated, as compared to some others, it is true. If we are going to print the Journal at all, we may just as well have it printed now, and have the proof-sheets laid upon our desks every morning for our use. So far as the expense is concerned, I am sorry that the dignified gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barnes, should waste time in raising such a question as that.

MR. NOEL. I am opposed to the resolution for this reason: when we have appointed an official reporter, the object of the resolution will be fully attained without any additional expense to the people of the State.

MR. EDGERTON. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, is in error when he says that the law provides for the printing of this Journal. Section six provides that "a Journal of the proceedings of the said Convention shall be kept, and shall, at the final adjournment thereof, be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and the Constitution agreed to by the Convention shall be recorded in his office." I know, sir, by experience as a member of the Legislature, that very great convenience has ensued from having a resolution adopted similar to this, and I suppose that this Convention will certainly order this Journal to be printed, or preserved in some form, and deposited in the State Library. I am in favor of the resolution, except in this particular: I do not see what necessity there is for five copies of the Journal to each member. I would like to hear from the gentleman why five copies should be printed.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I merely inserted the word five copies, and I am perfectly willing that if the Convention sees proper that two copies should be substituted for five copies. As the gentleman from Sacramento has very aptly said, this Journal, when printed and preserved by us, can be used as a matter of reference. We can turn back and see what has been done. Unless we have a Journal of this character we cannot see what resolutions have been offered here nor what business has been done. This does not necessitate the appointment of a Phonographic Reporter. It is merely the printing of the minutes that are read here every morning, and it seems to me a matter of absolute necessity that we should have a memorandum of the proceedings. It will be impossible to retain in our memory everything that has taken place here. If we have a printed Journal it shows us clearly what motions and what resolutions have been made, voted down, lost, or carried. I have examined the proceedings of a number of the Constitutional Conventions that have been held in this country during the last forty years, and in every one of them have Journals of this character been preserved and printed. Even those Conventions that have had their debates and proceedings printed in full, have also, in addition thereto, kept a Journal which has been printed and placed upon the members' tables in the morning. And, gentlemen, it is a matter of absolute economy and a matter of necessity, and I hope that the motion will prevail, and that we will have the benefit of a printed Journal.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection to the amendment making it two copies, instead of five, it will be so amended.

MR. EDGERTON. I accept the amendment. I only rise to say that if any gentleman votes upon the theory that a Journal is to be published—and I suppose every gentleman is in favor of preserving the proceedings in some authentic form—that as to cost, the Journals can be laid on our tables every morning, with but little additional cost. The only additional cost will be the paper involved, and a little ink. That is all there is of it.

MR. TINNIN. I desire to sustain the resolution offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher. The same matter was brought forward in the State Senate two years ago. Members could find the proceedings of the day before on their desks, and see whether any mistakes had been made in the proceedings of the day before. Now, so far as the number of copies are concerned, I say that there can be no necessity for the amendment, for the reason that five copies will cost little more than two copies. I am sorry that the gentleman accepted the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Colonel Barnes, to refer the matter to the Committee on Expenditures and Contingent Expenses.

MR. EDGERTON. I hope that will be voted down.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This Act, sir, does not require this Journal shall be printed; that is a mistake, so far as my investigation goes. In looking at it there is no requirement in the Act for the printing of this Journal. If my friend can find any such provision I should like to have it pointed out. It says that a Journal shall be kept and certified by the proper officers of the Convention, and then filed in the Secretary of State's office, and I presume some future Legislature would have it printed if the Constitution should be adopted. At all events it will be there as a memorandum in case any person wants to refer to it. I am not very tenacious whether this Journal is printed or not; but I think that it is very important that reference should be made to a committee to ascertain what shall be printed in that Journal. In the course of time various propositions will come before this Convention, embodying the points which it is desired to incorporate in the new Constitution. They will come forward in the shape of resolutions, and all these propositions would have to be printed in the Journal. At the same time, under the rule for printing, they will have to be printed in another form for the use of the members. Therefore I think it is very important to send it to a committee, who shall judge what shall be printed, excluding all propositions that may be offered as amendments to the Constitution and that must necessarily be printed by themselves; otherwise we will have a volume of perhaps two hundred pages every morning.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I think the Journal should be printed, but I would not favor more than two copies. I think two copies would be sufficient. I agree with my friend Colonel Barnes that the resolution should be referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I wish to say, in explanation of my motion, that I quite agree with my friend from San Francisco that something of the kind should be done, and the reason I moved to refer to the committee is because I think that anything that involves an expenditure of money ought to be based upon an examination, and as it does not hurt anybody to-day, I think it ought to go there. That is all.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I understand that this rule would require an additional clerk.

THE PRESIDENT. No additional clerk would be required. The question is on the motion to refer to the Committee on Expenditures, with instructions to examine into and report the probable cost.

The motion to refer prevailed.

PHONOGRAPHIC REPORTERS.

MR. NOEL. Mr. President: I offer a resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the President, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report to the Convention, at its assembling on Monday next, a resolution for its consideration, defining the duties of the official reporter of the proceedings and debates of the Convention, and fixing definitely his compensation.

MR. NOEL. Mr. President: We have expended a very considerable portion of time here wrangling over this subject and in idle debate, and nothing has been accomplished. The object of the resolution is simply to have the matter presented to the Convention in such a shape that we can act upon it definitely, and that without delay.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I think this Convention has indicated its views very clearly on this proposition. I therefore move to lay the resolution on the table.

The resolution was laid on the table.

THE CONSTITUTIONS.

MR. HOLMES presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the State Printer be instructed to print five hundred copies of the present State Constitution, with the law passed by the last Legislature calling this Convention, and that each member be furnished with two copies.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: There has already been laid upon the desks of the members, and I presume of the gentleman who offers the resolution, a very handsomely gotten up copy of the present Constitution of the State of California, interlined with blank leaves for the purpose of annotation, and I hardly think we require another. More than that, any person who desires a copy of the law can have it on application to the Secretary of State, who will furnish him with a copy of the statutes containing it.

MR. HOLMES. As the effect of my resolution was simply to authorize the State Printer to do what he had already done without authority, I withdraw it.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move that five hundred copies of the Constitution of the United States be printed and distributed among the members. The copy alluded to by Colonel Barnes embraces only the Constitution of the State. It is important for members to have the Constitution of the United States in convenient form as well as the Constitution of the State. I move, therefore, that five hundred copies of the Constitution of the United States be printed and laid on the desks.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I would state, perhaps, for the edification of the gentleman from Sacramento as well as of this body, that I have had furnished me, on requisition, by the Secretary of State, a handsomely and neatly bound volume of the Constitution.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: As I am already sufficiently edified, I withdraw the motion.

FILLING VACANCIES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will now proceed to the special order, which is the election to fill vacancies.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: On behalf of Mr. Burch and at his request, I desire to return to the Convention—to those who have supported Mr. Burch—his thanks; and at his request I withdraw his name. He is under obligations to his friends for their support.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: As my colleague from San Francisco has already so well expressed it, I desire to thank the members of this Convention for the support which they have given to the gentleman whom I nominated. It is not his desire to continue the contest here. His name was submitted more at the urgent request of others than from any ambitious sentiments of his own, and I therefore, at his request, withdraw him from this contest.

THE SECRETARY began to call the roll.

When MR. BROWN'S name was called that gentleman said: Mr. President: I wish to state some of the reasons why I shall vote in a certain way. Now, for instance, I was elected by a certain constituency holding certain political proclivities. If there had been a vacancy caused by my death, or by any other cause, I am satisfied—yes, I am thoroughly convinced—that my constituents, those that supported me, would have thought very strange if this Convention had taken into consideration the case of filling the vacancy and filled it with a man of different sentiments—with sentiments different from those of a majority of the people; those that put me in this position. And I am under the impression that the same principles will apply throughout to San Francisco, and that, as the Workingmen won there, it is, upon that principle, right and proper that we should put a man in who is of their political views. And in view of this sentiment in regard to it, as a principle which I think should prevail, I shall vote for Mr. Sharpstein.

The roll was called.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: I ask now that before the vote is announced the roll shall be called with the statement as to how each member voted, in order that there may be no mistake.

It was so ordered, and the President announced the result of the ballot as follows:

Mr. S. B. THOMPSON, having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared duly elected as a delegate to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Thomas Morris of San Francisco.

Mr. Thompson was escorted to the bar of the Convention by Messrs. Edgerton and Shafter and took the constitutional oath of office.

THE PRESIDENT. The next order of business is the election of a member to fill the vacancy caused by the death of H. H. Haight.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I have the honor, as it is a pleasure, to put in nomination to fill the vacancy caused by the death of ex-Governor Haight, Mr. J. West Martin, of Alameda County. It was known some time before the assembling of the Convention, in Alameda County, by a conference of the delegates from that county, that Mr. Martin would be put forward in this Convention from that county to supply that vacancy. So that we present to this Convention, so far as that part of the State is concerned, a name that is known, and the suggestion of his name for that place, I may state to the Convention, met with the entire approbation of Alameda County, as being a man in every way suitable for the place. Mr. Martin has been on the Board of Regents of the University of California from its organization to the present time, and I am informed by his associates on that Board that he has been one of the most active members of that Board. He would be a most valuable member of this Convention in matters pertaining to the educational interests of this State. Mr. President, I will state further, that in addition to having the full support of the Alameda delegation, he has a majority of the district delegates from the Second Congressional District, and, with these indorsements, I appeal to the Convention to elect him to supply the place of Governor Haight. I will state further, that Mr. Martin was in the County Convention in which Governor Haight was proposed as a candidate for delegate at large, and put Mr. Haight in nomination and indorsed the platform on which Governor Haight was nominated and elected.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: As we, the delegates of the Workingmen's party, have appealed in vain to the sense of justice and magnanimity of this Convention to regard the will of the people in the selection of Judge Sharpstein to fill the vacancy from that city, I feel under no obligations to pay any regard to the desires of the majority here in filling the vacancy from the Second Congressional District. I shall certainly not vote for Mr. Peachy, the author of the infamous Coolie bill of eighteen hundred and fifty-two and eighteen hundred and fifty-three.

MR. HOWARD. I call the gentleman to order.

MR. BARNES. Mr. Peachy has not been nominated before this Convention. It will be time enough for gentlemen to attack him after he is put in nomination. Until then, such remarks are out of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken; it is for the Convention to say whether the gentleman shall be allowed to proceed in order.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I have to say that Mr. Peachy is not only not nominated, but that his name will not be presented to this Convention.

MR. DUDLEY. I move that the gentleman be allowed to proceed in order.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I nominate G. Thom for the vacancy from the Second Congressional District—a gentleman who ran as delegate at large on the Workingmen's ticket—a gentleman indorsed by the people of Alameda County and the people of the State—a Workingman, and a gentleman who is capable of filling this position as well as any of those named in opposition.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. President: I am authorized by Judge Lamar to state that he is not a candidate before this Convention for any position whatever; and he desires that his friends do not vote for him.

MR. MURPHY inquired if Mr. Peachy was a candidate, and was informed that he was not.

THE CHAIR declared the nominations closed.

THE SECRETARY began to call the roll.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I beg leave to place in nomination the name of that inveterate foe to corporations, that life-long friend of the people, the name of that great and good man, Leland Stanford. I do this, Mr. Chairman, on the ground that I prefer to deal with principals rather than agents. The suggestion——

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order for the gentleman to make any remarks while we are voting. The gentleman can make his nomination but not a speech.

[Cries of "Leave," "Leave."]

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the gentleman may go on with his speech. The gentleman has leave to proceed.

MR. REYNOLDS did not avail himself of the privilege.

The roll was called, with the following result:

J. WEST MARTIN, having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared duly elected a member of this Convention, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of H. H. Haight.

Mr. VAN DYKE made a motion that Mr. Martin be presented to the bar of the Convention and take the oath of office, but it appearing that Mr. Martin was not in the city, the motion was withdrawn.

The PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the election of a member to fill the vacancy caused by the death of G. M. Hardwick, of Merced and Mariposa Counties.

Mr. TULLY. Mr. President: I rise to put in nomination for that position a gentleman whom I have known for many years. I do not think it necessary for me to attempt any eulogy upon his character, as I presume the minds of the members of this Convention are already made up. I therefore nominate Mr. J. M. Strong, a resident of Merced County. Mr. Strong is engaged in agricultural pursuits, a gentleman of good practical sense, and if admitted to a seat upon this floor, I think the friends of reform and good government will not find anything to regret in the course that he will pursue.

Mr. BROWN. I second the nomination.

Mr. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I desire to place in nomination, for the suffrages of the Workingmen's delegates of this Convention, at least, a good, honest, true man—Mr. S. O. Lapham, of Merced.

The roll was called.

Mr. BARRY—(When his name was called). I will say this, that I supported Judge Sharpstein yesterday and to-day on principle. I believe that the will of the people, as expressed in San Francisco, should be carried out. I believe that the Convention ought to have elected to fill the place of Mr. Morris such a man as Judge Sharpstein, who represents the same views. I believe the will of the people should be respected, but the Convention has disagreed with me, and I have no fault to find with their disagreement. I will not impugn the sincerity of their motives, believing that they have done what they believed to be right, yet at the same time I thought that the people's voice in San Francisco was favorable to Mr. Morris and Judge Sharpstein, and therefore I cast my vote for him. For the same reason, believing that Mr. Hardwick represented the intelligent people of Mariposa and Merced; that he received a majority, but was unfortunately taken away by death; I still believe in carrying out the same principle, as I propose to act upon principle from now until the very end of this Convention; to do what I believe to be right; to carry out the demands of the people on the vital questions before me; so, now, do I recognize the plea to select an Independent in the place of Mr. Hardwick. I now propose to cast my vote for Mr. Strong.

Mr. LINDOW—(When his name was called). Some gentlemen don't vote. I don't think it looks well for a member to sit here and don't cast a vote at all; either that I am very much grieved that I am defeated in my first vote in Judge Sharpstein, but I don't want to see bad feeling in this Convention; but that I make my speech as short as possible, I vote for Mr. Strong.

Mr. WICKES—(When his name was called). As my vote would not do any good either on one side or the other, I must accept the situation and be consistent. I vote for that good, patient, and long-forbearing man, Theodore Tilton. [Laughter.]

The result of the vote was announced as follows:

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for one day was granted to Messrs. Belcher, Chapman, Schomp, Winans, Hall, Farrell, Van Dyke, Shafter, and Wellin; and for two days to Mr. Dudley, of San Joaquin. Leave of absence was also granted to Mr. Barnes until Wednesday, and to Mr. Strong until Thursday.

The Journal of Saturday was read and approved.

J. WEST MARTIN, who was elected on Saturday to fill the vacancy caused by the death of ex-Governor Haight, was sworn in.

[MR. MCFARLAND in the Chair.]

MR. HILBORN sent up a resolution.

ADDITIONAL COMMITTEES, ETC.

At the same time Mr. ESTEE presented a report from the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, as follows:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Rules, Order of Business, and Standing Committees recommend that the following additional committees be appointed: On Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce, to consist of eleven members; on Mining, to consist of eleven members; on the Pardoning Power, nine members; on Tide Water and Navigable Streams, nine members; on Labor and Capital, nine members; on Engrossment and Enrollment, seven members. Respectfully,

M. M. ESTEE, Chairman.

The report was accepted by the Convention, and MR. ESTEE moved its adoption.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I have a resolution to offer.

The resolution was laid on the Secretary's desk until after the disposal of the report of the committee.

MR. MCCALLUM. The question is on the adoption of the report of the committee. When a committee makes a report it is always understood to be moved to be adopted.

THE CHAIR. I do not understand that it has any precedence over any other motion.

MR. ESTEE. It has no precedence, but it is a very important matter for the Convention to adopt now, or reject now, so that the President can take it into consideration in making up the standing committees—a work upon which he is now engaged. I hope that the Convention will not take up other matters.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move, as an amendment, that the consideration of the report be postponed until to-morrow morning, and that two hundred copies of the report be printed.

THE CHAIR. The Convention will understand that the report of the Committee upon the subject of Rules and Order of Business has not yet been received. The committee offer a separate report in relation to committees, and that is the motion before the Convention now.

MR. AYERS. I ask for the reading of that report.

The report was read.

MR. EDGERTON. A report was made by the Chairman of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business on Friday last or Saturday, enumerating several standing committees, and that report has been adopted and is before this House now. Now this report merely recommends to this Convention the appointment of five or six more committees. For instance, a Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment. There must be such a committee. The Convention recommitted the matter of the consolidated Committee on Agriculture and Mining to the Committee on Rules, to be further considered. They have considered it further, and they have divided that committee, so that it stands one Committee on Mining, which is a concession to the wishes of a very large majority of this Convention, and one on Agriculture, Commerce, and Manufactures. In addition, there is a committee, at the request of the party which the gentleman represents, on Labor and Capital. I do not see why this should be delayed. The President is now engaged in making up these committees, and it is necessary that this matter should be settled. I hope that the motion to postpone and print will not prevail.

MR. AYERS. The reason I asked for the reading of the report was that I understand that there is no Committee on Lands.

MR. EDGERTON. There is a Committee on Public Lands. This is an additional report, in addition to the committee established the other day.

MR. AYERS. I intended to move such a committee. If other committees should be wanted they can be appointed at any time by a motion.

MR. BARBOUR. This is the reason I wish to have the reports printed, in order that members may know what the committees are. These committees are provided for. There is no disposition to strike out of the report any of these committees, but this Convention must know what the standing committees are. Now, it is just as necessary, and then if we find it necessary to have more committees we will have before us a light with which to govern our conduct. That part of the report comes in the report of the Committee on Rules. The number of the committees is printed in the rules, and provision is made for printing five hundred copies of the whole thing.

THE CHAIR. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, moves that this report be adopted. The gentleman from San Francisco moves that the matter be postponed until to-morrow at eleven o'clock, and that five hundred copies, both of this report and the former report, be printed. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would suggest that the gentleman from San Francisco for the present withdraw his motion to postpone and print until the whole report of the Committee on Rules be read. And the reason is this: there is not much probability that the house will adopt the report of the Committee on Rules as a whole, or perhaps that part of it relating to standing committees, until the members have had an opportunity to examine the report. They can only do that when it has been printed, and it will doubtless be read as a whole, ordered printed, and further action delayed until to-morrow morning. I think that will be the shortest way of getting at it. More time will be consumed in members attempting to find out what the report is than it will take to print the proof sheets. It can be easily printed and laid on the tables of members.

MR. EDGERTON. I think the gentleman who last addressed the Convention is under a misapprehension in this matter. As I said, this Convention has already adopted a partial report as to what committees should be appointed. I think some twenty-five or twenty-eight committees have already been provided for in the report adopted by this Convention and is now the law of this body, and the President is now engaged in making up those committees. The question now before the Convention does not go to the rules recommended for the government of this body, but simply whether the Convention shall have the additional committees which have been recommended. That is all the question that there is now before this house. The rules are not before the house at all. The committee have recommended the appointment of six or seven additional committees, and that is all there is before the Convention.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: If it is necessary to have this partial report, merely suggesting five more committees, printed for the members before they can understand it, then, sir, I am in favor of having it printed; but it strikes me that a half dozen lines can be understood by all the members of this Convention, and every member in this Convention can tell right now whether we want a Committee on Engrossment, whether we want a Committee on Navigable Waters, on Tide Waters, on Harbors, on Mining, or on Agriculture, Commerce, and Manufactures. That is all the point there is in it. Now, the motion is to put off until to-morrow. I think we might as well settle it right now. If we have reported a committee there that we should not have, let it be stricken out by the vote of this body now; or, if there is any committee to be added, let it be added now. Every gentleman has the right to-morrow, or any day, to move for additional committees, as the necessity for them presents itself. That is the practice. Whenever it is found that we need a committee on any particular subject, a member will rise in his place and move for such a committee. It is not expected that your committee will understand all the possible exigencies, but by special request we have reported these, because the President is making up the committees, and because we were expected to report all the committees that we thought ought to be adopted by this Convention. We have done our duty as we understood it, and ask this Convention now to adopt that report, if right, and remedy it, if wrong. Let us not deceive ourselves with the idea that we have got to put it off until to-morrow in order to understand it. I think we all understand it now. I hope the motion to postpone and print will be voted down, for we have more time to-day than we will have to-morrow.

MR. REYNOLDS. I have no objection to the adoption of this part of the supplementary report, and I suggest to the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, to withdraw his motion to postpone and print, and that we adopt this part of the report solely with a view to facilitating business, for the reason that amendments may be made by the Convention afterwards.

MR. BARBOUR. It seems very difficult for me to make myself understood. I have not objected to these additional committees. I have simply asked that a list of the committees proposed up to the present time, be printed and laid on our desks to-morrow morning, and then if we want additional committees we can have them. I am willing to have the report adopted now, but I want it printed so that we can see what committees we have provided for.

THE CHAIR. I do not know whether the Convention fairly understands the question. The committee made a report the other day reporting a number of committees, and to-day they make a report suggesting additional committees. The motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, is that that report be adopted. The question as to the report on Rules and Regulations is not now involved in this motion.

MR. BARBOUR. I withdraw the part in reference to printing.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I rise to inquire of the Chairman of the Committee on Rules if it would occasion any inconvenience to have the report printed. If it will not, I desire to renew the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, and I desire to state why I renew it. Now, we all know, sir, from our general knowledge of the course of deliberative bodies, that the constituting of its standing committees is a matter of the greatest moment. One of our important committees here, on rules, have made two reports—a primary and a secondary one—the two ostensibly to cover or to provide for the appointment of all the standing committees which will be necessary. Now, sir, while from the reading, or rather from my hearing read this report, I see no reason to demur to it, yet I submit that it would be the part of prudence to have this report printed, showing what the committee recommend, and then when, to-morrow, that report has been examined by every member, if they desire to make amendments they can do it then. Now, I think it will be wise for us not only to have this report printed, but all the reports of our standing committees should be printed and laid upon our desks, to give us a chance to examine them before they are acted upon. I therefore renew the motion to print.

MR. EDGERTON. Does the gentleman remember that the Convention has adopted one report fixing the number and designation of some twenty-five or twenty-six committees.

Mr. HALE. I believe I am correctly informed upon the action of the Convention. Heretofore a report has been made, which was announced to be partial in its character; that the Convention adopted that report so far as it goes; that now a report is made providing for the appointment of additional committees. The motion is to print the entire report, original and supplementary, and then when it shall come up before the Convention they will all have a better opportunity to examine it in detail, and will be able to say whether they are entirely satisfied with it.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I repeat that as to the report of yesterday, it has already become a law of this Convention. The Convention almost unanimously adopted that partial report and fixed the mode in which these committees should be appointed. As I said before, the only question before the Convention is whether these five additional committees shall be appointed, and that is for the Convention to determine; and it is suggested by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, that then his motion to print the entire report would be in order. I hope the report will be acted upon soon, because it is a very important duty in which the President is engaged.

Mr. JOYCE. It seems to me, Mr. President, if there is any one thing more than another that deserves the consideration of this Convention, that subject is the Chinese subject. It is one that there has been no political party for the last ten years that has not given it serious attention; yet it seems that the committee has lost sight of it. It seems that it was not sufficiently important for our committee to create a special committee for that one subject. Now, I believe that it is paramount to all other subjects, and I desire that there should be a special committee on that subject alone, and I would now move that the Chinese subject has a special committee for itself.

Mr. EDGERTON. The report which was adopted the other day provided for a committee that covers this case—the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. JOYCE. My point is this: I do not believe that this Committee on Immigration can deal with this. That affects the United States. We calculated to deal with its domestic relations with this State.

Mr. EDGERTON. There is in that report a provision for a Committee on Capital and Labor. These two committees cover the whole subject.

Mr. SHOEMAKER. I move the previous question.

Mr. CROSS. I second the motion for a committee on the Chinese question.

The CHAIR. It is moved and seconded that there be a Committee on Chinese.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President: This Committee on Rules have reported in favor of certain standing committees. On further advising among themselves they make an additional, or supplementary report, that four or five additional standing committees are necessary, in their judgment. Now this is merely a matter of convenience. It is merely dividing out the labor of this Convention among these gentlemen who constitute these different committees. It is simply a division of labor. They have thought that by adding four or five additional committees that they can divide out the labor of the Convention more completely, so that the business of the Convention may be more properly transacted. It does not involve any principle. It does not involve any policy. Therefore I can see no possible objection at all to the addition of these four or five standing committees to the list which we have already adopted. It seems to me eminently proper that in making his appointments the President should have the names of these committees before him, so as to assign to the different committees those gentlemen who are most suitable to be on those committees. Now, I understand there is a Committee on Immigration. It occurs to me that the Chinese question can properly come before that committee. It is also suggested to have a Committee on Labor and Capital, and if the Committee on Immigration is not the proper committee, this Chinese question can be referred to the Committee on Labor and Capital. In other words, whenever there is any question as to the proper reference of any particular subject, if the title of the committee does not sufficiently specify or indicate it, the President can say, if it meets with the approval of this Convention, to which committee the subject-matter should be referred. I, too, hold that this Chinese matter should be investigated, but it seems to me there is no occasion for making supernumerary committees. There is no necessity for making more committees than are necessary. This Committee on Rules and Order of Business is not discharged, and if any gentleman in this Convention deems that an additional standing committee is necessary, that gentleman can rise here and indicate what additional committee shall be named by this Convention. But it occurs to me that there is no occasion whatever to make too many committees. We have this Committee on Rules, consisting of several gentlemen of experience, and they report to this Convention that in their judgment five additional standing committees are necessary. It occurs to me that there is no objection to them at all. It is a mere matter of routine. It does not involve a principle or policy. I am in favor of the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I have a resolution to offer.

Mr. SHOEMAKER. I call attention to the fact that I moved the previous question.

The CHAIR. Those in favor of the main question being now put will please rise.

The previous question was ordered.

The CHAIR. The original motion was to adopt the report—to that an amendment is offered that there be an additional Committee on Chinese. The first question is on the amendment to add an additional Committee on Chinese.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Joyce, O'Sullivan, and Barton.

Mr. BARTON—(When his name was called). I shall vote for the appointment of a Committee on Chinese, and my reason for doing so is this: I believe that the Committee on Immigration has nothing to do whatever with the labors of this Convention. It is strictly and purely legislative in its bearings, and the subject of Chinese is one of local importance to us, which we are determined to handle in this Convention. Therefore I hope that there will be a Committee on Chinese appointed, and that the House will sustain the motion. I vote "aye" for the appointment of the committee.

Mr. CAPLES—(When his name was called). I am in favor of a special committee to consider this subject, but the proposition is thrust in here at an improper time, as I conceive to the confusion of legitimate business. I will say this to the gentlemen in favor of this committee, when they propose such a committee at the proper time I shall vote for it with them; but as I before remarked, it has been thrust in here before the question on the adoption of the report of the committee. The question ought to have been simply on adopting the report of the committee. Then, every gentleman on the floor will concede that the gentleman could move for an additional committee. Therefore I vote "no."

Mr. ESTEE—(When his name was called). I do not wish to explain my vote. I wish to explain to the Convention exactly how the matter stands. It stands in this way: in the Convention the committee were unanimous in permitting one of the members of that committee, from San Francisco, if he so desired and if this house so desired, to move this house to have such a committee, and then he would necessarily be Chairman of the committee. And with due respect to that gentleman he does not now appear to care about being Chairman of that committee. I make this statement to show that the committee were not opposed to having one of the standing committees of this House investigate this question. It was done as a matter of propriety and delicacy, and it should not be charged that this committee were trying to evade it. The committee were unanimous in all these questions, and were unanimous in permitting, if the house saw fit, the fullest examination of the best committee that could be made to investigate it. I vote "aye."

Mr. FREUD—(When his name was called). Mr. President: By leave of the Convention, I should like very respectfully to explain my vote. I concede a great deal that has been said by the Chairman of the committee. Undoubtedly much that pertains to the Chinese question probably will and ought to come before the Committees on Immigration, and Capital and Labor; nevertheless the question is so broad, and of such an anamolous character, that in my opinion it should have a special committee. Therefore, I shall vote "aye."

Mr. JOHNSON—(When his name was called). I think, Mr. President, that the committee's report sufficiently covers this case, but inasmuch as there is a question of doubt, and inasmuch as this question ought to be thoroughly investigated, I shall vote "aye."

Mr. WICKES—(When his name was called). I do not intend to cast any reflection on the committee when I vote "aye."

The roll being completed, the Chair announced the result of the vote as follows:

The question being on the adoption of the report, as amended, it was adopted.

MR. ESTEE. There is another report I think we had better have read.

THE PRESIDENT. No objection, the report of the committee will now be taken up.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RULES.

Mr. President: Your Committee on Rules, Order of Business, and Standing Committees, report the following rules for the government of the Convention, and respectfully recommend their adoption. A sub-committee composed of Messrs. Edgerton, Finney, Murphy, West, Waters, and Estee, gave special attention to the laborious duty of preparing these rules, and which rules were in turn submitted to your committee of fifteen, and by them considered and unanimously adopted.

Respectfully submitted.

M. M. ESTEE, Chairman Committee.

Hour of meeting.

Rule 1.—The Convention shall meet each day of sitting at ten o'clock A. M., unless it shall adjourn to some other hour.

Recess.

Rule 2.—The Convention shall take a recess each day from twelve o'clock M. to one o'clock P. M.

Number of members to constitute a quorum.

Rule 3.—Not less than seventy-seven members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Duties of President.

Rule 4.—The President, or in his absence the President pro tem., or in the absence of both, such Chairman as shall be selected by the members present, shall take the Chair at the hour to which the Convention shall have adjourned, and shall immediately call the members to order.

To preserve order, to decide points of order, and may speak to same.

Rule 5.—He shall preserve decorum and order; may speak to points of order in preference to other members, and shall decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal to the Convention by any five members, on which appeal no member shall speak more than once, except by leave of the Convention.

Appointment of committees.

Rule 6.—All committees shall be appointed and announced by the President, unless otherwise specially directed by the Convention.

Signing of writs, warrants, and subpœnas.

Rule 7.—All writs, warrants, and subpœnas, issued by order of the Convention, shall be under his hand and attested by the Secretary.

May call any member to the Chair.

Rule 8.—The President shall have the right to name any member to perform the duties of the Chair, but such substitution shall not extend beyond an adjournment.

To have direction of the hall.

Rule 9.—The President shall have the general direction of the hall of the Convention and of the galleries. No persons, excepting members, officers, and attachés of the Convention, and such persons as may be invited by the Convention, or by the President, shall be admitted within the bar of the Convention. The Chairman of each Committee of the Whole, during the sitting of such committee, shall have the like power of preserving order in the hall and in the galleries.

Duties of Secretary.

Rule 10.—The Secretary must attend each day, and call the roll, read the Journal and all propositions or resolutions. He shall have the direction of the Assistant Secretaries unless otherwise ordered.

Duties of Assistant Secretaries.

Rule 11. The Assistant Secretaries must attend each day, take charge of all resolutions, propositions, petitions, memorials, and other papers presented to the Convention, file and enter the same in the books provided for that purpose, and perform such other duties as may be directed by the Secretary of the Convention.

Duties of Minute Clerk.

Rule 12.—The Minute Clerk must keep a correct record of the proceedings of the Convention.

Duties of Journal Clerk.

Rule 13.—The Journal Clerk must record each day's proceedings in the Journal, from which they must be read each day by the Secretary, and then be authenticated by the signature of the President.

Duties of Sergeant-at-Arms.

Rule 14.—The Sergeant-at-Arms must give a general supervision, under the direction of the President, to the hall of the Convention and rooms attached; attend during the sittings of the Convention, execute its commands and all process issued by its authority; keep an account of pay and mileage of members, attachés, and employés, and prepare checks for the same.

Duties of Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms.

Rule 15.—The Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms must attend the sittings of the Convention each day, prohibit all persons except members, officers, and employés, and such other persons as may have the privilege of the floor assigned them by the rules of the Convention, from entering within the bar unless upon invitation, and keep order in the halls, lobbies and galleries.

Duties of officers at the close of the session.

Rule 16.—The Secretary and Assistant Secretaries, at the close of the session of the Convention, must deliver to the Secretary of State, duly marked, labeled, and arranged, all propositions, resolutions, petitions, memorials, and other papers belonging to the Convention, and also all books belonging to the same.

Order of business.

Rule 17.—1. Roll call. 2. Reading and approval of the Journal. 3. Presentation of petitions and memorials; under which head shall be included remonstrances, communications from individuals and public bodies. 4. Communications from State officers; under which head shall be embraced, also, communications from public officers, and from corporations in response to calls for information. 5. Reports of standing committees, in the order in which they stand in the rules. 6. Reports of select committees. 7. Introduction of resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution. 8. Unfinished business. 9. Special orders. 10. General order. 11. Miscellaneous motions and resolutions.

Precedence of motions during debate.

Rule 18.—When a question is under debate, or before the Convention, no motion shall be received but: 1. To adjourn. 2. To lay on the table. 3. For the previous question. 4. To postpone to a day certain. 5. To commit or amend. 6. To postpone indefinitely. Which several motions shall have precedence in the order in which they are named; but the first three shall be decided without debate; and no motion to postpone to a day certain, to commit, or to postpone indefinitely, being decided, shall again be allowed on the same day, and at the same stage of the proceedings.

Priority of business.

Rule 19.—All questions relating to the priority of business shall be decided without debate.

Reference of resolutions; when committees must report.

Rule 20.—When a motion is made to refer any subject, and different committees should be proposed, the question shall be taken in the following order:

1. The Committee of the whole Convention.
2. A Standing Committee.
3. A Select Committee.

Every committee of the Convention to whom a resolution or proposition has been referred, shall report the same to the Convention within fifteen days from the time it is received by the Chairman of the committee, unless further time to report is granted, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention. Every proposition or resolution shall be referred to the appropriate standing committees as indicated by its name given herein.

Motion to divide question; to strike out or insert.

Rule 21.—Any member may call for the division of a question when the sense will admit of it. A motion to strike out shall be deemed indivisible; but a motion to strike out, being lost, shall neither preclude amendment nor a motion to strike out and insert.

Call of the Convention.

Rule 22.—Upon a call of the Convention, the names of the members shall be called over by the Secretary, and the absentees noted; after which the names of the absentees shall again be called over. The doors shall then be shut, and those for whom no sufficient excuses are made may, by order of those present, be taken into custody as they appear, or may be sent for and taken into custody wherever found, by the Sergeant-at-Arms, or by a special messenger to be appointed for that purpose.

Division and count of Convention.

Rule 23.—Upon a division or count of the Convention on any question, no person without the bar shall be counted.

Calling the ayes and noes.

Rule 24.—On all questions and motions whatsoever, the President shall take the sense of the Convention by ayes and noes, provided five members present shall so require it. When the ayes and noes are taken, no member shall be allowed to vote who shall have entered the Convention after the calling of the roll is finished. The names of members shall be called in alphabetical order. Provided, further, that on all resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution, the final vote shall be taken by ayes and noes.

Explaining or changing vote.

Rule 25.—No member shall be allowed to explain his vote or discuss the question while the ayes and noes are being called; and no member shall be allowed to change his vote after the vote is announced from the Chair.

Motion to instruct committees.

Rule 26.—It shall be the duty of each member who moves that any committee be instructed to inquire into the expediency of amending or revising the existing Constitution, to point out the amendment which he deems expedient, in writing, to accompany his motion.

Commitment and recommitment of motions and reports.

Rule 27.—Motions and reports may be committed or recommitted at the pleasure of the Convention, and with or without instructions from the Convention.

Motion, or proposition of a subject, different from that under consideration, inadmissible under color of amendment.

Rule 28.—No motion, or proposition of a subject, different from that under consideration, shall be admitted under color of amendment.

Digitized by Google

When motion or resolution may be withdrawn.

Rule 29.—A motion may be withdrawn, by leave of the Convention, at any time before amendment or decision.

Motions to adjourn.

Rule 30.—A motion to adjourn shall always be in order. The Minute Clerk shall enter on the minutes the name of any member moving an adjournment; and, also, the hour at which the motion is made.

Motions, to be stated by the President, to be reduced to writing.

Rule 31.—No motion shall be debated until the same shall be seconded and distinctly announced by the President; and it shall be reduced to writing, if desired by the President or any member; and shall be read by the Secretary, before the same shall be debated.

Substitutes.

Rule 32.—A substitute shall be deemed an amendment, and be treated in all respects as such.

Previous question; how demanded.

Rule 33.—The previous question shall only be put when demanded by five members.

Questions of order after previous question is ordered.

Rule 34.—All incidental questions of order arising after a motion is made for the previous question, and pending such motion or previous question, shall be decided, whether on appeal or otherwise, without debate.

The previous question; how put.

Rule 35.—The previous question shall be put in the following form: "Shall the main question be now put?" And all debate upon the main question shall be suspended until the previous question shall be decided. After the adoption of the previous question, the sense of the Convention shall forthwith be taken upon original amendments reported by a committee, upon pending amendments, and then upon the main question, without debate.

Question to indefinitely postpone.

Rule 36.—When a question is indefinitely postponed, the same shall not be again introduced during the session of the Convention.

Notice of reconsideration.

Rule 37.—On the day succeeding that on which a final vote on any proposition or resolution concerning the Constitution, or other resolution, has been taken, said vote may be reconsidered, on motion of any member; provided, notice of intention to move such reconsideration shall have been given on the day on which such final vote was taken, by a member voting with the majority; and it shall not be in order for any member to move a reconsideration on the day on which such final vote was taken. Such motion of reconsideration shall have precedence over every other motion except a motion to adjourn. No notice of reconsideration shall be in order on the day preceding the last day of the session.

Protest of members.

Rule 38.—It shall be in order for any member, or members, to protest in writing against action of the Convention, and have such protest entered upon the minutes.

Question of privilege.

Rule 39.—A question of privilege shall be entitled to supersede other business; but when a member brings forward such question, he shall first present his complaint, either verbally or in writing; and the presiding officer shall decide, in the first instance, whether such statement, however brought forward, involves a question of privilege. If such decision shall be in favor of the question of privilege, the member may then make such observations as may be pertinent to the question of privilege, and may submit such resolution or motion as he may desire for the consideration of the Convention.

Author to speak last.

Rule 40.—The author of a motion, proposition, or resolution, shall have the privilege of closing the debate, unless the previous question has been sustained.

Duty of member rising to speak.

Rule 41.—Every member, when about to speak, shall rise and respectfully address the President, shall confine himself to the question under debate, and avoid personality, and shall sit down when he is finished. No member shall speak out of his place without leave of the President.

No interruption of member while speaking.

Rule 42.—No member speaking shall be interrupted by another, but by rising up to call to order.

Times a member may speak.

Rule 43.—No member shall speak more than twice on one question, without first obtaining leave of the Convention, nor more than once until other members who have not spoken shall speak, if they desire to.

Call to order for offensive words in debate.

Rule 44.—If any member be called to order for offensive words spoken in debate, the person calling him to order shall report the words excepted to, and they shall be taken down in writing at the Secretary's table; and no member shall be held to answer or be subject to censure of the Convention for language used in debate if any member has spoken or other business has intervened after the words spoken and before exception to them shall have been taken.

Order in speaking to questions lost by adjournment.

Rule 45.—If a question pending be lost by adjournment of the Convention, and revived on the succeeding day, no member who shall have spoken on the preceding day shall be permitted again to speak without leave of two thirds of the Convention.

Calling members to order when transgressing rules.

Rule 46.—If any member, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the Convention, the President shall, or any member may call to order. In which case, the member so called to order shall immediately sit down, unless permitted to explain; and if called to order by a member, such member shall immediately state the point of order. If the point of order be sustained by the Chair, the member shall not be allowed to proceed; but if it be not sustained, then he shall be permitted to go on. Every such decision from the Chair shall be subject to an appeal to the Convention, but no discussion of a question of order shall be allowed unless an appeal be taken from a decision of the Chair.

The President to decide who is entitled to the floor.

Rule 47.—When two or more members shall rise at once, the President shall decide who is first to speak.

Taking up propositions or resolutions out of order.

Rule 48.—When a member shall ask leave to have a proposition or resolution taken up out of its regular order, he shall, in making the motion, give the number and title of the same.

Reading of resolutions before final action thereon.

Rule 49.—Every resolution proposing any alteration in the Constitution shall be read on two several days before it is finally acted upon and adopted by the Convention.

Indorsement and statement of object of papers introduced.

Rule 50.—Every member presenting to the Convention a petition, memorial, or remonstrance, shall indorse his name thereon, together with a brief statement of the nature and object of the instrument.

Title and numbering of propositions and resolutions.

Rule 51.—Propositions and resolutions proposing matter to be incorporated in the Constitution shall be prefaced with a title briefly indicating the subject to which they refer. They shall be in writing, on legal cap paper, or printed, and shall be numbered by the Secretary in the order in which they are introduced.

Resolutions limited to one subject; reading and reference of same.

Rule 52.—Propositions and resolutions mentioned in the last foregoing rule shall embrace but one subject; they shall be read once when introduced, and then referred, without debate, to an appropriate committee.

General file.

Rule 53.—All propositions and resolutions, embracing matter proposed to be incorporated in the Constitution, reported by a standing or special committee, shall be read when reported, and shall be placed on a general file, to be kept by the Secretary, in the order in which they are reported. They shall be taken from the file and acted upon in the order in which they are placed thereon, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention; provided, that engrossed propositions and resolutions shall be placed at the head of the file, in the order in which they are received. Two hundred and forty copies of the file for each day shall be printed.

Committees not to sit during session.

Rule 54.—No committee shall sit during the session of the Convention without leave.

Committee of the Whole.

Rule 55.—In forming a Committee of the Whole Convention, the President may preside or appoint a member to preside. Propositions or resolutions relating to the Constitution shall be committed to a Committee of the Whole Convention, and shall be read in Committee of the Whole by sections. All amendments shall be noted and reported to the Convention by the Chairman. After report, the proposition or resolution shall again be subject to amendment before the final question is taken.

Rule 56.—The rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole, so far as they may be applicable, except for limiting the times of speaking, and except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, and that the previous question shall not be moved.

Rule 57.—A motion that the committee rise shall always be in order, and shall be decided without debate.

Orders, resolutions, etc., which shall be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Rule 58.—Every order or resolution which proposes an alteration in the Constitution, and all reports of committees appointed to consider the propriety and expediency of making any alteration therein, shall be considered in Committee of the Whole before they are debated and finally acted on in Convention.

Parliamentary rules.

Rule 59.—The rules of parliamentary practice contained in "Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies," shall govern the Convention in all cases to which they are applicable, and in which they are not inconsistent with the standing rules and orders of the Convention.

Suspending and changing rules.

Rule 60.—No standing rule or order of the Convention shall be rescinded or changed without a vote of two thirds and one day's notice being given of the motion therefor; but a rule or order may be suspended temporarily by a vote of two thirds of the members present, except rules fifty, fifty-one, fifty-three, and fifty-five.

Reading of papers.

Rule 61.—When the reading of a paper is called for, except petitions and memorials, and the same is objected to by any member, it shall be determined by a vote of the Convention without debate.

Filling blanks.

Rule 62.—In filling up blanks the least sum or number, and shortest time, shall be first put.

Members at Secretary's desk.

Rule 63.—No member or other person shall remain by the Secretary's desk while the ayes and noes are being called, or while the votes are being counted.

Leave of absence.

Rule 64.—No member shall be absent more than two days without leave of the Convention; and a vote of leave of absence shall be inoperative unless the member obtaining it shall avail himself of it within five days.

Members absent not to draw pay except in case of sickness or on committee duty.

Rule 65.—No member shall receive pay for any week day on which he has not actually attended the Convention, except in case of sickness, or when he is absent on committee duty.

Papers to be left with Secretary by members on leave of absence.

Rule 66.—Every member, before availing himself of a leave of absence, shall deposit with the Secretary all papers then in his possession belonging to the Convention.

Smoking in the hall.

Rule 67.—No smoking shall be allowed within the hall of the Convention during the time of its session.

Use of hall.

Rule 68.—The hall of the Convention shall not be used for any public or private business other than that of the Convention, except by unanimous consent.

Extra pay.

Rule 69.—No increase of pay, nor any extra pay, shall be allowed any officer or attaché of the Convention, by resolution or otherwise, except by unanimous consent.

Extra assistance and compensation.

Rule 70.—No proposition for additional help in any clerical or other department of the Convention shall be entertained except by resolution, in writing, therefor, and before final action by the Convention thereon such resolution shall be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, which committee shall inquire into the necessity therefor and the amount of compensation proper, if the same shall be required, and report without unnecessary delay; and upon receipt of such report the Convention shall forthwith proceed to consider and vote upon the passage of the resolution.

Printing.

Rule 71.—Five hundred copies of each proposition or resolution embodying matter proposed to be introduced into the Constitution shall be printed.

Employment of committee clerks.

Rule 72.—No committee shall be permitted to employ a clerk at the expense of the State, without first obtaining leave of the Convention for that purpose.

Standing committees.

Rule 73.—The standing committees of the Convention shall be as follows:

1. On Preamble and Bill of Rights; to consist of nine members.
2. On Right of Suffrage; to consist of eleven members.
3. On Legislative Department; to consist of fifteen members.
4. On Executive Department; to consist of nine members.
5. On Judiciary and Judicial Department; to consist of nineteen members.
6. On Military Affairs; to consist of eleven members.
7. On State and Municipal Indebtedness; to consist of fifteen members.
8. On Education; to consist of nine members.
9. On State Institutions and Public Buildings; to consist of eleven members.
10. On City, County, and Township Organization; to consist of fifteen members.
11. On Apportionment and Representation; to consist of fifteen members.
12. On Revenue and Taxation; to consist of fifteen members.
13. On Corporations, other than Municipal; to consist of fifteen members.
14. On Miscellaneous Subjects; to consist of nine members.
15. On Future Amendments; to consist of nine members.
16. On Schedule; to consist of eleven members.
17. On Revision and Adjustment; to consist of nine members.
18. On Water and Water Rights; to consist of fifteen members.
19. On Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce; to consist of eleven members.
20. On Mining; to consist of eleven members.
21. On Immigration; to consist of fifteen members.
22. On Reporting and Printing; to consist of five members.
23. On Privileges and Elections; to consist of fifteen members.
24. On Mileage and Contingent Expenses; to consist of nine members.
25. On Pardoning Power; to consist of nine members.
26. On Harbor, Tide-water, and Navigable Streams; to consist of nine members.
27. On Labor and Capital; to consist of nine members.
28. On Engrossment and Enrollment; to consist of seven members.
29. On Chinese; to consist of fifteen members.
30. On Land and Homestead Exemption; to consist of nine members.

MR. REYNOLDS. I move, to save time, that the reading of the report be dispensed with, and that two hundred and fifty copies be printed and laid on the desks.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move to amend by making it three hundred and fifty copies.

MR. REYNOLDS. It is not necessary to print that many copies until the report has been acted upon by the House, and then print them in permanent form, including the names of the standing committees.

MR. ESTEE. The names of the committees are in the report.

MR. FREEMAN. Has this report been received?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

MR. FILCHER. I move to make the number four hundred and eighty.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I raise the point of order that this is already an amendment to the amendment, and this third amendment is out of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The first question is on the motion that the reading be dispensed with and that two hundred and fifty copies be printed. To that an amendment has been offered to make the number three hundred and fifty.

MR. HALE. Two hundred and fifty means two hundred and forty. I suggest that number.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I withdraw my amendment.

The motion to dispense with the reading and print two hundred and forty copies prevailed.

MR. EDGERTON. I would inquire whether the report adopted mentions the number of which the Committee on Chinese shall consist.

THE PRESIDENT. I don't understand that any number was mentioned.

MR. JONES. I don't know whether it is understood or not, but I move that eleven be the number.

MR. EDGERTON. I have the floor, I believe.

THE PRESIDENT. I don't understand that any number was mentioned.

MR. EDGERTON. I move that the committee consist of fifteen.

MR. BARTON. I second that motion.

The motion prevailed.

MR. EDGERTON. I move to make the report on rules and order of business the special order for to-morrow at eleven o'clock, so as to dispose of them.

MR. FREEMAN. I move to amend by making it two o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. I accept the amendment.

The motion as amended prevailed.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. HERRINGTON. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That each standing committee of this Convention be required to furnish from its own members such Secretaries as may be requisite for the proper recording of the proceedings of such committees.

MR. HERRINGTON. I think it is useless to make any extra expenditures for clerical help, for there will always be some member of each committee who will be qualified to perform these duties.

MR. EAGON. The rules provide for that in substance. It regulates that matter entirely, and there is no necessity for that resolution.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will suggest to the Convention that, perhaps, they had better wait until they hear the report of the committee before introducing such resolutions, without knowing what the report is.

MR. HERRINGTON. I withdraw the resolution for the present.

MR. CAPLES. I now call for the reading of the resolution which I sent to the desk.

MR. HILBORN. I sent up a resolution before that.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Caples, and the Secretary will read his resolution.

MR. HILBORN. I insist upon my resolution being read first, as it was sent to the desk first.

THE PRESIDENT. I don't recollect of recognizing the gentleman from Solano. It does not matter which resolution was received first; he was not recognized by the Chair. The gentleman from Sacramento has the floor.

MR. HILBORN. I was recognized. The report was sent up and claimed the attention of the Convention, and that being disposed of, I claim my resolution comes next.

THE PRESIDENT. This is a matter of no importance. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Sacramento.

MR. TULLY. I think it is a matter of justice.

MR. TINNIN. I am positive that the gentleman from Solano sent his resolution to the desk first, and that he was recognized by the Chair.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I wish to add my testimony as to the question of fact——

Digitized by Google

Mr. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. The Chair has already decided.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognized the gentlemen from Sacramento.

Mr. CAPLES. The gentleman can appeal.

Mr. HILBORN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair understands it to be the province of the Chair to recognize the first person addressing him. My recollection is distinct that I recognized Mr. Caples.

Mr. McCALLUM. That was the point I was making when the gentleman called me to order.

Mr. HILBORN. The gentleman overlooks one thing; my resolution was properly before the House. It was not improperly sent up. I will, however, withdraw the appeal.

The Secretary read the resolution offered by Mr. Caples, as follows:

Resolved, That J. P. Dray be appointed Night Watchman at the same per diem as paid to the Doorkeepers.

Mr. HILBORN. I ask the courtesy to have my resolution read as an amendment. I offer it as an amendment:

Resolved, That James Saultry be and he is hereby appointed Night Watchman at a per diem of five dollars a day, to be paid out of the appropriations for the expenses of the Convention.

Mr. EDGERTON. I suggest that the gentleman move to strike out and insert.

Mr. HILBORN. No, sir, I want to fix this up to suit myself.

Mr. WHITE. I move as an amendment that one of the Doorkeepers be detailed for that purpose, for the reason that I understand that there are more attachés now than are necessary. We have more Pages than necessary, and more Porters and Gatekeepers than are necessary.

Mr. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. We passed a rule the other day that all such matters should be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

Mr. HILBORN. I think the gentleman is mistaken. I don't think we passed any such resolution.

The PRESIDENT. I don't think there is any standing rule of that kind. But it seems to me that the Convention the other day resolved to leave the appointment of Night Watchman to the President of the Convention. I am so informed.

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. President: If you recollect, when the committee was appointed to designate the necessary officers for this house, and made their report, we called the attention of the house to the fact that the Night Watchman had not been provided for in their report. I pointed out how necessary it was that there should be such an officer, and my friend on the right corroborated my statements, and has made a report recommending that that officer should be appointed by the President. That report was recommitted to the committee, and when they reported again they left it out, so that, though the house has declared that they will have this officer, yet they have adopted a report and left it out. I doubt if the Chair has any right to appoint that officer.

Mr. BARBOUR. I have a resolution which I wish to offer as a substitute for the motion and the amendment.

Mr. HILBORN. I move that this whole matter go back to the committee, and leave it to them to say whether such an officer is necessary or not.

Mr. BARBOUR. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Convention dispenses with the services of the two side Doorkeepers and the Mail Carrier.

Mr. BARBOUR. I offer that as a substitute, to vacate those offices, upon the ground, as I am informed by the Secretary of State, that they are entirely unnecessary. In the beginning I objected to the appointment of these officers, and now I am convinced of the absolute uselessness of these officers. The Secretary of State informs me that the Mail Carrier is entirely unnecessary and useless to the Convention, and that the Postmaster might bring all the mail without any assistance. I believe in economy and reform, and every time a gentleman moves for a clerk, I will move to strike off some of them.

Mr. McCALLUM. That motion has nothing to do with the motion of the gentleman. I was going to make another motion by moving to refer it to the Committee on Contingent Expenses. I make that motion.

The motion prevailed.

Mr. WEST. Mr. President: I desire to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That an additional committee be appointed, which shall be known as the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemptions.

Mr. ESTEE. I move to refer this to the Committee on Rules. I have no doubt but that committee, Mr. West being a member of it, will report in favor of this resolution, if it is required, but I do enter my protest against the making of committees on this floor, without the sanction or consideration of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. WEST. Mr. President: I disclaim any discourtesy towards the Committee on Rules. I offered this so that it might be incorporated in the principal report to be laid on our desks.

The motion to refer the resolution to the Committee on Rules prevailed.

Mr. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I now offer this resolution, and ask that it be referred to the same committee:

Resolved, That each standing committee of this Convention be required to furnish from its own members such Secretaries as may be requisite for the proper recording of the proceedings of such committees.

The resolution was so referred.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer the following resolution, and ask that it be referred to the same committee:

Resolved, That an additional Committee on Judiciary be appointed.

The resolution was so referred.

Mr. SHOEMAKER. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That a member of each committee be detailed to do the Porter's work in the committee rooms.

Mr. SHOEMAKER. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

The resolution was so referred.

On motion of Mr. Freeman, at three o'clock and forty-eight minutes, the Convention adjourned until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

ELEVENTH DAY.

Sacramento, Tuesday, October 8th, 1878.

The Convention reassembled at ten o'clock A. M., pursuant to adjournment, President Hoge in the chair.

REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ORDER OF BUSINESS.

MR. ESTEE made the following report from the Committee on Rules and Order of Business:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Rules, Order of Business, and Standing Committees, to whom was referred a number of resolutions, have considered the same and beg leave to report them back as follows: First—The committee recommend for adoption the resolution offered by Mr. West, of Los Angeles, that an additional standing committee be appointed and known as the Committee on Lands and Homestead Exemption, and that said committee consist of nine members. Second—The committee recommend that in place of the resolution offered by Mr. Barbour, of San Francisco, providing for an additional Committee on Judiciary System, that the present rule on that subject be amended so as to read "Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department." Third—That the resolution offered by Mr. Herrington, of Santa Clara, that each standing committee be required to furnish from its own members a Secretary to keep its proceedings, be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. BARNES. I move the adoption of the report.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the committees.

MR. MCCALLUM. I move that the resolution adopted, by which the rules were made the special order for to-day at two o'clock, be reconsidered with a view to calling them up at this time.

Carried.

MR. MCCALLUM. I move that we now proceed to consider the rules reported by the Committee on Rules.

MR. GRACE. I do not know how it may be with other members of the Convention, but I certainly have not had sufficient time to read over these rules. They were laid on the tables at the time of meeting this morning. I don't know what is in them.

MR. LARKIN. I move that we take up these rules seriatim, or in taking them up commence at rule one. I hope this Convention will vote upon this question and not spend the day as we did yesterday in doing nothing.

THE CHAIR. If there is no objection, the rules will be taken up. The Chair hears no objection.

CONSIDERATION OF THE RULES.

Rule 1.—The Convention shall meet each day of sitting at ten o'clock A. M., unless it shall adjourn to some other hour.

Adopted.

Rule 2.—The Convention shall take a recess each day from twelve o'clock M. to one o'clock P. M.

Adopted.

Rule 3.—Not less than seventy-seven members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Adopted.

Rule 4.—The President, or in his absence the President pro tem., or in the absence of both, such Chairman as shall be selected by the members present, shall take the chair at the hour to which the Convention shall have adjourned, and shall immediately call the members to order.

Adopted.

Rule 5.—He shall preserve decorum and order; may speak to points of order in preference to other members, and shall decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal to the Convention by any five members, on which appeal no member shall speak more than once, except by leave of the Convention.

MR. BARBOUR. I move to amend the rule by adding after the word "once," the words "nor more than five minutes."

MR. ESTEE. In the main that would be correct, but there may be some very important questions arise, and to limit a speaker on a question of appeal would be to deprive this Convention of the opportunity to present in a perfect form the points in question. A question of appeal might raise all the points in issue, and I would suggest that five minutes is a very short time.

MR. O'DONNELL. I think they could get leave from this Convention, if they wish to speak longer on any subject that is of importance.

MR. EDGERTON. I am decidedly in favor of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. If it should ever occur that a question arises here of great importance the Convention can grant any gentleman leave to speak for a greater length of time. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. MCCALLUM. I notice that this rule five provides that "he shall preserve decorum and order; may speak to points of order in preference to other members." I would say that I think that is an unusual proceeding. I think that is something new. But here is another: "He shall decide all questions of order, subject to an appeal to the Convention by any five members." I think it is the right of any member to appeal. I move to strike out the word "five" and insert "any member."

MR. MCFARLAND. I do not think that any one gentleman should have the right to compel a vote of the House upon an appeal without he is able to get four of us to second it. It seems to me that this rule would protect us from frivolous appeals. Certainly if the ruling of the Chair is so doubtful there would always be five members to take an appeal. It seems to me that we had better let the rule stand as it is. Why should one gentleman compel a vote of this Convention when he cannot find any other gentleman to agree with him? He certainly should have five to support a proposition that the Convention would be compelled to vote on.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It seems to me that each member ought to have the privilege of appealing. If we make it five members we simply put each member to the necessity of forming a combination with four of his friends, so that when he desires to appeal his four friends will respond to that appeal. It is the easiest thing in the world, only it makes a man have an understanding with four of his friends, so that when he appeals they will respond. It seems to me that in every deliberative assembly it is the privilege of each individual member to appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. LARKIN. I am certainly opposed to the amendment. I would increase that number to ten. We are here for the purpose of framing a new Constitution, and I do not desire to see any frivolous appeals taken. Any appeal that is properly made will draw a sufficient number of the members of this Convention to its support. I would prefer much to increase the number than reduce it.

MR. WYATT. I do trust that the amendment will prevail, because I think it is universally the practice in deliberative bodies that any member has a right to appeal. It is putting more power than is necessary into the hands of the President of the Convention. I trust that a spirit of fairness will adopt this amendment.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. It is the privilege of any member upon this floor to appeal when he has a second. I suggest to the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, that he amend his amendment so that an appeal may be taken when asked by two members instead of one.

MR. MCCALLUM. I agree to that.

MR. EDGERTON. I understand the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, to except to that provision which provides that the President may speak to points of order in preference to all other members. That is a universal rule in all deliberative bodies, that the presiding officer may state his reasons first, and in many cases this practice saves debate. That is borrowed from the rules governing several legislative bodies, and I believe from Mr. Cushing. Now, in regard to an appeal, the rules of the California Assembly require that an appeal should be demanded by two members. That is a body of only eighty members, and there is a limitation put upon that. Now, sir, I hold that this rule, as it stands here, will greatly expedite the business of this body. It is very easy for any member to receive the support of four others if his appeal has any merit. I hope the rule will stand as reported by the committee.

MR. FREEMAN. The reason why I think any member ought to have the right to appeal is that when an appeal is taken the original point of order is not debatable, and it is not until after the appeal is taken that a motion begins to be discussed and the attention of other members are directed to it sufficiently to have them join in an appeal. I remember the other day, when the gentleman from San Francisco desired to correct the record of his vote, the Chair three or four times decided him to be out of order. As soon as the appeal was taken, and the matter began to be discussed, the Chair at once receded from the decision and allowed the gentleman the point which he claimed. I think that any one ought to have the right to bring an appeal or point of order before the house and have it discussed.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: Your committee, in adopting that rule, did not deviate from the well established rules adopted by all deliberative bodies, and I can safely challenge any gentleman to find an instance in the history of legislation where one single member upon the floor, by the rules of that body, can take an appeal from the decision of the Chair. In Parliament, in the Congress of the United States, in both departments of the Legislature of California, and of every legislative body of which I have any knowledge, it takes from three to ten members to take an appeal, and the reason is an obvious one. If one member can rise in his place and appeal from every indifferent question, one member upon this floor can clog the wheels of business, can stand in his place, if he so desires, and for hours keep the Convention under his control instead of the control of the Chair. I challenge any gentleman upon this floor to point to the rules of any deliberative body where one member can rise in his place and appeal from the decision of the Chair unless sustained by some other members on the floor. It is a wise and judicious provision, and I certainly hope that thus early in the history of this Convention, we will not deviate from well and long tried rules which have been established by the wisdom of deliberative bodies tracing back through the whole history of civilization, especially when this Convention is composed of such a large number of members. The members of your committee were the representatives of this whole body. That rule was adopted unanimously by the fifteen members of that committee, after carefully examining the rules of five or six other Constitutional Conventions, the rules of the Senate and Assembly, and the parliamentary law, and we concluded that that was a wise practice. We say it would be extraordinary and unusual to permit one member on this floor, whenever the Chair shall rule upon any indifferent subject, possibly not material, to take an appeal; and I hope that this House, in its own interest, and not for the purpose of sustaining the committee, in the interest of legislation, in the light of the experience of the best legislators of the time, not here, but elsewhere, will stand up to that rule, in that it shall take at least five to appeal from the decision of the Chair. One word more and I will be seated. The gentleman from Alameda took occasion to say that the portion of the rule which provides that the Chair may speak to points of order in preference to other members, was unusual.

MR. MCCALLUM. I rise to a point of order. The point is that as to that portion of the rule there is no question pending.

MR. ESTEE. I was unable to hear the gentleman before, and if he withdraws that I have nothing more to say.

MR. McCALLUM. Now, Mr. President, I wish to say in answer to Mr. Estee, that whenever any evidence proves to be true I will adopt it, but this positive assertion that this rule has universally prevailed I most emphatically deny. During my brief term in the Senate any member could take an appeal, and after being seconded he had the right to have a vote of the Senate. I inquired of gentlemen around me whom I happened to have met at the same time in the Assembly.

MR. EDGERTON. The rule of the Assembly is not as you state.

Mr. McCALLUM. I have not said that the rule of the Assembly is not so now. If the gentleman will allow me, I said that when I was in the Senate the gentlemen who were then in the Assembly tell me that the rule then was in the Assembly as it then was in the Senate, that any gentleman could appeal, and on being seconded have a right to have that appeal submitted to the Senate or Assembly. Now the idea is not that these appeals always involve the calling of the ayes and noes, and it is the calling of the ayes and noes that occupies so much time. That requires to be demanded by five members. But the mere right of appeal—and I have accepted the suggestion of my friend here—which I suppose would imply, in the first place, that on being seconded, any member should have the right to appeal. The occasion cited by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Freeman, was in point. Here the other morning, the gentleman from San Francisco demanded that his vote should be recorded as he voted. By some misapprehension he was ruled out of order. He took an appeal and had but one second. The House, or rather the Chair, corrected the division. I undertake to say that if that member had depended upon five members noticing what was going on here, he would have failed to have received the second required by this rule. I desire to see time saved, and regret to hear gentlemen speaking frequently, and at length, upon questions of little importance. But this is a question of some moment, coming right home to the rights of members upon this floor. I have to assume, and it is proper to assume, that every member here has some reputation of his own to protect, and would not desire to get the reputation of taking frivolous appeals. I have never seen a body of such dignity as this but what every member had intelligence enough to know that he would injure himself and lose his influence if he practiced anything of that kind. Now these questions will be voted upon without a call of the ayes and noes usually, and will be disposed of in much less time than is occupied in the discussions of questions of order.

MR. WICKES. I move that "two members" be inserted instead of "five members."

MR. McCALLUM. I accept the amendment.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I move for a division of the question. Take the question on the motion to strike out first.

THE CHAIR. The Chair hardly thinks the question is divisible.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. When the Chairman of this Committee on Rules had the honor of representing Sacramento County in the Assembly seven years ago, the rule was that two members could take an appeal. That is the case to-day in the House of Representatives of the United States at Washington. Two members can appeal, and I think that is the common rule. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Alameda will prevail. I say that was the rule at the time when the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, represented Sacramento County in the Assembly.

MR. ESTEE. On the contrary, it was three.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. It was two. It is two in the House of Representatives—rule two of the House of Representatives.

MR. ESTEE. It was three.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I believe that the question now stands on the motion to make it two. I hope that will prevail. It seems to me, Mr. President, that this is a privilege that pertains to every member to have his position on any question, so that it can be entertained by the house. So far as my experience goes in legislative bodies, I have seen but very few factious appeals. It is very rarely the case. In the hurry of matters of that kind, a member may be cut off from his privilege if he has to have four or five members second his appeal before he has the privilege of stating his grounds. I think two is sufficient. I have no knowledge of any legislative body where it has required five members to take an appeal.

MR. REYNOLDS. I desire to accept the challenge of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, to know where there is any legislative body that required but one member to take an appeal. I will read three lines from rule eight, of the rules adopted by the Constitutional Convention of Illinois:

"The President may speak to points of order in preference to other members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide points of order, subject to an appeal to the Convention by any one member."

MR. ESTEE. Well, what was the rule in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York?

MR. FREEMAN. In further reply to the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, rule twenty-eight, of the Senate says:

"Every question of order shall be decided by the President, subject to an appeal to the Senate by any member."

MR. ESTEE. Of course. But, Mr. President, the Senate was only composed of forty members. The Assembly, with eighty members, as far as my memory goes, always required three members to appeal. In Illinois, the gentleman may be right. There is a case where the Convention only consisted of eighty members. I will say this: that this rule came up for adoption in the committee, and the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, voted for it. I do not understand why a member should vote for a rule in the committee, and then come into the house and attempt to defeat it.

MR. REYNOLDS. I desire to correct the gentleman, by saying that I have said not one word except to correct the gentleman's statement. He seems to be very sensitive on the subject, and I do not wonder at it, in view of the extravagant statements that he has made here in regard to the legislative experience of all past time.

MR. EDGERTON. I desire to say one word. The rule of the Assembly—and as I understand that rule has prevailed every session—is as follows:

"He shall preserve order, and may speak to points of order in preference to the members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the house by any two members."

As I understand it, the rule in California never was that one member can appeal, and if this Convention should adopt such a rule any factious person in this Convention can delay its proceedings for a whole day at any time. The Assembly has eighty members. This Convention has nearly double that number. Your committee, consisting of fifteen members, carefully considered the question and came to the conclusion that it should take five members, and the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, cordially assented to that rule.

MR. REYNOLDS. I desire to say one word in vindication.

THE CHAIR. Does the gentleman rise to a question of privilege?

MR. REYNOLDS. Yes. When this Committee on Rules was appointed, at the first session of that committee a sub-committee of five was appointed. They put Mr. Barnes upon the committee and then proceeded to construct these rules. Yesterday morning the committee was called together, the rules were read over to the committee, and there was no such time given to the committee to consider these rules as is now given to this house. It is unfair in the gentleman to say that there has been any due consideration of these rules by this committee. There has been no due consideration of the rules by the committee. A sub-committee of five was sprung, and they have been the men who have considered these rules and not the committee. And further, it makes no difference to me whether the Senate of California, or the Legislature of California, have provided that five members shall take an appeal, or two, or three, or any other number. It is well known that the rules of the Legislature of California have been constructed under the most outrageous and unheard-of tyranny, and for the purpose of squelching and intimidating, and running through that Legislature any measure that was required by the powers that be. Now, sir, it makes no difference what the rule of the Legislature has been, but it does make a difference what the rule shall be.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman merely rose to a question of privilege, and is not at liberty to discuss the merits of the question.

MR. REYNOLDS. I yield the floor. I have said all I want to.

MR. HEISKELL. My experience differs from that of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton. The rule may have been changed, but at one time in the history of California it was the rule that one member could appeal provided he had a second.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alameda.

MR. McCALLUM. To strike out "five" and insert "two."

The motion was lost, on a standing vote, ayes sixty-seven, noes seventy.

MR. FREEMAN. I move that the word "five" be stricken out and the word "three" inserted.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: In view of the large number in this Convention, I would be in favor of increasing that number rather than diminishing it. I think if there is any attempt by the Chair to abuse his privilege there will be no difficulty in getting five members here to demand an appeal. I do not understand that it is the particular privilege of any member. It is a matter that affects the house, and not individuals. I do not think there will be any difficulty in getting five members to demand an appeal from anything that appears to violate the privileges of the house.

The amendment was adopted, on a standing vote, ayes seventy-five, noes sixty-two.

MR. STEDMAN. I desire to move the addition of the following words to that section: "Except the party appealing, who may speak twice."

MR. ROLFE. That would mean that the three members appealing could speak twice. It requires three members to appeal, and the amendment would therefore allow them all to speak twice.

MR. STEDMAN. In offering the amendment, I referred to the party first appealing. There would certainly be one to appeal first, and then two to second the call. Under my amendment it is intended that the first party appealing should have the right to speak twice.

The amendment was lost.

MR. COWDEN. I move to amend by inserting after the word "committees," "officers and attachés not now appointed, who shall be deemed by the Convention."

MR. LARKIN. I rise to a point of order—that the amendment is not germane to the rule.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is well taken.

Rule five was adopted.

Rule 6.—All committees shall be appointed and announced by the President, unless otherwise specially directed by the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 7.—All writs, warrants, and subpœnas, issued by order of the Convention, shall be under his hand and attested by the Secretary.

Adopted.

Rule 8.—The President shall have the right to name any member to perform the duties of the Chair, but such substitution shall not extend beyond an adjournment.

MR. BARBOUR. I move that the words "perform the duties of the Chair" be stricken out, and the word "preside" be inserted.

The amendment was lost and the rule adopted.

Rule 9.—The President shall have the general direction of the hall of the Convention and of the galleries. No persons, excepting members, officers, and attachés of the Convention, and such persons as may be invited by the Convention, or by the President, shall be admitted within the bar of the Convention. The Chairman of each Committee of the Whole, during the sitting of such committee, shall have the like power of preserving order in the hall and in the galleries.

Adopted.

Rule 10.—The Secretary must attend each day, and call the roll, read the Journal, and all propositions or resolutions. He shall have the direction of the Assistant Secretaries unless otherwise ordered.

Adopted.

Rule 11.—The Assistant Secretaries must attend each day, take charge of all resolutions, propositions, petitions, memorials, and other papers presented to the Convention, file and enter the same in the books provided for that purpose, and perform such other duties as may be directed by the Secretary of the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 12.—The Minute Clerk must keep a correct record of the proceedings of the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 13.—The Journal Clerk must record each day's proceedings in the Journal, from which they must be read each day by the Secretary, and then be authenticated by the signature of the President.

Adopted.

Rule 14.—The Sergeant-at-Arms must give a general supervision, under the direction of the President, to the hall of the Convention and rooms attached, attend during the sittings of the Convention, execute its commands and all process issued by its authority, keep an account of pay and mileage of members, attachés and employés, and prepare checks for the same.

MR. FREEMAN. I would like to inquire about this expression, "and prepare checks for the same."

THE CHAIR. Warrants, I suppose.

MR. EDGERTON. That rule is almost in the language of the rule of the Assembly. I suppose the Sergeant-at-Arms gives the check to the Controller of State to draw the warrant. There are other rules here. There is a rule which provides that there is no pay in some cases to be allowed; that persons who are absent on business, except committee duty, or sickness, shall not have any pay at all. The Sergeant-at-Arms keeps the accounts and gives a statement to the Controller of State. It will be found in the Assembly rule. I think it is also in that section of the Code regulating the duties of the Sergeants-at-Arms of the Senate and Assembly.

MR. FREEMAN. I cannot see any meaning in the words. I move to strike out the words "and prepare checks for the same."

MR. EDGERTON. The words "prepare checks" are copied from the Code.

MR. ESTEE. Because the Controller has to have a voucher in order to settle with the State.

THE CHAIR. I am informed by the Sergeant-at-Arms that the pay-roll is already printed and he has only to fill them out.

The motion was lost.

MR. FILCHER. I move to insert in place of "prepared checks for the" the words "receipt for warrants for the."

MR. EDGERTON. Every gentleman has to receipt for his warrant when he draws it. This is an authority for the Controller of State to draw his warrant. It is proper as it stands.

The motion was lost.

MR. HERRINGTON. I think it would be satisfactory to the members to strike out the words "and prepare checks for the same," and insert "and fill up the pay-rolls of members for the Controller."

MR. EDGERTON. The Sergeant-at-Arms keeps the pay-roll, and the Controller acts independent of the pay-roll. I hope the motion will not prevail.

MR. HUESTIS. Would a motion to strike out and insert be in order? I move to insert as follows: "and prepare for the Controller of State a pay-roll of members and attachés of this Convention."

The motion was lost and the rule adopted.

Rule 15.—The Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms must attend the sittings of the Convention each day, prohibit all persons except members, officers, and employés, and such other persons as may have the privilege of the floor assigned them by the Rules of the Convention, from entering within the bar unless upon invitation, and keep order in the halls, lobbies, and galleries.

Adopted.

Rule 16.—The Secretary and Assistant Secretaries, at the close of the session of the Convention, must deliver to the Secretary of State, duly marked, labeled, and arranged, all propositions, resolutions, petitions, memorials, and other papers belonging to the Convention, and also all books belonging to the same.

Adopted.

Rule 17.—Order of Business.—1. Roll call. 2. Reading and approval of the Journal. 3. Presentation of petitions and memorials; under which head shall be included remonstrances, communications from individuals and public bodies. 4. Communications from State officers; under which head shall be embraced, also, communications from public officers, and from corporations in response to calls for information. 5. Reports of standing committees, in the order in which they stand in the rules. 6. Reports of select committees. 7. Introduction of resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution. 8. Unfinished business. 9. Special orders. 10. General order. 11. Miscellaneous motions and resolutions.

MR. SHAFTER. I move to strike out of the fourth clause the words "in response to calls for information."

MR. LARKIN. I deem this one of the most important provisions in this rule. This Convention should have the power at any time to call for information from any corporation. It may be very important for us to ascertain some things.

MR. SHAFTER. That rule excludes any communication from corporations, except those that are made in response to a call for information. I want them all, either voluntary or otherwise, made subject to that order of business. As it is now they are excluded entirely.

MR. WYATT. I hope, Mr. President, that the fourth clause, under discussion, will not be stricken out. It will certainly be competent for this Convention to receive any and all proper communications from State officers, corporations, or any body or individual, and it will be the highest privilege and pleasure of the Convention to do so; but we certainly ought to have a rule by which we assert our authority, by which we intend to claim the authority, and by which we intend to exercise the authority of gaining information from State officers, from corporate bodies, or from any other body within the jurisdiction of the State of California. I hope, therefore, that the fourth clause of the rule under consideration will not be stricken out.

MR. McFARLAND. I do not think that the Convention apprehends the scope and purpose of the amendment. Now the clause as it reads is, "and from corporations in response to calls for information." Now, if you allow that clause to stand, you say, virtually, that a corporation shall not communicate with this Convention unless in response to a call for information.

MR. EDGERTON. The third order of business is the presentation of petitions and memorials. Now, any individual, or any corporation, can communicate with this Convention under that head.

MR. McFARLAND. From individuals and public bodies; it seems to me that it would exclude corporations, and that the fourth clause would be construed to mean that the corporations should not be allowed to communicate at all, except in response to calls for information. If you strike out these words, we can receive communications whether demanded or not. If any gentleman desires any information, of course by calling for it, he can get it. But it seems to me that if you leave these words in, we say in effect that we shall not receive any communications from corporations unless upon a call for information. Therefore I am in favor of the motion to strike out.

MR. SHAFTER. If the amendment is construed in this way, I ask leave to withdraw it.

Leave was granted, and the amendment withdrawn.

The resolution was then adopted.

Rule 18.—When a question is under debate, or before the Convention, no motion shall be received but: 1. To adjourn. 2. To lay on the table. 3. For the previous question. 4. To postpone to a day certain. 5. To commit or amend. 6. To postpone indefinitely. Which several motions shall have precedence in the order in which they are named; but the first three shall be decided without debate; and no motion to postpone to a day certain, to commit, or to postpone indefinitely, being decided, shall again be allowed on the same day, and at the same stage of the proceedings.

MR. FREEMAN. I see that in the latter part of this rule certain motions are spoken of. This last clause seems to be ambiguous. I therefore move to strike out "and at the same stage of the proceedings."

MR. EDGERTON. That rule was adopted from the rule of the Assembly of California. The committee thought that it was not proper that it should come up again at the same stage of the proceedings, but upon further deliberation, at some other hour of the day, it might be deemed advisable to take it up again.

The motion to strike out was lost, and the rule adopted.

Rule 19.—All questions relating to the priority of business shall be decided without debate.

Adopted.

Rule 20.—When a motion is made to refer any subject, and different committees should be proposed, the question shall be taken in the following order:

1. The Committee of the Whole Convention.
2. A Standing Committee.
3. A Select Committee.

Every committee of the Convention to whom a resolution or proposition has been referred shall report the same to the Convention within fifteen days from the time it is received by the Chairman of the committee, unless further time to report is granted, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention. Every proposition or resolution shall be referred to the appropriate standing committees as indicated by its name given herein.

Adopted.

Rule 21.—Any member may call for the division of a question when the sense will admit of it. A motion to strike out shall be deemed indivisible; but a motion to strike out being lost, shall neither preclude amendment nor a motion to strike out and insert.

MR. BARTON. I move to amend by inserting the following: "Provided, that in no case when the ayes and noes are called shall any two members of this Convention be permitted to pair off."

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. That is not germane.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is well taken.

The rule was adopted.

Rule 22.—Upon a call of the Convention the names of the members shall be called over by the Secretary and the absentees noted; after which the names of the absentees shall again be called over. The doors shall then be shut, and those for whom no sufficient excuses are made may, by order of those present, be taken into custody as they appear, or may be sent for and taken into custody wherever found by the Sergeant-at-Arms, or by a special messenger, to be appointed for that purpose.

MR. STEDMAN. I move that the following be prefixed to the rule: "Any three members have a right to demand a call of the Convention, but if any objection be made the demand shall be sustained by one fifth of the members present and."

Digitized by Google

Mr. EDGERTON. I think, perhaps, that the gentleman does not know that a call of the Convention cannot be had except by a majority vote of those present. A call of the Convention is never had except by a majority vote of the Convention or house itself. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his motion.

Mr. STEDMAN. I must differ with the gentleman from Sacramento. The Ohio Convention, from which I get that rule, was a body with one hundred and five members. Now I understand that any member can order a call of the house, no matter if there is not a majority present, no matter if certain members are present, if there is any body that three members can call for a call of the house. That is the reason that I have offered this, in order that it can be done by any three members at any time.

Mr. WATERS. Under the rules that we have, it does seem to me that any gentleman may move a call of the house. Any gentleman may second the motion. The motion will then be put, and if a majority vote for the call of the house, it is ordered. The rule that the gentleman announced was more strict even than ours. There a certain number had to move before a call could be voted on. As we have it here, if we find at any time our quorum is growing small, any gentleman may move for a call of the house. He gets a second to the motion, and the motion is put by the Chair. If a majority vote for it, the call is ordered. Then this rule comes into play. It seems to me that there is no amendment necessary to this rule.

Mr. STEDMAN. I withdraw it.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. I move to strike out the words "to be," between the words "wherever" and "found."

The motion prevailed and the rule was adopted.

Rule 23.—Upon a division or count of the Convention on any question, no person without the bar shall be counted.

Adopted.

Rule 24.—On all questions and motions whatsoever, the President shall take the sense of the Convention by ayes and noes, provided five members present shall so require it. When the ayes and noes are taken no member shall be allowed to vote who shall have entered the Convention after the calling of the roll is finished. The names of members shall be called in alphabetical order; provided further, that on all resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution, the final vote shall be taken by ayes and noes.

Adopted.

Rule 25.—No member shall be allowed to explain his vote or discuss the question while the ayes and noes are being called; and no member shall be allowed to change his vote after the vote is announced from the Chair.

Mr. BARTON. I believe that my amendment would apply to this rule. I, therefore, move to amend by inserting "provided that in no case where the ayes and noes are called shall any two members of this Convention be permitted to pair off."

The SECRETARY. Where is it to be put in?

Mr. EDGERTON. Let it be put in where it ought to be and then vote it down.

The amendment was lost.

Mr. MORSE. I move to amend rule twenty-four by inserting after the word "finished," in the fifth line, the words "nor shall a member be entitled to vote unless he is in his seat."

Mr. ESTEE. I hope this amendment will not be adopted. Sometimes it is a matter of convenience for a member to be in another part of the hall, and if he is not interfering with the work of the Convention, I see no reason why he should be deprived of his vote.

Mr. CROSS. It seems to me that there is good reason for requiring members to vote from their seats. It is the only way the Secretary can tell whether the person answering is the person entitled to vote. Now, during the past few days members have been answering to other members' names. A mistake is very easily discovered and corrected where a member is required to vote from his seat. An absent member's name has been voted here.

Mr. MORSE. I offered the amendment for the very reason stated by the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross. I think I have noticed members vote sometimes at a distance from their places, and it is difficult for the Secretary to tell whether a gentleman has voted, or whether somebody else voted by mistake. I think the member voting should be in his seat.

Mr. LARKIN. I regret very much to differ with my friend, Mr. Morse, upon this question. I might desire to vote upon a measure, and I believe that the Secretary will soon ascertain whether the person voting is the proper voting person. I don't think that the lobby is going to get in here and vote for us. I don't think we ought to be compelled to sit in our seats during a session of ten or twelve hours. If members should desire to stand at the side, or anywhere within the rail, they should be entitled to vote. If he is within the rail he should be entitled to vote.

Mr. McCALLUM. I wish to offer another amendment. There is no doubt but that the Secretary can tell who votes, by their personal appearance, and by their voices. I propose this amendment: after the word "finished" insert "except by consent of the Convention." As this reads, no member coming in after the roll has been called, this long roll of one hundred and fifty members, can vote at all, under any circumstances.

The CHAIR. After the roll is finished?

Mr. McCALLUM. By consent of the Convention. I ask to insert the words "except by consent of the Convention." That is, not after the result has been announced; that would be too late, I admit, but after the roll is finished, and the result not announced, a member coming in ought to be permitted to vote.

Mr. EDGERTON. I hope that the suggestion of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, will not prevail. The rule reads: "When the ayes and noes are taken no member shall be allowed to vote who shall have entered the Convention after the calling of the roll is finished." I do not think any gentleman here ought to be permitted to leave the Convention and speculate upon results and then come in and vote. There is another general rule that any of these rules may be temporarily suspended by a two-third vote, and there is no danger of injustice being done.

Mr. McCALLUM. I withdraw my motion.

Mr. MORSE'S amendment was lost.

Mr. STEDMAN. I move to amend rule twenty-five by adding the following words: "All members of this Convention must vote on every question, unless a sufficient excuse, to be accepted by the Convention, be given."

Mr. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. My point is that it is not germane to the subject-matter.

Mr. ESTEE. I am in favor of embodying that rule somewhere, but I do not think this is the proper place for it. I suggest to the gentleman that he withdraw it, and have it placed in a separate rule.

Mr. STEDMAN. I will withdraw it.

Mr. LAINE. I would like to inquire of the Chairman of the Committee on Rules in regard to the meaning of the first clause of this rule. It reads: "No member shall be allowed to explain his vote or discuss the question while the ayes and noes are being called."

Mr. ESTEE. We understand it to be this: after the first name is called that no business can intervene, but that any member, when he rises to vote, of course, by leave of the house, can make an explanation. The object is that the roll call shall not be disturbed by any member rising to speak upon any question, and if he explains his vote he must confine himself to the explanation.

Rule twenty-five was adopted.

Rule 26.—It shall be the duty of each member who moves that any committee be instructed to inquire into the expediency of amending or revising the existing Constitution, to point out the amendment which he deems expedient, in writing, to accompany his motion.

Mr. WYATT. I hope the gentleman will explain what is meant by that rule.

Mr. ESTEE. I would ask the gentleman to state in what respect. It seems to me to be plain language. "It shall be the duty of each member who moves that any committee be instructed to inquire into the expediency of amending or revising the existing Constitution, to point out the amendment which he deems expedient, in writing, to accompany his motion." The proposition is this, Mr. President: A gentleman may feel a deep interest in the question of taxation. He introduces a resolution that the Committee on Taxation report to this Convention a certain section declaring that mortgages shall be taxed, for instance, and the object of this rule is that the gentleman shall embody in his resolution the identical instructions to be conveyed to the committee, so that the committee shall fully understand the wish of the house.

The rule was adopted.

Rule 27.—Motions and reports may be committed or recommitted at the pleasure of the Convention, and with or without instructions from the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 28.—No motion or proposition of a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.

Mr. HERRINGTON. I move to strike out the word "of" and insert the word "on" after the word "proposition."

Mr. EDGERTON. The rule is right as it is. The proposition is of a subject, not on a subject.

The amendment was lost.

Mr. McCALLUM. I move to amend by adding after the word "amendment" the words "or substitute."

Mr. ESTEE. There is no substitute in the rules.

The CHAIR. Rule thirty-two makes a substitute an amendment.

Mr. McCALLUM. I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. WATERS. I rise to a point of order. It is twelve o'clock. Under the rule that has been adopted, the Convention must take a recess until one P. M.

The CHAIR. The point of order is well taken. The Convention will take a recess until one P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at one o'clock. Mr. Murphy in the chair. Roll call dispensed with.

Mr. BIGGS. I think the roll should be called.

The CHAIR. Does the gentleman insist upon the roll.

Mr. BIGGS. I move that the absentees of this morning be called.

The CHAIR. I will suggest if there are any absentees in the hall, they will rise and be recorded. The question is upon the adoption of rule twenty-nine.

Mr. ESTEE. Before passing to rule twenty-nine, I understood we were considering rule twenty-eight, when we took a recess.

The CHAIR. Rule twenty-eight was adopted—no, it was not adopted. The question was on the adoption of rule twenty-eight.

Mr. ESTEE. I move to amend by striking out the words "motion or proposition of a."

The motion prevailed, and the rule, as amended, was adopted.

Rule 29.—A motion may be withdrawn, by leave of the Convention, at any time before amendment or decision.

Adopted.

Rule 30.—A motion to adjourn shall always be in order. The Secretary shall enter on the minutes the name of any member moving an adjournment, and, also, the hour at which the motion is made.

Mr. TINNIN. I move to strike out the word "Secretary," and insert "Minute Clerk." The Secretary has nothing to do with it.

The CHAIR. No objection, the correction will be made.

Digitized by Google

MR. MCCALLUM. I move to amend rule thirty, by inserting after the word "order" in the first line, the words, "and shall be decided without debate."

Mr. SWING. I think rule eighteen covers this same ground.

The amendment was rejected, and the rule adopted.

Rule 31. No motion shall be debated until the same shall be seconded and distinctly announced by the President; and it shall be reduced to writing, if desired by the President or any member, and shall be read by the Secretary, before the same shall be debated.

Adopted.

Rule 32.—A substitute shall be deemed an amendment, and be treated in all respects as such.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I don't rise for the purpose of offering an amendment to the rule, but to ask the Chairman of the committee if I am right in my construction of it: "A substitute shall be deemed an amendment, and be treated in all respects as such." Then, all substitutes are to be treated as amendments; in other words, substitutes are not to be entertained in any case. That will do away with substitutes entirely. Now, if I understand the law properly, an amendment to an amendment to an amendment is not in order. But a substitute for a pending resolution, and the amendment to that resolution, is in order, and the resolution and its amendment may be superseded by a substitute. I am not in favor of this radical innovation. If a resolution is presented, to which an amendment is offered, and the Convention is opposed to the whole theory of the proposition, the most expeditious way to dispose of it, is to adopt a substitute for the whole thing, and then use the substitute as a basis of action.

MR. TINNIN. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman has not offered any amendment.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is well taken.

MR. MCCALLUM. I am speaking against the resolution itself. Now, I move now, Mr. President, that this substitute be recommitted—that this rule thirty-two be recommitted to the Committee on Rules, and I ask this Convention whether it is prepared to dispense entirely with the practice of legislative bodies of using substitutes. I say it is a convenient and practical mode of arriving at the sense of the majority of the Convention; much more expeditious than the mode here proposed.

MR. TINNIN. In answer to the gentleman, and for his information, I will state that this rule has governed the legislative bodies of this State for a good many years, and as a general thing I think it has worked well, and given general satisfaction.

MR. ESTEE. This rule was interposed to do away with the question as to whether it was possible to have a substitute that was not an amendment in itself; and second, because it was not thought wise that there should be four questions pending before the house at one time. Now, sir, there can be the original question, and there can be the first and second amendments, and then there would be a substitute besides. That would be four. Now, we propose to treat a substitute as an amendment, and there will be but three questions before the house, and if the gentleman wants to reach the sense of the house by adopting any new proposition, he can refer it to a committee with instructions, and in half a dozen different ways, that are familiar to him. I trust this rule, of all others, will be adopted, as it will be found to facilitate the business of this body. You will find, by and by, in considering these amendments, the different members jumping up and proposing this amendment and that amendment, and we will get very much mixed, and if you will treat these substitutes as amendments, then there never can be any confusion. Then there will be the main question, the amendment, and the amendment to the amendment, and those three questions are familiar to all persons on this floor. I hope, for the sake of simplifying matters, the rule will be adopted. It has been the rule in our legislative assemblies for a number of years, and it has worked well.

MR. WATERS. I will state that under this rule we may have two amendments. One of these amendments, or both of them, may be substitutes. We call them amendments, although they may be substitutes. Now, the committee have recommended this rule so that there cannot be so many motions pending at one time. It cuts off the possibility of there being four or five questions before the house at one time.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: It seems to me if we adopt this rule as it reads, it will in a great measure do away with the real benefits arising from the use of substitutes. It was illustrated yesterday, when one gentleman offered a resolution that "A" be appointed Doorkeeper. Now, if this rule is adopted, another gentleman might amend by making the salary fifty dollars a month, and another might amend the amendment by making it thirty dollars a month. Now, under this rule, if another member wants to move that "B" be appointed Doorkeeper instead of "A." before that can be done we will have to take three separate votes; vote the amendment to the amendment down, and then vote the amendment down, and then vote the original resolution down, and then take up the resolution to appoint "B" Doorkeeper. Now when there are three such motions before the house, the whole business can be closed out at one stroke, and that stroke is the substitute. That is the advantage which a substitute has; it enables us to arrive at the sense of the Convention by a single vote, and I think we should adhere to the principle of the substitute. A substitute, by one vote, can take the place of three or four.

MR. MCCALLUM. Suppose this to be the case. Suppose an amendment to the Constitution is proposed, the whole theory of the proposition the majority of this Convention are opposed to. An amendment is offered, and an amendment to the amendment; so far you can go with amendments; but the third amendment, which would be a substitute, would be ruled out of order, because, as has been suggested, you can't propose an amendment to an amendment to an amendment. Now, we will suppose that all the time it is clearly the judgment of the Convention that the whole proposition is the wrong basis of action. Now, the matter being an important one, the roll is called. We have to call the roll on amendment one and on amendment two, and spend all that time calling the roll twice, whereas, if the Convention can have the opportunity, it can vote on a substitute to take the place of the original motion. I know that many innovations have been made in the customs, but whether wisely made or not, I cannot say, but as far as my own judgment is concerned, I think not. I don't believe but what, with the intelligence of this Convention, they will be able to keep the run of even four propositions—the resolution, the amendment, the amendment to the amendment, and the substitute—for in that case, without this rule, the first question will be on the adoption of the amendment, which will take the place of the resolution and the two amendments, whichever is in accordance with the will of the majority of the Convention. The question in that case is on the substitute.

MR. WATERS. It does seem to me that the logic of the gentleman is entirely out of the way. He is presuming that the substitute, or in other words, that the last motion to be put is always right, and that the substitute will always represent the wishes of the majority of the Convention. If the rule is to allow four or five amendments, he is presuming that the last one is always going to be the best. If we limit it to two amendments the matter can be reached just as quickly as the other way. There is no reason to presume that the last amendment offered, if we allow four or five, is going to be the best one. Let us limit the number, and then we can keep straight and know what we are doing.

MR. WEST. I am not at all particular whether this section is adopted or not. I am clearly of the opinion that the committee intended to shorten the process in this Convention by the adoption of that rule. Now it is well known by gentlemen of experience in parliamentary law that there are four propositions, the original, the amendment, the amendment to the amendment, and the substitute. It is an established rule of parliamentary usage that the mover of the original proposition, and the friends of the original proposition, should have the benefit of all the amendments; in other words, that the friends have the privilege of amending the original proposition, and putting it in the best light possible. Then if a member offers a substitute the two propositions come up on their respective merits. Now, your committee endeavored to shorten and simplify matters as much as possible.

MR. HERRINGTON. It occurs to me that these two rules, twenty-nine and thirty-two, taken together, solve this problem. "A substitute shall be deemed an amendment and be treated in all respects as such." Then rule twenty-eight: "No subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of an amendment." That does away entirely with any such thing as a substitute, and makes a substitute actually an amendment, because it must pertain to the same subject.

MR. ROLFE. I am in favor of adopting the rule as originally recommended by the committee. I call the gentleman's attention to rule twenty-eight, which says: "No subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of an amendment." Now, unless a substitute is treated as an amendment, why any gentleman might get up here and move that when this Convention adjourn it do adjourn until next Monday. Another gentleman might get up and move as a substitute that this Convention appoint an additional Page. Now, if a substitute is not treated as an amendment—and I will confess right here that I have had no experience in parliamentary law, never was in a legislative body in my life—but it does seem to me that unless a substitute is treated as an amendment a man may make an amendment to a motion, another may offer an amendment to the amendment, then another gentleman rises and makes a motion, or offers something as a substitute to the whole thing, and then another gentleman will move an amendment to the substitute, and another will get up and move an amendment to the amendment to the substitute, and thus we will have about six propositions before the Convention at one time. If gentlemen want so many propositions to be entertained, let them amend the rule so that an amendment to an amendment to an amendment may be entertained. Let them do it directly, and not try to accomplish it in this roundabout way. I am in favor of the rule as it stands.

MR. WELLIN. I move to strike out the rule entirely.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I move to strike out the rule under consideration and insert the following:

THE CHAIR. There is a motion before the house to recommit this to the Committee on Rules.

The motion to recommit was lost.

The question being on a motion to strike out, it was lost.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I offer an amendment. "A substitute shall be in order, but shall not take precedence of pending amendments; but after all pending amendments have been acted upon, the substitute shall take precedence of the original motion."

MR. ESTEE. That defeats the very object of the rule.

The amendment was rejected.

The question being on the adoption of the rule, it was adopted.

Rule 33.—The previous question shall only be put when demanded by five members.

Adopted.

Rule 34.—All incidental questions of order arising after a motion is made for the previous question, shall be decided, whether on appeal or otherwise, without debate.

Adopted.

Rule 35.—The previous question shall be put in the following form: "Shall the main question be now put?" and all debate upon the main question shall be suspended until the previous question shall be decided. After the adoption of the previous question, the sense of the Convention shall forthwith be taken upon original amendments reported by a committee, upon pending amendments, and then upon the main question, without debate.

MR. ESTEE. I move to amend so that it will read, "after the adoption of the previous question the sense of the Convention shall forthwith be taken: first, upon original amendments reported by a committee, then upon pending amendments, and then upon the main question, without debate."

The motion prevailed, and the rule as amended was adopted.

Rule 36.—When a question is indefinitely postponed, the same shall not be again introduced during the session of the Convention.

Mr. McFARLAND. I don't know that I understand the purport of that rule: "When a question is indefinitely postponed, the same shall not be again introduced during the session of the Convention." Now, sir, I understand that this Convention, at the last moment, at any time, may take any action it pleases upon any proposition that has been presented. I do not understand that if it votes one way to-day it cannot vote another way to-morrow. Is the majority of the Convention to be bound hand and foot because a question has been indefinitely postponed? If it is, I am not in favor of any such rule.

Mr. ESTEE. The purpose seems to be very clear. It is that when a question is brought before this body for discussion and disposition, and is disposed of by indefinite postponement, it cannot be brought before the body again during this session, unless by suspending the rules. Now, any one of these rules can be suspended by a two-thirds vote, and if at any period it shall be found that we have made a mistake, you can certainly get two thirds of this Convention to agree to suspend the rules. The object is to facilitate business, and I hope the rule will be adopted.

Mr. WHITE. I move to insert the words "without the consent of the Convention."

Mr. McFARLAND. Now the explanation given by the Chairman satisfies me that we ought not to adopt this rule. He says the rules may be suspended by a two-thirds vote. Now, suppose a majority of this Convention vote to-day to indefinitely postpone a proposition, and suppose next week, or next month, after further consideration, the majority are in favor of the same proposition. According to the gentleman's motion you cannot act upon it again unless you can get a two-thirds vote. I say it is not right. I think we ought to be open to the last moment to conviction and reason. If I should vote to-day against a measure, and to-morrow I should become convinced that I was wrong, I should want the privilege of voting the other way, and the majority should be allowed to undo what it has done at any time. In that way the minority would be able to control the majority and I say it is not right. It seems to me to be a very dangerous precedent to establish. I do not understand that you can bind this Convention in any way; I understand that the majority can do as they please. I am opposed to this rule.

Mr. BARBOUR. I am opposed to this rule, and still more opposed to it after hearing the explanations of the gentleman from San Francisco. He says, after a question has been fully discussed and is indefinitely postponed, that it is permanently disposed of. Now, sir, I should like to know how it follows that a question can be discussed before it can be postponed. It seems to me that with this rule the minority might gag the majority, unless the Convention could muster a two-thirds vote to take it up again after it has been indefinitely postponed, and I am opposed to any such gag rule as this. It seems to me the majority should always be able to take up a question, and I am opposed to the motion. We have rule eighteen, which provides what shall be done in such a case: that is that a question shall not be taken up again on the same day, at the same stage of the proceedings. Now it seems to me if there is a disposition to cut off debate and gag this Convention, this rule will do it, and I am opposed to it.

Mr. ESTEE. The gentleman from San Francisco seems to entertain the idea that every member who does not believe as he does, is trying to gag him, and trying to gag the Convention. The rule referred to here is an old, well recognized rule of parliamentary law, and it is no innovation. It was not first discovered by this committee. It is as old as the history of parliamentary bodies, and your committee placed it among the rules because they thought—and they still believe—that in a body as large as this, they should have such a rule, namely, that when a question is indefinitely postponed, the same shall not again be introduced during the session of the Convention. Now, rule eighteen prescribes that the question of indefinite postponement shall be the last one disposed of by the Convention. In other words, you can exhaust the whole list of motions under these very rules before you reach the question of indefinite postponement. You have the privilege of amending a proposition as much as you please; you can perfect it, and then, after full consideration, if the majority of the Convention deliberately votes to postpone it, I want to know where the gag law applies. If there be any gag law in it, it is that the minority are attempting to impose upon the majority, and I deny that this committee has attempted to gag the gentleman from San Francisco or any other gentleman.

Mr. BARBOUR. Suppose a motion to postpone is made, and suppose the previous question is immediately moved, what are you going to do about it?

Mr. ESTEE. If the gentleman would take the trouble to study parliamentary law a little, he would have some idea of these things. If this rule is not adopted there will be no end to the debate. A question will be indefinitely postponed to-day, and to-morrow it will be brought up again and a long debate will again ensue, and the next day the same thing over again. This rule was intended to be in the interest of the business of the Convention and not as a gag.

Mr. RINGGOLD. This is a gag law, sir, and strikes directly at the minority, and I hope the minority will be wise enough to defeat it.

Mr. HERRINGTON. I move to amend by inserting after the word "question," in line one, the following: "other than such as relates to the Constitution directly," so as to read, "When a question, other than such as relates to the Constitution directly," etc.

Mr. HEUSTIS. I move to amend by adding "except by a majority vote." It seems to me that this is right and proper.

Mr. FILCHER. I raise the point of order that anything can be done by a majority vote any way, without the rule, and such a rule would be entirely useless.

Mr. HEUSTIS. I don't think the gentleman's point is well taken. I think it is nothing more than right that if this Convention to-day should arrive at a conclusion upon some proposition to be embodied in the Constitution, and in three weeks hence it clearly appeared to them that they were wrong in the first instance, they should have the right, by a majority vote, to undo what they had done and reverse their former action.

Mr. SHOEMAKER. The rule, as it stands now, is very old. We find it in Jefferson's Manual, page one hundred and forty-four. There is no gag about it.

Mr. McFARLAND. I am very sorry that in making a set of rules, party questions should be sprung here. I have no idea that this rule was ever intended to gag any member or any number of members in this Convention, but I am opposed to the adoption of the rule on principle. I understand a Convention of this kind to be very different from a Legislature. The Legislature does its work every two years. If any wrong is done it can be remedied within two years. A Constitutional Convention does its work for a generation. I do not apprehend that any clause can be put in the Constitution which we intend to submit to the people, unless the majority is in favor of it; but I do not believe that any clause the majority wants to put in there ought to be kept out by the minority, and I do not believe that the majority are going to be bound up with a rule like that. Now, there are a number of questions to come up here, upon which I have no decided opinion at present; I desire to hear the reasoning and views of others. Now, a proposition may be brought up here, and without discussion may be indefinitely postponed, and be forgotten. Afterwards, it may become apparent that such a proposition is proper, and then a minority of the Convention can prevent it. This is the direct effect of the rule. I understand that such a rule as this is common in legislative bodies. I do not know whether such is the case or not. But there is no comparison between the two bodies. The majority of this Convention, if they make a mistake, should be able to get right at any moment.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: These rules are for the future government of this Convention. As has well been said by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, this is no ordinary legislative body. We should have the utmost freedom in the consideration of all questions relating to the organic law, and it would be unjust to the people of this State—it would be unreasonable in the extreme—if at some time when there is a thin house, a proposition by a bare majority vote should be indefinitely postponed, to say in our rules, that at some future time a majority of the whole Convention could not call it up again and reopen the subject. It seems to me that the amendment offered by Mr. Heustis exactly meets the case. Let the question be considered as disposed of unless the Convention, by a majority vote, sees fit to do otherwise.

Mr. HAGER. Mr. President: In the first place, it is well enough to ascertain what the question is, as we all know it is not a new one. Now, this rule is as old as legislative assemblies themselves. It is recorded in Jefferson's Manual, which is nearly one hundred years old. I make these remarks merely because gentlemen have got up here and picked flaws at the committee, as if there was some intention to interfere with the rights of the majority. Some gentlemen seem to think that they are more holy than others, and I regret that these remarks have been made on this floor, and I hope that discipline will be enforced against those members who are constantly making these flings. This rule, whether good or not, is an old rule, and I will refer to Jefferson's Manual to corroborate what I say:

"It is proper that every deliberative assembly should have certain forms of questions, so adapted as will enable them to dispose of every proposition that may come up. They are—first, the previous question; second, to postpone indefinitely; third, to adjourn to a definite day; fourth, to lie on the table; fifth, to commit; and, sixth, to amend."

Now, this is the order of privileged questions in all parliamentary assemblies. It is true that each of these questions should be understood. Now, it would be much better if gentlemen would inform themselves in regard to parliamentary rules, and discuss them on their merits, instead of making these personal flings. I am on the committee which reported these rules, and I stand here to say that there is nothing in the rules so reported that has not been found in the rules governing legislative bodies from time immemorial. Now, if it is the desire of the Convention to postpone something indefinitely, the majority must rule. I care not whether the rule is adopted or not.

Mr. PRESIDENT. I would like to ask leave of absence for Mr. Wilson, of San Francisco, for two days.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Nobody disputes, as I understand it, that this is not a new rule, or that it is a common rule in legislative bodies; but the difficulty is, it does not apply to a body of this kind. If a resolution or proposition is introduced in Congress, and indefinitely postponed, the same proposition can be renewed at the next session of Congress, within one year after the original matter has been rejected. But not so here. This Convention sits but once. There can be no renewal of the proposition hereafter. Whatever is done, must be done while we are assembled here; and I say it is unjust, that if by chance a bare majority, at some time when the house is thin, vote to indefinitely postpone a subject-matter, it shall take a two-thirds vote to take it up again. We have important questions affecting the rights of the people; as to corporations; affecting the question of taxation; and other matters of momentous importance. Now, suppose, when one of these important questions comes up, a bare majority of a thin house votes to indefinitely postpone it; can it be argued that, after subsequent reflection, it will require two thirds of a full house to renew the proposition and call it up again as a basis of action? I submit, Mr. President, that the amendment should not be adopted.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I must say that I agree with the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, that this is no new rule. I think it is no endeavor to stifle the will of any person, or of any class of persons; that it is not to be offered by the majority against the minority. It is a usual rule in parliamentary bodies. But one thing seems to have been lost sight of in this matter, and that is this: rule fifty-nine of the rules presented for consideration, says, "the rules of parliamentary practice contained in Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies shall govern the Convention in all cases to which they are applicable, and in which they are not inconsistent with the standing rules of the Convention."

Cushing's Manual, section sixty-seven, lays it down as a law of parliamentary practice, that a motion to indefinitely postpone shall have the effect of absolutely removing the question from the consideration of the assembly during that session; in other words, the whole consideration is wiped out, and cannot be considered again during that sitting. So, if rule fifty-nine is adopted, and nothing is said about indefinite postponement, Cushing will govern; and a motion to indefinitely postpone will have the effect of absolutely removing the subject from the consideration of the body during the session. I am in favor of the rule as amended by the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis.

MR. GREGG. I ask leave of absence for Mr. Prouty.

Granted.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: In reply to the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, if he will look at rule sixty, he will find that any rule adopted may be suspended by a two-third vote, so that the question simply is, shall it require a majority vote or a two-thirds vote to call up a subject again after it has been indefinitely postponed. Now, sir, if this is a gag law, we have many rules that may in the same sense be considered gag laws. For instance, a motion to adjourn is not debatable, that is a gag law. A motion to table is not debatable, and, therefore, that is a gag law, and the previous question shuts off all further discussion, and that is a gag law. Now, as an offset to the suggestions of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, in regard to a majority vote in a thin house. Here is a case. A question is debated and considered for three or four days, or a week, and is finally indefinitely postponed. Any friend of the measure may give notice of a reconsideration, and the next day the whole question is reopened, and another long discussion on the merits takes place. Now, it seems to me that after the question has been so thoroughly discussed and ventilated, and finally disposed of, that it should require at least two thirds of the Convention to revive it. The same gentleman says the rule is not applicable in a Constitutional Convention. If he will look he will find that they had the same rule in the Constitutional Convention of Illinois and other States. It is right, and I hope it will be adopted.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I think the rule as it stands is entirely too broad. There is no doubt about this being a general rule in parliamentary bodies, but it is entirely too broad for a Constitutional Convention. It seems to me that the amendment of the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis, is entirely useless, as there would be no need for a rule to prescribe what the majority might do. I would move, if it is in order, to insert the words, "Unless it comes from a regular standing committee of the house." I think this rule, as it stands, will be found mischievous.

THE CHAIR. There is an amendment to an amendment already. The question is now upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis.

MR. VAN DYKE. I think a majority of this Convention should be allowed to resume the consideration of any subject if they find they have committed an error.

MR. BARBOUR. I do not rise for the purpose of discussing this matter again, but for a personal explanation. It seems strange that gentlemen should take it to heart so when I stated that this rule might be used as a gag. Now, I made no accusations against any gentleman. On the contrary, I think they have presented us with a fair set of rules; but they themselves didn't consider the effect of this rule. I made no imputation against the committee or any member, but I stated that the rule might be used as a gag. We may not know all the parliamentary law, but the weakest on this floor has the right to be heard, and my common sense teaches me that a majority of the Convention should be allowed to say what shall come before it.

MR. ANDREWS. It seems to me that this body should have some rule by which it can prevent a subject from being thrust upon it repeatedly. I believe such an amendment as that proposed by Mr. Howard might be acceptable.

MR. ESTEE. I do not see why that would not be acceptable. I think that is all right.

MR. McCALLUM. I prefer the amendment offered by Mr. Heustis. I don't think this Convention should be bound by the action of a majority of any committee. The committees probably may reflect the will of the Convention, but I don't wish this question to depend upon the will of a majority of any committee. I prefer to strike this out. I admit that there is a necessity to have an end to the discussion of questions coming before this Convention, but to say that a motion may not be renewed unless by a vote of two-thirds, in a Constitutional Convention, would place this Convention in this position: either the Chair would be in a position to overrule the rule itself, or the Convention would overrule the Chair, and sustain the rule; for the majority of the Convention will have its way, and if they find that they have done so ridiculous a thing as to tie themselves up in such a manner that the majority cannot rule without overruling the Chair, even when the Chair rules correctly, the chances are the Chair will be overruled. I don't propose to reproduce the arguments used by other gentlemen, but to say that a Constitutional Convention should be governed exactly by the same rules as a Legislature, seems to me to be absurd and unwarrantable. This is a Convention to revise the Constitution, and not to pass particular laws during one out of many sessions. It would be just as consistent to provide that after the Legislature has passed a law it could not be repealed, unless six out of nine should agree to it. Now, I have something which I wish to offer as a substitute—I suppose it might be called an amendment, but it is a substitute for the whole matter. Strike out and insert as follows: "Rule 36.—When a question is indefinitely postponed, the same shall not be again introduced during the session of the Convention, except by the consent of a majority of the whole Convention."

I think there should be some limit. I think the majority of the whole Convention is as far as we can require.

MR. HOWARD. I propose to add these words to the end of the rule: "unless upon the recommendation of a standing committee." Now, sir, to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Heustis, is simply to place the question, not in the hands of the majority, but in the hands of the minority, and enable them to gag the whole Convention. Now, with ten men combined together they can for one hundred days prevent the consideration of anything but one subject. We never could dispose of it, for all the gentleman would have to do, is to have motions enough to use up the day, and the next day he may renew it—and the next; and the whole proceedings of the Convention might be stopped, perhaps, if that rule is adopted. We should not place ourselves in that position, where the whole proceedings can be stopped by an obstinate minority.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I simply want to say a few words in addition to what I said before. This proposition relates not only to the formation of the Constitution, but to every matter of business that comes before this body, whether it be the election of Clerk or Doorkeeper, or any other matter, that rule applies. It relates to the election of shorthand reporters; for instance, suppose a gentleman moves here for the third or fourth time that we go into the election of a reporter, and the question is debated for three or four hours, and the Convention want to get rid of it, and some one moves that it be indefinitely postponed; that ends the matter under this rule, and we hear no more about it, unless two thirds of the Convention vote to bring it up again. Every gentleman will say that is right. Now, in a thin Convention it may be brought up again if this rule is not adopted, day after day, until it finally succeeds. Now, I do not see why the majority have not the right to end that matter at once by indefinitely postponing it. I would agree to an amendment similar to the one proposed by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard, and if a proposition which has been voted down should be presented again, let it first be referred to a standing committee before again being considered by the Convention. Suppose some member should propose that the Judges should be appointed by the Governor, and he gets up day after day and moves to have that proposition inserted in the Constitution, and it is debated two or three hours each time, would it be anything unfair—would it be any hardship—for some member to say, we have had enough of this matter, and move that it be indefinitely postponed; that would end the matter. Now, if we don't have some rule of that kind by which we can suppress some ambitious man, we may be kept here one hundred days without doing anything.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Heustis, to add the words "except by a majority vote."

Mr. McCALLUM. I will withdraw my amendment, and ask the gentleman to add to his amendment, "to be decided without debate."

MR. HEUSTIS. I accept the amendment.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: From the vote taken, it appears to be the sense of the Convention that a majority vote has power to take up a motion that has been defeated. Now, the rule as it reads, allows this privilege only on questions that may have been indefinitely postponed. There are other questions than indefinite postponement. If it is the sense of this Convention that a majority may take up a proposition that has been defeated, I now move to amend the rule by striking out the words "indefinitely postponed," and insert "when a question is lost," so as to read: "When a question is lost on any final vote," etc.

MR. FREEMAN. I think that comes more properly under the next section, under the head of reconsideration.

MR. WATERS. It is germane to this very section. I see no reason why a matter that has been defeated by indefinite postponement can be again considered, when a matter that has been defeated by any other kind of a final vote cannot come in on the same footing. Why should questions that have been indefinitely postponed have this preference over matters that have been lost by any other kind of a final vote? I cannot see the justice of it.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Bernardino.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: By the vote taken it is clearly the established ruling of the Convention that a majority can take up a question that has been finally disposed of. Now, I fully concur with the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Waters, that there should be no privileged matters in this body. Now, we have decided that when a question has been indefinitely postponed, it can be again taken up by a majority vote, and why should we require a two-thirds vote to take up propositions that have been defeated by other means? I don't see how the house can do otherwise than sustain this amendment, and be consistent. The Convention cannot surely go back on its own act.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the amendment proposed by Mr. Waters.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: Now, the effect of the vote is not as represented by the gentleman. It does not make it a privileged question, for at any time, if any question is lost on one day, if it is not lost on a motion to indefinitely postpone, it may come up upon a simple motion, and may be considered on the following day after being voted down.

MR. BEERSTECHER. As I understand the gentleman's amendment from San Bernardino, it is where there has been a final vote upon any question. Now, the vote on indefinite postponement is not a final vote in any sense of the term, and I shall vote against his amendment.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I think the motion to indefinitely postpone is one of the most final votes it is possible to have, and I hope now, if the majority of this Convention wants to control these matters, after they have been indefinitely postponed, it will be true to itself and say that on every final vote when a question is lost, it shall be considered again by a bare majority; and that is but fair, because some of the gravest questions may come under this head. Now, if we adopt this report, and adopt Cushing's Manual, we will be in this position: when a question comes up, and is postponed indefinitely, it can be brought up again the next day by a bare majority, but when a question has been defeated by any other kind of a final vote, a majority cannot bring it up again. Let us have uniformity in the rules, and if it is the intention that a majority can reëxamine a question after it is lost, let that rule apply to all questions alike.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I call attention to section thirty-seven of the report of the committee: "On the day succeeding that on which a final vote on any proposition or resolution concerning the Constitution, or other resolution, has been taken, said vote may be reconsidered on motion of any member, provided notice of intention to move such reconsideration shall have been given on the day on which such final vote was taken, by a member voting with the majority; and it shall not be in order for any member to move a reconsideration on the day on which the final vote was taken." Now, it seems to me, as suggested by the gentlemen from Sacramento, that the motion of the gentleman, Mr. Waters, ought to refer to that section and not to section thirty-six. I think we should have a clear, positive, distinct declaration of the position a motion to indefinitely postpone shall occupy in the rules of this body, and it seems to me this is an attempt to get round the vote just taken. We desire to have a distinct declaration of what position this occupies, and if we desire a further declaration on other propositions, let it be inserted in section thirty-seven. I hope the gentleman's amendment will be voted down.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will be voted down. I desire to offer a substitute to take its place, to be added at the end of the section, as follows: "Provided, such questions as do not directly relate to the Constitution shall not be again introduced except by a two-thirds vote."

THE CHAIR. The gentleman had better wait until Mr. Waters' amendment is disposed of. There is already an amendment to an amendment.

The amendment offered by Mr. Waters was lost, on a standing vote—ayes forty-six, noes fifty-four.

THE CHAIR. The question is now on the amendment proposed by Mr. Herrington.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: What we are endeavoring to get at, as I understand it, is to preserve the main important rights of the body in the framing of the Constitution, and at the same time get rid of as much useless labor as possible. By cutting off the reconsideration of foolish motions, relating to unimportant subjects, you do avoid very much useless labor. The way the rule now stands we have preserved our rights under the circumstances, and it leaves us to use our best judgment as to whether a motion, having once been disposed of, shall be again brought up; but we are not precluded by our own rules from doing as we may see fit. That is our right—it is the dearest right which this Convention has—and I am glad that this has been established as clearly and distinctly as it has been. By reason of this amendment we have secured all the advantages that we could have secured by the original form of the rule in relation to the minor subjects coming before the Convention, while we have preserved the most important rights in relation to subjects of great importance.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington.

The amendment was rejected, on a standing vote—ayes forty-two, noes sixty-two.

THE CHAIR. The question is now on the original rule as amended.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment. Strike out the first clause as far as the word "postpone," and substitute the following in lieu thereof: "When a question has been disposed of, either by indefinite postponement or by any other final vote," so that the rule will read: "Rule 36.—When a question has been disposed of, either by indefinite postponement, or by any other final vote, it shall not again be introduced."

THE CHAIR. That same proposition was contained in the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Waters, and has been voted down.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: It hardly comes under the same clause. I think by comparing them there will be found a radical difference in the two propositions.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the amendment proposed by Mr. Blackmer.

MR. HEUSTIS. If the gentleman will allow me; I understand that question has already been disposed of when the house refused to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will hold that it is a little different. I think it is in order.

MR. FREUD. I hope, Mr. President, the amendment will prevail.

MR. FREEMAN. I hope the amendment will not prevail. We have two rules now, one on indefinite postponement and one on reconsideration. If we can dispose of this one on indefinite postponement then we can take up the next one, in relation to reconsideration, which is embraced in rule thirty-seven. This amendment should be voted down, and if necessary it can be considered when we come to rule thirty-seven.

MR. BLACKMER. The question of reconsideration has this difficulty in it, when you take it upon this proposition, that the motion to reconsider must be given notice of immediately after the passage of the measure, and it does not provide for a change in the views and opinions of the Convention after the lapse of any considerable period of time. After one day, then the matter of reconsideration is of no avail whatever, and it seems to me the only way out of this difficulty is to pass this amendment.

MR. FREEMAN. I merely rise to say in reply that an amendment can be offered to rule thirty-seven which can provide for the method of notice. There is no reason why notice should be given to reconsider on the same day. On the other hand the Convention may have rule thirty-seven amended so that notice of reconsideration may be given at any time when it sees proper, and we can better regulate these matters then.

The question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. Blackmer, it was lost on a standing vote—ayes thirty-four, noes sixty-eight.

The rule as amended was then adopted, reading as follows:

Rule 36.—When a question is indefinitely postponed it shall not again be introduced during the session of the Convention, except by a majority vote, to be decided without debate.

Rule 37.—On the day succeeding that on which a final vote on any proposition or resolution concerning the Constitution, or other resolution, has been taken, said vote may be reconsidered on motion of any member; provided, notice of intention to move such reconsideration shall have been given on the day on which such final vote was taken, by a member voting with the majority; and it shall not be in order for any member to move a reconsideration on the day on which such final vote was taken. Such motion of reconsideration shall have precedence over every other motion, except a motion to adjourn. No notice of reconsideration shall be in order on the day preceding the last day of the session.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment to rule thirty-seven: Strike out all down to the word "such," and insert as follows: "At any time after the final vote on any proposition or resolution concerning the Constitution, or other resolution, has been taken, the vote may be reconsidered on motion of any member who voted with the majority, provided, it shall not be in order for any member to move a reconsideration without giving one day's notice of such motion."

The amendment was rejected and the rule was adopted.

Rule 38.—It shall be in order for any member or members to protest in writing against action of the Convention, and have such protest entered upon the minutes.

Digitized by Google

Adopted.

Rule 39.—A question of privilege shall be entitled to supersede other business; but when a member brings forward such question, he shall first present his complaint, either verbally or in writing; and the presiding officer shall decide, in the first instance, whether such statement, however brought forward, involves a question of privilege. If such decision shall be in favor of the question of privilege, the member may then make such observations as may be pertinent to the question of privilege, and may submit such resolution or motion as he may desire for the consideration of the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 40. The author of a motion, proposition, or resolution, shall have the privilege of closing the debate, unless the previous question has been sustained.

MR. ESTEE. I think that should be amended so as to read, the author of a motion or the Chairman of a committee. The point I wish to make is this: that under our rules the committees will present most of the questions for the consideration of the Convention, and it will be hard to determine who the author is. I make no motion, I only throw this out as a suggestion.

The rule was adopted.

Rule 41.—Every member, when about to speak, shall rise and respectfully address the President, shall confine himself to the question under debate, and avoid personality, and shall sit down when he is finished. No member shall speak out of his place without leave of the President.

MR. EDGERTON. Does that read "is finished" or "has finished?" Is the Clerk reading from the original notes? If it is that way, I hope the word "is" will be changed to "has."

The rule was adopted.

Rule 42.—No member speaking shall be interrupted by another, but by rising up to call to order.

Adopted.

Rule 43.—No member shall speak more than twice on one question without first obtaining leave of the Convention, nor more than once until other members who have not spoken shall speak, if they desire to.

MR. GREGG. I move to amend by inserting after the word "twice" the following words: "No member shall speak more than twice nor more than thirty minutes at one time upon the same question."

MR. ESTEE. I hope that will not be adopted so early in the session. There will be some of the gravest questions to come before this Convention, and there are gentlemen probably prepared to come before this Convention and give us a great deal of information, and certainly it would be unusual to limit them to thirty minutes.

MR. GREGG. The purpose is simply to cut off useless debate.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. BARBOUR. I move to amend the rule by adding at the end of the rule, "A majority of the Convention may rescind or suspend this rule." I don't think it would be right to require a two-third vote.

The amendment was rejected, and the rule was adopted.

Rule 44.—If any member be called to order for offensive words spoken in debate, the person calling him to order shall report the words excepted to, and they shall be taken down in writing at the Secretary's table; and no member shall be held to answer or be subject to censure of the Convention for language used in debate if any member has spoken, or other business has intervened, after the words spoken and before exception to them shall have been taken.

Adopted.

Rule 45.—If a question pending be lost by adjournment of the Convention, and revived on the succeeding day, no member who shall have spoken on the preceding day shall be permitted again to speak without leave of two thirds of the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 46.—If any member in speaking or otherwise transgress the rules of the Convention, the President shall, or any member may, call to order; in which case, the member so called to order shall immediately sit down, unless permitted to explain; and if called to order by a member, such member shall immediately state the point of order. If the point of order be sustained by the Chair, the member shall not be allowed to proceed; but if it be not sustained, then he shall be permitted to go on. Every such decision from the Chair shall be subject to an appeal to the Convention, but no discussion of a question of order shall be allowed unless an appeal be taken from a decision of the Chair.

Adopted.

Rule 47.—When two or more members shall rise at once, the President shall decide who is first to speak.

Adopted.

Rule 48.—When a member shall ask leave to have a proposition or resolution taken up out of its regular order, he shall, in making the motion, give the number and title of the same.

Adopted.

Rule 49.—Every resolution proposing any alteration in the Constitution shall be read on two several days before it is finally acted upon and adopted by the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 50.—Every member presenting to the Convention a petition, memorial, or remonstrance, shall indorse his name thereon, together with a brief statement of the nature and object of the instrument.

Adopted.

Rule 51.—Propositions and resolutions proposing matter to be incorporated in the Constitution shall be prefaced with a title briefly indicating the subject to which they refer. They shall be in writing, on legal cap paper, or printed, and shall be numbered by the Secretary in the order in which they are introduced.

Adopted.

Rule 52.—Propositions and resolutions mentioned in the last foregoing rule shall embrace but one subject; they shall be read once when introduced, and then referred, without debate, to an appropriate committee.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment to rules fifty-one and fifty-two. The object of the committee in preparing these two rules seems to have been to simplify the work of the Convention. In my judgment they have confused it, and it will take weeks to introduce a very small amount of matter. In other words, every proposition must be written out separately and introduced. There are a number of members who have prepared drafts of the Constitution with some care. They may contain valuable matter, and they may not. But having devoted some study to them it is proper that they should be introduced in this condition, that the press and the people of the State may know what is contained in them. They must see the instrument together in all its parts, because, in my estimation, it will be perfectly useless to send the Bill of Rights to one committee and the Judicial Department to another, and so on, without having some knowledge of the whole instrument as an instrument. In other words, we are reconstructing the whole political structure, and it must be a house complete in all its parts, and all its chambers and divisions must be in harmony. In other words, put it together as reasonable architects, and in order to do that we must see the instrument together; and if gentlemen desire to offer amendments to the instrument it will be necessary to have it all together, in order to see how they will fit and harmonize. In my judgment that will simplify the work; if not, these gentlemen who have prepared Constitutions will have to split them apart, and it will require a long time to introduce them section by section and article by article. There will be a great deal of confusion if this Convention refuses to do so. In this way I cannot see any difficulty whatever. For that reason we adopt that rule in Congress in reference to the President's Message, and in the Legislative Assemblies in reference to the Governor's Message. They are not cut up and the part relating to one subject sent to this committee and another to another. The document must be considered in its entirety. Let the Constitutions that are introduced be printed and distributed among the members. Then if it is desirable to have the different articles considered by different committees it can be done, but the document will be before each committee and they can see the relation that the parts bear to one another. As far as I am individually concerned, if these rules are adopted in this shape, I shall simply offer all the propositions to the committee and not to the Convention, because it will impose too much labor. I offer to amend as follows: Amend rule fifty-one to read as follows:

"Propositions and resolutions proposing matters to be incorporated into the Constitution, or proposing an entire draft of a Constitution, or of any separate article or section, shall be in writing on legal cap paper, signed by the member offering the same, and shall be numbered by the Secretary in the order in which they are introduced."

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I regard those two rules as among the most important, as far as they relate to the procedure of this body. The gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, tells us that he has been to a great deal of labor in preparing drafts of a Constitution, and he moves to amend so that an entire Constitution may be sent up. Now, it will have to be cut up and sent to the several committees, and the question is, who shall do this? Everything sent up has to be sent to appropriate committees, and who is to determine what committees it shall go to? I think there are about thirty committees, and if the entire document is to go to the committees, somebody has got to rummage through it and see which goes to this committee, and which to that. Now, the course of procedure marked out in those two rules is this: if anybody has a proposition to make, it shall be prefaced with the proper title, read once when sent up, and then referred to a committee. When it comes from the committee it is read again, and then goes to the general file, as provided for in rule fifty-three, and then it is open to debate. Here is a resolution that such and such a provision be inserted in the Legislative Department. It is headed so the Secretary knows what committee to refer it to, and when it comes back it is placed under that head.

MR. LAINE. It seems to me that every member of this Convention would know what the Bill of Rights was, what the article on revenue and taxation was, and all the various articles of the Constitution, as well as if there were memoranda attached, because the draft of the Constitution is prepared with reference to that matter. I can see none of this difficulty. It will take weeks the other way to introduce these propositions, if they have to be prepared article by article. It will take six weeks to get anything into this Convention to work upon.

MR. BIGGS. I am in hopes this amendment will be adopted. Every member will know what committee he is on. I hope this Convention will adopt it.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This is a matter of much greater importance than it seems at first glance. Now, we have a great many standing committees, how many I do not know, probably thirty. Each committee is charged with certain of these branches. No one committee is charged with the whole matter, and the rule proposed here, as I understand it, is that when a proposition is introduced by any member it must be referred to the proper committee. Now, suppose a gentleman gets up here and offers an entire Constitution, to what committee must that Constitution be referred? It is not a single proposition, and the member who has prepared it may himself divide it up into as many parts as are necessary. I do not see as it is necessary that the propositions should be on legal cap paper. I do not see any need of that. The next rule says that the propositions shall be read once and referred to appropriate committees. That is the correct method. No one committee should have charge of the entire Constitution, and they should come here in separate propositions, and be referred to the several committees who have charge of the various subjects. Otherwise we will never get to any conclusion. I think my friend from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, is wrong in his conclusions, and that the amendment ought not to be adopted.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Laine was rejected.

The rules, fifty-one and fifty-two, were adopted.

Rule 53.—All propositions and resolutions embracing matter proposed to be incorporated in the Constitution, reported by a standing or special committee, shall be read when reported, and shall be placed on a general file, to be kept by the Secretary, in the order in which they are reported. They shall be taken from the file and acted upon in the order in which they are placed thereon, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention; provided, that engrossed propositions and resolutions shall be placed at the head of the file, in the order in which they are received. Two hundred and forty copies of the file for each day shall be printed.

Adopted.

Rule 54.—No committee shall sit during the session of the Convention without leave.

Adopted.

Rule 55.—In forming a Committee of the Whole Convention, the President may preside or appoint a member to preside. Propositions or resolutions relating to the Constitution shall be committed to a Committee of the Whole Convention, and shall be read in Committee of the Whole by sections. All amendments shall be noted and reported to the Convention by the Chairman. After report, the proposition or resolution shall again be subject to amendment before the final question is taken.

Mr. WHITE. I move to amend, that the President shall not preside in the Committee of the Whole—that he shall appoint a member to preside.

Mr. TINNIN. The object of this committee in fixing it that way was to expedite business. That has been the custom in the Senate of this State for years, and has been found to work well, and I can see no reason why it should be changed.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. The only objection I see to the section as it stands now is this: it provides that the regular President presiding over the Committee of the Whole shall report. Now, who is he to report to when the Committee of the Whole resolves itself back into Convention? The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole makes a report of the work done in the committee. Now, if the President of the Convention is Chairman of the committee, who is he going to make his report to?

Mr. ESTEE. Why, it is made to the Convention. This has been the practice in your Senate here for years. The Chairman merely rises and states to the Convention what has transpired in the Committee of the Whole, that they have had under consideration so and so, and report it back with amendments, recommending that they be adopted.

The amendment was rejected, and the rule was adopted.

Rule 56.—The rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole, so far as they may be applicable, except for limiting the times of speaking, and except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, and that the previous question shall not be moved.

Adopted.

Rule 57.—A motion that the committee rise shall always be in order, and shall be decided without debate.

Adopted.

Rule 58.—Every order or resolution which proposes an alteration in the Constitution, and all reports of committees appointed to consider the propriety and expediency of making any alteration therein, shall be considered in Committee of the Whole before they are debated and finally acted on in Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 59.—The rules of parliamentary practice contained in "Cushing's Law and Practice of Legislative Assemblies," shall govern the Convention in all cases to which they are applicable, and in which they are not inconsistent with the standing rules and orders of the Convention.

Adopted.

Rule 60.—No standing rule or order of the Convention shall be rescinded or changed without a vote of two thirds and one day's notice being given of the motion therefor; but a rule or order may be suspended temporarily by a vote of two thirds of the members present, except rules fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five.

Mr. WYATT. I move to amend rule sixty so as to make it conform with rule thirty-six, on the question of indefinite postponement.

The motion prevailed, and the rule as amended was adopted.

Rule 61.—When the reading of a paper is called for, except petitions and memorials, and the same is objected to by any member, it shall be determined by a vote of the Convention, without debate.

Adopted.

Rule 62.—In filling up blanks the least sum or number and shortest time shall be first put.

Adopted.

Rule 63.—No member or other person shall remain by the Secretary's desk while the ayes and noes are being called, or while the votes are being counted.

Adopted.

Rule 64.—No member shall be absent more than two days without leave of the Convention; and a vote of leave of absence shall be inoperative, unless the member obtaining it shall avail himself of it within five days.

Adopted.

Rule 65.—No member shall receive pay for any week day on which he has not actually attended the Convention, except in case of sickness, or when he is absent on committee duty.

Mr. WEBSTER. I move to strike out the word "week" and insert after the word "duty" the further words, "days of actual session," so as to read as follows: "No member shall receive pay for any day on which he has not actually attended the Convention, except in case of sickness, or when he is absent on committee duty on days of actual session."

Mr. GREGG. I offer an amendment to the amendment: "No member shall receive pay for more than two days absence at one time, except the absence is occasioned by sickness, or by committee work, or other business of the Convention. But pay shall not be allowed a member for more than ten absent days during the term of the Convention."

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. WATERS. I rise to a point of order. The salary of members of this Convention is fixed by law. We cannot by any vote of ours, even by a two thirds-vote, adopt any rule affecting the rights of any member on this floor as regards the salary he shall receive. We have no power to say how much we shall receive. That is a matter fixed by law.

Mr. WEBSTER. I believe in establishing this rule. It has been the rule, I know, that members of the Legislature from time immemorial have drawn pay, not only for week days when they were not in session, but for Sundays. I say it is a wrong principle. It is not the way we conduct our own private business, and even if the Legislature has established the rule for us, we should establish a different rule. We don't employ men to work for us by the day and then pay them a salary for the days that they don't work. We don't employ carpenters by the day and pay them the same wages for Sundays that they get on week days. We have no more right to our pay for Sunday than the carpenter has. I hold that we should observe the same rule in the service of the State as we would follow in conducting our private affairs. It is wrong in principle, and if precedents are numerous we propose to dispense with precedents, and act independently according to what we believe to be right.

The CHAIR. The point of order is well taken; the Legislature has provided for the compensation of the members of this Convention.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I offer an amendment to add at the end of the rule.

Mr. McFARLAND. I understand the ruling of the Chair to be that the rule itself, as proposed by the committee, is out of order.

The CHAIR. The Chair sustained the point of order under section five of the Act calling the Convention: "The delegates shall receive the same per diem and mileage as members of the Legislature."

Mr. STEDMAN. Does that strike the rule out?

The CHAIR. Yes, sir.

Mr. STEDMAN. Then, sir, I move to insert my motion, made this morning, as rule sixty-five. It is not quite the proper place to insert it, but I will offer it:

"Rule 65.—All members shall vote on every question, unless excused by the Convention."

Adopted.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Do I understand that rule sixty-five is decided to be out of order?

The CHAIR. Rule sixty-five, as amended by Mr. Stedman, is adopted. We are now considering rule sixty-six.

Mr. REYNOLDS. If rule sixty-five is ruled out of order, I desire to appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIR. It is too late. The Secretary will read rule sixty-six.

Mr. BARBOUR. We never had a chance to vote on this rule sixty-five. We didn't have a chance to vote on it.

The CHAIR. The Chair will state the proposition.

Mr. BARBOUR. I maintain that this Convention can control the per diem of its members; and I should like to have a chance to be heard.

The CHAIR. The point of order was made by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Waters, that this Convention had no right to regulate the per diem and mileage of its members, the Legislature having fixed it; and the Chair held the point to be well taken. Then the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman, offered a new rule, to take the place of rule sixty-five; which was adopted. We are now considering rule sixty-six; and the Chair will hold that the appeal comes too late.

Mr. ESTEE. I do not suppose that the ruling of the Chair will interfere with bringing it up again for consideration. I will read what the law says:

"The delegates to the Convention shall receive the same per diem and mileage as members of the Legislature: provided, no compensation shall be allowed delegates after the expiration of one hundred days. No pay shall be allowed for any recess longer than three days at one time."

I think the Chair is wrong about that. I think the Convention has a perfect right to regulate it, by law, as to the manner in which members shall be paid. What if a member should leave and be absent for the whole term?

The CHAIR. The Convention has power to send for any member who absents himself, or he can be expelled.

Mr. HAGER. The statute as read by the Chair, and referred to by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, is all right, but there is another provision here, that raises a question which has not been sufficiently considered, perhaps. Another portion says, "the Convention may adopt such rules and regulations for its own government as a majority of its members may determine." Now, there is full power to make regulations as to pay of members, or any other matters in the enforcing of discipline. We cannot increase the per diem, but we may say when it shall be cut off, by a rule which a majority may adopt.

Mr. FILCHER. I rise to a point of order. The discussion is out of order, as the Chair has decided, and there is no appeal pending.

The CHAIR. The point of order is well taken.

Rule 66.—Every member, before availing himself of a leave of absence, shall deposit with the Secretary all papers then in his possession belonging to the Convention.

Mr. BARBOUR. I move that the rules be suspended for the purpose of allowing an appeal on the ruling of the Chair.

Lost.

Rule sixty-six was adopted.

Rule 67.—No smoking shall be allowed within the hall of the Convention during the time of its session.

Digitized by Google

Adopted.

Rule 68.—The hall of the Convention shall not be used for any public or private business other than that of the Convention, except by unanimous consent.

Adopted.

Rule 69.—No increase of pay, nor any extra pay, shall be allowed any officer or attaché of the Convention, by resolution or otherwise, except by unanimous consent.

Adopted.

Rule 70.—No proposition for additional help in any clerical or other department of the Convention shall be entertained except by resolution, in writing, therefor, and before final action by the Convention thereon such resolution shall be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, which committee shall inquire into the necessity therefor and the amount of compensation proper, if the same shall be required, and report without unnecessary delay; and upon receipt of such report the Convention shall forthwith proceed to consider and vote upon the passage of the resolution.

Adopted.

Rule 71.—Five hundred copies of each proposition or resolution embodying matter proposed to be introduced into the Constitution shall be printed.

MR. ROLFE. I do not wish to be captious, but it seems to me this will involve an enormous amount of unnecessary printing. I have no doubt but what on the first day that we get to the real business of the Convention there will be two or three hundred propositions introduced, some of them very long, and they will all have to be printed. I am not prepared now to offer a substitute, but I am prepared to vote against that rule.

MR. ANDREWS. I move to strike out "five hundred" and insert "four hundred and eighty."

The motion prevailed, and the rule as amended was adopted.

MR. HUESTIS. I was on my feet before the motion was put, and I ask leave now to propose an amendment to the rule. My amendment is simply to carry out the suggestions of the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe. It will save an enormous expense. I propose to add the words "when ordered by the Convention."

THE CHAIR. It is moved to amend so as to read "four hundred and eighty copies when ordered by the Convention."

MR. EDGERTON. The gentleman will observe that the rule limits all this to matter proposed to be incorporated in the Constitution.

MR. HUESTIS. Suppose there are ten distinct propositions to be embodied in the Constitution, it will involve five thousand documents.

MR. EDGERTON. I move the rules be suspended then.

MR. LARKIN. I am in favor that every article affecting this Constitution shall be printed so as to be circulated among the people of this State, because very few of the people in this State take the Sacramento papers. They should be circulated among the people of this State, and the only way is to print a certain number of copies, and five hundred copies is low enough. It is few enough, and every proposition should be printed.

MR. ESTEE. It strikes me, Mr. President, that the time required by this Convention to discuss a motion every time it is made will cost more to the people of this State than the printing will amount to. Now the Constitution, when adopted, will not be one tenth or one twentieth as large as the statutes, and it is infinitely more important to the people of this State to know what these amendments are than to know what some bill in the Legislature is that perhaps relates to a road law, or questions of that kind. I hope the rule will be adopted as amended, for four hundred and eighty copies. It has been suggested that these things will be published by the newspapers. That is true, to some extent; but if you have these things printed in this way, they can be sent to the local papers in the various counties in the State, and thus they will be brought to the notice of the people, and they will know what is going on here.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: This is a matter in which we should make haste slowly. I am afraid this printing will make a hole in the appropriation which will startle us. I understand there are eight or ten or twenty complete drafts of a Constitution, and all this will have to be printed if this rule is adopted, and I think before we proceed with this matter we should make some inquiry as to what the expense will be, and whether it is necessary—where these parties have already got up these drafts and had them printed and widely circulated—whether it is necessary for us to print them over again, is a matter of serious consideration at this time, and I think it is better to refer this matter to a committee to investigate the probable cost. I move to refer it to the Committee on Printing.

MR. HAGER. I have noticed in some of the Constitutions recently framed that there is a provision that no bill introduced shall be considered until it has first been printed. I think it is a most important thing to see that these propositions shall be printed and distributed throughout the country. There is no other way of conveying the information to the people than the one proposed. Suppose a proposition has been introduced, and is reported by a committee, and some member moves to substitute his proposition in its place, why every member will have to go to the desk and get the written copy. There is no way we can progress here, and have the questions properly before us, except by having these propositions printed. I don't care what the cost may be: we had better expend the whole sum of money to have these propositions printed than to have them enacted without being in print. Nor am I sure, sir, that this printing bill will have to come out of our appropriation. The Act itself says all the printing necessary for the Convention, under the provisions of this Act, shall be done at the State Printing Office. Now, we are bound to have it done there, without any regard to the expense to the State. I think it is a charge entirely outside of the appropriation; but whether it is or not, these propositions should all be printed. I am satisfied we cannot act intelligently on this matter unless we can know what is contained in each proposition. We cannot go to the desk to look at the original every time we want to know anything about it. We must have printed copies for our own use, or we might as well abandon the work at once. I hope this rule will stand, and that every proposition, if it is of importance enough to be considered at all, will be printed for the use of the members.

MR. AYERS. Before the amendment and the rule are referred to the Committee on Printing, I would like to be informed how the Committee on Printing is going to make an intelligent report to this Convention, as to the probable cost—in what way they are going to arrive at it. There may be one hundred different drafts of Constitutions made here. The propositions that will come before this Convention will be numerous, and there is no way by which we can get at them unless we know something about the number of propositions and Constitutions that will be introduced.

MR. LARKIN. As far as that matter, I think it is plain. We must have them printed. I appeal to any gentleman, if a legislative body of this importance could act intelligently on propositions of this kind, unless they are printed and laid before the members, so that they may study them. It is the most important part of our duties, and it is right that they shall be printed, so that the people of the State may understand what we are doing here.

MR. HILBORN. I don't object to that. All I ask is that we shall, before we act, inquire into the probable cost, so that gentlemen may vote intelligently upon it.

MR. VAN DYKE. I cannot see any necessity for printing every proposition that is introduced here by every member. The propositions must be reported by committees before they can be considered, and I cannot see the necessity of printing this great mass of stuff without regard to what it contains. We have adopted a rule that you cannot consider a proposition until it has been to a committee, and the argument in favor of printing would only apply to reports of committees. I propose an amendment to this rule, as follows:

THE CHAIR. The question is on referring it to the Committee on Printing.

MR. McCALLUM. The question is on reference. I shall vote for the reference, because I am opposed to the proposition as presented by the Committee on Rules. The argument in favor of it is, I believe, that four hundred and eighty copies should be printed to be circulated among the people of this State. You might print four hundred and eighty thousand in that form and they would not reach the people of this State. These things will be printed every morning by the enterprising press of the State, and thus they will reach the people in all parts. But these are to be for the use of the Convention, and two hundred and forty copies of each will be sufficient. There are three or four enterprising daily papers in this State, each one of which will contain every one of these propositions as fast as they are presented.

MR. ESTEE. Does the gentleman mean that the newspapers are going to print these twenty drafts of the entire Constitution that have been spoken about?

MR. McCALLUM. No, sir; these Constitutions, under the rule we have adopted, these Constitutions must be cut up and presented as separate propositions, relating to the different articles in the Constitution. There are twelve articles, and if there are ten Constitutions prepared, that would be one hundred and twenty propositions. That will require fifty-seven thousand six hundred copies.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. The question is on referring to the committee.

THE CHAIR. The gentleman will confine himself to the question.

MR. McCALLUM. If it is in order I will say that I am in favor of reference, because I am in hopes that will kill the proposition. I will do this because I am in hopes that the rule will be amended in some way in reporting it back here. If they are to be printed, I think two hundred and eighty copies will be all sufficient.

The motion to refer to the Committee on Printing was lost on a standing vote—ayes, 41, noes, 74.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I now offer an amendment, to read as follows: Insert between the words "Constitution" and "shall" the words "reported to the Convention by a committee."

MR. ESTEE. As far as the committee is concerned, and as far as I am concerned, I will vote to limit the expenses of this body, but I think it would be extraordinary for this body to say that propositions and amendments to the Constitution should not be printed. These propositions go before the various committees for their consideration, and it is of the utmost importance to have them printed. We cannot intelligently dispose of these propositions in any other manner. I do not believe there are any gentlemen on this floor, however wise, or however much experience they may have had in legislative matters, who can know the various amendments to the Constitution that may be proposed and act intelligently on them in committee or in this Convention unless they are printed. I hope the greatest latitude will be allowed in printing. I hope the thoughtful members in this body will take this into careful consideration. This is the most important rule reported by the committee, and I hope it will be adopted as reported.

MR. BIGGS. I have had the honor, Mr. Chairman, to serve in the Legislature of the State of California, and every gentleman knows that when a bill is introduced and is referred to a committee—everything is referred to a committee before it is printed—and you take the action of the committee and print it, and I dare the gentleman to deny it. What is the use of one hundred and fifty members on this floor having one hundred and fifty propositions alike? Let these propositions go to a committee, and then let the action of the committee be printed. Why, sir, upon the subject of taxation, if you please, I ask this Convention, do they propose to have every resolution printed which is nearly the same? Why not refer them to the proper committees and let the committees act on them, and after they are reported to the Convention have them printed and laid before the Convention?

Mr. LARKIN. I ask the gentleman, in all seriousness, whether he proposes that these committees shall be the grave of every proposition submitted here that does not please them? Unless the majority of a committee sees fit to report it back and order it printed it will not be printed.

Mr. BIGGS. Mr. Larkin knows very well that every committee has the right to make a minority and majority report. The House may take the minority or majority report, just as they see fit, and every resolution will be acted on by the majority. It can always be brought before the Convention by a majority vote, when every other means fail. I say it is a waste of the people's money to have every resolution and proposition that is submitted, without referring it to a committee, printed. One gentleman says every bill is printed. Every bill is reported to the proper committee, and their action is printed, and that's the way it's done. I ask this Convention to let us change that rule, and let us refer these resolutions and propositions to the appropriate committees, and let them act on it as the action of that committee.

Mr. ESTEE. Suppose the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, has been incubating upon a proposition in reference to the Constitution that he regards as of great importance to the welfare of the State. He sends that up and it is read once and referred to a committee, without printing. The committee reports a substitute, something relating to the same matter, but different altogether. Now, I would like to know how this Convention is going to understand which is the best measure to adopt, except by comparison of the original and the substitute. To do so, are the gentlemen all going to flock to the Secretary's desk to examine it? I shall, for one, want to have a copy of every proposition. I want to study it there and after a committee has reported something else in place of it. I want the original proposition at my disposal, so that I may compare the two and arrive at a conclusion for myself. Now, in reference to the suggestion of Major Biggs, that no bill is ever printed in the Legislature until after it goes to a committee, he is very much off his reckoning. I hold in my hand the rules of the Assembly of California. The same rule is there, which provides that two hundred and forty copies of every bill of a general nature shall be printed. Now, in the name of common sense, let me ask him if the propositions to be embodied in the organic law of a great State, to last, perhaps, for a generation, are not of as much importance as bills of a general character in the lower branch of the Legislature. Let us have them printed, so that we may study them, and digest them, and thoroughly understand them when we come to vote. The people do not appreciate this cheese paring economy, for every dollar saved in this way may be the loss of thousands in other directions. As to the cost, I think I am entirely within the bounds of reason when I say the total cost of printing for this Convention will not be four thousand dollars.

Mr. HILBORN. Does the gentleman know what it cost for printing in the Senate last fall?

Mr. ESTEE. Yes, sir; but the gentleman does not seem to take into consideration the limit that is being placed in this rule, limiting it to such matters as pertains directly to the Constitution.

Mr. HILBORN. It cost for printing that fall eleven thousand dollars.

Mr. ESTEE. Now, sir, suppose it should cost fifty thousand dollars, or one hundred thousand dollars, and here I deny that the newspapers will publish this mass of matter. I undertake to say that the articles on judiciary will make so much that no paper in this State will undertake to print the half of it, and these gentlemen who are trying so hard to curry favor with the dear people, will soon find themselves covered up by an avalanche of letters from their constituents, praying them not to hide their light under a bushel. I tell you this is no economy. Let the broad sunlight shine upon our actions here, and let the people know what we are doing.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President: It occurs to me that this is a very important rule. If we print these various propositions and rules they come under our immediate notice, and are subject to our close scrutiny. If, on the other hand, these propositions are sent to the committee without printing, we know not what disposition will be made of them. They may never see daylight. They may be buried out of sight, and it will be for us to unearth them. Here is a proposition on some subject, not in the old Constitution, but on some particular thing, the Judicial Department, or Taxation, or some other particular thing. On the other hand, gentlemen will have a whole Constitution submitted as a proposition. Now, is it to be supposed that the newspapers will print these entire Constitutions? Is it to be supposed that the newspapers will print these entire propositions and resolutions? No, sir. They will print certain propositions and resolutions as they see fit, or certain parts of the proposed Constitution, and that will be the extent to which the members of this Convention will be advised of the purport of these propositions and resolutions. On the other hand, if we have them all printed and distributed among the members, then we can keep them before us, and scan them and criticise them, and we can then form some definite idea of the merits of the various proposed amendments and resolutions. It occurs to me that this is not the proper kind of economy to practice in the interests of the State. These propositions and resolutions should be printed. We have a State Printing Office, and all it costs is the bare material and labor. We are in a better position in that respect than many of the other States, which I believe are growing more liberal in regard to printing public documents. In my opinion the proper thing to do is to have these propositions all printed, and the number to be printed, after they are in type, will make very little difference in the cost, so there is no economy in cutting down the number. If this is done we will be better able to vote right.

Mr. VAN DYKE. My amendment does not go upon the theory that it is impossible to print any other matter except that relating to the Constitution. It is within the power of the body at any time to print propositions or resolutions submitted by any member.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: It seems to me that we are here for a purpose, not merely to consume this one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for salaries. There seems to be a fear on the part of some of the members that some of this one hundred and fifty thousand dollars may possibly be diverted into other channels than for mere salaries, and their pay correspondingly reduced. It seems to me the people sent us here to use this one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and such other money as is necessary, to frame a Constitution, and, in order to do that, to provide ourselves with all the necessary auxiliaries in order to carry out the purposes for which we are here. Now, this is a very important matter. It gives every one who introduces a proposition here a chance to have that proposition fully considered, and does not consign any of them to oblivion, by merely referring it to a committee, thus to be buried at the option of the committee. By referring it to a committee, that committee may never report upon it, and the matter will pass into oblivion. While I am in favor of being economical, I believe that every proposition brought before this Convention should be printed.

Mr. NOEL. Mr. President: I think this is very important. If the Convention intends to submit to the judgment of the committees entirely, then let the propositions go to the committees without printing. If, on the other hand, the Convention intends to exercise its own judgment, it can do that only by a comparison of all the propositions submitted, and it will never be possible to do that except by having them printed. If the proposed amendment prevails, it seems to me that these committees will serve no other purpose than as a place for smothering the various propositions introduced by members of the Convention. The Convention will know nothing about the propositions except as they hear them read at the Clerk's desk.

Mr. BARRY. Mr. President: As one of the Committee on Rules, that I think this Convention can act more wisely, and more understandingly, on matters coming before it if all these proposed amendments are printed. We are wasting and frittering away more money in this discussion than it would cost to do the work. I think it is necessary and useful to have this printing done, and while there may be some matters that are not worthy of being printed, taken as a whole it is well worth while. I hope the Convention will come to a vote at once.

Mr. HAGER. Mr. President: I regret to take up any further time, but it seems to me, sir, this is a very important matter. As I stated before, I have some doubt whether this expense will come out of the appropriation of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. If we find that we are trenching to any considerable extent upon this appropriation, we can take the advice of the Attorney-General, and if he advises us that the cost of printing must come out of this appropriation, then we can commence and cut down. I am of the opinion that the Attorney-General will say that the expense of printing is independent of this one hundred and fifty thousand dollars appropriation, and will be paid for by the State. Now, I undertake to say that to frame a Constitution without the propositions being printed is an utter impossibility, and I for one do not desire to place myself upon record here as wishing to deprive the people of any information which they are entitled to, as to what may be going on here. They want light as to every proposition presented here, and they have allowed us printing presses and types in order that we may do this very thing. Every lawyer and every Judge in the State will want to be informed as to every proposition that is presented here, and they have a right to know. Every man interested in corporations will want to know as to propositions introduced in relation to them. Every landholder will want to know about the propositions on revenue and taxation, and every one interested in any of the avocations affected will want to know, and the people will look back with grave suspicion on any attempt to deprive them of that information. How are they to get that information? By the speeches and proceedings? No, sir, you have refused to let the people read what you have to say; you have refused to publish even the Journal of your proceedings, and now you propose to cover up the proposed amendments to the Constitution. You say they will get it through the public press; but how will the press get it unless you print it and send it to them, for there are only a few papers represented here? Will they come here and copy your propositions and print them? No, sir, they will do nothing of the kind. If you do not print these things you will soon hear from your constituents in a way that will convince you that they do not thank you for this kind of economy.

Suppose one of these propositions is before a committee for consideration, how are they going to consider it if it is not printed? One member, or the Secretary, will have to read from bad manuscript, perhaps, while the others listen, trying in vain to get some idea of its contents as the reader stumbles through it, and after it is read they must vote on it, aye or no. They have no copy of it, they cannot criticise it, they cannot consider it section by section, they cannot propose amendments. If this is to be the practice we might as well abandon the work at once, for it will never be a success, and will not give satisfaction. Now, in regard to printing in legislative bodies, the rules of the Senate of the United States provide that every bill and general resolution introduced or reported from a committee, and bills and general resolutions received by the House, and all reports, shall be printed, unless the printing is dispensed with. The dispensing with the printing is the exception to the rule, and every bill has to be printed. If there are matters of so little consequence that they should not be printed the rule can be suspended.

Mr. SWING. I move the previous question.

The call for the previous question was seconded by Messrs. Tinnin and Freeman.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Van Dyke.

The amendment was rejected.

The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis, was rejected.

The rule as amended was then adopted.

Rule 72.—No committee shall be permitted to employ a clerk at the expense of the State without first obtaining leave of the Convention for that purpose.

Adopted.

Rule 73.—The standing committees of the Convention shall be as follows:

1. On Preamble and Bill of Rights. To consist of nine members.
2. On Right of Suffrage. To consist of eleven members.
3. On Legislative Department. To consist of fifteen members.
4. On Executive Department. To consist of nine members.
5. On Judiciary and Judicial Department. To consist of nineteen members.
6. On Military Affairs. To consist of eleven members.
7. On State and Municipal Indebtedness. To consist of fifteen members.
8. On Education. To consist of nine members.
9. On State Institutions and Public Buildings. To consist of eleven members.
10. On City, County, and Township Organization. To consist of fifteen members.
11. On Apportionment and Representation. To consist of fifteen members.
12. On Revenue and Taxation. To consist of fifteen members.
13. On Corporations other than Municipal. To consist of fifteen members.
14. On Miscellaneous Subjects. To consist of nine members.
15. On Future Amendments. To consist of nine members.
16. On Schedule. To consist of eleven members.
17. On Revision and Adjustment. To consist of nine members.
18. On Water and Water Rights. To consist of fifteen members.
19. On Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce. To consist of eleven members.
20. On Mining. To consist of eleven members.
21. On Immigration. To consist of fifteen members.
22. On Reporting and Printing. To consist of five members.
23. On Privileges and Elections. To consist of fifteen members.
24. On Mileage and Contingent Expenses. To consist of nine members.
25. On Pardoning Power. To consist of nine members.
26. On Harbors, Tide Water, and Navigable Streams. To consist of nine members.
27. On Labor and Capital. To consist of nine members.
28. On Engrossment and Enrollment. To consist of seven members.
29. On Chinese. To consist of fifteen members.
30. On Land and Homestead Exemptions. To consist of nine members.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer the following as a new rule:

"No member shall receive pay for any week day on which he has not actually attended the Convention, except in case of sickness, when absent on committee duty, or upon adjournment over by the Convention."

MR. REYNOLDS. I offer this amendment as a new rule, to be known as rule seventy-three, because I am satisfied that the ruling of the Chair on rule sixty-five was wrong; that he ruled it out of order under misapprehension of the scope of the rule. Now, the only object of this rule is to cut off the pay of members who voluntarily absent themselves from the Convention during its sessions. That is the entire object of this rule. The Convention had no chance to take any action upon the ruling of the Chair. Some gentlemen supposed that it was an interference with the law calling the Convention. That is not the object of the rule, but only to cut off these gentlemen from going away. I desire to have the sense of the Convention on that proposition.

MR. WATERS. I raise the point of order that the members of this Convention are entitled to receive ten dollars a day for every day during the session of this Convention. Those are the very words of the statute.

MR. EDGERTON. I raise the point of order that the Chair should state whether the point of order is sustained or not, and then discussion will be in order.

MR. WATERS. As to whether this Convention can grant leave of absence, is one thing; and cutting off the pay of delegates is another thing. If I apply for a leave of absence, it is the province of this Convention to grant it, or not, as they may see fit. Now, if it is the policy of the Convention to say that leave of absence shall not be granted except in case of sickness, say so; but the question as to whether you can cut off the pay of a delegate, is another thing. You may tell him that he has agreed to work for this State for one hundred days, and he must stay and do it; and if he absents himself you have the power to send for him and bring him back. I would be perfectly willing to have this rule enforced as to myself; but I will not vote to apply it to others. The rule is not right.

MR. REYNOLDS. I want to do this as a kind of a fine. If they are not in attendance, they will be practically fined ten dollars.

THE CHAIR. If the gentleman will put his proposition in that shape, so as to make it a fine of ten dollars, the Chair will entertain it, otherwise it (the point of order) will be sustained.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I desire to send up an additional rule, to be known as Rule Seventy-four:

"Rule 74. When any resolution, proposition, or other document shall be referred to a committee, the Secretary shall, without delay, cause the same to be delivered to the Chairman of such committee, and take his receipt therefor, and a book for that purpose shall be kept, and such receipt shall state the date at which such resolution, proposition, or paper is delivered."

THE CHAIR. If there is no objection, the rule will be considered now.

The rule was adopted.

Mr. STEDMAN. I desire to appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The appeal was seconded by Messrs. Barbour and Reynolds.

Pending the appeal, on motion of Mr. McCallum, at five o'clock and five minutes the Convention adjourned until to-morrow.

TWELFTH DAY.

Additional to the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings—Beerstecher, Porter, McComas, Thompson.

THE RULES.

MR. ESTEE offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the rules, as adopted, be re-referred to the Committee on Rules, with instructions to prepare an index to the same, and have it printed in pamphlet form, with the names of the officers and attachés of the Convention attached thereto.

Adopted.

MR. O'DONNELL. I have a resolution to offer.

MR. WATERS. I rise to a point of order. Resolutions are not now in order.

THE PRESIDENT. Introduction of propositions in relation to the Constitution are now in order.

INTRODUCTION OF PROPOSITIONS.

On motion of Mr. Edgerton, Mr. Barbour had leave to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That on presentation of resolutions and propositions, as provided for in part seven of rule seventeen, the Secretary shall call the list of delegates alphabetically, and each delegate, when his name is called, shall be allowed to present two independent resolutions or propositions relating to the proposed Constitution, which shall be read and referred without debate. If the call be not completed on the day it is commenced, the Secretary shall commence the call on the next day where he left off on the previous day, and so on for the next day after, coming back, when through, to the head of the list, until the further order of the Convention.

Adopted.

MR. WATERS. I would suggest that it be made a rule of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. Under that rule the Secretary will call the roll.

COMMITTEE ROOMS.

MR. VAN DYKE offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to prepare suitable rooms for the use of the standing committees.

MR. VAN DYKE. Some of these committees are already prepared to go to work, and it is necessary to have rooms assigned them in order to perform their duties.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. We have a rule fixing our order of business. That resolution will be in the eleventh, or last order of business.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The Chair supposed that the house was willing to receive the resolution. The Secretary will call the roll.

PROPOSITIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

The Secretary called the roll, and propositions and resolutions were sent up as follows:

OFFICE OF LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

MR. BARBOUR introduced the following resolution to abolish office of Lieutenant-Governor:

Resolved, That the Committee on Executive Department be directed to inquire into the expediency of abolishing the office of Lieutenant-Governor.

Referred to Committee on Executive Department.

SINGLE LEGISLATIVE CHAMBER.

MR. BARBOUR introduced the following resolution on single Legislative Chamber:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Legislative Department be directed to inquire into the expediency of establishing a single Legislative Chamber.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I rise to a point of order. Rule twenty-six, which has been adopted, says: "It shall be the duty of each member who moves that any committee be instructed to inquire into the expediency of amending or revising the existing Constitution, to point out the amendment which he deems expedient, in writing, to accompany his motion." These amendments do not accompany the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

THE PRESIDENT. I think these resolutions sufficiently point out the intention. The point of order is overruled.

HOURS OF LABOR.

MR. CONDON offered the following resolution establishing hours of labor:

Resolved, That the Committee on Labor and Capital be instructed to report a provision firmly establishing eight hours as a legal day's work.

Referred to Committee on Labor and Capital.

LIEN LAW.

MR. CONDON offered the following resolution relative to mechanics liens:

Resolved, That the Committee on Labor and Capital be instructed to report provisions creating a perfect lien in favor of mechanics and all laboring men, upon the thing whereon the labor is performed and the land whereon fixed, for their compensation.

Referred to Committee on Labor and Capital.

LICENSES TO CHINESE.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting the granting of licenses to aliens:

WHEREAS, The immigration of aliens, ineligible to become citizens of the United States, to this State, is detrimental to our well-being and dangerous to our institutions; therefore the following article should be inserted in the Constitution of California:

Resolved, That no alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall ever be granted a license to trade, peddle, or carry on any kind of mercantile business in this State after the adoption of this Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Chinese.

IRRIGATION.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to irrigation:

WHEREAS, The subject of irrigation is one of paramount importance to the State of California, and one which deserves the serious consideration of this Convention, as on it depends, in a great measure, the future prosperity and greatness of this State, and, in view of this fact, the following Article should be entitled to a place in the Constitution:

The Legislature shall provide for the construction and maintenance of a system of irrigating canals and ditches in this State, said canals and ditches to belong forever to the State, and remain under its direct control.

Referred to Committee on Water and Water Rights.

THE SUPREME COURT.

MR. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the Supreme Court:

Resolved, That the following provision be adopted in the Constitution:

All terms of the Supreme Court shall be held at the seat of government; but the times for holding such terms shall be provided by law.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

MR. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the seat of government:

Resolved, That the following provision be adopted in the Constitution:

The seat of government shall be at Sacramento, until otherwise directed by law; but no law proposing a change thereof shall be effectual for any purpose until it is submitted to the electors of the State, at a general election, for approval, and is approved by a majority of two thirds of all the votes cast at such general election for or against such proposed change.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

CHARGES ON RAILROADS AND VESSELS.

MR. ESTEE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to discrimination of charges of railroads and vessels:

SECTION 1. All individuals, associations, and corporations shall have the equal right to have persons and property transported over railroads in this State, or upon vessels plying upon the waters of this State, and no discriminations shall be made in charges for or in facilities for transportation of freight or passengers within this State, or coming from or going to any other State. Persons and property transported over any railroad shall be delivered at any station or landing at charges not exceeding the charges of transportation of persons and property of the same class, in the same direction, to any more distant station, but excursions and commutation tickets may be issued at special rates.

SEC. 2. No discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation shall be made between transportation companies and individuals, or in favor of either, by abatement, drawback, or otherwise, and no railroad, or owner or master of a vessel, or any lessee, manager, or employé thereof, shall make any preferences in furnishing cars, or motive power, or facilities for loading or unloading freight.

SEC. 3. No railroad, railway, or other transportation company shall grant free passes, or passes at a discount, to any person except officers or employés of the company.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

MR. EVEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to homestead exemption:

The homestead is the place on which the owner resides, who shall, at all times, have the right to point out and designate the same by any mode he may choose, and shall embrace and consist of one or more lots or parcels of land not in excess of one hundred and sixty acres, not exceeding the value of five thousand dollars, which shall be and remain free and exempt from incumbrance by debt or contract of every kind whatsoever, and free and exempt from forced sale by any and all writs or process whatever; and with the growing and grown produce thereupon, shall not be alienated by any person or process, if the owner be a married man and under coverture, without the written consent of his wife, taken and acknowledged in the manner as now established by law.

Referred to Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN.

MR. FARRELL offered the following resolution in regard to the employment of children under fourteen years of age:

Resolved, That the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects be requested to insert a clause in the Constitution prohibiting the employment of children under the age of fourteen years, in factories or other manufacturing establishments.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

MR. FAWCETT introduced the following proposition to incorporate new matter in the Constitution:

No municipal corporation shall hereafter be created by special Act, nor shall any existing charter be changed or amended by special Act. The Legislature shall provide a uniform system of municipal governments, and may divide the same into classes according to population.

Referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

CORPORATIONS.

MR. FAWCETT introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution to amend section thirty-one, article four, of the Constitution, relative to corporations. Amend so as to read as follows:

Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act. All general laws passed pursuant to this section may be altered from time to time, or repealed.

Referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

TRIAL JURIES.

MR. FREEMAN offered the following resolution in regard to Trial Juries:

Resolved, That the Constitution be so amended as to permit two thirds of the trial jurors in any case to render a verdict.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

GRAND JURIES.

MR. FREEMAN offered the following resolution in regard to Grand Juries:

Resolved, That the Constitution be so amended as to authorize the Legislature to dispense with Grand Juries, by general laws, in such cases as it may deem proper.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

MR. GREGG introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the "Declaration of Rights:"

Amendment suggested to section seventeen of the "Declaration of Rights."

Be it resolved, That foreigners who, under the laws of the United States, are privileged to become citizens of the United States, and who are or may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM.

MR. HAGER introduced the following proposed judicial system—suggested amendments of the present, proposed to be incorporated in the new Constitution as a judicial system:

TO THE DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but hereafter the concurrence of only three fourths of the jury shall be necessary to render a verdict. In criminal cases, where the punishment may be death or imprisonment in the State Prison, the jury shall consist of sixteen persons; in all other actions, either criminal or civil, the jury shall consist of twelve persons; but by the agreement of the parties the jury, in a civil action, may consist of eight persons, or a trial by jury may be waived.

SEC. 2. No person shall be held to answer for a crime or any public offense punishable by death or imprisonment in the State Prison (except in cases of impeachment, or in cases arising in the militia when in actual service, or in the land or naval forces in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in time of peace), unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury. In all other cases offenses shall be prosecuted criminally by indictment, information, or complaint, as concurrent remedies; and in any trial in any Court whatever, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend in person, and with counsel, as in civil actions. Hereafter a Grand Jury shall consist of nineteen men, any ten (10) of whom concurring may find an indictment or true bill. The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, may abolish or establish and restore the Grand Jury system in all or any county of the State.

SEC. 3. No person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, but if he voluntarily becomes a witness he may be fully cross-examined; nor shall any person, after being once acquitted by a jury, be again, for the same offense, put in jeopardy of life or liberty; but if the jury fail to render a verdict, or if judgment after verdict be arrested or reversed, nothing herein contained shall prevent a new trial.

SEC. 4. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation. Such compensation shall be ascertained by a jury in such manner as may be prescribed by law; and until the same shall be paid to the owner, or into Court for the owner, the property shall not be disturbed, or the proprietary rights of the owner therein divested. The fee of lands taken for railroad tracks or canals, without the consent of the owner thereof, shall remain in such owner, subject to the use for which it is taken.

SEC. 5. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words it is declared to be otherwise.

TO THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State, in matters of law and equity, shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, in County Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and in such municipal Courts of inferior criminal jurisdiction as the Legislature, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected to each house, may establish in any incorporated city or town.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of eight Justices. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be learned in the law, and not less than thirty-five years of age. They must be citizens of the United States and of this State for five years next preceding their election or appointment.

SEC. 3. The Supreme Court shall have a general superintending control over all inferior tribunals, and shall have appellate jurisdiction as follows: In all cases involving the construction of the Constitution of the United States or of this State; in all cases where the validity of any statute or treaty of, or authority exercised under, the United States is drawn in question; in all civil cases arising in the District Courts whereof such Courts have exclusive original jurisdiction; in all cases of probate in the County or Probate Courts; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone; and it shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto, and such other writs as may be necessary to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. The Justices, and each of them, upon petition in behalf of any person held in actual custody, may issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, and make such writs returnable before the Supreme Court, or a Justice thereof, or before any District Court, or County Court, or before any Judge of such Courts.

SEC. 4. The Justices of the Supreme Court, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State—two every two years at each general election—and shall hold office for the term of eight years. But the Legislature may, in its discretion, provide separate tickets and ballot-boxes for the election of Justices of the Supreme Court at a general election, or may change the time of election of such Justices from a general to a special election, to be held every two years.

SEC. 5. The full terms of office of the Justices of the Supreme Court, and the unexpired terms of those elected to fill any vacancies, shall commence on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January next ensuing their election. Those appointed shall enter upon the discharge of their duties as soon as qualified.

SEC. 6. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be so classified that only two of them shall go out of office every two years, and at the same time. If a vacancy occurs in the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, it shall be filled by the Governor. The person so appointed shall only hold the office until the next election appointed for the election of Justices of the Supreme Court by the people, when the vacancy shall be filled by the election of a Justice, who shall hold the office only for the unexpired term.

SEC. 7. The State shall, from time to time, be divided by the Legislature into two territorial districts, each district to be composed of entire contiguous counties. A Supreme Court, to consist of any four of the eight Justices of the Supreme Court, shall be held in each territorial district, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment or render a decision. Appeals to the Supreme Court from judgments entered of record in a county within a territorial district shall be to the Supreme Court in the same district.

SEC. 8. If in any case pending in the Supreme Court, in either district, the Justices be equally divided in opinion, or the Court overrules an authoritative decision previously made by any Supreme Court of this State, such case shall, with a statement of the reason therefor, be certified and transmitted to the Supreme Court in full bench, to consist of eight Justices. All cases so certified and transmitted shall be heard in the Supreme Court in full bench, and only, unless the Court otherwise direct, upon written arguments; and the concurrence of five Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment or render a decision therein. If five Justices fail to concur the judgment appealed from must be affirmed.

SEC. 9. The Supreme Court, in full bench of eight Justices, and the Supreme Court in the territorial districts, of four Justices, shall be held at such times and places, and appeals thereto, respectively, shall be taken, certified, transmitted, and the business of the Courts regulated as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 10. At any session of the Supreme Court the Justice holding a commission oldest in date shall be Chief Justice, and if there be more than one commission of the same date the Justices may select the Chief Justice.

SEC. 11. The State shall provide suitable Court-rooms and accommodations for holding the sessions of the Supreme Court, and for the Justices and officers.

SEC. 12. When any Justice of the Supreme Court, through interest or other disability, is disqualified from taking part in the hearing or decision of any case pending before the Supreme Court, in full bench, the remaining Justices may call to their assistance a disinterested District Judge, who shall act in such case as a Justice of the Supreme Court. In like cases the Supreme Court, in either territorial district, may call to its assistance another Justice of the Supreme Court or a District Judge.

Sec. 13. The present Justices of the Supreme Court shall remain in office (unless sooner succeeded by those elected under this Constitution) until the expiration of the terms of office respectively to which they were elected; but their terms of office shall expire, and the payment of further salaries or compensation cease, and they shall severally retire from office in the order of their election (the Justice of the shortest unexpired term first) at the commencement of the terms of office, respectively, of Justices elected under this Constitution. To succeed the present Justices of the Supreme Court two Justices shall be elected at the —— election in the year —— and —— in the year ——.

Sec. 14. All judicial decisions in this State shall be free for publication by any person; but the Supreme Court may designate what decisions and opinions delivered by that Court, or the Justices thereof, shall be printed at the expense of the State; and no payment shall be made by the State for the publication of any decisions or opinions not so designated. All cases finally submitted to the Supreme Court must be decided without unnecessary delay, and within three months after such submission.

Sec. 15. The State, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, shall be divided into convenient judicial districts of entire contiguous counties, in each of which one District Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district, at the general or special elections provided for the election of Justices of the Supreme Court. Such judicial districts may be changed, enlarged, diminished, or abolished by the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, as public convenience may require; and whenever a judicial district shall be abolished the office of the Judge and his salary and compensation shall cease. The District Judges shall hold their offices for the term of eight years.

Sec. 16. Any single county containing fifty thousand inhabitants may of itself constitute a judicial district. In a judicial district composed of a single county, the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, may, from time to time, as the public convenience may require, provide for an additional District Judge for every additional fifty thousand inhabitants in such county, each of whom may separately hold District Courts, hear and try cases, perform all the duties imposed upon District Judges, and exercise the full jurisdiction of District Courts. In any judicial district where there may be more than one District Judge, the several District Courts therein, for business purposes, shall be known and designated as the First, Second, etc., District Court of the —— Judicial District, in numerical order, according to their respective numbers and judicial districts, as may be prescribed by law. The business, practice, and proceedings, and the times and manner of holding such Courts, may be regulated by general and special laws applicable to such judicial districts.

Sec. 17. The District Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity; in all cases involving the title of real property or mining claims; the construction of the revenue laws of this State; the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, forfeiture or penalty, or the title to any office under this State; and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of personal property in controversy amounts to three hundred dollars; and, also, in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for, or which may be conferred by law. They shall also have such concurrent jurisdiction with, and such appellate jurisdiction from, inferior tribunals as may be conferred by law.

Sec. 18. No person shall be eligible to the office of District Judge unless he be learned in the law and has attained the age of thirty-five years; and who has not, for five years next preceding his election, been a resident of the district, and a citizen of the United States and of this State.

Sec. 19. The District Courts shall exercise a superintending control over County Courts, Probate Courts, and other inferior Courts in each county of their respective districts; and they and the Judges thereof shall have power to issue orders and writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, ne exeat, injunction, habeas corpus, and all other orders and writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of their jurisdiction, and to hear and determine the same.

Sec. 20. In each of the counties of the State there shall be a County Court, and, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, for each a County Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county. County Judges shall hold their offices for the term of four years.

Sec. 21. In any county containing over fifty thousand inhabitants, the Legislature, by a two-third vote of all the members elected to each house, may, from time to time, as the public convenience may require, provide for such county one additional County Judge for each additional fifty thousand inhabitants; each of whom shall separately hold County Courts, hear and try cases, exercise the jurisdiction and perform all other duties imposed upon County Courts and Judges. The business, practice, and proceedings of, and the manner and times of holding such Courts, may be regulated by general and special laws applicable to such counties.

Sec. 22. The County Courts shall have original jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and detainer and to prevent or abate a nuisance; of proceedings in insolvency, and of all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for; they shall also have such criminal jurisdiction as the Legislature may prescribe; and shall have power to hear applications for and to issue naturalization papers. They shall also have appellate jurisdiction in all cases arising in Courts held by Justices of the Peace, and in such inferior municipal Courts as may be established under this Constitution. County Judges shall hold, in their respective counties, Probate Courts, and in such Probate Courts, and as Probate Judges, shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law. In any county where there may be two or more County Judges the Probate Court shall be held, and the duties of Probate Judge performed, by one or more of such County Judges, as the public convenience may require, and as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 23. The County Courts, in their respective counties, shall exercise a superintending control over Justices of the Peace and all municipal Courts, and shall have authority to issue writs of habeas corpus on petition by, or on behalf of, any person in actual custody, unless committed or imprisoned by the order or judgment of the Supreme Court, or a Justice thereof, or by a District Court, or a Judge thereof.

Sec. 24. No person shall be eligible to the office of County or Probate Judge unless he has attained the age of thirty years, and for five years next preceding his election or appointment has been a resident of the county, a citizen of the United States and of this State.

Sec. 25. District, County, and Probate Judges shall be elected at the general or special elections, and in the same manner prescribed for the election of Justices of the Supreme Court, and shall enter upon the duties of their respective offices on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January next after their election.

Sec. 26. The election of all Justices and Judges of Courts of record shall be held and conducted as this Constitution, and laws in harmony therewith, may provide; and in case of a tie, or contested election between any candidates, the same shall be determined as prescribed by law.

Sec. 27. District Judges may interchange with each other in holding District Courts, and in the performance of official duties, in the several judicial districts throughout the State; and if, from any cause, a County or Probate Judge be unable or disqualified from holding Court in any county, such Court may be held by any other County or Probate Judge.

Sec. 28. The Supreme Court, District Courts, County Courts, and Probate Courts shall be Courts of record.

Sec. 29. The Legislature shall provide for the election, in each county, of as many Justices of the Peace as the public convenience may require, with such duties, powers, jurisdiction (inferior to the Courts of record), and terms of office as prescribed by law.

Sec. 30. The Justices of the Supreme Court, District Judges, County and Probate Judges shall, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services such compensation as is or may be prescribed by law, which shall not be increased or diminished after their election, or during their terms of office. The compensation to County and Probate Judges shall be paid out of the county treasury of their respective counties. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace when authorized by law, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office.

Sec. 31. The Justices of the Supreme Court, District Judges, County and Probate Judges, during the term for which they shall have been elected shall not be eligible to any other office, State or Federal, than a judicial office, nor shall they hold any other office of profit under this State or under the Government of the United States, or of any other State, or practice as an attorney or counselor in any Court in this State.

Sec. 32. In jury trials, Judges may state the testimony and declare the law, but shall not charge juries as to conclusions of fact.

Sec. 33. The Legislature shall have no power to grant leave of absence to any judicial officer, and if any such officer shall absent himself from the State for more than thirty consecutive days his office shall be forfeited and become vacant.

Sec. 34. If a Justice or Judge of any Court of record willfully violates his oath of office, or neglects, or by reason of prolonged sickness or physical or mental infirmity becomes unable to perform the duties of his office with efficiency, the Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house concurring, and with the approval of the Governor, to remove such Justice or Judge from office; but the cause of such removal shall be first stated on the Journal of each house, and notice thereof given to such Justice or Judge, with such reasonable time to be heard in his defense as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 35. The style of all process shall be "The People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

Sec. 36. The salaries and compensation allowed to judicial officers must be fixed by law. The yearly salary and compensation of Justices of the Supreme Court shall not exceed the sum of —— dollars; that of a District Judge shall not exceed the sum of —— dollars; and that of a County Judge, or a Judge of a Municipal Court, shall not exceed the sum of —— dollars. Justices of the Peace shall receive such salaries or fees as prescribed by law.

Sec. 37. Judicial officers, before entering upon the duties of their respective offices, shall take and subscribe before a Judge of a Court of record the following oath or affirmation, in writing: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the Constitution of the United States; that I will support and fully sustain, observe, and obey the Constitution of the State of California, in all its parts and provisions, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of (here insert title of office), according to the best of my ability and understanding." The oath or affirmation of a Justice of the Supreme Court, or of a District Judge, must, before the issuance of his commission, be filed and deposited in the office of the Secretary of State; that of a County Judge, the Judge of a Municipal Court, and of a Justice of the Peace, must, in like manner, be filed and deposited in the office of the County Clerk of the county.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, and Committee on Judiciary and Judicial System.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I believe that violates the rule. These propositions are on different branches, and referred to different committees. The fore part was in reference to the Bill of Rights and the latter part to the Judicial Department.

Mr. HAGER. Some portions of the Bill of Rights relate to the judicial system, and that portion of it was referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. That which relates to Jury Trials is also a part of the judicial system, which is now embodied in the Bill of Rights. This is a proposition for a new judicial system.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that the resolutions sent up by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager, relate to but one subject. Portions of them may be referred to different committees. Therefore the point of order is not well taken.

RAILROAD CORPORATIONS.

MR. HOWARD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to corporations:

Resolved, That the Constitution should embrace the following provisions in relation to railways:

Railroad corporations in this State are common carriers, and their ways public highways, and such corporations subject to legislative control. They shall be chartered under general and uniform laws. Each shall have the right to connect with any other, and transfer and receive freight and passengers without delay or discrimination; but no such corporation shall consolidate directly or indirectly with a parallel or competing line. The railroad and steamship corporations or companies in this State, under pain of forfeiture of charters, are prohibited from combining or pooling freights or fares, or in any manner combining or pooling with each other. No railroad or canal company in this State shall charge more than —— cents per mile as fare for passengers for a distance over thirty miles, or more than —— cents per ton per mile for freight for any distance over thirty miles. Freight shall include delivery, wharfage, and storage for forty-eight hours after notice to the consignee. Rates never shall be higher from a given point to another on any such way than from the first point to one more distant on the same way, except on excursion trains or commutation. Discrimination in rates between individuals or corporations asking to be served is prohibited; and no railroad, canal, or steamship officer shall be permitted to become privately interested in transportation or furnishing supplies. Common-carrying corporations are forbidden to engage in mining or other business. The Legislature of this State shall pass laws to more fully enforce the provisions of this article, and to correct abuses and prevent discrimination and extortion in the rates of freights and fares on the public ways of this State, and fix, from time to time, by proper enactments and laws, reasonable maximum rates of charges for transportation of passengers and freight on the different railroads and canals in this State, not inconsistent with the foregoing; and shall enforce such laws by adequate penalties, to the extent, if necessary, of forfeiture of franchises held by any corporation offending against such laws.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

TAXATION.

MR. HUESTIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning revenue and taxation:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be requested to embody in their report the following propositions:

SEC. —. Every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his, her, or its property within this State. All moneys due and owing to any person, or to become due, by a solvent debtor, whether secured by mortgage or otherwise, are property within the meaning of this Constitution, and shall be taxed; provided, that all property of the United States, of the State, of counties, cities and counties, cities, or other municipal corporations, and all growing crops, shall be exempt from taxation. The Legislature shall enact such laws as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this section.

SEC. —. For the purpose of preventing double taxation, the Legislature shall enact laws necessary to authorize Assessors to deduct the just debts, evidenced by note, mortgage, or other written instrument of the person taxed, from the estimated value of his, her, or its taxable property. Solvent debts, secured by mortgage owned or held by non-residents of the State, shall be assessed to such non-residents, and the tax so assessed shall be a lien upon, and collectible from, the property described in the mortgage; provided, that the amount of the tax so collected from such mortgaged property may be deducted by the mortgagor from the debt secured by the mortgage. All contracts by one party for the payment of taxes assessed to another are hereby prohibited and declared null and void.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHINESE BY CORPORATIONS.

MR. FREUD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the employment of Chinese by corporations:

SECTION —. No charter, contract, grant, or subsidy shall be issued by this State to any railroad, mining, or other corporation unless it shall contain the express stipulation that no Mongolian shall ever be used, hired, or employed by such corporation in any capacity whatever.

SEC. —. Violation of the foregoing provision shall work a forfeiture of said charter, contract, grant, or subsidy.

SEC. —. No railroad, mining, or other corporation in existence at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall have the benefit of any future legislation, except on condition of complete acceptance of all the provisions of this Constitution applicable to railroads, mines, or other corporations.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

LICENSES FOR ALIENS.

MR. FREUD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to granting licenses, franchises, or privileges to aliens not eligible to become citizens of the United States.

Resolved, That the following sections be inserted in the new Constitution:

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION —. The Legislature shall frame such laws for the regulation of franchises, privileges, permits, or licenses for the carrying on of any business or industry as shall prohibit the granting, issuing, or use of any such franchise, privilege, permit, or license to any alien resident of this State who by law is ineligible to citizenship.

SEC. —. Violation of the foregoing provision shall be declared a felony, punishable in accordance with the laws of this State.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

EXCESSIVE BAIL.

MR. HUGHEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to excessive bails and fines:

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee insert the following section in Bill of Rights, in their draft of the new Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor shall witnesses be imprisoned, in default of bail, as such.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

TENURE OF OFFICE.

MR. JOHNSON introduced the following proposition as to officers and their tenure of office:

All officers of this State, county officers, members of the Legislature, and township officers, shall be elected on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, eighteen hundred and eighty, and every four years thereafter, and shall hold their offices until their successors are elected and qualified; said officers, so elected, to enter upon the discharge of their duties on the first Wednesday in January next after their election; and officers holding office at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall hold over till the first Wednesday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty-one. Judges of Courts of record are excepted from the operation of the foregoing proposition.

Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

REAL ESTATE TO ALIENS.

MR. JOYCE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the lease or sale of real estate to aliens not eligible to become citizens:

SECTION 1. No alien or aliens shall ever be capable of taking, holding, transmitting, or transferring title to any real estate within this State, or of acquiring or transferring any right, title, or interest in any real estate in this State, under lease or otherwise.

Referred to Committee on Chinese.

MR. JOYCE also introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the same subject:

SEC. 2. All real estate in this State which shall hereafter be conveyed or leased to any alien who does not first legitimately declare his intentions to become a citizen of the United States, under the laws thereof, shall escheat to the State.

Referred to Committee on Chinese.

A WHOLE CONSTITUTION.

MR. LAINE. I confess that I do not fully understand the scope of this rule, but it appears a proposition must embrace a single idea. It seemed to me upon the introduction of the proposition by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager, that it embraced a number of ideas, but was placed under the head of one proposition. Now, I do not desire to infract the rules of this Convention, but I desire to offer a proposed Constitution for the State of California, as one proposition, if I may be in order in doing so. It takes it all in, and of course there is more than one idea embraced in it. It is on legal cap and otherwise meets all the rules of the Convention. If I can be allowed to introduce it, I desire that it be referred to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

THE PRESIDENT. By unanimous consent of the Convention it can be introduced.

MR. BARBOUR. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order, then.

MR. HAGER. I wish to correct the gentleman, so far as the proposition I introduced is concerned. It relates to one subject entirely—to the administration of justice alone.

MR. LAINE. I would ask a ruling of the Chair.

THE PRESIDENT. I rule the proposition out of order.

MR. McCALLUM. Will the Chair entertain a motion to suspend the rule? I move that the rule be suspended, in order that he may offer his Constitution as a whole—that rule fifty-two be temporarily suspended.

Lost.

ALIENS BECOMING SETTLERS.

MR. LARKIN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to aliens becoming settlers in this State:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. No person shall be permitted to settle in this State who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States after the adoption of this Constitution.

SEC. 2. All contracts made with any such person or persons, coming into this State contrary to the provisions of the foregoing section, shall be void; and any person who shall employ such person or persons, lease, rent lands or houses to him or them, or encourage any such person or persons to remain in the State, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars.

SEC. 3. All fines which may be collected for a violation of the provisions of this article, or of any law which may hereafter be passed for the purpose of carrying the same into execution, shall be set apart and appropriated to the Common School Fund of the State.

Digitized by Google

Sec. 4. The Legislature shall pass laws to carry out the provisions of this article.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

LAND SUBSIDIES.

Mr. LINDOW offered the following resolution relative to land subsidies:

Resolved, No land or other subsidies should be granted to any corporations.

Resolved, Land grabbing must be stopped.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

ABOLITION OF GRAND JURIES.

Mr. MANSFIELD offered the following resolution in relation to Grand Juries:

Resolved, That Grand Juries be abolished in this State by an appropriate provision in the new Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

QUALIFICATION OF VOTERS.

Mr. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz, offered the following resolution relative to persons voting who have not been naturalized six months prior to an election:

Resolved, That the Committee on Suffrage be instructed to inquire into the expediency of making provision that persons entitled to citizenship shall not be allowed to vote at any election in this State, unless they shall have obtained final naturalization papers six months prior to any election.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

READING OF BILLS.

Mr. McCALLUM offered the following resolution to amend the Constitution relative to the reading of all bills by sections, on the question of their passage, and taking and recording the final vote on such question:

Resolved, That the Constitution should be so amended as to provide that every bill shall be read in full on the question of its passage, and further, that the ayes and noes shall be always taken and recorded on such question.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

MEETING OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Mr. McCALLUM offered the following resolution relative to the meeting of the Legislature:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Legislative Department are hereby instructed to report an amendment to article four of the Constitution, so as to provide that the time of meeting of the Legislature shall be fixed to commence on the first Wednesday after the first Monday in January ensuing the election of its members.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

Mr. McFARLAND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution relative to the right of suffrage:

Resolved, That the following provisions be inserted in the Constitution:

Every unmarried woman having such qualifications of age, residence, and citizenship as are prescribed in this Constitution for male voters, who is or may hereafter be the owner of property of the value of one thousand dollars, shall be entitled to vote at all elections in this State; and every married woman having the said qualifications of age, residence, and citizenship, who is or shall be the owner of separate property of the value of two thousand dollars, shall be entitled to vote at all elections in this State; provided, that the Legislature shall have the power to extend the elective franchise to any or all other women having the above named qualifications of age, residence, and citizenship.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

PARDONS AND REPRIEVES.

Mr. MORELAND introduced the following suggested amendment to section thirteen, article five, of the present Constitution:

The power to grant pardons and reprieves after conviction, for all offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, shall be lodged in a Commission to consist of three persons, to be chosen as provided by law. They shall have power to grant such pardons and reprieves upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as they may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardon. Upon conviction for treason, they shall have power to suspend the execution of sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. They shall communicate to the Legislature, at the beginning of every session, every case of reprieve or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of the pardon or reprieve.

Referred to Committee on Pardoning Power.

ABOLITION OF FINES.

Mr. MORSE offered the following resolution to abolish fines:

Resolved, That the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights be instructed to report a section abolishing fines upon conviction of crime, except in cases of petty misdemeanor.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

CHINESE TESTIMONY.

Mr. MURPHY offered the following resolution, relative to Chinese testimony:

Resolved, That the Committee on Chinese be instructed to prepare a clause in the new Constitution forbidding the employment of Chinese testimony in cases where white persons are parties.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

TAXATION.

Mr. MURPHY introduced the following proposed amendment to section thirteen, article eleven, of the present Constitution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Taxation and Revenue insert the following amendment in the Constitution:

Sec. 13. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. Mortgages, bonds, notes, book accounts, and all other evidences of indebtedness shall be taxed to their full cash value. All property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained and directed by law, but Assessors and Collectors of town, county, and State taxes shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district, county, or town in which the property taxed for State, county, or town purposes is situated.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

EMPLOYMENT OF ALIENS.

Mr. NELSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to employment of aliens:

Resolved, That no alien, ineligible to become a citizen of the United States, shall ever be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work in this State after the adoption of this Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Chinese.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

Mr. NOEL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Declaration of Rights, article one, section twenty-two:

The Legislature shall not grant to any citizen, or class of citizens, privileges or immunities which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all citizens.

Sec. 23. Aliens who are, or who by the laws of the United States may become, citizens of the United States, and who are bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

Sec. 24. The State, by virtue of its sovereignty, has the absolute right to control the police regulations within its limits.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

ABOLITION OF POLL TAX.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the prohibition of a poll tax:

Resolved, That the following provision should be inserted in the Constitution:

A tax on human existence being an absurdity, antagonistic to free institutions, therefore taxes by the poll are forever prohibited in this State.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

ACQUISITION OF LAND.

Mr. REYNOLDS offered the following resolution, relative to the acquisition of land:

Resolved, That the Committee on —— be and are hereby instructed to inquire into and report as to the expediency of so amending the Constitution as to limit the future acquisition of land by any one person, or association of persons, or corporation.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I ask to lay that resolution temporarily on the table, for the reason that I have only heard the names of the committees called, and hardly know to what committee I would like to have it referred.

The PRESIDENT. It would go to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I do not desire it referred to a committee unless I know who the committee are. I understand ——

The PRESIDENT. The resolution is not debatable.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I desire only to state that I hope to get a committee reported by the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, on Land Limitations, and if so I will then ask to have it referred to that committee.

The PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table as the gentleman desires it.

WATER RIGHTS.

Mr. OHLEYER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to water rights:

Resolved, That all the waters of the State are the common property of the people, and no individual or corporation shall be permitted to use the same to the injury of their neighbors.

Referred to Committee on Water and Water Rights.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until one o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at one o'clock, the President pro tem., Belcher, in the chair.

On motion of Mr. McFARLAND, the roll call was dispensed with.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move that four hundred and eighty copies of the list of committees and the members constituting the same be printed.

Digitized by Google

MR. BARBOUR. I second that motion.

MR. ESTEE. It is already ordered.

MR. EDGERTON. The list of committees is ordered, but not the names of the members constituting the committees.

MR. ESTEE. Then put in the residence of the members.

MR. REYNOLDS. I hope the motion will prevail, for this reason——

MR. MURPHY. I rise to a point of order. We are not now under the head of motions and resolutions.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The point of order is well taken. The Secretary will proceed to call the roll on receiving propositions.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS AND RESOLUTIONS.

MR. RINGGOLD offered the following resolution, relative to an oath, which was read by the Secretary and referred as noted:

Resolved, After the adoption of this Constitution, no person shall ever be allowed to either vote at any State, county, township, or municipal election in this State, or the election of officers of any corporation for profit, nor be allowed to prosecute or defend any civil action in any of the State, county, or municipal Courts of this State, who, when challenged so to do by any citizen of the State, shall refuse to take the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that since the expiration of ninety days after the adoption of the now existing Constitution of the State of California, I have not directly or indirectly employed in this State, or elsewhere to render service in this State, any foreign-born Mongolian, nor any alien resident of this State who is not entitled under the laws of the United States to become a citizen thereof, either as a laborer, servant, mechanic, manufacturer, or otherwise, and I have not, since the expiration of ninety days after the adoption of said Constitution, knowingly bought, sold, or used, either for food, raiment, or any other purpose, any article manufactured, produced, or prepared in this State, in whole or in part, by the labor of any such Mongolian, or other alien resident of this State who is not entitled, under the laws of the United States, to become a citizen thereof." All executive, legislative, and judicial officers of this State, and all county, township, and municipal officers shall, before entering upon the discharge of the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the above oath (or affirmation), together with the following: "And I will support the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of California, and will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of —— according to the best of my ability."

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

MR. ROLFE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, to take the place of sections one, two, three, and four, of article six.

The reading was dispensed with.

ARTICLE VI.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, in County Courts, in Probate Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and in such Recorders' and other inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and five Associate Justices. The Justice having the shortest term to serve shall be the Chief Justice. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State, at the general elections next after vacancies may occur in any of such offices respectively, either by expiration of term, death, resignation, or otherwise. They shall hold their offices for the term of twelve years from the first day of January next after their election.

SEC. 3. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or right to the possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to —— hundred dollars; also, in all cases arising in the Probate Courts, and also in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. One Justice may issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State upon petition and behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writ returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any District Court or any County Court in the State, or before any Judge of said Courts.

SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall be divided into two divisions, of three members each. The Justice of each division having the shortest term to serve shall be the Presiding Justice thereof. Such division shall be made by the Justices by mutual agreement among themselves, or if in any case they cannot agree, then by the Chief Justice. One division shall be known as the Equity Division, and the other as the Law Division. The Equity Division shall hear and determine all appeals in equity cases, or in which questions of equity constitute the principal or important questions involved. The Law Division shall hear and determine appeals, and have jurisdiction in all other cases. The Chief Justice shall allot to each division its appropriate cases, in accordance with the foregoing division, but his allotment of any case or cases shall be subject to revision and change by the full bench, on the application of any two Justices of the Division to which such allotments so asked to be changed may be made by the Chief Justice, the decision thereon by the full bench to be made as in any other case of appeal.

SEC. 5. Terms of the full bench of the Supreme Court shall be held by the Justices of both Divisions sitting together as one Court. The full bench of the Supreme Court shall have jurisdiction in all cases decided by either Division, in which there shall not be a concurrence of all the Justices thereof, and in all cases which, on account of their importance, may be transferred to the full bench by order of the Division having the jurisdiction thereof, after judgment or decision by the Division.

SEC. 6. Terms of the full bench and of each Division of the Supreme Court shall be held at such times and place or places as may be prescribed by law. The presence of four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum of the full bench to transact business, and the concurrence of a majority of Justices present shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment or decision of the full bench. The judgment or decision in all cases coming to the full bench from either Division, in which the judgment or decision of the Division shall have been concurred in by two of the Justices thereof, shall be considered as affirmed by the full bench, unless a majority of the Justices present, constituting a quorum of the full bench, shall concur in a reversal or modification. The presence of two Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum of either Division to transact business.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

A RESOLUTION CONCERNING THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. SCHELL introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the following provision be incorporated in the Constitution:

No new bill shall be introduced into either House of the Legislature during the last ten days of the session thereof.

Read and referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

MR. SCHOMP introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That all farming lands, of equal producing capacity, should be subject to equal taxation, without reference to cultivation.

Read and referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

RELATIVE TO THE RIGHTS OF FOREIGN-BORN CITIZENS.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following amendment to section seventeen, article one, of the Constitution, relative to rights of foreign-born residents:

Proposition to amend section seventeen, article one, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 17. Foreigners (except Mongolians) who are or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens, restricted only by such regulations as the Congress of the United States may impose.

Read and referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

RELATIVE TO BILLS OF ATTAINDER.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following amendment to section sixteen, article one, of the Constitution, relative to bills of attainder, ex post facto laws, etc.

Proposition to amend section sixteen, article one, of the Constitution, so that it will read as follows:

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts or making irrevocable any grant of special privilege or immunities, shall ever be passed.

Read and referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

PROPOSITION IN FAVOR OF THE MINORITY SYSTEM FOR THE ELECTION OF MEMBERS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Legislative Department be requested to inquire into the propriety of incorporating into the new Constitution the following provisions: The Legislature shall apportion the State every ten years, beginning with the year ——, by dividing the population of the State into as ascertained by the last Federal census by the number of twenty-five, and the quotient shall be the ratio of representation in the Senate. The State shall be divided into twenty-five Senatorial districts, each of which shall elect one Senator, whose term of office shall be four years. The Senators elected in the year —— shall vacate their office at the end of two years, and those elected bearing even numbers at the end of four years, and vacancies occurring by the expiration of term shall be filled by the election of Senators for the full term. Senatorial districts shall be formed of contiguous and compact territory bounded by county lines, and contain as nearly as practical equal number of inhabitants, but no district shall contain less than four fifths of the Senatorial ratio. Counties containing not less than the ratio and three fourths may be divided into separate districts, and shall be entitled to two Senators, and to one additional Senator for each number of inhabitants equal to the ratio contained by such county in excess of twice the number of said votes. The House of Representatives shall consist of three times the number of the Senators, and their term of office shall be two years. Three Representatives shall be elected to each Senatorial district at the general election in the year ——, and every two years thereafter in all elections of Representatives aforesaid each qualified voter may cast as many for one candidate as there are Representatives to be elected, or may distribute the same in equal parts thereof among the candidates as he shall see fit, and the candidates highest in votes shall be declared elected.

Read and referred to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation.

RELATIVE TO RAILWAYS.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, introduced the following proposition—declaring railways public highways; requiring the Legislature to establish maximum rates and charges for freight and carrying passengers; the rolling stock of a railroad company made personal property, and liable to execution and sale; prohibiting the consolidation of railroad companies; majority of Directors to be citizens or residents of State; prohibit companies from inflating stock, etc.

Resolved, That the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal be requested to inquire of the propriety of the following provisions for the Constitution:

Railways heretofore constructed, or that may hereafter be constructed in this State, are hereby declared public highways, and shall be free to all persons for the transportation of their persons and property thereon, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; and the Legislature shall, from time to time, pass laws establishing reasonable maximum rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight on the different railroads in this State. The rolling stock, and all other movable property belonging to any railroad company or corporation in this State, shall be considered personal property, and shall be liable to execution and sale in the same manner as the personal property of individuals, and the Legislature shall pass no law exempting any such property from execution and sale. No railroad corporation shall consolidate its stock, property, or franchise with any other railroad corporation running a parallel or competing line. A majority of the Directors of any railroad corporation now incorporated or hereafter to be incorporated by the laws of this State, shall be citizens and residents of this State. No railroad corporation shall issue any stock or bonds, except for money, labor, or property actually reserved and applied to the purposes for which such corporation was created, and all dividends and other fictitious increase of the capital stock or indebtedness of any such corporation shall be void. The exercise of the power and the right of eminent domain shall never be so construed or abridged as to prevent the taking by the Legislature of the property and franchise of incorporated companies already organized and subjecting them to the public necessity the same as of individuals. The right of trial by jury shall be held inviolate; in all trials by jury shall be held inviolate; in all trials of claims for compensation, when, in the exercise of the said right of eminent domain, any incorporated company shall be interested either for or against the exercise of said right. The Legislature shall pass laws to correct abuses and prevent unjust discrimination and extortion in the rates of freight and passenger tariffs on the different railroads in this State, and enforce such laws by adequate penalties to the extent, if necessary for that purpose, of forfeiture of their property and franchise.

Reading dispensed with. Referred to the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

Mr. SMITH, of Kern, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the following be incorporated in the Constitution of this State as a part of the system of taxation, and be known as article eight, sections one, two, three, and four of said Constitution:

ARTICLE VIII.

SECTION 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and taxes shall be levied and collected under general laws; all private property in the State, not exempt herein or under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value in money, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word property, as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include choses in action, money at interest, at hand, or on deposit; credits, whether evidenced by notes, mortgages, or otherwise; goods, chattels, and effects, wherever they are; ships and vessels at home or abroad; public stocks and securities; stocks in moneyed corporations, owned in the State, whether within or without the State; interest or increase on the bonds of the Government of the United States when owned within the State, whether the same be within or without the State; credits or money due on a debt at the time of assessment to be assessed to the debtor who shall have a lien on the debt, and against the creditor, for the amount of the tax, and to be deducted from the debt from the date of the payment of the tax. But when a debt is secured by mortgage, and the debt is assessed against the debtor, who shall pay the tax thereon, in the assessment of land upon which such mortgage rests to the amount of the mortgage debt resting on said land shall be deducted from the valuation of said land, or real property, when the same would, without such deduction, result in double taxation, by such land not being fully paid for by the owner thereof. But it shall not be considered double taxation when such real property is used for security purposes only by the mortgage, and in the assessment of credits their valuation shall be measured by the amount of assets of the debtor and the security of the credits. Property owned by the United States, by this State, or by municipal corporations under the laws of this State, all necessary public school property, public cemeteries in actual use, and growing crops, shall be exempt from taxation.

SEC. 2. There shall be a State Board of Equalization, consisting of the Secretary of State, the Controller, and the Attorney-General. Said Board shall equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the State for State purposes; shall have appellate jurisdiction from County Boards of Equalization, and shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law. The Boards of Supervisors of the various counties of the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization of their respective counties, and for the purposes of equalization shall have full power (subject to appeal) to review and to raise or lower any county assessment, either upon complaint or upon their own motion; and it shall be their duty, at any convenient time, to be by such Boards previously fixed, before the regular assessments in each county, to classify and grade the lands in their respective counties subject to taxation, under such regulations as shall be provided by law; and for the purposes of classifying and grading lands said Boards may appoint deputies, whose duties shall be subject to the control and revision by said Boards. And said Boards shall perform such other duties in equalizing, grading, and classifying as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 3. Before any agricultural, grazing, mineral, or wild lands shall be assessed, they shall be so graded and classified by the Board of Equalization of each county that lands of the same kind and location shall be placed in a separate class, each class to be graded as to value in numerical order from first upwards. But cultivated lands shall not be graded as lands of a greater value than the same kind and class of lands uncultivated. Lands, whether cultivated or not, of the same kind and quality, shall be graded and classified in the same grade and class. The assessment of lands shall be based upon their grade and classification; but lands belonging to the Government of the United States upon which preëmption or United States Government homestead rights have not been perfected, and possessory rights, shall not be graded nor classified, nor subject to taxation, until such rights have been perfected into a fee-simple ownership. And in the taxation of lands the improvements shall be separately assessed.

SEC. 4. There shall never be levied or collected, by general levy and collection, any special road tax. Where funds other than such as may come from county treasuries are needed for the construction and repair of county roads, bridges, and ferries, the same may be levied upon the owners of property adjacent to such proposed roads, bridges, and ferries, or improvements, in proportion to the amount and value of such property and the convenience and value of such roads, bridges, and ferries to such property, or the owners and inhabitants thereof.

SEC. 5. No corporations, except for benevolent, religious, scientific, or education purposes, shall be hereafter formed under the laws of this State, unless the persons named as corporators shall, at or before the filing of the articles of incorporation, pay into the State treasury one hundred dollars for the first fifty thousand dollars or less stock, and a further sum of twenty dollars for every additional ten thousand dollars of its capital; and no such corporation shall hereafter increase its capital stock without first paying into the State treasury twenty dollars for every ten thousand dollars of increase; and laws shall be passed to prevent and to punish, by heavy penalties and forfeitures, evasions of any of the provisions of this section.

Reading dispensed with. Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

RELATIVE TO EDUCATION.

Mr. SMITH, of San Francisco, introduced the following:

Resolved, That neither the General Assembly, nor any county, town, township, school district, municipal or other corporation, shall ever make any appropriation to, or pay from any public fund whatever, anything in aid of any sectarian purpose, or to help support or sustain any school, academy, seminary, college, or university, or other institution of learning controlled by any sectarian denomination whatever; nor shall any grant or donation of land or personal property ever be made by any such public corporation for any sectarian purpose whatever.

Reading dispensed with. Referred to the Committee on Education.

RELATIVE TO PARDONING POWER.

Mr. SMITH, of San Francisco, introduced the following resolution, relative to the pardoning power:

Resolved, That the Constitution ought to be so amended as to abolish the power of pardon now vested in the State Executive.

Read, and referred to the Committee on Pardoning Power.

RELATING TO CORPORATIONS.

Mr. STEDMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the following section be incorporated into the new Constitution:

SECTION —. Every corporation or person having work done by contract shall be liable for all dues from contractors or sub-contractors to laborers and material-men for service or material hereafter done or furnished on such work; provided, that notice of the amount of such dues be given to such person or company within thirty days after the date when payable.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

DISPENSING WITH GRAND JURIES.

Mr. STEDMAN introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Standing Committee on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into and report to the Convention the propriety of dispensing with Grand Juries, and that if the committee should be in favor of dispensing with Grand Juries they report a section of the Constitution on that subject.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

RELATIVE TO THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE FOR WOMEN.

Mr. STEELE introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be instructed to inquire into the justice and expediency of extending the elective franchise to women on the same basis of qualification as established by law for the male voter.

Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

RELATIVE TO THE WORDS "WHITE MALE."

Mr. SWEASEY introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That article two, section one, of the present Constitution be amended by striking out the words, in line one, "white male," and wherever the same words may occur.

Referred to the Committee on Commerce and Navigation.

RELATIVE TO EQUAL TAXATION OF LAND.

MR. SWENSON introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That all lands in this State, of equal productive capacity, shall be taxed alike, without reference to improvements.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS IN CORPORATIONS.

MR. SWING introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That there be incorporated in the Constitution a clause making each stockholder of a corporation or joint stock company individually and personally liable, in the amount of the face value of his stock, for all debts and liabilities of the corporation or joint stock company.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

RELATIVE TO VOTERS.

MR. THOMPSON introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That all citizens of this State who are entitled to exercise the elective franchise shall be required to vote at all municipal or State elections, under penalty of a fine of not less than ten dollars nor over five hundred dollars, as the next Legislature of this State shall determine, the same to go to the School Fund of the State. And in case of any such citizen neglecting to vote for three consecutive elections, he shall thereby be disfranchised for the term of three years thereafter, unless prevented by sickness, or absence from the State.

Referred to the Committee on the Right of Suffrage.

THE VETO POWER.

MR. TOWNSEND introduced the following resolution relative to the veto power of the Governor:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Resolved, That the committee be instructed to put a clause in the Constitution authorizing the Governor to veto any item of appropriation bills without affecting the other portions of the bill.

Referred to the Committee on the Executive Department.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

MR. TULLY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in regard to the right of suffrage:

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of California shall pass no law requiring a property qualification for office.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

RELATIVE TO THE CHINESE.

MR. TURNER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, "The Chinese must go."

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION.

MR. TUTTLE introduced the following resolution relative to taxation without representation:

Resolved, That no citizen shall be taxed without representation.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

Resolved, That all improvements, buildings, railroads, flumes, dams, bridges, or other structures shall be held, together with the land belonging to such works or improvements, for the full payment of all labor and materials used in such works.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO THE DUTIES OF RAILROAD OFFICERS.

MR. WEST offered the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

SECTION —. The General Assembly shall enforce by fine and imprisonment, and such other penalties and forfeitures as may be effectual prohibitions:

First—Against any director or officer of any railroad company, during his term of office, buying, selling, or in any manner dealing in the capital stock of such company, or being individually interested in any contract with it, except as an ordinary shipper or passenger.

Second—Against officers and employés of railroad companies giving or issuing any free or discriminating passes or bills of lading, or other discriminating gratuities, to any person elected to or holding any office of profit or trust under the public authority of this State or of the United States.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

RELATIVE TO PREAMBLE.

MR. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment, relative to the preamble:

Resolved, That the following preamble be referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, as presenting a basis for an organic law that shall claim obedience, command respect, insure progress, and give a dignity and especial guarantee to the Bill of Rights immediately following it:

PREAMBLE.

We, the people of the State of California, declare that God, being the author of order and law, is the final umpire of all government; that He delegates authority to the people to frame, amend, or change its form, according to their necessities and principles of justice; that He clothes them with power to enforce it; that he holds each and all amenable for the use or abuse of such delegated power; that, in this connection, allegiance to God and to the State are one. And upon these fundamental truths we establish this Constitution.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

RELATIVE TO MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to members of the Legislature:

Resolved, That the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects be instructed to report the following:

SECTION 1. A member of the Legislature who shall solicit, demand, or receive, or consent to receive, directly or indirectly, for himself or for another, from any company, corporation, or person, any money, office, appointment, employment, testimonial, reward, thing of value or enjoyment, or of personal advantage, or promise thereof, for his vote or official influence, or for withholding the same, or with an understanding, expressed or implied, that his vote or official action shall be in any way influenced thereby, or who shall solicit or demand any such money or other advantage, matter, or thing aforesaid for another, as the consideration of the payment or promise of such money, advantage, matter, or thing to another, shall be held guilty of bribery within the meaning of this Constitution, and shall incur the disabilities provided thereby for said offense, and such additional punishment as is now or shall be provided by law.

SEC. 2. Any person who shall, directly or indirectly, offer, give, or promise, any money, or thing of value, testimonial, privilege, or personal advantage, to any executive or judicial officer, or member of the Legislature, to influence him in the performance of any of his public or official duties, shall be guilty of bribery, and be punished in such manner as shall be provided by law.

SEC. 3. The offense of corrupt solicitation of members of the Legislature, or of public officers of the State, or of any municipal division thereof, and any occupation or practice of solicitation of such members or officers to influence their official action, shall be defined by law, and shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 4. Any person may be compelled to testify in any lawful investigation or judicial proceeding against any person who may be charged with having committed the offense of bribery or corrupt solicitation, or practices of solicitation, and shall not be permitted to withhold his testimony upon the ground that it may criminate himself or subject him to public infamy; but such testimony shall not afterwards be used against him in any judicial proceeding, except for perjury in giving such testimony, and any person convicted of either of the offenses aforesaid shall, as part of the punishment therefor, be disqualified from holding any office or position of honor, trust, or profit in this State.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

RELATIVE TO EDUCATION.

Mr. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to education:

Resolved, That the Committee on Education be instructed to report the following article for the new Constitution of California:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at the same time that the Governor is elected, and shall hold his office for the same time as the Governor. His duties shall be provided by law. He shall receive an annual salary of two thousand four hundred dollars, to be paid quarterly.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall foster by all suitable means the public school system of the State. The proceeds of all lands that may be granted by the United States to this State for educational purposes, or that have been heretofore granted, all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heirs, and also such per cent. as may be granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with the rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State, and no part of such fund, or any money raised by taxation for school purposes, shall ever be appropriated to or divided between sectarian schools.

SEC. 3. Instruction in the common schools shall be in the English language, and confined to the following: reading, writing, orthography, grammar, geography, arithmetic, book-keeping, algebra, geometry, surveying, navigation, and ancient and modern history.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall provide that no religious books shall be used in the common schools, or any particular religion taught or advocated, and that care shall be taken to guard the rights of conscience of all children attending the public schools.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall by law provide that none but teachers of unquestioned sobriety and good moral character shall be employed as teachers in the public schools.

SEC. 6. The Legislature shall provide by law that a lecture on the nobility of labor shall be delivered at least once a month in every public school in the State by the Principal thereof, dwelling on its paramount importance in the affairs of men in every walk of life.

SEC. 7. The common schools of this State shall be kept up and supported in each district for at least four months of every year, and the Legislature shall by law provide the necessary funds for doing so.

SEC. 8. Education in the public schools shall be free to all, and each scholar shall be furnished with such school books as his studies require, at the expense of the State.

SEC. 9. The Legislature may require, by law, that every parent or guardian of children under fourteen years of age shall give them as good an education as that to be obtained in the common schools, in cases where they do not send them to the public schools by choice.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall enact laws for the modification and management of the State University, so that hereafter all instruction shall be of a practical character, and confined to all such teaching as shall properly belong to all mechanical arts and sciences, and to all sciences properly relating to agriculture, and no other. The system adopted shall provide that every student shall spend at least two hours every day in manual labor, at some mechanical art or in cultivating the ground. The students in attendance at the University shall be entitled to instruction in all studies they may select consistent with the rules of the University, all necessary books, and board and lodging, free of all charge. The privilege of sending to the University shall be divided between the cities and counties of the State, according to population, in such manner as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 11. When the University of California is modified as provided for in the foregoing section, the Legislature shall make such appropriations from the State treasury as they shall deem prudent to assist in its support; and the proceeds of all lands granted by Congress to the State for University purposes shall be properly invested as a perpetual fund for its support; but until such modification is provided for by law, no money whatever shall be expended by the State for its support.

SEC. 12. In order that every child in this State may have a fair opportunity to learn the privileges, rights, duties, and obligations pertaining to freemen, the Legislature shall, by appropriate legislation, cause to be published, at the expense of the State, in one well-bound volume, of convenient size, the Declaration of American Independence, the Constitution of the United States of America, the Constitution of the State of California, and Washington's Farewell Address; and shall cause the same to be distributed, free of cost, to the children in the common schools, and to be used and taught therein as a text-book; and also in the University of California.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

Mr. WILSON, of Tehama, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

Resolved, That the cause of the most of the wrongs that the people now complain of is the unjust legislation in favor of capital;

Second—All men should pay taxes on what he is actually worth;

Third—No person should pay taxes on his indebtedness.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

RELATIVE TO EDUCATION.

Mr. WINANS introduced the following proposition to incorporate the following into the new Constitution, under the article entitled "Education," and as part of that article:

SECTION 1. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified electors of this State at the same time the Governor is elected. He shall hold his office for four years from the second Monday in January next after his election. His duties shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 2. There shall be elected by the qualified electors of this State, at the same time the Governor is elected, four members of a State Board of Education, one for two years, one for four yeaas, one for six years, and one for eight years, and at each succeeding biennial election there shall be elected one member of such Board, who shall hold office for eight years. The Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be ex officio a member and Secretary of said Board. The Board shall have the same pay and mileage as members of the Legislature when in session.

SEC. 3. The State Board of Education shall meet at the Capital of the State, under the call of the Secretary of the Board, on the first Tuesday in February next succeeding their election, and continue in session not longer than twenty days, and annually thereafter for not to exceed twenty days at each annual session. A majority shall constitute a quorum.

SEC. 4. The State Board of Education shall have power to legislate and make rules in relation to common schools, and the State Normal School, and perform such other duties as may be required by law. The State Board of Education, in fixing the course of study, shall include the following branches: reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, geography, grammar, history of the United States, and in the higher classes some manual of government. The proceedings of the Board shall be printed by the Superintendent of State Printing, under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction shall send a copy of said proceedings to each School Trustee and teacher in this State, and have one thousand extra copies printed for citizens generally who may apply for them. Neither the State Board of Education nor the Legislature shall enforce a uniformity of text-books throughout this State, but the matter shall be left to local Boards of Education and Trustees of school districts to select suitable text-books, and for such period of time as they deem best for their interests.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of intellectual, scientific, moral, and agricultural improvement. The proceeds of all lands that may be granted by the United States to this State for the support of schools, which may be sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without having a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State.

SEC. 6. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools, by which a school shall be kept up and supported, in each district, at least three months in every year, and any district neglecting to keep up and support such a school may be deprived of its proportion of the interest of the public fund during such neglect.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall take measures for the protection, improvement, or other disposition of such lands as have been or may hereafter be reserved or granted by the United States, or any person or persons, to this State, for the use of a University; and the funds accruing from the rents or sale of such lands, or from any other source, for the purposes aforesaid, shall be and remain a permanent fund, the interest of which shall be applied to the support of said University, with such branches as the public convenience may demand, for the promotion of literature, the arts and sciences, as may be authorized by the terms of said grant. And it shall be the duty of the Legislature, as soon as may be, to provide effectual means for the improvement and permanent security of the funds of said University.

SEC. 8. No religious sect or sects shall ever have use of or control any part of the School or University Funds of this State.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

RELATIVE TO RATE OF INTEREST.

Mr. WYATT introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to rate of interest:

Resolved, That the Legislative Committee be instructed to report a clause in the Constitution which shall prevent any person from receiving, directly or indirectly, any greater interest, or usury, for the use of loaned money, than seven per cent. per annum.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO FORCED SALE OF PROPERTY.

Mr. WYATT introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the forced sale of property:

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee be instructed to report a clause in the Constitution which shall prevent the sale of any property in this State, under judicial or other forced sale, unless said property shall bring two thirds of its appraised value under such sale, the appraisement to be made as provided by law.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judical Department.

RELATIVE TO BILL OF RIGHTS.

Mr. LARUE introduced the following proposed amendment to section twenty-one, article one, of the Constitution, relative to powers not granted—a proposition to amend section twenty-one, article one, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

Digitized by Google

SEC. 21. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people, and shall not be construed to the exercise of powers not granted herein.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

RELATIVE TO GRAND JURORS.

MR. LARUE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to Grand Jurors:

That the Constitution be so amended that Grand Jurors must be selected by the County Judge from the taxpayers of the county, and must serve for a term of one year, to be called together by the County Judge at any time; and a majority of two thirds of said Grand Jury shall indict.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I wish to offer a proposition.

MR. EDGERTON. We have a rule that each gentleman shall send up whatever propositions he may wish to introduce as his name is called, and the object of that rule is to prohibit and avoid the printing of superfluous matter. Gentlemen might send up resolution after resolution, embodying the same proposition. That would defeat the very purpose of the rule.

MR. AYERS. As I introduced no proposition at the time my name was called, I ask leave to now introduce my propositions.

Leave was granted.

RELATIVE TO FREIGHTS AND FARES.

MR. AYERS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to freights and fares:

Resolved, That the Committee on Corporations consider the following proposition for insertion in the Constitution:

SECTION —. Whenever a railroad or canal corporation shall, for the purpose of competing with a rival line, lower its rates for transportation of passengers or freight from one point to another, such reduced rates shall not be again raised or increased from such reduced standard.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

RELATIVE TO A LABOR BUREAU.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to Bureau of Labor and Labor Statistics:

Resolved, That there should be a Bureau of Labor and Labor Statistics established as a department of the State Government.

Referred to the Committee on Labor and Capital.

RELATIVE TO OFFICIAL BONDS.

MR. MCFARLAND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to official bonds:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

No officer of this State, or of any municipal corporation thereof, shall be required to give any official bond, except in cases of officers who, by virtue of their offices, have custody of private property.

Referred to Committee on Executive Department.

SALARY OF STATE OFFICERS.

MR. KEYES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the salary of State officers:

Resolved, That the salary of the Governor shall not exceed five thousand dollars per annum, and the salary of the Lieutenant-Governor shall be double the pay of Senators, and the pay of members of the Legislature shall be five dollars per diem while in attendance.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

POLL TAX.

MR. HITCHCOCK introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to section five, article two of Constitution:

Resolved, That article (2) two, section (5) five, be amended so as to read:

That no person shall be entitled to vote that has not paid a "poll" tax the previous year.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

RIGHT OF WAY FOR WATER DITCHES.

MR. HITCHCOCK introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to agriculture, manufacturing, mining, and irrigation:

Resolved, All persons and corporations shall have the right of way across public, private, and corporate lands for the construction of ditches, flumes, and canals for the purpose of conveying water for domestic purposes, for the irrigation or reclamation of lands, and for manufacturing and mining purposes, and for drainage, upon payment of just compensation. Persons owning lands benefited thereby shall bear their just proportion of expenses for drainage or protection against overflow.

Referred to Committee on Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: The rule presented this morning was to the effect that the roll shall be called each morning, and each member whose name was called had the privilege of introducing one or two resolutions. Now, you can see that men whose names have been called are again introducing propositions.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The seventh rule in the order of business is the introduction of propositions relating to the Constitution. I do not know what the rule is you refer to. The Secretary will read it again.

The SECRETARY reads:

Resolved, That on presentation of resolutions and propositions, as provided for in part seven of rule seventeen, the Secretary shall call the list of delegates alphabetically, and each delegate, when his name is called, shall be allowed to present two independent resolutions or propositions relating to the proposed Constitution, which shall be read and referred, without debate. If the call be not completed on the day it is commenced, the Secretary shall commence the call on the next day where he left off on the previous day, and so on for the next day after, coming back, when through, to the head of the list, until the further order of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. I am of the opinion that the right to introduce these resolutions is limited to the roll call.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The next business in order is unfinished business.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I do not desire to make a speech on the matter of the appeal which now comes up under this head, but I simply desire to state that there was a similar rule adopted in the Ohio Constitutional Convention, and I desire to read that portion of the Ohio Act calling the Convention, which refers to the salary of delegates, and also to read the same portion of this Act, to show the similarity. Section nine of the Act calling the Ohio Constitutional Convention says that the delegates and officers of the Convention shall be entitled to the same compensation and mileage for their services as is allowed by law to members of the general Assembly, to be paid out of the State Treasury, on the warrant of the Controller of State. Now, in the Act calling our Convention, it says the delegates to the Convention shall receive the same per diem and mileage as members of the Legislature. Now, Mr. President, the Ohio Convention adopted a similar rule to the one which was proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds. That rule was enforced, I believe, during the whole of the session of that Convention—a greater part of it, anyway. Now, you will notice the similarity between the two Acts; and if it was proper to establish such a rule in the Ohio Convention, I submit we have a perfect right to adopt such a rule calling this Convention, as the Acts are very similar. That was the argument of the Chair in deciding the point of order to be well taken, that the Act specified that the delegates to this Convention should receive a certain salary. I took the appeal more on this ground than any other, that in my judgment the Legislature has no right to come into this Convention and say what rules we shall adopt, or what we shall do in this Convention. After we have complied with the first part of the Act, and organized the Convention, it is my judgment that we have a perfect right to establish what rules we please, and I appeal from the decision on these grounds.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the appeal.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: There are certain things that are clearly within the power of the Legislature to prescribe for this Convention, and there are certain other things it cannot. One of the things that is within the power of the Legislature is to fix the pay of members of this Convention and their mileage. I am not here to say whether it is right or wrong, for the purposes of this appeal. We were elected under the law allowing us ten dollars a day. Now, I say, if by any rule of this Convention we can annul that provision of the law under which we have met, and prescribe our own pay, then I say we can prolong this session for six months, or a year and six months, and vote ourselves twenty dollars a day. The law provides that we shall receive per diem the same as members of the Legislature, except that it makes certain exceptions; that we shall not receive pay for a longer time than three days of adjournment. That is, if we adjourn over for a longer time than three days, we shall not draw pay. Now, if we can adopt and enforce this rule, by a similar rule we can annul the provisions of the statute, and adjourn over for two weeks, and say that we shall receive our pay all the time. As I said, we can prolong our session beyond the prescribed limit fixed by the statute. Now, I propose to stay here and attend to the business of this Convention, and finish up the work in one hundred days, and I do not propose to ask this State to pay me one dollar for anything over the one hundred days, and I have no false modesty, and I have no false modesty which will prevent me from getting up here and demanding all that the State promised to pay me. I shall endeavor to earn the money, and when I do the work I shall demand the pay for it. I shall therefore vote to sustain the ruling of the Chair. If any gentleman has any scruples about taking pay when he is not in actual attendance, he is not compelled to take it. I have no such scruples. I believe it can be safely said that a majority of the delegates will lose money by accepting seats in this Convention at ten dollars a day, and I do not propose to lose any more than the law compels me to.

MR. HEUSTIS. Mr. President: I move to indefinitely postpone the appeal.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The gentleman from Humboldt moves to indefinitely postpone the appeal.

The motion prevailed.

MR. REYNOLDS. I rise to a point of order. My point of order is that a motion to indefinitely postpone an appeal is not in order, and cannot be made under any circumstances.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Chair decides the point not well taken. It may be postponed.

NEW RULES.

MR. COWDEN offered the following as a new rule, to be numbered rule seventy-five:

Rule 75.—All officers and attachés, not yet appointed nor elected, who shall be deemed necessary by the Convention, shall be appointed and announced by the President.

MR. AYERS. If we are under the head of unfinished business, I would like to call up a resolution.

MR. COWDEN. I think a rule of that kind is necessary now.

MR. TINNIN. I move to refer it to the Committee on Rules.

It was so referred.

MR. AYERS. I call for the reading of my resolution.

MR. VAN DYKE. I object to resolutions being sent up until the Chair announces that order of business. I ask what is the order of business?

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Convention was adopting rules.

MR. AYERS. I sent up a resolution in reference to the rules to be referred to a standing committee, for the appointment of another committee, and I ask that this take precedence to other resolutions. It was to this effect, that a new standing committee be appointed, to consist of eleven members, on Federal Relations.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved That a Committee on Federal Relations, to be composed of nine members, be added to the standing committees.

Referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. WHITE offered the following:

Resolved, That there should be appointed a Committee of nine on State Officers, to ascertain and report to this Convention the names of all persons in any manner employed under the present organization of the State government, with the duties required of them, and the time spent each day in the performance of those duties, and the compensation paid to each such officer, deputy, clerk, or employé.

Referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. DOWLING offered the following:

Resolved, That a Special Committee on Irrigation and Surveying be appointed, to consist of nine members.

Referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. O'SULLIVAN offered the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Lands and Homestead Exemption be increased from nine to fifteen members.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I think this committee is one of great importance, and I think there should be a large number on such committee.

Referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. GRACE offered the following:

Resolved, That this Convention do now proceed to apportion the seats in this chamber among the delegates by lot.

Ruled out of order.

MR. SHOEMAKER offered the following:

Resolved, That in printing matters introduced into the Convention required to be printed, the Superintendent of State Printing shall use for the present the original papers introduced here.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. We have not reached that order of business.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The point is well taken. The resolution is out of order. The next order is the special order.

INCREASING COMMITTEES.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I believe the Standing Rules are now before the house. I want to make a motion in reference to the rules. I desire to make a motion as to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation. San Francisco is not represented on that committee. San Francisco composes about one third of the State, and should be represented on that committee. I move, therefore, that Mr. Barnes and Mr. Reynolds be added to that committee. There is no member from San Francisco on that committee.

The motion prevailed, and Messrs. Barnes and Reynolds were added.

MR. AYERS. Having done an act of justice to the City of San Francisco, I would now ask that the Convention do an act of justice to the southern end of the State. We have no representation upon the Committee on Corporations.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. I would inquire under what head we are now acting?

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Under the head of special orders.

MR. EDGERTON. Then the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers, is out of order. It will be in order for him when we arrive at that order of business.

MR. AYERS. It was in order for San Francisco, and I think it is in order for Los Angeles. I say that the southern end of the State, as far as I recollect, has no representative upon the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal. That to the people of that end of the State the question of railroad discrimination is one of vital importance. We have over four hundred miles of railroad in that portion of the State, and this committee will have to deal with the subject; and we would like to have that portion of the State represented on the committee; and we ask that General Howard and Mr. West be added to that committee.

MR. HALE. I rise to a point of order. One of our rules says the committees shall be appointed by the President of the Convention, and now it is proposed to have the Convention appoint them.

MR. AYERS. It was all right in the case of San Francisco.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The point of order seems to be well taken.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I answer that point of order in this way. Yesterday we refused to establish the two-third rule in this Convention, and I hold that a majority of the Convention can allow this motion, notwithstanding the rule.

MR. WATERS. I move that the rule be temporarily suspended, in order that these two names may be added to the committee.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. It is moved and seconded that the rule be temporarily suspended.

MR. ROLFE. The rule simply provides that the President shall appoint the committee, when not otherwise ordered. And this motion is out of order and unnecessary.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The number is fixed by the rule. In view of this rule itself the Chair sees no objection in the motion being put.

The motion prevailed, and Messrs. Howard and West were added to the committee.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: As the Committee on Chinese is a very important committee, I move that it be increased from nine to fifteen members.

Ruled out of order, as the committee already consists of fifteen members.

MR. LARKIN. I desire to make a motion to suspend the rules for the purpose of naming Mr. Strong as a member of the Committee on Water Rights. He resides in that portion of the State where those things should be represented. I hope the Convention will consent to have him there.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. It requires a motion that he be added.

MR. LARKIN. I move that he be added to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

The motion prevailed, and Mr. Strong was added to the committee.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: If the Convention please, I would like to bring before its consideration a matter I consider germane to that now before the house. Mr. Finney was appointed as a member of the Committee on Chinese Immigration. I was appointed a member of the Committee on Agriculture. I don't know much about agriculture, and Mr. Finney tells me he don't know much about Chinese. Now it would be mutually agreeable to us, and with the consent of the house, we would like to change positions.

Leave was granted.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I move that the Committee on Chinese be increased from fifteen to twenty-one.

MR. WICKES. Put Mr. O'Donnell on the committee and he will make the other six.

MR. MURPHY. I move that Mr. O'Donnell be added to the committee.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I would like to make a motion that the rules be suspended, and that J. P. Wickes be added to the Committee on Education.

MR. MURPHY. I have the floor, I believe.

MR. CAMPBELL. I hope we shall proceed no farther in this matter, if we do we shall get into confusion. The committees will be so changed that there will be no way of getting out of it. The printers will not be able to ascertain who are members of committees. We have too many committees now. They are too large, and I hope we shall stop this business of adding to the committees.

The motion to add Mr. O'Donnell to the Committee on Chinese prevailed, by a standing vote—ayes, sixty-two, noes, fifty-eight.

RESOLUTION.

MR. EDGERTON offered the following:

Resolved, That as to all resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution, the titles and names of the authors of the same, and the date of their introduction only, be entered on the Journal.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I send up that resolution, because unless it is adopted it will be necessary to employ a clerical force of fifteen or twenty to write up this Journal. This is the practice in legislative bodies, to enter the names of the authors and titles of bills introduced on the Journal.

The resolution was adopted.

OFFICIAL REPORTING.

MR. McFARLAND offered the following:

WHEREAS, It is of the greatest importance that the notes of the proceedings of this Convention should be taken in full, in order that the same may be published in case the Constitution shall be adopted by the people; therefore, be it

Resolved, That one official reporter shall be elected, who shall have power to appoint one assistant, each to receive a per diem of ten dollars. The duties of the official reporter and his assistant shall be to take down in shorthand, verbatim, all the debates and proceedings of the Convention from beginning to the end. The official reporter shall be required to give a good and sufficient bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars, that he will, upon the order of this Convention, at any time, or upon the order of the Legislature, or upon the request of any member of this Convention, write out in full or in part, as may be directed, the debates and proceedings of the Convention, at a cost not to exceed twenty cents per folio for transcribing.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I offer this resolution, sir, because I am satisfied this Convention is still in doubt as to whether we should have an official reporter of the proceedings of this body or not. It is necessary to determine now whether we shall entirely ignore any attempt to perpetuate the proceedings of this Convention. Now, this proposition looks to the election of two reporters without any provision for the publication. It will cost but twenty dollars a day. That will preserve in shorthand the proceedings and debates of the Convention, and if it is not deemed best to publish them now we need not do so, but leave that to the Legislature. But if at any time any member desires to have a portion of the notes transcribed, the reporter is compelled to do so. If the Legislature desires to publish them, it can do so, or if the Convention desires to order them written out and published, it can do so.

MR. EDGERTON. I rise to a point of order. Under the rules it must go to a committee.

MR. HOWARD. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing. There is no other appropriate committee.

MR. SMITH, of Kern. Before that reference is made I wish to send up an amendment and have it read.

THE SECRETARY read as follows:

Resolved, That there be elected by this Convention an official shorthand reporter, whose duty it shall be to report only such debates as may be made upon the following leading questions, to wit: Chinese immigration; taxation and finance; the judiciary; State and municipal indebtedness; education: State, county, and township organization; railroads and other corporations; water and water rights; suffrage—provided, the expense of such reporting shall not exceed six thousand dollars for the session of the Convention.

MR. McCALLUM. I offer the following as an amendment or substitute:

Resolved, That a Phonographic Reporter and an assistant shall be appointed, to report and transcribe the proceedings of this Convention; provided, that such services can be obtained on satisfactory terms to the Convention.

Digitized by Google

Resolved, further, That the committee heretofore appointed on Phonographic Reporter is hereby instructed to ascertain on what terms such services can be procured, and report thereon, by resolution or otherwise, as soon as practicable; such report to include the per diem, the amount per folio for transcribing, and cost of indexing, and, if printed, when and on what terms the same can be placed on the desks of the members.

MR. WHITE. I move that the whole subject-matter be indefinitely postponed.

MR. ESTEE. The question to refer comes up first.

MR. McFARLAND. I rise to a point of order. The rules provide that no final action shall be taken until it has been referred to the committee. The motion to indefinitely postpone is final action.

MR. EDGERTON. Under rule eighteen, the motion to commit takes precedence.

MR. WHITE. We have lost a great deal of time, and the rest of the evening may as well be spent in disposing of it.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion to refer takes precedence. It is moved that this resolution be referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. EDGERTON. I have a suggestion to make—it requires a two-third vote to suspend the rule seven.

MR. AYERS. That only applies to clerical officers.

MR. HOWARD. Rule seven has no application here at all.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion is to refer to the committee.

MR. FREUD. I move to lay this whole matter on the table.

The motion was lost on a standing vote—ayes, forty-two, noes, seventy-one.

MR. McCALLUM. I move to refer to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

The motion prevailed.

OTHER RESOLUTIONS.

MR. ESTEE offered the following:

Resolved, That all motions to increase the number of committees, or to form new committees, be referred without debate to the Committee on Rules.

MR. BARBOUR. I have a substitute to offer to the resolution:

Resolved, That the delegation from San Francisco constitute one of the standing committees.

MR. ESTEE. That is not an amendment to the resolution I offered.

The resolution offered by Mr. Estee was adopted.

MR. DOWLING offered the following:

Resolved, That the seats to be occupied by members of the Constitutional Convention be drawn by lot.

MR. STEDMAN offered the following substitute:

Resolved, That the members of the Convention now proceed to select their seats by lot, provided that before any such selection, the temporary President of the Convention be permitted to select his seat; and

Resolved, That the friends of any absent member may select his seat for him.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion to table prevailed—ayes, eighty-five.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: There is a resolution now on the table that was ruled out of order before we commenced on this order of business, and I wish to call it up now. It was to the effect that the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to prepare rooms for the committees.

MR. ESTEE. If the object is to go outside of the Capitol, I am opposed to it.

MR. VAN DYKE. That is not the object. It is to have rooms in the building prepared for the use of the standing committees.

MR. ESTEE. I move to amend by adding "rooms in the Capitol building."

The amendment was adopted, and the resolution as amended was also adopted.

MR. BARTON. Would it be in order to move to amend one of the standing rules at this stage of the business. I have a resolution to offer amending rule two, but if there is any objection I will not offer it.

MR. LARKIN. I raise the point of order that no notice has been given, and therefore the resolution is out of order.

MR. BARTON. Then I will withdraw it and give notice of a motion to amend.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I wish to offer a resolution and have it referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That the Committee on Reporting and Printing ascertain from the publisher of the Daily Record-Union upon what terms he will publish in said paper daily a full report of the debates of this Convention.

MR. GREGG offered the following as a substitute:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to determine and report at what cost the Record-Union, or any other daily paper in this city, will publish in the daily issue a full and true report of the debates and proceedings of this Convention, and furnish to the members of the Convention two hundred and fifty copies every morning.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I move to indefinitely postpone the resolutions.

MR. AYERS. I raise the point of order. The Act calling this Convention requires that the printing necessary to be done by the Convention shall be done at the State Printing Office—not in a newspaper office, but in the State Printing Office.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The point of order is well taken, and the resolutions are out of order.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I moved to indefinitely postpone.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. FILCHER offered the following:

Resolved, That J. West Martin, of Alameda, and J. T. Wickes, of Nevada, be added to the Committee on Education.

MR. ROLFE moved to add Mr. Blackmer to the committee.

Referred to Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. HUESTIS. By request, I introduce a resolution, and ask to have it referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is hereby authorized to draw a warrant in favor of W. F. Germaine, in the sum of eighteen dollars, for services rendered as Page during the organization of this Convention.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. EAGON offered the following:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrant in favor of G. E. McStay for the sum of forty dollars, for services rendered in writing the Journal of proceedings during the organization of this Convention, prior to October third, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight; that the State Treasurer is hereby authorized to pay the same out of the appropriation for expenses of this Convention.

Referred to Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. HILBORN offered the following:

Resolved, That in printing matters introduced into the Convention required to be printed, the Superintendent of the State Printing shall use for the present the original papers introduced; he or his chief clerk receipting to the Secretary of the Convention for the same, and returning them to the Secretary's desk as soon as possible.

Adopted.

At three o'clock and five minutes P. M., on motion of Mr. Murphy, the Convention adjourned until to-morrow.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Thursday, October 10th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at ten o'clock A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

MR. MANSFIELD. I desire to offer the following resolution:

Digitized by Google

WHEREAS, It is represented that the United States is about to conclude a commercial treaty with the Republic of France, that will in effect prove destructive to the wine interests of the United States, and especially to California; therefore,

Resolved, That the subject be referred to the Committee on Agriculture, Manufacture, and Commerce, with instructions to inquire into and report, at as early a time as practicable, to this house, for its protest or for such other action as it may deem expedient.

MR. MANSFIELD also offered the following:

LOS ANGELES, October 5th, 1878.

To the Hon. John M. Mansfield, member of the Constitutional Convention, Sacramento, California:

Dear Sir: At a public meeting of the business men and viniculturists of Los Angeles County, held at the Court House this day, with the Hon. John G. Downey in the chair, a committee was appointed to draft suitable resolutions in relation to the above subject-matter. [Signed by a large number of business men.]

MR. BARBOUR offered the following:

Resolved, That this Convention memorialize the President of the United States to take such measures to abrogate or modify the Burlingame treaty; and also memorialize Congress to prohibit Chinese immigration.

MR. NOEL. I raise the point of order that the resolution is out of order, because that is a resolution, and not a memorial.

THE PRESIDENT. That comes within the rule, and is in order. It will be referred to the Committee on Chinese.

ACKNOWLEDGING GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. CROUCH presented the following memorial:

To the Constitutional Convention, to meet at Sacramento, California, on the 28th day of September, 1878:

Believing that Almighty God is the source of all power and authority in civil government, that the Lord Jesus Christ is the Ruler of Nations, and that the revealed will of God is of supreme authority in civil affairs;

Remembering that this country was settled by Christian men, with Christian ends in view, and that they gave a distinctly Christian character to the institutions which they established;

Perceiving the persevering attempts which are made to prohibit the reading of the Bible in our public schools, to overthrow our Sabbath laws, to abolish the oath, prayer in our State Legislature, and other Christian features of our institutions, and so to divorce the Government from all connection with the Christian religion;

Viewing with grave apprehension the corruption of our politics, and the prevalent lack of moral and religious character in those who hold office in the State; and

Believing that a written Constitution should contain explicit evidence of the Christian character and purpose of the State which frames it; and perceiving that the silence of the Constitution of the State, as well as of the United States, in this respect, is used as an argument against all that is Christian in the usage and administration of the Government;

We, the undersigned, citizens of the State of California, petition your honorable body to frame the Constitution so that it shall suitably express our acknowledgment of Almighty God as the source of all authority in civil government, of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Ruler of Nations, and of His revealed will as of supreme authority; and thus indicate that this is a Christian commonwealth, and place all the Christian laws, institutions, and usages of the State on an undeniable legal basis in the fundamental law of the same. [Signed by James Mitchell, and fifty others.]

MR. MILLS presented a petition to the same effect as the above, signed by about fifty persons.

MR. OVERTON presented a memorial to the same effect, signed by thirty persons.

MR. HAGER presented a memorial on the same subject, same as above, signed by one hundred and ten persons.

MR. VAN DYKE presented a memorial on the same subject, signed by seventy persons.

MR. HAGER presented the following memorial, which was referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights:

To the Constitutional Convention, to meet at Sacramento on the 28th day of September, 1878: We, the undersigned, citizens of the State of California, believing that civil government is a divine institution, and that the Constitution of a commonwealth composed of Christian people should be framed so as to promote the highest interests of all the people, by fostering justice, morality, benevolence, and Christian institutions and usages, do hereby petition your honorable body to frame the new Constitution of California in accordance with this theory. And, more specifically:

1. So that there will be in the Constitution a full and explicit acknowledgment of Almighty God as the source of all authority in civil government, of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Ruler of nations, and of the supreme authority of the moral law of God, as revealed in the Bible; and thus indicate that California is a Christian commonwealth, and place all Christian laws, institutions, and usages of the State on an undeniable basis in the fundamental law of the same.

2. So that under the Constitution there may be statute laws to prevent, not only public acts of blasphemy and gross forms of profanity, but also all such gross violations of the Divine law of the Christian Sabbath as tend to prevent Christian people from peaceably enjoying their right to rest and worship on the Lord's day.

3. So that it may be constitutional to pass statutory laws to prohibit the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors for common drinks; and especially so that the sale of such common drinks cannot be on the Christian Sabbath.

4. So that murder shall be punished only by the death penalty, and that the Governor cannot have power to pardon murderers or commute their punishment.

5. So that no law can be enacted by which the religious exercise of prayer, or the reading of the Bible, in the public schools of the State, can be prohibited, or by which prayer at the opening of the daily sessions of the Legislature can be prevented.

6. So that all such persons as are designated or described below shall forever be ineligible to any office of the State, viz:

(1.) All persons not born in the United States, unless they have lived in the same more than ten years;

(2.) All who deny the existence of a Supreme Being—the God of the Bible;

(3.) All who declare that they are enemies of the Christian religion, or deny the supreme authority of the law of God contained in the Holy Scriptures;

(4.) All who are guilty of any of the gross acts of immorality, such as blasphemy, profane swearing, Sabbath desecration, drunkenness, traffic in intoxicating liquors or common drink, adultery or similar acts of licentiousness, gambling, lying, for perjury;

(5.) All who have ever taken up arms in rebellion gainst the Government of the United States, or against this State;

(6.) All who have been justly condemned prisoners in any State Prison; and,

(7.) All who are known to not have the scriptural qualifications of civil rulers. See Exodus, 18, 21: "Provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them to be rulers." And II Samuel, 23, 3: "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God."

7. So that all oaths of office, or oaths required of witnesses, jurors, etc., shall be in the name of God, and always with uplifted hand.

8. So that no one can be deprived of the elective franchise, or of the right of citizenship, or of education in the public schools, on account of nationality, color, or sex.

9. So that the elective franchise may not be granted to persons of foreign birth, except those who speak the English language, until after they have been in the United States five years, and to no one who is unable to read the English language intelligently.

10. So that in trials by jury verdicts may be rendered by nine out of twelve.

JOHN RICE,	N. A. JOHNSTON,
S. RICE,	N. J. RICE,
R. R. JOHNSTON	T. E. RICE,
GEORGE HOWE,	WM. MOORE,
M A JOHNSTON,	R E. JOHNSTON.

MR. LAINE presented a memorial on the same subject as above, signed by eighty persons.

RELATIVE TO FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

MR. ROLFE presented the following petition, relative to female suffrage:

To the Constitutional Convention, in Sacramento, California, assembled:

The undersigned, citizens of California, respectfully petition your honorable body to so amend the Constitution that no citizen of the State shall be disfranchised on account of sex.

[Signed by Samuel Morton and several hundred others.]

LOCAL OPTION.

MR. HOWARD presented a petition from citizens of Los Angeles County, asking for the passage of a local option law, as follows:

To the Constitutional Convention:

We respectfully represent that we have a right to be by law protected in life, person, and property, from intemperance; our lives are in danger, property is stolen and destroyed in consequence of whisky, and our taxes doubled; snares are set all over our land to draw our sons and daughters from virtue to vice, from plenty to poverty, and from honor to degradation. We demand that the Convention shall "lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil" of intemperance. Give us a local option law.

[Signed by J. O. Matthewson, and one hundred and nine others.]

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. HILBORN presented the following petition from citizens of Solano County, as follows:

The honorable members of the Constitutional Convention:

WHEREAS, it seems right, reasonable, and proper that a majority of the citizens in any community should have the right to decide in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors within its bounds; and

WHEREAS, the highest judicial authority of this State has declared that our present State Constitution does not allow such decision; therefore, we, the undersigned citizens of Solano County, State of California, hereby respectfully petition the members of our State Constitutional Convention to insert an article in the Constitution to be presented to the people, giving them the power at every general election to vote for or against the granting of license for the sale of intoxicating liquors in any township, village, town, or ward of a city.

[Signed by J. W. Jones, and fifty-four others]

We therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be authorized and directed to draw his warrants, payable out of the appropriation for this Convention, in favor of the parties named, and for the amounts stated in the above report.

HILBORN, Chairman.

MR. HILBORN moved that the reading be dispensed with, and the report printed and laid on the desks of members.

So ordered.

MR. HILBORN, from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, also made the following report:

Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred the resolution by Mr. Caples, and also the resolution by Mr. Hilborn providing for the employment of a Night Watchman, have had the same under consideration, and hereby report as follows: That the attendance of a Night Watchman in the hall of this Convention is absolutely necessary; that one person can perform the duty of both Day and Night Watchman, and that five dollars per day is a reasonable compensation for said services. The committee offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That James Saultry be and he is hereby appointed Night Watchman of this Convention, at a salary of five dollars per day, the same to date from the beginning of this Convention.

MR. CAPLES. Is the question debatable?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I offered the first resolution for the appointment of a gentleman to fill that position. I did so because I believed him to be a sober, truthful, honest, conscientious, faithful gentleman, and that he will perform the duties of the position creditably. The gentleman proposed by the other resolution may be equally qualified. On that I do not undertake to say; but I understand that Mr. Saultry is now on the payroll of the State Prison, I don't know in what capacity. I see he is also performing some function here.

MR. HILBORN. I am informed that such is not the fact. I don't want him to be misrepresented.

MR. FAWCETT. The Convention passed a rule yesterday that all employés should be appointed by the President, with certain exceptions.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the Night Watchman was not mentioned.

MR. MCCALLUM. The report goes to the table until we reach resolutions. We have not yet reached resolutions. We are now under the head of standing committees.

THE PRESIDENT. That is a report from a standing committee, and the question is always on the adoption of the resolution. It belongs to the report and comes up with the report.

MR. CAPLES. Whether it be true or not that Mr. Saultry is on the payroll, I shall not undertake to say, but it does appear that he is here in some capacity, I don't know what. He appears to be engaged during the day, and there is to be an effort made to enforce the eight-hour law, and it seems to me that to work this gentleman, Mr. Saultry, twenty-four hours in a day, would be to call down upon our heads the wrath and indignation of the Workingmen. It does appear to me that one position of ten, or twelve, or fourteen hours a day is enough for him to fill, whether he is or not on the payroll at San Quentin. As I remarked before I shall not undertake to say which of the two gentlemen are best qualified to fill the position, but I do think, and submit to the candor of the gentleman, whether it is not more proper, other things being equal, to give the position to the gentleman who is at liberty to devote his entire time to the duties of the position. Now if this gentleman performs these functions during the day, it seems to me we are working him too hard. I think twelve hours is enough without imposing any more, and therefore I am opposed to his appointment.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: It is proposed to take the appointment of these subordinate officers from the Chair, and I wish to protest against this manner of appointing by resolution. There are other gentlemen here as competent to fill this position as Mr. Saultry. Give them all a fair chance to compete. The great argument in his favor that he is familiar with the duties of the place has no great weight; I know other gentlemen equally competent. As to this matter of his being on the payroll, I wish to make a statement. It appears that he was on the payroll in eighteen hundred and seventy-seven. When the Legislature convened he laid down his arms and came here and got a position as Night Watchman. The Legislature adjourned and he again appears on the payroll. His name appears on the payroll for the month of August just past.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution reported by the Committee on Mileage.

Mr. WHITE. I move as an amendment that one of these Doorkeepers be detailed to do that duty. We already have more attachés than are necessary. We have eight Pages when four would do. I am opposed to squandering the people's money, earned by the sweat of their brow, in any such way. We should study economy in all we do. We have one Mail-carrier and one Postmaster, when one would do for both. I move that one of the Doorkeepers be detailed to do this work. I move to strike out the name of Saultry and put in one of the Doorkeepers. I don't know the names—let the Chair select.

Mr. GREGG. I offer a substitute for both, to be referred to the same committee:

Resolved, That the President of the Convention appoint A. C. Wan, of Kern County, Night Watchman, at a salary of five dollars a day.

Mr. AYERS. I move that the whole matter be laid on the table.

The motion prevailed.

Mr. HILBORN presented the following further report from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred the resolution offered by Mr. Beerstecher, providing that the Journal of this Convention shall be printed each day and laid upon the desks of the members, has had the same under consideration, and hereby report the same back and recommend that it be not adopted.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the report of the committee.

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. President: In connection with this matter I beg leave to say that I addressed a note to the State Printer to get an idea of the probable cost, and I would like to have his letter read. I would call the attention of the Convention also to the fact that if this is done it will make it necessary to have another clerk at the desk, at a salary of eight dollars a day, or eight hundred dollars for the session.

The Secretary read the letter as follows:

OFFICE OF STATE SUPERINTENDENT PRINTING,
October 9th, 1878.

S. G. Hilborn, Chairman of Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses—Sir: I have taken five hundred pages as a basis on which to make an estimate as to the probable cost of printing three hundred and fifty copies of the Journal of the Constitutional Convention, and find the following: Composition, five hundred and seventy dollars; presswork, seventy-six dollars and eighty cents; paper, seventy-five dollars and ten cents; folding and stitching, two hundred and twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents—total, nine hundred and forty-nine dollars and fifty cents, or a fraction less than two dollars per page. The resolution does not contemplate the printing and binding of extra copies at the end of the session, but, supposing it to be an oversight, which the Convention will discuss, I hereby take the liberty of giving you an additional estimate, based on five hundred copies, printed and bound, one composition of the matter to be used in both regular and extra editions: Paper, one hundred and five dollars; presswork, seventy-six dollars and eighty cents; binding, three hundred and twenty-five dollars; make-up, sixty-four dollars—total, five hundred and seventy dollars and eighty cents, or total of one thousand five hundred and twenty dollars and sixty cents for eight hundred and fifty copies of the Journal, of five hundred pages each. Respectfully submitted.

F. P. THOMPSON, Superintendent State Printing.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the report of the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

The report was adopted.

Mr ESTEE, from the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, presented the following report:

Mr. President: Your Committee on Rules, Order of Business, and Standing Committees, have had under consideration:

First—The resolution introduced by Mr. Ayers, of Los Angeles, asking that there be added to the standing committee of the Convention, one on Federal Relations, to consist of nine members, and report that in its opinion no committee on that subject is necessary.

Second—Your committee also had under consideration the resolution presented by Mr. O'Sullivan, of San Francisco, asking that the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption be increased from nine to fifteen members, and recommend that that committee be increased from nine to eleven members.

Third—Your committee have also had under consideration the resolution offered by Mr. Dowling, of San Francisco, requesting the formation of a new Committee on Irrigation and Surveying, and respectfully report the same back to the Convention, and recommend that it be not adopted. There is already a Committee on Water and Water Rights, and one on Agriculture. The further multiplicity of committees on similar subjects is deemed by your committee inadvisable.

Fourth—Your committee has also considered the resolution introduced by Mr. Wyatt demanding that there be formed a standing committee on State Affairs, whose duty should be to report the names of all persons employed under the present State organization, the duties required of each, and the time spent by each in the performance of such duties, with compensation. We respectfully submit that such a committee is wholly unnecessary; that the present Constitution and the Political Code will show what State officers and employés are authorized by law, and the Controller's books will show who are under pay of the State, and the amount each receives. If the investigation asked for is necessary, the committees already appointed have ample scope for the performance of that duty. In conclusion, on this subject, your committee cannot too highly deprecate the making of useless or unnecessary committees. The multiplicity of committees, and the increase of the members of the same, instead of facilitating business, will, in the opinion of your committee, greatly embarrass the business of the Convention by dividing up the duties and responsibilities of committee work into such small parts that no marked result will be reached.

Fifth—Your committee has also considered the resolution introduced by Mr. Cowden, relative to the appointment of officers and attachés, which was to be known as rule seventy-five, and report the following, to be known as rule seventy five, and respectfully ask its adoption:

"Rule 75—Appointment of attachés. All officers and attachés except clerks of Committees and Phonographic Reporters, not yet elected or appointed, which shall by the Convention be deemed necessary, shall be appointed by the President of the Convention."

M. M. ESTEE, Chairman.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the report.

Mr. FILCHER. What has become of the resolution offered by me, and referred to that committee? What disposition was made of it?

Mr. ESTEE. The committee has not yet disposed of it.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Mr. HILBORN. I rise to make a motion in relation to the printing of the report of the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses. I move that it be sent at once to the printing office.

The PRESIDENT. There being no objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I rise for information. Rule seventy-five, on printing, says there shall be four hundred and eighty copies of each proposition and resolution relating to the Constitution, printed and laid on the desks. I will ask if the resolutions and propositions introduced yesterday are printed, and if so why they are not laid on the desks?

The PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that the Secretary was unable to get them out in time.

MOTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I have a resolution which I wish to offer:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State is hereby requested to have such rooms in the Capitol building as may be used for meetings of committees, members, etc., lighted on the nights said meetings are held, and that Patrick Levey, the Porter who has charge of the gas department here, is hereby allowed two dollars for the performance of such extra service, to be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I understand that unless a resolution of this character is adopted, there is no authority anywhere for lighting the committee rooms, or such rooms as may be occupied in this building, other than those usually occupied when there is no session of any Convention or Legislature here; that it is usual for the Legislature to pass a resolution of this character to confer authority upon those who light the rooms. I understand farther, that Mr. Levey is employed in the gas department, and receives the sum of seventy-five dollars per month; that it is not any part of his duties to remain here until eleven or twelve o'clock; that every Legislature has allowed Mr. Levey an additional sum of two dollars. The gentleman is obliged to be here beyond the time contemplated in his employment for which he receives seventy-five dollars a month. He has, since this Convention has been in session, been here nearly every night until after midnight. He earns his money and ought to have it. I believe in economy, but I also believe in paying a man his just earnings.

Mr. RINGGOLD. I hope it will be given to some other man.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I would state that he has had the gas department under his charge for a long time, and understands it, and can save more than fifty times the amount to the State by his management.

Mr. FREEMAN. The resolution goes to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, under rule seventy.

The PRESIDENT. The resolution will go to that committee.

Mr. GEORGE offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is hereby authorized to draw his warrant, payable out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention, in favor of Edward H. Morritz, in the sum of fifteen dollars, for services rendered as Page during the organization of this Convention.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

Mr. LARKIN. Mr. President: I ask the consent of the Convention to submit a resolution that will clearly interpret the rule as to propositions to be submitted. Yesterday I observed that the propositions were in various forms, many of them instructing committees to report this and that. I desire an interpretation of the rule so that it will be clearly understood by this Convention, so that when a member offers a proposition he may do it in the best form, so that the committee which is instructed will have something tangible. I desire each and every man to so state his views that it may be acted upon by this Convention. That is my reason for offering the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That all propositions submitted to this Convention be substituted in the form of an article, or the section of an article, in the proper form to be embodied in the Constitution.

Mr. EDGERTON. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

Mr. SMITH, of Kern. I move that it now be adopted. I move we take a vote on the resolution now.

Mr. HAGER. I think it is right, and I move that the rules be suspended and the resolution adopted.

The motion to suspend the rules for the purpose of considering the resolution prevailed.

Mr. CAPLES. I would propose an amendment to the resolution, that the roll be called again, and that all those who did not avail themselves yesterday of their privilege under the rule, to present two propositions, be permitted now to present them; and as a reason for the motion I will state, that perhaps a majority of members on this floor were not aware that propositions would be received at that time. It is right and proper that these persons should be permitted to present their propositions under the same rule.

Mr. LARKIN. I had no intention of shutting off any propositions. My idea was that these gentlemen should submit their propositions in the form of an article. I have no desire to shut off the gentleman from Sacramento. But I want these resolutions and propositions to be put in proper form, so that when the committees report they will be in proper shape. I desire that each man shall present his propositions in the shape of an article. I want each and every man's views.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Caples, is mistaken. The roll has been called, and will be called, every morning until the Convention shall order different, so that he will have an opportunity to offer propositions.

Mr. CAPLES. The resolution is not right. He has no right to say that propositions shall only be received in a certain form, in the form of articles in the Constitution.

The PRESIDENT. The resolution seems to be an amplification of the provisions of rule fifty-one.

Mr. CAPLES. I hold that in justice to these members who have not had an opportunity to present their propositions, that this roll should be called again, and allow them to present their propositions upon the same basis and in the same form as the others presented theirs yesterday, and after the roll has been called through, I have no objection to the resolution presented by the gentleman. But until all the members have an opportunity of doing here what all the others have been allowed to do, I hold that this is snap judgment to cut them off now, and I shall, as an amendment, propose that the roll be called again, and those who didn't respond yesterday, I think they should be permitted to present their propositions on the same terms as those introduced yesterday.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The member appears to be laboring under a misapprehension as to the resolution now offered. It will not prevent the offering of any proposition when the roll is called again. It is intended merely to prevent members getting up and asking that committees be instructed to report upon this or that proposition; in other words, it compels the member to formulate his proposition himself, instead of asking the committee to consider and report it. I think it is perfectly right under rule fifty-one—nothing more than an enforcement of rule fifty-one—that is that any member may get up and offer any proposition as to amendments to the Constitution, in any particular, and that these propositions will be referred to the committees.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment is not in order. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

PROPOSITIONS AND RESOLUTIONS RELATING TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. STUART. I have a proposition to offer.

THE PRESIDENT. The roll will be called.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. AYERS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

SECTION —. All further immigration to this State of Chinese is hereby prohibited. The municipal authorities of the ports in the State to which they are destined shall have power to prevent their debarkation, and to reembark them if landed.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

DIRECTORS OF SAVINGS BANKS.

MR. AYERS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution in reference to the responsibility of the Directors of savings banks.

SECTION —. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to enact a law which shall hold the Directors of savings banks responsible in their individual property and estates for the misappropriation, by the officers of such banks, of the funds or deposits of such institutions.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

ABROGATING THE BURLINGAME TREATY.

MR. BARBOUR introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to petitioning for the abrogation of the Burlingame treaty:

Resolved, That this Convention memorialize the President of the United States to abrogate or modify the Burlingame treaty; and also memorialize Congress to prohibit Chinese immigration; and that the Chair appoint a committee of seven to draft such memorials, to be submitted to this Convention.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

ON LOBBYING.

MR. BARBOUR introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to lobbying:

SECTION —. Lobbying is declared to be a crime, and the Legislature shall enforce this provision by suitable penalties.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

ANTI-CHINESE SECTIONS.

MR. BARBOUR introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

SEC. —. The people of this State have the inherent, sole, and exclusive right of regulating their internal government and the police thereof; they have the right to determine what is detrimental to the well-being of the State, and to exhaust the power of the State to prohibit and prevent it.

SEC. —. Aliens eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws thereof, who are, or may hereafter become, bona fide residents of this State, may acquire, inherit, possess, enjoy, and dispose of property, real and personal, as native-born citizens; they have the same right to sue and be sued in the Courts of the State; to have license to carry on business or follow any trade or occupation; to fish in the inland waters of the State, and to the equal protection of the laws as native-born citizens. Aliens ineligible to become citizens may be prohibited by the Legislature whenever, in its judgment, the welfare of the State demands it, from acquiring, inheriting, possessing, enjoying, and disposing of any property, real or personal; from suing or being sued in any of the Courts of the State; from fishing in the inland waters of the State; from having license to engage in any business or occupation in this State, and may be excluded from residence in any specified limits of this State whenever their presence shall be deemed dangerous to the health, comfort, and happiness of the people.

SEC. —. There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude within the State of California, save as a punishment for crime, after legal conviction thereof. The Legislature shall provide, by suitable penalties, for the prohibition of the bringing into this State of persons bound to a term of service or labor on contracts made without the United States, and may provide for the deportation of all persons thus brought into the State.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

ON EDUCATION.

MR. BARNES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That section three, of article nine, of the Constitution, be amended by adding thereto the following:

That all moneys raised by taxation in towns, cities, and school districts, for the support of public schools, and all moneys which may be appropriated by the State for the support of common schools, shall be applied to, and expended in, no other schools than those which are conducted according to law, under the order and superintendence of the authorities of the town, city, or school district in which the money is to be expended; and such moneys shall never be expended upon, or appropriated to, any religious sect, for the maintenance, exclusively, of its own schools.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

ON PARDONING POWER.

MR. BARRY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, entitled: Resolution to amend section thirteen, of article five, of the Constitution.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons in cases of misdemeanor only after conviction. The Governor, Attorney-General, and Justices of the Supreme Court, or a major part of them, may, upon such conditions and with such limitations and restrictions as they may deem proper, remit fines and forfeitures, commute punishments, and grant pardons after conviction, in all cases except misdemeanors (where the Governor alone shall have the power), treason, and impeachment, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason they shall have the power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature, at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. They, and the Governor shall himself in cases of misdemeanor, communicate to the Legislature, at the beginning of every session, every case of reprieve or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence at its date, and the date of the pardon or reprieve.

Referred to the Committee on Pardoning Power.

ASIATIC COOLIEISM.

MR. BARRY offered the following resolutions, relative to the Constitution:

Resolved, First—That Asiatic coolieism, being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State.

Second—That all contracts for coolie labor are null and void.

Third—That all companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to the penalties and punishment provided in the law of Congress against the importers of African slaves.

Fourth—That in all trials under State jurisdiction for violations of this section, the jury shall be the judge of the law and the facts in each case.

Fifth—This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

RELATIVE TO ASSESSMENTS.

MR. BARTON offered the following resolution relating to the Constitution:

Resolved, The Legislature shall have power to fix a day for the listing of all property within this State, and, by appropriate legislation, compel the Assessors of this State to prepare such list, with the statutory exemptions printed thereon, and forward at least one list to every taxpayer within his respective district.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

LOCAL POWERS OF THE PEOPLE.

MR. BARTON offered the following resolution relating to the rights of the people in regard to their local powers:

Resolved, The Legislature shall have power to properly submit the question of local option to the people in regard to the subject of the County Commissioners granting license to wholesale or retail intoxicating liquors in their respective counties, cities, or cities and counties, in this State.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO HOURS OF LABOR.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to hours of labor:

SECTION 1. No person shall be employed in manual labor (except agricultural labor) by any person, firm, or corporation in this State, for more than eight hours in any one day, except when it is necessary to repair machinery to prevent stoppage, or to prevent impending calamity. Eight hours shall constitute a day's work, and in no case shall the hours of labor exceed forty-eight (48) per week.

SEC. 2. Violations hereof shall be punished as misdemeanors.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR STATISTICS.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to a State Department of Labor and Labor Statistics:

SECTION 1. There shall be a State Department of Labor and Labor Statistics.

Digitized by Google

SEC. 2. The duty of the department shall be to collect and publish statistical details concerning every class of labor in this State; also to have general supervision of the commercial, industrial, educational, social, and sanitary condition of the laboring classes.

SEC. 3. Weekly and annual reports shall be made by the department and printed by the State Printer, and gratuitously distributed throughout the State. The chief of the department shall also report to each Legislature, and advise such legislation as may be necessary to encourage and protect labor.

SEC. 4. The officers shall be a General Superintendent, with an office in the State Capitol building; and a Superintendent, with an office in the City of San Francisco. They shall be elected at the general State election, and hold office for four years. Their salary shall be two hundred ($200) dollars per month.

SEC. 5. The Legislature may provide for traveling and other incidental expenses, and for employment of clerks, and their compensation.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

MR. BELCHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to taxation:

Resolved, That the following proposition concerning taxation be embraced in the Constitution:

SECTION —. A State Board of Equalization, consisting of two members from each Congressional District in the State, shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the general election to be held in the year eighteen ——, and every four years thereafter, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the State for the purposes of State taxation. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties in the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization for their respective counties, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the county for the purposes of county taxation. The Legislature shall provide, by law, for carrying into effect the provisions of this section.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

IN REFERENCE TO THE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MR. BELCHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the following proposition be embodied in the Constitution, and referred to Committee on Judicial Department:

SEC. 1. A law department is established. It consists of a Senior and Junior Commissioner, who shall hold their offices, the Senior until he is seventy years of age, the Junior until he succeeds the Senior by right of succession, which is hereby secured in case of vacancy in the office of the Senior. To be eligible for the first appointment under this Constitution, the Senior Commissioner must not be less than fifty years of age, and must have served not less than six years as Judge of the District or Supreme Court of the State, or of both. The Junior Commissioner, to be eligible, must in all cases be a counselor at law of at least four years' standing since his admission to the bar of the Supreme Court of the State, and must not be over forty years of age. Their salaries must be paid in like time, manner, and amounts as the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

SEC. 2. The Commissioners must be appointed without reference to their political opinions. They must be nominated by a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court, appointed by the Governor, and confirmed by the Senate. The Judges of the Supreme Court may retire a Commissioner on half-pay for life, when satisfied that he is mentally or physically too infirm to discharge the duties of his office, and that the infirmity is apparently incurable. When a Commissioner serves till the age of seventy he shall draw half-pay the remainder of his life. A Commissioner cannot resign unless his resignation is accepted by the powers which nominated, appointed, and confirmed him.

SEC. 3. The Supreme Court must remove a Commissioner when, upon petition and hearing, it finds either one or more of the following facts:

1. Participation in the practice of law since his appointment, or accepting or agreeing to accept a fee or reward for professional service or advice.
2. Habitual intemperance.
3. Commission of a felony.
4. Gross neglect of official duty.
5. Incompetency; to be determined upon the inspection of the official works as they appear in writing or print.

SEC. 4. The Commissioners must, subject to adoption by the Legislature:

1. Perfect by amendment the Code system of the State;
2. Reduce to Code form of expression all uncodified statutes that are reasonably capable of being incorporated into the Codes, and insert their contents in places where they logically belong;
3. Insert, in proper places, at their discretion, such rules of the common law as have been omitted from the Codes;
4. Distribute provisions to and in their proper title, when found clearly out of their place;
5. Make but one expression of a rule in the four Codes except by way of reference;
6. Revise the expression in sections containing unreasonable redundancy, giving them the most condensed form consistent with clearness and certainty;
7. Subdivide sections of unreasonable length into two or more, in such manner as will secure single or separate expression of each particular subject, as far as reasonably practicable;
8. Insert all additional sections where they logically belong, by numerical or alphabetical designation, as 100, 100a, 100b, etc.; or, 100–1, 100–2, 100–3, etc.;
9. Remove all doubts or conflicts, supply defects, and give uniformity in style, expression, and in the form and length of sections, so far as may be reasonably practicable.

SEC. 5. The Commissioners must:

1. Annotate the work as they proceed and make references by the correlative use of numerals, indicating the particular point, word, or clause to which the citation specially refers, and add such brief assignment of reasons for particular expression as their judgment may dictate;
2. Prepare for publication, within four years from the adoption of the Constitution, an annotated edition of the Codes, and continue the process of annotation and amendment, and prepare subsequent revised editions, to be published from time to time, at least once in every ten years. The Legislature must provide for their publication, but the Commissioners must supervise it. They must prepare the form of bills or Acts when requested by resolution of either house, particularly specifying the objects to be attained.

SEC. 6. The Commissioners shall report their labors to each succeeding Legislature, and shall act advisory of the two houses touching the amendment of the Codes and the preparation of the form of expression of all laws to be passed, and shall, during the recess of the Legislature, examine all bills referred to them for consideration by either House, and report thereon to the next Legislature, when so instructed, in the order of reference. The Senior Commissioner shall be a member of the Senate, and the Junior Commissioner shall be a member of the Assembly, but not entitled to a vote or hold other office.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

MR. BELL offered a resolution in relation to the appointment of officers.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: The proposition does not comply with the rule. It is not in the shape of a proposition.

THE PRESIDENT. It does not comply with the rule passed this morning. Return it to the gentleman.

ASSESSMENT OF PROPERTY.

MR. BIGGS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to assessment of property:

Resolved, All property subject to taxation shall be taxed in proportion to its value. All debts secured by mortgage or mortgages, solvent debts, moneys, certificates of deposit, all capital of joint stock companies, corporations, savings in banks, shall be taxed to the owner or owners, holder or holders of the same, for the full amount represented by said joint stock company or companies, corporation or corporations, savings in bank or banks. The word property herein used is intended to include every kind of property, real and personal, that has any value thereto. Growing crops shall not be considered as property. All assessments shall fall due on the —— day of ——, at twelve o'clock M.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

LEGISLATIVE OATH.

MR. BIGGS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the oath to be taken by members of Legislature.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. Resolved, That every Senator and Representative elect, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear, or affirm, that I will support the Constitution of the United States and of the State of California, and faithfully perform the duties of my office; and that I will not knowingly receive, directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing for the performance or non-performance of any act or duty pertaining to my office, other than the compensation allowed by law." The oath shall be administered in the halls of their respective houses to the members thereof, by some Judge of the Supreme Court, or the District Court, or the County Court of Sacramento County, or, after the organization, by the presiding officer of either house, and shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. Any member of either house refusing to take said oath, or affirmation, shall be deemed to have thereby vacated his office, and any member convicted of having violated his oath, or affirmation, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and be forever thereafter disqualified from holding any office of trust or profit in this State.

SEC. 2. The members of the Senate and Assembly shall severally receive from the public treasury such compensation as may, from time to time, be provided by law, not to exceed five dollars per day for the first —— days of each session, and after that not to exceed one dollar per day for the remainder of the session. In addition to per diem, the members shall be entitled to receive traveling expenses or mileage for any regular and extra session, not greater than now provided by law; but no member shall be entitled to traveling expenses or mileage for any extra session that may be called within one day after an adjournment of a regular session. Each member may receive, at each regular session, an additional sum of twenty-five dollars, which shall be in full for all stationery used in his official capacity, and all postage and other incidental expenses and perquisites.

SEC. 3. No bill shall become a law unless on its final passage the vote be taken by the yeas and nays, the names of the members voting for and against the same be entered on the Journal, and a majority of the members elected to each house be recorded thereon as voting in its favor.

SEC. 4. No amendment to bills by one house shall be concurred in by the other, except by a vote of a majority of the members elected thereto, taken by yeas and nays, and the names of those voting for and against recorded upon the Journal thereof; and reports of Committees of Conference shall be adopted in either house only by the vote of a majority of the members elected thereto, taken by the yeas and nays, and the names of those voting recorded upon the Journal.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. MURPHY. I move that all propositions be read by title, and not in accordance with rule fifty-one, and referred to a committee.

THE PRESIDENT. It is so ordered.

MR. BLACKMER. I send up two propositions.

MR. CROSS. It seems to me, Mr. President, that it is not right, simply having the title read, and then lay the bill aside. For instance, one man introduces a proposition on the Chinese question, and it is read; it may be the same proposition that several other members have in contemplation, and they can save themselves the trouble when they see that it has been introduced. There may be a number of plans introduced. There is one introduced by Judge Hale, and one by Mr. Filcher, and there is no use in having any more introduced. I say that the propositions ought to be read.

MR. HAGER. This rule, fifty-two, requires it to be read, and to dispense with it the Convention will have to dispense with the rule. Any member may move that a proposition be not read, and any member may demand the reading of a proposition.

MR. BLACKMER. I call the attention of the Secretary to the fact that I sent up two propositions which have not been read.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will rule now that they must be read, under the rule, unless the Convention suspends the rule and dispenses with the reading.

RELATING TO EDUCATION.

MR. BLACKMER introduced the following proposed section, to be incorporated into article nine of the present Constitution, relating to education:

SECTION —. There shall be a State Board of Education, consisting of two members from each Congressional District, who shall be nominated by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, for the term of four years. The State Superintendent shall be ex officio a member of said Board.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

RELATING TO SUFFRAGE.

MR. BLACKMER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Amend section one, article two, so as to read as follows:

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof (except such as are now or may hereafter be debarred by treaty from attaining to the rights of citizenship, and Indians who continue to maintain their tribal relations), of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year, and of an election district six months next preceding an election, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may hereafter be authorized by law.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

MR. NOEL. I move that the rules be suspended and that the resolutions and propositions be read by title and referred to the proper committees.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I rise to a point of order. I call the attention of the house to section sixty, which says, on suspension or change of the rules, that no standing rule or order shall be rescinded without a vote of two thirds and one day's notice being given, but a rule or order may be temporarily suspended by a vote of two thirds, except rules fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five, which includes this rule among those excepted.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken, and the motion is out of order.

PROTECTION OF RIGHTS.

MR. BROWN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

No clause in this Constitution shall be so construed as to invalidate rights to property that have been acquired under the laws of this State prior to the adoption of this Constitution.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

RELATIVE TO A BOARD OF RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

MR. CAMPBELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, entitled a proposition to establish a Board of Railroad Commissioners:

Resolved, That the following provision be incorporated in the Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. The Governor shall appoint three Railroad Commissioners, who shall hold their offices during the pleasure of the Governor. Said Commissioners shall have power, and it shall be their duty, to examine the books, papers, and documents of all railroad corporations, other than street railroad corporations, organized under the laws of this State, or any portion of whose road shall be within the limits of this State; to investigate their affairs, ascertain their receipts and disbursements, and, by vote of a majority, to establish reasonable rates of fares and freights upon any of such roads whenever and as often as they shall deem necessary, and alter the same when in their judgment it shall be proper. Said Commissioners, and each of them, shall have access to all the books, papers, and documents of all such corporations, and any officer of any such corporation having the care, custody, or control of such books, papers, or documents, who shall, at any reasonable time, refuse to any Commissioner access thereto, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not more than five thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the County Jail not exceeding one year. Said Commissioners, and each of them, shall have power, in the discharge of their duties, to administer oaths, issue subpœnas for and examine witnesses upon oath; and any witness who shall perjure himself before said Commissioners, or either of them, shall be liable to all the pains and penalties affixed by law to the crime of perjury; and any witness who shall fail to attend, or shall refuse to testify in any material matter, shall be punished for contempt by the District Court, as in other cases of contempt. Such Commissioners shall, annually, and whenever requested by him, report to the Governor such information as may be proper. Any such corporation refusing to conform to such rates as shall be established by said Commissioners, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty thousand dollars; and every officer, servant, or employé thereof who shall willfully refuse to conform to such rates, and shall demand or receive rates in excess thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the County Jail not exceeding one year. These provisions shall be deemed self-executing, but the Legislature may enforce them by additional legislation. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit the Legislature from altering, by law, the rates of freights and fares fixed by said Commissioners. The salary of said Commissioners shall be fixed by law.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

IN RELATION TO EXCESSIVE BAIL.

MR. CAPLES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, as a substitute for section six, article one:

Excessive bail shall not be required nor excessive fines imposed, nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

MR. CAPLES also offered a proposition instructing the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department to report an article in relation to jury trials.

MR. BARBOUR (pending the reading). I raise the point of order that the proposition does not comply with the rule adopted this morning.

MR. CAPLES. I ask unanimous consent of the Convention to have it read and referred.

Objection being made, the document was returned to the author.

RELATIVE TO LABOR AND CAPITAL.

MR. CONDON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to labor and capital:

Be it resolved, That labor in prisons and other institutions under the control of the State, or of any county, city, town, village, or municipality within the State, shall not be let out by contract, nor shall the inmates of State Prisons be employed in any manufacture in such a manner as to compete or come in conflict with private manufacture within the State. But they shall be employed in labor on land or buildings, or in making any or all articles to be used in the prison in which they may be respectively confined.

Referred to the Committee on Labor and Capital.

A JUDICIARY SYSTEM.

MR. CROSS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to a new judiciary system:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in one Supreme Court, County Courts, Justices of the Peace, and such Police and other inferior Courts for cities and towns as may be created by the Legislature, with such inferior jurisdiction as the Legislature may confer upon them.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction of all cases on appeal, of which the County Courts have original jurisdiction.

SEC. 3. The County Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases arising in law, equity, and probate, and in all special cases, excepting where money or personal property only is in dispute, and the amount or value thereof is less than five hundred dollars; and except, also, in such cases of misdemeanor as the Legislature may direct to be tried and determined before Justices of the Peace, or the inferior Courts of cities and towns. The County Courts shall also have appellate jurisdiction of all cases of which Justices of the Peace, and the inferior Courts of cities and towns, have original jurisdiction.

SEC. 4. The County Courts shall always be open for the transaction of business, except upon legal holidays.

SEC. 5. There shall be one County Court in every county, and the Legislature may provide for as many more, in any county having more than twenty thousand people, as it shall deem necessary.

SEC. 6. Each township of each county shall have two Justices of the Peace. Their jurisdiction shall extend to all cases where the matter in controversy is money or personal property, and the amount or value thereof does not exceed five hundred dollars.

SEC. 7. All judicial officers shall be elected at general elections—Supreme Court Judges, for ten years; County Judges, for six years, and Justices of the Peace and Judges of inferior Courts in cities and towns, for four years.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

TO PROHIBIT SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

MR. CROUCH introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the declaration of rights:

Resolved, That the following be adopted in the Constitution, under the head of Bill of Rights, as—

SEC. —. All laws shall be general and have a uniform operation throughout the State. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any local or special laws.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS.

MR. DAVIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to suffrage and elections:

Resolved, Every person shall be disqualified from holding office, during the term for which he may have been elected, who shall have given or offered a bribe or rewards to procure his election.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

ELIGIBILITY FOR OFFICE.

Mr. DAVIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution entitled "Suffrage and Elections—Eligibility for Office:"

Resolved, No person holding a lucrative office or appointment under the Government of the United States, or under this State, shall be eligible to the Legislature, nor shall one person hold more than one lucrative office at the same time; provided, that offices of the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, and the office of Postmaster, where the compensation does not exceed one hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

RELATING TO THE JUDICIARY.

Mr. DEAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the Judicial Department:

Resolved, That the following be incorporated in the Constitution:

Section —. Each county is a judicial district. District Judges shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts at the general State election, and hold their respective offices for the term of six years and until their successors are elected and qualified. If a vacancy occur in the office of District Judge, from causes other than the expiration of a full term, the Governor shall fill such vacancy by appointment for the remainder of the term, and the appointee shall only hold the office for the remainder of the said term, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

Sec. —. Every county containing less than twenty thousand inhabitants shall elect one District Judge. Counties, or consolidated cities and counties, containing more than twenty thousand inhabitants, shall elect an additional Judge for every twenty thousand inhabitants and for such fraction as shall exceed fifteen thousand. The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, may increase or decrease the number of District Judges for such districts as have more than one District Judge.

Sec. —. Each District Court shall be held by one District Judge; and when two or more Judges are elected for one county, or city and county, Courts shall be held separate, but the judgments and orders of each shall be entered and enforced as of the district of such county, or city and county.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

THE LAND DEPARTMENT.

Mr. DOWLING introduced the following proposition in relation to Land Department:

In view of the fact that a great portion of the public lands of California have been and are being appropriated by individuals and corporations, either under the guise or in open violation of the law—it is also a fact, that is but too apparent, that thousands of acres of the fairest lands in the State are held by proxy without the shadow of a title—and as it is an essential necessity for the future well-being of the State that all lands of equal productive value should be equally taxed, it follows that the only means left to carry out our intentions, and correct the abuses of the past, is by having a general re-survey of the State; therefore the Committee on Lands should recommend favorably the following article:

Article —.

The Legislature shall provide for a general re-survey of the State.

Referred to the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemptions.

RELATIVE TO MINING.

Mr. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to mining:

Whereas, A considerable portion of the most precious grounds in the State are owned and worked by a class of aliens who add nothing to our wealth or industry, and are by nature and the law of our land ineligible to become good and respected citizens of this commonwealth, hence the following article should and ought to be inserted in the new Constitution:

Article —.

No alien, ineligible to become a citizen of the United States, shall ever be permitted to hold, own, or work any of the placers, or any other gold-bearing grounds, in the State of California. Nor shall any citizen hold in trust, by proxy or otherwise, any such lands for such aliens.

Referred to the Committee on Mining.

Mr. BARNES. I desire to offer a resolution in respect to adjournment:

Resolved, That when the Convention adjourns to-day it adjourns till Monday, the fifteenth, at one o'clock P. M.

Mr. CONDON. I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion to lie on the table prevailed.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until one o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at one o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll call dispensed with.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

Mr. DUDLEY, of Solano, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

Resolved, That the following proposition be incorporated in the new Constitution:

Article —.

Section 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All property in this State not exempt under the laws of the United States, except property belonging to the State, county, or other municipal corporations, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word "property," as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include all moneys, credits, dues, franchises, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, and all other matters and things capable of ownership and having value in exchange.

Sec. 2. The Legislature shall have power to provide by law for the assessment and collection of a tax upon incomes derived from bonds, notes (whether secured by mortgage or not), or securities of any kind, other than shares or stocks in joint stock companies, corporations, or associations formed for profit, and doing business in this State; provided, that if the income tax provided for in this section shall be levied, then the property from which such incomes are derived shall be exempt from the payment of a direct or ad valorem tax.

Sec. 3. The Legislature shall have power to provide for the assessment and collection of a tax upon the incomes of all railroad, navigation, or banking corporations, bank and exchange agencies, and insurance companies, foreign or domestic, or any other corporations (other than municipal) or associations whatever, formed for profit, and doing business in this State; provided, that if the Legislature shall provide for the assessment of a tax upon incomes as set forth in this section, all property owned by and necessarily used by such corporation in producing such income shall be exempt from an ad valorem tax.

Sec. 4. If the Legislature shall provide for the payment of a tax upon incomes, as provided in sections two and three of this article, such income tax shall be made to approximate as near as practicable to equality with the direct or ad valorem tax on other classes of property.

Sec. 5. Should the Legislature deem it inadvisable to levy a tax upon incomes, as provided in sections two and three of this article, then all property shall be taxed according to the true intent and meaning of section one of this article.

Sec. 6. Growing crops shall not be subject to taxation.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

Mr. DUNLAP introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to water and water rights:

Resolved, That there be introduced into the Constitution a clause as follows:

Section —. There shall be no further appropriation of the waters of the streams and lakes of this State by individuals or corporations.

Referred to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

CONCERNING LICENSE.

Mr. EAGON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning license:

No license tax shall be assessed against, or collected from, any person for carrying on any business, trade, or profession in this State.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

CONCERNING THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the Legislative Department:

Resolved, That the following provision be adopted in that article of the Constitution which relates to the Legislative Department:

Section 1. The Legislature shall have no power to pass retroactive laws, or laws impairing the obligation of contracts; provided, however, that the Legislature may, by general laws, authorize the Courts to carry into effect the manifest intention of parties and officers, by curing omissions, defects, and errors in the instruments and proceedings, arising out of their want of conformity with the laws of this State, and upon such terms as shall be just and equitable.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

IN RELATION TO SPECIAL LAWS.

Mr. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the Legislative Department:

Resolved, That the following provisions be adopted in that article of the Constitution which relates to the Legislative Department:

Section 1. The Legislature shall not pass any special or local law in the following cases: Authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens; regulating the affairs of counties, cities, townships, wards, or school districts; changing the names of persons or places; changing the venue in civil or criminal cases; authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, or maintaining roads, highways, streets, or alleys; relating to ferries or bridges, except for the erection of bridges crossing streams which form boundaries between this and any other State; vacating roads, town plats, streets, or alleys; relating to cemeteries, or public grounds, not of the State; authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children; locating or changing county seats; incorporating cities, towns, or villages, or changing their charters; for the opening or conducting of elections, or fixing or changing the place of voting; granting divorces; erecting new townships, changing township lines or school districts; creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, townships, election or school districts; changing the law of descent or succession; regulating the practice or jurisdiction of, or changing the rules of evidence in, any judicial proceeding or inquiry before Courts, Sheriffs, Commissioners, Arbitrators, Referees, or other tribunals, or providing or changing methods for the collection of debts, or the enforcing of judgments, or prescribing the effect of judicial sales of real estate; regulating the fees or extending the powers or duties of any county, city, or township officer; regulating the management of public schools, the building or repairing of school houses, or the raising of money for such purpose; fixing the rate of interest; affecting the estate of minors, or persons under disability; remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures, or refunding moneys legally paid into the State treasury; exempting property from taxation; regulating labor, trade, mining, or manufacturing; granting to any corporation, association, or individual, any special or exclusive privilege or immunity, or to any corporation, association, or individual, the right to lay down a railroad track; nor shall the Legislature indirectly enact such special or local law by the partial repeal of a general law, but laws repealing local or special laws may be passed; nor shall any law be passed granting powers or privileges in any case where the granting of such powers and privileges shall have been provided for by a general law, nor where the Courts have jurisdiction to grant the same, or give the relief asked for.

In all the cases above enumerated, and in all other cases where a general law can be made applicable, all laws shall be general and of a uniform operation throughout the State.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO SUFFRAGE.

MR. EVEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the right of suffrage:

Every citizen of the United States and of this State, who shall have resided within this State one year, and within the county ninety days, or thirty days within the district, next before any election to be holden in compliance with any law of this State, shall have the right and privilege to vote, except he may have been convicted of felony by the laws of this State, and is at the time uncommitted thereof. And should such citizen be deprived of such privilege by any person or persons holding such election, upon any pretense or cause whatever, such citizen shall have the right to sue the State, in any Court thereof having jurisdiction, free of cost; and upon establishing the fact of his right to vote and prohibition of the exercise of that right, by a jury, shall recover of the State not less than five thousand dollars nor more than ten thousand.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

RELATIVE TO ILLEGAL VOTING.

MR. EVEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to rights of suffrage:

If any person shall give, or offer to give, any bribe, present, or reward, or any promise, or any security, for the payment or the delivery of money, or any other thing, to induce any voter to refrain from casting his vote, or to prevent him in any way from voting, or to procure a vote for any candidate, the person giving, or offering to give, and the person receiving the same, and any person who shall give, or cause to be given, an illegal vote, knowing it to be such, at any election hereafter held in this State, shall, on conviction in any of the Courts of this State, be forever disqualified to hold any office of profit or trust, or to vote at any election in this State.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

RELATIVE TO LABOR AND CAPITAL.

MR. FARRELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to labor and capital:

SEC. —. When the price of labor is due and unpaid, any mechanic or laborer who is not so paid shall be enabled to enter any Court of competent jurisdiction, and upon his statement, properly verified, without any further formality, upon proper notice thereof, and judgment, cause the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the moneys and property of the employer, and apply enough of the same to the payment of any labor unpaid, before using the estate, or any portion thereof, for any other purpose.

Referred to the Committee on Labor and Capital.

RIGHTS OF FOREIGNERS.

MR. FARRELL introduced the following proposition for incorporation in the Bill of Rights in the proposed new Constitution:

SECTION —. No foreigner who is, or may hereafter be, entitled to become a citizen of the United States, under the naturalization laws thereof, and who now is, or may hereafter become, a resident of this State, shall be entitled to the enjoyment of the same rights in respect to the ownership, possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as are secured to native-born citizens under this Constitution, unless he shall have first declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and renounced his allegiance to the country of his nativity, in accordance with the naturalization laws of the United States.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

PARDONING POWER.

MR. FAWCETT introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the pardoning power:

SECTION —. The power to grant pardons shall be vested in the Governor, but shall be exercised only in cases where evidence is newly discovered, after judgment, clearly establishing the innocence of the convicted party.

Referred to the Committee on Pardoning Power.

SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. FILCHER introduced the following proposed amendment to article four, section two, of the Constitution of California:

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence on the first Monday after the first Tuesday of January next ensuing the election of its members, unless the Governor of the State shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than ninety days, and no bill shall be introduced during the last ten days of the session, unless by consent of three fourths of the members of the House in which said bill is offered.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

VACANCIES IN THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. FILCHER introduced the following proposed amendment to article four, section thirteen, of the Constitution of California:

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 13. Where a vacancy occurs in either house of the Legislature, from any cause, the house in which said vacancy occurs shall, if in session, proceed immediately to elect, from the constituency deprived of representation, a member to fill the said vacancy. If the Legislature is not in session at the time a vacancy occurs, it shall, on convening, proceed at once, as heretofore provided, to fill said vacancy.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

LIMITING LAND MONOPOLY.

MR. FREEMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, entitled: "Prohibition of land monopolies—to limit the monopolization of real estate."

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. That after the adoption of this Constitution, no person or corporation shall, except by inheritance, by direct grant from the United States, by a bona fide execution or judicial sale, or by proceedings in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, become the legal or equitable owner of more than one thousand acres of land situate in this State. All lands transferred or attempted to be transferred in violation of this section thereby vest in the State. The Legislature shall pass laws to more fully enforce the provisions of this section; and may, from time to time, impose additional limitations regarding the amount of lands which may be acquired by any person or corporation.

Referred to Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption.

RELATION OF THE STATE TO THE UNITED STATES.

MR. FREEMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights inquire into the expediency of inserting the following in the Bill of Rights:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. This State shall ever remain a member of the American Union, and its people a part of the American Nation, and the paramount allegiance of its citizens shall be due to the Constitution and Government of the United States.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

PROPERTY QUALIFICATIONS.

MR. FREUD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the following provisions be referred to the Committee on Bill of Rights for adoption in the Constitution:

SEC. —. No property qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote, hold office, or become a juror.

SEC. —. Chinese testimony, unless corroborated by testimony other than Chinese, shall never be accepted by any Court under the jurisdiction of this State.

SEC. —. No money shall be appropriated for the payment of any religious services in either house of the Legislature.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

ON FUTURE AMENDMENTS.

MR. GORMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to future amendments:

Resolved, That future amendments, when submitted to the people, shall be voted upon in separate articles and not as a whole, and no amendment shall be submitted oftener than five years.

Referred to Committee on Future Amendments.

MR. GORMAN also offered a resolution in reference to the employment of convict labor.

MR. ROLFE (pending the reading of the proposition). I object to the proposition, because it does not comply with the rule; it is not in proper form.

THE PRESIDENT. The objection is sustained; the document will be returned to the author.

IN RELATION TO THE BALLOT.

MR. GRACE introduced the following proposition for incorporation in the proposed Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State six months next preceding the election, and of the county, township, ward, or precinct in which he resides fifteen days, shall have the qualifications of an elector and be entitled to vote at all elections.

SEC. 2. All elections shall be by ballot.

SEC. 3. No idiot or insane person shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector, nor shall any person who shall have been convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crime, be entitled to said privileges, unless his disability shall have been removed by special Act of the Legislature.

SEC. 4. Electors, during their attendance at elections, and in going to and returning therefrom, shall be privileged from arrest in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace.

Digitized by Google

SEC. 5. No person shall be deemed to have gained or lost his residence as an elector by reason of his presence or absence in the service of the United States, or in the navigation of the high seas, or waters of the United States, or by reason of his presence or absence for any temporary purpose.

SEC. 6. The exercise of the privilege of the elective franchise is hereby declared to be a duty of citizenship, and the Legislature shall have power to enforce the performance of said duty by appropriate legislation.

SEC. 7. The privileges of an elector of the State of California shall never be extended to any person of the Asiatic or Mongolian race, regardless of the question of his nativity.

Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

MR. GRACE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to female suffrage:

Resolved, That the following be referred to the Committee on Future Amendments: Strike out from the present Constitution, wherever the same occurs, the word "male," and insert after the word "he," wherever the same occurs, the words "or she."

Referred to the Committee on Future Amendments.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

MR. GREGG introduced the following proposed amendment to the miscellaneous provisions of the Constitution. Suggested amendment to section thirteen of article eleven:

Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value. Assessments of lands shall be had separate and apart from the assessment of improvements thereon. Lands of like quality in the same vicinity shall be assessed alike, whether improved or not. Growing crops, except tame grasses, shall not be taxed. Assessments may be equalized as may be provided by law, but the State Board of Equalization shall consist of seven members, appointed by the Governor; such appointments to be made so that each Congressional District shall be represented thereon.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

Mr. GREGG introduced the following proposition to amend the "Declaration of Rights." Amendment suggested to section nine of the "Declaration of Rights:"

Every citizen may freely speak and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions on indictments for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and, being true, was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted. The jury shall not determine the law of libel. Criminal prosecutions for libel must be had in the county of the first publication of the libel.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

IN REFERENCE TO THE PREAMBLE AND BILL OF RIGHTS.

MR. HAGER introduced the following amendments to the preamble and declaration of rights proposed to be incorporated in the new Constitution:

Resolved, That the following proposed amendments to the Preamble and Declaration of Rights be adopted in the new Constitution:

TO THE PREAMBLE.

We, the people of the State of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to perpetuate its blessings and promote our common welfare, do establish this Constitution.

TO THE DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but hereafter the concurrence of only three fourths of the jury shall be necessary to render a verdict. In criminal cases, where the punishment may be death, or imprisonment in the State Prison, the jury shall consist of sixteen persons. In all other actions, either criminal or civil, the jury shall consist of twelve persons; but by the agreement of the parties, the jury, in a civil action, may consist of eight persons, or a trial by jury may be waived.

SEC. 2. No person shall be held to answer for a crime, or other public offense, punishable by death, or imprisonment in the State Prison (except in cases of impeachment, or in cases arising in the militia when in actual service, or in the land or naval forces in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in the time of peace), unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury. In all other cases offenses shall be prosecuted criminally by indictment, information, accusation, or complaint, as concurrent remedies, as may be prescribed by law; and in any trial, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend, in person and with counsel, as in civil actions. Hereafter a Grand Jury shall consist of nineteen men, any ten (10) of whom concurring may find an indictment or true bill. The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, may abolish, or establish and restore, the Grand Jury system in all or any county of the State.

SEC. 3. No person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, but if he voluntarily becomes a witness he may be fully cross-examined. Nor shall any person, after being once acquitted by a jury, be again for the same offense put in jeopardy of life or liberty; but if the jury fail to render a verdict, or if judgment after verdict be arrested or reversed, nothing herein contained shall prevent a new trial.

SEC. 4. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation. Such compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, in such manner as may be prescribed by law; and until the same shall be paid to the owner, or into Court for the owner, the property shall not be disturbed or the proprietary rights of the owner therein divested. The fee of lands taken for railroad tracks or for canals, without the consent of the owner thereof, shall remain in such owner, subject to the use for which it is taken.

SEC. 5. That no person elected or appointed to any State, county, or municipal office, or employment of trust or profit, under the laws of this State or any ordinance of any municipality therein, shall hold such office unless, during his continuance therein he shall personally devote his entire time, or so much thereof as may be necessary to the performance of the duties thereof.

SEC. 6. No public officer, nor any person who has held a position of trust, and as such been the collector or receiver of public money, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit in this State, under the laws thereof, or of any municipality therein, until he shall have accounted for and paid over all public money for which he may be accountable.

SEC. 7. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words it is declared otherwise.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

FRANCHISES OF CORPORATIONS.

MR. ESTEE introduced the following proposed sections, relative to forfeitures of franchises of corporations and the exercise of the right of eminent domain:

SECTION 1. All existing charters, grants, franchises, special or exclusive privileges, under which an actual and bona fide organization shall not have taken place, and business been commenced in good faith at the time of the adoption of this Convention, shall thereafter have no validity.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall not remit the forfeiture of the charter of any corporation now existing, or which shall hereafter exist under the laws of this State, or alter or amend the same, or pass any other general or special law for the benefit of such corporation, except upon the condition that such corporation shall thereafter hold its charter subject to the provisions of this Constitution.

SEC. 3. The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be abridged or so construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies and subject them to public use, the same as the property of individuals; and the exercise of the police power of the State shall never be abridged or so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals, or the general well-being of the State.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

THE POWER OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. HALL introduced the following proposed provision, touching the future power of the Legislature in respect to certain corporations:

Resolved, That the following section be incorporated into the Constitution to be framed by this Convention, to wit:

SECTION —. The power heretofore held by or reserved to the Legislature of this State, under the Constitution and laws, over or in respect to corporations other than municipal, thereunder organized and existing before and at the time this Constitution takes effect, is neither denied nor abridged, altered or impaired in any manner, or to any extent whatever, by any article, section, clause, or other matter or thing in this Constitution expressed or to be implied therefrom.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

RESTRICTIONS ON THE LEGISLATIVE POWER.

MR. HALL introduced the following proposition for a limitation of the power of the Legislature:

Resolved, That there shall be embodied in the Constitution, to be framed by this Convention, a section to the following effect, to wit:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall have no power to pass special laws authorizing any named minor to sell, lease, or encumber his or her property, or providing for the sale of the real estate of any named minor, or other person laboring under legal disability, by any executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, or other person; or establishing, locating, altering the course, or affecting the construction of roads, or the building or repairing of bridges; or establishing, altering, or vacating any street, avenue, or alley of any city and county, city, or town; or extending the time for the assessment or collection of taxes, or otherwise relieving any Assessor or Collector of taxes from the due performance of his official duties; or giving effect to informal or invalid wills or deeds; or legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid acts of any officer; or granting to any individual, company, or corporation, the right to lay down railroad tracks in the streets of any city and county, city, or town; or establishing fees of public officers; or exempting any property of any named person or corporation from taxation; but for such cases the Legislature shall provide by general laws; and in all cases where a general law can be made applicable, no special law shall be enacted.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

MR. HARRISON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to compulsory education:

SECTION —. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for a system of compulsory education for all children under the age of fourteen, such education to be entirely secular, and for this purpose it shall provide for the creation of a special fund, for the purpose of giving such assistance to indigent children as will enable them to partake of the benefits of such system.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

RELATIVE TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

MR. HARRISON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, for incorporation in the article on education:

SECTION —. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide, by appropriate legislation, for the giving of lectures in the public schools of this State, at least once every week, upon the subject of labor, and its paramount importance in the affairs of men in every walk of life.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

RELATIVE TO THE BILL OF RIGHTS.

MR. HARVEY introduced the following proposition to amend section two, article one, of the Constitution, relative to declaration of rights:

SEC. 2. All free governments are created for the benefit of the people and by their authority, and all laws should be so framed as to promote the welfare of the governed; therefore, the burdens of the State ought to be, and of right should be, so imposed as to bear uniformly and equally on all its citizens.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

RELATIVE TO THE MILITIA.

MR. HARVEY introduced the following proposition to amend article seven of the Constitution, in relation to militia. Proposition to amend article seven of the Constitution, in relation to militia, by addition of the following sections:

SEC. 4. The militia shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at musters and elections, and in going to and returning from the same.

SEC. 6. No person having conscientious scruples against bearing arms shall be compelled to do militia duty in time of peace.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall provide by law for the exemption of members of voluntary military companies from jury duty, and from the payment of poll tax, or head tax of any description.

Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

IN RELATION TO THE MILITIA.

MR. HEISKELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution in relation to militia:

The Legislature shall not appropriate any money for the organization or maintenance of the militia of this State.

Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

RELATIVE TO THE PARDONING POWER.

MR. HEROLD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to pardoning power:

Resolved, That the pardoning power be invested in a committee of three.

Referred to the Committee on Pardoning Power.

RELATIVE TO CORPORATIONS.

MR. HEROLD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to corporations:

Resolved, That all corporations depending on the patronage of the public be restricted from charging exorbitant rates; and, therefore,

Resolved, That under no consideration such corporations be permitted to derive from such investment a gain of no more than nine per cent. per annum on the cash capital so invested.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

LIMITING THE POWER OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. HERRINGTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Mr. President: I offer the following, limiting the powers of the Legislature under the new Constitution, and suggest that it be made a section of an article therein, to be known as Legislative Department:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall have no power:

1. To make any appropriation for a longer period than four years;

2. To create any forfeiture which shall be determinable by any process inferior to a judicial inquiry and determination by a Court of competent jurisdiction, in which the existence of the dereliction of person or property, the condition upon the occurrence of which the forfeiture attaches, shall be judicially declared;

3. To grant or authorize the payment of any private claim for loss or hardship suffered in the fulfillment or discharge of any contract, public office, or duty; or for the relief of the principal or sureties upon any bond or obligation for the fulfillment of any contract with the State, or any municipality or political subdivision thereof, or for the faithful discharge of any obligation or official duty arising under any law of the State;

4. To pass any special law whatever.

But this section shall not be construed to prohibit the enactment of local laws of a general nature.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RIGHTS OF ALIENS.

MR. HERRINGTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution. Mr. President: I offer the following, defining the rights of aliens under the new Constitution, and suggest that it be made a section of an article therein, to be known as Bill of Rights:

SECTION —. Aliens who, by the laws of the United States, can become citizens thereof, and who are or may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights in respect to possessing, enjoying, and inheriting property as native-born citizens; but aliens who, by the laws of the United States, are prevented becoming citizens thereof, shall not take by purchase, gift, devise, or inheritance any estate or interest in real property; and all property, real and personal, owned by such alien at the time of his death shall, at the death of such alien, escheat to and vest in the State of California, and shall be disposed of and the proceeds applied to the support of common schools, under such regulations as the Legislature shall prescribe. But this section shall not apply to property acquired by such alien prior to the adoption of this Constitution, if owned by him at the time of his death.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

DISPOSITION OF THE PUBLIC FUNDS.

MR. HEUSTIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the appropriation of the public funds:

Resolved, That the following be incorporated in the Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. No appropriation of the public funds shall ever be made except for the actual expenses of the government and the support of institutions controlled by the State; and no appropriation shall ever be made for the maintenance, support, or benefit of any corporation, private enterprise, or sectarian institution.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO TAXATION.

MR. HUGHEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. All lands of this State shall be graded in quality, as to tillage, or grazing, or desert, which gradation shall be done by a proper Board of Appraisers in each county. The Legislature shall pass all suitable Acts in relation to the said Board.

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. All lands of the same grade shall be taxed at the same valuation, whether improved or not improved. Improvements on land shall be taxed separately from the land.

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Church property, to the value of five thousand (5,000) dollars, shall be exempt from taxation.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

EXTRA COMPENSATION.

MR. JOHNSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to extra compensation to public officers. A proposition to amend article fourth of the Constitution, by adding the following:

No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, employé, or contractor, after the services shall have been rendered on the contract entered into, nor shall any money be paid out of any fund whatever by way of additional compensation to any of said persons, nor shall any money be appropriated or paid on any claim, the subject-matter of which shall not have been provided for by preëxisting law.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

MR. JOYCE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to an eight-hour law:

Be it resolved, That the Committee on Capital and Labor are hereby recommended to embody in their report the following provision:

That all State, county, municipal, town, and corporation, other than municipal corporation, work be done by the day, and that eight hours' labor be a day's work.

Referred to the Committee on Labor and Capital.

THE NUMBER OF SENATORS.

MR. JOYCE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, regulating the number of Senators:

Be it resolved, That the Committee on Legislation are hereby recommended to report the following amendment to article four, section six, of the present Constitution:

The number of Senators shall not be less than forty nor more than fifty, and that the same shall be divided into two classes. The seats of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; the seats of the second class to be vacated at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one half shall be chosen biennially; the same to commence from the first election after the adoption of this Constitution.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATING TO CHINESE.

MR. KENNY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, No alien, ineligible to become a citizen of the United States, shall ever be permitted to catch fish, either by hook, net, or seine, in the waters of California, or any place under its jurisdiction.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. KLEINE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That a per capita tax of two hundred and fifty dollars shall be levied upon each coolie immigrant arriving in California.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

ON SUSPENDING THE RULES.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. President: I move that the rules be suspended, in order to allow the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, to introduce the whole draft of a Constitution prepared by him. A great many batches of resolutions have been introduced here, and a great deal of labor has been performed here. This Constitution is the work of a man who has had a great deal of legislative experience, of a man of a great deal of ability, and he has devoted months of labor to this work, and I ask that the rules be suspended and that he be allowed to introduce it as a whole.

The PRESIDENT. Rule fifty-two governs this matter: "Propositions and resolutions mentioned in the last foregoing rule shall embrace but one subject." Rule sixty prohibits the suspension of rule fifty-two.

Mr. TERRY. The motion is to suspend the rule, and the rule that prohibits it.

Mr. McCALLUM. We may be able to suspend rule sixty, which says that rule fifty-two cannot be suspended, because rule sixty does not provide that rule sixty itself shall not be suspended.

The PRESIDENT. The Convention can suspend rule sixty, but rule fifty-two will remain in force.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Why not suspend that in that way?

The PRESIDENT. The motion is to suspend rule sixty.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope this rule will be suspended. I have examined the draft of the Constitution which, the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, has prepared, and I am satisfied that it contains a great number of valuable suggestions which will be of great use to the committees. It is a work of great labor, as stated by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry, and it is good service to the public if we suspend the rules and allow it to be introduced.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President: It seems to me the proposition of the gentleman obviates the necessity of having any rules at all. We are trying to beat the devil round the stump. Here is a rule which prohibits the temporary suspension of the rules, and it is now proposed to suspend the rule which prohibits suspension. It seems to me, Mr. President, we might as well wipe out the rules at once, because if this precedent is established to accommodate this case, we can at any time the occasion arises wipe out the rules by two motions—one for the rule which forbids suspension, and the second for the rule which stands in the way. I can see no use of rules at all if this can be done.

Mr. McCALLUM. I don't suppose the committee intended to do what the gentleman says they have done. There should be no such construction placed upon it.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: It seems to me that the ruling of the Chair, in this instance, was correct. We have here rule sixty, which says that certain rules cannot be suspended. The rule which we propose to suspend is one that can only be suspended, under the rules, by a two-thirds vote and one day's notice. Now, if you can get around that rule by suspending rule sixty, why, rule sixty means just nothing at all. It means nothing at all. And if that rule is to have any force and effect here at all, it must not be suspended on every occasion that it is found to stand in the way of the accomplishment of some particular thing. I think the decision of the Chair, in this instance, was entirely correct, otherwise, the rule is a dead letter and means nothing at all.

Mr. BARNES. Mr. President: I do not see any reason why the rule should be suspended in favor of Santa Clara. All the gentleman requires to get the instrument properly before the Convention, is to take the instrument to pieces, and introduce each article separately, and have them referred to the proper committees. There are other gentlemen here who have had to do this in order to get their Constitutions before the committees. I think Mr. Beerstecher is right. In no instance do I think the rules should be suspended for the purpose of allowing one gentleman to introduce in solido a Constitution for the State of California. If it can be done in any other way in conformity with the rules we will help him.

Mr. FILCHER. Mr. President: With all deference to the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, notwithstanding I would like very much to be placed in possession of a copy of his Constitution, I hope that the motion to suspend the rules will not prevail. As I understand from declarations made here there are some twenty drafts of Constitutions held by various members of this body. It seems to me, Mr. President, that we cannot afford to do it. If we suspend the rules and receive the Constitution drafted by Mr. Laine in its entirety, under our rules we must print it as a whole, and we will establish a precedent that will compel us to print the twenty Constitutions. I desire that members should see the bearing of this thing before they vote. I would like, for my part, to have the benefit of the knowledge and experience of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine, but I think he can afford to come under the same rule that the rest of us have to.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I raise the point of order: can rule sixty be suspended?

The PRESIDENT. It may be suspended by the Convention.

Mr. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope this rule will not be suspended, because if we adopt the precedent of suspending rules which stand in the way, upon every occasion of seeming necessity, where will we land. There will be absolutely no protection for the Convention, if we lay down the precedent that rules are only made to be broken. This rule reads that no standing rule shall be suspended except by a two-thirds vote and one day's notice being given. If that language means anything, it means that the only possible way to suspend this rule is to give one day's notice and then rescind or change it by a two-thirds vote. I hope this Convention will not stultify itself by permitting the suspension of that rule.

Mr. WICKES. Mr. President: I trust this rule will not be suspended in order to give the gentleman from Santa Clara a chance to get in his Constitution. I think he can get it through another channel.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I move to suspend the further consideration of this order.

The PRESIDENT. The question is upon suspending rule sixty.

The motion was lost.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Now, Mr. President, I move to suspend the further consideration of order number seven, and proceed with the next order of business. The reason I make this motion is that the table of the Secretary is loaded with matter which it will require three or four days to print, and we might as well suspend the further consideration for the present at least.

Mr. WHITE. I move that the resolution be sent to the table, because if it was adopted it would be an act of injustice to those whose propositions have not been reached, and they would be cut off from getting their propositions before the Convention.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on laying the motion on the table.

The motion prevailed.

The Secretary proceeded to call over the list of members.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

Mr. LAVIGNE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to compulsory education:

Resolved, That a system of compulsory education for children under the age of fourteen years should be adopted, and all books used in the public schools, academies, colleges, and universities of this State shall be furnished free of charge to the pupils of said schools, academies, colleges, and universities under the control of this State.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

THE VETO POWER.

Mr. LEWIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to the "veto power of Governor."

Proposition to amend section seventeen, article four, by adding the subjoined:

The Governor shall have power to disapprove of any section in a bill passed by the Legislature, or any part of said bill, and the part or parts of the bill approved shall be the law, and the part or parts disapproved shall be void unless repassed according to the foregoing rules and limitations prescribed by said section.

Referred to the Committee on the Executive Department.

LAND MONOPOLY.

Mr. LINDOW introduced a proposition in relation to vested rights and the prohibition of land monopoly.

Mr. VAN DYKE (pending the reading). I raise the point of order, that the proposition is not in the form required by the rules.

The PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken, and the document will be returned to the author.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I move that we do now postpone the further consideration of order number seven, and if gentlemen will only consider——

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman, Mr. Reynolds, made a motion a few moments ago to the same effect, which motion was voted down, and now he renews it again. I think he is out of order.

The PRESIDENT. Other business has intervened since the motion was made, and the motion is in order.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: If gentlemen will only consider this subject, they will be ready to vote for the postponement of the further consideration——

The PRESIDENT. Debate is out of order. These resolutions and propositions are to be received without debate, and referred. The motion is in order, but debate is out of order. The question is on the motion to postpone the consideration of this order of business.

The motion was lost.

RELATIVE TO DIVORCES.

Mr. MANSFIELD introduced the following proposition to amend section twenty-six, article four, of the present Constitution, in relation to divorce:

Resolved, That section twenty-six, of article four, of the present Constitution, be so amended as to read as follows:

No divorce shall be granted by the Legislature of this State, nor by the Courts thereof, except for adultery.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE GRANTED.

Mr. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I am obliged to ask a favor of this Convention, and that is an indefinite leave of absence. I have two entire Constitutions drawn [laughter], and if I can be allowed this time I can look over them and see what to leave out. As I am trying to get up some homesteads for poor men, I know the members will look favorably on my request. I have not been able to hear a word that has gone on here to-day. Four or five days will have to elapse before this matter can be printed, and I ask this Convention to allow me to go away.

There being objections raised, the question was put to a vote of the Convention, and on a standing vote, leave of absence was granted, ayes 103, a clear majority.

Mr. ESTEE. Mr. President: I would like to have two days leave of absence. It is absolutely necessary for me to get away. I understand that there can be no printed matter presented to the Convention to amount to anything before Sunday or Monday, and I can be back here Sunday morning.

Mr. HAGER. Mr. President: I want to move an amendment, and ask leave of absence, or rather I will move that all the balance of the members have leave of absence until Monday next at one o'clock. I am willing that every one shall have the same privileges that I ask for myself. We have more business now than the printer can get through with, and we make nothing by staying here, and we had better adjourn over. I move to adjourn until Monday next at one o'clock P. M.

MR. WHITE. I move to lay the motion on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Stedman, and Beerstecher. The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

LAWS TO BE PUBLISHED IN ENGLISH.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz, introduced the following proposed amendment to section twenty-one, of article eleven, of present Constitution:

All laws, decrees, regulations, which from their nature require publication, shall be published in the English language only.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

STATE AND MUNICIPAL INDEBTEDNESS.

MR. MILLER introduced the following amendment to the Constitution, relative to State and municipal indebtedness.

Section proposed for adoption in the Constitution:

SECTION —. The State shall not have power to borrow money except for purposes of defense against invasion, or for the suppression of insurrection or rebellion. No county, city, town, or other municipal corporation shall have power to borrow money for any purpose, except for supplying cities or towns of more than five thousand inhabitants with water, and no indebtedness for that purpose shall be incurred until authorized by a vote of a majority of the legal voters of the city or town to be affected thereby; but nothing herein shall be so construed as to prohibit the Legislature from authorizing the State, or any county, city, or town to pay its existing bonded indebtedness by the substitution or exchange of bonds bearing a lower rate of interest than is now paid upon the existing indebtedness.

Referred to Committee on State and Municipal Indebtedness.

RELATIVE TO THE MILITIA.

MR. MILLS introduced the following proposed amendment to article seven, section one, of the Constitution of the State of California:

Add to said section first the following words, "or the Constitution of the State of California."

Also, add to said article seven an additional section, to be known as section four, and to read as follows:

SEC. 4. There shall not be any independent military company, or other armed body of persons, other than troops of the United States, but such as are expressly authorized by some law of this State; and all military companies, or other armed bodies, other than the troops or military of the United States, at any time organized or existing in this State, shall be subject to the control of the Governor, as provided by section three of this article, and it is hereby made the duty of the Legislature to fix by law the duties and liabilities of such companies and armed bodies of persons.

Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

LIMITING THE AMOUNT OF STATE TAX.

MR. MORELAND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, to limit amount of State tax.

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. The State tax on taxable property, exclusive of the tax necessary to pay the bonded debt of the State, shall not exceed forty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation; and whenever the taxable property of the State shall amount to seven hundred million dollars the rate shall not exceed thirty cents.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

IN REGARD TO BANKS.

MR. MORELAND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in regard to banking institutions.

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. It shall be a crime, the nature and punishment of which shall be prescribed by law, for any President, Director, Manager, Cashier, or other officer of any banking institution, to receive or assent to the reception of deposits, or create or assent to the creation of debts by such banking institution, after he shall have had knowledge of the fact that it is insolvent or in failing circumstances; and any officer, agent, or manager shall be individually responsible for such deposits so received, and all such debts so created with his assent.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

IN REGARD TO A STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

MR. MORSE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to a State Board of Health:

The Legislature shall provide by law for the maintenance and efficiency of a State Board of Health.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. O'Donnell was granted leave of absence until Monday.

RIGHTS OF WIFE AS ADMINISTRATRIX.

MR. NASON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the right of the wife to administer on the estate of a deceased husband.

Proposition to amend section fourteen, of article eleven, of the present Constitution, by addition of the following:

And also giving the surviving wife the right to administer on the estate of her husband without giving bonds, whenever the property belonging to the estate has been acquired by the joint efforts of herself and husband.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

THE SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. NASON introduced the following proposition to amend section two (2), of article four (4), of the Constitution, relative to Legislative Department.

Amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be quadrennial, and shall commence at twelve (12) o'clock M., on Wednesday next after the first Monday in January next ensuing the election of its members, unless the Governor of the State shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than one hundred days.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATING TO LAND TENURES.

MR. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to land tenures and limitation of ownership:

Resolved, That the following provisions regarding land tenures and limitation of ownership of land, in the future, should be adopted as part of the Constitution of this State:

SECTION 1. Perpetuities and monopolies are contrary to the genius of a free government, and shall never be allowed; nor shall the law of primogeniture or entailments ever be in force in this State.

SEC. 2. All lands within the State are declared to be allodial, and feudal tenures are prohibited. Leases and grants of land for a longer term than ten years, in which rent or service of any kind shall be reserved, and all fines and like restraints upon alienation, reserved in any grant of land hereafter made, are declared to be void. No lessee shall sublet any portion of the land held in his name.

SEC. 3. No person other than citizens, or those who have declared their intentions to become such, shall ever acquire or own, either by purchase or otherwise, real property in this State; and in case any alien dies possessed of real property in this State, contrary to this provision, such property shall escheat to the State. Nor shall any lands in this State be held in trust for any alien; but the creation of any trust in lands for the benefit of an alien shall at once escheat the land to the State.

SEC. 4. No person shall forever hereafter be permitted to acquire, in any manner, more than six hundred and forty (640) acres of land in this State. Copartnerships, joint, or other ownership of lands, shall not be allowed contrary to this provision. No person who dies possessed of landed property in this State shall have the right to will or devise more than six hundred and forty (640) acres of land to any one heir; otherwise the said will shall be void; provided, however, that all land over and above the six hundred and forty (640) acres so devised to each lawful heir, of which such deceased person died lawfully possessed, shall be sold to the highest bidders for cash, in quantities not exceeding six hundred and forty (640) acres each, and the proceeds divided equally among the lawful heirs.

SEC. 5. Actual occupation and continuous use for agricultural purposes during a period of one year shall constitute a title to the ownership of land in this State. Tracts of land of over six hundred and forty (640) acres in extent, which shall remain unoccupied and unused for agricultural purposes during a period of one year, shall be open to the occupation and use of citizens of the United States, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty (160) acres; provided, if it shall appear that any other person has previous title to such tract of land, the party occupying and using the same shall pay to said person the assessed value of the property.

SEC. 6. No more than one hundred and sixty (160) acres of land shall hereafter be granted or patented by the State, in any manner, to any one person. No grant or patent of lands by the State shall hereafter be made otherwise than upon the basis of actual settlement and use. No land scrip or land location certificates shall ever be issued in this State.

Referred to the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption.

THE OWNERSHIP OF WATER.

MR. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to rivers and lakes:

Resolved, That the persistent attempts to monopolize Nature's free gift to all, water, demand the insertion of the following emphatic declaration in the Constitution:

SECTION 1. All the rivers and fresh water lakes within the boundaries of this State are common property, and shall be controlled by the government for public uses alone.

Referred to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE.

MR. REED introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the elective franchise:

ARTICLE —.

No person shall have the right to vote, or be eligible to office under the Constitution of this State, who shall not be able to read the Constitution of this State and write his name; provided, however, that the provisions of this amendment shall not apply to any person prevented by physical disability from complying with its requisitions, nor to any person who now has the right to vote, nor to any person who shall be sixty years of age or upward at the time this amendment shall take effect.

Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

MR. REED introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

SECTION —. No money shall be drawn from the State treasury for the benefit of any religious or theological institution.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF CERTAIN CORPORATIONS.

MR. RHODES introduced the following proposed amendments to the Constitution, creating a Board to supervise and prescribe the duties, powers, and liabilities of certain corporations, and for other purposes:

Resolved, That the following sections be appropriately numbered and incorporated into the proposed Constitution:

SECTION —. A State Board of Supervisors shall be formed, to consist of seven members. The Attorney-General and the Surveyor-General shall be ex officio members of such Board. One member shall be elected by the qualified voters of the State at large, and one member in each Congressional District by the qualified voters thereof. The five Supervisors to be elected as herein provided, shall be elected at the same time as the Governor of the State, and shall hold their office for the term of four years, and until their successors shall have been elected and qualified.

SEC. —. No person shall be elected Supervisor who, at the time of his election, is a stockholder in, or officer or employé of any banking company, insurance company, railroad company, or other incorporated company doing business in this State for profit. When any Supervisor, elected as provided in section —— of this article, shall become interested, either as stockholder, officer, or employé of any company named in this section, he shall thereby become ineligible as a member of the Board of Supervisors, and his seat therein shall then become vacant.

SEC. —. The Governor of the State shall, by appointment, fill any vacancy occurring in the Board of Supervisors, but in making such appointment no Congressional District shall be deprived of its representative in the Board. The person so appointed shall hold his office until the next general election, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

SEC. —. The State Board of Supervisors shall have power, and it shall be the duty of the Board:

First—To sit as a State Board of Equalization, to equalize and adjust assessments made in the several counties of the State for the purpose of taxation, under regulations to be prescribed by law.

Second—To supervise the public institutions of the State, and exercise such powers in relation thereto as may be conferred upon the Board by law.

Third—To examine into and report upon the condition of all banking institutions, insurance companies, and other incorporated companies doing business for profit in the State, exercising therein, among other functions, those of Bank Commissioner and Insurance Commissioner.

Fourth—To fix and determine rates to be charged for freights and fares by all railroad companies within this State, and to classify the different commodities carried as freight on such railroads.

Fifth—To prescribe such rules for the government and control of such railroad, and other incorporated companies, as may be necessary to protect the people of the State against unjust exactions, favoritism, and other discriminations.

Sixth—To file in the office of the County Clerk of each of the several counties of this State a schedule of freights and fares as fixed by said Board, as often as the same shall be changed, showing the classifications and rates to be charged for each class; and it shall be lawful for all railroad companies in this State to charge and receive the rates fixed upon by such Board for freight and for passenger fare, and none other.

Seventh—The Board shall have such further powers and shall perform such further duties as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. —. The Board of Supervisors shall keep an office at the Capitol of the State, and shall meet as often as the public good may require, but not less often than once in each month. It shall organize by electing a President and Vice President from its own members, and a Secretary, who may or may not be taken from its own members. Four members shall constitute a quorum to transact business.

SEC. —. The five members of the Board, to be elected as herein provided, shall receive as compensation for their services each the sum of —— dollars per annum, payable as the salaries of other State officers are paid, and the further sum of —— cents per mile for every mile necessarily traveled in the performance of their duties. Each member, before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, shall take the accustomed oath of office.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

CONCERNING VACANCIES IN OFFICE.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning vacancies in office:

Amend section eight, article five, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 8. When any office shall from any cause become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have the power to fill such vacancy for the unexpired term, if an executive office; if a United States Senator, he shall fill the vacancy by granting a commission which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Legislature; if a judicial officer, he shall fill such vacancy by issuing a commission until the next election for judicial officers, when an election shall be had for the unexpired term.

Referred to the Committee on Executive Department.

CONCERNING THE VETO POWER.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the veto power:

Amend section sixteen, article five, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 16. The Governor shall have the power to disapprove of any item or items of any bill making appropriations of money, embracing distinct items, and the part or parts of the bill approved shall be the law, and the item or items of appropriation disapproved shall be void, unless repassed according to the rules and limitations prescribed for the passage of other bills over the Executive veto.

Referred to the Committee on Executive Department.

CONCERNING TAXATION.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning taxation:

Amend section thirteen, article eleven, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 13. Taxation shall be uniform and equal throughout the State. All property of every kind and character, whether land, notes, certificates of deposit, bonds, or other securities in this State, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law; but Assessors and Collectors of State, county, city, town, or district taxes, shall be elected or appointed, as the Legislature may direct.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

MR. SMITH, of Kern. I rise to a point of order. There are more than two propositions.

MR. SHOEMAKER. They only relate to one subject.

Objection withdrawn.

TAXATION OF CORPORATE PROPERTY.

MR. SHOEMAKER also introduced the following amendment to section fourteen, article eleven, of the Constitution, relative to taxing corporations:

Amend section fourteen, article eleven, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 14. The power to tax corporations and corporate property, or to regulate the affairs thereof, shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract or grant to which the State may be a party.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

PAY OF STATE OFFICERS.

MR. SHOEMAKER also introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the compensation of State officers:

Amend section twenty-one, article five, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 21. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, and Superintendent of Public Instruction shall each, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected, but neither of those officers shall receive for his own use any fees for the performance of his official duties. The Attorney-General shall not practice in any Court other than the Supreme Court, except in the discharge of his official duties.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

THE PREAMBLE.

MR. SHURTLEFF introduced the following resolution, in reference to the Preamble to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the Preamble in the present Constitution of this State is concise, appropriate, and comprehensive, and that it is the sense of this Convention that it should be incorporated in the new Constitution without alteration or amendment.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Rill of Rights.

RESTRICTIONS ON THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

The Committee of the Legislative Department be requested to inquire into the propriety of incorporating into the Constitution the following provision:

The Legislature shall not ratify any amendments proposed by Congress to the Constitution of the United States until after the same shall have been submitted to the voters of the State at a general election, and be ratified by a majority of said voters.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

REDEMPTION AFTER TAX SALES.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to redemption from tax sales of real estate:

The Legislature shall provide, in all cases where it may be necessary to sell real estate for the non-payment of taxes, or special assessments for State, county, municipal, or other purpose, that a return of such unpaid taxes or assessments shall be made to some general officer of the county, having authority to receive State and county taxes, and there shall be no sale of said property for any of said taxes or assessments but by said officer, upon the order or judgment of some Court of record. The right of redemption from all sales of real estate for the non-payment of taxes, or special assessments of any character whatever, shall exist in favor of owners and persons interested in real estate for a period of not less than two years from such sales thereof. And the Legislature shall provide by law for a reasonable notice to be given to the owners or parties interested, by publication in the nearest newspaper of the fact of the sale of the property for such taxes or assessments, and when the time of redemption shall expire; provided, the occupants shall in all cases be served with personal notice before the time of redemption expires.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

A JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

MR. SMITH, of Kern, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the Judicial Department:

Proposed amendment to article six of the Constitution, on the Judiciary:

ARTICLE VI.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, in Municipal Courts, in Justices of the Peace, and in such other inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices. For appellate jurisdiction from the District Courts, the Supreme Court shall be divided into three sections of three Justices each; and for appellate jurisdiction from said sections, the said Justices to preside in bank. The presence of five Justices in bank shall be necessary for the transaction of the business of the Supreme Court in bank, except such business as may be done at chambers, and the concurrence of five Justices in bank shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment therein. The presence of two Justices sitting in each section of the Supreme Court shall be necessary for the transaction of the business of a section, except such business as may be done at chambers; and the concurrence of two Justices in a section shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment therein. When only two Justices sit in the hearing of any case in a section of the Court, and they disagree, and the case is not appealed to the Supreme Court in bank, the judgment below shall stand affirmed. Each Justice shall preside with the section of the Court which is within the Supreme Judicial District in which he was elected, except when presiding in bank, and except when called upon for temporary purpose to preside in another section by the Justice of another section. The powers and jurisdiction of each of said sections shall be equal and concurrent.

SEC. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State, by districts, as hereinafter provided, at the general State elections. The first election for Justices of the Supreme Court shall be held on the first Wednesday in September, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. The Justices shall hold their offices for the term of twenty years from the first Monday in January next after their election, except that those elected in each Supreme Judicial District at the first election, who, at their first meeting, shall so classify themselves by lot that one Justice in each section shall go out of office in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-four, and every four years thereafter. The Justice having the shortest time to serve in the section to which he belongs, shall be the presiding Justice of that section of the Supreme Court. In case of a vacancy from any cause in the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor shall appoint some suitable person, resident of the same Supreme Judicial District, to fill such vacancy, who shall hold the place made vacant for the unexpired time for which the former incumbent was elected, or, by lot, was chosen. The Chief Justice shall be chosen by a majority of the Justices in bank, from the presiding Justices of the sections, at the first meeting and organization of the Supreme Court in bank, and thereafter at the expiration of the term of office of the Chief Justice as a Justice of the Supreme Court, and to fill any vacancy in the office of Chief Justice.

SEC. 4. The Supreme Court in bank shall have appellate jurisdiction from the three sections of the Supreme Court, in the following cases:

First—In cases where a construction of the Federal or State Constitution was in dispute, or in which the constitutionality of any statute or municipal ordinance was necessarily in dispute and decided.

Second—In cases where one of the Justices of one of the sections of the Supreme Court dissents from the decision of the majority of that section, and gives a written opinion showing the reasons of his dissent.

Third—In cases where either of said sections overrules a prior decision of the highest Court of the State not previously overruled by the same Court.

Fourth—In cases where one of said sections decides a principle contrary to the decision of another of said sections.

Fifth—In all criminal cases determined in either section of the Supreme Court where the judgment is death or imprisonment for life.

Sixth—To such other cases of rare importance as the Legislature may by law prescribe. The Supreme Court in bank, and in said sections, shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, both in bank and in sections. Each of the Justices shall have the power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself or in the Supreme Court, either in bank or in any section, or before any District Court. The Supreme Court in its several sections shall have appellate jurisdiction, in all cases arising in the District Courts for the counties within the respective Supreme Judicial Districts, to the sections within such Supreme Judicial Districts respectively; but cases may be transferred from one section or Supreme Judicial District to another section or district whenever it may be deemed proper by a majority of the Justices of the section, or by virtue of such further regulations as the Legislature may prescribe, or by the consent and written stipulation of the parties to the cause, through their respective attorneys at law.

SEC. 5. The State shall be divided as equally as practicable according to population, without dividing a county, except where a county may form more than one district, into three judicial districts, to be known as Supreme Judicial Districts, and numbered from one to three. One of said sections shall hold its sessions and transact its business at a locality in such of said judicial districts which, as the Legislature shall prescribe, shall be most accessible from all parts of each district as may be, and be nearest to the greatest population and amount of business in each district. Until the Legislature shall by law select other localities, the City of Sacramento, the City and County of San Francisco, and the City of Los Angeles, respectively, shall be the localities where said sections shall hold their sessions and transact their business in their judicial districts. Until a reapportionment of the State, and the Legislature shall reform the Supreme Judicial Districts upon said reapportionment, they shall be as follows: The First Supreme Judicial District shall be composed of the Counties of ——; the Second Supreme Judicial District shall be composed of the City and County of San Francisco: and the Third Supreme Judicial District shall be composed of the Counties of ——.

SEC. 6. Each county is a judicial district for District Courts, for which District Judges shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, or city and county, at the general State election next after the adoption of this Constitution; provided, that in every county, or city and county, containing less than twenty thousand inhabitants, shall elect one District Judge. Counties, or cities and counties, containing more than twenty thousand inhabitants, may elect such further number of District Judges as shall be prescribed by law, not exceeding one for every twenty thousand inhabitants and one for such fraction as shall exceed ten thousand, which shall be the number for the purposes of the next election. Where there is more than one such Court in a county, or city and county, they shall be numbered as the Legislature shall direct. The District Judges shall hold their offices for the term of ten years from the first Monday of January, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. In districts where there shall be more than one District Judge, a Presiding Judge shall be elected by lot, who shall distribute the labor performed by each. Each District Court shall be held by one District Judge, and the Courts shall be separate, but the judgments and orders of each shall be entered and enforced as of the District Court of each county, or city and county.

SEC. 7. The District Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to three hundred and fifty dollars; and in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for; also in actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance, and all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for; also of all matters of probate; and said Courts shall have the powers of naturalization and to issue papers therefor. Said Courts and their Judges shall have the power to issue writs of habeas corpus, on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody, in their respective counties. Said Courts shall be always open (legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted, and during such vacations as the Legislature may see proper to grant, never to exceed fifteen days), and their original jurisdiction shall extend to all parts of the State. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases arising in Municipal Courts, in all criminal cases arising in Justices of the Peace, and such other inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in incorporated cities and towns, and in all civil cases arising in such inferior Courts, in which the demand, exclusive of interest, exceeds the sum of one hundred dollars; all of said appeals to be taken only on questions of law, and only to the District Court of the county in which the appeal is taken. The said District Courts shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, injunction, prohibition, certiorari, quo warranto, and all other writs necessary and proper to complete the exercise of their jurisdiction. In case of sickness, absence, or other incapacity of a District Judge, his Court may be held by any other District Judge of the State.

SEC. 8. Each city, town, and village in the State, having over five hundred inhabitants shall have as many Municipal Courts, and there shall be established in towns and villages having five hundred inhabitants and under, and in townships and districts outside of towns, cities, and villages, such Justices of the Peace as the Legislature shall prescribe. The jurisdiction of Municipal Courts shall extend to all cases where the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, does not exceed three hundred and fifty dollars; to cases of forcible entry and detainer, their jurisdiction shall be concurrent with that of the District Courts; to the foreclosure of mechanics' liens and mortgages, where the amount claimed, exclusive of interest, does not exceed three hundred and fifty dollars; and to such cases of misdemeanor and special cases as shall be fixed by law. The jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace shall extend to all cases where the amount claimed does not exceed one hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, and to such cases of misdemeanor and special cases as may be provided by law. Judges of Municipal Courts shall hold their offices for four years, and Justices of the Peace shall hold their offices for two years.

SEC. 9. The Supreme Court, the District Courts, and such other Courts as the Legislature may declare, shall be Courts of record. The Legislature shall fix by law the jurisdiction of such inferior Courts as it may establish in incorporated cities and towns, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the Judges thereof; provided, that the jurisdiction of such inferior Courts shall extend to the trial of misdemeanors and cases arising under ordinances of such cities and towns. The times and places of holding the several Courts of record, except as herein provided, shall be provided by law. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace, Justices or Judges of such inferior Courts as may be established in incorporated cities and towns, and Commissioners, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office.

SEC. 10. The unfinished business remaining in the Probate Court of the City and County of San Francisco shall be apportioned between the several District Courts therein established under this Constitution, in such manner as the Legislature shall direct.

SEC. 11. The Supreme Court and the District Courts now in existence are continued until the first Monday in January, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, but after said first Monday in January next their powers shall only extend to the determination of such cases or proceedings pending therein as may have been submitted for decision prior to that time; and for that purpose the Justices and Judges of said Courts shall hold their offices until the first day of April, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy ——, but said Justices and Judges shall not, by reason of so holding over, be ineligible to hold any office under this Constitution during said holding over.

SEC. 12. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall appoint a Reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court rendered in each of the sections thereof, and in bank, who shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars.

SEC. 13. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient; and all opinions shall be free for publication by any person.

SEC. 14. The Justices of the Supreme Court and the District Judges shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected, except in case of resignation, and then not until two years after such resignation. In addition to the oath of office, they shall, before entering upon their offices, take and subscribe an oath that they will not, during such term, accept any Federal office, other than a judicial office.

SEC. 15. The Justices of the Supreme Court and District Judges shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall be elected; provided, that District Judges shall be paid out of the county treasury of their respective counties.

SEC. 16. The Justices of the Supreme Court and the District Judges shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected.

SEC. 17. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may state the testimony and declare the law.

SEC. 18. The style of all process shall be: "The People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

SEC. 19. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, of County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, Assessors, and other necessary officers, and shall fix by law their duties and compensations. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment by the several Courts of record of one or more Commissioners, with authority to perform chamber business connected with the administration of justice, as may be prescribed by law. Until the Legislature provides different offices, and their terms of office, other than Judges, the same county offices, and their terms, as now exist, shall continue as if this Constitution had not been adopted.

SEC. 20. The Justices of the Supreme Court, and the Judges of the Municipal Courts, shall not practice law, and shall not act as counsel, nor appear as attorney at law, in any case or proceeding in any Court, during their continuance in office.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

IN REGARD TO PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

Mr. SMITH, of Kern, introduced the following proposed amendment to article tenth of the Constitution, in regard to private corporations.

ARTICLE X.

SECTION 1. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act. All general laws passed pursuant to this section may be altered from time to time or repealed.

SEC. 2. Each stockholder shall be individually and personally liable for his proportion of all debts and liabilities of a corporation created or incurred while he remains such stockholder.

SEC. 3. The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be abridged, or so construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of corporations and subjecting them to public use, the same as the property of individuals; and the exercise of the police power of the State shall never be abridged, or so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals, or the general well-being of the State.

SEC. 4. In all elections for Directors or managers of any incorporated company, each shareholder shall have the right to cast as many votes in the aggregate as shall equal the number of shares so held by him or her in said company, multiplied by the number of Directors or managers to be elected at such election; and each shareholder may cast the whole number of votes, either in person or by proxy, for one candidate, or distribute such votes among two or more candidates; and such Directors or managers shall not be elected in any other manner.

SEC. 5. No corporation shall engage in any business other than that expressly authorized in its charter; nor shall it take or hold any real estate except such as may be necessary and proper for its legitimate business.

SEC. 6. No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds, except for money, labor done, or property actually received; and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock of corporations shall not be increased, except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding the two thirds in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held, after sixty days' notice given in pursuance of law.

SEC. 7. No railroad or telegraph company shall consolidate with or hold an interest in the stock or bonds of any other railroad or telegraph company; nor shall the same persons be officers in corporations owning competing lines of railroads or telegraphs.

SEC. 8. No railroad or telegraph company shall lease or in any manner manage or control the railroad or telegraph line of another company.

SEC. 9. All individuals, associations, and corporations shall have equal rights to have persons and property transported over railroads, and no undue or unreasonable discrimination shall be made in charges for or in facilities for transportation of freight or passengers within the State. Persons and property transported over any railroad shall be delivered at any station at charges not exceeding the charges for transportation of persons and property of the same class in the same direction, to any more distant station; but excursion and commutation tickets may be issued at special rates.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall pass statutes to correct abuses and prevent unjust discrimination and extortion in the rates of freights and fares on the railroads in the State, and provide for the enforcement of such statutes by adequate penalties, to the extent, if necessary for that purpose, of forfeiture of property and franchise; and shall from time to time pass laws establishing reasonable maximum and minimum rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight on said railroads, and enforce all such laws by adequate penalties, to the extent of forfeitures, if necessary.

SEC. 11. Every railroad corporation organized in this State shall maintain an office therein, where transfers of its stock shall be made, and where its books shall be kept for inspection by any stockholder or creditor of such corporation, in which books shall be recorded the amount of capital stock subscribed or paid in, and by whom, the names of the owners of its stock, and the amounts owned by them respectively, the transfers of said stock, and the names and places of residence of its officers.

SEC. 12. All railroads shall be public highways, and all railroad companies shall be common carriers. Any corporation organized for the purpose shall have the right to construct and operate a railroad between any points within this State, and to connect at the State line with railroads in other States. Every railroad company shall have the right with its roads to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad; and shall receive and transport each other's passengers, tonnage, and cars, loaded or empty, without delay or discrimination, in such manner as may be prescribed by general statute.

SEC. 13. No President, Director, officer, or employé of any railroad company shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in the furnishing of material or supplies to such company, or in the business of transportation as a common carrier of freight or passengers over the works owned, leased, controlled, or worked by such company.

SEC. 14. No railroad, railway, or other transportation company, shall grant free passes, or passes at a discount, to any public officer.

SEC. 15. No foreign corporation shall do any business in this State without having one or more known places of business, and an authorized agent or agents in the same upon whom process may be served.

SEC. 16. The rolling stock and all other movable property belonging to any railroad company, corporation, or individual in this State, shall be considered personal property, and shall be liable to execution and sale, in the same manner as the personal property of individuals; and the Legislature shall pass no law exempting such property from execution and sale.

SEC. 17. No railroad or other corporation, or the lessees, purchasers, or managers of any railroad corporation, shall consolidate the stock, property, or franchises of such corporation with, or lease, or purchase the works or franchise of, or in any way control any railway or railroad corporation owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line; nor shall any officer of such railroad corporation act as an officer of any other railroad corporation owning or having the control of a parallel or competing line. The question whether railroads are parallel or competing lines shall, when demanded, be decided by a jury, as in other civil cases.

SEC. 18. If any railroad company, organized under the laws of this State, shall consolidate, by sale or otherwise, with any railroad company organized under the laws of any other State, or of the United States, the same shall not thereby become a foreign corporation; but the Courts of this State shall retain in all matters which may arise as if said consolidation had not taken place. In no case shall any consolidation take place, except upon public notice of at least sixty days to all stockholders in such manner as may be provided by law.

SEC. 19. No law shall be passed for the benefit of a railroad, or other corporation, or any individual, or association of individuals, retrospective in its operation, or which imposes on the people of any county or municipal subdivision of the State, a new liability in respect to transactions or considerations already passed.

SEC. 20. No law shall be passed granting the right to construct and operate a street railroad within any city, town, village, or on any public highway, without first acquiring the consent of the local authorities having control of the street or highway proposed to be occupied by such street railroad; and the franchise so granted shall not be transferred without similar assent first obtained.

SEC. 21. No railroad corporation in existence at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, or any individual, shall have the benefit of any future legislation, except on condition of complete acceptance of all the provisions of this Constitution applicable to railroads.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

SECTARIAN TEACHING.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco, offered the following resolution, concerning the public schools:

Resolved, That no sectarian book, or sectarian creed, shall ever be allowed in any of the public schools of this State.

Mr. ROLFE. I raise the point of order that it does not conform to the requirements of the rule.

THE PRESIDENT. Return it to the author as not in the proper form.

MR. SMITH also offered a resolution prohibiting the increase of salaries for State officers.

MR. ROLFE. I raise the same point of order, that it is not in proper form.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is not in the proper form, and the Secretary will return it to the author.

TAXATION.

MR. STEDMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be instructed to report the following section to be incorporated into the new Constitution:

SECTION —. Banks now existing, or to be hereafter created, and all bankers, shall be taxed by such equitable rules, based upon capital employed and amount of business done by them, as will require them to share equally with other business interests in the burden of taxation.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

LEGISLATIVE POWERS.

MR. STEDMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to legislative powers:

Resolved, That the following section be referred to the Committee on Legislative Powers for insertion in article on Legislative Department:

SECTION —. The assent of three fourths of the members elected to each house of the Legislature shall be required to every bill appropriating the public money or public property for any purpose.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

IN REFERENCE TO SUBSIDIES.

MR. STRONG introduced the following proposed amendment to article two, section ten:

No county, township, city, town, village, or other political or municipal division of the State, shall become a stockholder, either directly or indirectly, in any joint stock company, corporation, or association, or shall raise money for, or loan its credit to, or in aid of, any company, corporation, or association, or shall purchase or contract, or in any way aid in purchasing or constructing, any railroad, or appurtenances thereto belonging.

Referred to Committee on City, County, and Town Organizations.

ON SUFFRAGE.

MR. STUART introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

The Constitution shall contain the following provisions in relation to the right of suffrage:

Every male citizen, twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections:

First—He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one month.

Second—He shall have resided in the State one year.

Third—He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

Fourth—If twenty-two years of age or upwards, he shall have paid within two years a State or county tax, which shall have been assessed at least two months, and paid at least one month before elections.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

Ruled out of order.

MR. SWEASEY introduced a resolution in relation to the salary of State officers, which was ruled out of order, as not in the proper form.

HOURS OF LABOR.

MR. THOMPSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the hours of State labor, etc:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. All offices, State, county, and municipal, shall remain open for the transaction of business eight hours each business day.

SEC. 2. Eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work in each and every department of the State, county, and municipal governments.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

ON SUFFRAGE.

MR. TULLY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to suffrage.

Incorporate the following in the Constitution:

The Legislature of the State of California shall pass no law requiring an educational qualification for suffrage.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

MR. TULLY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the taking of private property for public use.

Amend section eight, article one, of the Constitution, as follows:

Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation be first made, or secured by a deposit of money to the owner, and such compensation shall be ascertained by a jury of twelve men, without deduction for benefit to any property of the owner, in a Court of record, as shall be prescribed by law.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

TAXATION OF CHURCH PROPERTY.

MR. VACQUEREL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the taxation of church property:

Resolved, That all church property, of whatever nature, shall be subject to taxation. Only benevolent institutions, under the direct control of the State, shall be exempt from taxation.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

MR. VACQUEREL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the Bill of Rights:

Religious freedom being the fundamental principle of republican government, the Legislature shall not, under any consideration, enact any law giving preference to any religious sect or mode of worship.

Resolved, That no license to carry on any kind of business shall ever be granted to any Asiatic or Chinaman.

Resolved, That no Chinaman shall ever be allowed to bring suit in any Court against a white person or to testify against a white person.

Resolved, That no citizen or other person shall ever be allowed to bring suit as trustee or by assignment for any Chinaman.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

MR. WEST introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, on the subject of criminal prosecutions:

1. Prosecutions for crimes and misdemeanors may be begun by indictment found by a Grand Jury, or by information laid before a Justice of the Peace.

2. The Grand Jury shall consist of fifteen men, and an indictment may be found upon the concurrence of nine of their number.

3. The Grand Jury shall be ordered by the County Judge, at his discretion, but not oftener than once in each year.

4. An information is a writing verified by a person called a prosecutor, charging another with the commission of a crime or misdemeanor, and setting forth the facts necessary to constitute the offense.

5. Such information may be presented to a Justice of the Peace, and when such Justice has not jurisdiction to try the offense charged there shall be had a preliminary examination, in which defendant shall have right to be heard by himself and counsel.

6. Should it appear that the offense charged has been committed, and the Justice be satisfied of defendant's guilt, he shall adjudge and bind the defendant to appear before the Court having jurisdiction of the offense.

7. Upon this information, and the judgment of the Justice thereon being filed in the Court having jurisdiction, the District Attorney shall file in such Court a complaint signed by him, officially, charging the defendant with the offense for which he is held to answer. This complaint shall state the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action.

8. Upon such complaint the defendant may be tried.

9. After the defendant has been bound to appear, and within ten days thereafter, or at any time prior to filing the complaint, he shall have the right to be heard on a writ of habeas corpus before a Judge of a Court of record, and if such Judge shall find, on reviewing the evidence taken at the preliminary examination, that the defendant has been held without reasonable or probable cause, he shall order the defendant discharged, and the District Attorney shall not further prosecute the proceeding.

10. Should the information be dismissed by the Justice, after a hearing on a preliminary examination, or the defendant be so discharged on habeas corpus, no second information shall be prosecuted against the defendant on the same charge, unless the second information be approved and signed by the District Attorney of some Court having jurisdiction to try the case.

11. A person may be prosecuted by indictment for any offense of which the District or County Court has jurisdiction, although the information has been dismissed by a Justice, or the defendant discharged on habeas corpus.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

ON CORPORATIONS.

MR. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the jurisdiction of State over corporations:

Resolved, That the State, by right of eminent domain, holds supervisory jurisdiction over all railways, public highways, or toll-roads, routes of transportation; over all natural and artificial reservoirs, and water ways; and such right entitles her to regulate fares and rates, annul vested rights or call for their reversion, and to adopt such measures as will protect her people from extortion and monopolies.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

IN RELATION TO INTEREST ON MONEY.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to interest on money:

SECTION 1. No agreement, or contract, or obligation hereafter made or entered into in this State shall be of any validity whatever, or be enforced in any of the Courts of this State, or be entitled to a record, that provides, directly or indirectly, for the payment of more than seven per cent. interest on money, or for the payment of the taxes, or any part of the taxes, of the lender of money, or anything of value by the borrower upon the money or thing loaned, or that provides for the payment of the lender's attorney fees in case of a forced collection of the money or thing of value lent. And the Legislature shall enforce this provision of the Constitution by an enactment of law which shall provide for the forfeiture, by the lender of money, of at least one fourth of the money or value of the thing lent, for any attempt to evade this section by receiving a premium of any sort whatever as a condition of lending the money.

SEC. 2. All bonds and mortgages, notes and contracts for the payment of money, in existence at the date of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be subject to the rate of interest and other conditions as provided for in said instrument up to the date of their maturity, and no longer.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the Legislative Department:

The article in the new Constitution relating to the Legislature shall be as follows:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The Senate shall consist of fifteen members, and the Assembly of forty-five members, all to be elected by single districts, as hereinafter provided.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: That is evidently a very voluminous document.

MR. BARNES. I would like to know what that publication is.

MR. EDGERTON. If it has a title, I move that the title only be read.

THE PRESIDENT. There being no objections it is so ordered.

SEC. 3. The members of the Senate and Assembly shall be chosen by the qualified electors of their respective districts, under this Constitution, as follows: The first election for members of both houses of the Legislature shall be on the first Wednesday of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and their term of office shall be three years. The second election for members of the Legislature shall be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and their term of office shall be four years; and every four years thereafter, on the same day of the same month, the members of the Legislature shall continue to be chosen for the same term of office of four years.

SEC. 4. No person shall be qualified to be a member of the Legislature of the State of California except he shall have been a citizen of the United States for at least three years, and a bona fide resident of the State for the two years preceding his election, and a qualified elector in the district he represents.

SEC. 5. The first regular session of the Legislature shall commence on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty, and may continue in session for one hundred days, exclusive of Sundays, at the per diem pay for each member of six dollars. The second regular session shall commence on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, of the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, and may continue in session for sixty days at the same per diem pay for the members as that of the preceding Legislature. Thence, afterwards, at the expiration of each four years, dating from the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the Legislature shall convene in regular session, and continue as long in session as shall seem to be for the welfare of the State, and no longer; for which the members shall be paid a per diem of ten dollars for the first thirty working days, and nothing after the expiration of said thirty days.

SEC. 6. Members of the Legislature, before they enter upon their official duties, shall take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and I will faithfully discharge the duties of Senator or Assemblyman according to the best of my ability. That I have not knowingly or intentionally paid or contributed anything, or made any promise in the nature of a bribe, to directly or indirectly influence any vote at the election at which I was chosen to fill the said office; that I have not accepted, nor will I accept or receive, directly or indirectly, any money, office, promise, position, place, or thing from any corporation, company, or person, for any vote or influence I may give or withhold on any bill, resolution, or other official act." This oath, or affirmation, shall be administered by a Judge of the Supreme Court or District Court, in the hall of the house to which the member is elected; and the Secretary of State shall record said oath subscribed by each member. Any member who shall refuse to take the oath or affirmation herein presented shall thereupon forfeit his office; and every member who shall be convicted of having sworn or affirmed falsely to or in violation of said oath or affirmation, shall thereupon forfeit his office, and be disqualified thereafter from holding any office of profit or trust in this State, and may be punished as provided for perjury in other cases.

SEC. 7. At the first session of the Legislature after the adoption of this Constitution, and as often as once in ten years thereafter, it shall apportion the State into as many Congressional Districts as California is allowed members in Congress; and, also, into fifteen State Senatorial Districts and forty-five Assembly Districts. In making these apportionments, the division of counties must be avoided except where a county is entitled to two or more Assemblymen or Senators. Equality in population must also be observed as far as it is practicable, and no one county shall ever be entitled to more than three of the State Senators. Every district named in this section shall be composed of contiguous and compact territory as far as that may be practicable.

SEC. 8. For the purpose of the election to take place in the month of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, the State is hereby divided into Senate and Assembly Districts as follows:

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 9. The sessions of the Legislature shall commence at twelve o'clock on the days and years heretofore provided.

SEC. 10. The Secretary of State shall call the Senate to order at the opening of each new Senate, and preside over it until a temporary presiding officer thereof shall have been chosen and shall have taken his seat.

SEC. 11. The Attorney-General of the State shall call the Assembly to order at the opening of each new Assembly, and preside over it until a temporary presiding officer thereof shall have been chosen and taken his seat.

SEC. 12. The Senate shall choose from its own body a President, and the Assembly from its own body a Speaker.

SEC. 13. Each house shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members.

SEC. 14. A majority of the members elected to each house shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

SEC. 15. Each House shall determine the rules of its own proceedings, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member, but no member shall be twice expelled for the same offense.

SEC. 16. Each house may punish by imprisonment any person, not a member, for disorderly or contemptuous behavior in its presence, but such imprisonment shall not extend beyond that session.

SEC. 17. Each house shall keep a Journal of its own proceedings, and publish the same; and the yeas and nays of the members of either House, on any question, shall, at the request of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 18. The enacting clause of every law shall be: "The People of the State of California do enact as follows."

SEC. 19. All bills shall originate in the house of Assembly, but may be amended by the Senate.

SEC. 20. No bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each house. Every bill, having passed both houses, shall be signed by the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House, and submitted to the Governor for his approval.

SEC. 21. No Act of the Legislature shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in its title; but if any subject shall be embraced in an Act which is not expressed in its title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as is not so expressed.

SEC. 22. No law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title only, but the law revised or the section amended shall be inserted at length in the new Act, and no Act shall be revised by the repeal of a repealing Act.

SEC. 23. No Act of the Legislature shall take effect until the first day of July next after its passage, unless otherwise expressed in the last section of the Act.

PRIVILEGES AND DISABILITIES.

SEC. 24. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest while the Legislature is in session; and they shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

SEC. 25. No person elected to the Legislature shall receive any civil appointment within this State, from the Governor, the Governor and Senate, or from the Legislature, during the term for which he shall have been elected, nor within a year thereafter, under any law passed while he was a member; and all such appointments shall be void.

SEC. 26. No member of the Legislature shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract with the State, or any county, or city and county, or other municipal corporation thereof, authorized by any law passed during the term for which he shall have been elected, or within one year after the expiration of his term of office.

SEC. 27. The Legislature shall make no appropriation of money out of the treasury in any private bill.

SEC. 28. Bills making appropriations for the pay of members and officers of the Legislature, and for salaries of the officers of the State, shall contain no provision on any other subject.

SEC. 29. Bills making appropriations for the support of institutions of the State and asylums shall contain no provisions on any other subject.

SEC. 30. No money shall be drawn from the State treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation made by law.

SEC. 31. In addition to the pay heretofore provided for members of the Legislature, each member shall be entitled to receive as mileage three dollars for every twenty miles of travel to and from their residence to the place of holding the session. Each member shall also receive at each regular session an additional sum of fifty dollars, which shall be in full for all stationery used, and all postage and all other incidental expenses; and no allowance or emolument for any purpose whatever shall be made to or received by any member of either house for his use, out of the Contingent Fund or otherwise, except as herein expressly provided; and no allowance, extra pay, or emoluments, for any purpose whatever, shall ever be paid to any officer, agent, clerk, servant, or employé of either house of the Legislature, or of any committee thereof, except such per diem as may be provided for by law, not exceeding five dollars per day.

SEC. 32. The Legislature shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme in the nature of a lottery, in this State.

SEC. 33. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States in every ten years shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the Congressional and Legislative Districts.

SEC. 34. No person holding any office under the United States, or any other powers, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State government.

SEC. 35. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State; and the Legislature should, as soon as practicable, pass a law providing for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

SEC. 36. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature.

SEC. 37. Every bill shall be read at length on three different days in each house, and all amendments made thereto shall be printed for the use of the members before the final vote is taken on its passage.

SEC. 38. The Governor and Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the District Courts, shall be liable to impeachment for misdemeanor in office, but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall, nevertheless, be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment, according to law. All other officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 39. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for this purpose the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the whole number of Senators.

SEC. 40. When vacancies occur in either house, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

SEC. 41. The doors of each house shall be open, except upon such occasions as, in the opinion of the house, may require secrecy.

SEC. 42. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

SEC. 43. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to the house of the Assembly, which shall enter the same upon the Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each house present, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted) the same shall become a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law, unless the Governor within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted) shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law, in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contain several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill; in such case he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor; and the appropriations so objected to shall not take effect, unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the house of Assembly a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor.

SEC. 44. Neither the Legislature, nor any county, city and county, township, school district, or other municipal corporation, shall ever make an appropriation, or pay from any public fund whatever, or grant anything to or in aid of any religious sect, church, creed, or sectarian purpose, or help to support or sustain any school, college, or university, or other institution controlled by any religious creed, church, or sectarian denomination whatever; nor shall any grant or donation of personal property or real estate ever be made by the State, or by any city, city and county, town, or other municipal corporation, for any religious creed, church, or sectarian purpose whatever.

SEC. 45. The Legislature shall have no power to give or to lend, or to authorize the giving or lending of the credit of the State, or of any county, city and county, city, township, or other political corporation or subdivision of the State now existing, or that may be hereafter established, in aid of or to any person, association, or corporation, whether municipal or otherwise, or to pledge the credit thereof in any manner whatever for the payment of the liabilities of any individual, association, municipal or other corporation whatever, nor shall it have power to make any grant or authorize the making of any grant of any public money or thing of value to any individual, municipal or other corporation whatever; and it shall not have power to authorize the State, or any political subdivision thereof, to subscribe for stock, or to become a stockholder in any corporation whatever.

SEC. 46. The Legislature shall have no power to grant, or to authorize any county or municipal authority to grant, any extra compensation or allowance to any public officer, agent, servant, or contractor, after service has been rendered or a contract has been entered into or performed in whole or in part, nor to pay or authorize the payment of any claim hereafter created against the State, or any county or municipality of the State, under any agreement or contract made without express authority of law, and all such unauthorized agreements or contracts shall be null and void.

SEC. 47. No bill shall be considered for final passage unless the same has been reported upon by a committee and printed for the use of the members.

Sec. 48. Upon the final passage of every bill in each house, the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays aud entered upon the Journal; and no bill shall be passed unless a majority of all the members elected to each house shall vote therefor on its final passage.

Sec. 49. The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases—that is to say, changing the names of persons or places; changing county seats or locating them, except upon the organization of a new county; regulating county and township affairs; regulating the practice in Courts of justice; regulating the jurisdiction and duties of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges, and Constables: providing for changes of venue in civil or criminal cases; providing for the election of members of the Boards of Supervisors; summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries; providing for the management of common schools; the opening and conducting of elections, or designating the place of voting; the sale or mortgage of any property belonging to minors or others under disability; the protection of game or fish; chartering or licensing ferries or toll-bridges; remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures; creating, increasing, or decreasing salaries, fees, percentage, or allowance of public officers during the term for which said officers are elected or appointed; changing the law of descent; authorising or directing the payment of money by any county, city and county, or other municipal corporation. All legislation of this character, and which is strictly local in its operation, and which cannot be beneficially reached by general laws, shall be intrusted to the Board of Supervisors of the respective counties of the State, and there guarded from abuse by appropriate State legislation.

Sec. 50. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act, except for municipal purposes. All general laws and special Acts, passed pursuant to this section, may be altered, from time to time, or repealed.

Sec. 51. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the corporators, and other means, as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 52. The term "corporation," when used in this Constitution, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships. And all corporations shall have the right to sue, and shall be subject to be sued, in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons.

Sec. 53. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but associations may be formed, under general laws, for the deposit of gold and silver; but no such association shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, or the paper of any bank, to circulate as money.

Sec. 54. The Legislature of this State shall prohibit by law any person or persons, association or company, or corporation from exercising the privilege of creating paper to circulate as money.

Sec. 55. Each stockholder of a corporation or joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for his proportion of all its debts and liabilities.

Sec. 56. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses in assessments and in contracting debts by such municipal corporations.

Sec. 57. The Legislature shall never grant divorces, but divorces may be obtained by civil action in the District Courts for the causes provided by law, but no person from whom a divorce is obtained shall, during the lifetime of the person obtaining the divorce, be allowed again to contract a marriage. This provision shall be enforced by suitable legislation.

Sec. 58. A member of the Legislature who shall solicit, demand, or receive, or consent to receive, directly or indirectly, for himself or for another, from any company, corporation, or person, any money, office, appointment, employment, testimonial, reward, thing of value or enjoyment, or of personal advantage, or promise thereof, for his vote or official influence, or for withholding the same, or with an understanding, expressed or implied, that his vote or official action shall be in any way influenced thereby, or who shall solicit or demand any such money or other advantage, matter, or thing aforesaid for another, as the consideration of the payment or promise of such money, advantage, matter, or thing to another, shall be held guilty of bribery within the meaning of this Constitution, and shall incur the disabilities provided thereby for said offense, and such additional punishment as is or shall be provided by law.

Sec. 59. Any person who shall, directly or indirectly, offer, give, or promise any money, or thing of value, testimonial, privilege, or personal advantage to any executive or judicial officer, or member of the Legislature, to influence him in the performance of any of his public or official duties, shall be guilty of bribery, and be punished in such manner as shall be provided by law.

Sec. 60. The offense of corrupt solicitation of members of the Legislature, or of public officers of the State, or of any municipal division thereof, and any occupation or practice of solicitation of such members or officers to influence their official action, shall be defined by law, and shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 61. Any person may be compelled to testify in any lawful investigation or judicial proceeding against any person who may be charged with having committed the offense of bribery, or corrupt solicitation, or practices of solicitation, and shall not be permitted to withhold his testimony upon the ground that it may criminate himself or subject him to public infamy; but such testimony shall not afterwards be used against him in any judicial proceeding, except for perjury in giving such testimony; and any person convicted of either of the offenses aforesaid shall, as part of the punishment therefor, be disqualified from holding any office or position of honor, trust, or profit in this State.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President: I move we do now adjourn until Monday, at ten o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. I move we do now adjourn until next Monday at one o'clock.

MR. WHITE. I move to amend by making it to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: The motion to adjourn to a day certain, is debatable. Now, sir, there is a vast mass of matter sent up to the desk relating to the Constitution, and it has gone to the printer. It will not be back here for three or four days, and what there is for this Convention to do between this and the proposed day of adjournment, I do not see. We are occupying our time with these frivolous matters, and there is no business before the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I desire to state why I support this motion. It is upon the ground that there is no business at all for this Convention to do between this time and Monday. There is such a vast amount of matter now in the hands of the printer that it is impossible for him to get it out and place it on our desks before Monday. It is just as well to adjourn now and give the members an opportunity to draw up what amendments and resolutions they may desire to introduce next week. It will expedite business to adjourn, and I am in favor of adjourning.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I desire to state the reasons why I oppose this adjournment. We are establishing a precedent for all time if we adopt this proposition. If we adjourn we will lose two days, because the business done here to-morrow will have to be done on Tuesday, and the amount of matter on the desk amounts to nothing, because all these propositions in the hands of gentlemen will have to come in, and they might as well come in now as any time. We had better occupy to-morrow and the day after in doing this, and if some men want to go away, the Convention will grant them the privilege of doing so, but let the Convention go on with its work.

MR. BARNES. Mr. President: In support of this motion to adjourn, I call the attention of the members of the Convention to the fact that many of the propositions coming in to-day are duplicate, and in many instances quadruplicate, all embodying the same idea, and many of them, for what reason I do not know, are simply copies of articles in the Constitution as it stands to-day. You will all remember that every one of these propositions has to go to the printer. The expenses of this printing comes out of the appropriation for this Convention, as I understand it—I believe the Board of Examiners have so decided. Now, as a matter of economy, I appeal to gentlemen if it is not better to stop this flood of matter until we have what has already been introduced printed and laid on our desks. If we meet to-morrow, gentlemen will continue to present propositions, whereas, if we wait until Monday it will be found that the same matter has been embodied in a dozen different propositions. I think we should adjourn. The committees cannot act—nobody can act. It may not come up to the high standard of industry raised by the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, who is an active, industrious man, but I think we had better adjourn until Monday, so as to know what we are doing.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I have uniformly, until now, voted against these motions to adjourn over; but I shall vote in favor of it now, because I am satisfied that economy, as well as expedition of business, demands it. I don't know whether the form of the motion is to adjourn until Monday, or whether it is in proper form or not. I suggest that the other is the proper form in which to put it, because we shall take the sense of this Convention as to rule seventy-one, as to its suspension as to printing. I say, upon a computation, that the printing in the last two days will amount to two thousand dollars. All this stuff is going to the printer. Now, gentlemen can stay here and work in committee. It is no loss of time, it is a saving of time; and, besides, I say that we should try and see if we cannot get at the business of this Convention in a more expeditious manner than now. Yesterday it was said that that vast mass of resolutions would be the principal part. Why, it was nothing in comparison with to-day. I had an amendment and didn't present it because there was so many. I shall vote for adjournment, upon the two grounds of economy and expedition of business.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I wish to explain the principal reasons why I shall vote for this adjournment. Like the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, I have been opposed to adjourning when in my judgment there was anything to do here. We have reached a point now when it is fair all round, two to each man, having called the roll twice, and each member being allowed to present four propositions, and I say we should pause now. It is not economy now to flood us with any more propositions until we ascertain where we stand and what we are doing. I say, as to actual economy, it is our duty to adjourn now, unless we have some reasonable prospect that there will be no more propositions introduced until the printer has printed those already presented. I think some gentlemen who are opposing this adjournment are piling up expense against this State, by asking that all this stuff be printed. We are entitled to some consideration when we say we want to examine that before anything more is done. It is not time wasted. It is economy to the treasury of this State. We are now in a condition to extract the wheat out of the chaff. We should not pile up any more chaff.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: Now these gentlemen are all talking over the economy of this adjournment—that it is such a very economical thing. It is a very economical thing, leaving two days work that you can do to-morrow to be done next week. It is a very economical thing for half the members of this Convention, who happen to live in and around San Francisco, to go home for two days. It is not a very economical thing for those delegates who live outside, who will have to hang around and walk the streets like stray dogs, waiting for these gentlemen who have gone home. It is very economical, drawing ten dollars a day or four thousand five hundred dollars for the adjournment; very economical indeed. Now we know there are two questions that might as well be considered to-morrow, that will occupy one or more days next week. Members know that this question of electing reporters is going to come up again, and we will have to decide one way or the other. It is very important that this matter should be decided as soon as possible. I am in favor of reporting the proceedings, but whichever way it is to be decided, it should be settled at once. There is another question that will occupy half a day or a whole day next week, and that is the question of committee clerks, about which I understand there is to be a controversy on this floor. Those questions do not depend upon this question of printing the propositions, and I really think that this adjournment will entail upon this State a loss of four thousand five hundred dollars or more, and in view of the fact that the one hundred days allotted to us is short enough time to complete our work, I am opposed to throwing away two or three days this week, and one day next week, or frittering away the time in any such way. Where is the economy, I ask? Even if we are to be delayed with these propositions again, how much expense will that be to the State? If these gentlemen have these propositions in their hands, adjourning over won't cure it; they will introduce them next week when we meet, just the same, and they will have to be printed, and it will cost no more to print them one time than another. It is the business of this Convention to receive and consider proposed amendments to the Constitution. That is what we are here for. Now, let us look this matter fairly in the face. An adjournment for three days will cost this State four thousand five hundred dollars. We are to draw this money, and I say let us stay here and earn it.

MR. BARBOUR. I have but one word to say. Members have no right to impugn motives to other members. I don't know how the gentleman will occupy himself, but he has no right to assume that I will occupy myself in any other way. When we tried to save ten thousand dollars to the people of this State by making the absentees pay, the gentleman from San Bernardino rises in his seat and urges a technical point of order, and prevents us from making the absentees take their hands out of the treasury. I say he is not in a position to impugn our motives.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: There would be great force in the proposition of the gentleman from Alameda, that this vast mass of matter is accumulating here at an enormous expense, if the Convention should rescind the order and stop the flow of propositions. It is entirely competent for this Convention to rescind that rule. Let us go on to-morrow and do all the business instead of laying it over until next week. I am free to admit that if it was not in the power of the Convention to rescind the rule, I would vote to adjourn over until next week, as I see, and every member sees, that this matter is accumulating too fast. I submit to gentlemen that the rule may be rescinded.

Mr. ANDREWS. It seems to me, Mr. President, that we can certainly do this. The Chairmen of the different committees can call their committees together and have the committees organized. If it is postponed until Monday there will be no organization at that time, and it looks to me to be preposterous to say that this Convention, organized for the purpose of framing a Constitution for the people, can do nothing for two days. It looks to me to be singular that they can do nothing for two days. We can organize the committees, and if we wait until next Monday there will be no organization of committees at that time, until the middle of the week.

Mr. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: One word. There has been a mass of this matter introduced here, but if we stay here we can rescind this rule and have these propositions sent to the committees, where they can be assorted by the committees, and those worthy to be printed can be printed.

Mr. TULLY. We are going over the same arguments that were offered last Thursday. The same gentlemen argued then, and urged that it would be a matter of economy. It is strange that it is a matter of economy every Thursday afternoon to adjourn till Monday. I think to-morrow can be put in profitably. This reporter business has got to be disposed of. The clerkships have got to be disposed of. And I understand that the gentleman from Alameda is going to suspend the rule, or try to, by which the gentleman from Santa Clara will be allowed to introduce his whole Constitution. If it don't come up to-morrow, it will have to come up on Monday, and be disposed of in some sort of way. I think it is better to stay here and dispose of these subjects. It is not necessary that we should continue to receive this heavy stream of propositions; it is in the power of the Convention to cut them off. I, for one, think we can find profitable employment for to-morrow and next day. If these gentlemen are so anxious to go home, let them ask leave of absence, and I think the Convention will grant it.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I am opposed to adjourning for more than twenty-four hours. I came here to serve the people, in the interests of the people of the State of California, and of the City and County of San Francisco, and I intend to work for my ten dollars a day. If gentlemen are so economical, I am sorry to see them throwing out hints about the accumulation of printing, because I think that is the smallest item of expense. That money goes to the support of labor, and I am sorry to see them throwing out hints. There are other holes that money will go to. They don't look to the employment of two or three useless Doorkeepers here.

Mr. CROSS. Mr. President: We have no right to waste two days. There is a great deal of work to be done in the one hundred days. If this adjournment takes place, fifteen days of the session will have gone. We should stay in a body and attend to the work. There are two kinds of economy; economy of work, and economy of money. I think this economy is economy of work.

Mr. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to call the attention of the Convention to one or two matters. It seems to me we should not adjourn, and I do not desire to criticise anything that has been introduced. There are many propositions in the hands of members in relation to the Constitution, and the quicker they are introduced, the better for the State and the better for us. To-morrow they can all be put in, and then we will have the matter ready, and can go to work, and we never can do anything until they are exhausted. There has been no meeting of the committees, and I desire that the Convention shall not adjourn. The law provides that we shall not adjourn longer than three days. This is three full days and part of the fourth.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, to adjourn until to-morrow, at ten o'clock.

The ayes and noes were demanded by the requisite number.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote, at four o'clock and fifty minutes P. M.:

AYES.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for two days was granted to Messrs. McFarland, Schell, Dudley, of San Joaquin, Tinnin, and Miller. Leave of absence for three days was granted to Messrs. Miller and Smith of Santa Clara. Leave of absence for one day was granted to Mr. Jones.

The reading of the Journal was dispensed with.

Mr. BARBOUR asked to have corrected the statement in the Journal in regard to the resolution he presented yesterday. The resolution was to memorialize the President of the United States, not Congress.

MILEAGE.

Mr. HILBORN. I ask the indulgence of the Convention to make a motion. The motion is to take up the report of the Committee on Mileage, which was laid on the table yesterday. It has been printed, and is now on the desks of members, and any errors can be easily corrected. I make the motion in order that it may go to the Controller. I move that the report be taken from the table for consideration.

Digitized by Google

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

MR. HILBORN. I move that the report be adopted.

MR. ROLFE. I call the attention of the Convention to one error. The report credits me with twelve hundred miles travel, when it should be eleven hundred and seventy-six. I ask that the amount due be reduced from one hundred and eighty dollars to one hundred and seventy-six dollars and forty cents.

The correction was made without objection.

MR. HILBORN also had corrected the mileage of Mr. Tully, reducing it from fifty-three dollars to thirty-eight dollars and forty cents.

The report was adopted.

MR. HILBORN offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be authorized and directed to draw his warrant, payable out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention, in favor of the parties named, and for the amounts set opposite their names, in that report.

Adopted.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

MR. EDGERTON introduced the following resolution, out of order:

Resolved, That E. L. Crawford, Minute Clerk, be and he is hereby granted leave of absence on the 14th, 15th and 16th of the present month; provided that he leaves some competent person to attend to the duties of his office, without further expense to the State.

MR. EDGERTON. I would state that Mr. Crawford is under a subpœna to attend a case in El Dorado County.

The resolution was adopted.

PETITION.

MR. BLACKMER presented the following petition from A. W. Allen and several hundred other citizens of San Francisco:

To the Constitutional Convention in Sacramento, California, assembled;
The undersigned citizens of California, respectfully petition your honorable body to so amend the Constitution that no citizen of the State shall be disfranchised on account of sex.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

PRINTING OF PROPOSITIONS.

MR. CAMPBELL. I move to suspend the rules, for the purpose of introducing a resolution to abolish rule seventy-one, which is as follows:

"Four hundred and eighty copies of each proposition or resolution embodying matter proposed to be introduced into the Constitution, shall be printed."

MR. MCCALLUM. I understand that Mr. Campbell gave notice on yesterday that he would make this motion. It is therefore not necessary to suspend the rules.

THE PRESIDENT. It does not come up under this order of business.

MR. ROLFE. I understand this motion is to suspend the rules.

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, in order that the gentleman may introduce his resolution.

The motion to suspend the rules was lost, on a standing vote: ayes, 54, noes, 60.

MR. BARBOUR. I move that the further consideration of the order, subdivision seven, be passed.

MR. LAINE. I object.

RESOLUTIONS AND PROPOSITIONS.

The roll was again called for the introduction of resolutions and proposed amendments to the Constitution.

FRONTAGE TO NAVIGABLE WATERS.

MR. AYERS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, regarding the frontages of navagable waters:

SECTION —. The right of eminent domain is hereby declared to exist in the State to all frontages on the navigable waters of this State.

SEC. —. No individual, partnership, or corporation, claiming or possessing the littoral frontage, or tidal lands of a harbor, bay, inlet, estuary, or other navigable water in this State, shall be permitted to exclude the right of way to such water whenever it is required for any public purpose; and the Legislature shall enact such laws as will give the most liberal construction to this provision, so that access to the navigable waters of this State shall be always attainable, and that the people shall not be shut out from the same.

Referred to Committee on Harbors, Tide Water, and Navigable Streams.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

MR. AYERS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to homestead exemption from forced sale:

SECTION —. No homestead, which is assessed at a less value than $1,500 (one thousand five hundred dollars) in its entirety, shall be sold at forced sale for the recovery of the taxes levied thereon; but property, personal or real, other than that embraced in the homestead, and not otherwise exempt by law from seizure, shall be subject to forced sale for such homestead tax.

Referred to Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption.

MR. NOEL. I move to suspend further action under this head. I notice that very many of these propositions are alike, and I think a great deal of time will be saved to members, as well as a great deal of money, if this present order of business were passed for to-day, until the printer can furnish copies of those already before the Convention.

Lost.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

MR. BARTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the powers of Justices of the Peace:

Resolved, The Legislature shall have power to extend to Justices of the Peace jurisdiction in all civil actions to the amount of five hundred dollars, and all commitments from a Justice's Court for felonious crimes shall go direct to the District Court for a speedy trial.

Read, and referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

TAXATION.

MR. BARTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

Resolved, Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State; all property shall be taxed according to its real or asserted value, and the word property is hereby declared to include all moneys, bonds, mortgages, credits, stocks, dues, and franchises—everything having a private ownership, real, personal, and mixed, taxing all lands of equal capacity equally, taxing improvements separately.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

MR. VAN DYKE. I rise to a question of order. That last proposition does not conform with the rule which we have adopted. It is not in the shape of a section that can be used.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

RIGHT OF PEOPLE TO ASSEMBLE.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the right of people to assemble:

SECTION —. The right of the people to peaceably assemble for any except immoral purposes shall in nowise be abridged, nor shall there be any manner of hindrance, molestation, or interference in this right.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

JUDICIAL AND MORTGAGE SALES.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to judicial and mortgage sales:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. In judicial or mortgage sales of land, or interest in land, there shall be no right of entry until one year after sale. The debtor shall have the right to redeem any time within two years after sale.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

MALFEASANCE IN OFFICE.

MR. BELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to malfeasance in office, for incorporation in the article on legislative duties:

SECTION —. Malfeasance in public office shall be punished as a felony, and it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide, by appropriate legislation, for the enforcement of this section.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. LAINE. I move that hereafter the propositions be only read by title, and referred to the appropriate committees.

THE PRESIDENT. There being no objection, it is so ordered.

EDUCATION.

MR. BLACKMER introduced the following amendments to article nine of Constitution, relating to education:

Amend article nine by introducing the following sections, to wit:

SECTION —. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified electors, at the time and places, in the same manner, and for the same term of office as the Governor. He shall receive a salary equal to that of the Secretary of State, and shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first day of December next after his election.

SEC. —. A County Superintendent of Schools, for each county in the State, shall be elected at the general election for Governor, by a vote of the qualified electors of each county, who shall hold office for four years, but the Legislature shall have power to consolidate two or more adjoining counties into one district of supervision.

SEC. —. The Legislature shall provide for a system of public schools, by which a free school shall be maintained for at least six months, in each school district, every year after the first year in which a school is established, and any school district neglecting to keep up and support such a school may be deprived of its proportion of the interest of the public fund during such neglect.

SEC. —. No public moneys shall ever be appropriated for the support, either directly or indirectly, of any religious sect or denomination whatever, nor for the support of any school not under the direct and entire control of public school officers.

Referred to Committee on Education.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

MR. BOGGS introduced the following proposed article two for a revised Constitution of the State of California, on the right of suffrage:

ARTICLE II.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

SECTION 1. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this State one year next preceding the election, and of the county or district in which he claims his vote six months. After the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, every person who was not a qualified elector prior to that time shall, in addition to the other qualifications required, be able to read and write the English language in order to become an elector, unless his inability to read and write be the result of physical disability.

SEC. 2. Electors shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the day of election, during their attendance at such election, going to and returning therefrom.

SEC. 3. No elector shall be obliged to perform militia duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 4. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas; nor while a student at any seminary of learning; nor while kept at any almshouse, or other asylum, at public expense; nor while confined in any public prison.

SEC. 5. No idiot or insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector.

SEC. 6. All elections by the people shall be by ballot; every ballot voted shall be numbered, and the number recorded by the election officers on the lists of voters, opposite the name of the voter who presents the ballot. The election officers shall be sworn or affirmed not to disclose how any elector shall have voted, unless required to do so in a judicial proceeding. In all cases of contested elections, the ballots cast may be counted, compared with the lists of voters, and examined under such safeguards and regulations as may be prescribed by law.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. CAPLES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, on revenue and taxation:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. A license tax of not less than one tenth of one percentum shall be imposed upon all sales of capital stock of corporations and joint stock associations whose stock shall have been listed at the stock board.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

MR. CAPLES offered the following proposed amendment to section eight, article one, of the present Constitution:

Add after "compensation" in eleventh line, "having been first made or secured, except in cases of war, not fire or great public peril, in which case compensation shall be afterwards made."

Amendment to section seventeen, article one: Add after "who are," in first line, "entitled under the laws of the United States to become citizens thereof."

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

MR. CROSS introduced the following proposed amendment to section thirteen, of article six:

Resolved, That said section be amended so as to read as follows:

No judicial officer, or Clerk of any Court of record, or any executive officer of any Court, shall charge or receive any fees for performing any duty pertaining to his office.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

MR. LINDOW. I object to the suspension of the reading.

SPEEDY JUDGMENTS.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to speedy judgments in civil cases:

ARTICLE —.

Judgment in all civil cases shall be rendered within thirty days from the day that said case or cases shall have been placed on the Court calendar, except by the mutual consent of both the plaintiff and defendant that the case or cases may go over to some future day.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

STATE TO BUILD RAILROADS.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, authorizing the State to build and own railroads:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. No charter or franchise of any kind, no right of eminent domain, shall ever be granted to any citizen or citizens, individually or collectively, of this State or any other, for the construction of any railroad, wagon road, or any public highway of trade and travel, other than municipal, in this State.

SEC. —. In the event of circumstances necessitating the construction of such highways, the State alone shall, by virtue of its sovereign authority, authorize the construction of said highways.

SEC. —. Said highways shall belong to the State, and remain forever under its direct control.

SEC. —. The Legislature alone shall have power to order the construction of said highways, given under the great seal of the State, signed by the Governor, the Secretary of State, and Surveyor-General.

SEC. —. The Legislature shall have power to issue State warrants, bonds, or scrip, for the faithful performance of the ——, redeemable in five, ten, fifteen, or twenty years; provided, however, that all such warrants, bonds, and scrip, must be issued in the name of the holder, and to none but qualified citizens of the United States.

SEC. —. The rate of interest to be paid by the State on such warrants, bonds, or scrip, shall not exceed six per cent. per annum.

SEC. —. The Legislature shall provide that none but competent engineers and superintendents, under the direction of the Surveyor-General, shall have charge of the work.

SEC. —. The Legislature shall have power to condemn private property, and exercise the right of eminent domain, for the execution and construction of such highways, providing that the rights and privileges of private property shall be respected, and the lawful owner thereof equitably compensated.

SEC. —. A sinking fund shall be created for the payment of the indebtedness incurred in the building, constructing, and equipping the said highway.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

MINING STOCKS.

MR. EAGON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning mining stocks and stock brokers:

Mr. President: I propose that the following be made a part of the Constitution of this State:

No corporation, board of trustees or directors, board of brokers, broker, individual, firm, or company shall deal, barter, or trade in or assign any certificate of stock of any mining corporation or company for a less sum of money than the face value of such certificate. No mining corporation shall increase or diminish its capital stock after the adoption of this Constitution. The Legislature shall enact a law making any violation of this provision a felony.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

ACTS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the Legislative Department:

Resolved, That the following provisions be adopted in that article of the Constitution which relates to the Legislative Department:

SECTION 1. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith, which subject shall be expressed in the title; but if any subject shall be embraced in a law which shall not be expressed in the title, such law shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title. No law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the law revised or section amended shall be reënacted and published at length.

Read and referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM.

MR. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment, concerning the Judicial Department:

Resolved, That the following provisions be adopted in that article of the Constitution which relates to the Judicial Department—

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial powers of the State shall be vested in one Supreme Court, three Courts of Appeal, County Courts, Justices of the Peace, and such Police Courts for cities and towns as may be created by the Legislature, with such inferior jurisdiction as the Legislature may confer upon them.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of nine Associate Justices, seven of whom shall constitute a quorum, and shall have appellate jurisdiction from the three Courts of Appeal, in the following cases:

First—In cases where a construction of the Federal or State Constitution is in dispute.

Second—In cases where one of the Justices of the Court of Appeals dissents from the decision of the majority, and gives a written opinion showing the reasons of his dissent.

Third—In cases where either Court of Appeals overrules a prior decision of the highest Court of the State not previously overruled by the same Court.

Fourth—In cases where one of the Courts of Appeal decide a principle contrary to the decision of one of the other Courts of Appeal.

The concurrence of five of the Justices shall be necessary to render a decision.

SEC. 3. The State shall be divided by the Legislature into three appellate districts, each of which shall have one Court of Appeals, which shall be held by three of the Justices of the Supreme Court. The Court of Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases arising in the County Courts for the counties within the respective appellate districts; but cases may be transferred from one Court of Appeals to either of the others whenever it may be deemed proper by a majority of the Justices of the Court, or by virtue of such further regulations as the Legislature may prescribe, or by the consent and written stipulation of the parties to the cause, through their respective attorneys at law.

SEC. 4. There shall be one County Court for each county in the State, and as many more as may be necessary in those counties where the business requires greater judicial force; and each Court shall be held by one Justice.

SEC. 5. The County Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases arising in law, equity, and probate; in all special cases; and in all criminal cases, excepting where money or property is in controversy and the amount is less in value than three hundred dollars, without interest; and excepting, also, in such cases of misdemeanor as the Legislature may direct to be tried and punished before Justices of the Peace or inferior Courts of cities and towns. The County Courts shall also have appellate jurisdiction from Justices of the Peace, and the inferior Courts of cities and towns, in such cases as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 6. There shall be no terms of the County Courts, but the Courts shall always be open for the transaction of business, excepting on days established by law as non-judicial, and during such vacations as the Legislature may see proper to grant.

SEC. 7. The jurisdictional power of the Justices of the County Courts shall be co-extensive with the State, and they may freely interchange with one another in the performance of their duties. In cases of sickness, absence, or other incapacity of a Justice of the County Court, his Court may be held by any other Justice of a County Court.

SEC. 8. The Supreme Court, the Courts of Appeal, the County Courts, and each of the Justices of all of said Courts, shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, injunction, ne exeat, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, and all other writs and process which may be necessary in aid of the jurisdiction of the respective Courts; and whenever the apparent justice of a complaint or petition ought to have a remedy administered, and none of the writs heretofore in use affords the proper remedy, it shall be the duty of the Court or Justice having jurisdiction to frame a writ which will meet the necessities of the case.

SEC. 9. Each county shall have as many Justices of the Peace as the Legislature may prescribe. Their jurisdiction shall extend to all cases where the matter in controversy does not exceed three hundred dollars, without interest, and to such cases of misdemeanor and special cases as shall be fixed by law.

SEC. 10. The right of trial by jury shall be inviolate in all cases of felony, in such cases of misdemeanor as the Legislature may determine, in all civil actions sounding in tort, and in all cases arising from breach of contract where punitory or exemplary damages are sought to be recovered. But the Legislature shall have power to fix and determine the character and qualification of jurors, the number which may constitute a jury, and the number whose concurrence shall be necessary to render a verdict.

SEC. 11. In counties where there is more than one County Court, the Legislature may prescribe to any one or more of said Courts a preference calendar for any particular class of cases.

SEC. 12. The style of all process shall be: "The people of the State of California."

ELECTION OF JUDGES.

SEC. 13. Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large, and Justices of the County Courts shall be elected by the qualified electors of the respective counties in which they are to serve, subject, however, in both cases, to the following regulations:

First—For each Justice of the Supreme Court or County Court to be elected, the Governor of the State shall nominate to the two houses of the Legislature the names of two fit and proper persons, who shall be known as judicial proponents.

Second—Each house shall refer the nominations so made to its Judiciary Committee, who shall investigate and report as to the qualifications and fitness of the persons so nominated, whereupon each house shall by ballot vote either to confirm or reject either or all of the proponents.

Third—In case of rejection of a proponent by either house, the Governor shall make another nomination.

Fourth—When the nomination of two proponents shall be confirmed by the two houses of the Legislature, the two proponents so confirmed shall be the candidates for election, and the only qualified candidates for election before the qualified electors entitled to vote for the Justice to be supplied; and the one receiving a majority or plurality of the votes cast to fill the office shall be declared to be elected, and shall be commissioned in due form under the great seal of the State.

Fifth—Where more than one Justice of the Supreme Court, or more than one Justice of the County Court for the same county are to be elected at the same time, the nominations to be made by the Governor shall be twice the number to be elected, without any other designation, direction, or qualification.

SEC. 14. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall hold office during good behavior. The Justices of the County Courts shall hold office for six years from the first day of January after election.

SEC. 15. The Justices of the Supreme Court and County Courts shall not be eligible to hold any other office.

SEC. 16. Immediately after the first election and qualification of the Justices of the Supreme Court, under this Constitution, the Governor of the State shall assign three of said Justices to each of the appellate districts to serve as Justices of the Court of Appeals, but the Justices of the Courts of Appeal shall be permitted to interchange with each other for temporary service whenever they may deem it proper to do so.

SEC. 17. The Supreme Court and the three Courts of Appeal shall meet and hold Court for the transaction of business at such times and places as the Legislature may direct.

SEC. 18. In cases of vacancy by death, absence, resignation, or removal from office, if of a Justice of the County Court, the Governor shall fill the vacancy for the remainder of the existing term; if of a Justice of the Supreme Court, until the first day of January after the next general election succeeding the next meeting of the Legislature after the vacancy occurs.

IMPEACHMENT OF JUDGES.

SEC. 19. Justices of the Supreme Court, of the Courts of Appeal, and of the County Court, may be impeached and removed from office for the following causes:

First—For bribery, partiality, or other corrupt conduct.

Second—For habitual drunkenness.

Third—For ignorance or incompetency.

Fourth—For general or frequent neglect of duty, or unnecessary delays in trying or deciding causes.

Fifth—For any conduct unbecoming a Justice or a gentleman.

SEC. 20. The method of impeaching a Justice shall be by presenting a complaint, containing specific charges, and duly verified by the oaths of two reputable persons, to the Governor of the State.

The complaint shall also contain the names of witnesses who can prove the charges. If the charges are actionable, the Governor shall, in writing, direct the Attorney-General to have a copy of the complaint served upon the accused Justice, and shall, at the same time, constitute a special Court, to be composed of nine members of the bar, to be selected by him, before whom the accused shall be tried, and shall appoint a time and place of trial; provided, that when a Justice of the County Court is the accused, the place of trial shall not be in the county where he presides; and when the accused is a Justice of the Supreme Court, or Court of Appeals, the trial shall take place either at the seat of government, or in the City of San Francisco.

The Attorney-General, and such other counsel as he may associate with himself, shall prosecute on behalf of the people. The accused shall have the right to plead, answer, or demur to the complaint, and to be represented by counsel, and shall have all the rights which are usual in the progress of the trial at criminal cases.

He shall also have the right to object to any member of the Court on the ground of personal animosity, ill-feeling, prejudice, or the previous formation and expression of an opinion adverse to the accused; and when such objection is allowed by the majority of the Court, and in any case where, from any proper reason, either or any of the persons constituting the Court are unable to serve, the Governor shall fill such vacancies by the appointment of other members of the bar.

A majority of two thirds of the Court shall be necessary to render a judgment of guilty against the accused Justice.

The proceedings of the Court, together with the pleadings, evidence, and the judgment of the Court, shall be sent to the Governor of the State; and when the judgment is against the accused, it shall be the duty of the Governor to make an order removing the Justice from his office.

The Legislature shall have power to prescribe such additional forms of procedure as may be necessary in such cases.

SEC. 21. The Legislature shall provide for the trial and removal from office of Justices of the Peace by information before the County Courts, for any of the causes prescribed for the impeachment of Justices of the County Courts, and for such other causes as it may deem proper.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

MR. EDGERTON. I desire to say, in reference to that resolution, that it is not mine, but one prepared by Hon. Solomon Heydenfeldt.

SALARIES OF SUPREME JUSTICES.

MR. EVEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, fixing the salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court and of the District Courts of this State:

The Judges of the Supreme Court shall be allowed a salary of four thousand dollars each per annum, and no more. The Judges of the District Courts shall be allowed a salary of three thousand dollars each per annum, and no more. The Judicial Districts shall contain, as near as possible, one hundred thousand inhabitants.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

MR. FARRELL introduced the following proposition for incorporation in the proposed new Constitution, in relation to elective franchise:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall have power to exclude from the privilege of voting, or being eligible to office, any person convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crime, and no pardon by the Governor shall restore the right of suffrage for holding office to any one convicted of the corrupt use of receiving of money for the purpose of controlling any election, or obtaining any office of profit or trust under the Constitution of this State or the United States.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. FARRELL introduced the following proposition for incorporation in the proposed new Constitution, in relation to poll tax:

SECTION —. The levying of taxes by the poll, and the requiring of personal service to the State or public, is grievous and oppressive; therefore, no law or ordinance shall be made levying a poll tax or requiring personal service, except upon military or other public necessity, found and declared to exist in pursuance of law by lawful authority.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

REPRESENTATION.

MR. FREEMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to representation:

I propose the following section for incorporation in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. Representation shall be apportioned according to population, excluding, however, all persons not entitled to the right of suffrage under this Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

WHO MAY BE ELECTORS.

MR. FREEMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the right of suffrage:

I propose the following matter for insertion in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State for six months preceding the election, and who shall have been registered for three months in the county or district in which he claims his vote, and who is not an idiot or insane person, and has not been convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to vote at all elections.

Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

MR. AYERS. It is suggested by the reporters of the public press that this reading of the propositions by title only gives no information to the public through the journals as to what matter is contained in the propositions.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

MR. GRACE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the right of suffrage:

Proposition for incorporation in the article of the new Constitution, relating to suffrage—

SECTION —. No person shall be in the receipt, at the same time, of more than one official salary or compensation; nor shall any increase of salary or compensation, for any office under this Constitution, take effect or apply to the incumbent of said office in possession at time of such increase.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

CORPORATIONS.

Mr. GRACE introduced the following proposition, in relation to corporations other than municipal:

Section —. It shall be unlawful for any director or other officer of any railroad company, or other corporation organized under the laws of this State or of the United States, and doing business within this State, to contract with said company or corporation, either directly or indirectly, by himself or his agents, or to become interested in any contract for the furnishing of supplies or material of any kind, or the execution of any labor or work for the said corporation or company. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to enforce the provisions of this section by appropriate legislation.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

EXCESSIVE BAIL.

Mr. GREGG introduced the following proposition for changing the "Declaration of Rights:"

Proposed amendment to section six of "Declaration of Rights:"

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted; but whipping shall not be deemed cruel or unusual as a punishment.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights."

APPROPRIATIONS FOR SECTARIAN PURPOSES.

Mr. HEUSTIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, forbidding the appropriation of public moneys and property for sectarian purposes:

Resolved, That the following be incorporated in the "Declaration of Rights" in the Constitution:

Article —.

Section —. The public school system of this State shall remain free and independent of all sectarian influences or control, and no money shall be appropriated or drawn from the public treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, theological institution, or association; nor shall property of any character belonging to the State, or to any county or municipality thereof, be ever appropriated for any such purpose.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

ACTS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Mr. JOHNSON introduced the following proposition to amend article four of the Constitution:

No law shall be passed except by bill. No bill shall be considered by the Legislature unless referred to a committee, returned therefrom, and printed for the use of the members. Every bill shall be read at length on three different days in each house; all amendments made thereto shall be printed for the use of the members before the final vote is taken on the bill, and no bill shall become a law unless on its final passage the vote be taken by yeas and nays, the names of the persons voting for and against the same be entered on the Journal, and a majority of the members elected to each house be recorded thereon as voting in its favor; and no amendment to bills by one house shall be concurred in by the other, except in the same manner and with the same formality as above set forth in respect to bills. It shall be, and shall not be otherwise, that every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one object, and that shall be expressed in the title; that no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title, but in such case the Act revised or section amended shall be reenacted and published at length. On the passage of appropriation bills, or on concurring in amendments thereto, a separate vote on any item or items shall, on demand of any member, be had by yeas and nays, and entered accordingly on the Journal, and every such item failing to receive the vote of the requisite majority of the members elected to the house in which the bill is pending shall be stricken therefrom, and each item receiving such majority shall be declared passed. The Governor may disapprove any item or items of appropriation contained in bills passed by the Legislature, and the item or items so disapproved shall be stricken therefrom, unless repassed in the manner prescribed in cases of disapproval of bills. Every order or resolution in which the concurrence of both branches of the Legislature may be necessary, except on questions of adjournment or pertaining to the transaction of business by the houses, shall be presented to the Governor, and before the same shall take effect be approved by him; or being disapproved, shall be repassed, in the manner prescribed in this article for the repassage of bills.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

BANKS.

Mr. JOYCE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to banks:

Resolved, That the Committee on Legislation are hereby requested to report the following for insertion in the new Constitution:

That all moneys, valuables, and property of every description held by savings or other banks for the period of seven years, without owner or proper heir to claim the same, shall escheat to this State; and that all such moneys, valuables, and property shall be used, by direction of the Legislature, for charitable purposes only.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

PUBLIC OFFICERS.

Mr. JOYCE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to public officers:

Resolved, That the legislative committee is hereby instructed to report the following proposition:

The Legislature shall have no right to increase the salary of any State, county, town, or municipal officer, nor of any person holding position under State, county, town, or municipal governments, without first submitting the same to the taxpayers having to pay such salaries; and no Treasurer shall have the right to pay out of any treasury in this State more than one salary to any one officer for any duties which may be performed by him or her, as the spirit of our government is opposed to any public officer obtaining more than one salary at the same time; and that all Commissioners shall be elected by the direct vote of the people, by ballot.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

Mr. KLEINE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to revenue and taxation:

Article —.

Section —. No tax shall be levied upon the rights of citizenship, and the payment of a poll tax as a condition of exercising the right of the ballot is a revolution of the democratic principle and tends to corrupt the legislator, and all such restrictions should be abolished.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM.

Mr. LAINE introduced the following: Article six for a revised Constitution of the State of California—Judicial Department.

Article VI.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Section 1. The judicial power of the State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in County Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and in Recorders' and such other inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town.

Sec. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, except such business as may be done at chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.

Sec. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State by districts, as hereinafter provided, at the general State elections. The first election for Justices of the Supreme Court shall be held on the first Wednesday in September, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. The Justices shall hold their offices for the term of twenty years from the first Monday in January next after their election, except those elected at the first election under this Constitution, at which election the Justice elected from the first district shall be elected for four years, the one from the second for eight years, the one from the third for twelve years, the one from the fourth for sixteen years, and the one from the fifth for the full term of twenty years, so that one Justice shall go out of office every four years. The Justice having the shortest time to serve shall be Chief Justice. In case of a vacancy from any cause in the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor shall appoint some suitable person from the same district as Justice, who shall hold the office for the unexpired part of the term. No Justice of the Supreme Court shall be eligible for reelection. For the purpose of electing Justices of the Supreme Court, the State shall be divided into five districts, and each district shall be composed of six legislative districts. The first district shall be composed of the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth legislative districts; the second, of the seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth; the third, of the thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth; the fourth, of the nineteenth, twentieth, twenty-first, twenty-second, twenty-third, and twenty-fourth; and the fifth, of the twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth, twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, and thirtieth legislative districts.

Sec. 4. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity, also in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to five hundred dollars; also in cases of forcible entry and detainer, and in all probate matters; also in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or in the Supreme Court, or before any County Court or Judge thereat.

Sec. 5. The Legislature shall have no power to grant leave of absence to any judicial officer; and any such officer who shall absent himself from the State for more than thirty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office.

Sec. 6. The County Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to two hundred dollars, and in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for; also in actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance, and all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for; also of all matters of probate; and said Courts shall have the power of naturalization and to issue papers therefor. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases arising in Justices', Recorders', and such other inferior Courts as may be established by the Legislature in their respective counties, upon questions of law alone. Said Court shall be always open (legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted), and their original jurisdiction shall extend to all parts of the State. Said Courts and their Judges shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody, in their respective counties.

SEC. 7. There shall be in each of the organized counties, or cities and counties of the State, a County Court; for each of which a County Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, or city and county, at the general State election; provided, that in all the said counties, or cities and counties, containing more than fifty thousand inhabitants, there shall be one such County Court and County Judge for every forty thousand inhabitants; and in all such cases said Courts to be numbered from one upwards, in numerical order, as the Legislature shall direct. The County Judges shall hold their offices for the term of twelve years from the first Monday of January next after their election.

SEC. 8. The unfinished business remaining in the Probate Court of the City and County of San Francisco shall be apportioned between the several County Courts therein established, by the Board of Supervisors thereof, in such manner as the Legislature shall direct.

SEC. 9. There shall be one Justice of the Peace elected in each township in the State, and the Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in each incorporated city and town, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of Justices of the Peace; provided, such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record. The Supreme Court, the County Courts, and such other Courts as the Legislature shall declare to be, shall be Courts of record.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall fix by law the jurisdiction of any Recorders' or Municipal Courts which may be established in pursuance of section one of this article, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the Judges thereof.

SEC. 11. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officers, and shall fix by law their duties and compensation. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record and the Boards of Supervisors in and for their respective counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment by the several County Judges of one or more Commissioners in their several counties, with authority to perform chamber business of the Judges of the County Courts, to take depositions, and perform such other duties connected with the administration of justice as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 12. The times and places of holding the several Courts of record shall be provided for by law. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace, Recorders, and Commissioners, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office.

SEC. 13. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient, and all opinions shall be free for publication by any person.

SEC. 14. The Justices of the Supreme Court and County Judges shall severally, during their continuance in office, receive for their services, quarterly, an annual salary, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. County Judges shall be paid out of the county treasury of their respective counties. The annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be five thousand dollars, and the annual salaries of the County Judges shall be fixed by the Legislature, not to exceed four thousand dollars. No County Judge or Justice of the Supreme Court shall, after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and eighty, be allowed to draw or receive any quarter's salary unless they shall severally take and subscribe an oath, before the disbursing officer, that no cause in their respective Courts remains undecided that has been submitted for decision for the period of sixty days. The Legislature shall enforce this provision by appropriate legislation.

SEC. 15. County Judges shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected.

SEC. 16. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, nor state the testimony.

SEC. 17. The style of all process shall be, "The People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

SEC. 18. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall, before they enter upon the discharge of the duties of their offices, qualify by taking and subscribing the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) that I will support and maintain the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will discharge the duties of the office of a Justice of the Supreme Court to the best of my ability; and that I will not accept any office, State or Federal, nor be a candidate for any office, during the term for which I have been elected Justice of the Supreme Court." Any Justice of the Supreme Court accepting any office, or offering himself as a candidate for any office, during the term for which he may have been elected, shall be guilty of and subject to all the pains and penalties of perjury, shall forfeit his office, and be forever disqualified from holding any office in this State.

SEC. 19. The Justices shall appoint a reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court, who shall hold his office and be removable at their pleasure. He shall receive an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars, payable quarterly.

SEC. 20. The Judges and Justices of the Peace shall not practice law in any Court of the State during their continuance in office.

SEC. 21. A grand jury shall be composed of thirteen jurors, and a concurrence of eight shall be necessary to the making of a presentment or the finding of an indictment.

SEC. 22. In criminal cases, a concurrence of three fourths of the jury is sufficient to find a verdict, except in cases where the punishment is death upon conviction; in such cases, all the jurors must concur to render a verdict.

SEC. 23. In all civil cases, a concurrence of two thirds of the jury is sufficient to render a verdict.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. LAINE introduced the following: Article four for a revised Constitution of the State of California—Legislative Department:

ARTICLE IV—LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The regular sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial; the first session under this Constitution shall commence on the second Monday in January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty; and thereafter the Legislature shall meet in regular session once in two years, on the second Monday in January. No session shall continue longer than ninety days.

SEC. 3. The members of the Assembly shall be chosen by the qualified electors of their respective districts on the first Wednesday in September, and their term of office shall be four years.

SEC. 4. No person shall be qualified to be a Senator unless he shall have attained the age of thirty years and been eight years a citizen of the United States. No person shall be qualified to be an Assemblyman unless he shall have attained the age of twenty-five years and been four years a citizen of the United States. Senators and Assemblymen shall be qualified electors in the districts they represent.

SEC. 5. Senators shall be chosen for the term of eight years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly.

SEC. 6. The Senate shall consist of thirty members, and the Assembly of sixty members, to be elected by districts as hereinafter provided. The seats of the fifteen Senators from the odd numbered districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one half of the Senate after the first election shall be chosen every four years.

SEC. 7. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into thirty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Legislative Districts; each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered from one to thirty inclusive, in numerical order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts, nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The first Legislature that shall convene, after the taking and publishing of each and every decennial census or enumeration of the inhabitants of the United States under the direction of Congress, shall adjust said districts so as to preserve them as near uniform in population as may be. Until such adjustment shall be made, the First District shall consist of the Counties of Del Norte, Siskiyou, Modoc, Lassen, Shasta, and Trinity; the Second, of the Counties of Humboldt, Mendocino, and Lake; the Third, of the Counties of Tehama, Butte, and Plumas; the Fourth, of the Counties of Sierra and Yuba; the Fifth, of the County of Nevada; the Sixth, of the Counties of Sutter, Colusa, and Yolo; the Seventh, of the Counties of Placer and El Dorado; the Eighth, of the County of Sacramento; the Ninth, of the County of Sonoma; the Tenth, of the Counties of Marin and Contra Costa; the Eleventh, of the Counties of Amador, Calaveras, and Alpine; the Twelfth, of the Counties of Tuolumne, Mariposa, Mono, and Inyo; the Thirteenth, of the County of San Joaquin; the Fourteenth, of the County of Alameda; the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-Second, and Twenty-third, of the City and County of San Francisco; the Twenty-fourth, of the Counties of San Mateo, Santa Cruz, and Monterey; the Twenty-fifth, of the County of Santa Clara; the Twenty-sixth, of the Counties of Stanislaus, Merced, and San Benito; the Twenty-seventh, of the Counties of Fresno, Tulare, and Kern; the Twenty-eight, of the Counties of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, and Ventura; the Twenty-ninth, of the County of Los Angeles; and the Thirtieth, of the Counties of San Bernardino and San Diego.

SEC. 8. Each house shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members.

SEC. 9. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

SEC. 10. Each house shall determine the rule of its own proceedings, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

SEC. 11. Each house shall keep a Journal of its own proceedings, and publish the same; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall, at the desire of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 12. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, and shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

SEC. 13. When vacancies occur in either house, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

SEC. 14. The doors of each house shall be open, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the house, may require secrecy.

Digitized by Google

SEC. 15. Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting.

SEC. 16. Any bill may originate in either house of the Legislature, and all bills passed by one house may be amended in the other.

SEC. 17. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each house present, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law, unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted), shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law, in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contain several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving the other portions of the bill; in such case he shall append to the bill at the time of signing it a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor; and the appropriations so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the house in which the bill originated a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered, in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor.

SEC. 18. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. While sitting for that purpose, the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members present.

SEC. 19. The Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney General, Surveyor-General, Justices of the Supreme Court, and County Judges shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall, nevertheless, be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment, according to law. All other officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 20. No Senator or member of Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this State, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased, during such term, except such offices as may be filled by election by the people.

SEC. 21. No person holding any office under the United States, or any other power, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State.

SEC. 22. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit, under this State; and the Legislature shall, as soon as practicable, pass a law providing for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

SEC. 23. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature.

SEC. 24. The members of the Legislature shall severally receive for their services five dollars per day. In addition to the above per diem, the members shall be entitled to receive as mileage three dollars for every twenty miles of travel to and from their residences to the place of holding the sessions. Each member shall also receive at each regular session, an additional sum of fifty dollars, which shall be in full for all stationery used, all postage, and all other incidental expenses; and no allowance or emoluments for any purpose whatever, shall be made to, or received by any member of either house for his use, out of the Contingent Fund or otherwise, except as herein expressly provided; and no allowance, extra pay, or emoluments, for any purpose whatever, shall ever be paid to any officer, agent, clerk, servant, or employé of either house of the Legislature, or of any committee thereof, except such per diem as may be provided for by law, not exceeding five dollars per day.

SEC. 25. Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one object, and shall be expressed in its title; and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title, but in such case, the part of the Act revised, or section amended, shall be reenacted and published at length, as revised or amended.

SEC. 26. No divorce shall be granted by the Legislature.

SEC. 27. The Legislature shall have no power to authorize lotteries or gift enterprises for any purpose, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery or gift enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme in the nature of a lottery in this State.

SEC. 28. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the Legislative Districts.

SEC. 29. No local law shall be passed unless notice of the intention to propose the same to the Legislature shall have been published in the locality to be affected thereby, which notice shall state the substance of the contemplated law, and shall be published at least twenty days in some newspaper of general circulation, in the locality to be affected, prior to its introduction into the Legislature. The evidence of such notice having been published shall be exhibited to the Legislature before such Act shall be passed.

SEC. 30. When a Congressional District shall be composed of two or more counties, it shall not be separated by any county belonging to another district. No county, or city and county, shall be divided in forming a Congressional District so as to attach one portion of a county, or city and county, to another county, or city and county; but the Legislature may divide any county, or city and county, into as many Congressional Districts as it may be entitled to by law.

SEC. 31. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act, except for municipal purposes. All general laws and special Acts passed pursuant to this section may be altered from time to time, or repealed.

SEC. 32. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the corporators and other means as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 33. The term corporations, as used in this article, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships. And all corporations shall have the right to sue and shall be subject to be sued, in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons.

SEC. 34. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes; but associations may be formed, under general laws, for the deposit of gold and silver; but no such association shall make, issue, or put in circulation, any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, or the paper of any bank, to circulate as money.

SEC. 35. The Legislature of this State shall prohibit, by law, any person or persons, association, company, or corporation from exercising the privileges of banking, or creating paper to circulate as money.

SEC. 36. Each stockholder of corporation or joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for his proportion of all its debts and liabilities.

SEC. 37. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses in assessments and in contracting debts by such municipal corporations.

SEC. 38. In all elections by the Legislature the members thereof shall vote viva voce, and the votes shall be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 39. The general appropriation bill shall contain no item or items of appropriation other than such as are required to pay the salaries of the State officers, the expenses of the government, and of the institutions under the exclusive control and management of the State.

SEC. 40. No bill making an appropriation of money, except the general appropriation bill, shall contain more than one item of appropriation, and that for one single and certain purpose, to be therein expressed.

SEC. 41. No bill shall be considered for final passage unless the same has been reported upon by a committee, and printed for the use of the members.

SEC. 42. Upon the final passage of every bill in each house, the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays, and entered upon the Journal; and no bill shall be passed unless a majority of all the members elected to each house shall vote therefor on its final passage.

SEC. 43. Neither the Legislature, nor any county, city and county, township, school district, or other municipal corporation, shall ever make an appropriation, or pay from any public fund whatever, or grant anything to or in aid of any religious sect, church, creed, or sectarian purpose, or help to support or sustain any school, college, university, or other institution controlled by any religious creed, church, or sectarian denomination whatever; nor shall any grant or donation of personal property or real estate ever be made by the State, or any city, city and county, town, or other municipal corporation, for any religious creed, church, or sectarian purpose whatever.

SEC. 44. The Legislature shall have no power to give or to lend, or to authorize the giving or lending of the credit of the State, or of any county, city and county, city, township, or other political corporation or subdivision of the State now existing, or that may be hereafter established, in aid of or to any person, association, or corporation, whether municipal or otherwise, or to pledge the credit thereof in any manner whatever for the payment of the liabilities of any individual, association, municipal or other corporation whatever, nor shall it have power to make any grant or authorize the making of any grant of any public money or thing of value to any individual, municipal or other corporation whatever; and it shall not have power to authorize the State, or any political subdivision thereof, to subscribe for stock, or to become a stockholder in any corporation whatever.

SEC. 45. The Legislature shall have no power to grant, or to authorize any county or municipal authority to grant, any extra compensation or allowance to any public officer, agent, servant, or contractor, after service has been rendered or a contract has been entered into and performed in whole or in part, nor to pay or authorize the payment of any claim hereafter created against the State, or any county or municipality of the State, under any agreement or contract made, without express authority of law; and all such unauthorized agreements or contracts shall be null and void.

SEC. 46. All railways heretofore constructed, or that may be hereafter constructed, in this State, are hereby declared to be public highways, and railroad companies common carriers. The Legislature shall pass laws to correct abuses and prevent unjust discriminations and extortions in the rates of freight and passenger tariffs on the different railroads in this State, and shall from time to time pass laws establishing maximum rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight on said railroads, and enforce all such laws by adequate penalties.

SEC. 47. No railroad or other transportation company shall grant any free pass or ticket, or grant any pass or ticket at a discount, to any member of the Legislature, or any State, county, or municipal officer, and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislature, or by any such officer, shall be a forfeiture of his office, and he shall be subject to the pains and penalties of a bribe-taker.

SEC. 48. In case of a contested election in either branch of the Legislature, only the claimant decided entitled to the seat shall receive from the State per diem, compensation, or mileage.

SEC. 49. The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say: changing the names of persons or places; changing county seats, or locating them except upon the organization of a new county; regulating county and township affairs; regulating the practice in Courts of justice; regulating the jurisdiction and duties of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges, and Constables; providing for changes of venue in civil or criminal cases; providing for the election of members of the Boards of Supervisors; summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries; providing for the management of common schools; the opening and conducting of elections, or designating the place of voting; the sale or mortgage of any property belonging to minors or others under disability; the protection of game or fish; chartering or licensing ferries or toll-bridges; remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures; creating, increasing, or decreasing salaries, fees, percentage, or allowance of public officers during the term for which said officers are elected or appointed; changing the law of descent; authorizing or directing the payment of money by any county, city and county, or other municipal corporation.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

ELECTIVE FRANCHISE AND PRIVILEGES.

MR. LINDOW introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the elective franchise.

I beg leave to submit the following, in relation to elective franchise and privileges, to be incorporated into the proposed Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. All elections shall be free and equal.

SEC. 2. All elections shall be by ballot.

SEC. 3. No Chinaman, Asiatic, or any descendant thereof, shall be entitled to the right of suffrage.

SEC. 4. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years or over, who shall have been a resident of this State for six months, of the county in which he resides for thirty days, of the election district fifteen days preceding any election therein, shall be entitled to vote.

SEC. 5. Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the day of election, during their attendance at such election, and in going to and returning from the same. No elector shall be obliged to do military duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 6. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas, nor while a student in any institution of learning, nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum, nor while confined in any public prison; but no person while confined in any prison shall have any right to vote during such confinement. No person who shall have been convicted of any crime which is punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector.

SEC. 7. No soldier, seaman, or mariner in the army or navy of the United States shall be deemed a resident of this State in consequence of being stationed therein.

SEC. 8. No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this State, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this State one year next preceding the election or appointment.

SEC. 9. No idiot or insane person shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector.

SEC. 10. Every male citizen of Mexico, who shall have been elected to become a citizen of the United States under the treaty of peace established and ratified at Queretaro, on the thirtieth day of May, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, shall be an elector and citizen of this State, and entitled to all the privileges of a native-born citizen of the United States.

SEC. 11. Every person shall be disqualified from holding office during the term for which he may have been elected, who shall have given or offered a bribe, threat, or reward to procure his election.

SEC. 12. The Legislature shall enact laws to support the privilege of free suffrage, prescribing the manner of regulating and conducting elections, and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence therein from power, bribery, intimidation, and other improper conduct; provided, that no law shall be passed which shall deprive a citizen of his vote at any election where proof of citizenship and residence can be given.

SEC. 13. Any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within this State or out of it, or who shall act as second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, shall be deprived of holding any office of trust or profit, and of enjoying the right of suffrage under this Constitution; any State officer, member of the Legislature, or any other person holding office, or of any person holding office of profit or trust under the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof, shall be, ipso facto, vacated by the fact of any such person committing the offense mentioned in this article, and the Legislature shall provide by law for ascertaining and declaration of such forfeiture.

SEC. 14. No person holding a lucrative office or appointment under the Government of the United States, or under this State, shall be eligible to the Legislature until he has resigned his position and such resignation has taken effect. Nor shall one person hold more than one lucrative office at one time; provided, that officers in the militia to which there is attached no annual salary, and the office of Postmaster, when the compensation does not exceed one hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

SEC. 15. No person shall be in receipt at the same time of more than one official salary or compensation beyond that fixed by law at the time of his election or appointment.

SEC. 16. No person who shall hereafter be a collector or holder of public money, or receiver of money as an officer, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit until he shall have accounted for and paid, according to law, all money for which he is or may be liable.

SEC. 17. All elections by the Legislature, or either house thereof, shall be viva voce.

SEC. 18. General municipal elections shall be held biennially on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. At all elections by the people the polls shall be open from six A. M. to seven P. M.

Referred to Committee on Privileges and Elections.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz, introduced the following proposed article five for a revised Constitution of the State of California, on the Executive Department:

ARTICLE V.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of this State shall be vested in a Chief Magistrate, who shall be styled the Governor of the State of California.

SEC. 2. The Governor shall be elected by the qualified electors at the time and places of voting for members of the Assembly, and shall hold his office four years from and after the second Monday in January subsequent to his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

SEC. 3. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor who has not been a citizen of the United States, and a resident of this State, five years next preceding the election, and attained the age of thirty-five years at the time of said election.

SEC. 4. The returns of every election for Governor shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of Government, directed to the Speaker of the Assembly, who shall, during the first week of the session, open and publish them in presence of both houses of the Legislature. The person having the highest number of votes shall be Governor; but in case any two or more have an equal and the highest number of votes, the Legislature shall, by joint vote of both houses, choose one of said persons so having an equal and the highest number of votes for Governor.

SEC. 5. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia, the army and navy of this State.

SEC. 6. He shall transact all executive business with the officers of government, civil and military, and may require information, in writing, from the officers of the Executive Department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

SEC. 7. He shall see that the laws are faithfully executed.

SEC. 8. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and laws for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have power to fill such vacancy by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Legislature, or at the next election by the people.

SEC. 9. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Legislature by proclamation, and shall state to both houses, when assembled, the purpose for which they shall have been convened.

SEC. 10. He shall communicate by message to the Legislature, at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

SEC. 11. In case of a disagreement between the two houses with respect to the time of adjournment, the Governor shall have power to adjourn the Legislature to such time as he may think proper; provided, it be not beyond the time fixed for the meeting of the next Legislature.

SEC. 12. No person shall, while holding any office under the United States or this State, exercise the office of Governor, or be eligible thereto.

SEC. 13. The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons, after conviction, for all offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and regulations as may be provided by law. Upon conviction for treason, he shall have the power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall communicate to the Legislature, at the beginning of every session, every case of reprieve or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime for which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of the pardon or reprieve.

SEC. 14. There shall be a seal of this State, which shall be kept by the Governor, and used by him officially, and shall be called "The Great Seal of the State of California."

SEC. 15. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of the people of the State of California, sealed with the great seal of State, signed by the Governor, and countersigned by the Secretary of State.

SEC. 16. The Governor shall receive an annual salary of five thousand dollars, to be paid at stated times, as provided by law, which shall be in full for all services performed by him for the State as Governor, or in any other official capacity, and the Legislature shall have no power to grant him any extra compensation whatever for ex officio service of any kind.

SEC. 17. In case of the impeachment of the Governor, or his removal from office, death, inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, resignation, or absence from the State, the powers and duties of the office, with its emoluments, shall devolve upon the President of the Senate for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease.

SEC. 18. A Secretary of State, a Controller, a Treasurer, an Attorney-General, and a Surveyor-General, who shall be ex officio Register of the State Land Office, shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the Governor, whose term of office shall be the same as the Governor. They shall each receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars, to be paid at stated times, as provided by law, which annual salary shall be in full for all services to be rendered by them, of every kind, name, and nature. No person shall be eligible to either of said offices unless he shall have attained the age of thirty years, and been five years a citizen of the United States and resident of this State.

SEC. 19. The Secretary of State shall keep a fair record of the official acts of the Legislative and Executive Departments of the government, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all matters relative thereto, before either branch of the Legislature, and shall perform such other duties as may be assigned him by law.

Referred to Committee on Executive Department.

MODE OF AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz, introduced the following:

Proposed article ten for a revised Constitution of the State of California—mode of amending and revising the Constitution:

ARTICLE X.

MODE OF AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1. Whenever a majority of both houses of the Legislature shall deem it necessary to alter or amend this Constitution, they may propose such alterations or amendments, which proposed amendments shall be published with the laws which have been passed at the same session; and said amendments shall be submitted to the people for their approval or rejection at the next general election; and if it shall appear, in a manner to be provided by law, that a majority of the qualified electors present and voting at such election shall have ratified such alterations or amendments, the same shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this Constitution. If two or more alterations or amendments shall be submitted at the same time it shall be so regulated that the electors shall vote for or against each separately.

SEC. 2. Whenever two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall think it necessary to call a Convention to revise this Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote, at the next election for members of the Legislature, for or against a Convention; and if a majority of electors voting at said election on the proposition for a Convention shall have voted for a Convention, the Legislature shall, at the next session, provide by law for calling the same. The Convention shall consist of as many members as the Assembly, and shall be chosen in the same manner, and shall have the qualifications of Senators. They shall meet within three months after their election for the purpose aforesaid.

Referred to Committee on Future Amendments.

CORPORATIONS.

MR. MCCALLUM introduced the following proposition for an amendment defining and declaring the right of the State to regulate and limit the rates to be charged for freights and fares, and for gas and water, and rates of other service and commodities, by corporations, and making the exercise of that right mandatory:

Amend the Constitution so as to read as follows:

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 31. Corporations other than municipal may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act. All laws heretofore passed, or which shall hereafter be passed in pursuance of this section, may be altered, from time to time, or repealed. Laws shall be passed for the regulation and limitation of the rates of freights and fares, and the rates of gas and water, and other services and commodities, performed and furnished by such corporations. In case of the selection of any persons or officers to regulate such rates, they shall be selected as may be provided by law, which shall in no case authorize the naming of any such person or officer by any corporation.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

EDUCATION.

MR. MCCOMAS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to education:

ARTICLE IX.

EDUCATION.

SECTION 1. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified electors of this State at the same time the Governor is elected. He shall hold his office for four years from the second Monday in January next after his election. His duties shall be prescribed by law. He shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars, to be paid quarterly.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of intellectual, scientific, moral, and agricultural improvement. The proceeds of all lands that may be granted by the United States to this State for the support of schools, which may be sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States, under an Act of Congress distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools, by which a school shall be kept up and supported in each district at least three months in every year, and any district neglecting to keep up and support such a school may be deprived of its proportion of the interest of the public fund during such neglect.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall take measures for the protection, improvement, or other disposition of such lands as have been or may hereafter be reserved or granted by the United States, or any person or persons, to this State, for the use of a University; and the funds accruing from the rents or sale of such lands, or from any other source for the purpose aforesaid, shall be and remain a permanent fund, the interest of which shall be applied to the support of said University, with such branches as the public convenience may demand, for the promotion of literature, the arts, and sciences, as may be authorized by the terms of said grant. And it shall be the duty of the Legislature, as soon as may be, to provide effectual means for the improvement and permanent security of the funds of said University.

SEC. 5. All instruction in the common schools shall be in the English language, and no other language shall be there taught; nor shall instrumental music be taught in them.

SEC. 6. No religious sect or sects shall ever have use of or control any part of the school or University funds of this State.

SEC. 7. In order that every child in this State may have a fair opportunity to learn the privileges, rights, duties, and obligations pertaining to freemen, the Legislature shall, by appropriate legislation, cause to be published, at the expense of the State, in one well-bound volume of convenient size, the Declaration of American Independence, the Constitution of the United States of America, the Constitution of the State of California, and Washington's Farewell Address, and shall cause the same to be distributed, free of cost, to the children in the common schools, and to be used and taught therein as a text-book, and also in the University of California.

Referred to Committee on Education.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

MR. MCCOMAS introduced the following proposed article eleven, for a revised Constitution, on miscellaneous subjects:

ARTICLE XI.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

SECTION 1. The City of Sacramento is hereby declared to be the seat of government of this State, and shall so remain until changed by law; but no law changing the seat of government shall be valid or binding unless the same be approved and ratified by a majority of the qualified electors of the State voting therefor at a general State election, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature may provide, submitting the question of change to the people.

SEC. 2. Any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within this State or out of it, or who shall act as second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, shall not be allowed to hold any office of profit or enjoy the right of suffrage under this Constitution.

SEC. 3. Members of the Legislature, and all officers, executive and judicial, except such inferior officers as may be by law exempted, and Justices of the Supreme Court shall, before they enter on the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of ——, according to the best of my ability. And no other oath, declaration, or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust, other than those in this Constitution prescribed.

SEC. 4. The county governments now established by law are hereby confirmed. The Legislature may alter them from time to time, or establish new ones, as occasion may require; and the system of county governments shall be as nearly uniform as practicable throughout the State.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Board of Supervisors in each county in this State, to consist of not less than three nor more than five members, and to be elected by districts. The Supervisors shall jointly and individually perform such duties as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 6. All officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers whose offices may be hereafter created by law, shall be elected by the people, or appointed, as the Legislature may direct.

SEC. 7. When the duration of any office is not provided for in this Constitution, it may be declared by law, and if not so declared such office shall be held during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment; nor shall the duration of any office, not fixed by this Constitution, ever exceed four years.

SEC. 8. The fiscal year shall commence on the first day of July.

SEC. 9. Each county, town, city, and incorporated village shall make provision for the support of its own officers, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 10. The credit of the State shall not, in any manner, be given or loaned to or in aid of any individual, association, or corporation; nor shall the State, directly or indirectly, become a stockholder in any association or corporation.

SEC. 11. Suits may be brought against the State in such manner, and in such Courts, as shall be directed by law.

SEC. 12. No contract of marriage shall be invalidated for want of conformity to the requirements of any religious sect. But no marriage hereafter contracted in this State shall be valid between the parties thereto unless a public record thereof be made at the time in such manner as may be provided by law.

SEC. 13. All State, county, township, district, and municipal officers, except as herein otherwise expressly provided, shall be elected and hold office for the term of four years from the second Monday in January next after their election.

SEC. 14. All property, real and personal, owned by either husband or wife before marriage, and that acquired by either of them afterwards by gift, or descent, shall be their separate property.

SEC. 15. The homestead, not exceeding five thousand dollars in value, and such other reasonable amount of property as may be determined by law, of all heads of families, shall be exempt from forced sale.

SEC. 16. No perpetuities shall be allowed except for eleemosynary purposes.

SEC. 17. Every person shall be disqualified from holding any office of profit in this State, who shall have been convicted of having given or offered a bribe to procure his election or appointment.

SEC. 18. Laws shall be made to exclude from office, serving on juries, and from the right of suffrage, those who shall hereafter be convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, or other high crimes. The privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections, and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence thereon from power, bribery, tumult, or other improper practice.

SEC. 19. Absence from this State on business of the State or of the United States shall not affect the question of residence of any person.

SEC. 20. A plurality of the votes given at any election shall constitute a choice, where not otherwise directed in this Constitution.

SEC. 21. There shall be a general election in this State on the first Wednesday in September in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, for the election of State, county, township, district, and municipal officers; and one such election for the same purpose on the first Wednesday in September every four years thereafter.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

MR. NOEL introduced the following proposed amendment to article four of the Constitution, relative to municipal corporations:

SEC. 37. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for the organization of county, city, and town governments. But such municipal corporations shall have no power to contract debts, or incur liabilities in excess of one per centum of the assessed value of the property within the limits of such municipal corporations.

Referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

EDUCATION—TEXT-BOOKS.

MR. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to education:

Resolved, That the following provisions relating to education should be embodied in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. The Legislature, at the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall provide by law for the compilation and printing of a complete series of school text-books, all the necessary mechanical work connected therewith to be done in the State Printing Office. The text-books thus compiled and printed shall be the only text-books used in the public schools of this State after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and shall be furnished to all scholars in said schools free of cost.

SEC. —. There shall be a Department of Agriculture and a Department of Mechanics attached to the State University. And there shall be suitable professors in said University to give practical instruction in agriculture and the mechanical arts.

SEC. —. Lectures shall be delivered, at stated periods, in the State University, the Normal School, and in each one of the public schools of the State, by one of the professors or teachers thereof, upon the subject of labor, its necessity and importance in the promotion of human happiness.

SEC. —. No sectarian instruction shall be imparted in the State University, the Normal School, or any of the public schools of this State, and no sectarian books, or books having a sectarian bias, shall ever be used in the State University or the public schools; nor shall any money ever be appropriated for the support of religious or denominational schools.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

ROAD TAX.

MR. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning road tax:

Resolved, That the following provision concerning a general road tax should be embodied in the Constitution:

SECTION —. It shall be the duty of the Legislature, after the adoption of this Constitution, to levy a special road tax upon the taxable property of all persons in this State, and appropriate the same to the building of bridges and the improvement of public roads in the different counties of the State, under such rules and regulations as the Legislature shall provide; and no law shall be passed authorizing a poll tax for, or requiring the personal service of any portion of the people on, public roads.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. OVERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to revenue and taxation:

Resolved, That the Constitution be so framed as to require all persons to make a statement, on the first Monday of March of each year, under oath, of all property owned or controlled by them in this State subject to taxation.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

MOBS.

MR. REDDY introduced the following resolution to incorporate a new section in the Constitution, under miscellaneous provisions:

ARTICLE XI.

Resolved, That the following section be incorporated in the Constitution:

That any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, join any mob or other unlawful assembly of persons for the purpose of destroying human life or property, or who shall knowingly aid or assist those thus offending, shall not be allowed to hold any office of profit, or to enjoy the right of suffrage under this Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following amendments to article four of the Constitution:

Amend section two, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence on the first Wednesday after the first Monday of January next ensuing the election of its members, unless the Governor of this State shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than one hundred days.

Amend section three, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 3. Members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, in November, on the days of Presidential and Congressional elections, or on the even years; and their term of office shall be two years.

Amend section five, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 5. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and place as members of the Assembly; and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State, and of the county or district for which he shall be chosen, one year next before his election. Twenty Senators shall be elected at each general election, beginning in eighteen hundred and eighty, and every two years thereafter.

Amend section six, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 6. The State shall be divided into forty Senatorial Districts, of compact and contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be; and each district shall be entitled to elect one Senator, but no city and county shall be entitled to representation exceeding one fifth the whole number of Senators; no county shall be divided in the formation of a district.

Amend section seven, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 7. The members of the Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties on a ratio obtained by dividing the population of the State, as ascertained by the latest United States census, by eighty. Every county containing one ratio, or fractional part thereof exceeding one half, shall be entitled to one member; every city, or city and county, entitled to more than four members of the Assembly, or three Senators, shall be divided into districts; each district to elect its proportion of members of the Senate and Assembly according to its population.

Amend section ten, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 10. Each house shall determine the rule of its own proceedings, and may, with consent of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member; to enforce obedience to its process; to punish for contempt and disorderly conduct in its presence.

Amend section sixteen, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 16. Any bill may originate in either house of the Legislature, and all bills passed by one house may be amended in the other; but no bill shall be so altered or amended on its passage through either house as to change its original purpose.

Amend section twenty, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 20. No Senator or member of the Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit in this State which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased by his vote during such term; and in no case without first resigning the office he holds, except such offices as may be filled by election by the people.

Amend section twenty-eight, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 28. The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State, taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, shall serve as a basis of apportioning representation in both houses of the Legislature.

Amend section twenty-nine, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 29. The apportionment of members of the Senate and Assembly shall be fixed by the Legislature, at its first session after the official publication of the census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, among the several counties and districts, in pursuance of section six of this article.

Amend section thirty-one, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 31. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act except for municipal purposes. Each corporation shall be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law; and all general laws or special Acts passed pursuant to this section may be altered from time to time, or repealed.

Amend section thirty-seven, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 37. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit. No city and county, county, city, village, or town, shall ever contract any debt or debts which singly, or in the aggregate, shall exceed five per cent. of the assessed value of the property therein as assessed for State purposes, and then only for purely public purposes.

Amend section thirty-nine, article four, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 39. No law shall extend the term of any public officer, or increase or diminish his salary or emoluments, after his election or appointment.

Amend article four of the Constitution by adding a new section, to be known and designated as section forty:

SEC. 40. The general appropriation bill shall embrace nothing but appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the State government, interest on the public debt, and for the public schools. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, embracing but one subject.

Amend article four of the Constitution by adding a new section, to be known and designated as section forty-one:

SEC. 41. The Legislature may make appropriations of money to institutions organized for the purpose of maintaining orphans who are destitute, but such appropriation shall be applied exclusively to the support of such orphans.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendments to article six of the Constitution:

Amend section two, article six, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. The presence of four Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, excepting such business as may be done at chambers; and the concurrence of four Justices shall be necessary to pronounce judgment.

Amend section three, article six, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at the general election of State officers and members of the Legislature, in November, one thousand eight hundred and eighty. At the first election for Justices of the Supreme Court, three Justices shall be elected, whose terms of office shall be fourteen, twelve, and ten years, respectively, to be determined by lot. Every two years thereafter one Justice shall be elected at the general election for members of the Legislature, and whose term of office shall be fourteen years. The Justice whose commission first expires shall be Chief Justice. Any vacancy occurring in the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, District Court, County and Probate Court, shall be filled by appointment of the Governor until the next general election, when a person shall be elected to serve the balance of the unexpired term, and in order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of this Constitution, no officer, either legislative, executive, judicial, or county, shall be superseded or suspended thereby, until the election and qualification of the several officers provided for by this Convention, in November, eighteen hundred and eighty.

Amend section five, article six, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 5. Twenty-three judicial districts are hereby constituted, as now defined by law, which may be altered from time to time as the public good may require, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to both houses of the Legislature; in each of which there shall be a District Court, and for each of which a District Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district, at the general election for State officers and members of the Legislature. The District Judges shall hold their offices for the term of eight years, from the first day of January next after their election. The Legislature shall have no power to grant leave of absence to a judicial officer, and any such officer who shall absent himself from the State for upwards of thirty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office.

Amend section seven, article six, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 7. There shall be in each of the organized counties of this State a County Court, for each of which a County Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, at the general election to be held, as provided, for the election of State officers and members of the Legislature. The County Judges shall hold their offices for the term of six years from the first day of January next after their election. Said Courts shall also have power to issue naturalization papers. In the City and County of San Francisco, and in counties of one hundred thousand inhabitants and upwards, the Legislature may separate the office of Probate Judge from that of County Judge, and may provide for the election of a Probate Judge, who shall hold his office for the term of six years.

Amend section fifteen, article six, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 15. The Justices of the Supreme Court, District Judges, and County Judges, shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected, nor for four months prior to their assuming the duties of their office; provided, that County Judges shall be paid out of the county treasury of their respective counties.

Amend section nineteen, article six, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 19. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of this Constitution, no officer shall be superseded thereby, nor shall the organization of the several Courts be changed thereby, nor shall the tenure of any officer be changed, unless it expire in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, in which case the term is extended till January first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

SALARIES OF OFFICERS.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to increase of salaries of officials:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. That the increase of salaries, or compensation, of any State, county, or township officers, elected or appointed, in this State, shall be prohibited by law, during the term of office to which he has been appointed or elected, or any part thereof.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to religious teaching in public schools:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. That no sectarian books or sectarian creed shall ever be allowed in any of the public schools, academies, universities, or colleges in this State.

Referred to Committee on Education.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

MR. STEDMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to municipal corporations:

SECTION —. The indebtedness of any municipal corporation shall never exceed in the aggregate five per centum of the value of the property within such corporation, as ascertained from time to time by the tax duplicate thereof, without the consent first obtained to such increase of indebtedness, and the approval of the objects for which the same is created, of at least three fourths of the qualified voters of such corporation, to be ascertained in the mode prescribed by law; and in no case shall such indebtedness exceed ten percentum of such taxable value. In ascertaining such indebtedness, at any time, there shall be included an amount which, at the rate of seven per centum per annum, will produce a sum equal to the aggregate amount payable by such corporation for the rent of property leased to it. This section shall not be construed to prevent any municipal corporation from incurring any indebtedness necessary to complete any work authorized by law and undertaken before the adoption of this Constitution; nor until the first valuation of real estate for taxation after the adoption of this Constitution, to prevent the borrowing of money in anticipation of the collection of assessments actually levied; nor shall the restrictions of this section apply to necessary expenditures for military purposes in time of war.

Referred to Committee on State and Municipal Indebtedness.

TAXATION OF CORPORATIONS.

MR. SWENSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the taxation of corporations:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. The power to tax corporations or corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract or grant to which the State shall be a party.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

TAXATION.

MR. TULLY introduced the following proposed article thirteen for the revised Constitution of the State of California:

ARTICLE XIII.

TAXATION.

SECTION 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All private property in the State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word "property" as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall cause to be levied and collected, annually, a State poll tax of three dollars for school purposes, from every male inhabitant of this State over twenty-one and under sixty years of age, from which tax no one of said class shall be exempt, except idiots and insane persons; and no other poll tax shall be imposed in this State by the State or any political division thereof.

SEC. 3. No license tax shall be imposed by this State, or any municipality thereof, upon any trade, calling, occupation, or business, except the following, viz.: the manufacture and sale of all kinds of wine, spiritous and malt liquors; shows, theaters, menageries, sleight of hand performances, exhibitions for profit, and such other business and occupations of like character as the Legislature may judge the public peace or good order may require to be under special State or municipal regulation and control.

SEC. 4. In the assessment and taxation of land the improvements shall be separately assessed, but growing crops shall not be; and uncultivated land shall be assessed and taxed at the same price as cultivated land of the same quality similarly located.

SEC. 5. No corporation, except for benevolent, religious, scientific, or educational purposes, shall be hereafter formed under the laws of this State, unless the persons named as corporators shall, at or before the filing of the articles of incorporation, pay into the State treasury one hundred dollars for the first fifty thousand dollars or less stock, and a further sum of twenty dollars for every additional ten thousand dollars of its capital stock; and no such corporation shall hereafter increase its capital stock without first paying into the State treasury twenty dollars for every ten thousand dollars of increase.

SEC. 6. There shall be a State Board of Equalization in this State, consisting of the Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, and Attorney-General; said Board shall equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the State for State purposes, and perform such duties as may be prescribed by law. The Boards of Supervisors of the various counties of the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization of their respective counties, for county purposes, and discharge such duties as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 7. No agreement, contract, or obligation hereafter made or entered into in this State, shall be of any validity whatever, or be enforced in any of the Courts of this State, or be entitled to record, that provides, directly or indirectly, for the payment of the taxes, or any part of the taxes, of the lender of money, or anything of value, by the borrower, upon the money or things loaned.

SEC. 8. A succession tax shall be imposed and collected upon all legacies and distributive shares derived from the estates of all deceased persons; provided, that no child, brother, sister, father, mother, husband, or wife of any deceased person shall pay such succession tax (non-resident aliens excepted) unless the distributive share of such person amounts in the aggregate to more than five thousand dollars in value, in which case all such persons shall pay a tax of one per cent. on the excess of five thousand dollars. All other persons, corporations, and associations (except non-resident aliens and foreign associations and corporations) shall pay a like tax of one per cent. on the value of what they may respectively receive. Non-resident aliens and foreign corporations and associations shall pay a tax of two per cent. on the aggregate value of any distributive share they may respectively receive.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

SCHEDULE.

MR. TULLY introduced the following schedule for a revised Constitution for the State of California:

SECTION 1. All rights, prosecutions, and claims, and all laws in force at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, and not inconsistent therewith, until altered or repealed by the Legislature, shall continue as if the same had not been adopted.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall provide for the transfer of all records, books, papers, and proceedings from such Courts as are abolished by this Constitution to the Courts provided for herein; and the Courts to which the same are thus transferred shall have the same power and jurisdiction over them as if they had been in the first instance commenced, filed, or lodged therein.

SEC. 3. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of this Constitution, no office shall be superseded thereby nor the laws relative to the duties of the several officers be changed until the entering into office of the new officers under this Constitution.

SEC. 4. Every citizen of California declared to be a legal voter by the Constitution hereby revised and amended, and the laws now in force, shall be entitled to vote on the question of the adoption of this Constitution.

SEC. 5. This Constitution shall be submitted to the people, for their ratification or rejection, at a special election to be held on the first Wednesday in May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, as provided and directed in the Act of the Legislature calling this Convention.

SEC. 6. This Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock M.

SEC. 7. The Secretary of State shall cause this Constitution to be published once a week for at least four consecutive weeks next before the first Wednesday in May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, in not more than five of the newspapers published in this State; one of such newspapers shall be published in the City and County of San Francisco, one in the City of Sacramento, one in the County of Los Angeles, one in the County of Nevada, and one in the County of Tulare. The Governor shall issue his proclamation giving notice of the said election (for the adoption or rejection of this Constitution) at least two months before the said first Wednesday in May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. And the Boards of Supervisors of the several counties in the State shall cause said proclamation to be made public in their respective counties, and general notice of said election to be given for at least thirty days next before said election.

Referred to the Committee on Schedule.

FLAGS IN PROCESSIONS.

MR. TUTTLE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning declaration of bill of rights:

It shall be unlawful for any foreign flag, foreign emblem, or any banner with any religious device, devices, emblem or emblems thereon, to be exhibited or carried in any public procession in this State.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

PUBLIC OFFICERS.

MR. VACQUEREL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to public officers:

Resolved, That no person who shall hereafter be a collector or holder of public money, or receiver of money as an officer, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit until he shall have accounted for and paid, according to law, all money for which he is or may be liable.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

COMMON SCHOOL FUND.

MR. WEBSTER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to providing for a common school fund:

A school tax of five cents per acre shall be annually levied and collected on each and every acre of land owned, claimed, or occupied in this State; said tax, when collected, to be placed in the several county treasuries of the State, to be accredited to the School Fund of the school district wherein raised.

Referred to Committee on Education.

PROTECTION OF LABORERS' AND MECHANICS' WAGES.

MR. WELLIN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the protection of laborers' and mechanics' wages:

In all cases of bankruptcy, laborers' wages shall be preferred creditors to the amount of one hundred dollars.

All contracts which shall be hereafter drawn, wherein a monetary consideration is provided or implied, shall stipulate the lawful money of the United States, and all contracts drawn payable in any specific kind of money shall be void and of no legal effect.

The State Prison Commissioners shall be elected by the people.

All aliens shall pay a poll tax of ten dollars.

All State prisoners shall be employed eight hours a day, directly for the benefit of the State, and no prison laborer shall ever be let out by contract.

Referred to Committee on Labor and Capital.

RECOGNITION OF GOD.

MR. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, recognizing God:

We, the people of the State of California, declare that government is absolutely inherent in God; that we exercise its functions by Divine ordinance; that we hold it in His fear, and make it mandatory in His name, when lawfully expressed. And upon this basis we establish this Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

SYSTEM OF EDUCATION.

MR. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to education:

Resolved, That this be incorporated in article on education:

SECTION —. The State shall provide for a liberal system of education, ranging from primary to university grade, and embracing the culture of the mind, body, morals, and manners of the child.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the rights of women in the new Constitution:

SEC. 25. The State Library shall be placed in charge of some suitable widow or unmarried woman, to be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall perform all the duties of Librarian, for which she shall receive the annual salary of two thousand dollars, and be allowed an additional sum of five hundred dollars for the employment of any assistants she may require in the performance of her duties.

SEC. 26. The State Capitol building, including all its offices, furniture, and ornamental grounds, shall be placed in charge of some suitable widow or unmarried woman, to be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall receive as compensation the annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars, and an allowance of seven hundred dollars per annum for all assistance she may find it necessary to employ in the performance of her duties. And the Legislature shall, by appropriate legislation, provide for the carrying out of the provisions of this section and the section preceding it.

SEC. 27. Women of over twenty-one years of age shall be eligible to any office, whether elective or otherwise, in the educational department of the government; and female teachers shall always be entitled to as high salaries as male teachers of the same grade.

SEC. 28. The Legislature shall provide that at least one half of the employés in the State Printing Office shall be females, if suitable female printers apply there for employment. It shall further provide by law that at least one half of the clerical help in the State offices shall be females, and, as far as may be practicable, in all the public offices in large cities and counties throughout the State.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

BREACH OF TRUST.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to breach of trust:

SEC. 44. If any one who is a candidate for either house of the State Legislature shall publicly declare his intention to support, advocate, and vote for any particular measure or proposed law, and shall, after election, refuse to support, advocate, or vote for such measure or law, he shall be deemed guilty of a breach of trust; or if such a person make a public declaration that he will oppose, try to defeat, and vote against some particular measure or law, discussed before the people during his candidacy, and shall afterwards support, advocate, or vote for any such measure or law, he shall be deemed guilty of a breach of trust, and in either case he shall, upon the sworn complaint of any five of his constituents, be brought to trial before a jury in the District Court of the county in which he resides, and, if convicted as charged, he shall forthwith forfeit his office, be fined a thousand dollars, and be ineligible thereafter to any office of honor, trust, or profit in the State.

SEC. 45. The complaint provided for in the previous section shall be full and specific in its character, and among other necessary allegations allege that the complainants voted for the person complained of, and were induced to do so, in part, because of the public pledges given by him.

SEC. 46. A member of the Legislature, proceeded against as provided for in the two foregoing sections, can claim no exemption from prosecution on account of being a member of the Legislature.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama, introduced the following proposed Preamble and Declaration of Rights for a revised Constitution of the State of California:

PREAMBLE.

We, the people of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to better secure its blessings to ourselves and posterity, do ordain and establish this revised and amended Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have many inherent and inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted by them for their protection, security, and benefit, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

SEC. 3. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate forever; but a jury trial may be waived by the parties in all civil cases, and in all criminal cases below felony, in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require its suspension.

SEC. 6. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted; provided, that whipping shall not be deemed cruel or unusual when inflicted as a punishment for crime; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained.

SEC. 7. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

SEC. 8. No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime (except in cases of impeachment and in cases of militia when in active service, and the land and naval forces in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in time of peace, and in cases of petit larceny, under the regulation of the Legislature), unless on presentment or indictment of a grand jury; and in any trial, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend in person and with counsel, as in civil actions. No person shall be subject to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor shall he be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions on indictments for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right to freely assemble together to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by this State in time of peace.

SEC. 13. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 14. Representatives shall be by districts, as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in cases of fraud; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed.

SEC. 17. Foreigners who are entitled to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, who now are or may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the ownership, possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens; foreigners not entitled to become citizens under the naturalization laws of the United States, shall not have the right to own any real estate, nor to make a will, nor to take any property by inheritance.

SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State.

SEC. 19. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated, and no warrant shall issue but for probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 20. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 21. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

SEC. 22. The Legislature shall have no power to make an appropriation, for any purpose whatever, for a longer period than two years.

SEC. 23. No part of this Constitution shall be construed or held to be directory, but the whole thereof is hereby declared to be and intended to be mandatory.

SEC. 24. No money shall be appropriated or drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious sect or society, or for the use or benefit of any sectarian school, nor shall any grant or donation of any property ever be made by the State, or by any county, city, city and county, or town, to any creed, church, or sectarian purpose whatever.

SEC. 25. The State shall never assume, become responsible for, or pay the debt or debts of any county, city, city and county, town, or township, or of any corporation whatever.

SEC. 26. Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation be first made therefor in money; and such compensation shall be assessed by a jury, without deduction for benefit to any property of the owner.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

FORCED SALES.

MR. WYATT introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to judicial, or forced sales:

SECTION —. No property shall be sold under judicial, or other forced sale, unless at such sale it bring two thirds of its appraised value, to be ascertained as directed by law.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

PUBLIC LANDS.

MR. WYATT offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Surveyor-General of the State be and he is hereby requested to furnish to the President of this Convention, for the information of the members of the Convention, at the earliest day compatible with his public duties, the following information in a tabulated form:

First—The whole number of acres of land which has been certified or listed by the Government of the United States to the State of California by reason of the following grants or donations of land made by the United States to the State, to wit:

Second—The grant commonly known as the swamp and overflowed lands;

Third—The grant commonly known as the five hundred thousand acre grant;

Fourth—The grant of the seventy-two sections, commonly known as the seminary grant;

Fifth—The grant of ten sections, commonly known as the public building grant;

Sixth—The grant commonly known as the sixteenth and thirty-sixth section grant for common school purposes, and the lieu lands granted supplemental to the State grant of school lands;

Seventh—The grant commonly known as the Agricultural and Mechanics' Art College grant;

Eighth—The Yosemite Valley grant;

Ninth—The Mariposa Big Tree Grove grant;

Tenth—The number of acres of land so listed or certified to the State under each of said grants;

Eleventh—What number of acres of land belonging to each of said grants have been sold or disposed of by the State;

Twelfth—What number of acres of land does the State own and hold undisposed of under each of said grants;

Thirteenth—The total cash value received by the State for the lands which have been sold by her under said grants.

Also, what number of acres of land has the State now in possession, or sold or disposed of by virtue of her sovereignty, as salt marsh and tide lands.

Also, the total amount received in cash by the State for the sale of said lands.

Adopted.

NEWSPAPERS.

MR. HUESTIS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be and he is hereby instructed to supply the desks of the newspaper correspondents with a copy of all the printed documents ordered by this Convention.

Adopted.

MR. SWENSON offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That Jacob R. Freud, of San Francisco, be and he is hereby added to the Committee on Education.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is of opinion that that resolution is out of order at present. The gentleman must give notice if he wishes to change a standing rule. The committees are all appointed under a standing rule, and that rule cannot be changed excepting by one day's notice, and a two-third vote.

MR. BLACKMER. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. ROLFE. I rise to a point of order. I believe it is out of order to consider that at all.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The motion is out of order.

THE RULES.

MR. CAMPBELL, pursuant to notice, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That rule sixty be and the same is hereby amended by striking out the words and figures "except rules fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five."

Digitized by Google

MR. CAMPBELL. The object is merely to have the right to suspend the rules, the same as any of the others, by a two-third vote.

The ayes and noes were demanded, and the resolution was lost by the following vote:

STATIONERY FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

MR. REYNOLDS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses shall furnish to the Secretary of State, a list of all the accredited newspaper correspondents who have been assigned seats on the floor of this Convention, which list shall contain the name of such correspondent and the newspaper by whom accredited, and that the Secretary of State be and he is hereby authorized to furnish to such newspaper correspondents on such list such stationery as they may require for their newspaper correspondence, not exceeding in value ten dollars to each.

MR. REYNOLDS. I move that the resolution be adopted. I think it but fair that the Convention extend to the newspaper correspondents the usual courtesy extended by all legislative bodies. The Legislature has been in the habit of allowing them fifteen and twenty dollars worth, but in order to meet the views of this Convention, which seem to be in the line of curtailing expenses, I have inserted the sum of ten dollars.

MR. LARKIN. I would rise to a point of order. I think that is proper for the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. FAWCETT. I make the further point of order that it is not within the power of this Convention to appropriate money to private men and purposes. I ask for a ruling of the President upon that point.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that it is the usual practice of the Legislature to make this kind of appropriations, yet I should myself think it would not be within the power of the Convention to make them. I think it is not within the power of the Convention to make such an appropriation. As at present advised, I should sustain the point of order, that the resolution is out of order.

PROPOSED CHANGE OF RULE.

MR. WINANS. I rise for the purpose of presenting for the consideration of this body a series of resolutions of vital consequence, in my judgment, in determining the character of our future deliberations and action in this body. In order to pass the resolutions it would be necessary to modify part of the existing rules. The resolutions, therefore, would not be strictly in order, nor even the reading of them, without giving the requisite notice, but as I have occupied very little of the attention of this body, and as it is desirable that I should express the character and purpose of the resolutions, in order that gentlemen may determine whether they will modify the rules to adopt them or not, I ask leave not only to read the resolutions, but to state their character and object, and I hope that the gentlemen will grant it on the present occasion. The resolutions are as follows:

Resolved, That the form and order of the present Constitution shall be adopted by this Convention in the new Constitution formed by it, to the following extent: that the new Constitution shall consist of a preamble, to be followed by twelve consecutive articles, which shall be numbered, entitled, and have sequence respectively in the same manner, and comprise the same objects, as the twelve articles of the present Constitution. That to these shall be added such new articles, numbered in proper order after said twelve, as this Convention shall adopt, after which shall follow the schedule as the final division of the new Constitution.

Resolved That the said preamble and articles shall be considered and acted upon by the Convention in the order and sequence aforesaid, and no one of them nor any subject-matter belonging to any one of them, shall be adopted or discussed until all other articles and matters pertaining to those having priority as aforesaid shall have been disposed of in their order.

Resolved, That for the purpose of giving effect and enforcement to the resolutions aforesaid, the several committees having charge of the matters embraced in said preamble and twelve articles shall make their reports in the order herein named, and none of said committees shall report upon the subject-matter of any of said articles until all the articles having priority thereto, as aforesaid, shall have been considered and disposed of by this Convention; and that the other committees having charge of matters not embraced in the said articles shall report afterwards and in such order as the Convention shall determine.

Resolved, That all rules inconsistent with the foregoing resolutions shall be modified, or so far as necessary revoked, to the extent of insuring conformity therewith.

MR. WINANS. The object of these resolutions is apparent on the face of them, it appears to me, but it is a subject that requires some thought.

In the first place, sir, we want to make as few changes in the present Constitution as can be made with consistency. No man wants to change the present Constitution just for the sake of change, or unless such change is necessary. No change is necessary in the form, plan, or order of the present Constitution. We have there the departments into which they are divided, and all the regular sequence and order, such as usually obtains in the framing of a fundamental compact. Let us determine to adhere to that order and form so far as it extends, and then apply new propositions where they belong, to the extent of the changes we propose to make.

Again, as regards the proposition that the committee shall make reports in the order named in the present Constitution. The object of that is to prevent confusion. There will be the direst and most inextricable entanglement if things proceed in the order which is now dictated. If members will reflect they will see that not only will committees come in with articles not existing in consecutive form but articles thrown pell mell, one coming in precedent to another where it should follow it. Not only that, but under the fifteen day rule the articles of the respective committees will come in by piecemeal. A committee has referred to it a certain subject-matter. That committee is compelled to report in fifteen days, and the consequence is that there will come in here from one committee one thing and from another something else, all thrown together confusedly into one disjointed mass. Such a plan will never work. It is to obviate that that I proposed the method suggested in these resolutions—that each subject be disposed of before we proceed to the next. That will not consume more time, because it will take the same period of time to discuss these relative propositions and articles in their proper order, as to discuss them in disorder and disconnection and in unnatural sequence. It would take a much longer time to dispose of them under the present rule. If the objection be urged that this calls upon committees to report in regular order, and that they can be compelled to do so, I answer that they can just as well report in order as to report pell mell. Moreover, the questions raised, excepting perhaps the declaration of rights, are those which will involve but little contest or confusion. They are not likely to be the debatable points of the conflict which will be presented here and which will array the antagonism of this body.

Again, sir, in regard to the reports of the other committees that constitute committees on subjects existing in the present Constitution. This aims at no disparagement, and involves no destruction of their purposes. In a regular turn every subject will come up and be debated. Every subject will have the attention bestowed on it which this body is willing to bestow. In view of these facts I have proposed these resolutions, the result of which will be of incalculable benefit.

As regards the modification of the rules, I do not see that there can be any impropriety in that. We have now, perhaps, too many rules. Our rules were formed upon legislative precedents rather than upon the parliamentary law at large. They are to meet the wants of this Convention, and they will grow as time develops them and the deliberations of this body progress. If they stand in the way of these resolutions, and to the extent to which they do, then we should amend the two thirds rule which prevents a real expression of the views of this Convention. Our plan should be to reach the will of the majority. I ask the members, inasmuch as it cannot be reached until another day, to give consideration to this whole subject, and see if in their judgment it will not be well to adopt the suggestion before we get entirely lost in the confusion which will ensue if we continue under the present rule.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table for one day.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: With the consent of the Convention, I would like to say a few words in regard to that proposition. It is entirely unnecessary that we should pass any such resolution, because we have a committee appointed now on that very matter—the Committee on Revision and Adjustment; and when any proposition comes in here reported by a committee, and is adopted, it will go to that committee for adjustment. The Committees on the Legislative Department, on Preamble and Bill of Rights, on the Judiciary and Judicial Department, on Miscellaneous Subjects, may report the same matter, but of course, it will only be incorporated in the Constitution under one head. Now, take the Constitution of the State of Pennsylvania, which I think is quite a model; there all the different subjects are branched off in a way that will be a guide to us here when we come to arrange the matter. After the Convention has adopted them, they go to this committee to be arranged in their proper place; but to endeavor to do it through the committees generally, would be useless; it is impossible. It cannot be done in the way proposed by the resolution.

MR. WINANS. I move that these resolutions be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, with instructions to report as speedily as possible.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman has already given notice of his resolutions, and they will be on the table one day.

MR. WINANS. I withdraw that notice, and ask that they go to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will be out of order, because he has announced that the resolutions will alter or change the rules. He must, therefore, give one day's notice.

MR. LAINE. I am in favor of having them immediately printed, so that we can see them at once.

THE PRESIDENT. They are not before the body.

MR. WINANS. I suppose they should be printed.

THE PRESIDENT. Not before they are acted on by the Convention.

NOTICE.

MR. WINANS. I hereby give notice that, on the next day of session of this Convention, I shall move the adoption of the following resolutions, or, if necessary, the revocation of those rules which prevent their enforcement if adopted:

Resolved, That the form and order of the present Constitution shall be adopted by this Convention, in the new Constitution formed by it, to the following extent: that the new Constitution shall consist of a preamble, to be followed by twelve consecutive articles, which shall be numbered, entitled, and have sequence, respectively, in the same manner, and comprise the same subjects as the twelve articles of the present Constitution; that to these shall be added such new articles, numbered in proper order after said twelve, as this Convention shall adopt, after which shall follow the schedule as the final division of said new Constitution.

Resolved, That said preamble and articles shall be considered and acted upon by this Convention in the order and sequence aforesaid, and no one of them, nor any subject-matter belonging to any one of them, shall be adopted or discussed until all other articles and matter pertaining to them, having priority as aforesaid, shall have been disposed of in their order.

Resolved, That for the purpose of giving effect and enforcement to the rules aforesaid, the several committees having charge of the matters embraced in the said preamble and twelve articles shall make their reports in the order herein named, and none of said committees shall report upon the subject-matter of any of said articles until all the articles having priority thereto, as aforesaid, shall have been considered and disposed of by this Convention, and that the other committees having charge of matter not embraced in said articles shall report afterwards and in such order as this Convention may determine.

Resolved, That all rules inconsistent with the foregoing resolutions shall be modified, or, so far as necessary, revoked, to the extent of insuring conformity therewith.

NEWSPAPERS.

MR. REYNOLDS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That each member of this Convention be and he is hereby authorized to order not more than —— daily newspapers or their equivalent cost in weeklies, to be furnished to each member on his order; and that he shall furnish the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses with a list of the same. Said committee shall audit all bills for newspapers so furnished at the end of each four weeks of the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move to amend the resolution so that it shall read that "each gentleman shall pay for his own newspapers."

MR. LARKIN. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Carried.

NOTICES.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that I shall move, at the next session of this Convention, to amend rule seventy-three, by amending subdivision eight to read: "On Education, to consist of thirteen members."

Laid over one day, under the rule.

MR. NOEL. Notice is hereby given that I will move, on the twelfth instant, to amend rule fifty-two, so that it shall read: "Propositions and resolutions mentioned in the last foregoing rule shall embrace but one subject. They shall be read once by title when introduced, and then referred without debate to the appropriate committee."

Laid over for one day, under the rule.

MR. McCALLUM. Notice is hereby given that I will, on to-morrow, or as soon as the motion can be heard thereafter, move to strike out rule sixty, and insert as follows:

Rule 60.—No standing rule or order of the Convention shall be rescinded or changed without a vote of a majority, and one day's notice being given therefor, but a rule or order may be suspended temporarily by a two-thirds vote of the members present.

Laid over for one day under the rule.

PAY DURING ABSENCE.

MR. REYNOLDS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, No member shall receive pay for any week day on which he has not actually attended the Convention, except in case of sickness, or when he is absent on committee duty, or upon adjournment over of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that resolution out of order.

MR. REYNOLDS. I appeal from the decision of the chair.

MR. HUESTIS. I move to lay the appeal of the gentleman on the table.

MR. REYNOLDS. I hope the gentleman will do me the favor to withdraw that motion to lay on the table. This appeal has been taken once or twice.

MR. HUESTIS. I will grant it. I withdraw the motion.

MR. REYNOLDS. I thank the gentleman.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides the resolution out of order, on the ground that it is in violation of the statute.

MR. HUESTIS. Can one member appeal from the decision of the Chair?

MR. STEDMAN. I also appeal.

MR. BARNES. I second the appeal.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

Messrs. Barbour, Stedman, and Barnes called for the ayes and noes.

MR. EAGON. I would ask for information. My judgment is, that a motion of this character a few days ago was indefinitely postponed, upon the motion of the gentleman from Humboldt, and consequently a matter of this kind cannot arise in this Convention again.

MR. REYNOLDS. I will state, for the information of the gentleman, that that was an entirely different motion. That was a question upon adopting a rule.

THE PRESIDENT. This question, having been indefinitely postponed, cannot be revived, except by a majority vote of the Convention permitting it to be revived.

MR. BARNES. I would like to inquire if there is any lawful authority for the statement made by the gentleman from Amador, Mr. Eagon, that this matter was indefinitely postponed. It appears to be assumed that it was. I take issue with the gentleman upon that proposition. The question came up upon the adoption of a rule, and in such a form that it can be taken up again. I would like to have it come up, and be voted on once squarely.

THE PRESIDENT. The present incumbent of the Chair was not in the Chair when the question came up before, but is informed that it was indefinitely postponed.

MR. REYNOLDS. No such proposition as this. There never has been a vote taken upon it yet.

THE PRESIDENT. That question can only be decided by an examination of the Journal.

MR. BARNES. My recollection of that matter is, that when the proposition was advanced, it was decided by the President that it was out of order, just as it has been decided this morning.

MR. BARBOUR. That was on the question of adopting the rule proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, and the laying on the table of the appeal. There was no motion to indefinitely postpone. That was upon rule sixty-five, and it was postponed to be inserted as rule seventy-three.

MR. LAINE. My recollection is quite distinct that this matter was indefinitely postponed three days ago.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That is my recollection.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair can only decide that this question has been indefinitely postponed; but that it is within the power of the Convention, by a majority vote, to take it up again.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: There was never any motion made or entertained to indefinitely postpone this question.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order. The motion is out of order.

MR. REYNOLDS. I move now that we take up this motion.

NOTICE.

MR. NOEL. I give notice that I will move, on the fourteenth instant, to amend rule fifty-two, so as to read: "Resolutions and propositions mentioned in the last foregoing rule shall embrace but one subject; they shall be read once by title when introduced, and then referred, without debate, to the appropriate committee."

ABOUT PAY.

MR. TULLY offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That any gentleman on this floor wishing to donate his per diem may be allowed to do so.

MR. REYNOLDS. I ask for the reading of my resolution.

The Secretary read:

Resolved, No member shall receive pay for any week day on which he has not actually attended the Convention, except in case of sickness, or when he is absent on committee duty, or upon adjournment over of the Convention.

MR. VAN DYKE. Won't it be necessary to reconsider the vote by which that proposition was laid on the table?

MR. REYNOLDS. That motion was not laid on the table. The appeal was laid on the table.

THE PRESIDENT. The question now is whether the Convention will take up this resolution.

The question was put, and the Convention refused to take up the resolution.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. EDGERTON. I move that the Convention adjourn until two o'clock on Monday.

MR. WHITE. I move to lay the motion on the table.

THE PRESIDENT. That is the first time the Chair ever heard a motion to lay a motion to adjourn on the table. [Laughter.]

MR. EDGERTON'S motion to adjourn until Monday was lost.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till one o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at one P. M., the President pro tem. in the chair.

Roll call dispensed with.

PAY DURING ABSENCE.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I have a resolution to offer, and before it is read I would ask that no gentleman move to lay it on the table, because I desire to have a vote on it:

Resolved, That after Saturday, October twelfth, no certificates of pay to any officer or member shall cover any period of absence from any session, with or without leave of the Convention, except in case of sickness, or on committee duty, or where any officer who may be absent shall provide a substitute.

MR. STEDMAN. I move that the resolution be adopted, and I call for the ayes and noes.

MR. ROLFE. I move that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

MR. CAMPBELL. Under the rule the resolution cannot be voted on. It has to be referred and take its regular course.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The point of order is well taken.

MR. STEDMAN. I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Rules.

Digitized by Google

MR. TULLY. I raise the point of order that the subject has been ruled out two or three times. This Convention has no control over the pay or per diem of the members of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go to the Committee on Rules.

MR. WELLIN offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a fine of ten dollars be and is hereby imposed upon members for each and every day's absence from this Convention, except in case of sickness or absence on committee duty.

MR. FILCHER. I would like to inquire what order of business we are working under.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Miscellaneous. [Laughter.]

MR. HUESTIS. I move that the resolution offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wellin, be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

Carried.

PAY OF PAGES.

MR. HILBORN presented the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred resolution twenty-seven, respecting the payment of eighteen dollars to W. F. Germaine, for services as Page during the temporary organization of this Convention, have had the same under consideration, and herewith report the same back, with a recommendation that it be adopted.

Also, resolution number thirty-five, respecting the payment of fifteen dollars to Edwin H. Morris, for services as Page up to the date of the permanent organization, and recommend that the same be adopted.

S. G. HILBORN, Chairman.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would inquire whether these Pages were appointed by the Governor to do this duty?

MR. HILBORN. I will say that the other young gentleman was one of the Pages of the Assembly, and they were designated by the Governor to perform that duty until the organization of the Convention. They performed that duty, and these resolutions simply provide for their pay.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move that the resolutions be re-referred to the committee, and that they make a further report as to how much has already been expended on the Pages, and how many Pages have already been paid. I believe six or eight have already been paid.

MR. HILBORN. The committee have no information to that effect. This is the only resolution that has been before our committee. I am satisfied that these young gentlemen were designated by the Governor.

MR. HAGER. If he has certified to that fact, I suppose that is all that can be done. The Chairman says that the Governor has certified to their appointment. Now, it matters not whether we pay six or eight, if he has gone through the regular channel.

MR. HILBORN. I am informed that there are only two who have been previously paid; that there were four during the temporary organization.

The motion to recommit was lost.

The resolutions were adopted.

ADDITION TO COMMITTEE.

MR. FILCHER offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the name of William P. Grace, of San Francisco, be added to the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Grace is a builder and an architect, and his services on the Committee would be valuable. I ask the reference of the resolution to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

So ordered.

REPORTING OF THE DEBATES.

MR. HILBORN presented the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom were referred Resolutions numbers twenty-three, twenty-four, and twenty-five, all relating to the employment of Phonographic Reporters for this Convention, have had the same under consideration, and herewith report the same back, with a recommendation that they be not passed.

In the opinion of this committee, it is not expedient to report the proceedings of this Convention at the expense of the State

It is impossible to ascertain the exact cost of reporting and printing our proceedings, but the sum would necessarily be very large.

If the Constitution which this body shall frame is rejected by the people, then the reports would be useless, and the money they cost will be thrown away. If, on the other hand, we are successful in framing a Constitution which is adopted by the people, then private enterprise will produce a report of our proceedings which is likely to be better than one produced under direction of this Convention, and without expense to the State.

S. G. HILBORN, Chairman.

MR. LARKIN. I move the adoption of the report and the concurrence of this Convention with the report.

MR. ROLFE. I move as an amendment that the resolutions be referred to the Committee on Printing and Reporting, with instructions to ascertain what expense will be involved. As I understand it similar instructions were given this Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, which I see they have not complied with. From the reading of the report the committee do not appear to have complied with the instructions of the Convention. If I remember, the instructions were that they should ascertain the probable cost. They seem only to report their ideas as to the propriety of reporting the debates at all. If we ascertain the probable cost by a careful investigation by the proper committee, it may be that the Convention will conclude to have a report of the proceedings of the Convention, at least of the debates subsequent to the present time—I mean a report of the debates when we get to work on the Constitution itself. I therefore make the motion that it be referred to the Committee on Printing and Reporting, with instructions to report the probable cost.

MR. BIGGS. I am very much opposed to the motion. That question has been brought up time and again before this Convention. It has been voted down repeatedly. I hope the report will be adopted. This house has had several votes on that. There was over a hundred members voted against a Phonographic Reporter. It has been re-referred and re-referred. I think by the time this Convention gets through printing all the propositions for amendments to this Constitution, they will have a great deal to pay for, and there will not be much left to pay reporters. I am opposed to the motion of the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe, and insist on the motion being adopted by the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin.

The motion to refer was lost.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: With the indulgence of the Convention, before we enter into the calling of the ayes and noes on the adoption of the report, I desire to make a motion, and state my reasons for it. It is a motion that when we adjourn to-day, we adjourn to meet at two o'clock P. M. on next Monday. Now, sir, I wish to say a word as to why I make this motion. It is well known that there are gentlemen here who have business to attend to at home, and others who desire to see their families, and we have been here now for two weeks. There is no particular necessity for remaining in session to-morrow, and all we do is heaping additional expenses upon the State. These gentlemen desire to be away for a day, and if there is no important business to be done, I do not think that our constituents would think it wrong at all for us to adjourn, for the purpose of attending to our private business. It is not expected that we, as representatives of the people on this floor, are to neglect entirely our own business. We ought to have a little time to go to our homes, and I believe that the people of the State will be well satisfied with our action in that respect. I hope that this motion will prevail at this time.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I rise to a point of order. A motion to adjourn to a particular time is not a privileged question. There is a motion before the house already.

MR. EAGON. I asked the privilege of the house to make the motion if there was no objection.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I object.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion was made without objection. The Chair will put the question. All those in favor of the motion will, when their names are called, say "aye;" those opposed, "no."

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

REPORTING THE DEBATES.

[MR. EDGERTON in the chair:]

MR. BROWN. I would like to hear read the resolutions under which the committee have made this report.

THE SECRETARY read the resolutions which had been referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, as follows:

(Offered by MR. MCFARLAND:)

WHEREAS, It is of the greatest importance that the notes of the proceedings of this Convention should be taken in full, in order that the same may be published in case the Constitution shall be adopted by the people; therefore, be it

Digitized by Google

Resolved, That one official reporter shall be elected, who shall have power to appoint one assistant each to receive a per diem of ten dollars.

The duties of the official reporter and his assistant shall be to take down in shorthand, verbatim, all the debates and proceedings of the Convention, from the beginning to the end.

The official reporter shall be required to give a good and sufficient bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars that he will, upon the order of this Convention, at any time, or upon the order of the Legislature, or upon the request of any member of this Convention, write out in full or in part, as may be directed, the debates and proceedings of the Convention, at a cost not to exceed twenty cents per folio for transcribing.

(Offered by MR. SMITH, of Kern:)

Resolved, That there be elected by this Convention an official shorthand reporter, whose duty it shall be to report such debates as may be made upon the following leading questions, to wit:

1st. Chinese Immigration.
2d. Taxation and Finance.
3d. The Judiciary.
4th. State and Municipal Indebtedness.
5th. Education.
6th. State, County, and Township Organization.
7th. Railroads and other Corporations.
8th. Water and Water Rights.
9th. Suffrage.

Provided, the expense of such reporting shall not exceed six thousand dollars for the session of the Convention.

(Offered by MR. McCALLUM:)

Resolved, That a Phonographic Reporter and an assistant should be appointed to report and transcribe the proceedings of this Convention; provided, that such services can be obtained on satisfactory terms to the Convention.

Resolved further, That the committee heretofore appointed on Phonographic Reporters is hereby instructed to ascertain on what terms such services can be obtained, and report thereon by resolution or otherwise as soon as practicable; such report to include the per diem, the amount per folio for transcribing and cost of indexing, and if printed, when and on what terms can the same be placed on the desks of the members.

MR. BARNES. I think, and all the gentlemen will agree with me, that resolutions of this character, when submitted to a committee, are entitled to fair treatment. I mean fair treatment in the parliamentary sense. The resolutions, all of them, look favorably upon the appointment of an official reporter. None of them are against it; and the committee was requested by the resolutions, if I understand them, to inquire and report to this Convention what the cost of this thing shall be. Now I submit, Mr. President, that this has not been done. The committee have ignored the resolutions, and have undertaken to dispose of the question in a manner in accordance with their own views. These gentleman were not requested to give us their opinion as to whether it was desirable or undesirable to have official reporters of this Convention. They were simply required to find out and let us know what it would cost to do the work. I hope that the report will not be accepted. I move that the report of the committee be recommitted, with instructions to them to comply with the orders of this Convention.

MR. McCALLUM. The committee had a perfect right, so far as that is concerned, to report as they have reported. The gentleman from the First District, Mr. Barnes, is in error in supposing that the first of the resolutions offered by me had been adopted. I drew that resolution, and the intention was to adopt the first resolution first, and after that had been adopted then adopt the second, and have the committee named ascertain the facts referred to in the second resolution. But, as to the reference to the Committee on Contingent Expenses, they had the right to report as they have, because the Convention had not adopted anything in regard to their action. I have said nothing upon this question so far, and desire to say but a word now. It is not true that there has been any test vote upon this question. The only question was, "That the Convention now proceed to elect a Phonographic Reporter," and upon which the gentleman from the First District, and all those who favor having the reports, with scarcely an exception, voted "no," on the proposition that we were then to proceed to an election of a reporter. I was opposed to that, with many others, because I believed we ought to know the terms that could be obtained. Therefore I offered this resolution which was last read, which, if gentlemen will remember, was substantially this: that a Phonographic Reporter and his assistant shall be selected, provided their services can be obtained on satisfactory terms to the Convention. Then follows the second resolution, providing that the committee heretofore appointed upon this subject should be required to ascertain the cost of such transcribing, the cost of indexing, which we never learned anything about heretofore, the cost of the whole work of the reporting of the Convention. It does not propose that we shall have a reporter under any circumstances, but only in case his services can be obtained on satisfactory terms. If it did I would vote against it.

If this motion to adopt the report is lost, I propose to call up my resolutions, so that we can take a test vote, which we have never yet had, on the proposition whether we are going to have a Phonographic Reporter on any terms.

The idea that if the Constitution should be adopted then private enterprise will get out something in the shape of a report—that private enterprise could possibly reach it—seems to me to be very inconsistent in itself. It would be absolutely impossible.

Now, Mr. President, when the Constitution is adopted it will be too late. If reporters are to be elected in any Constitutional Convention, of course it must be decided beforehand whether the report ought to be made. It is a thing which necessarily you must take your chances on, whether the Constitution will be adopted or not. My distinguished friend seems to rely upon the argument that it is doubtful whether the Constitution will be adopted, but if we wait until that is decided, then the question can never come up as to whether there ought to have been a report or not. It must be decided now if the report is to be made; and so far as the probabilities are concerned, I take occasion to say that I entertain not one doubt about the adoption of the Constitution which will be presented to the people by this Convention, unless the two extremes in this Convention should fail to agree upon any document to submit to the people.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I believe I introduced the first resolution which was referred to the committee. That resolution simply provides that two reporters shall be elected; that they shall keep shorthand notes of all the proceedings and debates of the Convention; that they shall report the whole or any part in longhand writing when required either by this Convention or by the Legislature, or by any member of the Convention. Now, that is all that it provides. There is no question about the cost. It is simply twenty dollars a day. Now, the report of the committee, to the effect that if we want a report hereafter private enterprise will furnish it, is certainly, upon its face, foolish. We cannot get a report of the proceedings of this Convention after the Convention is over, unless you have taken it during the progress of the Convention.

Now, this proposition does not include the transcribing or the publication. It simply provides for a state of things upon which hereafter, if you choose, you can have the reports transcribed and published. If you adopt the report of the committee, you simply prevent any foundation for any reports hereafter, whether the Constitution be adopted or whether it be not adopted. The proposition is simply to employ two shorthand reporters at twenty dollars a day to take down the debates and proceedings, to be transcribed and published in whole or in part hereafter, as the Convention may order, or the Legislature, or any particular member who desires to have any particular portion of it transcribed. That is all there is of the proposition. We know what it will cost. If we choose to have it transcribed and published hereafter, that is a matter for the future.

MR. LARKIN. We understand it fully. If we are going to do anything, let's do it. Let us fix it positively for a definite sum. Now, I look upon my motion as one that will bring a test vote. I move to indefinitely postpone the whole subject-matter.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to recommit, upon the ground that the report is not in compliance with the resolutions referred to the committee. The merits of the question are not under discussion.

MR. BROWN. We have heard that there has been nothing presented by this committee, in accordance with the instructions which they received as to that resolution. Now it is highly probable to me that several of the members of this body were absent when the instructions were given. That committee was required to ascertain the amount of expense, not only of reporting, but of transcribing; and it was the wish of the members of this body to know, so far as could be ascertained, the entire expense connected with this work. The committee are supposed to have investigated, and they find the expense to be beyond what they had anticipated. They say they cannot tell what the expense will be, but that it will be large. And then they advise something, perhaps, that was not exactly required—that we have none such. Now, I am under the impression it was their right, as they could not give us the cost, to tell us what they had learned of the extent of expense.

MR. AYERS. I think, Mr. President, if this Convention requires the information which these resolutions call for, that the subject-matter should be referred to the proper committee. I think that the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses have made all the examination they could make. I do not suppose that that committee was appointed with a view to their knowing anything about these technical questions. I submit—I will not do it myself, because I am a member of that committee—that this whole matter can be cleared up if some gentleman will move to refer it to the Committee on Reporting and Printing. If not, I think you had better discharge that committee.

MR. McCALLUM. That is the motion I wish to make; that this whole matter be referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. BARNES. I accept the amendment.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: There is no question but that the foundation of our constitutional structure should be upon the basis of economy. I fully approve of that position, but at the same time there are other matters to be considered. We sit here as a Constitutional Convention, not as a mere legislative body; not for a day; not to enact ephemeral laws, but to frame a Constitution, which, if adopted, is to govern the people of California to-day and their descendants. There is no telling, sir, how long this Constitution, if it is ratified by the people, may last. It may last for half a century. Those rude miners who sat in Convention in eighteen hundred and forty-nine, came together and put forth a Constitution which has stood the test of nearly thirty years. Now, I am not in favor of the great State of California standing in the background. I fully realize the fact that those great imperial States of this Union that have recently adopted Constitutions, have also had their debates published for future reference, and it seems to me that our State should take the same position, unless this economical spirit prevails to such an extent as to preclude us from voting for a Phonographic Reporter. Now, it is said that some gentlemen may erect monuments for themselves; that they are desirous of having these debates published for that purpose. Well, that might to some extent be proper, but that argument would not govern me at all.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on referring the whole matter to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. JOHNSON. I am in favor of referring these resolutions to that committee, and it occurs to me that the resolution of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, is the only tangible one that has been suggested before this Convention. I shall, therefore, vote to recommit and against the adoption of the report.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I wish to add one word to what has been said on behalf of the recommitment of this subject-matter of reporting. The specific reason that I wish to assign is, that the house is not full to-day. There are a very large number of members excused one way and the other—probably thirty members absent. Mr. President, I have not any doubt whatever that when this Convention really expresses its judgment upon the subject by a majority vote, it will favor the adoption of a reasonably economic plan of reporting the debates of this Convention. I believe that every member of this body who will stop to reflect upon the subject and realize what they are about to do, will make up their minds that it is their duty to preserve in some official, authentic form the proceedings and debates of this Convention. It is, I think, certain that the committee whose report we are now considering or dealing with, failed, no doubt, through misapprehension, to obey the behests of the Convention. They were instructed to ascertain certain matters of fact. They neglected to do so. Now, the committee to whom it is proposed to send this matter is a standing committee. It is in the exact line of their duty, and if they have any duties to perform, they are such as is proposed to assign them. They will give such a report as the Convention desires, and when this Convention is full—when these members are present and we can have a fair discussion upon this question, I do not doubt that we shall adopt the wisdom and foresight of all the other States and preserve in an authentic form the proceedings and debates of this Convention. I therefore trust that this motion will prevail and that this matter will be sent to an appropriate committee.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I desire to say why I favor sending this matter to this committee. This is not an expression as to whether we favor phonographic reporting, or whether we repudiate it. It is merely to have a full examination on the subject, and to have a full report, and to be able to vote intelligently; and therefore I favor referring this matter to the Committee on Phonographic Reporting. I shall vote in that way.

MR. BARBOUR. I propose to vote against this motion. I want to come to a square vote upon the report of the committee. I say we have already had the sense of the Convention on this subject. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager, offered a resolution, that in the opinion of this Convention the debates ought to be reported, and it was voted down by over one hundred votes. Now we have it again, in the shape of a report of a committee. That brings the matter squarely before the Convention, and I want to vote on it.

MR. HAGER. I do not want to debate this matter. I have said heretofore that the Act of the Legislature calling this Convention is equivalent to an instruction to this Convention to employ Phonographic Reporters. About the printing, there is no instruction. Now, this motion is merely to get information. Now, what gentleman here can refuse to receive information, where the Legislature has instructed him that he might employ Phonographic Reporters. You don't want a report; you don't want to know what it will cost: but you want an expression from this Convention before the members understand anything about it. Why not refer this matter, and have all the information we can obtain, before we act finally? I say that I will not vote to print this report now; but I do say that there is something in the idea that we should, under this Act, take this report, and let the Legislature print it hereafter if they see fit. The object of the motion is simply to gain information, and I cannot see why any gentleman should object.

MR. BIGGS. The Legislature says they may do thus and so. That is the language of the law. And if gentlemen want their speeches taken down in shorthand, I say let them pay out of their own pockets. The Convention of the State of Ohio spent one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to recommit to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. BIGGS [standing in the main aisle]. I trust that this Convention will vote that motion down.

[Cries of "louder!" "louder!"]

MR. ROLFE. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is out of his place in the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken.

MR. FAWCETT. I only ask leave to remind this Convention that this whole matter has been in the hands of the Committee on Reporting and Printing before, and that the house is in possession of all the facts which the present resolution contemplates. They reported that the expense of taking the reports would be two thousand dollars; of transcribing, not to exceed six thousand dollars, and the printing about ten thousand dollars—making in all eighteen thousand six hundred dollars and some cents. That information has been in the possession of this Convention for the past week. The indexes have not been reported upon——

MR. AYERS. I will remind the gentleman——

MR. FAWCETT. Except the cost of making the indexes, a comparatively small item; perhaps one thousand dollars.

MR. FILCHER. It seems to me that it is useless to recommit this matter of reports. If this Convention desires the reports taken, they know they can get it at ten dollars a day each for the reporter and his assistant. If they wish a longhand report of these proceedings, it has already been stated on the best authority that it can be obtained, and the cost. If they also wish to have that longhand report printed, it has been stated, in terms as clear as the noonday sun, what the cost of a printed copy will be. These points have all been looked into and investigated by the Committee on Reporting and Printing, and they have reported to this body, separately and in both, each of these items. It seems to me if this Convention wishes to vote upon this matter they should be sufficiently posted now to decide positively pro or con. If they wish reports, let us have them now. If they are determined to have no reports on any terms, I say let some vote or other decide the matter, and end it at once. I hope the motion to refer will not carry, because every point has already been laid before the Convention.

The ayes and noes were demanded, and the motion to refer was lost by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the report.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: It seems to me that there is a disposition to force this matter, and it looks to me as scarcely proper to do so. Scarcely more than half of the Convention are now present. I am perfectly prepared to vote upon this question, just as well prepared to vote upon it as I will be at any time. I believe that the merits of this question are now before the Convention. I think that this question should be disposed of. I think so just as much as any delegate now present in this Convention, but I think that when it is disposed of that it should be disposed of fairly. I think the members absent from the Convention have a right to a voice in relation to this question. I believe that they will have a voice in this question, and I ask why force it now, at this time, when it will not amount to saying what the voice of this Convention is—the Convention which the people of the State of California have elected to decide upon a question, when they are not here represented upon this floor? It seems to me that it is unfair to urge this vote under these circumstances and at this time. Mr. President, when this Convention is full, when all the members entitled to vote, and that the people have elected as their agents, are present, then it will be a body of representative men of the State of California. It will be a body of men who have been here from the first settlement of the State. Many, I might say almost a majority of this Convention, are pioneers of the State of California, and they are representatives of the State of California, and they have been a part of the history of the State. The men who have been elected by the people as their agents to frame a Constitution for this State are the representatives of the State of California. I believe that they represent more than the people of the State of California, and come nearer representing the sentiments of the nation than any other Convention that has ever assembled in the United States. Then why, Mr. President, should we not preserve all the history of this Convention—I mean all the work of the Convention, and the debates upon propositions embodied in the Constitution which we are about to propose to the people for their ratification? I say why shrink from preserving that history? Gentlemen have talked about economy in relation to this question. It seems to me, Mr. President, that instead of its being economy for us to fail to preserve the debates of this Convention, it would be a piece of unjustifiable waste. I hope, in the first place, that this Convention, at this time, will be fair enough at least to let us dispose of this question when we have a Convention nearer full than the Convention is at the present time.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I understand the question to be whether we shall take a vote upon the report of the committee. The gentleman says that there are not a sufficient number of delegates here to take a just and equitable vote upon that question. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the vote just taken by ayes and noes shows that there are one hundred and seventeen delegates present, of which number seventy-six voted "no." Therefore, if but one more delegate, not present here, should vote "no" upon this question, a majority would be against phonographic reporting—an absolute majority of the whole Convention. Although I was in favor of referring this matter to the Committee on Phonographic Reporting and Printing, yet as that vote was lost by an overwhelming majority, I do not see why the report of the committee should be deferred. There is more than a quorum here. There are at least one hundred and seventeen members here now that are prepared to vote upon this question. Of course it can be called up at any time, but why the report should not be disposed of is more than I can see.

MR. TULLY. This question has been before the Convention some three or four times. The same ideas and the same arguments have been advanced. I do not think that it will do any good to prolong this contest, and I hope that the friends of this measure—those who are in favor of adopting the report of the committee—will remain here until they accomplish that object; and believing that the minds of this Convention are made up, I move the previous question.

MR. BARBOUR. Second the motion.

MR. SWING. Mr. President: I shall vote against the adoption of the report. It does seem to me that the gentlemen who are in favor of not having the debates in this Convention printed, on the ground of economy, have occupied a great deal of time discussing this proposition. Now, I believe this: that whether this Constitution be adopted or not by the people of this State, that it is their right to have the debates and proceedings of this Convention in full. I believe that it would be a matter of economy, and would be so regarded by the people, to know the record which these members have made in this Convention, to guide them in selecting officials in the future. I am in favor of every man in this Convention standing upon his record. I am not in favor of suppressing that record, but I am in favor of giving an official report of it to the people of the State of California. It is the right of the people to have it, and it is not our right, as their representatives, to suppress what may be done here, and give them a bare skeleton of what has taken place. They have delegated this power to us, and shall we simply give them the bare Constitution itself, or shall we also give them that of which it is made, that they may see and be able to judge of that Constitution hereafter?

MR. LAINE. I have said nothing upon this question, but I desire to say a word or two. Now, it has been my fortune to wade through a number of constitutional debates, and I have found them, in the main, trashy and worthless. I have found men inveighing—advocating one way and voting another; and the best speech we can make to the people of the State of California—the one that will make or mar—is the Constitution that we hand them, not to exceed forty pages. I do not propose to suppress anything. Every word and every vote goes out upon the wings of the wind. It is printed in every quarter of the State. We cannot justify it by any sort of talk we may have here. The question simply turns upon this proposition: will the cost and expense of doing this thing pay the people? In my judgment, it will not. In my judgment, there is not one man, woman, or child out of every ten thousand that would ever read it. I have no doubt that political hucksters, when they went before the people for office, might use it, so as to twist and turn it to the convenience of some political character. But when the people of this State instruct me to vote away their money, or to so act that it may be spent in reporting useless debates, then I will obey, or resign; but I do not believe the intelligent voters of this State demand anything of the kind. They do demand that we should give them a Constitution that, in all its parts, shall guard their liberties and secure their rights. If we can do this, I shall be content.

MR. MCFARLAND. There may be some gentleman like the gentleman from Santa Clara, whose simple word is enough to carry a proposition; there may be some gentleman whose personal force is so great that when he simply says, "I vote for this Constitution," it is enough for the people. But there are many of us whose reputation has not such standing, and it certainly is important to the people to see, if they desire to see, what reasons are given for or against any particular proposition that we want put into the Constitution. Now, sir, the gentleman says that everything we say here will go out upon the wings of the wind. That is a very practical expression, but it is not true. The proceedings of this Convention are not reported so that they go out upon the wings of the wind. There is but one paper that pretends to give anything like a report, and its report is by no means full, though it gives as full reports as a newspaper can be expected to do. But I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact, that no single debate which has occurred here so far, has ever been fully reported in that paper, simply because the paper was not able to do it without being paid. Now I call attention to the exciting debate upon the election of a gentleman to fill the place of the gentleman from San Francisco who resigned, Mr. Morris. It was an exciting discussion. It turned out that the gentleman who happened to speak first upon that question were reported very fully in that paper, but when you come to the end of the debate, you find that some are not reported at all. The gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter, made perhaps, as lengthy and interesting a speech as was made upon that question, and he was reported in two lines. Not because that paper had any desire to do any injustice to that gentleman, but because when he made these remarks, there was not time, nor space, nor labor enough to transcribe and print them. I do not believe that these reports are going to be published in full in any paper.

I desire to call the attention of the Convention again to this fact. If you adopt the report of this Committee you simply vote down every proposition that has been presented, and you vote down with others the proposition contained in the first resolution, that we should appoint reporters to take down in shorthand all the proceedings and debates, leaving the entire question of printing and transcribing for future action, or, if the Convention thinks fit, no action at all. The proposition is to employ two shorthand reporters to take down in shorthand all the proceedings and debates in an official form, and place them so that they may be transcribed and printed if this body, or the Legislature, thinks it necessary. And yet you vote down that proposition with all others, by adopting this report. You say you are opposed to putting the proceedings and debates of this Convention in any shape where at any future day, or among any future people, they can ever be resurrected. That is what you say when you vote to adopt this report, and I do not want gentlemen to understand that by voting against this report, they vote in favor of any expense for transcribing or printing. The original proposition which I introduced was simply to provide that they shall give bonds that they will keep a faithful record of all the proceedings and debates, to be by them transcribed upon the order of the Convention, or upon the order of the Legislature, or upon the request of any member of this Convention. That is the proposition, and there is no expense to it except twenty dollars a day, and if you adopt the report, you vote that down, with all the other propositions about the reporting and printing.

MR. LARKIN. So far as a record of our votes here is concerned, we have a Journal there, and that Journal will be printed, with every vote upon every important question. Every gentleman's name will be called, and, if he is here, he will have an opportunity there to leave his mark. I shall insist upon the ayes and noes on all important propositions, and I believe in men standing upon the record. But I believe we can make a record there better than the reports of a shorthand reporter. We have also directed, by resolution, every proposition submitted to the Convention printed. Members can keep them on file, and in this way make a record of our acts, without publishing in full the debates which, according to the statement of the Chairman of the Committee on Reporting and Printing, will cost eighteen thousand six hundred dollars, beside the indexes.

MR. AYERS. The printing was ten thousand five hundred dollars, two volumes, and there was the printing of the Journal included in that report.

MR. LARKIN. My experience as a legislator is, that these things are never settled. There were claims came in against this State, there were claims from every county of the State, and it has spent thousands and thousands of dollars for these old claims. The Legislature will be asked to have volumes of these debates printed. You continue the rule to print every proposition submitted here by every member in the Convention, and you will print the Journal, and you cannot tell how much you are going to spend for all this work.

MR. AYERS. This Convention has already refused even to print the Journal.

MR. LARKIN. I am in favor of printing that Journal.

MR. AYERS. You voted it down yesterday.

MR. LARKIN. That Journal ought to be printed.

MR. AYERS. If we print the Journal, to lay on our desks, it would only cost a little more to have it in book form. One thousand and fifty dollars for printing in book form, and about two hundred dollars extra to lay it on our desks. After the matter is set up, it will cost very little more to put it in book form. That was the idea yesterday, and you voted it down.

MR. LARKIN. I am in favor of printing the Journal, but that is not the question here. There is the place for us to get upon the record.

MR. McFARLAND. It astonishes me to hear some gentlemen eternally talking about their records. Who has been talking about any record of individual action? I have not said anything about my record. The gentleman from El Dorado seems to think that his record is the most important thing to get before the people of this State. I do not understand that we are here for the purpose of making individual records. If a man is looking for office, he can certainly make a record by his vote. The object in keeping these reports in some permanent form is to show the reasons that are assigned for the adoption or rejection of any proposition, not that the gentleman from El Dorado voted one way or the other. I do not care a continental how he votes, and I do not know that the people of the State care particularly. When gentlemen are looking for political preferment they seem to be very particular how their record is going to be. The idea of making a personal record never entered my mind. I do not care about the gentlemen's records. They can make their records if they choose. The gentleman from El Dorado has the habit of calling for the ayes and noes on every proposition, and he can put himself on the record whenever he wants to. I do not suppose that the people of this State care particularly about us, except so far as our actions go in regard to framing a Constitution, but I do understand that they may desire to know the reasons given—not by me, or the gentleman from El Dorado, or by anybody else—why a certain provision should be adopted, or why it should not. It is not to make a record. These gentlemen have records now. They have been in the Legislature long enough to have records, and if they have none now they never will have. [Laughter.] I do not care anything about their records, nor anybody else's record.

MR. FILCHER. While I was opposed to any further reference to this subject, and am in favor of a speedy settlement of the question, I did hope, and I do hope now, that when this Convention places itself finally upon history upon this subject, that it will be right: that the conclusion will be a credit to the intelligence of this body.

Mr. President, it seems to me that the importance of preserving a record of the proceedings and debates of this Convention cannot be overestimated. Why, sir, the very thought that the great and wealthy State of California shall refuse to follow the precedent so well established by the older States, of preserving a record of debates on so important a matter as this, is to me astonishing. To my friends on the other side of the house who have determined to set their vote on this question as an evidence of their desire for economy—as one portion of their record to which they hope to point to in future days as evidence of their economical tendencies—I wish to say that perhaps the day may yet come when that economy may be considered penuriousness if not selfishness. It is not economy at all times to refuse to spend a dollar. We might, sir, by curtailing the expenses by a few dollars here to-day, involve the State in a tenfold expenditure hereafter. I know, sir, that a verbatim report of these proceedings is being taken down, and I know that it is the intention that a verbatim report of these proceedings and debates will be taken, whether this Convention decides to have an official report or not. And, Mr. President, when some future Legislature, considering that we have not shown a wise disposition, decides that these reports are of great value to the people of California, and the question comes up of purchasing a longhand report of these proceedings from the parties who are now taking them, these parties will have less judgment than I am disposed to give them credit for, if they do not make California pay for the whistle. But we can now secure to the State a State right, for two thousand dollars or less, to that which California may, perhaps, within ten years or less, pay forty or fifty thousand dollars for. Then the judgment of the people of the State of California will be that we were penurious, short-sighted, and unintelligent.

While, sir, I would save the State every dollar that I can, yet I do not think that a disposition to be selfish in this matter and withhold from this appropriation a few thousand dollars for so important a purpose, is any evidence of my desire for economy. I am anxious to see these gentlemen who are so firmly opposed to this proposition in the future, when some question has arisen on the construction of the new Convention, involving perhaps millions to themselves and their children, attempting to justify themselves for their votes to-day. The expenditure of two thousand dollars to-day out of this appropriation of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, set apart for our use, will secure these reports; and I say, Mr. President, that it is more in the line of economy to expend this amount than it is to say that no report in which the State has an interest shall be taken. In regard to the newspaper reports, I will ask my friends who are now favoring the adoption of this report, are you willing to stand by the reports that will be given in the paper that has the ability and the facilities for giving more fully the reports of the proceedings of this Convention than any other? Are you willing to leave it to the monopolists and the conductors of that paper? I say, sir, if it is your record you wish to preserve, you had better have it from an official standpoint. It is of little consequence what any member on this floor may or may not say, except that it may be valuable in the future as a matter of reference. I believe that this State has produced some great minds, and I believe there are minds on this floor to-day, sir, who will be able to give to the civilized world new and brilliant ideas on this immigration question, on the corporation question, on the question of taxation, and on many other important questions that will be discussed here—ideas that will be valuable, not only to the people of the State and nation to-day, but to generations yet to come. I appeal to members, when they vote finally upon this question, to bear in mind some of these points. Expand your ideas, if you can, upon this question, and look beyond to-day. Do not stop for the selfish consideration of two thousand dollars, but preserve these reports, and you will receive the approbation, not only of the people of this State, but of the world. I hope this report will not be adopted. Let us at least secure a shorthand report of the proceedings and debates which the State shall own, and leave the matter of printing to the future if you desire. We will then have a report, the property of the State, with the privilege of going to it individually if we wish, and with the privilege of the State demanding a longhand report and making the most of it whenever such a demand shall be deemed advisable.

MR. DOWLING. This question has occupied a good deal of the time of this Convention already—not but what it is important. I know this question of phonographic reporting deserves consideration, but, Mr. President, I believe that twenty thousand or thirty thousand dollars saved to the State of California will be better appreciated by the taxpayers of this State than all the windy speeches that can be made during the session. I think retrenchment is not a taking disease. I am sorry that certain gentlemen have not taken the disease. When any man gets up on this floor and tells me that the reporting business of this Convention will be received with approbation by the people of the State, in preference to economy, I believe that man is belying his own intelligence. He knows well that it will not. I would like to have every man to see his speeches in full, but we are not here to glorify ourselves. Mr. President, by dispensing with these reports we will coincide with the views of the people of the State of California. Already the newspapers of San Francisco, and all the principal papers published in the State, have spoken plain and earnest regarding this business.

MR. CONDON. I move the previous question. Seconded by Messrs. Barbour, Gorman, Tully, and Larue.

The main question was ordered.

The ayes and noes were demanded, and the report adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. HUESTIS. I now give notice that on Monday next I will move a reconsideration of this vote.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. WINANS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That it be referred to the Committee on Rules to inquire and report the expediency of adding Mr S. B. Thompson to the Committee on Education.

Referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. SHOEMAKER offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That Mr McCoy, of Nevada County, be added to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

Referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. BEERSTECHER offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the action taken October tenth, upon the report of the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses upon the resolution of Mr Beerstecher, providing that the Journal of this Convention shall be printed each day and laid upon the desks of the members, be reconsidered.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules the resolution out of order.

The Journal of Friday was read and approved, the reading of that part relating to propositions introduced being dispensed with, on motion of Mr. Rolfe.

COURTESY TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Mr. TINNIN offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be instructed to furnish accredited newspaper reporters assigned desks on the floor, two copies of all papers and documents printed by the Convention.

Adopted.

A WHOLE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. LARKIN. I desire to ask a suspension of the rules, to permit Mr. McConnell to present a Constitution that he has prepared. We do not ask that it be read or printed, but that it be referred to different committees. It is so subdivided as to be referred.

There being no objection, Mr. McConnell sent up the following proposed new Constitution, and it was referred to the appropriate committees:

ARTICLE I.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness.

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

SEC. 3. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate forever; but a jury trial may be waived by the parties, in all civil cases, in manner to be prescribed by law. If three fourths agree upon a verdict, it shall be taken as the verdict of the jury in all cases.

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require its suspension.

SEC. 6. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained.

SEC. 7. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

SEC. 8. No person without his written consent shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime (except in cases of impeachment, and in cases of militia when in actual service, and the land and naval forces in time of war, or which this State may keep with the consent of Congress in time of peace, and in cases of petit larceny, under the regulation of the Legislature), unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury; and, in any trial in any Court whatever, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend in person and with counsel, as in civil actions. The Legislature may fix, at not less than nine, the number of Grand Jurors to form a panel, or to find an indictment. No person shall be subject to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation first made. The presentment or indictment mentioned in this section may be amended by the Court in matter of form, in such manner as the Legislature may provide by statute.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right, and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions or indictments for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury, and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted, and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right freely to assemble together to consult for common good, to instruct their representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation upon the same class of subjects.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be maintained by this State in time of peace.

SEC. 13. No soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 14. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, or mesne or final process, unless in cases of fraud; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 15. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall be passed.

SEC. 16. Foreigners who are, or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property, as native born citizens.

SEC. 17. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State.

SEC. 18. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable seizures and searches shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue but for probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 19. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 20. As every freeman to preserve his independence (if without a sufficient estate), ought to have some profession, calling, trade, or farm, whereby he may honestly subsist, there can be no necessity for, nor use in establishing offices of profit, the usual effects of which are dependence and servility, unbecoming freemen, in the possessors or expectants, creating faction, contention, and discord among the people. But if any man is called into public service to the prejudice of his private affairs, he has a right to a reasonable compensation; and whenever an office through increase of fees or otherwise becomes so profitable as to occasion many to apply for it, the profits ought to be lessened by the Legislature. And if any officer shall knowingly and willfully take greater fees than the law allows him, it shall ever after disqualify him from holding any office in this State.

SEC. 21. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

ARTICLE II.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS.

SECTION 1. Every male citizen, twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections:

First—He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least six months.

Second—He shall have resided in the State twelve months immediately preceding the election.

Third—He shall have resided in the election precinct, where he shall offer to vote, three months immediately preceding the election.

SEC. 2. No idiot or insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector.

SEC. 3. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States; nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas; nor while a student at any seminary of learning; nor while kept at any almshouse, or other asylum, at public expense; nor while confined in any public prison; nor shall any person in the military, naval, or marine service of the United States, by reason of being stationed in any military or naval station within the State, be considered a resident of this State.

SEC. 4. No elector shall be obliged to perform militia duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 5. Electors shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the days of election, during their attendance at such election, going to and returning therefrom.

SEC. 6. The general election shall be held on the Tuesday next following the first Monday in November, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, and every four years thereafter, unless the Legislature, by statute, fix a different time.

SEC. 7. All elections by the people shall be by ballot. All elections by persons, in a representative capacity, shall be viva voce.

SEC. 8. A plurality of the votes given at any election shall constitute a choice, where not otherwise directed in this Constitution.

SEC. 9. Any person who shall give, or promise or offer to give, to any elector, any money, reward, or other valuable consideration, for his vote at an election, or for withholding the same, or who shall give, or promise to give, such consideration to any other person or party for such elector's vote, or for the withholding thereof, and any elector who shall receive or agree to receive, for himself or for another, any money, reward, or other valuable consideration, for his vote at an election, or for withholding the same, shall thereby forfeit the right to vote at such election; and any elector whose right to vote shall be challenged for such cause before the election officers, shall be required to swear or affirm that the matter of the challenge is untrue, before his vote shall be received.

SEC. 10. Any person who shall, while a candidate for office, be guilty of bribery, fraud, or willful violation of any election law, shall be forever disqualified from holding an office of trust or profit in this State; and any person convicted of willful violation of the election laws, shall, in addition to any penalty provided by law, be deprived of the right of suffrage absolutely, for a term of four years.

SEC. 11. In trials of contested elections, and proceedings for the investigation of elections, no person shall be permitted to withhold his testimony upon any ground; but such testimony shall not afterwards be used against him in any judicial proceeding, except for perjury in giving such testimony.

ARTICLE III.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

SECTION 1. The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the Legislative, the Executive, and Judicial—and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments, shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

ARTICLE IV.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The Legislative power of the State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California.

SEC. 2. The enacting clause of every statute shall be: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 3. The sessions of the Legislature shall be quadrennial, and shall commence on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of January, in the year following the election of its members. No session shall continue longer than one hundred and twenty days.

SEC. 4. Members of the Assembly shall be chosen quadrennially at the general election in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and every four years thereafter, by the qualified electors of their respective Assembly Districts; and their terms of office shall be four years from the day of their election.

SEC. 5. Senators shall be chosen at the same time and place as members of the Assembly, by the qualified electors of their respective Senatorial Districts. The term of Senators shall be eight years from the day of their election.

SEC. 6. Senators and members of the Assembly shall be electors in the districts which each shall represent, respectively; and each shall be a resident of his district for two years next before the election at which he shall be chosen.

SEC. 7. The number of members of the Senate shall be forty and of the Assembly eighty. After the population of the State exceeds one million, the Legislature may, by statute, increase the number of the Assembly to not exceeding one hundred and twenty. When the number shall be increased, the rule of apportionment herein prescribed shall not apply to the excess over eighty until each county shall be allowed one member of the Assembly.

SEC. 8. The Legislature, at its session in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, must divide the State into Senatorial Districts of compact contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be. At the next general election thereafter, forty Senators shall be elected, one half of whom shall hold office for the term of eight years and the other half for the term of four years, to be determined by lot at the first session of the Legislature thereafter.

SEC. 9. At the same time the Legislature must divide the State into eighty Assembly Districts of compact contiguous territory, as nearly equal in population as may be.

SEC. 10. In forming a Congressional, Senatorial, or Assembly District, a county shall not be divided so as to attach one portion of a county to another county.

SEC. 11. The Senatorial and Assembly Districts formed in eighteen hundred and eighty must be changed and the representation reapportioned by the Legislature in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-two, and every twelve years thereafter: and if any Legislature upon which is devolved the duty of making such change and reapportionment fails to perform it, the Governor of the State, within sixty days after the adjournment of such Legislature, must make such change and reapportionment and declare it by proclamation.

SEC. 12. Every apportionment shall be based upon the number of votes cast at the Presidential election which occurred next before such apportionment.

SEC. 13. When vacancies occur in either house, the Governor shall issue a proclamation calling an election to fill the same, unless a general election will intervene between the vacancy and the next session of the Legislature.

SEC. 14. The members of both houses shall, in all cases except for treason, felony, violation of oath of office, or surety of the peace, be privileged from arrest during the session of the Legislature, and for fifteen days before and after; and no member of either house shall be punished criminally, or be made to pay damages, for words spoken in debate or speech in such house.

SEC. 15. Members of the Legislature, and its officers, shall receive such salary or per diem and mileage for regular and special sessions as shall be previously fixed by law; and no other compensation whatever, whether for services on committee or otherwise, shall be allowed; provided, the per diem of the members of the Legislature shall not exceed five dollars; and provided further, an appropriation may be made to members only of a sum, in lieu of all allowances, for postage, express charges, newspapers, stationery, or other similar matter, not exceeding thirty dollars to each at any session. No member of either house, or officer or employé of either house, shall, during the term for which he may have been elected or appointed, receive any increase of salary or mileage under any law or resolution passed during such term.

SEC. 16. The sessions of the Legislature shall be public, but either house may by rule exclude from the floor of such house persons other than its members.

SEC. 17. A majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as it may prescribe.

SEC. 18. The Senate and Assembly respectively shall choose its own officers, judge of the qualifications and election of its members; have power to determine the rules of its proceedings, to punish for contempt in its presence, to enforce obedience to its process, to protect its members against violence, to punish its members and others for bribery or offers to bribe a member in the discharge of his duties as such, with the concurrence of two thirds to expel a member, but not a second time for the same cause, and shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislature of a free State. A member expelled for corruption shall not thereafter be eligible to an election as a member of either house, and punishment for bribery, contempt, or disorderly behavior shall not bar an indictment for the same offense.

SEC. 19. The Legislature shall provide, by statute, for taking the testimony in contests for seats in either house; such statutes must prescribe that all testimony shall be taken before the time fixed for the regular meetings of the Legislature. All such contests must be finally determined within one week after the organization of the two houses.

SEC. 20. The Legislature shall prescribe by law the number, duties, and compensation of the officers and employés of each house, and no payment shall be made from or authorized to be made out of the State treasury for services connected with the sessions of the Legislature, unless such service be first authorized and the compensation fixed by statute.

SEC. 21. The Senate, at the beginning of the regular sessions, and at such other times as may be necessary, shall elect one of its members President pro tempore, who may preside over the Senate during the absence of the Lieutenant-Governor.

SEC. 22. Each house shall keep a Journal of its proceedings, and publish the same. Three members may call for the yeas and nays on any question, and when so called the vote of each member voting shall be recorded in the Journal.

SEC. 23. Any bill may originate in either house of the Legislature, and all bills passed by one house may be amended in the other.

SEC. 24. No bill shall be passed into a statute until it has been printed in the house where it originated, for the use of both houses, and referred to and returned from a committee in each house, and read once at length in each house.

Sec. 25. No statute shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in its title.

Sec. 26. No statute shall be amended by reference to its title; but, in such case, the statute or section amended shall be reenacted and published at length.

Sec. 27. Every bill which may pass the Legislature shall, before it becomes a statute, be presented to the Governor, and such further proceedings had thereon as provided in section fourteen of article five of this Constitution.

Sec. 28. Lotteries, and the sale of lottery policies or tickets, within this State, are unlawful. All lottery policies, or tickets, or prizes drawn in lotteries within this State, are forfeited to the State, to be recovered by action brought in the name of the people of the State, by the Attorney-General, and shall go to the common school fund of the State.

Sec. 29. No person who shall have been or shall be convicted for embezzlement of public funds or defalcation in any public office, shall be eligible to any civil office of trust or profit in this State, and the Legislature shall pass statutes providing for the punishment of such embezzlement and defalcation as a felony.

Sec. 30. The Legislature shall not pass any local or special statute authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens; regulating the affairs of counties, cities, townships, road, or school districts; changing the names of persons or places; changing the place of trial in civil or criminal cases; authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, or maintaining roads, highways, streets, alleys, or sewers; relating to ferries or bridges; vacating roads, town plats, streets, or alleys; relating to cemeteries or other public grounds; authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children; locating or changing county seats; incorporating towns or cities; for opening and conducting elections, or fixing or changing places of voting; granting divorces; confirming the deeds or certificates of acknowledgment of married women; confirming any void judicial proceeding, tax, or assessment, or any grant founded thereon; erecting new townships or other territorial divisions in a county; creating offices or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, townships, or districts; changing the law of succession or descent; regulating the practice or production of or rules of evidence in any judicial proceeding or inquiry before Courts or other tribunals, or providing for or changing methods for the collection of debts or enforcing of judgments; regulating fees of office; affecting the estates of minors or others under disabilities, except after notice to all parties in interest, which shall be recited in the special Act; remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures, or refunding of moneys legally paid into the treasury; regulating labor, trade, mining, or manufacturing; creating corporations, or amending, renewing, or extending their charters; granting to any corporation, association, or person, any special or exclusive privilege or immunity, or the right to make a railroad; nor shall any local or special bill be passed unless notice of the intention to apply therefor shall have been published in the locality where the matter or the thing to be effected may be situated, which notice shall be at least sixty days prior to the introduction into the Legislature of such bill, and in the manner to be provided by statute; the evidence of such notice having been published shall be exhibited in the Legislature before such Act shall be passed.

Sec. 31. No Act shall be passed giving extra or additional pay, or relief, or compensation, to any public officer, servant, employé, or agent of, or contract under this State, or any department thereof, or of or under any county or city in this State.

Sec. 32. No Act shall extend the term of any public officer, or increase or diminish his salary or emoluments, after his election or appointment.

Sec. 33. No Act of the Legislature shall limit the amount to be recovered for injuries resulting in death, or for injuries to persons or property. In cases of death from injuries received by or through the carelessness, negligence, or willful misconduct of any person or corporation, the right of action shall survive, and the Legislature shall prescribe by and for whose benefit such shall be prosecuted. Until the Legislature shall so prescribe, such right of action shall survive to, and may be prosecuted by, the personal representavies of the deceased. No Act shall prescribe any limitations of time within which suits may be brought against corporations for injuries to person or property, or for other causes different from those fixed by general laws regulating actions against natural persons.

Sec. 34. No State office shall be continued or created for the inspection or measurement of any merchandise, or manufacture, or commodity; but the Legislature may, by general law, provide for such inspection and measurement by municipal or county officers.

Sec. 35. The Legislature shall pass no statute agreeing to pay, or providing for the payment from the State treasury, or by any municipal corporation, of any bonds or other obligations of any person or corporation, or to provide for the payment of any interest on such bonds or obligations; and shall pass no statute loaning or authorizing the loan of the credit of the State, or any municipal corporation, to any person or corporation.

Sec. 36. The Legislature shall never grant, or authorize extra compensation, fee, or allowance, to any public officer, agent, servant, or contractor, after service has been rendered or contract made, nor authorize the payment of any claim or part thereof hereafter created against the State, under any agreement or contract made without express authority of law; and all such unauthorized agreements shall be null and void; provided, this section shall not extend to and prevent appropriations for expenditures incurred in suppressing insurrection or repelling invasion.

Sec. 37. The Legislature shall have no power to release or extinguish, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation of any corporation or individual to this State, or to any municipal corporation therein.

Sec. 38. The Legislature shall protect, by statute, from forced sale, a certain portion of the homestead and other property of all heads of families.

Sec. 39. The Legislature shall, by statute, protect the wages of labor, provide for liens of mechanics and laborers, and for the exemption of a reasonable amount of property from execution and forced sale.

Sec. 40. Any statute concerning corporations may at any time be altered, amended, or repealed; and all corporations shall, if required by statute, conform to any such alteration or amendment, or be dissolved by such repeal.

Sec. 41. The Legislature shall not pass any statute under which any corporation for banking purposes shall be established; but associations and corporations may be formed under general laws for the deposit and loan of gold and silver; but no such association or corporation shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, certificate, ticket, promissory note, or other paper, or the paper of any bank to circulate as money; and the Legislature shall prohibit by law the creation of paper to circulate as money.

Sec. 42. The term "corporation," as used in the Constitution, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships. All corporations shall have the right to sue and be subject to action in all Courts in like cases as natural persons.

Sec. 43. When the Legislature is convened in special session by proclamation of the Governor, there shall be no legislation on subjects not designated in such proclamation.

Sec. 44. The presiding officer of each house shall, in presence of the house over which he presides, sign bills and joint resolutions passed in such house, immediately after the titles of such bills have been publicly read. The fact of signing shall be entered in the Journal.

Sec. 45. Neither house, without the consent of the other, shall adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting. In case of a disagreement between the two houses, with respect to the time of adjournment, the Governor shall have power to adjourn the Legislature to such time as he may think proper, provided it be not beyond the time fixed for the meeting of the next Legislature.

Sec. 46. No money shall be drawn from or paid out of the Treasury of State, except it be pursuant to and in accordance with a specific appropriation for a particular purpose made by statute, and then only on warrants drawn by the proper officer; and no appropriation shall be made for more than four years.

Sec. 47. All general appropriation bills shall be sent to the Governor for his signature at least ten days before the close of the session.

Sec. 48. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Superintendent of Public Instruction, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and District Judges, shall be liable to impeachment for misdemeanor in office. All other officers under this Constitution may be tried by jury, on indictment for misdemeanor in office, and if convicted, be removed from office and disqualified from holding any office of honor or profit.

Sec. 49. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. Each Senator, at the time the Senate shall resolve itself into a Court of Impeachment, shall swear (or affirm), that he will do impartial justice between the accuser and the accused, uninfluenced by party feeling. No person shall be convicted on such impeachment without the concurrence of two thirds of the Senators elected, and the judgment on conviction shall extend only to removal from office and disqualification to hold office thereafter. A majority of the Senators elected may affix the penalty, but such judgment on impeachment shall not be a bar to indictment for the same offense.

Sec. 50. No Senator or member of the Assembly shall be elected or appointed to any civil office of profit in this State during the term for which he shall have been elected, or for one year thereafter, which office shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during his term of office.

Sec. 51. Any member of the Legislature who shall solicit, demand, receive, or consent to receive, directly or indirectly, for himself or for another, from any company, corporation, or person, any money, office, appointment, employment, testimonial, reward, thing of value, enjoyment, or of personal advantage or promise thereof, or the influence of another to obtain for himself any office of honor or profit for his vote or official influence, or for withholding the same, or with an understanding expressed or implied, that his vote or official action shall be in any way influenced thereby, or who shall solicit or demand any such money or other advantage, matter, or thing aforesaid, for another as the consideration of his vote or official influence, or for withholding the same, or shall give or withhold his vote or influence in consideration of the payment or promise of such money, advantage, matter, or thing, to another, shall be held guilty of bribery within the meaning of this Constitution and the Penal Code, and shall incur the penalties provided in such Code, and be subject to such further punishment as shall be provided by statute.

Sec. 52. Any person who shall directly or indirectly offer, give, or promise any money, thing of value, testimonial, privilege, or personal advantage to any officer, legislative, executive, or judicial, to influence him in the performance of any of his public or official duties, shall be deemed guilty of bribery, and punished as provided by statute.

Sec. 53. The offense of corrupting of members of the Legislature, or of public officers of this State, or of any municipal division thereof, and any occupation or practice of solicitation of such member or officers to influence their official action, shall be defined by law, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 54. Any person may be compelled to testify in any lawful investigation or judicial proceedings against any person who may be charged with having committed the offense of bribery or corrupt solicitation, and shall not be permitted to withhold his testimony upon the ground that it may criminate himself, or subject him to public infamy; but such testimony shall not be used against him in any judicial proceeding, except for perjury in giving such testimony; and any person convicted of either of the offenses aforesaid, shall, as part of the punishment therefor, be disqualified from holding any office of honor or profit in this State.

SEC. 55. The Legislature shall not act upon any amendment proposed to the Constitution of the United States, until at least one general election intervene between the time such amendment is proposed and the time of the action thereon.

ARTICLE V.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The Executive Department of this State shall consist of a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, and Superintendent of Public Instruction, who shall each be independent of the other, and have and exercise the powers prescribed for him in this Constitution and by statutes.

SEC. 2. The Governor shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State, at the general election in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and every four years thereafter.

SEC. 3. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor who is not over the age of thirty years, and who has not been a citizen of the United States, and a resident of the State, for four years next preceding his election.

SEC. 4. The Governor shall hold his office during four years from the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January next ensuing his election, and shall not be eligible to the office for the next succeeding term.

SEC. 5. The returns of every election for Governor shall be sealed up and indorsed, "Election returns for Governor," and by the County Clerks of the different counties be transmitted to the Secretary of State, who shall safely keep the same unopened, and deliver them to the Speaker of the Assembly. The Speaker shall, in the presence of both houses of the Legislature, on the day next after the organization of both houses, open such returns and publish them. The person having the highest number of votes shall be Governor; but in case any two or more have an equal, and the highest number of votes, the Legislature shall, by joint vote of both houses, choose one of said persons for Governor.

SEC. 6. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the army, navy, and militia of the State, except when they are called into actual service of the United States.

SEC. 7. The Governor shall transact all executive business with the officers of the Federal Government and with Governors of other States. He shall see that the laws are faithfully executed, and he may require information, in writing, from all other executive officers of the State upon any subject relating to the business of their respective offices.

SEC. 8. When any State executive office, other than Governor or Lieutenant-Governor, shall become vacant, the Governor shall fill such vacancy, for the unexpired term, by appointment; and if any vacancy occur in any judicial office in this State, other than Justice of the Peace, the Governor shall fill such vacancy, by appointment, as prescribed in Article VI of this Constitution. In other cases the Legislature may provide, by statute, for filling vacancies in office, and if no such provision shall exist, and a vacancy occur, the Governor shall fill the same, by appointment, for the unexpired term. The Governor shall report to the Senate all appointments for State offices, and all appointments to judicial offices, for its confirmation, at the earliest practicable time, and if the Senate shall refuse to confirm such appointment, a vacancy shall then occur, to be filled as provided in this section.

SEC. 9. The Governor may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Legislature in special session, by proclamation, which proclamation shall designate the subject upon which legislation is desired.

SEC. 10. The Governor shall communicate by message to the Legislature at every session the condition of the State, and from time to time recommend to its consideration such measures as he may deem expedient.

SEC. 11. The Governor shall have power to remit fines and forfeitures imposed as a punishment for crimes, to grant reprieves, commutations of sentences, and pardons, except in cases of impeachment, and cases of disqualification from holding office, or enjoying the right of suffrage, declared by this Constitution as a punishment for crime. But no pardon shall be granted, or sentence commuted, except upon the recommendation, in writing, of the Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, and Attorney-General, or a majority of them, after full hearing, upon due public notice of time and place; and such recommendations, and the reasons therefor, shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State.

SEC. 12. There shall be a seal of this State kept in the office of the Secretary of State, to be used by him and the Governor to authenticate papers and documents issued by them, or either of them, to be called "The Great Seal of the State of California," and all grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of the people of the State of California, sealed with said seal, signed by the Governor, and countersigned by the Secretary of State.

SEC. 13. In case of the impeachment of the Governor, or his removal from office, death, inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, resignation, or absence from the State, the power and duties of the office shall devolve upon the Lieutenant-Governor for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease. But when the Governor shall, with the consent of the Legislature, be out of the State in time of war, at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue Commander-in-Chief of all the military forces of the State not in the actual service of the United States.

SEC. 14. Every bill which shall have passed both houses shall be presented to the Governor. If he approve, he shall sign it; but if he shall not approve, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it shall have originated, which house shall enter the objections at large upon their Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two thirds of all the members elected to that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, with the objections, to the other house, by which likewise it shall be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of all the members elected to that house, it shall be a law; but in such cases the vote of both houses shall be determined by ayes and noes, and the names of the members voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the Journals of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within ten days after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by their adjournment, by limitation, or otherwise, prevent its return, in which case it shall be a law, unless he shall file the same, with his objections, in the office of the Secretary of State, and give notice thereof, by public proclamation, within thirty days after such adjournment.

SEC. 15. The Governor shall have power to disapprove of any item or items of any bill making appropriations of money, embracing distinct items, and the part or parts of the bill approved shall be the law, and the item or items of appropriation disapproved shall be void, unless repassed according to the rules and limitations prescribed for the passage of other bills over the executive veto.

SEC. 16. The Lieutenant-Governor, Treasurer, and Attorney-General, shall each have the same qualifications as the Governor; each shall be elected at the same time and places, and their terms of office shall be the same as that of the Governor.

SEC. 17. The Controller, Secretary of State, Surveyor-General, and Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall each have the same qualifications as the Governor, and shall be elected at the general election in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and every four years thereafter.

SEC. 18. Each of the officers mentioned in the preceding section shall hold his office during four years from the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January next ensuing after his election.

SEC. 19. The Lieutenant-Governor shall be President of the Senate, but shall only have a vote therein when the Senate is equally divided, and he shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by statute. In case of the death, conviction, or impeachment, absence from the State, failure to qualify, resignation, or other disability of the Governor, the powers, duties, obligations, and emoluments of the office for the remainder of the term, or until the disability be removed, shall devolve upon the Lieutenant-Governor.

SEC. 20. In case of a vacancy in the office of Lieutenant-Governor by his death, assumption of the office of Governor, conviction on impeachment, or for any other cause, the powers, duties, and emoluments thereof for the remainder of the term, or until the disability be removed, shall devolve upon the President pro tempore of the Senate; and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall, in like manner, become Governor if a vacancy or disability shall occur in the office of Governor while he is acting Lieutenant-Governor, but his seat in the Senate shall become vacant whenever he shall become Governor.

SEC. 21. The Secretary of State shall keep a record of all official acts of the Governor, preserve the archives and papers pertaining to the office of Governor, and the Legislature, and shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by statute.

SEC. 22. The emoluments of all State officers shall be fixed prior to to the election to such office, and such emoluments shall not be increased or diminished during such term, nor shall any additional pay be allowed for additional services required of such officer.

ARTICLE VI.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Courts of Justices of the Peace, and in such Municipal Courts as shall be established by statute for cities, or consolidated cities and counties.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. The presence of four Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business in Court, and the concurrence of four Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.

SEC. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at the general election next after the adoption of this Constitution, and each shall take his seat on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January next after his election. The full term of Justices of the Supreme Court is fourteen years; at the meeting of such Justices on the said Tuesday next after the first Monday in January, they shall so classify themselves by lot that the term of one Justice shall expire every two years, and his successor shall be elected at the general election next preceding the expiration of such term, or at an election for Congressmen.

SEC. 4. At the election for Justices of the Supreme Court next after the adoption of this Constitution, no elector shall vote for more than four persons for Justices of the Supreme Court.

SEC. 5. If a vacancy occur in the office of Justice of the Supreme Court from other causes than the expiration of a full term, the Governor shall fill such vacancy by appointment, and the appointee shall hold until the election and qualification of his successor. At the next general election after such vacancy, it shall be filled by election, and the person so elected hold office from the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January next ensuing until the expiration of the unexpired term.

SEC. 6. No Justice appointed or elected to fill an unexpired term shall be Chief Justice. The Justice not so appointed, or elected, having the shortest term to serve, shall be Chief Justice.

SEC. 7. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is of two kinds:

First—Original; and,

Second—Appellate.

SEC. 8. The original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court extends to the issuance of writs of mandate, review, prohibition, and habeas corpus.

SEC. 9. The appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court extends:

First—To all civil cases and special proceedings arising in the District Courts;

Second—To all criminal actions amounting to a felony;

Third—To the issuance of all writs necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction; and,

Fourth—To such other cases and proceedings as the Legislature may by general statute prescribe.

SEC. 10. Each county is a judicial district. District Judges shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the general election next after the adoption of this Constitution, and shall hold their respective offices for the term of six years, and until their successors shall be elected and qualified.

SEC. 11. If a vacancy occur in the office of District Judge from causes other than the expiration of a full term, the Governor shall fill such vacancy by appointment, and the appointee shall hold until the election and qualification of his successor. At the next general election after such vacancy it shall be filled by election, and the person so elected shall hold office from the Tuesday after the first Monday in January next ensuing, for the term of six years.

SEC. 12. Every county containing less than twenty thousand inhabitants shall elect one District Judge; counties containing more than twenty thousand inhabitants may elect such further number of District Judges as shall be prescribed by statute, not exceeding one for every twenty thousand inhabitants, and one for such fraction as shall exceed ten thousand.

SEC. 13. In districts where there shall be more than one, a presiding Judge shall be elected by lot, who shall distribute the labor to be performed by each.

SEC. 14. Each District Court shall be held by one District Judge, and when two or more Judges are elected for one county, Courts shall be held separate, but the judgments and orders of each shall be entered and enforced, as of the District Court of such county.

SEC. 15. The jurisdiction of the District Court is of two kinds:

First—Appellate; and,

Second—Original.

SEC. 16. The appellate jurisdiction of the District Courts extend:

First—To all cases arising in Justices' Courts.

Second—To such cases and proceedings arising in Municipal Courts as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 17. The original jurisdiction of District Courts extend:

First—To all civil actions for relief formerly given in Courts of equity.

Second—To all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is not capable of pecuniary estimation.

Third—To all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is capable of pecuniary estimation, which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars.

Fourth—To actions to prevent or abate a nuisance.

Fifth—To actions of forcible entry and detainer.

Sixth—To proceedings in insolvency.

Seventh—To probate cases and proceedings.

Eighth—To all other special proceedings.

Ninth—To inquiring, by the intervention of a Grand Jury, of all public offenses committed or triable within the district.

Tenth—To the trial of all indictments.

Eleventh—To such other cases and proceedings as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 18. The Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in each city and township of the State, and fix by law their powers, duties, and responsibilities: but such powers shall not, in any case, trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record. The Supreme Court, and District Courts, and such other Courts as the Legislature shall prescribe, shall be Courts of record.

SEC. 19. The jurisdiction of Municipal Courts established by statute for cities, and consolidated cities and counties, shall extend only to the trial of misdemeanors, and to the trial of cases arising under ordinances of such cities, or cities and counties.

SEC. 20. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, of County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officers, and shall fix by law their duties and compensations. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record in and for their respective counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment, by the several Courts of record, of one or more Commissioners, with authority to perform chamber business, and also to take depositions, and to perform such other business connected with the administration of justice as may be prescribed by statute.

SEC. 21. The time and place of holding the terms of the Supreme Court shall be provided for by statute. The District Courts shall always be open for the transaction of business.

SEC. 22. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace and Commissioners, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisities of office.

SEC. 23. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient; and all opinions shall be free for publication by any person.

SEC. 24. The Justices of the Supreme Court and District Judges, shall severally at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services out of the State Treasury a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished after their election, or during the term for which they shall have been elected.

SEC. 25. The Justice of the Supreme Court, and the District Judges, shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term in which they shall have been elected, and shall, before entering upon their office, in addition to the oath of office, take and subscribe an oath that they will not, during such term, accept any Federal office.

SEC. 26. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but they may state the testimony and declare the law.

SEC. 27. The style of all process shall be, "The People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

SEC. 28. The Supreme Court now in existence is continued until the first Monday in July, eighteen hundred and eighty; but after the first Monday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty, its power shall only extend to the determination of such cases or proceedings pending therein as may have been submitted for decision prior to that time.

SEC. 29. The Justices of said Court in commission at the time this Constitution takes effect, may hold their office as Justices thereof, until the first Monday in July, eighteen hundred and eighty.

SEC. 30. If any Justice of said Court is elected a Justice of the Supreme Court, created by this article, his office as a Justice of the Supreme Court now in existence, shall become vacant on the first Monday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty; and the Governor shall, by appointment, fill the vacancy.

ARTICLE VII.

MILITIA.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide by law for organizing and disciplining the militia, in such manner as they shall deem expedient, not incompatible with the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such a manner as the Legislature shall from time to time direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor.

SEC. 3. The Governor shall have power to call forth the militia to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections and repel invasions.

ARTICLE VIII.

TAXATION AND FINANCE.

SECTION 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and taxes shall be levied and collected under general laws. All property shall be taxed in proportion to its value. All property subject to taxation shall be listed for that purpose at its cash value, to be ascertained as provided by statute. All things and choses in action, subject to ownership, sale, devise, descent, distribution, or assignment, shall be deemed property for purposes of taxation. Property owned by the United States, by this State, or by a municipal corporation under the laws of this State, growing crops, and stock under six months of age shall be exempt from taxation.

SEC. 2. The present bonded debt of this State is valid, and the Legislature shall provide by statute for the payment thereof.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall not, in any manner, create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall singly or in the aggregate, with all previous debts and liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except in case of war to repel invasion or suppress insurrection.

SEC. 4. The Governor, Controller, and Treasurer shall, jointly, during the first week after the organization of the Legislature, exhibit to the Assembly detailed estimates of the sums of money necessary to be raised and expended during the four years next after the first day of July of that year.

SEC. 5. The Controller shall determine and publish when the limit of the public debt, allowed by this Constitution, has been reached, and all other or further obligations of the State shall be void.

SEC. 6. Neither the credit of the State, nor of any municipal corporation authorized under the laws thereof, shall be pledged or loaned to any individual, company, corporation, or association; nor shall the State, or any municipal corporation, become a joint owner of, or a stockholder in, any company, corporation, or association; nor shall the State, or any municipal corporation, become bound to pay any bond, or interest on any bond, or other obligation, of any individual, association, or corporation; and no county, or other municipal corporation under the laws of this State, shall incur any obligation to raise money for the construction of any work not exclusively under the control of public officers.

SEC. 7. The Legislature must, at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, by statute provide for a State Board of Equalization, and fix its powers and duties.

ARTICLE IX.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

SECTION 1. Municipal corporations under the laws of this State are:

First—Counties;

Second—Cities; and

Third—Consolidated cities and counties.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall establish a system of county and city government, which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable.

SEC. 3. The boundaries of counties shall be established by statute, and no statute shall be passed changing a county boundary, until it be shown to the Legislature that a notice was published in some newspaper of general circulation in the counties to be affected by such change, at least thirty days before the last general election, stating that application would be made to the Legislature for such change.

Digitized by Google

SEC. 4. The compensation of county officers shall be regulated by law. Salaries of county officers and pay allowed by law shall not be increased or diminished during the time for which they shall be elected.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall provide by statute for a strict accountability of all county, township, and city officers, for all public moneys coming into their hands.

SEC. 6. Township officers are Justices of the Peace and Constables, and each shall have such power and be subject to such duties and obligations as are prescribed in this Constitution or by statute.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall provide by statute for such offices as may be necessary in administering the affairs of school districts, road districts, swamp land districts, or other division created by statute.

SEC. 8. Cities with charters already given, shall remain such under their present charters, subject to amendment, or shall become incorporate under general laws.

SEC. 9. No debt shall be incurred by any municipal corporation, except in pursuance of an order or ordinance previously made therefor, by the municipal authorities, which order or ordinance shall provide for the payment thereof.

SEC. 10. Private property shall not be liable to be taken or sold for the payment of the corporate debts of a municipal corporation.

SEC. 11. The Legislature may vest the corporate authorities of cities, or consolidated cities and counties, with power to make local improvements, by special assessment, or by special taxation of contiguous property, or otherwise. For all other corporate purposes, all municipal corporations may be vested with authority to assess and collect taxes; but such taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same.

ARTICLE X.

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

SECTION 1. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act. All general laws passed pursuant to this section may be altered, from time to time, or repealed.

SEC. 2. Each stockholder shall be individually and personally liable for all debts and liabilities of a corporation created or incurred while he remains such stockholder.

SEC. 3. The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be abridged, or so construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of corporations and subjecting them to public use, the same as the property of individuals; and the exercise of the police power of the State shall never be abridged, or so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals or the general well-being of the State.

SEC. 4. In all elections for directors or managers of a corporation, each member or shareholder may cast the whole number of his votes for one candidate, or distribute them upon two or more candidates, as he may prefer.

SEC. 5. No corporation shall engage in any business other than that expressly authorized in its charter; nor shall it take or hold any real estate except such as may be necessary and proper for its legitimate business.

SEC. 6. No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds except for money, labor done, or property actually received; and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock of corporations shall not be increased, except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding the two thirds in value of the stock first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty days notice given in pursuance of law.

SEC. 7. No railroad or telegraph company shall consolidate with or hold an interest in the stock or bonds of any other railroad or telegraph company, nor shall the same persons be officers in corporations owning competing lines of railroads or telegraphs.

SEC. 8. No railroad or telegraph company shall lease or in any manner manage or control the railroad or telegraph line of another company.

SEC. 9. All individuals, associations, and corporations shall have equal right to have persons and property transported over railroads; and no undue or unreasonable discrimination shall be made in charges for, or in facilities for transportation of freight or passengers within the State or coming from or going to any other State. Persons and property transported over any railroad shall be delivered at any station, at charges not exceeding the charges for transportation of persons and property of the same class in the same direction to any more distant station; but excursion and commutation tickets may be issued at special rates.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall pass statutes to correct abuses and prevent unjust discrimination and extortion in the rates of freights and fares on the railroads in this State, and provide for the enforcement of such statutes by adequate penalties, to the extent, if necessary for that purpose, of forfeiture of property and franchises.

SEC. 11. Every railroad corporation organized in this State shall maintain an office therein where transfers of its stock shall be made, and where its books shall be kept for inspection by any stockholder or creditor of such corporation, in which books shall be recorded the amount of capital stock subscribed or paid in, and by whom, the names of the owners of its stock, and the amounts owned by them respectively, the transfers of said stock, and the names and places of residence of its officers.

SEC. 12. All railroads shall be public highways, and all railroad companies shall be common carriers. Any corporation organized for the purpose, shall have the right to construct and operate a railroad between any points within this State, and to connect at the State line with railroads in other States. Every railroad company shall have the right with its road to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad; and shall receive and transport each other's passengers, tonnage, and cars, loaded or empty, without delay or discrimination, in such manner as may be prescribed by general statute.

SEC. 13. No President, Director, officer, or employé of any railroad company shall be interested directly or indirectly in the furnishing of material or supplies to such company, or in the business of transportation as a common carrier of freight or passengers over the works owned, leased, controlled, or worked by such company.

SEC. 14. Any public officer of or in this State, legislative, executive, or judicial, who shall accept or use a free pass or free ticket, or a pass or a ticket paying therefor less than the usual rates, from any railroad company or other transportation company, or who shall ride on or over any railroad for less than the usual rate of fare, shall be ineligible to all offices of honor or trust in this State, and shall lose his said office, and the Legislature shall provide for the punishment of such act as a felony.

SEC. 15. The Legislature shall provide by statute for the punishment as a felony of any officer or employé of any railroad company or other transportation company who shall give, or offer to give, to any public officer of or in this State, legislative, executive, or judicial, a free pass or free ticket, or a pass or ticket for a less price than the usual rates, or who shall knowingly permit such officer to ride in or over such railroad without paying therefor the usual rates.

SEC. 16. No foreign corporation shall do any business in this State without having one or more known places of business, and an authorized agent or agents in the same, upon whom process may be served.

ARTICLE XI.

EDUCATION.

SECTION 1. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified electors, at the same time and place, and in the same manner, and for the same term of office, as the Governor. He shall receive a salary equal to that of Secretary of State.

SEC. 2. A County Superintendent of Schools, for each county in the State, shall be elected at the general election of Governor and Superintendent of Public Instruction, by a vote of the qualified electors of each county, and shall hold office for the term of four years.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall provide for a system of public schools by which a free public school shall be maintained for at least six months in each school district in every year after the first year in which a school is established.

SEC. 4. There shall be a State Board of Education, consisting of two members from each Congressional district, who shall be nominated by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, for a term of four years. The State Superintendent shall be ex officio a member of this Board.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of education among the people. The proceeds of the sale of the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress approved A. D. eighteen hundred and forty-one, and of the sale of sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of township lands reserved for school purposes, shall constitute an inviolable school fund, the income from which shall be apportioned by the Superintendent of Public Instruction to each school district pro rata, according to the number of school census children.

SEC. 6. No public moneys shall ever be appropriated for the support, directly or indirectly, of any religious sect or denomination whatever, nor for any school not under the direct and entire control of public school officers.

SEC. 7. The revenue derived from the State School Fund, and from the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools.

ARTICLE XII.

MODE OF AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this Constitution may be proposed in the Senate or Assembly, and if the same are agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their Journals, with the ayes and noes taken thereon, and shall be published for three months before the next general election. In his proclamation calling such election, the Governor shall submit such proposed amendments to the qualified electors of the State for adoption or rejection, and if a majority of the votes cast shall be for the adoption of such amendment or amendments, it or they shall become part of this Constitution.

SEC. 2. And if, at any time, two thirds of the Senate and Assembly shall think it necessary to revise and change this entire Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors, at the next election for members of the Legislature, to vote for or against a Convention; and if it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting at such election have voted in favor of calling a Convention, the Legislature shall, at the next session, provide by law for calling a Convention, to be holden within six months after the passage of such law; and such Convention shall consist of a number of members not less than that of both branches of the Legislature. The Constitution that may have been agreed upon and adopted by such Convention shall be submitted to the people, at a special election to be provided for by law, for their ratification or rejection. Each voter shall express his opinion by depositing in the ballot-box a ticket, whereon shall be written or printed the words, "For the new Constitution" or "Against the new Constitution." The returns of such election shall, in such manner as the Convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the votes so certified to him. If, by such examination, it be ascertained that a majority of the whole number of votes cast at such election be in favor of such new Constitution, the Executive of this State shall, by his proclamation, declare such new Constitution to be the Constitution of the State of California.

ARTICLE XIII.

SECTION 1. Any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within this State or out of it, or who shall act as second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, shall not be allowed to hold any office of profit, or to enjoy the right of suffrage under this Constitution.

SEC. 2. Members of the Legislature, and all officers, executive and judicial, except such inferior officers as may be by law exempted, shall, before they enter on the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of—— according to the best of my ability."

And no other oath, declaration, or test, shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

SEC. 3. All officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers whose office may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people or appointed, as the Legislature may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be elected or appointed to, or hold any office created by, this Constitution, who is not an elector and resident of this State. No person shall be elected or appointed to, or hold any district, county, or local office created by this Constitution, unless he is an elector and resident of the district, county, or other political division for which he is elected or appointed. And every judicial officer must reside at the place where the sessions of the Court of which he is a member are held.

SEC. 5. When the duration of any office is not provided for by this Constitution, it may be declared by law; and if not so declared, such office shall be held during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment; nor shall the duration of any office not fixed by this Constitution ever exceed four years.

SEC. 6. The fiscal year shall commence on the first day of July.

SEC. 7. Each county, city, and incorporated town, shall made provision for the support of its own officers, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 8. Suits may be brought against the State in such manner and in such Courts as shall be directed by law.

SEC. 9. The seat of government shall not be removed from Sacramento except by operation of a statute enacted for that purpose and ratified by a majority of the votes cast at the next general election after the passage of such statute.

SEC. 10. All property, both real and personal, of the wife, owned or claimed by her before marriage, and that acquired afterward by gift, devise, or descent, shall be her separate property, and laws shall be passed more clearly defining the rights of the wife in relation as well to her separate property, as to that held in common with her husband. Laws shall also be passed providing for the registration of the wife's separate property.

SEC. 11. No contract of marriage, if otherwise duly made, shall be invalidated for want of conformity to the requirements of any religious sect.

SEC. 12. No perpetuities shall be allowed except for eleemosynary purposes.

SEC. 13. Every person shall be disqualified from holding any office of profit in this State, who shall have been convicted of having given or offered a bribe to procure his election or appointment.

SEC. 14. No person holding lucrative office under the United States or any other power, shall be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit in this State; but officers in the militia who receive no annual salary, and local officers and Postmasters whose compensation does not exceed five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed persons holding lucrative offices.

SEC. 15. Laws shall be made to exclude from office, serving on juries, and from the right of suffrage, those who shall hereafter be convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, or other high crimes. The privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections, and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence thereon from power, bribery, tumult, or other improper practice.

SEC. 16. Absence from this State on business of the State, or of the United States, shall not affect the question of residence of any person.

SEC. 17. If this Constitution is adopted by the people, the Legislature of which the members of the Assembly are elected at the general election, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, shall meet on Tuesday after the first Monday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty.

SEC. 18. The Legislature, at its first session, or as soon as may be after the adoption of this Constitution, shall pass such laws as may be necessary to carry the same into full force and effect.

SEC. 19. All persons in office in this State at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall hold their respective offices until the term for which they have been elected or appointed shall expire, and until their successor shall be duly qualified, unless otherwise provided in this Constitution.

SEC. 20. At the general election next after the adoption of this Constitution, there shall be elected in the City and County of San Francisco seven Judges of the District Court of said city and county.

SEC. 21. The Legislature, at the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall fix and determine the compensation of the Justices of the Supreme Court and of the Judges of the several Judicial Districts of the State, and the provisions of section twenty-four of article six shall not be deemed inconsistent herewith.

SEC. 22. All existing Courts shall continue in existence until the first Monday in July, eighteen hundred and eighty, without abridgment of their present jurisdiction and powers, unless otherwise provided in this Constitution.

SEC. 23. All actions and proceedings pending in the District, County, and Probate Courts of the several counties of this State, and in the Municipal Criminal Court of San Francisco, on the first Monday in July, eighteen hundred and eighty, shall be transferred to, and tried and determined in, the District Court of the county in which such actions or proceedings are pending.

SEC. 24. All actions or proceedings pending and undetermined in the Supreme Court now in existence, on the first Monday in July, eighteen hundred and eighty, must be transferred for determination to the Supreme Court created by this Constitution.

SEC. 25. All rights, prosecutions, claims, and contracts existing, and all laws in force, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, and not inconsistent therewith, until altered or repealed by the Legislature, shall continue as if this Constitution had not been adopted.

SEC. 26. In all laws which shall be in force on the first Monday in July, eighteen hundred and eighty, and in which the words "Probate Court," "Probate Judge," "County Court," "County Judge," "Municipal Criminal Court of San Francisco," and "Judge of the Municipal Criminal Court of San Francisco" appear, such words shall have the same effect as if written "District Court" and "Judge of the District Court" respectively.

SEC. 27. The Legislature shall provide for establishing and opening public and private roads; and in awarding damages for private property taken for such purpose, the benefits that shall accrue to the owners of land so taken from the establishing of such roads shall be considered in estimating such damages.

SEC. 28. The Legislature may pass laws permitting the owners or occupants of land to construct drains and ditches for agricultural and sanitary purposes across the lands of others.

SEC. 29. No money collected by taxation in this State shall be placed in the hands of or be controlled by any religious sect, or by any person other than an officer duly elected or appointed under the laws thereof.

SEC. 30. Neither this State nor any municipal corporation under the laws thereof, shall hereafter issue any bonds with coupons or other evidence of debt-bearing interest, except that the State may issue such evidence of debt only pursuant to section three of article eight of this Constitution.

SEC. 31. The salary of any public officer in this State shall not exceed five thousand dollars per annum.

AMENDMENT TO RULE.

MR. NOEL offered the following amendment to rule fifty-two:

Rule 52.—Propositions and resolutions mentioned in the last foregoing rule shall embrace but one subject; they shall be read once by title, when introduced, and then referred, without debate, to an appropriate committee.

MR. NOEL. The only alteration proposed is to dispense with the reading of the propositions when they are introduced. It simply provides that they shall be read by title, and referred to the appropriate committees, without debate.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I rise to a point of order. We are now under section seven, introduction of propositions.

THE PRESIDENT. We have passed that, and have got down to the sixth order of business, general orders.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I understood that the roll was to be called.

THE PRESIDENT. No one called for the calling of the roll, and it was passed to the next head. The question is, on the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Noel.

The amendment was adopted.

MODE OF PROCEDURE.

MR. WINANS. I desire to call up my resolution in reference to the mode of procedure in our deliberations.

MR. BELCHER. I move that the gentleman's resolution be printed, and that it be made the special order for to-morrow, at two o'clock.

MR. ESTEE. I would suggest that we suspend the rule. We will have to suspend the rule if we consider it now.

MR. WINANS. I move that the rules be suspended for the purpose of considering this question now.

MR. ROLFE. It seems to me that we do not half of us know what the rules are. There was a resolution that they be printed and laid on our desks. I have not seen them or heard of them since. I simply rise more to make inquiry than anything else.

THE PRESIDENT. I understand that the amendments have not been printed.

MR. ESTEE. It has been impossible to print them while so many motions to amend were pending. When the Convention concludes that they have got about enough rules, then we will have them printed. They are standing in type now waiting for more rules.

MR. BELCHER'S motion prevailed.

MR. WEST. I move that clause eight, in rule seventy-three, be amended by striking out "nine" and inserting "thirteen," as the number of members of the Committee on Education.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I rise to inquire whether the motion made by Mr. Larkin, to introduce this voluminous mass of matter, was to have it printed, or whether it was merely to be introduced here and not printed.

THE PRESIDENT. What, Mr. McConnell's Constitution?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes, this Constitution.

THE PRESIDENT. Not to be printed.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move that we do now return to section seven, of rule seventeen, relating to the introduction of resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution. I make this motion because I know that there are a number of persons who have propositions to introduce, and the rule was passed without really giving them an opportunity to introduce them. Of course it was without any intention.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order.

PRINTING OF PROPOSITIONS.

MR. CAMPBELL offered the following:

Resolved, That rule seventy-one be and is hereby repealed; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the printing of any resolution or proposition heretofore presented.

MR. CAMPBELL. I think we have certainly had enough printing done. Every gentleman has had an opportunity to have printed four propositions. Our tables are now incumbered with a mass of matter, in many cases mere copies of existing provisions of the Constitution; in many cases mere repetitions of propositions made in twenty different forms, and substantially alike. It does seem to me that it is a waste of time and money to go any further in this matter of printing propositions that may be presented here. There will be an opportunity for gentlemen, when the several committees report, if their propositions are rejected, to present them to the Convention in the form of amendments, and then they will be printed. It seems to me useless to go on and print them now. Many gentlemen seem to be under the impression that unless they present propositions now, and unless those propositions are printed now, that they will be cut off forever from any opportunity to introduce what they may deem beneficial propositions. But that is entirely a mistake. Every proposition that they desire to make can be presented here, referred to the appropriate committee, and after that committee has acted upon it, if they do not choose to adopt it, the gentleman offering any such proposition will have an opportunity of presenting it here in the form of an amendment to the report of the committee. It seems to me that we ought to repeal this rule.

MR. BEERSTECHER. When the matter of rule seventy-one, in relation to printing the propositions that were introduced here, came up for consideration, it occupied the time of this Convention for over two hours. It was then determined, after mature deliberation, and after a number of persons had spoken upon the subject, that these propositions should be printed. We have had, as the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, has said, such a change in the rules of order that it has been impossible to print——

MR. NOEL. I rise to a point of order. Under rule sixty this proposition must lie over one day.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is offered in accordance with previous notice. The gentleman from San Francisco will proceed.

MR. BEERSTECHER. As stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, the changes have been so frequent, and the propositions to change so numerous, that it has been impossible to furnish this Convention with a properly corrected set of rules. Not a day comes but a dozen propositions come floating in here to change the standing rules. These rules were referred to a committee of competent and qualified persons, and, after deliberation, they were reported upon here in the Convention, discussed at length, and adopted. They were the sense of the Convention at that time, and I cannot see at this time why these rules should be changed, and more particularly this rule in relation to printing the propositions that are introduced here. If this rule is abrogated or wiped out, many of the propositions that are introduced will be consigned to oblivion, because sending the propositions to these committees is equivalent to consigning them to oblivion forever. Therefore, I hope that the resolution of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, will be promptly voted down. I hope we will stand by the rule as it now reads—that four hundred and eighty copies of the propositions be printed. It is the only true way; it is the only proper way. Every man that introduces a resolution introduces it in good faith, and in just exactly such a manner as he is able to introduce it. It ought to be recognized by the Convention. Every individual member of this Convention ought to have an opportunity of examining every proposition that is brought before the Convention and examining the propositions at leisure; not only the members but the reporters of the press should have a chance to get them and canvass them and report on them for their papers. It is the only method that we have now in order to give the people any light upon the subjects that are introduced here. I hope the resolution will be promptly voted down.

MR. NOEL. I move to refer the resolution to the Committee on Rules.

MR. WEST. I move to amend by referring the matter to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

THE PRESIDENT. The Committee on Printing would have nothing to do with that proposition. It is simply a resolution in reference to one of the rules.

MR. WEST. It is the opinion of many members that there are questions involved in this matter that might be considered by the Committee on Printing. It is suggested that the form of printing these propositions might be changed so that it would not be so expensive.

MR. CAMPBELL. I do not see what light we can get by any reference to either of these committees. It seems to me to be a perfectly plain proposition. We have been for three days, I think, receiving these propositions. They have come in in vast volumes, and it is time, I think, that we should stop printing the same matter, substantially, over and over again, and wasting the money of the State on what can be productive of no benefit whatever. Now, the gentleman is entirely mistaken in saying that any proposition which any gentleman may have to make will be smothered, because it is not printed now and laid on our desks now. I have a great many propositions that I shall make at the proper time, but if every gentleman undertook to have printed every amendment that he desires to have made to the Constitution, there would not be enough money in the entire appropriation to pay for the printing of what would be introduced by one hundred and fifty-two members. There will be an ample opportunity when the committees come in and report upon the several subjects. Their reports will be printed. If the proposition which any gentleman desires to engraft on the Constitution is not found in this report, he will have an ample opportunity to present his proposition in the form of an amendment. It will be taken up and discussed in Committee of the Whole. There will be no smothering or concealment about it, and none is possible. My only object is to stop the printing of this mass of resolutions coming in on the same subject, with the same things stated over and over again, and the enormous expense which is entailed. Let gentlemen present their propositions, have them referred to the appropriate committees, and then, if they are not adopted by the committee, move them as amendments in Committee of the Whole.

MR. NOEL. I rise to a point of order, in regard to the amendment to my motion. Rule twenty reads: "Every proposition or resolution shall be referred to the appropriate standing committee, as indicated by its name given herein." I submit that the Committee on Rules and Order of Business is the appropriate committee to refer this to, and that the amendment to my motion is out of order. If the resolution is referred, it must be to the appropriate committee, and that committee is the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair did not entertain the motion to refer to the Committee on Reporting and Printing as an amendment, but as a separate motion. The first question is on the motion to refer to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business. If that motion is lost, the question will be on the motion to refer to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. BARBOUR. I hope the Convention will not refer this question. There is nothing to refer to the Committee on Rules. I think the gentleman could accomplish his object by having the rules amended so that propositions which have been already printed, as will appear by an examination of those printed, shall not be printed again. I am in favor of adhering to the rule calling for the printing of the propositions, but I agree with the gentleman that we should not have these propositions printed over and over again. Let him propose an amendment to the rule, so that whenever a proposition is introduced, which appears to be substantially the same as one already introduced, it shall not be printed.

MR. VAN DYKE. I hope that the resolution of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, will be adopted. If that rule is repealed, it does not prevent this body from ordering the printing of any proposition the importance of which may demand it. But to repeal it will prevent the printing of a great many, to say the least, immature and ill-considered propositions, and it certainly will do no harm if they are smothered. But, Mr. President, if these propositions are not printed, it does not follow that they will be smothered. They will go to the proper committees and will receive that fair treatment and consideration which their importance may demand. If the proper committees fail to approve, in whole or in part, those propositions so referred, the mover can renew the proposition in the shape of an amendment, and then they can be ordered printed. It strikes me that this matter was not maturely considered, with all due respect to the gentlemen. I think it was not maturely considered. I think we have made a mistake in sending all these propositions out. It will entail a large bill of expense. The gentlemen who speak long and loud in reference to extravagance should bear this in mind. I hope that the motion to repeal the rule will prevail, and then, if any proposition of importance is presented, it can be printed by order of the Convention.

MR. ESTEE. The Committee on Rules and Order of Business are not desirous of examining this or any other proposition that this house does not wish should go to them, but there are other committees in this body and by-and-by when other resolutions are introduced, and when this house undertakes to determine which is the appropriate committee to refer them to, I apprehend that members of this body will call attention to rule twenty and claim that a certain reference was contrary to rule twenty, and contrary to the rights of this body. I maintain that the whole proposition is out of order, unless this rule is suspended. All questions of this character must be referred to a standing committee of this house, under rule twenty, and under a special rule that all questions relative to the rules should be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business. I raise the point of order that this question should be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business as a standing committee of this house. When the President passes upon that I desire——

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the motion of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, will go to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, under the previous order of the Convention.

NOTICE.

MR. EDGERTON. I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move the following amendment to rule seventy-one:

"But no proposition, so far as the same contains the matter in the existing Constitution, shall be printed; nor shall any proposition be printed which is in substance the same as one already printed."

REFERRED.

MR. McCALLUM. I gave notice, on yesterday, that I would move to amend rule sixty. After the ruling of the Chair in the case of Mr. Campbell's resolution, I ask that my motion go to the Committee on Rules.

THE PRESIDENT. It is so ordered.

REPORTING THE DEBATES.

MR. HUESTIS. In accordance with the notice given on Friday, I now move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention adopted the report of the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, in regard to the matter of reporting the proceedings and debates of this Convention.

MR. NOEL. I move to lay the motion on the table.

The motion prevailed.

REFERENCE.

Mr. WEST. I ask that my motion in reference to rule seventy-three be referred to the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

So ordered.

RESOLUTIONS AND PROPOSITIONS.

Mr. WHITE. I move that we now return to the seventh order of business, seventh subdivision of rule seventeen, relative to the introduction of resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution.

Carried.

MODE OF SUBMITTING THE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. BARBOUR offered the following resolution, relative to the mode of submitting the proposed new Constitution to the people:

Resolved, That it is competent for this Convention, in addition to submitting for ratification or rejection the Constitution it may draft, to submit separate propositions to be inserted therein, provided a majority of the electors of this State so decide by their votes at the election to be held on such submission.

Mr. BARBOUR. I move its reference to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CAMPBELL. It seems to me that the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department is the proper committee to refer that to. I move, as an amendment, that it be referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

Mr. BARBOUR. Is the question on referring to the Committee of the Whole?

The PRESIDENT. That is the first question.

Mr. McCALLUM. That is the order in which the question must be put; first to the Committee of the Whole, and then to a standing committee. Now I submit, in one word, that the resolution involving, as it does, so great a legal question as is presented in that resolution, ought to go to the Committee on Judiciary. It might involve the success or the defeat of the work of this whole Convention. I understand that it is thought, notwithstanding the action of the Legislature, that we may submit any portion of the Constitution or a separate proposition, but the Committee on Judiciary, in my judgment, ought to pass upon all such questions.

Mr. CAPLES. It seems to me, Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT. It is not debatable.

Mr. McCALLUM. I ask the Chair under what rule he is deciding?

The PRESIDENT. Under the rule under which we are working.

Mr. ESTEE. I raise the point of order, that under rule twenty all questions of this kind must go to a standing committee.

The question was put, and Mr. Barbour's motion was lost on a standing vote; ayes, forty-three, noes, eighty-four.

The resolution was then referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

WAREHOUSES.

Mr. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to subjecting warehouses to legislative control:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. All buildings or other structures used exclusively or partially for the storage of grain or other property, for a direct compensation, or where such storage is incidental to some other compensatory transaction, and whether the property stored be kept separated or not, are declared to be public warehouses, subject to legislative control as to rates of storage and otherwise.

SEC. 2. The owner, lessee, or manager of every public warehouse shall make weekly statements, under oath, before an authorized officer; shall keep a copy of such statement posted in a conspicuous place in said warehouse; shall file a copy of such statement without delay in the office of the County Clerk of the county wherein such warehouse may be; and, also, file a copy with the Secretary of State. Such statement shall set forth the amount and grade of each kind of grain, and of other property, in such warehouse; what warehouse receipts have been issued, and to whom; which are, at time of statement, outstanding. On the copy posted in the warehouse there shall be daily noted all changes that occur in the quantity and grade of property on storage.

SEC. 3. The owners, consignees, and holders of warehouse receipts shall have the right to examine such property, and all books and records relating thereto, and every citizen, within business hours of any day, shall have a right to examine the statement mentioned in section two of this article.

SEC. 4. Railroad companies and other common carriers shall weigh grain and other property at place of shipment, and receipt for full amount, and shall be responsible for the delivery of such amount, to the owner or consignee, at the place of destination.

SEC. 5. Railroad companies receiving and transporting grain and other property shall deliver the same, without delay, to any consignee thereof, or to any public warehouse or other place of deposit to which it may be consigned, without compensation other than the regular freight rates; provided, such consignee, public warehouse, or other place of deposit can be reached by any track owned, leased, or used, or which can be used, by such railroad companies; and railroad companies shall permit connections to be made with their tracks, so that any consignee, public warehouse, or other place of deposit may be reached by the cars running on said railroads.

SEC. 6. The Legislature shall provide, by law, for the inspection of grain and other products used for food.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall pass all necessary laws to give full effect to this article of the Constitution, which shall be liberally construed, so as to protect producers and shippers. And this article shall not be construed to deny the Legislature the power to prescribe, by law, other and further remedies, as may be found expedient, or to deprive any person of existing common law remedies.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

Mr. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to revenue and taxation:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. Taxation, except as hereinafter provided, whether imposed by the State, county, or other political corporate bodies, shall be equal and uniform. All property, both real, personal, and mixed, shall be taxed in proportion to its true and full value, to be ascertained by law. No species of property from which a tax may be collected shall be taxed higher than any other species of property of equal value.

SEC. 2. The property, real and personal, of the State, of counties, and other corporate subdivisions of the State, shall be exempt from taxation.

SEC. 3. The property, real and personal, of blind and of deaf and dumb persons, to the value of five thousand dollars; the wearing apparel, household furniture, and utensils of every family, to the value of three hundred dollars; the tools of every laborer, miner, and mechanic, to the value of two hundred dollars; the farming implements and team of every cultivator of land (farmer), to the value of five hundred dollars, and all growing crops, shall be exempt from taxation. There shall be no poll tax levied or collected in this State.

SEC. 4. All laws exempting property from taxation, other than the property above enumerated, shall be void.

SEC. 5. No county, or subdivision of the State, nor the inhabitants thereof, nor the property therein, shall be released or discharged from their or its proportionate share of taxes, nor shall commutation for taxes be authorized in any form.

SEC. 6. The Legislature shall, by general laws, vest in the corporate authorities of counties and subdivisions of the State the power to levy, assess, and collect the necessary taxes other than State taxes.

SEC. 7. The rolling stock and all movable property, also all credits, and all certificates of stock, belonging to and held by any railroad company or corporation in this State, shall be considered personal property, and taxed as such. All other property owned and held by any such company or corporation shall be considered real estate, and taxed as such.

SEC. 8. Mining and other stocks shall be assessed and taxed at their ruling money value at the time of assessment.

SEC. 9. All property employed in banking shall bear a burden of taxation equal to that imposed on like property of private persons, and all notes and bills discounted or purchased, moneys loaned, and all property, effects and dues, without deduction, shall be taxed.

SEC. 10. The property of all corporations, whether heretofore, or hereafter incorporated, shall be subject to taxation, the same as other property.

SEC. 11. When property is mortgaged, the amount of money borrowed on such mortgage shall be deducted from the actual value of the property, and the amount of the mortgage assessed to the mortgagee. If the mortgagee fail to pay the tax levied on the mortgage, the mortgagor shall; and in such case the mortgagor shall deduct the amount so paid from the interest or principal due or to become due on said mortgage.

SEC. 12. All agricultural lands of equal producing capacity, whether cultivated or wild, improved or unimproved, shall be subject to the same rate of taxation, regardless of improvements.

SEC. 13. All property, over and above the value of five thousand dollars, owned by any one person, or by any company, corporation, or copartnership, shall be subject to a graduated progressive tax, on an ascending scale, to be assessed on each additional five thousand dollars or less.

SEC. 14. No tax shall be levied except in pursuance of a law which shall distinctly state the object of the same, to which object, only, such tax shall be applied.

SEC. 15. Taxes for county, city, town, and school purposes may be levied on all subjects of taxation, but the valuation of property therefor shall not exceed the valuation of the same property for State purposes. For county purposes the annual rate on property, in counties having five million dollars or less, shall not, in the aggregate, exceed fifty cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; in counties having five million dollars, and under ten million dollars, said rate shall not exceed fifty cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; in counties having ten million dollars, and under twenty million dollars, said rate shall not exceed thirty-five cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; in counties having over thirty million dollars, said rate shall not exceed thirty cents on the hundred dollars' valuation. For city and town, or city and county (where city and county are united) purposes, the annual rate on property in cities and towns having thirty thousand inhabitants or more, shall not, in the aggregate, exceed one hundred cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; in cities and towns having less than thirty thousand and over ten thousand inhabitants, said rate shall not exceed sixty cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; in cities and towns having less than ten thousand and more than one thousand inhabitants, said rate shall not exceed fifty cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; and in towns having one thousand or less inhabitants, said rate shall not exceed twenty-five cents on the hundred dollars' valuation. For school purposes the annual rate on property shall not exceed fifty cents on the hundred dollars' valuation; provided, that the annual rates for school purposes may be increased in districts formed of cities and towns, or cities and counties, to an amount not to exceed one dollar on the hundred dollars' valuation, on condition that a majority of the voters, voting at an election held to decide the question, vote for said increase. For the purpose of erecting public buildings, the rates of taxation herein limited may be increased, when the rate of such increase and the purpose for which it is intended shall have been submitted to a vote of the people, and two thirds of the qualified voters voting at such election shall vote therefor.

SEC. 16. No county, or other political division of the State, shall be allowed to become indebted in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount exceeding, in any year, the income and revenue provided for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose, nor in cases requiring such assent shall any indebtedness be allowed to be incurred to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding five per centum on the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the assessment next before the last assessment for State and county purposes, previous to the incurring of such indebtedness; provided, that with such assent, any county may be allowed to become indebted to a larger amount for the erection of a Court-house or jail; and provided further, that any county or other political corporation, incurring any indebtedness, requiring the assent of the voters as aforesaid, shall, before or at the time of so doing, provide for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for payment of the principal thereof within fifteen years from the time of contracting the same.

SEC. 17. Private property shall not be taken and sold for the payment of the corporate debt of a municipal corporation.

SEC. 18. Real estate shall be appraised at least once every two years, and personal property every year, in such manner as may be provided by law, at its true value in money.

SEC. 19. All moneys collected for taxes must be deposited in the public treasury immediately after collection, and they shall never be retained in the hands or under the control of any Tax Collector, nor deposited in any place but the public treasury.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

EDUCATION.

MR. BLACKMER introduced the following proposed amendment to article nine of the present Constitution, relating to education:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of education among the people. The proceeds of the sale of the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress approved A. D. eighteen hundred and forty-one, and of the sale of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of township lands reserved for school purposes, shall constitute an indivisible school fund, the income from which shall be apportioned by the Superintendent of Public Instruction to each county, pro rata, according to the number of school census children therein.

SEC. —. The revenue derived from the State School Fund, and from the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools. In addition to these schools the public school system may include high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools, which may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority.

SEC. —. The funds arising from the sale of any lands or scrip which have been or may hereafter be granted to this State by the Congress of the United States, for any educational purposes whatever, shall forever be kept as separate and distinct funds, to be used, under the control of legislative enactments, exclusively for the purposes for which they were set apart in the several Acts granting the same, any statute law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Referred to Committee on Education.

LAW OF SUCCESSION.

MR. BLACKMER introduced the following proposed provision, relating to the law of succession:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of the Legislature, at the session next succeeding the adoption of this Constitution, to so change the law of succession that, upon the death of either husband or wife, the community property, without administration, shall belong to the survivor, subject to such regulations as the Legislature may by statute law provide.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. BROWN introduced the following proposed amendment to section thirty-two of Legislative Department:

Resolved, That to control railroads it shall be imperative on the Legislature of this State to regularly examine, during each session of the same, the books of the Central Railroad Company, and to examine witnesses as to the cost of that road, and of all other railroads in this State. It shall be imperative on the Legislature that on any railroad one hundred miles in length, built in part or entirely by aid of the State or nation, the profit of such company or companies shall be so fixed as to approximately yield, so near as can be calculated, not more than ten per cent per annum on the actual cost of the road.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

JURY SYSTEM.

MR. CAPLES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the jury system:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Grand Juries shall consist of seven jurors, and the concurrence of five shall be sufficient for the finding of an indictment or making a presentment.

SEC. —. Trial juries shall consist of five jurors, and the concurrence of three shall be sufficient to render a verdict, except in cases where, upon conviction, the penalty would be death, in which case the jury shall be composed of seven jurors, and a concurrence of the whole be necessary to the finding of a verdict.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

ABROGATION OF THE JURY SYSTEM.

MR. CAPLES introduced the following proposition, in relation to the abrogation of the jury system:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. In all cases, civil and criminal, the Judge or Judges shall render the decision without the intervention of a jury.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

EDUCATION.

MR. CHAPMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to a system of education:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. A Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected by the qualified electors, at the same time and place, in the same manner, and for the same term of office as the Governor. He shall receive a salary equal to that of Secretary of State.

SEC. 2. A County Superintendent of Schools, for each county in the State, shall be elected at the general election of Governor and Superintendent of Public Instruction, by vote of the qualified electors of each county, and shall hold office for the term of four years; provided, the Legislature may authorize two or more counties to unite in one district and elect one Superintendent in said district, the same as in the counties.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall provide for a system of public schools, by which a free public school shall be maintained for at least six months in each school district in every year after the first year in which a school is established.

SEC. 4. There shall be a State Board of Education, consisting of two members from each Congressional District, who shall be nominated by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, for a term of four years. The State Superintendent shall be ex officio a member of this Board.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall encourage, by all suitable means, the promotion of education among the people. The proceeds of the sales of the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States, under an Act of Congress approved A. D. eighteen hundred and forty-one, and of the sales of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of township lands reserved for school purposes, shall constitute an inviolable school fund, the income from which shall be apportioned by the Superintendent of Public Instruction to each school district, pro rata, according to the number of school census children.

SEC. 6. No public moneys shall ever be appropriated for the support, directly or indirectly, of any religious sect or denominational school whatever; nor for any school not under the direct and entire control of public school officers.

SEC. 7. The revenue derived from the State School Fund, and from the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools.

Referred to Committee on Education.

TAXATION.

MR. CHAPMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

Assessors of town, county, district, or State taxes, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the town, county, or district in which the property taxed for town, county, or district purposes is situated; provided, that vacancies may be filled by appointment according to general laws.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF LAWS.

MR. CONDON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the constitutionality of laws:

SECTION —. No laws shall be considered unconstitutional unless unanimously so decided by the Supreme Court of the State.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

PARDONING POWER.

MR. CONDON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to pardoning power:

SEC. 20. The Legislature shall provide by law for the election of three State Wardens, to be elected by districts of equal population as near as may be practicable, but no county shall be divided in forming such districts. These State Wardens shall hold their office for six years each, except as hereinafter provided, and shall have charge and management of the two State Prisons, and the two Insane Asylums, Asylum of the Deaf and Dumb, and all other charitable and penal institutions conducted and supported by the State, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature shall prescribe by law. The districts from which the Wardens shall be elected shall be numbered, beginning with the most southern one, one, two, and three.

SEC. 21. The first election for State Wardens shall be at the first general election held under this Constitution, and they shall be inaugurated on the same day thereafter as the Governor and other State officers are to be inaugurated. The Warden for District Number One shall hold his office for a term of two years; the Warden for District Number Two shall hold his office for a term of four years; and the Warden for District Number Three shall hold his office for a term of six years, and thence afterwards all their successors in office shall hold office for a term of six years, except Wardens elected to fill vacancies, and they shall only hold office for the unexpired part of the term of their predecessors.

SEC. 22. The State Wardens shall receive an annual salary for their services of three thousand dollars a year, and such clerical assistance as the Legislature shall deem necessary; but no clerk in their employment shall ever receive a higher compensation than eighteen hundred dollars per annum.

SEC. 32. The Board of State Wardens shall constitute a Board of Pardons, and the Governor of the State shall never pardon any person convicted of crime except at the unanimous request of the Board of Pardons.

SEC. 33. The Legislature shall give effect to a judicious system of credits, for good behavior, to convicts in the State Prison, to be carried out by the State Wardens.

SEC. 34. The Legislature shall, if practicable, provide a system of labor for the convicts which shall make them self-supporting, but not in any way that shall seriously conflict with the free labor of mechanics.

Referred to Committee on Pardoning Power.

BRIBING LEGISLATORS.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, authorizing the State to grant rewards:

SEC. —. The Legislature shall provide that a reward of ten thousand dollars, United States gold coin, shall be paid out of the State treasury to any member of the Assembly or the Senate of the State of California who shall produce such evidence as will convict any person or persons of having offered a bribe to any member of the Legislature, to any Judge of the Supreme Court, or to any District Judge of the State of California.

SEC. —. Any member of the Legislature giving such information will be exonerated from all collusion in or with the person offering said bribe.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

APPRENTICE LAW.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, authorizing the State to found an apprentice law:

SEC. —. Persons apprenticed to any trade, or calling, business, or profession, shall serve the specified time according and in compliance with a written or printed agreement, stating the terms on which the said apprenticeship is based.

SEC. —. The Governor of the State shall sign, and cause to be issued, a State certificate of apprenticeship to any and all apprentices who shall have served, in compliance with the stipulated agreement, the term of five years, in the State of California.

SEC. —. The person or persons to whom the apprentice is bound shall be considered, by law, his or her guardian, and shall not inflict any harsh, arbitrary, or cruel treatment on the said apprentice.

SEC. —. The term harsh, arbitrary, or cruel treatment does not imply to chastisement reasonably expected from parents on disobedient children.

SEC. —. The maximum term of apprenticeship shall not exceed five years.

SEC. —. The apprentice shall be diligent, obedient, and respectful to his or her guardian.

SEC. —. The guardian shall be kind, affable, and courteous to his or her apprentice.

SEC. —. The agreement entered into by the guardian and apprentice shall be signed by a Notary Public and two witnesses.

SEC. —. At the expiration of the term of apprenticeship, the State shall give a premium of ($200) two hundred dollars to said apprentice; provided, that the stipulations of agreement shall have been complied with.

SEC. —. No person shall be apprenticed to any trade, calling, business, or profession, who shall not have attained the age of —— years.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. FARRELL introduced the following proposition for incorporation in the proposed new Constitution, in relation to the Legislative Department:

SECTION —. No member of the Legislature shall vote upon any question in which he, individually, or any corporation for which he is agent or attorney, is directly interested.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

RELIGION IN SCHOOLS.

MR. FARRELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to education:

Proposition for incorporation in the proposed new Constitution, in relation to education:

SECTION —. No political, sectarian, or partisan test shall ever be allowed or exercised in the appointment or employment of officers or instructors in any of the public schools or State institutions of learning; and no religious or other sect, denomination, or class, shall ever have any exclusive right to, or control of, any part of the school or educational funds of this State.

Referred to Committee on Education.

APPROPRIATIONS.

MR. FAWCETT introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting the appropriation of money by the Legislature from county and city treasuries, etc.:

Incorporate the following section in the Constitution:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall not, by special law, appropriate any money from the treasury of any county, city, district, or other political or municipal subdivision, nor allow or direct the allowance of any claim or demand against the same.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

MR. FAWCETT introduced the following proposed amendment to the preamble and Bill of Rights:

Amend section sixteen, article one, of the Constitution, as follows:

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or impairing the remedy for the enforcement of the same, or changing the rules of evidence or measure of damages so as to destroy or impair existing rights of action, shall ever be passed.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

ABOLITION OF FINES.

MR. FREUD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the penalty for crimes:

SECTION —. The penalty for all crimes shall be imprisonment; and punishment by money fines is hereby abolished. Imprisonment shall be proportioned to the character and degree of the crime.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

MR. FREUD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to special legislation:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following cases:

1. Granting any corporation, association, or individual, any special or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise.

2. Creating, increasing, or decreasing salaries, fees, or allowances of public officers during the time for which said officers are elected or appointed.

3. Creating offices, or prescribing the powers or duties of officers, in cities, counties, townships, or other municipal corporations.

4. Regulating or changing city, county, or township affairs, or appointing commissioners to transact the same.

5. Authorizing or directing the payment of money by any city, county, township, or other municipal corporation.

6. Restricting any town, city, or school district from supporting high schools, or causing instruction to be given in branches of study additional to those defined by State law.

7. Laying out, opening, closing, altering, or working streets, roads, or highways.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. GRACE introduced the following proposition, in relation to Legislative Department:

SECTION —. The regular sessions of the Legislature shall be held once in every four years, and shall commence on the first Monday succeeding the first Tuesday in January next ensuing after the election of its members, which regular session shall be limited to one hundred days.

SEC. —. No special session of the Legislature, convened by proclamation of the Governor, shall continue longer than fifty days.

SEC. —. All laws, before taking effect, shall be submitted to the people for ratification.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

TAXATION.

MR. HERRINGTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to revenue and taxation:

Mr. President: I offer the following relating to revenue and taxation and suggest that it be incorporated as sections of an article in the new Constitution, to be known as Revenue and Taxation:

SECTION —. The following property is exempt from taxation:

First—The property of the widow and orphan, to the value of one thousand dollars, when no greater amount in value is owned by such widow or orphan.

Second—Lands exclusively used as public cemeteries.

Third—Growing crops.

Fourth—The lands and improvements thereon belonging to any person, not exceeding six acres in any incorporated city, town, or village, or sixty acres elsewhere, constituting the foundation of any college or university at which the degree of Master or Bachelor of Arts or Science, or its equivalent, is authorized by law to be conferred on male or female graduates, when used exclusively for educational purposes.

Fifth—The property of the United States and of this State, and of any municipality or political subdivision of this State, when used for public purposes.

Sixth—Money secured by mortgage on real estate. But the mortgagor, and his grantees of the lands mortgaged, may rebate from the mortgage debt on settlement an amount for taxes paid upon said lands equal to the taxes which should have been paid or payable upon the amount secured thereby, if the money so secured had been taxed as so much cash on hand; and the Legislature shall provide for the recovery, by the mortgagor and his grantees, of the lands mortgaged, and by the executors and administrators of each of them, from the mortgagee and his assigns, the amount of such taxes, with interest, when payment of the mortgage debt is made without rebate. Also, for the recovery by them of all money and property that may have been given, paid, or transferred by the mortgagor, other than interest, as a bonus or otherwise, to obtain the credit, security, or loan; and no contract, law, or obligation shall ever be a bar to such recovery, or be valid or binding for any future payments or transfers of money or property for such loan, security, or credit.

The Legislature shall provide a uniform rule for taxing all cash on hand, solvent debts and credits, all investments in stocks and bonds, and shares in banks, joint stock companies, and associations, and all real and personal property, except as otherwise herein provided, according to their true value in money; provided, investments in the bonds of the State, or of any municipality or political subdivision thereof, shall be taxed as the Legislature shall determine; and provided further, that all improvements on real estate shall be assessed separately from the lands on which they are located; and all lands of the State shall be graded and regraded every four years into three or more grades, as from time to time the Legislature shall determine. All lands of the same grade shall be taxed at the same valuation; and the valuation of each grade shall be determined by the State Board of Equalization, by a general average from the aggregate true cash values of all the lands of the State belonging to such grade, as returned by the Assessors for each county or assessment district of the State. And all assessments made for local purposes must be made upon the basis of the last preceding assessment of such lands for State and county purposes.

SEC. —. No poll tax shall ever be imposed upon a citizen or one who can become a citizen of the United States.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

APPLICATION OF LAWS.

MR. HOLMES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to Legislative Department:

Mr. President: I offer the following, determining the nature and application of laws to be enacted upon certain subjects, and suggest that it be incorporated as a section of an article of the Constitution, to be known as Legislative Department:

SECTION —. Laws relating to the following subjects shall be general in their nature and application: The succession to property; the formation of private corporations, and defining and regulating their powers, duties, and responsibilities; Courts of justice, public boards, and officers; the election and appointment of State, district, county, and township officers, filling vacancies in office, and designating places of voting; rights and remedies afforded to litigants; and proceedings to enforce the same in Courts of justice; the management and disposition of estates of deceased persons by executors and administrators, and of wards by their guardians; killing and taking game and fish; crimes and punishments; changing the boundaries of counties, and the names of persons and places; granting divorces; compensating State officers; the exercise of public rights, franchises, and privileges; grand and petit juries, and the formation thereof.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS.

MR. HOLMES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to public roads and highways:

Resolved, That there be introduced a clause, as follows, in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. That whenever real estate belonging to private persons or corporation shall hereafter be taken for public roads or highways, the county in which such roads or highways shall be made shall pay the actual value of such real estate so taken, the valuation of said land taken for such purposes to be ascertained by twelve disinterested electors of the county; and from and after such valuation has been paid or tendered to the owner of such real estate, or guardian of the same, the action shall be final, and there shall be no appeal, and the fee-simple title of such real estate shall become vested in such county.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. HUGHEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the following sections be incorporated in the new Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. There shall be hereafter no voluntary transfer, distribution, or sale of real property, unless all taxes thereon have been paid.

SEC. —. The making of profit out of State, county, city and county, or other municipal corporation money, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, is a felony, and shall be punished as such.

SEC. —. The State shall never assume, pay, or become responsible for, the debts or liabilities of, or in any manner give, loan, or extend its credit to or in aid of, any county, city and county, or other municipal corporation, or to any quasi-public or private corporation or individual; nor shall the State, or any county, city and county, or other municipal corporation thereof, grant any subsidy to any public, quasi-public, or private corporation, association, or individual.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

MR. HUGHEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning Bill of Rights:

Resolved, That the following section be incorporated in the new Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

SECTION —. Each county, city and county, or other municipal corporation of this State, shall be the sole judge and controller of its local sanitary, moral, and police government; and each shall for itself determine whenever any thing or things, person or persons, are a nuisance or a menace, and detrimental to the morals and rights of its citizens.

SEC. —. Each county, city and county, or other municipal corporation, shall have the right to suppress, and remove from its borders, all things or persons so declared to be nuisances, or detrimental to the rights and morals of its citizens.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. JOYCE introduced the following amendment to article five, to take the place of sections one, two, and three, of the present Constitution:

Resolved, That the following amendments to article five, sections one, two, and three, of the present Constitution, be incorporated in the new Constitution:

SECTION 1. The Executive Department shall consist of a Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Attorney-General, who shall each hold his office for the term of two years from and after the first Monday in December, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and until their successors are elected and qualified.

SEC. 2. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Attorney-General, who shall not have attained the age of thirty years, and been for five years next preceding their election a citizen of the United States and of this State. Neither the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, Superintendent of Public Instruction, nor Attorney-General shall be eligible to any other office, commissionership, or position of trust, during the period for which they shall have been elected.

Referred to Committee on Executive Department.

CHINESE DEAD.

MR. KLEINE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the exportation of human remains:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. It shall be a criminal offense to send from this to any foreign country the bones or remains of any alien after the person has been interred for a period of two months or more.

Referred to Committee on Chinese.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

MR. LARUE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to a system of common schools:

Amend section two, article nine, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SECTION 2. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools by which a school shall be kept up and supported in each district at least six months in every year. No district shall be deprived of its portion of the interest in the public fund unless through willful neglect to comply with the law.

Referred to Committee on Education.

CREATION OF DEBTS.

MR. LARUE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the creation of debts. Amend article eight of the Constitution by adding a new section, to be known and designated as section two, and to read as follows:

SEC. 2. No debt shall be authorized to be created on any county, city and county, or town, or municipal corporation, in excess of five per cent. of the assessed valuation of the property therein, as equalized in pursuance of law; and no authority shall be given to donate, appropriate, or devise any money, or to loan the credit of any such county, city and county, or town, or municipal corporation, in aid of any private corporation, association, or person. The Legislature shall enforce this article by appropriate legislation. All public debts heretofore authorized and contracted for, in pursuance of law, are hereby made binding upon the State, county, or municipality contracting the same.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

DIVORCES.

MR. LINDOW introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to divorces:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. No person from whom a divorce has been obtained shall, during the lifetime of the person obtaining the divorce, be again allowed to contract a marriage; such divorces to be obtained by civil action, in the District Courts only, for causes provided by law.

Referred to Legislative Committee.

SALARY OF THE GOVERNOR.

MR. LINDOW introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the Executive Department:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The Governor of this State shall receive an annual salary of five thousand dollars ($5,000), and shall be ineligible to hold any additional office of trust or profit in the gift of this government during his term of office as Governor.

Referred to the Committee on Executive Department.

EXEMPTION FROM FORCED SALES.

MR. MANSFIELD introduced the following proposition, to exempt from forced sale for taxes the property exempt by law from sale on execution:

Resolved, That provision be made in the revised Constitution to exempt from forced sale for delinquent taxes all property exempt from sale by law on execution.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

APPOINTMENT OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

MR. MANSFIELD introduced the following proposition, to appoint all judicial officers, except Justices of the Peace, and fix their term of office:

Resolved, That section three, of article six, of the present Constitution, be so amended and revised in the new Constitution as to provide for the appointment of all judicial officers, except Justices of the Peace, and to fix their terms of office during good behavior.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not, in any manner, create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate, with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by some law for some single object or work, to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years from the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all money raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created; and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each judicial district, if one be published therein, throughout the State, for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people.

SEC. 2. The City of Sacramento is hereby declared the seat of government of this State, and shall so remain until changed by law; but no law changing the seat of government shall be valid or binding, unless the same be approved and ratified by a majority of the qualified voters of the State voting therefor at a general State election, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature may provide submitting the question of change to the people.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Board of Supervisors in each county in the State, to consist of five members, to be elected by districts. The Supervisors shall jointly and individually perform such duties as may be prescribed by law, legislative or otherwise.

SEC. 4. The Supervisors shall be elected at general State elections, and shall hold their office for two years.

SEC. 5. The fiscal year shall commence on the first day of January of each year.

SEC. 6. No contract of marriage shall be invalidated for want of conformity to the requirements of any religious sect. But no marriage hereafter contracted in this State shall be valid unless celebrated before some public officer, priest, or minister of the gospel, and a public record thereof made, as shall be provided by law.

SEC. 7. The homestead, not exceeding five thousand dollars in value, and such other reasonable amount of property as may be determined by law, of all heads of families, shall be exempt from forced sale.

SEC. 8. The Legislature shall provide, by law, that no person shall act as juror oftener than once in six months.

SEC. 9. All property, either real or personal, owned by either husband or wife before marriage, and that acquired by either of them afterwards, by gift, devise, or descent, shall be their separate property.

SEC. 10. A plurality of votes given at any election shall constitute a choice, when not otherwise directed in this Constitution.

SEC. 11. Each county, town, city, and incorporated village shall make provision for the support of its own officers, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 12. When the Legislature is called together by a proclamation of the Governor for an extra or special session, each member shall receive one hundred and fifty dollars, which shall be in full compensation for all services and mileage of such special session; and any member who neglects to attend such session, without reasonable excuse, shall forfeit his office, and shall never thereafter be eligible to a seat in the Legislature of this State.

SEC. 13. The Supervisors of the various counties of this State shall receive for their services an annual salary of one hundred and fifty dollars, and one dollar for every twenty miles of travel from their place of residence to the county seat and back, and this shall be in full for all services rendered by them; and they shall hold such sessions for business as may be prescribed by the Legislature.

SEC. 14. The compensation of any officer or employé under the Government of this State shall neither be increased or decreased during the term for which such officer or employé is elected or appointed.

SEC. 15. None of the State officers shall be entitled to a deputy, but they shall be entitled to whatever clerical assistance is necessary to the proper fulfillment of their duties; but no clerk in any of the State offices shall receive a higher salary per annum than eighteen hundred dollars, and no clerk shall be employed without the consent of the Legislature, which shall be expressed by an appropriation for compensation.

SEC. 16. Each house of the Legislature, when in session, shall be entitled to three clerks, and no more, except at the first session, when they may employ five. Each clerk shall be entitled to a per diem pay of five dollars. They shall employ no Pages, Postmasters, or letter carriers. Each house shall be entitled to a Sergeant-at-Arms, and one Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, and one Porter or Janitor, and the per diem pay of any one of these employés shall not exceed five dollars.

SEC. 17. The Legislature shall designate by law a safe mode of transmitting taxes, collected in the various counties of the State, to the State Treasurer, which shall make it unnecessary for the County Treasurer to visit the State Capitol for the purpose.

SEC. 18. In all cases where land is sold under a foreclosure of a mortgage upon real estate, the owner of the land shall have one year to redeem the mortgaged premises, by paying the cost of foreclosure and seven per cent. interest on the amount of the judgment, and the right of possession of the premises for the entire year.

SEC. 19. Where real estate is sold for taxes, the owner of the property sold shall have the right of possession for one year, and of redemption for the same time, by paying ten per cent. additional on the taxes at the time of redemption.

SEC. 20. The trial and determination of contested elections of Electors of President and Vice-President, members of the Legislature, and of all public officers, whether State, judicial, municipal, or local, shall be by the Courts of law, or by one or more of the law Judges thereof. The Legislature shall, by general law, designate the Courts and Judges by whom the several classes of election contests shall be tried, and regulate the manner of trial and all matters incident thereto; but no such law assigning jurisdiction, or regulating its exercise, shall apply to any contest arising out of an election held before its passage.

SEC. 21. The Legislature shall, by suitable enactments of law, prevent, as far as possible, the monopoly of public lands by individuals, associations, or corporations, for speculative purposes.

SEC. 22. The Legislature may aid and encourage four agricultural societies in the State—one for each Congressional District—to be located in each district as may be directed by law, but the annual appropriation to any such society shall not exceed two thousand dollars; but no agricultural society shall in future be recognized as the State Agricultural Society, nor shall any money be appropriated out of the State treasury for any such society.

SEC. 23. After the adoption of this Constitution no person in the State shall take by will or devise more than one thousand acres of land, and no deed made by the maker immediately before death, for the purpose of evading this prohibition, shall be valid.

SEC. 24. The Governor may, by proclamation, convene the Senate at any time he may need their advice, without convening the Assembly, and at such sessions each Senator shall be entitled to one hundred dollars, as compensation for his services, and no more.

SEC. 25. The Legislature shall, by provision of law, remove the State Library to a suitable building in the City of San Francisco, reserving only such books at the State Capitol as treat of the laws of the United States, the laws of California, and those of all other States of the Union.

SEC. 26. The State Library, when located in San Francisco, shall be free to all, under such regulations as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 27. Until the State is out of debt, no money shall be appropriated out of the State treasury for any addition to the State Library, nor to any further improvements of the State Capitol or State Capitol grounds.

SEC. 28. The Governor of the State, and all other officers of the State whose duties shall require them to travel from place to place in fulfilling those duties, shall be allowed, in addition to their annual salary, the actual traveling expenses paid out by them.

SEC. 29. All warrants on the treasury shall be drawn by the Governor, countersigned by the Secretary of State, and indorsed with these words, "Drawn in accordance with law," which indorsement shall be signed by the Attorney-General.

SEC. 30. The Legislature shall provide for the appointment of three Bank and Insurance Commissioners, with full power to investigate the affairs of saving banks, insurance companies, and all moneyed institutions of a public character; the Commissioners to be appointed by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate. Their compensation shall be fixed by law, and shall be paid by the banks and insurance companies, in the manner prescribed by law.

SEC. 31. The Bank and Insurance Commissioners shall report to the Governor, as often as once in six months, the condition of the various banks and insurance companies of the State, and he shall take such action thereon as he shall deem for the public good.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the Judicial Department:

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and one Police or Criminal Court for each incorporated city or town that has a population of over fifty thousand inhabitants, and no more than one such Court, except at the unanimous request of the Legislative Department of such incorporated city or town.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. The presence of three of these Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, except such business as may be done in chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.

SEC. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at general State elections.

SEC. 4. The Chief Justice shall be elected by a vote of the State at large, and the four Associate Justices by single districts, which shall be for the present the same as the Congressional Districts, and thence afterward by districts such as the Legislature may from time to time form to preserve, as much as possible, equality in population between said districts.

SEC. 5. The term of office of the Chief Justice and four Associate Justices shall be ten years, dating from their inauguration, and any Chief Justice or Associate Justice who shall be reelected at the expiration of his first term, shall hold his office thereafter during good behavior, but not after he reaches the age of seventy-one years.

SEC. 6. The first election for Justice of the Supreme Court shall be at the general election in September, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and thence afterwards, when such elections shall be required, on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in November, and inaugurated in office on the second Monday after the first Tuesday in January subsequent to their election.

SEC. 7. When a vacancy shall occur in the Supreme Court, by death, resignation, or from any cause whatever, the vacant place or places shall be filled by election, at the next ensuing general State election, but if such election is more than six months from the date of the vacancy occurring, the Governor shall fill the place by appointment, and the appointee shall hold his place until a successor shall be elected and qualified, as herein provided.

SEC. 8. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity, also in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to five hundred dollars; also, in cases of forcible entry and detainer, and in all probate matters; also, in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by or in behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or in the Supreme Court, or before any District Court or Judge thereat. The Legislature shall have no power to grant leave of absence to any judicial officer; and any such officer who shall absent himself from the State for more than thirty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office. The District Courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest, amounts to two hundred dollars, and in all criminal cases not otherwise provided for; also in actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance, and all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for; also, of all matters of probate; and said Courts shall have the power of naturalization and to issue papers therefor. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases arising in Justices' and such other inferior Courts as may be established by the Legislature in their respective counties, upon questions of law alone. Said Courts shall be always open (legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted), and their original jurisdiction shall extend to all parts of the State. Said Courts and their Judges shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody, in their respective counties. There shall be in each of the organized counties, or cities and counties, of the State, a District Court, for each of which a District Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, or city and county, at the general State election; provided, that in all the said counties, or cities and counties, containing more than fifty thousand inhabitants, there shall be one such District Court and District Judge for every forty thousand inhabitants, and in all such cases said Courts to be numbered from one upward, in numerical order, as the Legislature may direct. The District Judges shall hold their offices for six years, dating from the second Monday after the first Tuesday in January next after their election.

SEC. 9. Any District Judge, who shall be twice reëlected, shall hold his office during good behavior after the second reëlection, but not after he shall have reached the age of seventy-one years.

SEC. 10. The Justices of the Supreme Court and District Judges shall severally, during their continuance in office, receive for their services (quarterly) an annual salary, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. District Judges shall be paid out of the county treasury of their respective counties. The annual salary of the District Judges shall be fixed by the Legislature, not to exceed three thousand six hundred dollars in districts having more than thirty thousand inhabitants, and not to exceed two thousand dollars in districts having less than twenty thousand inhabitants. No district Judge or Justice of the Supreme Court shall, after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, be allowed to draw or receive any quarterly salary, unless they shall severally take and subscribe an oath before the disbursing officer that no case in their respective Courts remains undecided, that has been submitted for decision for the period of sixty days. The Legislature shall enforce this provision by appropriate legislation.

SEC. 11. District Judges shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected, except in cases of resignation, and then not until two years after such resignation.

SEC. 12. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, nor state the testimony.

SEC. 13. The style of all processes shall be, "We, the People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

SEC. 14. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be ineligible to any other office, State or Federal, during the term for which they shall have been elected, except in cases of resignation, and then not until two years after such resignation.

SEC. 15. The Justices shall appoint a reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court, who shall hold his office and be removable at their pleasure. He shall receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars, payable quarterly.

SEC. 16. The Legislature shall fix by law the jurisdiction of any Criminal Court authorized to be established in large cities, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the Judges thereof.

SEC. 17. The unfinished business remaining in the Probate Court of the City and County of San Francisco shall be apportioned between the several District Courts therein established, by the Board of Supervisors thereof, in such manner as the Legislature shall direct.

SEC. 18. There shall be one Justice of the Peace elected in each township in the State, and the Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in each incorporated city and town, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of Justices of the Peace; provided, such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record. The Supreme Court, the District Courts, and such other Courts as the Legislature shall declare to be, shall be Courts of record.

SEC. 19. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officers, and shall fix by law their duties and compensation. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record and the Boards of Supervisors in and for their respective counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment, by the several District Judges, of one or more Commissioners in their several counties, with authority to perform chamber business of the Judges of the District Courts, to take depositions, and perform such other duties connected with the administration of justice as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 20. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient, and all opinions shall be free for publication by any person. The times and places of holding the several Courts of record shall be provided for by law.

Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

SPEEDY DECISIONS.

MR. MCCALLUM introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to more speedy decisions in the Courts:

Proposed amendment to article three, to require more speedy decisions in the Courts. Add to the end of section one:

But the Legislature may provide that causes tried and submitted in the Courts shall be decided within a specified time, or, on failure, conditions as to resubmission of such cause.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSESSORS.

MR. MORELAND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the appointment of Assessors and Collectors of revenue:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Supervisors of each county shall appoint, in each township thereof, an Assessor and Collector of revenue for such township, whose duties shall be prescribed by law, and who shall hold their offices for two years. No Assessor shall succeed himself in office.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS.

MR. NEUNABER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to suffrage and elections:

SECTION 1. All elections shall be free and equal.

SEC. 2. All votes shall be by ballot.

SEC. 3. No alien Chinaman shall ever have the right of suffrage.

SEC. 4. Every male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this State one year, of the county ninety days, and of the election district thirty days preceding any election therein, shall be entitled to vote.

SEC. 5. Electors shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the day of election, during their attendance at such election, and in going to and returning from the same. No elector shall be obliged to do military duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 6. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas, nor while a student in any seminary of learning, nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum, nor while confined in any public prison; but no person while confined in any prison, or supported in any public asylum, shall have any right to vote during such confinement or support. No person who has been or hereafter shall be convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crimes, shall be eligible to the Legislature, or to any office of profit or trust in this State.

SEC. 7. No soldier, seaman, or mariner, in the army or navy of the United States, shall be deemed a resident of this State in consequence of being stationed therein.

SEC. 8. No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this State, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this State one year next preceding the election or appointment.

SEC. 9. No idiot, insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector.

SEC. 10. Every male citizen of Mexico, who shall have elected to become a citizen of the United States under the treaty of peace exchanged and ratified at Queretaro, on the thirtieth day of May, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, shall be an elector and citizen of this State, and entitled to all the privileges of a native-born citizen of the United States.

SEC. 11. Every person shall be disqualified from holding office during the term for which he may have been elected who shall have given or offered a bribe or rewards to procure his election.

SEC. 12. The Legislature shall enact laws to support the privilege of free suffrage, prescribing the manner of regulating and conducting elections, and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence therein, from power, bribery, tumult, and other improper conduct, and shall continue the present registration law, with such amendments, from time to time, as they may think wise and beneficial.

SEC. 13. Every person who shall give or accept a challenge to fight a duel, or who shall knowingly carry to another person such challenge to go out of this State to fight a duel, shall be ineligible to any office in this State.

SEC. 14. No person holding a lucrative office or appointment under the Government of the United States, or under this State, shall be eligible to the Legislature, nor shall one person hold more than one lucrative office at the same time; provided, that officers in the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, and the office of Postmaster, when the compensation does not exceed one hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

Sec. 15. No person, who shall hereafter be a collector or holder of public money, or receiver of money as an officer, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit until he shall have accounted for and paid, according to law, all money for which he is or may be liable.

Sec. 16. No person shall be in the receipt, at the same time, of more than one official salary or compensation.

Sec. 17. All elections by the Legislature, or either house thereof, shall be viva voce.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

MILITIA.

Mr. NEUNABER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the militia:

Section 1. The Legislature shall provide by law for the organization and discipline of the militia in such manner as they shall deem expedient, not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Sec. 2. Except in cases of war or insurrection, the Legislature shall not authorize to be expended, or appropriate, more than twenty-five thousand dollars, in any one year, for organizing and disciplining the militia, which shall include all salaries, all rents and disbursements of every character relating to the militia of the State, and the care of the arms belonging to the State.

Sec. 3. The Governor shall have power to call forth the militia to execute the laws of the State, to repress insurrection, and repel invasion.

Referred to Committee on Military Affairs.

CORPORATIONS.

Mr. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning corporations:

Section —. Individual citizens are hereby declared to be entitled to the same privileges as corporations in respect to the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and the taking of private property for public uses. Railroad corporations in possession of any part of the public lands, not necessarily required for conducting the business of such corporation, shall, on demand, deliver to any citizen a conveyance of any part of such lands not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, upon payment of the market value thereof; and such citizen shall be entitled to all the privileges of lands to his use as are now or may be conferred upon corporations by law.

Referred to Committee on Corporations.

LOBBYING.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, for the prevention of lobbying:

Section —. Any Act passed by the Legislature, the passage of which can be proved to have been influenced by personal solicitation of members on the part of any person or persons interested in the same, shall be void.

Sec. —. Members of the Legislature, before the expiration of their terms of office, shall make affidavit before the Governor that in all their legislative acts they have been uninfluenced by bribes or personal solicitation.

Sec. —. Committees shall be appointed by the Legislature for investigation and inquiry into the merits of Acts pending before that body: and persons interested in a bill may appear before said committees either to advocate or oppose them.

Sec. —. Any member of the Legislature proven to have been influenced in his vote or action upon any matter pending before the Legislature, by any reward or promise of future reward, shall be guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof, in addition to such punishment as may be provided by law, shall be disfranchised and forever disqualified from holding any office of public trust.

Sec. —. Any person who seeks to influence the vote of a member of the Legislature by bribery, promise of reward, intimidation, or any other dishonest means, shall be guilty of lobbying, which is hereby declared a felony; and it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide, by law, for the adequate punishment of this crime.

Sec. —. Any person who shall have been convicted of lobbying shall forever thereafter be excluded from the precincts of the Capitol; and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the expulsion and punishment of lobbyists.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

ELIGIBILITY FOR OFFICE.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning ineligibility to office of certain persons, and State, county, and municipal officers:

Section —. No minister of the gospel, priest, or preacher of any denomination whatsoever, shall be eligible to any office of trust or profit in this State; provided, however, that persons who have abandoned those callings may thereby become eligible.

Sec. —. No State, county, or municipal officer shall hold any other office of emolument—commissionership or otherwise—during his term of office.

Sec. —. The Legislature shall, in addition to other penalties, provide for the removal from office of county, city, town, and township officers, on conviction of willful, corrupt, or fraudulent violation or neglect of official duty.

Sec. —. The compensation of no State, county, or municipal officer shall be increased during his term of office; nor shall the term of any office be extended for a longer period than that for which such officer was elected or appointed.

Referred to Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

REPRESENTATION.

Mr. PORTER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to representation:

Resolved, That section fourteen, of article one, of the present Constitution, be amended so as to read as follows:

Representation shall be apportioned according to population; provided, that no one county, or city, or city and county, shall have a greater representation in the Senate than the one sixth of all the Senators.

Referred to Committee on Apportionment and Representation.

SCHEDULE.

Mr. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amended Schedule to the revised Constitution:

That no inconvenience may arise from the changes in this Constitution, and in order to carry the same into complete operation, it is hereby declared that:

Section 1. This Constitution shall take effect on the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, for all purposes not otherwise provided therein.

Sec. 2. All laws in force in this State at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, not inconsistent therewith, and all rights, prosecutions, claims, and contracts, as well of individuals as of bodies corporate, until altered or repealed, shall continue as if the same had not been adopted.

Sec. 3. The Legislature shall provide for the removal of all causes which may be pending when this Constitution goes into effect, to Courts created by the same.

Sec. 4. Every citizen of this State, who was a legal voter at the time of the adoption of the "old Constitution," shall have the right to vote under this Constitution.

Sec. 5. At the general election in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, twenty Senators shall be elected, whose term shall be four years from and after their election. At the general election in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, twenty Senators shall be elected, whose term of office shall be four years, to succeed the twenty Senators who were elected at the election in September, eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, whose term is hereby extended until the election of their successors. In each of the above-named elections, members of the Assembly shall be elected, whose term of office shall be two years. Vacancies shall be filled as provided by law for the unexpired terms.

Sec. 6. All State officers, whether elective or appointed, whose terms would expire in eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, shall be continued until the election and qualification of their successors in office.

Sec. 7. All county officers, except those in the City and County of San Francisco, shall be continued until the election and qualification of their successors to be elected in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

Sec. 8. The terms of the Justices of the Supreme Court, District Judges, and Judges of Courts of record, and all other Courts not specified, shall be continued for one year, or until their successors are elected and qualified, in order to bring the election of such officers in the even year.

Sec. 9. If this Constitution shall be ratified by the people of California, the Legislature shall assemble at the seat of government on the first Monday in January next succeeding their election, and in order to complete their organization, the Senate shall elect a President pro tempore until the Lieutenant-Governor shall be installed in office.

Sec. 10. On the organization of the Legislature, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of State to lay before each house a copy of the abstract made by the Board of Canvassers, and if called for, the original returns of the election, in order that each house may judge of the correctness of the report of said Board of Canvassers.

Sec. 12. The Legislature shall, at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, or as soon thereafter as may be expedient, pass such laws as may be necessary to carry the same into full force and effect.

Sec. 13. All State and Judicial officers heretofore elected, sworn, or affirmed, or in office, and all State and county officers, whether elected or commissioned, shall severally, within one month after the adoption of this Constitution, take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to support this Constitution.

Referred to Committee on Schedule.

PUBLICATION OF LAWS.

Mr. SHOEMAKER introduced the proposed following amendment to the Constitution, limiting publication of laws, decrees, etc., to the English language:

Amend section twenty-one, article eleven, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

Sec. 21. All laws, decrees, regulations, and provisions, which from their nature require publication, shall be published only in the English language.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

WATER RIGHTS.

Mr. G. V. SMITH, of Kern, introduced the following amendment to regulate water rights, and to provide Commissioners therefor:

Section —. The waters of the State, flowing in the natural channels, and in the lakes and bays thereof, or which may be diverted therefrom by canals, ditches, aqueducts, and pipes, belong to the right of eminent domain; and the private use of such waters shall always be subordinate to their public use, and subject to the control of the State. The Legislature shall provide, by general laws, for a just and equitable system or systems for the use and distribution of such waters, which shall prevent waste or imposition, and shall regulate and protect the private and public use thereof; and for that purpose the Legislature may create a Board of State Commissioners, or County Commissioners, or both, and declare their powers, duties, and responsibilities.

Referred to Committee on Water and Water Rights.

OFFICIALS.

MR. H. W. SMITH, of San Francisco, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to officials:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. All State, county, or township officers, elected or appointed, shall be ineligible for any additional office of trust or profit.

Referred to Committee on Executive Department.

GRADUATED TAXATION.

MR. SWENSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

SECTION —. Every person or corporation in this State shall pay an additional yearly tax, for State, county, and town purposes, of five per centum on each three hundred acres of land, over and above two thousand acres, owned or controlled by them.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

SALARIES.

MR. THOMPSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to salaries:

ARTICLE —.

Resolved, That the Constitution should embrace the following provisions in relation to salaries of teachers, clerks, and officers in this State:

SECTION 1. No Sheriff shall receive a salary exceeding five thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 2. No Mayor of any city shall receive a salary exceeding three thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 4. No Tax Collector shall receive a salary exceeding five thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 5. No teacher of any public school shall receive a salary exceeding two thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 6. No City, County, or State Treasurer shall receive a salary exceeding three thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 7. No clerk, or deputy, shall receive a salary exceeding two thousand dollars per annum, where salary is payable out of any State or county treasury.

SEC. 8. No Superintendent of Public Instruction, or Schools, shall receive a salary exceeding two thousand four hundred dollars per annum; and no Deputy Superintendent a salary exceeding one thousand eight hundred dollars.

SEC. 9. No Police Judge of any city of this State shall receive a salary exceeding three thousand dollars per annum. Nor shall any appointee of any Board of Supervisors, or Board of Education, receive a salary exceeding two thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 10. No municipal officer, State or county, shall receive a salary exceeding two thousand dollars per annum, other than the above named, except Governor, who shall not receive a salary exceeding five thousand dollars per annum. And the District, Supreme Court, and other Judges, shall not receive a salary higher than they are at present receiving.

SEC. 11. The above article shall be enforced by appropriate legislation to enforce and carry out the same.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. TOWNSEND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to revenue and taxation:

Resolved, That article eleven, section thirteen, be amended so as to read as follows:

ARTICLE XI.

SEC. 13. That all property within this State, except the property of the United States, of the State, and of municipal corporations, be subject to taxation. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State, and no one species of property from which a tax may be collected shall be taxed higher than any other species of property of equal value. Lands and improvements shall be taxed separately, but every tax due upon the improvements shall be a lien upon the land upon which such improvements shall be, whether such improvements be assessed to the owner of such land or not. All lands and improvements thereon, all moneys, goods, chattels, real or personal, investment in bonds, stocks, and other personal property, except growing crops, shall be taxed in proportion to their unincumbered value, to be ascertained as directed by law; but Assessors and Collectors of town, county, and State taxes shall be elected by the qualified electors of the district, county, or town in which the property taxed for State, county, or town purposes is situated. The owner of any lands incumbered by lien of mortgage, trust deed, or other security for debt, shall, in the first instance, pay all taxes against the same, and which are a lien upon the same; but so much of any such tax paid by such owner as is equal to the fractional part that such debt bears to the unincumbered value thereof, shall be a credit upon such debt as of the day such tax shall be so paid; and the owner of money, goods, chattels, real and personal, bonds, stocks, and other taxable personal property, shall, in the first instance pay all taxes assessed against the same; but so much of any such tax so paid by such owner as is equal to the fractional part that the unsecured debts of such owner, evidenced by notes or promises in writing, bears to the assessed value thereof, shall be a credit upon such debts as of the day such tax shall be so paid.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. TOWNSEND introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the Legislative Department:

Resolved, That article four, sections two, three, five, six, sixteen, and seventeen, be amended so as to read as follows:

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be quadrennial, and shall commence on the first Monday of January next ensuing the election of its members, unless the Governor of the State shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No session shall continue longer than ninety days.

SEC. 3. Members of the Assembly and Senate shall be chosen quadrennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Wednesday in September, unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature, and their term of office shall be four years.

SEC. 5. Members of the Assembly and Senate shall be qualified electors in their respective counties and districts which they represent, and no person shall be a member of the Assembly or Senate who has not been a citizen, inhabitant, and qualified elector, for one year next before his election, of the State and of the county or district for which he shall be chosen.

SEC. 6. The number of Senators shall not be less than one third nor more than one half of that of the members of the Assembly.

SEC. 16. Any bill may originate in either house of the Legislature, and all bills passed by one house may be amended in the other. No bill shall be introduced in either house on and after the tenth day next preceding the day fixed for the final adjournment of the Legislature, nor shall any bill be passed by either house after twelve o'clock, noon, of the last day of any session; but veto messages may be considered up to the hour of final adjournment.

SEC. 17. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again passes both houses, by yeas and nays, by a majority of two thirds of the members of each house, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevent such return. The Governor may approve any appropriation, and disapprove any other appropriation, in the same bill, by signing the bill and designating the appropriation disapproved, and sending a copy of such appropriation, with his objections, to the house in which it originated; and the same proceedings shall be had on that part disapproved as on other bills disapproved by him.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

MR. TULLY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the Judicial Department:

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts of Appeals, in District Courts, and in Justices of the Peace.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of nine Justices, one of whom shall be commissioned by the Governor as Chief Justice. The presence of seven Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, except such as may be done at chambers; and the concurrence of five Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.

SEC. 3. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State, at the general elections, for the term of fifteen years; provided, that whenever more than one Justice is to be elected at the same time, each elector may vote for only one half the number to be elected, if an even number, or if an odd number, then for only one more than a half the number to be elected.

SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, upon questions of law, in all cases which involve the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three thousand dollars; and also, in all criminal cases amounting to felony; and also to determine all such questions of constitutional or statutory construction and law as may be sent to it by a District Court of Appeals. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writ returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any District Court of Appeals, or before any District Judge in the State.

SEC. 5. The State shall be divided into nine judicial districts, subject to alteration from time to time by the Legislature; provided, that the number thereof shall not be increased. There shall be four District Judges in each judicial district, except the first, in which there shall be nine District Judges. The District Judges shall be elected at the general elections, for the term of twelve years; provided, that whenever more than one Judge is to be elected at the same time, in the same district, each elector may vote only for one half the number to be elected, if an even number, or if an odd number, then for only one more than a half.

SEC. 6. Terms of the District Court shall be held in each county of the State by a single Judge, and when so held shall have original jurisdiction in all cases; provided, that in the First District one or more of said Judges, to be designated by the Governor, shall have exclusive jurisdiction in all criminal cases, jurisdiction of which shall not have been vested by the Legislature in Justices of the Peace.

SEC. 7. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall assign one of the Justices of the Supreme Court to each judicial district, who shall, with at least two District Judges, hold the District Court of Appeals in his district; provided, that in the absence of the Justice of the Supreme Court, the District Court of Appeals may be held by three or more District Judges. The Justice of the Supreme Court, or, in his absence, the senior District Judge of the district, shall preside in the District Court of Appeals.

SEC. 8. The District Court of Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases commenced in the District Courts or Courts of Justices of the Peace. And no appeal shall be allowed to the Supreme Court except from the District Court of Appeals.

SEC. 9. The District Courts of Appeals shall hear and determine all motions for a new trial made in the District Courts; and when a new trial is granted it may proceed and try the case de novo. No appeal shall be allowed to the Supreme Court from an order granting or refusing a new trial.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace in each city and township of the State, and fix, by law, their powers, duties, and responsibilities; provided, that their jurisdiction shall not extend to any criminal case amounting to felony, or to any civil case in which the amount or value of the property in controversy exceeds three hundred dollars. The Supreme Court and the District Courts shall be Courts of record.

SEC. 11. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officials, and shall fix by law their duties and compensation. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record in and for their respective counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment, by the District Court of Appeals, in each judicial district, of one or more Commissioners for each county in the district, with authority to perform chamber business of the District Judges, and also to take depositions and acknowledgments.

SEC. 12. The times and places of holding the terms of the several Courts shall be provided by law.

SEC. 13. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace and Commissioners, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office.

SEC. 14. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient; but all opinions shall be free for publication by any person.

SEC. 15. The Justices of the Supreme Court and District Judges shall severally receive, at stated times, for their services, a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected; provided, that the Justices of the Supreme Court first elected under this Constitution shall receive an annual salary of six thousand dollars each; and the District Judges first elected under this Constitution shall receive an annual salary of five thousand dollars each.

SEC. 16. The Justices of the Supreme Court and the District Judges shall be ineligible to any other than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected.

SEC. 17. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may state the testimony and declare the law.

SEC. 18. The style of all process shall be, "The people of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

SEC. 19. The Supreme Court shall prescribe uniform rules of practice for all Courts of record in the State.

SEC. 20. The City and County of San Francisco shall constitute the First Judicial District; [here will follow the other districts].

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

CHINESE.

MR. TUTTLE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to Chinese:

SECTION 1. Any corporation receiving its charter or act of incorporation by or under the laws of this State, shall forfeit such charter and all legal rights thereunder, if it ever employs, in any capacity whatever, foreigners who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States under the laws of Congress. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

SEC. 2. The Governor of the State shall, by proclamation, forbid the entrance into this State, from and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, of any foreigner who is ineligible, under the laws of Congress, to become a citizen of the United States; and the Legislature shall empower the Governor, in case of disobedience of his proclamation, to expel by force any such foreigner who shall have arrived in the State after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, upon giving him thirty days' notice of the intention to expel him; provided, that nothing in this section shall authorize the Governor or any other State officer to forcibly resist any law officer, or the civil or military power of the United States.

SEC. 3. If, by any law of Congress, or by any active interference in the government of the United States, the Governor should be prevented from expelling the class of foreigners named in the preceding section in the manner prescribed in said section, he shall have the constitutionality of such laws of Congress, or of such interference of the government of the United States in the affairs of the government of the State of California, tested in the United States Supreme Court, and yield obedience to the decision of said Court if it should be adverse to the State of California.

Referred to Committee on Chinese.

TAXATION.

MR. TUTTLE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to taxation:

SECTION 1. The taxing power shall be exercised by the Legislature for State purposes, and by counties and incorporated cities and towns when authorized by the Legislature.

SEC. 2. Taxes shall be levied and collected for public purposes only, and shall be uniform, and levied and collected by general laws; and in order to insure a just levy and collection there is hereby constituted a State Board of Equalization, composed of the Secretary of State, Secretary of Interior Affairs, and Attorney-General, which shall have the power to revise all levies of taxes for the purposes of State, and the Tax Collectors throughout the State shall be governed by the rules and regulations prescribed by the Board of Equalization; and the Board of Supervisors of their respective counties, and cities and counties, shall be a Board of Equalization for such counties, or cities and counties.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to meet all necessary appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the State Government, including any portion of the State debt becoming due or the interest thereon, the support of all State officers, and all institutions under the care and management, and for the necessary support of the public schools, as may be provided by law; but no State tax levied in any one year shall exceed twenty cents on the one hundred dollars of property taxed.

SEC. 4. The several counties of the State, and consolidated cities and counties, shall have the right to levy a tax for necessary county purposes, but no such tax, for any one year, shall exceed thirty cents on the one hundred dollars of property; provided, that a reasonable additional tax may be levied by a unanimous vote of the Supervisors of any county, or consolidated city and county, to pay debts already legally incurred.

SEC. 5. Taxes collected for State purposes shall be paid into the State treasury, and all taxes collected for county, and city and county purposes, shall be paid into the county treasury.

SEC. 6. Every person and corporation shall pay taxes in proportion to the value of his, her, or its property within the State, except as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 7. All real estate shall be taxed, and in the assessment of land for taxation the improvements shall be separately assessed, and uncultivated land, whether fenced or unfenced, shall be taxed at the same price as cultivated land of the same quality similarly located.

SEC. 8. All personal property of every character and description, that has a cash value in the market, shall be assessed and taxed at its market value, except as herein provided. All bonds and mortgages shall be taxed to the owner of the same. All money, whether on hand or on deposit, in charge of others, shall be taxed to the owner. All solvent debts shall be assessed and taxed to the party to whom they are owing, but no debts due on open account with farmer, mechanics, and tradespeople shall be subject to taxation. All mining stock shall be taxed. All water stocks and gas stocks shall be taxed at their market value. All railroad stock shall be taxed at its market value. All the property, real and personal, of corporations, except as hereinafter provided, shall be assessed and taxed.

SEC. 9. In assessing the property of any person for taxation, all his debts, of every description, owing to any one within the limits of the State, except those owed on open running accounts to merchants, traders, and professional men, shall be deducted from the total amount of property found in his possession and ownership, and the surplus only shall be assessed for taxation.

SEC. 10. No corporation, except for benevolent, religious, scientific, or educational purposes, shall be hereafter formed under the laws of this State, unless the persons named as corporators shall, at or before the filing of the articles of incorporation, pay into the State treasury one hundred dollars for the first fifty thousand dollars of its stock, and a further sum of twenty dollars for every additional ten thousand dollars of its capital stock, and no such corporation shall hereafter increase its capital stock without first paying into the State treasury twenty dollars for every ten thousand dollars of increase.

SEC. 11. No license tax shall be imposed by this State on any municipality thereof, upon any trade, calling, occupation, or business, except the following: The manufacture and sale of all kinds of wine, spirituous and malt liquors, shows, theaters, menageries, sleight of hand performances, exhibitions for profit, and such other business and occupations of like character as the Legislature may judge the public peace or good order may require to be under special State or municipal regulation and control.

SEC. 12. A succession tax shall be imposed and collected upon all legacies and distributive shares derived from the estates of all deceased person; provided, that no child, brother, sister, father, mother, husband, or wife of any deceased person shall pay such succession tax (non-resident aliens excepted) unless the distributive share of such person amounts in the aggregate to more than five thousand dollars in value, in which case all such persons shall pay a tax of one per cent. on the excess of five thousand dollars. All other persons, corporations, and associations (except non-resident aliens and foreign associations and corporations) shall pay a like tax of one per cent. on the value of what they may respectively receive. Non-resident aliens and foreign corporations and associations shall pay a tax of two per cent. on the aggregate value of any distributive share they may respectively receive.

SEC. 13. The net yearly proceeds of all newspapers published in the State shall be taxed as personal property.

SEC. 14. The Legislature shall, by law, exempt five hundred dollars' worth of every one's property from taxation.

SEC. 15. The following property, and no other, in addition to the amount named in the preceding section, shall be exempt from taxation:

Digitized by Google

Property belonging to the State, lands ceded to or belonging to the United States, buildings for free public schools, buildings for religious worship and the land upon which they stand and immediately surrounding the same, to an extent not exceeding one acre, provided said building and land are occupied and used exclusively for religious, literary, or educational purposes. Property, real and personal, held for or by any incorporated library society or free public library, or any free public library society, provided said property is held exclusively for library purposes; or land for the aid or support of poor, friendless children, or for the aid or support of the aged poor, or for a free hospital for the sick or disabled, or any fund given or held for the purpose of free public education. Also, all bonds and securities issued and exempt from taxation by the laws of the United States. Also, money lent to farmers and secured by mortgage on the farm of the borrower, to the amount of three thousand dollars to any one farmer, and no more. Also, money lent on growing crops, when secured by a mortgage of the crop, to the amount of one thousand dollars, and no more. The type, presses, and furniture of all newspaper establishments. The pipes and all other fixtures of water and gas companies. The railroad beds and rolling stock of all railroad companies.

SEC. 16. For the first year, and no longer, that any person is engaged in the business of farming or cultivation of the soil, all of his or her property of every kind and description shall be exempt from taxation.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

PARDONING POWER.

MR. VACQUEREL introduced the following proposed amendment to article five, section thirteen, of the Constitution of California:

SEC. 13. The Governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons, after convictions, for all offenses, subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law relative to the manner of applying therefor. But when a criminal has been sentenced to death, and the execution should fail to take place on the day set, said sentence shall be commuted and another penalty inflicted.

Referred to Committee on Pardoning Power.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

MR. WELLIN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the right of suffrage:

ARTICLE —.

Any alien who shall hereafter declare his intention of becoming an American citizen, and take out his first papers, shall enjoy all the rights of a citizen except the right to vote or hold office.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

TAXATION.

MR. WELLIN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

All companies incorporated within the State of California whose stock is of high and unknown value, or held privately as a close corporation, shall be assessed upon the full par value of their stocks.

All foreign incorporations doing business in the State of California shall be taxed upon the amount of capital used within the State to carry on such business.

All railroads shall be assessed upon their roadbed for the full amount of the cost of constructing such roadway.

Farm utensils in actual use, farm houses, fences, fruit trees, and forest trees planted by the people, and all growing crops, shall be exempt from taxation.

For non-payment of taxes, State, county, or incorporated towns shall sell such property as the tax becomes delinquent upon, such sales and deeds of conveyance to be governed by Acts of the Legislature. Farming, mineral, and timber lands, for non-payment of tax, shall revert to the State.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

MORAL INSTRUCTION IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

MR. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the standard of moral instruction in our public schools: To article on education:

SECTION —. The standard of moral instruction in our public schools shall be that set forth in the Bible, precluding sectarianism.

Referred to Committee on Education.

CORPORATIONS.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to corporations other than municipal:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide by law for the election of a Board of Commissioners, to be known as "The Railroad and Harbor Commissioners."

SEC. 2. Three Commissioners shall constitute the Board, and they shall be elected by single districts, to hold their office for six years, except as hereinafter provided. The districts shall be equal in population, or near as may be, and shall be numbered, beginning with the most southern one, one, two, and three.

SEC. 3. The Commissioners shall be elected on the same day with all other State officers, and inaugurated in like manner on the same day. The Commissioner of District Number One shall hold his office for two years; the Commissioner of District Number Two shall hold his office for four years; the Commissioner of District Number Three shall hold office for the full term of six years, and thence afterwards all their successors shall hold office for a term of six years, except Commissioners elected to fill vacancies, and they shall only hold office for the unexpired part of the term of their predecessors.

SEC. 4. The duties of the Board of Harbor and Railroad Commissioners shall be as follows, subject to such alteration and change by the Legislature, from time to time, as may be found necessary for the public good: they shall perform all the duties now performed by the Board of State Harbor Commissioners, and all the duties in relation to railroads that are assigned to them by this Constitution or by any enactment of the Legislature. The said Board of Commissioners shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars each, which shall be in full compensation for all services rendered. They shall be entitled to the services of one or two clerks, as the fulfillment of their duties may require. Such clerks shall not receive a higher compensation for their services than eighteen hundred dollars per annum.

SEC. 5. Railways heretofore constructed, or that may hereafter be constructed in this State, are hereby declared public highways, and railroad companies common carriers.

SEC. 6. Any railroad corporation or association, organized for the purpose, shall have the right to construct and operate a railroad between any points within this State, and to connect at the State line with railroads of other States. Every railroad company shall have the right, with its road, to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad, and shall receive and transport each the other's passengers, tonnage, and cars, loaded or empty, without delay or discrimination.

SEC. 7. The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be abridged or so construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies, and subjecting them to public use, the same as the property of individuals; and the exercise of the police power of the State shall never be abridged or so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals or the general well-being of the State.

SEC. 8. The Legislature shall pass no law for the benefit of a railroad or other corporation, or any individual or association of individuals, retrospective in its operation, or which imposes on the people of any county or municipal subdivision of the State a new liability in respect to transactions or considerations already past.

SEC. 9. No railroad or other transportation company shall grant any free pass or ticket, or grant any pass or ticket at a discount, to any member of the Legislature, or any State, county, or municipal officer, and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket by a member of the Legislature, or by any such officer, shall be a forfeiture of his office, and he shall be subject to the pains and penalties of a bribe-taker.

SEC. 10. The rolling stock and all other movable property belonging to any railroad company or corporation in this State shall be considered personal property, and shall be liable to execution and sale in the same manner as the personal property of individuals; and the Legislature shall pass no law exempting any such property from execution and sale.

SEC. 11. No law shall be passed by the Legislature granting the right to construct and operate a street railroad within any city, town, village, or on any public highway, without first acquiring the consent of the local authorities having control of the street or highway proposed to be occupied by such street railroad; and the franchise so granted shall not be transferred without similar assent first obtained.

SEC. 12. No railroad corporation in existence at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall have the benefit of any future legislation, except on condition of complete acceptance of all the provisions of this Constitution applicable to railroads.

SEC. 13. No President, Director, officer, agent, or employé of any railroad company shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in furnishing material or supplies to such company, or in the business of transportation as a common carrier of freight or passengers over the works owned, leased, controlled, or worked by such company.

SEC. 14. It shall not be lawful in this State for any railway company to charge for freight or passengers a greater amount for the transportation of the same for a less distance than the amount charged for any greater distance.

SEC. 15. Every railroad or other corporation, organized or doing business in this State under the laws or authority thereof, shall have and maintain a public office or place in this State for the transaction of business, where transfers of stock shall be made, and where shall be kept, for public inspection, books in which shall be recorded the amount of capital stock subscribed, the names of the owners of the stock, the amounts owned by them respectively, the amount of stock paid and by whom, the said transfer of stock, with the date of transfer, the amount of its assets and liabilities, and the names and places of residence of its officers. The Directors of every railroad company shall hold one meeting annually in this State, public notice of which shall be given thirty days previously, and shall report annually, under oath, to the Governor of the State, all of their acts and doings, which report shall include such matters relating to railroads as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 16. The Railroad Commissioners provided for in this Constitution shall have absolute power to fix the rates of fares and freights of all railroads in this State, and shall regulate and establish them as in their judgment shall seem just and fair to the railroad owners and to the public generally.

SEC. 17. Once in each year the Railroad Commissioners shall readjust the rates of fares and freights of all railroads in the State, and cause a printed schedule of such rates and fares to be properly framed and hung in a conspicuous place at every railroad depot and every railroad station in the State.

SEC. 18. The Railroad Commissioners shall perform all duties in relation to the railroads, other than those prescribed in the last two sections, as may be required of them by law.

SEC. 19. All railroad companies shall be responsible for all damages to life or property that may occur on their roads, through carelessness or any neglect whatever.

Digitized by Google

Sec. 20. The foregoing provisions in relation to railroad companies and corporations shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

Sec. 21. Every chapter and section of an Act of the State Legislature, entitled "An Act to create the office of Commissioner of Transportation, and to define its powers and duties, to fix the maximum charges for transporting passengers and freights on certain railroads, and to prevent extortion and unjust discrimination thereon," approved April first, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, except chapter three of said Act, shall be null and void, and of no validity whatever from and after the adoption of this Constitution by the people of the State.

Referred to the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to Executive Department:

Section 1. The supreme executive power of this State shall be vested in a Chief Magistrate, who shall be styled the Governor of the State of California.

Sec. 2. The Governor, and all State and county officers, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State of California, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor who has not been a citizen of the United States, and an elector of the State of California, for five years next preceding his election.

Sec. 4. The returns of the election of Governor, and all State officers, shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of government, directed to the President of the Senate, who shall open and publish them in presence of the Senate. The person having the highest number of votes for each office shall be declared elected; but in case that any two or more persons shall be found to have an equal and the highest vote for the same office, the Senate shall, by vote, choose one of said persons so having an equal and the highest number of votes for that office.

Sec. 5. The State Senate shall convene at the Capitol of the State on the second Monday after the first Tuesday in every January that is subsequent to a general election, for the purpose of opening the returns and declaring the result, as prescribed in the preceding section.

Sec. 6. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia, the army, and navy of this State.

Sec. 7. He shall transact all executive business with the officers of government, civil and military, and may require information, in writing, from the officers of the Executive Department upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

Sec. 8. He shall see that the laws are faithfully executed.

Sec. 9. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have power to fill such vacancy by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Legislature, or at the next election by the people.

Sec. 10. He shall communicate, by message, to the Legislature, at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

Sec. 11. In case of a disagreement between the two houses, with respect to the time of adjournment, the Governor shall have power to adjourn the Legislature to such time as he may think proper; provided, it be not beyond the time fixed for the meeting of the next Legislature.

Sec. 12. No person shall, while holding any office under the United States, or this State, exercise the office of Governor, or be eligible thereto.

Sec. 13. There shall be a seal of this State, which shall be kept by the Governor and used by him officially, and shall be called "The Great Seal of the State of California."

Sec. 14. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of "The People of the State of California," sealed with the great seal of the State, signed by the Governor and countersigned by the Secretary of State.

Sec. 15. The Governor shall receive an annual salary of five thousand dollars, to be paid at stated times, as provided by law, which shall be in full for all services to be performed by him for the State, as Governor, or in any other official capacity, and the Legislature shall have no power to grant him an extra compensation whatever for any ex officio service of any kind.

Sec. 16. In cases of impeachment of the Governor, his removal from office, death, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, resignation, or absence from the State, the power and duties of the office, with its emoluments, shall devolve upon the President of the Senate, or in case there shall be no President of the Senate, or if from any cause he be disqualified to act, then it shall devolve on the Speaker of the Assembly.

Sec. 17. A Secretary of State, a Treasurer, and Attorney-General, and a Secretary of Interior Affairs, shall be elected at the same time and place and in the same manner as the Governor, and their qualification for office shall in all respects be similar to that of the Governor; they shall each receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars, to be paid at stated times, as provided by law, which annual salary shall be in full for all services to be rendered by them of every kind, name and nature, as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 18. The Secretary of State shall keep a fair record of the Executive Department of the government, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all matters relative thereto, before either branch of the Legislature, and shall perform all other duties as may be assigned to him by law, including many of those now performed by the Controller. The Secretary of Interior Affairs shall perform the duties now assigned to the Surveyor-General and Registrar of the Land Office, and all other duties that may be assigned to him by law. The Treasurer shall take charge of all moneys belonging to the State in such manner as shall be directed by law. The Attorney-General shall be the legal adviser of the Governor, and shall conduct the legal business of the State as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 19. The first election for Governor, Secretary of State, Secretary of Interior Affairs, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and all State and county officers, shall be on the first Wednesday in September, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine; and they shall be qualified and enter on the discharge of their official duties on the second Monday after the first Tuesday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty, and their term of office shall extend to the second Monday after the first Tuesday in January, eighteen hundred and eighty-five. The second election under this Constitution for State and county officers shall be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, eighteen hundred and eighty-four; and all subsequent such elections shall be every four years therefrom.

Sec. 20. All State and county officers shall be inaugurated in office on the second Monday after the first Tuesday in January subsequent to their election.

Sec. 21. The term of all State and county officers, other than those of the judiciary and County Supervisors, shall be for the term of four years.

Sec. 22. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no rule is provided by the Constitution or laws for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have power to fill such vacancy by appointment for the unexpired term, or until the next general election

Sec. 23. The Governor shall have power to grant reprieve or stay of execution of the sentences in all criminal cases after conviction, but no such reprieve or stay of execution shall extend beyond sixty days, except on a unanimous recommendation of the Board of Pardons, as hereinafter provided for.

Sec. 24. The Governor shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate (a majority of all the Senators elected concurring, by ayes and noes), appoint all officers whose offices are established by this Constitution, or which may be created by law, and whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for; and no such officer shall be appointed or elected by the Legislature, or by any legislative enactment.

Sec. 25. The Governor shall have power to remove any officer whom he may appoint, in case of incompetency, drunkenness, or malfeasance in office, and to declare such office vacant, and to fill the same as is herein provided in other cases of vacancy.

Sec. 26. The Governor may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Legislature by proclamation, stating therein the purpose for which they are convened, and the Legislature shall enter on no business except that for which they shall be called together.

Sec. 27. No person, after being rejected by the Senate, shall be again nominated for the same office at the same session, unless at the request of the Senate, or be appointed to the same office during the recess of the Senate.

Sec. 28. An account shall be kept by the officers of the Executive Department, and of all the public institutions of the State, of all the money received or disbursed by them, severally, from all sources, and for every service performed, and an annual report thereof, under oath, at the end of each fiscal year shall be made to the Governor; and any officer or State employé who makes a false report shall be guilty of perjury, and punished accordingly, and the Governor shall transmit all such reports to the Legislature at each of its regular sessions, and at extra sessions whenever he may deem it for the public good to do so.

Sec. 29. The Governor may at any time require information in writing, under oath, from all persons holding office under the State Government in any capacity whatever, upon any subject relating to the condition, management, receipts, expenses, and disbursements of their respective offices.

Sec. 30. The Governor shall have unquestioned liberty at all times, either personally or by an expert, to examine the books and accounts of any person holding office under the State Government, relating to the business of such office.

Sec. 31. The Governor shall have the right to be present at any meeting that shall be held for the transaction of business by any Board of Commissioners created by the constitutional laws of this State for State administration purposes.

Sec. 32. The Governor shall have power to suspend any officer, other than those of the judiciary, holding position in any capacity under the State Government, for incapacity, drunkenness, or malfeasance in office, and fill the office by temporary appointments; but any officer so suspended, who shall have been elected by the people, shall receive from the Governor a written statement of the charges against him, and he shall have, if he demand it, a speedy jury trial to determine the truth of the charge as set forth by the Governor, and if the jury in such a case shall find the Governor's charges true, the suspension shall be perpetual, and the person suspended shall be fined one thousand dollars, to go to the School Fund, and the Governor shall forthwith appoint a suitable person to fill the place, as provided in all cases of vacancy; but if the jury shall find the Governor's charges not true, the person suspended shall forthwith be restored to his office, without any reduction from its original emoluments.

Sec. 33. All civil officers, except members of the Legislature, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the Constitution of the United States of America, and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of ——."

Sec. 34. For any reasonable cause which shall not be sufficient ground for impeachment, the Governor may remove any Justice of the Supreme Court, or any District Judge, and retire them from office; provided, that in all such cases three fourths of the State Senate shall approve his doing so, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

SWAMP LAND DISTRICTS.

MR. BARTON introduced the following proposition relating to swamp land districts in this State:

Resolved, That a proposition be engrafted in the new Constitution as follows:

SECTION 1. That all votes for assessment for the purpose of reclamation, in reclamation land districts in this State, be based on the actual number of residents, or settlers, in such districts, and not on the basis of acres in such districts, as at present provided.

Referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

TERMS OF OFFICE.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to term of office when not provided for. Amend section seven, article eleven, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 7. When the duration of any office is not provided for by this Constitution, it may be declared by law, and if not so declared, such office shall be held during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment. When the duration of any office is fixed by this Constitution, or any law under it, the incumbent shall be entitled to serve the full time he is commissioned to serve, if he behaves himself.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

THE STATE CREDIT.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting the credit of the State being given or loaned. Amend section ten, article eleven, of the Constitution, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 10. The credit of the State shall not, in any manner, be given or loaned to, or in aid of, any individual, association, or corporation, directly or indirectly; nor pledge its faith and credit to, or in aid of, any county, city, city and county, or town; neither shall the State, directly or indirectly, become a stockholder in any association or corporation.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

MR. SHOEMAKER introduced the following proposed amendment to article eleven of the Constitution, providing a State Board of Equalization. Amend article eleven of the Constitution by adding a new section, to be known as section twenty-three, and to read as follows:

SEC. 23. The Governor, Controller, and Treasurer shall constitute a State Board of Equalization, with power to revise assessments made by County and District Assessors, in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

CORPORATIONS.

MR. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning corporations:

SECTION —. Every association organized for banking purposes shall keep on deposit with the State Treasurer, as security to actual depositors, bonds of the United States equal in amount of the total amount of deposits in said banking association.

Referred to Committee on Corporations.

On motion of Mr. Noel, at three o'clock and forty-five minutes P. M., the Convention adjourned.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

PETITIONS—RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

MR. BLACKMER presented the following petition from nine hundred and ninety-five citizens of this State, from the Counties of Santa Barbara, Ventura, and Los Angeles:

To the Constitutional Convention in Sacramento, California, assembled:

The undersigned, citizens of California, respectfully petition your honorable body to so amend the Constitution that no citizen of this State shall be disfranchised on account of sex.

LOCAL OPTION.

MR. HALE presented the following petition, signed by O. Keeler and one hundred and fifty other citizens of Ophir, Placer County, California:

To the honorable gentlemen, the members of the Constitutional Convention now assembled:

We, the residents and taxpayers of the State of California, fully realizing the importance of this session and the arduous duties and responsibilities that necessarily rest upon each individual member of said body in the exercise of the powers vested in him; and realizing that many grave questions will present themselves to any body of men who shall assemble to consider such great facts as must necessarily arise in the framing of a Constitution to govern and direct the people of any country, State, or district, and especially our own loved and endeared State of California, where Nature has been so lavish, and Providence so wise.

And yet, with all our boasted advantages of climate, productions, mineral wealth, scenery, etc., we have observed with sorrow and pain the rapid and constant increase of crime and the alarming tendency toward idleness, with all its attendant elements of misery, wretchedness, and want, and in vain do we try to blind ourselves to the frequent necessity of enlarging our State Prisons and lunatic asylums, for even now they are crowded to their utmost capacity. And believing that no greater question can present itself to your honorable body than the education and protection of society, and while we cheerfully submit to and pay the taxes levied upon us for educational and other purposes, we believe that it is unwise and inexpedient to spend millions of dollars for education and then admit of the manufacture and traffic of that which destroys the mental faculties and poisons and destroys the mind. While we have explicit confidence in the judgment and integrity in those we have chosen to represent us, and believing that it will be their highest aim to carry out the will of the people they represent when such will is made known; therefore we would petition your honorable body:

That you will insert in the Constitution a clause, granting to the people the right to say whether they will allow the sale of intoxicating liquors in their midst or not, (better known as Local Option), or a Civil Damage Law, or both.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

MR. SCHELL presented the following petition from Samuel M. McLean and many other citizens of Stanislaus County:

To the honorable the Constitutional Convention of the State of California:

We, the undersigned, respectfully petition your honorable body to insert in the new Constitution of this State, a clause similar to that now in force in the State of Texas, to wit:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall, at its first session, enact a law whereby the qualified voters of any county, voting precinct, town or city, by a majority vote, from time to time, may determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited within the prescribed limits.

SAMUEL M. McLEAN, M. D., and many others.

MR. SOULE presented a petition, signed by a large number of citizens of Lassen County, the same as the above presented by Mr. Schell.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RULES.

MR. ESTEE, from the Committee on Rules and Order of Business, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Rules and Order of Business, to whom was referred a number of proposed amendments, report the same back with recommendations as follows:

First—Resolution number thirty-eight, offered by Mr. Filcher, providing that W. P. Grace be added to the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings, recommend that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

Second—Resolution number forty, offered by Mr. Shoemaker, providing that Mr. McCoy be added to the Committee on Water and Water Rights, recommend that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

Third—Resolution number thirty-nine, offered by Mr. Winans, suggesting that Mr Thompson be added to the Committee on Education, recommend that it be indefinitely postponed The Committee respectfully suggests that under rule six all appointments on committees rests with the President of the Convention.

Fourth—Resolutions numbers thirty-six and thirty-seven, offered by Messrs. Stedman and Wellin, respectively, that no member shall be allowed pay for any day absent with or without leave except in case of sickness or on committee duty. Your committee recommend that the two resolutions last named be indefinitely postponed. The Political Code provides that members of the Legislature shall receive ten dollars per day for the session, and the Act creating this Convention provides that the members thereof shall receive the same per diem as members of the Legislature; hence the pay of members of this Convention is fixed by law.

Fifth—Your committee recommends the adoption of the resolution offered by Mr. West, that the Committee on Education be increased from nine to thirteen members.

Sixth—Your committee recommends that the resolution offered by Mr. Campbell, to amend rule sixty by striking out the words and figures, "except rules fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five," and to repeal rule seventy-one, be indefinitely postponed.

Seventh—Your committee again earnestly protests against the daily changing of the rules of this Convention; such practice, instead of facilitating business, clogs the wheels of legislation, and too frequently is done to meet individual cases rather than to expedite the general business of legislation.

Eighth—Your committee also recommend the indefinite postponement of the resolution offered by Mr. Noel, that rule seventy-one be repealed.

Ninth—Your committee recommend that rule forty-one, offered by McCallum, providing that rule sixty be changed so that a majority only, instead of two thirds, can change the rules, be indefinitely postponed; also,

Resolved, That the Controller be and is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrant in favor of J. Steppacher for the sum of —— dollars, for services as Clerk of the Committee on Rules, payable out of the appropriation for this Convention, and that the State Treasurer be and is hereby authorized to pay the same.

M. M. ESTEE,
Chairman of Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

MR. GRACE. I don't know what authority they have to employ a clerk.

MR. ESTEE. That will come up when the Committee on Contingent Expenses report.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the report of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business.

MR. GRACE. I supposed we were to have no clerks.

THE PRESIDENT. That matter will come up when the report comes from the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move that the report of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business be received and adopted.

MR. NOEL. I would like to have a decision of the question.

THE PRESIDENT. Every clause of the report will come up in time. The Secretary will read the first clause.

THE SECRETARY read, without objection, to the end of the sixth clause.

MR. CAMPBELL. Is the question now on the adoption of that clause?

THE PRESIDENT. The clause is now open to any amendment.

MR. CAMPBELL. I presume we can have the question divided, so we can vote on the two propositions separately. I ask to have it so divided.

THE PRESIDENT. The report has been taken up clause by clause, and the Chair pauses so that any amendment may be moved. We have passed to this clause now, and if the gentleman desires, he can move an amendment.

MR. CAMPBELL. I move to amend, by adopting the amendment which provides that two thirds of the Convention may suspend these rules, just as any other rule may be suspended; that we shall not be compelled, if a single member objects, to adhere to the rule for the time being. It provides that the rules may be suspended by a two-thirds vote; and certainly it is proper that they should be suspended. I move, therefore, that the report be so amended, and that that amendment be adopted.

MR. BEERSTECHER. As I understand the report of the committee upon the resolution heretofore offered by Mr. Campbell, it is not only to amend rule sixty so as to admit of a suspension of these rules by a two-thirds vote, but it is also to strike out rule seventy-one, in relation to printing.

MR. CAMPBELL. That is a separate proposition by itself. This is a proposition in regard to amending rule sixty, by striking out of it the words and figures "except Rules 50, 51, 52, 53, and 55." If that motion is adopted, then the Convention will be able to suspend these rules by a two-thirds vote. At present it cannot suspend them at all. And that is the whole object of my amendment now. The amendment in regard to rule seventy-one is a separate amendment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. As I stated yesterday, I see no occasion to change my opinion. These rules were well considered, well digested, thoroughly examined by the Convention, and adopted. The matter has been referred back to the committee. They have again examined the rules, and they report that the rules remain as they now are. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, will be voted down; and I hope that we will be able to settle these rules, and not spend hours and hours debating them, and wasting money in that way at the rate of five dollars a minute.

MR ESTEE. The Committee on Rules and Order of Business, in recommending the indefinite postponement of the resolution of the gentleman from Alameda, only carried out the view expressed by the committee when the rules were adopted. They have seen no reason to change their views and they did not think the Convention had changed its views relative to the necessity of protecting minorities in the Convention. The rule proposed to be amended was rule sixty. It provides that "no rule or order of the Convention shall be rescinded or changed without a vote of two thirds and one day's notice being given of the motion therefor; but a rule or order may be suspended temporarily by a vote of two thirds of the members present, except rules fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five." Rule fifty-five provides: "In forming a Committee of the Whole Convention, the President may preside or appoint a member to preside. Propositions or resolutions relating to the Constitution shall be committed to a Committee of the Whole Convention and shall be read in Committee of the Whole by sections. All amendments shall be noted and reported to the Convention by the Chairman. After report, the proposition or resolution shall again be subject to amendment before the final question is taken." The point in that rule is that the humblest member on the floor has the right individually to demand that every proposition to be engrafted in the Constitution should be disposed of or heard in the Committee of the Whole. One individual member has a right to demand it, and it is a right that this committee and this Convention heretofore considered a necessary right: that is, that the Committee of the Whole should give consideration to all these propositions. Now the gentleman proposes to set that aside at any moment and not let the minority go into Committee of the Whole to consider and carefully examine questions of constitutional law. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, will not be adopted, and that the report of the committee will be.

Now, sir, there is a rule of the Assembly and Senate that all rules may be suspended temporarily by a two-third vote, except the third reading of a bill; that a bill should not be read a third time on the day it was introduced. The point is that a bill should not be rushed through the day of its presentation, so that members would be able to give it full and fair consideration. Rule fifty-five is of the same character. The reason for going into Committee of the Whole is to place it in the reach of any member to demand that the Convention go into Committee of the Whole upon any proposition before it is disposed of. The gentleman from Alameda is going to leave it to a two-third vote; then, after an eloquent speech has been made by the gentleman from Alameda, or some other gentleman, the Convention might be carried away and refuse to go into Committee of the Whole, and thereby deprive a minority of the right that they ought to have. I hope that the report of the committee will be adopted.

MR. MCCALLUM. The theory on which these rules are presented and adopted is this: that this Convention, the first week of its session, is so much wiser than the majority of the Convention that to be overruled it must require two thirds of the Convention when it shall have had more experience. The resolution proposed to be changed, and it is one of a great deal of consequence, is that two thirds of this Convention may change a standing rule—two thirds may suspend a standing rule. Argument proceeds upon the ground that a majority having decided that that should be the rule, must not be overruled, even by a unanimous vote; and this Convention, more than once, has done this inconsistent thing, from the very necessity of the case overruling its own standing rule upon that subject.

There seems to be a sensitiveness about changing these rules. Here are seventy odd of them, an unusually large number. Assuming that the Committee on Rules have a vast amount of experience and wisdom, yet it is barely possible that experience has shown that some of these rules ought to be changed. What is there so sacred about rules fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five that two thirds of the Convention might not suspend any, one, or all of them? The idea upon which the rule as it stands proceeds is that the majority of the Convention is not to be trusted, and the argument seems to be addressed to what is assumed to be a minority of the Convention, to be careful of their rights, or they might lose something by what the majority, or even two thirds, of the Convention might do—for that is all the amendment asks. For my part, I do not know who the minority or who the majority of this Convention are. I expect that minorities or majorities may assume various positions. I do not know who will be associated in the majority, or who will be associated in the minority; and when gentlemen talk about the minority in the Convention, I must confess that I do not know to whom that language is addressed. I proceed upon the idea that two thirds of this Convention may be as wise as a majority of the Committee on Rules, and as a majority of the Convention itself was at the beginning of the session when the rules were adopted. That is all that the amendment of my colleague asks, and that is that rule sixty may be so changed that these other rules, the same as all the balance, may be suspended by a two-third vote. The difficulty has come up here again and again with reference to the printing of these propositions. Here is a mass of propositions laid upon our tables, printed at an expense of some two thousand dollars to the State. Some of these resolve, in general terms, that "the Chinese must go," and others that "land-grabbing must be stopped," at an expense of about ten dollars for each lot, and in the aggregate about two thousand dollars has already been expended.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have a statement from the printer here in relation to the cost of the printing and paper of the whole matter—that the printing that has been done up to this time, the total cost of the whole matter, does not exceed eight hundred dollars.

MR. MCCALLUM. I do not object to the interruption, but I would inquire if that includes what we ordered yesterday?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Up to this morning at ten o'clock.

MR. MCCALLUM. It is well known that there was a great deal of matter ordered printed yesterday. Perhaps two thousand dollars may be too high, but certainly eight hundred dollars does not indicate it. This rule fifty-two, requiring the printing of propositions, is one of the very propositions which cannot be suspended even by a two-third vote. It cannot, under rule sixty be suspended at all. There is the proposition introduced by Mr. McConnell, which, by his consent, was not printed, but that consent is in violation of rule sixty, which says that rule fifty-two cannot be suspended at all. That whole Constitution ought to be printed, four hundred and eighty copies of it.

MR. FAWCETT. Does rule fifty-two require the printing of propositions?

MR. MCCALLUM. It is rule seventy-one. That is correct. The gentleman is correct about that. These other rules, fifty, fifty-one, fifty-two, fifty-three, and fifty-five, are the rules which, by rule sixty, cannot be suspended even by an unanimous vote. Now, sir, I believe that that amendment ought to be adopted. There ought to be no rule that this Convention cannot suspend by a two-third vote.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The Committee on Rules and Order of Business recommends the indefinite postponement of the amendment. The gentleman from Alameda moves that the Convention non-concur with the committee.

The motion of Mr. Campbell was lost.

THE SECRETARY read the seventh and eighth clauses.

MR. NOEL. I move that we non-concur in the recommendation of the committee in regard to the eighth clause.

Lost.

The Secretary concluded the reading of the report.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the whole report.

The report was adopted.

RESOLUTIONS AND PROPOSITIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next order of business is the introduction of resolutions and propositions relative to the Constitution. The Secretary will call the roll.

MR. LARKIN. I think the Convention could do away with the calling of the roll. That rule at first I was in favor of. At the present time it is not necessary. There will be but few propositions.

MR. BEERSTECHER. We have got a rule here, a standing rule, that requires the roll to be called, and this standing rule cannot be changed without one day's notice. I object to changing it without notice.

MR. LARKIN. My recollection of that resolution is that it was simply a resolution, and not a standing rule of this Convention.

MR. GRACE. I move that the resolution, as sent up, be read.

THE PRESIDENT. The recollection of the Chair is that that rule was only to hold good until otherwise ordered by the Convention. It is competent for the Convention to dispense with that resolution at any time.

MR. ESTEE. It was not one of the standing rules of this body; it was a rule temporarily adopted.

MR. BARBOUR. I offered that resolution. It is competent for a simple majority now to dispense with it. I move that the resolution be suspended.

Carried.

ADDITION TO COMMITTEE.

THE PRESIDENT appointed as additional members of the Committee on Education, Messrs. Blackmer, Thompson, Martin, of Alameda, and Freud.

INDEPENDENT MILITARY ORGANIZATIONS.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to independent military organizations:

ARTICLE —.

MILITIA.

SECTION —. Citizens of this State shall have the right to associate and form military organizations, other than militia, which organizations shall be independent. This shall, however, in nowise affect the right of the State to the services of the citizens in time of public danger.

Referred to Committee on Military Affairs.

TAXATION.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to taxation:

SECTION —. Every solvent debt shall be taxed as personal property of the creditor, and the amount thereof shall be deducted from the assessed valuation of the property of the debtor; provided, however, that in all taxation of solvent debts, the debtor shall first pay the tax and shall then deduct the amount so paid as tax from the principal sum owing, or from the interest due or to become due on said principal sum; provided further, that every contract or agreement whereby a debtor agrees to pay the taxes of the creditor upon a debt is void.

SEC. —. Every corporation or joint stock company having certificates of capital stock issued, shall be assessed and pay tax upon such stock at its true value; such corporation or company shall first pay such tax, and the amount paid as tax shall be a demand in favor of such corporation or company against such stock and the owners thereof, and shall be a lien on said stock and have priority over all other liens and demands; provided, however, that where such corporation or company own real estate or personal property subject to assessment and taxation under the laws of this State, and such property being actually assessed and taxed within this State, then the assessed valuation of such property shall be deducted from the assessed valuation of such capital stock, and the said capital stock taxed upon the basis of value after such deduction; provided further, that a failure to promptly pay such tax by such corporation or company shall work a forfeiture of their corporate charter.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC TAXATION.

SEC. —. The business of manufacturing and selling intoxicating liquors of every name and nature shall be subject to legislative regulation, by general laws having effect throughout the State, but this shall not be construed as giving to any Legislature the authority to enact prohibition laws. An annual tax of not less than two hundred dollars shall be imposed upon the traffic in intoxicating liquors, to be paid by every person or firm, or corporation, who shall carry on or be engaged in the business of selling or disposing of such liquors, otherwise than for medicinal, chemical, or mechanical purposes, for each place where such business is carried on by such person, firm, or corporation. Said tax shall be paid into the treasury of the county, city, village, or township where such business is carried on, and appropriated as the Legislature shall by general law provide. The sale or other disposition of such liquors to minors, persons under guardianship, insane and idiotic persons, paupers, and common drunkards is wholly prohibited. Every person who shall carry on or engage in the business of traffic taxed as aforesaid in this section, without having first paid the tax imposed, or otherwise violate any provision of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, as may be prescribed by law, and every sale, until the tax is paid, shall subject the party to such penalty; and all necessary laws shall be passed to enforce the provisions of this section.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

LIBEL.

MR. MURPHY introduced the following proposed amendment to article one, section nine, of the Constitution, in relation to libels:

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions on indictments for libels the trial of the case shall take place in the county in which the alleged libel was first published, unless the venue to another county shall be ordered by due process of law. The truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives, and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

CHINESE.

MR. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to Chinese:

SECTION —. Each county, town, city, and incorporated village shall make provision for the support of its own officers, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the Legislature may prescribe, and every city, town, and village shall have power to adopt such police regulations for the exclusion and removal of persons of Asiatic descent as the public good may require.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

GRAND JURY SYSTEM.

MR. MANSFIELD introduced the following propositions to modify the present Grand Jury system:

1. Prosecutions for crimes and misdemeanors may be begun by indictment found by a Grand Jury, or by information laid before a Justice of the Peace.

2. The Grand Jury shall consist of fifteen men, and an indictment may be found upon the concurrence of nine of their number.

3. The Grand Jury shall be ordered by the County Judge, at his discretion, but not oftener than once in each year.

4. An information is a writing, verified by a person called a prosecutor, charging another with the commission of a crime or misdemeanor, and setting forth the facts necessary to constitute the offense.

5. Such information may be presented to a Justice of the Peace, and when such Justice has not jurisdiction to try the offense charged, there shall be had a preliminary examination, in which defendant shall have right to be heard by himself and counsel.

6. Should it appear that the offense charged has been committed, and the Justice be satisfied of defendant's guilt, he shall adjudge and bind the defendant to appear before the Court having jurisdiction of the offense.

7. Upon this information, and the judgment of the Justice thereon, being filed in the Court having jurisdiction, the District Attorney shall file in such Court a complaint signed by him, officially, charging the defendant with the offense for which he is held to answer. This complaint shall state the facts necessary to constitute a cause of action.

8. Upon such complaint the defendant may be tried.

9. After the defendant has been bound to appear, and within ten days thereafter, or at any time prior to filing the complaint, he shall have the right to be heard on a writ of habeas corpus before a Judge of a Court of record, and if such Judge shall find, on reviewing the evidence taken at the preliminary examination, that the defendant has been held without reasonable or probable cause, he shall order the defendant discharged, and the District Attorney shall not further prosecute the proceeding.

10. Should the information be dismissed by the Justice after a hearing on a preliminary examination, or the defendant be so discharged on habeas corpus, no second information shall be prosecuted against the defendant on the same charge, unless the second information be approved and signed by the District Attorney of some Court having jurisdiction to try the case.

11. A person may be prosecuted by indictment for any offense of which the District or County Court has jurisdiction, although the information has been dismissed by a Justice, or the defendant discharged on habeas corpus.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

FUTURE AMENDMENTS.

MR. WHITE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to future amendments:

SECTION 1. There shall be a Constitutional Convention at the State Capital, in the year one thousand nine hundred and three (1903), to review, and, if deemed best, amend this Constitution.

SEC. 2. The Convention shall consist of one hundred and three members, all to be elected by single districts, as near equal in population as may be.

SEC. 3. Each member of the Convention shall receive six hundred dollars, and the same mileage as may be then paid to members of the Legislature, which shall be in full compensation for services.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall, at the proper time, carry out this provision of this Constitution by appropriate legislation, and provide by law that the new or amended Constitution shall be submitted to the electors of the State for their approval or rejection.

Sec. 5. Whenever two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall think it necessary to alter or amend this Constitution, they may propose such alterations or amendments, which proposed amendments shall be published with the laws which have been passed at the same session; and said amendments shall be submitted to the people, for their approval or rejection, at the next general election; and if it shall appear, in a manner to be provided by law, that a majority of the qualified electors present and voting at such election shall have ratified such alterations or amendments, the same shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this Constitution. If two or more alterations or amendments shall be submitted at the same time, it shall be so regulated that the electors shall vote for or against each separately.

Referred to Committee on Future Amendments.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. SCHELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the Executive Department:

Resolved, That the following amendment to section fourteen, article five, of the Constitution, be incorporated in the new Constitution:

Section —. There shall be a seal of the State, to be called "The Great Seal of the State of California," which shall be kept and used by the Governor officially; and the one heretofore in use shall continue to be the great seal of the State.

Referred to Committee on Executive Department.

CHINESE TAX.

Mr. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, revenue and taxation:

Section seventeen, of article first, of the Constitution, is amended as follows:

Sec. 17. Foreigners (of Caucasian descent) who are or who may hereafter become bona fide residents of this State, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

Sec. —. The Legislature shall, by appropriate enactments, discourage the importation of Chinese coolies into the State of California.

Section fourteen, of article eleven, of the Constitution, is amended as follows:

Sec. 14. Taxation of all property, except articles of Chinese manufacture, shall be equal and uniform throughout the State; all real and personal property, except property owned by Mongolians, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law.

Sec. 15. No poll tax shall be levied or collected from the citizens of this State, but the Legislature shall have power to provide for the collection of such tax from aliens by law.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

IMPORTATION OF COOLIES, ETC.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the importation of coolies, criminals, paupers, lepers, and immoral women prohibited.

Section —. Importations of persons under the name of "coolies," or any other designation, or the adoption of any other system of peonage whereby the helpless and unfortunate may be reduced to practical bondage, shall never be authorized or tolerated by the laws of this State.

Sec. —. Persons engaging in the importation of "coolies," or men or women bound by contract to labor or service for a specified time, shall be deemed guilty of felony; and persons employing such "coolies," by contract, to labor for a specified time in this State, shall also be deemed guilty of felony.

Sec. —. Every contract whereby the compensation for the labor of any person is made payable to any person, company, or corporation, other than the one performing the labor, is hereby declared void; provided, that it shall be lawful for parents to secure for themselves and receive the wages of their minor children.

Sec. —. The importation of criminals, paupers, lepers, and immoral women from foreign countries is forever prohibited. And any ship, the captain and owner of any ship, and the consignees of the same, shall be held responsible for an infraction of this provision, and must transport back to the port whence they were brought said foreign criminals, paupers, lepers, and immoral women.

Sec. —. The Legislature, at the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall provide, by suitable enactments, for the effectual enforcement of the provisions of sections ——, ——, ——, and ——.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHAPLAINS.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting the employment of Chaplains in State institutions:

Section —. No person shall ever be employed as a Chaplain in any department of the State Government, or in any of the public institutions of this State; and no money shall ever be appropriated out of the State treasury for the payment of persons to recite prayers or to give religious teaching of any character.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. EVEY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the Legislative Department:

All bills making appropriations of money out of the treasury for the pay of members and officers of the General Assembly, and for the salaries of the officers of the government, shall contain no provision on any other subject.

The compensation of the members of the General Assembly shall be five hundred dollars each per session, except extra session, and for then they shall each be allowed one hundred dollars, and ten cents a mile in going to and returning from the seat of government.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

UNAPPROPRIATED WATERS.

Mr. BROWN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the unappropriated waters of the lakes and rivers of this State:

Resolved, That the unappropriated waters of the lakes and rivers of this State belong to the public, and such waters may be appropriated by individuals and companies. Priority of appropriation of water entitles individuals or companies to a priority of right to the amount of water appropriated by them. The uses of waters shall be controlled by legislative enactments.

Referred to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

UNIFORM TAXATION.

Mr. GRACE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to revenue and taxation:

Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State; all property in the State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word "property," as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, notes secured by mortgage or otherwise, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of being converted into money, either real or personal.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

FRANCHISE.

Mr. SWEASEY introduced the following proposed substitute for section one, article two, of the present Constitution:

Every citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this State one year next preceding the election, and the county or district in which he or she resides for the term of ninety days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may be hereafter authorized by law; provided, that no Court in this State shall issue any naturalization papers within thirty days of any general election.

Sec. 7. That the Legislature shall pass and amend, from time to time, such laws as may be necessary to preserve the purity of elections and the free exercise of the vote by ballot.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. GORMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the Legislative Department:

The Legislature shall pass such laws governing counties, cities, towns, and other corporations, as will restrict their powers of taxation, borrowing money, and contracting debts and loaning their credit so as to prevent abuses in taxation, and all propositions for extraordinary debts shall be, by consent of the people, expressed through the ballot-box.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

ELECTION OF UNITED STATES SENATORS.

Mr. GRACE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to Legislative Department:

Section —. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for all future elections of United States Senators, from this State, to be by direct vote of the people.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

ABOLITION OF GRAND JURIES.

Mr. HUESTIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, abolishing Grand Juries:

Resolved, That the following provision be adopted in that article of the Constitution which relates to Grand Juries:

Section —. The Grand Jury system is hereby abolished; and in lieu thereof the Legislature shall devise and provide, by legislative enactment, a more economical and expeditious system of criminal procedure.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

JURY SYSTEM.

Mr. HUESTIS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the jury system:

Resolved, That the following provision be adopted in that article of the Constitution which relates to the jury system:

Section —. The right of trial by jury shall be inviolate in all cases of felony, in such cases of misdemeanor as the Legislature may determine, in all civil actions sounding in tort, and in all cases arising from breach of contract, where punitory or exemplary damages are sought to be recovered. In all actions, civil and criminal, six persons shall constitute a full jury. The Legislature shall fix and determine the character and qualifications of jurors, and the number whose concurrence shall be necessary to render a verdict in civil actions. Juries may be waived in all cases, civil or criminal.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

Mr. LAVIGNE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to privileges and elections:

Resolved, That no person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this State, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this State one year next preceding to the election or appointment.

Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

WATER RIGHTS.

MR. LAVIGNE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to water rights:

Resolved, That the Legislature shall provide for reasonable rates to be charged for the use of the water taken from natural lakes and streams by individuals or corporations.

Referred to the Committee on Water Rights.

TAXATION OF STOCK.

MR. J. WEST MARTIN, of Alameda, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the exemption of indemnity capital stock of corporations from taxation:

Resolved, That the capital stock of savings bank corporations, where the same constitutes a guarantee capital that cannot be withdrawn or diminished until all trusts and deposits are fully paid and discharged, shall not be taxed.

Referred to the Committee on Corporations.

TAX ON CHINESE.

MR. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the Chinese:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall provide by law for the exclusion of aliens of Asiatic descent from this State, and for that purpose may impose such taxes upon the Chinese population as they may deem expedient, and may provide such other measures as they may deem necessary to discourage Asiatic immigration.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

CORPORATIONS.

MR. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to corporations:

SECTION —. Every association or corporation doing an insurance business, or issuing policies of insurance upon real estate, shall be required by law to pay to the insured the full amount of losses sustained by him upon any property insured, not exceeding the full amount mentioned in policy of insurance.

Referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

CONTENTS AND ORDER OF THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. McCONNELL introduced the following resolution, relative to contents and order of the articles of the Constitution:

Resolved, That the Constitution framed by this Convention, when complete, shall consist of fourteen articles, entitled as follows: Article One—Bill of Rights; Article Two—Right of Suffrage and Election; Article Three—Distribution of Powers; Article Four—Legislative Department; Article Five—Executive Department; Article Six—Judicial Department; Article Seven—Militia; Article Eight—Taxation and Finance; Article Nine—Municipal Corporations; Article Ten—Private Corporations; Article Eleven—Education; Article Twelve—Mode of Amending and Revising the Constitution; Article Thirteen—Miscellaneous Provisions; Article Fourteen—Schedule. And that any provision reported to this Convention from a committee shall be marked by such committee to take its place as a section in an appropriate article.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

APPORTIONMENT AND REPRESENTATION.

MR. STRONG introduced the following proposition, in relation to representation and apportionment:

SEC. 29. The Senators and members of the Assembly provided for in this Constitution shall be apportioned among the several counties and districts to be established by law, according to the number of inhabitants; provided, however, that in any and all apportionments made under this Constitution, each and every county of the State shall be entitled to at least one representative in the Assembly.

Referred to Committee on Apportionment and Representation.

SUFFRAGE.

MR. McCOMAS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, proposing a new section for the Constitution, in relation to suffrage:

SECTION —. Suffrage is hereby declared to be a duty of citizenship, which shall be enforced by proper legislation.

Referred to Committee on Right of Suffrage.

STOCK DEALING.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, entitled "A proposition to authorize the State to bridle stock swindling:"

SECTION —. All mining, railroad, water, gas, bank, or other incorporated company's stock, incorporated under and in compliance with the incorporation laws of this State, shall be considered negotiable paper.

SEC. —. All stockholders of any incorporated company under the laws of this State shall be entitled to a vote or voice in the management of the same, and shall also be permitted to examine the condition of the property.

Referred to Committee on Corporations.

MINING BUREAU.

MR. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the appointment of a Mining Bureau:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall provide for the creation of a Mining Bureau, whose duty it shall be to give true and authentic information to the public concerning the condition and merit of mines incorporated under the mining laws of California.

Referred to Committee on Mining.

TAXATION.

MR. HOWARD introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to taxation:

WHEREAS, It is estimated that nearly one sixth of the value of the entire property of the United States is invested in United States bonds, or evidences of debt, exempt from taxation by an Act of Congress, but as the exemption does not extend to the profits accruing on the bonds; therefore,

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall impose an income tax on all United States bonds held or owned by citizens or residents of the State.

SEC. 2. The Legislature shall provide for an income tax on money loaned on mortgage, or other evidence of debt, to be paid by the creditor only, but the owner of the property mortgaged shall be assessed on the same on the value, after deduction of the amount of the mortgage.

SEC. 3. The Legislature shall impose an income tax on all State, county, and municipal bonds.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall provide for a tax upon corporations on the franchise and the income received, and the separate property of the corporation.

SEC. 5. On all lands not necessary for the business of the corporation, which have been received from the Federal or State Governments as subsidies, the Legislature shall impose an increased or progressive tax of —— per cent.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. INMAN. I move that when this Convention adjourns, it adjourn to meet to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. I ask the gentleman to withdraw that motion and allow me to introduce a resolution which, if adopted, will cover his views.

MR. INMAN. I would like to get to work in the committees.

MR. BIGGS. I see we have a special order for two o'clock to-day, and we must attend to it.

MR. INMAN. I withdraw my motion.

ARRANGEMENT OF BUSINESS.

MR. EDGERTON offered the following:

Resolved, First, that after this day, and until Wednesday, the twenty-third day of the present month, all that part of rule seventeen after the sixth order of business be and the same is hereby suspended; second, that from and after this day, and until such twenty-third instant, the Convention adjourn each day immediately after concluding the sixth order of business, for the purpose of enabling the standing committees to consider the subjects referred to them and to mature a plan of action concerning the same; third, that immediately after such adjournment said committees proceed to hold daily sessions for the disposal of the business before them, and that on such twenty-third instant, or sooner if practicable, they report such plan to the Convention for its action.

MR. EDGERTON. That rule, if adopted, will be our order of business until one week from to-morrow. After to-day we meet, and this will be the order of business: "Roll call; reading and approval of the Journal; presentation of petitions and memorials; communications from State officers; reports of standing committees; and reports of select committees." It suspends the remainder of the rule. It also temporarily suspends another rule—I forget which it is, now—which provides that each standing committee shall report within fifteen days from the day of reference.

THE PRESIDENT. Rule twenty.

MR. EDGERTON. Now, sir, in my judgment, if that resolution be adopted it will greatly facilitate the business of this body. We have been five days receiving propositions relative to the Constitution, and there certainly is, by this time, enough material upon the tables of the various committees from which to extract some plan to present for the action of this body.

MR. HERRINGTON. I rise to a point of order. The proposition is to change a standing rule. There has been no notice given of it.

MR. EDGERTON. The last part of rule sixty says that any rule may be temporarily suspended.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. EDGERTON. This rule provides merely for the temporary suspension of these rules until next Wednesday. The resolution also conveys the instruction that immediately upon the adjournment the committees go to work during the daytime and perfect and mature some plan of action by that day, or sooner if practicable. Now the resolution does not preclude any gentleman from sending to the desk any proposition that he has in his mind. It facilitates the business of the Convention in this, that, if the committee covers the views of any gentleman, it saves him the necessity or the trouble of sending up a proposition. If it does not, any gentleman, either in Committee of the Whole, or afterwards in Convention, can send up any proposition he pleases by way of amendment to the plan reported. Such a mode of procedure was adopted, I believe, in the Convention in Pennsylvania. After the propositions were received, I think they broke up for some fifteen or twenty days, to give the various committees an opportunity to look over the various propositions and out of them to extract some plan and present it for the action of the Convention. I hope the resolution will be adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. I entirely agree with the proposition in this resolution. I think it will expedite the transaction of our business. Our committee has met three evenings and there is a rule that prevents us meeting during the session of the Convention, and some of our members are on other committees, and it will be utterly impossible for the committee to discharge their duties unless the Convention takes a recess during the day.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. As there is a special order of business for two o'clock, namely, the consideration of the resolution offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Winans, I therefore move the resolution offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, be made the special order of business at three o'clock this afternoon. That will give each member an opportunity of considering the subject until that time.

The motion prevailed.

CLERK.

Mr. EDGERTON offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be and is hereby authorized to employ a clerk at a compensation of five dollars per day for each day that he is actually employed.

It was referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

NIGHT WATCHMAN.

Mr. DUNLAP offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President of this Convention appoint a Night Watchman, whose duties shall be to take charge of this chamber, and see that no unauthorized persons enter the same. Said Night Watchman shall not permit any books or papers to be taken from members' desks without orders from the owners thereof. Said Night Watchman shall receive the same compensation as is now paid to the Door keepers of this Convention.

Mr. TINNIN. That question has been up once before, and it is an established rule of this Convention that all matters of this kind shall go to the Committee on Contingent Expenses. I hope that the Convention will not depart from that rule.

The PRESIDENT. The subject has been referred and reported back to the Convention.

Mr. HILBORN. There was some resolution of this kind which was referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses. They reported back in favor of the employment of a Night Watchman, and designated a particular person. It came in here, and other persons were suggested as amendments to the report. After some discussion the whole matter was laid on the table, where it now rests. I move that the resolution lie on the table, with the report of that committee, to be brought up at the same time with it.

Carried.

COST OF PRINTING.

Mr. BARTON offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Superintendent of State Printing be requested to furnish this Convention, at the earliest day possible, a statement showing the cost to date of printing the resolutions and propositions relating to the new Constitution that have been presented to this Convention.

Mr. BARTON. I move its adoption.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDENT. It is not necessary that it should go to any committee.

The resolution was adopted.

CORRESPONDENTS IN COMMITTEE MEETINGS.

Mr. BEERSTECHER offered the following:

Whereas, The delegates here assembled are the agents and servants of the sovereign people of this State, and as such their actions should at all times be open to public scrutiny and criticism; therefore,

Resolved, That the accredited newspaper reporters and correspondents of the press reporting the proceedings of this Convention be privileged to be present at all regular meetings of standing committees.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I move the adoption of that resolution. I understand that some of the regular accredited reporters have been denied admission to the committee rooms; and I hope that the newspaper reporters and the newspaper correspondents will have the privilege of entering to any of the committee rooms and attend the deliberations of every committee of this body, in order that the work of this Convention may be given to the people at large; and the only way to do that is to allow the newspaper reporters and the newspaper correspondents full liberty and full privilege of attending the meetings of this Convention, both as a whole or in committee; and I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. INMAN. It seems to me that belongs to the committees. Each committee has a right to decide for itself. I have no objection to the reporters being in any committee where I am, but it is not a question that belongs to the Convention.

Mr. VAN DYKE. I would like to have an expression of the Convention.

Mr. EDGERTON. I hope the resolution, with all respect to the author, will not be adopted. It certainly misconceives the very object of these committees. They are designed for the purpose of private deliberation and consultation; for informal interchange and comparison of views; and many things occur in committee that are perfectly proper that no gentleman desires to have in the newspapers. I never have heard of such proceedings in a deliberative body.

Mr. GRACE. I don't want anything to pass through these committee-rooms or through this body but what the public may know. Everything that I do, or that any delegate does, I think the world is entitled to know it, and I am in hopes that the reporters will be allowed in the committee-rooms and that everything that is done there by members, their constituents may know. This is a Convention of the people for the purpose of making a Constitution for the people, to be ratified by the people, to make a government for the people, and we want the people to know what we are doing, and we don't want to do anything that we are ashamed of.

Mr. INMAN. I have no objection to reporters coming into any committee-room, and I don't want to be misunderstood, but I deny the right of this Convention to say who shall be there as reporters. It is a thing unheard of. I am not ashamed of what I do any more than the gentleman. I am perfectly willing that this State shall know. I am not a stickler for any proposition and I hope that this Convention will take that view of it. I do not care who knows what I do. I don't do anything in the dark and I don't suppose any gentleman proposes to.

Mr. ROLFE. I am not ashamed of anything I do, but I do not believe in this Convention prescribing a rule for these committees that was not prescribed for the Convention by the Legislature. The Legislature, in its wisdom, has provided in the statute that its sessions shall be open, except when the Convention shall be disposed to hold secret sessions. I do not suppose that there is a legislative body in the United States but what has the same provision. It is the practice in the Congress of the United States. I do not propose to hold any secret sessions, but I am opposed to prescribing a rule to the committees of this Convention which is not prescribed to the Convention itself.

Mr. FILCHER. In order that the resolution may not be mandatory and yet arrive at an expression, I move to amend the resolution so that it shall read: "It is the sense of this Convention that the meetings of the standing committees should be open to reporters." Then if any committee should choose not to admit reporters, that committee itself will be responsible for its action and not this Convention. If, on the other hand, a committee should choose to admit them, it would be privileged to do so. I would like to have an expression of this body on that subject, and to arrive at that expression, I would ask the gentleman to so change the resolution as to read: "Resolved, that it is the sense of this Convention that the meetings of the standing committees should be open to reporters."

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I accept the amendment.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay the whole proceeding on the table.

Mr. ESTEE. I would like to have it include, also, the Constitutional Club organized by my colleagues, the delegates from San Francisco; and, with that amendment, I would be well pleased to vote for it.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, Filcher, and Inman.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

PAY OF PAGE.

Mr. ESTEE offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Controller of State shall issue his warrant, and the Treasurer shall pay to Willie Campbell the sum of eighteen dollars, for six days' pay as Page, for services rendered before his appointment.

Referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

CHINESE.

Mr. O'DONNELL. I wish to offer this resolution:

Resolved, That it is incumbent upon this Convention to incorporate in the Constitution a section which shall forever disqualify aliens——

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order.

MR. BARBOUR offered the following:

WHEREAS, The member of this Convention from Santa Barbara, Mr. Eugene Fawcett, is the present incumbent of the office of District Judge of the Seventh Judicial District; therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be and they are hereby instructed to inquire into the eligibility of said member and his right to a seat in this Convention, and report thereon at an early day.

MR. HOWARD. I suggest that the resolution should go to the Judiciary Committee.

THE PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

MR. O'DONNELL. I send up my resolution again.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order. We passed that order of business some time ago.

MR. McCALLUM. Do I understand the Chair to rule that the resolution goes to the Committee on Judiciary? As I understand it, where there is a difference as to which committee a resolution shall be referred to, it is for the Convention to decide, and not the President.

THE PRESIDENT. Undoubtedly so. But there was no objection to its being referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

MR. McCALLUM. The resolution itself asks that it go to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution.

MR. McCALLUM. Now, I am in favor of the motion made by General Howard, but I think that where a question of reference arises the Convention ought to decide.

THE PRESIDENT. That is very true. The Chair was not aware that the gentleman had moved a reference to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. If it is desired the question will be put.

The motion to refer to the Committee on Privileges and Elections was lost, on a standing vote, by a vote of 54 ayes to 61 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question now recurs on the motion to refer to the Committee on Judiciary.

MR. DUDLEY, of San Joaquin. I raise the point of order that the Act calling the Convention provided that no member should be expelled until after the report of a special committee appointed to investigate charges. There is a provision in the Act for appointing a committee where a question of eligibility arises. It reads as follows: "The Convention shall have the power to expel any of its members, and to punish its members and officers for disorderly behavior, by imprisonment or otherwise; but no member shall be expelled until the report of a committee appointed to inquire into the facts alleged as the grounds of his expulsion shall have been made." I hold that it is the duty of the Chair to inquire into the facts as alleged in the resolution.

MR. VAN DYKE. That is with reference to eligibility.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken. The motion is to refer to the Judiciary Committee.

The motion to refer to the Judiciary Committee prevailed, and it was so referred.

MOTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I wish to send up two resolutions:

Resolved, That the Superintendent of State Printing be directed to print and revise the rules of the Convention and the list of committees and names of members on each committee at once, and out of its order.

MR. ESTEE. It is already in the hands of the printer and being revised.

MR. HILBORN. It is a rule that matter is printed in the order in which it is received, and there is other matter in ahead of this. It is essentially necessary to have this at once and ahead of the other. The purpose of the resolution is that it shall be printed in advance of the useless mass of matter now in.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. EDGERTON. This order of business seems to be exhausted, and I ask leave to send up a resolution a little out of order, concerning the articles of the existing Constitution.

MR. O'DONNELL. I object.

THE SECRETARY read as follows:

Resolved, That so much of the existing Constitution as relates to the preamble and declaration of rights be referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights; that so much of the same as relates to the right of suffrage be referred to the Committee on the Right of Suffrage; that so much of the same as relates to the legislative department be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department; that so much of the same as relates to the executive department be referred to the Committee on Executive Department; that so much of the same as relates to the judicial department be referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department; that so much of the same as relates to the militia be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs; that so much of the same as relates to the State debt be referred to the Committee on State and Municipal Indebtedness; that so much of the same as relates to education be referred to the Committee on Education; that so much of it as relates to the mode of amending and revising the Constitution be referred to the Committee on Future Amendments; that so much of the same as relates to miscellaneous provisions, excepting taxation, be referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects; that so much as relates to the schedule be referred to the Committee on Schedules.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I, for one, am in favor of the standing committees retaining, as far as possible, the existing Constitution. I am very much enamored of it; positively opposed to laying irreverent hands on it. I observe that other Constitutional Conventions have adopted similar resolutions.

MR. BARBOUR. I move to amend by providing that the whole Constitution be referred to the committees and they be allowed to use as much of it as they see fit.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is whether the gentleman shall have leave to introduce the resolution out of order.

MR. O'DONNELL. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is, shall the gentleman have leave to introduce the resolution.

Leave was granted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is now on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. McFARLAND. I move to adjourn until two o'clock to-day.

MR. ESTEE. I move to amend by adjourning until to-morrow at ten o'clock, so as to give the committees a chance to do some work.

MR. McFARLAND. I accept the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on adjournment.

The motion was lost.

MR. BLACKMER. I move that the Convention take a recess until two o'clock.

MR. ESTEE. I move to amend, that the Convention do now adjourn.

THE PRESIDENT. The first question is on the motion to adjourn.

MR. MURPHY. I think some disposition should be made of the special order, and I move to make it the special order for to-morrow at eleven o'clock.

MR. EDGERTON. I hope these motions to adjourn will be voted down. These special orders have got to be provided for.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not debatable. The motion is to adjourn.

The motion was lost.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection the Convention will now take a recess until two o'clock, under the rule.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two P. M. Mr. Murphy in the chair. Roll call dispensed with.

THE SPECIAL ORDER.

THE PRESIDENT. The first thing in order is resolution number forty, by Mr. Winans, which is made the special order for two o'clock. The Secretary will read the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution as follows:

Resolved, That the form and order of the present Constitution shall be adopted by this Convention, in the new Constitution formed by it, to the following extent: That the new Constitution shall consist of a preamble, to be followed by twelve consecutive articles, which shall be numbered, entitled and have sequence, respectively, in the same manner and comprise the same subjects as the twelve articles of the present Constitution; that to these shall be added such new articles, numbered in proper order after said twelve, as this Convention shall adopt, after which shall follow the schedule as the final division of said new Constitution.

Resolved, That said preamble and articles shall be considered and acted upon by this Convention in the order and sequence aforesaid, and no one of them, nor any subject-matter belonging to any one of them, shall be adopted or discussed until all other articles and matter pertaining to them, having priority as aforesaid, shall have been disposed of in their order.

Resolved, That for the purpose of giving effect and enforcement to the rules aforesaid, the several committees having charge of the matters embraced in the said preamble and twelve articles shall make their reports in the order herein named, and none of said committees shall report upon the subject-matter of any of said articles until all the articles having priority thereto, as aforesaid, shall have been considered and disposed of by this Convention, and that the other committees having charge of matter not embraced in said articles shall report afterwards and in such order as this Convention may determine.

Resolved, That as rules inconsistent with the foregoing resolutions shall be modified, or, so far all necessary, revoked, to the extent of insuring conformity therewith.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: Under the system which now exists and the confusion into which the system may expand, I can see no prospect for the future but confusion and disorder. Nearly or quite three hundred resolutions and amendments have now been proposed, of every variety of character, quality, and kind, belonging to every department of constitutional propositions, sought to be incorporated together, and by virtue of the rule of this body, they having been sent to committees, required to report them within fifteen days, they will all come into the Convention in a rude, incongruous, ill-assorted mass, and when they reach here they will demand action, according to their several priorities. The consequence will be, unless this change is wrought, that this body will be tossed on a sea of turbulence and utter confusion. There can be no such thing as harmonizing matters under this system. One man brings up his proposition, which embraces a section on the Chinese question. Another man attempts to get the floor in order that he may bring up the subject of taxation, and so on, and men who have special topics of their own to look after pay little attention to anything else. Now, sir, we must not ignore the old Constitution entirely. We are proceeding at present to the demolition of all that exists, and attempting to make something entirely new.

We should not go so far as to entirely ignore the present document which now stands as the Constitution of the State. I think we should preserve it in all its forms and features, as far as it is possible, in the making up of the new instrument. To that end I have proposed, in this resolution, that the articles of the Constitution be taken up in their respective orders as they now exist. The main object of this resolution is to consider every article to be put in the new Constitution by itself, in all its parts and departments, and finish that particular article before entering upon the consideration of another. That is the only method, in my judgment, whereby we can secure order and form of procedure, and it will certainly quicken our action and expedite the business of the Convention.

Then, there is a part of this plan that every article shall be considered in its proper place, and all there is to be said and done in reference to it shall be done while it is the subject of debate, so that we can pass rapidly from one to another. Let us not work blindly, grasping blindly after results that cannot be attained. If we do not adopt such a mode of procedure, you will find that it will be up-hill work. If a skillful artisan were about to construct a model of the human body, he would not first form a portion of an arm, and then a toe, and then a foot, and then a section of the spine, and then a fragment of the leg, but he would finish it in its proper order of joining, making member by member, and then adjust the members together, and form a harmonious whole. This is the course of action for us to pursue.

Objection has been made by the minority of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business that this resolution required committees to report in a stated order. As far as that proposition is concerned, it is not a vital point with me. If some committees are ready to report before others, upon an entire subject or article of the Constitution, then their report can be considered when it comes up. But the main object is to consider and dispose of one subject entirely before entering upon the consideration of another. This is the main purpose of this resolution, and if that purpose is carried out, I am satisfied the Convention will never see the day when it will have occasion to regret its act.

Mr. LARKIN. I desire to retain in the present Constitution every item that is good, and every item that satisfies the people. But the resolution before us, that is proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Winans, I believe will delay action in this Convention—will hinder the work of this Convention, hinder the committees, and may block the work of the Convention entirely.

It has been charged repeatedly that certain gentlemen on this floor desire to defeat this Constitution, and obstruct the business of the Convention. I hope the gentleman from San Francisco is not one of them; but these resolutions will, I am certain, delay action in the Convention. There can be no final act upon any proposition submitted here from any committee. This Convention has met to frame a Constitution. As far as this proposition is concerned—as far as the distinguished gentleman has illustrated his remarks—it is to make one harmonious whole by commencing at the first provision to be embodied in the Constitution. Now, I see no reason for the adoption of this resolution at this particular time. If all the committees had reported, then such a resolution might be in order. If we had all the subjects framed, it might not be improper for this Convention to say in what order they should be joined together. While everything is in chaos here, while the committees are filled with propositions and resolutions, let us go on with the work, and let each committee stick to its duty, and not by any delay postpone the action of this Convention until the funds are exhausted and we are compelled to return home without making a Constitution. We want no delays here. Let us vote down the proposition and go on with the work, and then come together in Committee of the Whole and consider each proposition, and adjust it so that it will be in harmony, one section with the other.

We want no final action by any committee; no final action upon any proposition submitted now, because we may change our views upon many of the questions to come before us. I hope the resolution will be voted down, for it will be sure to delay the Convention in its work.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am opposed to this resolution, because I think the adoption of this resolution would clog the wheels of the Convention and result in an absolute loss of time. The resolution, taken as a whole, provides:

"That for the purpose of giving effect and enforcement to the rules aforesaid, the several committees having charge of the matters embraced in the said preamble and twelve articles shall make their reports in the order herein named."

That would be, first, the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, the Committee on the Right of Suffrage, the Committee on the Distribution of Powers, the Committee on Legislative Department, and so on to the end. I don't believe it is good policy to have every committee in this body wait the action of any other committee.

Mr. WINANS. As I stated, I am perfectly willing to modify the resolution to that extent. Alter that, and allow each committee to report when it is ready.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. The difficulty is that the resolution, according to the statement of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Winans, is acknowledged to be defective, and of course it is not proper to ask us to vote for it in its present condition. Farther, Mr. President, it seems to me that a resolution of that character is entirely unnecessary. The gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, this morning introduced a resolution which was adopted, which particularly specified that particular matters should be sent to particular committees designated for such matters, and that they should be sent nowhere else. Consequently, the Committee on Declaration of Rights has nothing else to do, save solely and alone to consider subjects relating to the declaration of rights. The Committee on Legislative Department has nothing to do but to consider subjects relating to the legislative department. Mr. Edgerton's resolution provides for the matter that these committees shall consider these specific things and nothing else; and when these committees are ready to report, they will come before this house and bring their report, and the house will act on it. Of course the house will not act on two reports at the same time. That proposition is absurd. It is just as absurd as that two bodies can occupy the same space at one time, for this house to act upon two reports at one time. When a report is brought in, the house will take it up and consider it seriatim on one day, or whenever it is necessary, and I think the resolution of the gentleman from Sacramento provides for the whole matter, and I hope the resolution as offered by the gentleman from San Francisco will be voted down. I don't see any analogy between the arms and toes of a human form and this Constitution. We propose to take up reports as they come in. If we provide that a committee can only report in the order it is designated upon any particular schedule, the consequence will be that if another committee is ready to report, it cannot report because the schedule will not allow it, and the consequence is, we would be obliged to adjourn from time to time waiting for the report of the proper committees.

Mr. O'DONNELL. I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The PRESIDENT. The motion is to lay the resolution on the table. The motion prevailed and the resolution was tabled.

RECONSIDERATION.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed this morning in relation to the different articles in the Constitution. There seems to be some misunderstanding of the effect. I do this in order to enable me to withdraw the resolution in order to make an amendment or correction.

Mr. INMAN. What is the object?

Mr. EDGERTON. There are some matters in the Legislative Department that properly belong to the Committee on Bill of Rights, and it takes away from the Committee on Bill of Rights and sends to the Committee on Legislative Department, matters properly within its jurisdiction. And it is the same way as to other committees, and the object is to correct it in that particular.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on reconsidering the vote by which the resolution was adopted.

The motion to reconsider prevailed.

Mr. EDGERTON. I ask leave to withdraw the resolution for the purpose of correcting it.

The PRESIDENT. There being no objection, the gentleman will have leave to withdraw the resolution.

SPECIAL ORDER.

Mr. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move that we take up the next special order, set for three o'clock.

The PRESIDENT. There being no objections, the special order for three o'clock will be taken up. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The SECRETARY read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, First—That after this day, and until Wednesday, the twenty-third day of the present month, all that part of rule seventeen after the sixth order of business be and the same is hereby suspended.

Second—That from and after this day, and until such twenty-third instant, the Convention adjourn each day immediately after concluding the sixth order of business, for the purpose of enabling the standing committees to consider the subjects referred to them, and to mature a plan of action concerning the same.

Third—That immediately after such adjournment, said committees proceed to hold daily sessions for the disposal of the business before them, and that on such twenty-third instant, or sooner if practicable, they report such plan to the Convention for its action.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution. The resolution was adopted.

ADJOURNMENT—PROPOSITIONS.

Mr. AYERS. I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

Mr. HAGER. Before adjourning, Mr. President, I ask leave to introduce some propositions.

The PRESIDENT. There being no objection, the gentleman will have leave.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

Mr. HAGER, by consent, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the declaration of rights:

1. All men have a natural and indefeasible right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences; no man can of right be compelled to attend, erect, or support any place of worship, or to maintain any ministry, against his consent; no human authority can, in any case whatever, control or interfere with the rights of conscience, and no preference shall ever be given by law to any religious establishments or modes of worship.

2. No power of suspending laws shall be exercised, unless by the Legislature, or by its authority.

3. No ex post facto law, nor any law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making irrevocable any grant of exclusive or special privileges or immunities, shall be passed.

4. The printing press shall be free to every person who may undertake to examine the proceedings of the Legislature, or any branch of government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man, and every citizen may freely speak, write, or print, on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty. No conviction shall be had in any prosecution for the publication of papers relating to the official conduct of officers or men in public capacity, or to any other matter proper for public investigation or information, where the fact that such publication was not maliciously or negligently made shall be established to the satisfaction of the jury; and in all indictments for libels the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the facts, under the direction of the Court, as in other cases.

5. The citizens have a right, in a peaceable manner, to assemble together for their common good, and to apply to those invested with the powers of government for redress of grievances, or other proper purposes, by petition, address, or remonstrance.

6. The Legislature shall not grant any title of nobility, hereditary distinction, or exclusive privilege, nor create any office the appointment to which shall be for a longer term than during good behavior.

7. The Courts of justice shall be open to all, and every man for an injury done him in his property, person, or reputation, shall have remedy by due course of law, and right and justice administered without sale, denial, or delay. No law can limit the amount to be recovered for injuries resulting in death, or for injuries to persons or property; and in case of death from such injuries the right of action shall survive, and the Legislature shall prescribe for whose benefit such actions shall be prosecuted. No law shall prescribe any limitations of time within which suits may be brought against corporations for injuries to persons or property, or for other causes different from those fixed by general laws regulating actions against natural persons.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Mr. HAGER, by consent, introduced the following proposed amendments to the Judiciary Department, to be added to those heretofore made in amendment number ten:

1. Whenever two Justices of the Supreme Court are to be chosen for the same term of service, each voter shall vote for one only; when three or four are to be chosen, he shall vote for no more than two, and when five or six are to be chosen, he shall vote for no more than three. Candidates highest in vote shall be declared elected.

2. The Justices of the Supreme Court, during their continuance in office, shall reside within this State, and the District and County Judges, during their continuance in office, shall reside within the districts or counties for which they may be respectively elected.

3. No duties shall be imposed by law upon the Supreme, District, or County Courts, or the Justices or Judges thereof, except such as are judicial.

4. Whenever a Judicial District is composed of two or more counties, the County Judges in the District Courts of their respective counties may act for and in the place of a District Judge, when he may be absent from the county, and in such capacity shall have power in actions and proceedings in such District Court to issue orders and writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, ne exeat, injunction, and habeas corpus, and to hear and determine the same.

5. Until otherwise directed by law, the District Courts and the County Courts shall continue as at present established, except as in this Constitution changed.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

At two o'clock and twenty-eight minutes, on motion of Mr. Ayers, the Convention adjourned until to-morrow.

NINETEENTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Wednesday, October 16th, 1878.

MEMORIAL.

MR. HAGER presented the following memorial, signed by N. R. Johnston and sixteen other citizens of California:

To the Constitutional Convention, to meet at Sacramento, California, on the twenty-eighth day of September, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight:

Believing that Almighty God is the source of all power and authority in civil government, that the Lord Jesus Christ is the Ruler of Nations, and that the revealed will of God is of supreme authority in civil affairs;

Remembering that this country was settled by Christian men, with Christian ends in view, and that they gave a distinctly Christian character to the institutions which they established;

Perceiving the persevering attempts which are made to prohibit the reading of the Bible in our public schools, to overthrow our Sabbath laws, to abolish the oath, prayer in our State Legislature, and other Christian features of our institutions, and so to divorce the government from all connection with the Christian religion;

Viewing with grave apprehension the corruption of our politics, and the prevalent lack of moral and religious character in those who hold office in the State; and

Believing that a written Constitution should contain explicit evidence of the Christian character and purpose of the State which frames it, and perceiving that the silence of the Constitution of the State, as well as of the United States, in this respect, is used as an argument against all that is Christian in the usage and administration of the government;

We, the undersigned, citizens of the State of California, petition your honorable body to frame the Constitution so that it shall suitably express our acknowledgment of Almighty God as the source of all authority in civil government, of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Ruler of Nations, and of His revealed will as of supreme authority; and thus indicate that this is a Christian commonwealth, and place all the Christian laws, institutions, and usages of the State on an undeniable legal basis in the fundamental law of the same.

THE OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY.

MR. MARTIN, of Alameda, presented the following petition, signed by A. Elder and many others:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of California, respectfully and urgently request the delegates constituting the Convention, authorized to prepare a Constitution for said State, to retain section four, article one, of the same, and to add to said section a provision declaring the Sabbath day, or Sunday, a day of rest.

LOCAL OPTION.

THE PRESIDENT presented the following memorial, signed by E. White and several hundred other citizens of Humboldt County:

To the President and Members of the Constitutional Convention of the State of California:

The people of the State of California recognize the fact that it is the object and duty of the present Convention to promote the welfare of our people by the enactment of wise and just laws, and to advance their common interests by the encouragement of every legitimate, and the suppression of every pernicious, traffic.

Your memorialists are of the opinion that a great portion of the more obstinate and painful moral disorders that afflict the human family are engendered by the use of spirituous and intoxicating liquors; that the common use of such intoxicating liquors is not only destructive to health and happiness, but also impairs the faculties of the mind, and thereby tends equally to dishonor our character as a nation as well as to lower us in the scale of civilization.

Your memorialists have no doubt but that the presence of the plague or any other pestilential disorder, which might sweep away thousands of our fellow citizens, would elicit the most strenuous and energetic efforts on the part of our government to subdue it, and to guard against its possible occurrence.

Your memorialists can discern no just reason why the more certain and distressing ravages of intoxicating liquors upon the lives and happiness of our citizens, and the well-being and quiet of our community, should not be guarded against with corresponding vigilance and anxiety by the present rulers of the United States, and more particularly by the present law-makers of our own fair State.

Your memorialists beg leave to add further that, in their belief, the use of spirituous and intoxicating liquors is, in any case whatever, wholly unnecessary; that they neither fortify the body against the influences of heat or cold, nor render labor more easy or more productive; and that there are many other articles of diet and drink which are not only perfectly safe and salutary, but in every way superior and preferable to intoxicating liquors for any of the purposes above mentioned.

Your memorialists also believe that it is a grave defect in our present Constitution, in that it denies to the people of the different counties, townships, and districts the privilege of fairly determining, at the ballot-box, whether liquor saloons shall continue to exist in their midst, with their attendant trains of evil, of vices, pollution, want, and woe.

We are fully convinced that the law passed in March, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and known as the "Local Option Law," was a proper and just law, and one meeting with the general approbation of our people, as was evidenced by the fact that, out of over one hundred elections held under its provisions, the success of Local Option was in the ratio of two and a half to one. We, therefore, commend it to your consideration.

Your memorialists have beheld with regret the hitherto feeble and ineffectual endeavors put forth to stop or impede this giant evil, and the proportionally barren results which have resulted therefrom.

They center their hopes, therefore, of an effectual remedy, in the wisdom and power of your honorable body, and in behalf of our common humanity entreat of you, by all your obligations, to protect the lives and comfort of our citizens, and by your regard for our national character and respect for our land in the scale of intelligent and civilized beings, to impose such heavy duties on intoxicating liquors, or adopt such other remedial and preventive measures as shall, in your sober judgment, tend most efficiently to subdue and eradicate these evils.

Therefore, with an honest belief in the justness of our demand, and with a firm reliance in the honor, wisdom, and sincerity of your honorable body, we humbly crave at your hands a prompt and impartial consideration of our request, and if possible an ultimate exemption from this distressing evil.

COUNTIES AND COUNTY SEATS.

MR. BOUCHER was granted leave to introduce, out of order, the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to counties and county seats:

ARTICLE —.

COUNTIES.

SECTION 1. No new county shall be formed or established by the Legislature from any county or counties, which will reduce the county or counties, or either of them from which it shall be taken, to less contents than six hundred square miles; nor shall any county be formed of less contents; nor shall any line thereof pass in less than ten miles of any county seat of the county or counties proposed to be divided.

SEC. 2. No county shall be divided, or have any part stricken therefrom, without submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county, nor unless a majority of all the legal voters of the county voting on the question shall vote for the same.

SEC. 3. No county shall be so formed unless the assessed value of the property contained therein shall amount to six millions of dollars.

SEC. 4. There shall be no territory stricken from any county unless a majority of the voters living in such territory shall petition for such division; and no territory shall be added to any county without the consent of the majority of the voters of the county to which it is proposed to be added, but the portion so stricken off and added to another county, or formed in whole or in part into a new county, shall be holden for and obliged to pay its proportion of the indebtedness of the county from which it has been taken. An equitable division of all county property, owned at the time of such division, shall be made between the old and new counties.

COUNTY SEATS.

No county seat shall be removed until the point to which it is to be removed has been determined by a majority of the voters of the county, in such manner as shall have been prescribed by general law.

Read and referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

REPORT ON CHINESE.

MR. MILLER, from the Committee on Chinese, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Chinese, to whom was referred resolution number twenty-eight, relating to a memorial to be presented to the President of the United States for the modification of the Burlingame Treaty, beg leave to report the same to the Convention, together with the following substitute therefor, unanimously agreed upon by the committee, with the recommendation that the substitute herein be adopted.

Resolved, That the Convention memorialize the President and Senate of the United States to modify the Burlingame Treaty so as to prohibit Chinese immigration, and that the Chair appoint a committee of seven to draft such memorial, to be submitted to the Convention.

MR. GRACE. I call for the reading of the original resolution.

THE SECRETARY read the original resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That this Convention memorialize the President of the United States to abrogate or modify the Burlingame Treaty; and also memorialize Congress to prohibit Chinese immigration; and that the Chair appoint a committee of seven to draft such memorials, to be submitted to this Convention.

MR. HAGER. I would like to move to amend that report in this respect, that this standing Committee on Chinese be authorized to draw that memorial. They are more conversant with the subject. They have the matter before them, they are charged with it, and they are the proper committee to draw the memorial. I move to amend, that the Committee on Chinese be authorized to draw the memorial.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will send his amendment in writing to the desk.

MR. MILLER. The committee have no objection to this amendment and will accept it.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair cannot tell what the amendment is unless it is sent up in writing.

MR. BLACKMER. I desire to ask the Secretary to read the first part of that resolution again. My recollection is that it memorializes the President of the United States to modify the treaty.

THE SECRETARY again read the resolution and then read Mr. Hager's amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

The resolution as amended was adopted.

STATIONERY.

MR. HILBORN, from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be requested to furnish the Convention with a statement of the amount of stationery issued from his office up to this date which has been charged to the appropriation for the payment of the expenses of this Convention.

MR. McCOMAS. I would like to know if we are informed whether the stationery used here is to be charged against the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention. I do not think, from the wording of the law, that it is so intended.

MR. HILBORN. I will say, in justification, that we have ascertained that the Secretary of State and all the other members of the State Board of Examiners so construe the law that all the stationery used here shall be charged to the one hundred and fifty thousand dollars appropriated for running this Convention. I take this method of bringing the matter to the attention of the Convention, that they may know the fact, and also that they may have some idea as to how much stationery is being used—that they may know what inroads are being made upon that appropriation.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. NOEL. I desire to offer a resolution.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's resolution is out of order at present.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS.

MR. CAMPBELL. I desire to give notice that the Committee on Executive Department will meet in room fifty-five after the adjournment.

MR. EDGERTON. The Committee on Revenue and Taxation will meet in the Supreme Court room this evening at seven o'clock.

MR. ESTEE. The Committee on Corporations other than Municipal will meet at room fifty-six immediately after adjournment.

MR. VAN DYKE. The Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights will meet in room seventy-two immediately after adjournment.

LIST OF COMMITTEES.

MR. ROLFE. I desire to ask for information. I would like to know what committees I am on and who are my Chairmen, and I would like to know why these printed lists of committees are not printed. I believe there was a special order made requiring them to be printed immediately.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that they will be ready this afternoon.

MR. ROLFE. I understood that the resolution required them to be printed separately from the rules.

THE PRESIDENT. It required them to be printed out of their order.

MR. SHAFTER. I ask the Committee on Pardoning Power to meet at my desk immediately after adjournment.

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS' CLERK.

MR. GARVEY offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That P. K. Keene be and he is hereby appointed Clerk of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and his pay shall be the same as Minute Clerk, payable out of the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention.

Referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

COMMITTEE ROOMS.

MR. HILBORN offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to assign the chambers of the Supreme Court for committee rooms for this Convention.

Adopted.

COMMITTEE CLERK.

MR. NOEL offered the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Enrollment and Engrossment be authorized and empowered to employ a clerk, at a salary of five dollars per day, whenever necessary.

Referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

ADJOURNMENT.

The sixth order of business being finished, the President, at ten o'clock and forty minutes A. M., declared the Convention adjourned until to-morrow, at ten o'clock A. M., under the rule adopted yesterday.

TWENTIETH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Thursday, October 17th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at ten o'clock A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence was granted to Messrs. Shoemaker and Reed for one day, to Messrs. Cowden and Joyce for two days, to Mr. Hughey for three days, and to Mr. O'Donnell until Monday next.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, presented a memorial respecting reclaimed lands.

Referred to Committee on Agriculture.

STATE PRISONS.

MR. CAMPBELL. I ask leave of the Convention to present and have referred a proposition which was prepared by the late Governor Haight, who intended to introduce it before the Convention. It is in relation to the organization of a Board of State Prison Directors. It was his intention, in his lifetime, to have introduced this proposition, and it has been forwarded to me by the Secretary of State Prison Commission. I ask to have it referred to the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

So ordered.

The proposition was as follows:

PROPOSITION TO ESTABLISH A BOARD OF PRISON DIRECTORS.

There shall be a Board of Prison Directors, to consist of five persons, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall hold office for ten years, except that the first five appointed shall, in such manner as the Legislature may direct, be so classified that the term of one person so appointed shall expire at the end of each two years during the first ten years, and vacancies in said office thus or otherwise occurring shall be filled in like manner. The appointee to a vacancy occurring before the expiration of a term shall hold only for the unexpired term of his predecessor. The Governor shall have the power to remove either of the Directors for misconduct, incompetency, or neglect of duty, after an opportunity to be heard, upon written charges.

The Board of Directors shall have the charge and superintendence of the State Prison, and shall possess such powers and perform such duties in respect to County Jails, and other penal and reformatory institutions in the State, as the Legislature may prescribe.

The members of the Board shall receive no compensation other than reasonable traveling and other expenses incurred while engaged in the performance of official duties, to be audited as the Legislature may direct.

The Board shall appoint the Warden, Physician, and Clerk, and determine the other necessary officers of the prison. The Board shall have power to remove the Warden, Physician, and Clerk for misconduct, incompetency, or neglect of duty, after an opportunity to be heard, on written charges. All other officers of the prison shall be appointed by the Warden thereof, and be removed at his pleasure.

Whenever section twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-four, and thirty-five of this article shall be finally adopted, they shall take effect without further legislative action, and it shall be the duty of the Governor thereupon to appoint the Board of Prison Directors as provided therein.

Referred to Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

ATTACHES.

MR. TINNIN offered the following resolution:

Whereas, great inconvenience exists to the members of this Convention, in consequence of some of its attachés failing to perform their duties; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms is hereby directed to assume control of all attachés, other than those acting as clerks, and he is further authorized to detail any of the attachés under his control to perform any duties required in the building.

He shall report any negligence on the part of said attachés to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, who may take such action as they think proper.

Adopted.

MR. AYERS offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee be instructed to report to this Convention whether, in their opinion, the expenses of printing and stationery ordered by the Convention and members, for their use, are legally chargeable to the fund appropriated in the Act under the authority of which this Convention has met.

Adopted.

MR. TERRY offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Committee on Legislative Department be and is hereby authorized to employ a clerk, at a compensation of five dollars per day, for each day that he is actually employed.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

CORPORATIONS.

MR. HALE offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be requested to furnish to the Convention all information in his possession upon the following subjects, to wit:

First—The number and classification of all corporations other than municipal now existing in the State of California, and formed under the laws of this State.

Second—The aggregate amount of the capital stock of all said corporations and the aggregate amount of said capital stock of each class thereof.

Third—A declared statement of the principal place of business and locations of the principal offices of each corporation.

Fourth—A detailed statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by the said corporations.

MR. HALE. I desire to say one word upon that subject. We all know that in the State of California, at an early day, we made a departure upon the subject of corporations other than municipal. We cut off the power of forming corporations other than municipal, except under general law. Since that time we have had a system of law authorizing the formation of corporations. We have now had an experience of one quarter of a century under this system. We are convened here again upon a call of the people to reform our organic law. It seems to me, sir, that it would be the part of wisdom to lay before this body all the information that can be furnished by the office of the Secretary of State, which is the depository of that information, showing our experience thus far upon this subject. It is to throw as much light as possible to the minds of this Convention in determining whether they wish to continue the system as heretofore adopted, and, if modifications be needed, what those modifications should be. The resolution is intended to call for this information in detail that it may be laid before this Convention in a form that we can understand.

The resolution was adopted.

STATIONERY EXPENSES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has received the following communication from the Secretary of State, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
SACRAMENTO, October 16th, 1878.

To the honorable President and Members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Resolution No. —, adopted by your body to-day, requesting me to furnish a statement of the amount of stationery furnished to members thereof up to date.

In reply to the same I would say, that just at this time, when the full force of my office is required to perform the usual routine of business, and such extra labor as has been created by the Convention, it has been impossible to keep the many requisitions for stationery, etc., properly entered up to each member's account, so that the amount delivered to each, or in aggregate, could be ascertained on short notice.

The law of the Legislature under which stationery is disbursed, makes the manner of keeping accounts very complex and tedious, as every item, even as to the different qualities or kinds of pens and pencils, etc., must be carried out in full, and charged at exactly cost price, necessitating a constant reference to bills of purchase, and striking averages where the same vary with the times; and I would respectfully say to your honorable body, that it will be impossible for me to comply at once with the request contained in said resolution, as such special labor must be secondary to the regular business of the office. At the earliest opportunity, however, consistent with official duties, I shall be pleased to afford the information desired.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

THOMAS BECK,
Secretary of State.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the communication will be received and laid on the table.

REPORT.

MR. HILBORN, from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred resolution number forty-three, introduced by Mr. Estee, providing for the payment of J Steppacher, for services as Clerk of the Committee on Rules, have had the same under consideration, and find the following facts:

The committee, while preparing the rules for this Convention, found it necessary to employ a clerk, who was promptly discharged when the rules were completed. Mr. Steppacher served in that capacity thirteen days, and we think five dollars per day is a reasonable compensation. We therefore recommend the adoption of the resolution.

Your committee have also had under consideration resolution number forty-four, introduced by Mr. Edgerton, authorizing the Committee on Revenue and Taxation to employ a clerk, and herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be adopted Your committee are of the opinion that this is one of the very few committees who will need the services of a clerk.

Your committee have also had under consideration resolution number twenty-nine, introduced by Mr. Beerstecher, providing for the payment of two dollars per day to Patrick Levy, for lighting up the rooms of this building used by the Convention. There is no person in the service of the State whose especial duty it is to light the gas and extinguish the same. The duty is performed by Mr. Levy, who is one of the regular porters, employed about the building at seventy-five dollars per month, and under the law his day's work ends at five o'clock P. M. He receives no additional pay from the State for attending at night to look after the gas. It is unjust to expect him to remain about the Capitol building until late at night to extinguish the lights without extra compensation The Board of Examiners claim that there is no fund at their disposal out of which the extra compensation can be paid, and we see no alternative but for the Convention to pay it out of their appropriation. We therefore recommend the adoption of the resolution.

We have also had under consideration resolution number twenty-six, introduced by Mr. Eagon, which provides for paying G. E. McStay for writing up the Journal prior to the election of the Journal Clerk, and herewith report the same back, and recommend its adoption

We have also had under consideration resolution number forty-five, offered by Mr. Estee, providing for the payment of eighteen dollars to Willie Campbell, for services as Page prior to his appointment, and herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

We have also had under consideration resolution number forty-seven, introduced by Mr. Garvey, providing for the appointment of a Clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms, and herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

S. G. HILBORN, Chairman.

PAY FOR CLERICAL SERVICE.

The report was taken up, and the SECRETARY read the first resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Controller be and is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrant in favor of J. Steppacher, for the sum of sixty-five dollars, for services as Clerk of the Committee on Rules, payable out of the appropriation for this Convention, and that the State Treasurer be and is hereby authorized to pay the same.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: When this committee was appointed there was no rule by which we were controlled, and it was necessary to have a clerk. A clerk was appointed by the committee, and the clerk rendered these services. I think they were well and faithfully rendered, and were worth five dollars a day, and I hope the committee will pay it.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. It seems to me that seventy-five dollars—that is five dollars a day for the time the Convention has been in session, is a very large sum to pay for the work.

MR. HILBORN. It is sixty-five dollars—thirteen days at five dollars a day.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I do not know what services this clerk rendered. I understand that he has been writing up the rules. It seems to me that is a very large sum to pay him, even if he had to copy the rules three times over.

MR. BARBOUR. I would like to ask the committee if they know that any thirteen days' work has been performed.

Digitized by Google

Mr. HILBORN. All I know about it is, that the Chairman of the committee appeared before us and made a statement that this clerk had performed these services, and we take it for granted that he did.

Mr. EDGERTON. I have been a member of that Committee on Rules and I know something about this matter, although I do not pretend to know the number of days which that committee has been in session. But I do know this: that this committee ordered these rules to be indexed, for instance; that there have been several reports, references, and changes of the rules, and that this gentleman has always been in attendance upon the committee, and has performed all the clerical duties which have devolved upon them, and it has amounted to a very considerable duty. I have no doubt that he has either been in actual service, or in attendance and waiting upon that committee during these thirteen days. He has also prepared the list of standing committees, which will be found printed with the rules, and that was also done by order of this Convention. There have been a great many changes made in the rules, and all that clerical work has been done by this gentleman. He certainly ought to be paid something, and, in my judgment, that is not too much.

Mr. CROSS. I am not in favor of paying out any money unnecessarily, but I believe in doing justice, and since a question seems to have arisen, I would like to say that I have been in the habit of writing here late, evening after evening and night after night. I have seen Mr. Steppacher working here until between nine and ten o'clock under the dictation of that committee.

Mr. EDGERTON. To my knowledge he has been running between this committee and the State Printing Office, and doing other work which would otherwise have fallen upon the members of the committee. I do not believe the people sent us here to perform that class of work.

The resolution was adopted.

COMMITTEE CLERK.

The SECRETARY read the next resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revenue and Taxation be and is hereby authorized to employ a clerk at a compensation of five dollars per day for each day that he is actually employed.

Adopted.

GAS PORTER.

The SECRETARY read the next resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State is hereby requested to have such rooms in the Capitol building as may be used for meetings of committees, lighted up on nights of meeting; and that Patrick Levy, the Porter, who has charge of the gas, be and he is hereby allowed two dollars per day for the performance of such extra service, to be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention.

Mr. LARKIN. We have employed porters to do that work. I shall oppose the motion on that ground. I move the indefinite postponement of the resolution.

Mr. HILBORN. In regard to this matter I would say that we have not as yet employed porters to take charge of the gas. Even if we had, it would be better to employ the man who has charge of the gas works. I think it would be economy. This particular man saved this State last winter about nine hundred dollars by his judicious management of the gas. He is thoroughly familiar with the works, and it would be a long time before any stranger could gain that familiarity. I am told by the Secretary of State, and other persons around the building, that he is a very competent person, and I have no doubt that it would be economy to employ this man to perform this duty rather than any stranger.

Mr. TERRY. I would ask the Secretary to again read that portion of the report which relates to this matter.

The SECRETARY read:

"Your committee have also had under consideration resolution number twenty-nine, introduced by Mr. Beerstecher, providing for the payment of two dollars per day to Patrick Levy, for lighting up the rooms of this building used by the Convention. There is no person in the service of the State whose especial duty it is to light the gas and extinguish the same. The duty is performed by Mr. Levy, who is one of the regular Porters employed about the building at seventy-five dollars per month, and under the law his day's work ends at five o'clock P. M. He receives no additional pay from the State for attending at night to look after the gas. It is unjust to expect him to remain about the Capitol building until late at night to extinguish the lights, without extra compensation. The Board of Examiners claim that there is no fund at their disposal out of which the extra compensation can be paid, and we see no alternative but for the Convention to pay it out of their appropriation. We therefore recommend the adoption of the report."

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I do not think it can be charged against me that I have advocated any extravagant expenditures in this Convention, and when I introduced this resolution it seemed to me that it was no more than just that Mr. Levy should receive this two dollars for the extra services that he rendered. He has to remain seven hours after the day's work is done to perform this duty. He is not compelled to be here after five o'clock, but he generally does not go home until twelve o'clock at night. It is a matter of absolute economy and a saving to this Convention; and the idea that the Porters of the several committee rooms can discharge these duties seems to me to be absurd in the extreme. A great number of the lights are outside of any of the committee rooms, and who is going to attend to the lights on the outside? As the gentleman from Solano has aptly said, Mr. Levy saved this State somewhere in the neighborhood of a thousand dollars by reason of understanding the business of attending to the gas. He knows exactly how many flames to have and how many not to have, and the consequence is an absolute saving to the State. I think it is a matter of economy for the State, and matter of justice towards Mr. Levy, that he receive this two dollars.

Mr. LARKIN. I misunderstood the reading of the resolution, and I withdraw my motion to indefinitely postpone.

Mr. GREGG. I understand that this man already receives a salary for performing this duty about the building. If that is so, there is no need of increasing his compensation, and this is only to increase his compensation for services already called for.

Mr. EDGERTON. In reply to the gentleman from Kern, Mr. Gregg, I understand that this gentleman, Mr. Levy, is in the employment of the State, and while he has charge of the gas, he has charge of it only for eight hours in the day. When these duties are discharged he can go home, and nobody can get at it; and it is a mere question as to this Convention whether its committees shall have lights. Because, if Mr. Levy sees fit to go away when his day's work is done, there is an end to it. Now, last evening I had to go to Mr. Levy and make a personal request of him to light up the Supreme Court room for the benefit of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. If the resolution does not pass, the committees will all come in to-morrow asking that it be passed, so that they can have lights.

Mr. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: If this man is in the service of the State for the purpose of having charge of the gas, and has only to serve eight hours out of the twenty-four, it would certainly seem very strange that his hours of service should commence at eight o'clock in the morning and end at five o'clock in the afternoon. I do not see any particular necessity for anybody to have charge of the gas during those hours. It is very certain that the various State offices are lighted up here at night, and somebody has charge of it. It seems to me that it is just a matter of strike on his part. There being more committee rooms to light, he takes this opportunity to increase his pay.

Mr. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I move to strike out the words "two dollars" from the resolution.

Mr. EDGERTON. I will ask the gentleman how he supposes these committee rooms will be lighted?

Mr. SMITH, of Santa Clara. I propose to get some other man.

Mr. EDGERTON. You cannot do it. This man performs his duties, and is only required under the law to remain eight hours.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. This man receives seventy-five dollars per month. The resolution is to pay him two dollars extra per day; and then he will receive less than five dollars per day. The gentleman says that if this man does not do the work we will get some other person to do the work. Well, this Convention has not been able to get any man to do anything, no matter what it was, for less than five dollars. We are paying five dollars for every man that comes into this Convention, provided he has some official employment here. The gentleman says if we do not take this man, we will take some one else. If we take any one else, we have got to pay five dollars a day, and it will be an absolute loss to the State of three dollars a day, and then the man that we take will not understand his business as Mr. Levy understands his business. I understand this man to be a general Porter, who has to attend to business here around the building for eight hours in the day, and after his general duties are finished he can go home at five o'clock. It seems to me that this man is justly entitled to receive this pay.

Mr. HILBORN. There seems to be a general misapprehension existing here. Gentlemen seem to think that this man is employed by the State to look after the gas works. That is not so. He is a general Porter about the building. There are three of them. He comes here at the same time and works at the same kind of labor as the others. Go down into the stationery room and you will find him doing up books to send off, the same as the other Porters. As an accommodation to the officers of the building he stays here and lights up in the library and several State offices. That is all extra, and he is not required to do it by law. He is not paid for it by the State. Formerly there was a person specially employed for this work; now this man does it. This has been asked on account of the fact that he is obliged to stay here until twelve o'clock at night and look after the gas and economize, and it has been found that by his skillful management of the gas he saved the State a large amount of money, and the Legislature have found it economical to employ him and give him a little extra pay for staying up here until twelve o'clock at night. We have got to have somebody. In any event this Convention will be charged about nine hundred dollars a month, and if we get an unskillful man who does not understand taking care of the gas we will find that it will come up to twelve hundred or fifteen hundred dollars a month. I confess that when this resolution was first referred, I was prejudiced against the idea. I thought he was crowding us a little. When we came to find out that this man, after having performed a full day's work as a Porter, stays here until twelve or one o'clock at night, for our convenience, I think it unjust to ask him to do it without pay. We tried to saddle this on the State in some way, but we found there was no fund out of which the State Board of Examiners could pay it.

Mr. GRACE. This discussion is costing the State more than the whole proposition contemplates. I move the previous question.

No second.

Mr. HAGER. I want to ascertain the fact. It is said by some gentlemen that this is a man employed by the State to do this particular business, and therefore they object to paying him any further compensation. Now, if he be employed to do this particular business, if that be his duty, why of course he is paid for it. We do not want gas here in the daytime. I guess we have enough of that without the artificial gas. But if, as others say, he is a Porter, employed here about the building to do certain duties in the daytime, and this burden is not imposed upon him now, then he should be paid if he does this work. I am in doubt as to what the man's position is.

The resolution was adopted.

PAY OF PAGE.

The Secretary read the next resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Controller of State shall issue his warrant, and the Treasurer shall pay to Willie Campbell the sum of eighteen dollars, for six days' pay as Page for services rendered before his appointment.

Mr. HUESTIS. I would like to inquire upon what theory the committee report that of officers who were elected some of them shall receive pay for their services before their election, and in other cases they shall receive no pay. I notice from the reading of the report that it is recommended that the Journal Clerk shall receive pay for the time that he served. I think Willie Campbell is just as much entitled to pay for his services as any one else, and I therefore hope that the recommendation of the committee will not be adopted.

MR. HILBORN. The law provides that the President may appoint four Pages. We have already paid four Pages. The Convention acted upon the proposition that the then presiding officer, the Governor, had designated these particular persons. It is quite possible that a large number of gentlemen, wishing to show their peculiar qualifications, got permission to come on the floor and did serve during the organization. Some of them were successful, and others not. Having paid for the four Pages which the law allowed, if we should pay this boy—and by the way, he is a very worthy boy—I fear we might have a little army of bills of this kind. We regret very much that we could not pay this boy, but we think it might amount to a considerable sum if we adopted that rule of paying all the young gentlemen who served during the organization.

MR. ESTEE. When I introduced the resolution, I did so because I was informed by Dr. Cluness that the Governor had told him that he designated him as one of the Pages of this body during its organization. I know that the boy did the duty. If he did not do it under the law, I shall not ask that it be paid. I am informed that the Governor did designate him as one of the Pages. I know he did his duty, and I think if he was so designated that he is entitled to his pay.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to know when we are going to see the last of these resolutions to pay Pages appointed by the Governor during the organization of this House. When are we going to see the end of it? Is this the last, or is this the beginning? In the first place, I don't think the Governor had any right to appoint any such officers, but if we can get some information as to when it shall stop ——

THE PRESIDENT. The committee recommend the indefinite postponement of the resolution, and the question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. HALE. I would like to inquire whether the Governor did appoint this boy or not.

MR. TURNER. He informed me that he did not appoint a single person, but he told them they might come here, as many of them as pleased, and take their chances by showing how well they could do the work. That is what the Governor stated to me, and the record bears out this statement. We have already paid four, which is all that the law allows us.

The resolution was lost.

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS' CLERK.

The SECRETARY read the next resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That P. K. Keene be and he is hereby appointed Clerk of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and his pay shall be the same as Minute Clerk, payable out of the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. That resolution is contrary to rule seventy-five, and is therefore out of order.

STATIONERY.

MR. LARKIN offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That each member of this Convention and each standing committee shall be allowed stationery to the value of ten dollars.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is not in order at present.

REPORT.

MR. ESTEE, from the Committee on Incorporations other than Municipal:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Corporations, other than Municipal, report back to this Convention resolution number two hundred and five, introduced by Mr. Joyce, and respectfully suggest that the same be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department. Respectfully,

M. M. ESTEE, Chairman.

So ordered.

MR. ESTEE, from the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a clerk or copyist is necessary for the Committee on Incorporations other than Municipal, and the Convention is requested to allow said committee to elect a clerk at a compensation of five dollars for each day when actually employed by said committee.

Referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

EXCUSED.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I ask leave to make a request in reference to these standing committees. I find that I am appointed on four or five, and I am summoned on four committees at the same time. It is impossible for me to attend to the duties of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, on Corporations, on Chinese, and on State and County Boundaries, each one of which has summoned me to appear in session with them after the adjournment. It is a physical impossibility. I find other gentlemen only on one committee. I have spoken to Mr. Cross, of Nevada, whose ideas and views correspond with my own, and I ask that I be dropped from the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, and that Mr. Cross be appointed. I wish to attend as much as I can to the sessions of the committees, therefore I make a motion to that effect.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman from San Francisco asks to be excused from service on the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. If there be no objection, he will be excused. It is so ordered. The Secretary will read the next resolution, from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

JOURNAL CLERK.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Controller be and he is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrant for forty dollars in favor of G. K. McStay, for services rendered in writing up the Journal previous to his election.

MR. CROSS. Does Mr. McStay draw pay from the beginning of the session?

THE PRESIDENT. Only from the day of his election.

MR. HILBORN. I would state that he has drawn pay only since his election. He had to write up the Journal from the commencement of the session and this is to give him pay for that service.

MR. BURT. I would like to ask whether Mr. McStay did this work previous to his appointment or since. If the work has been done since, it seems to me that we are paying him for it.

MR. HILBORN. I do not think that the gentlemen in this body understand it. During the organization we had no Journal Clerk. A Minute Clerk kept the minutes on rough sheets of paper. Nobody was authorized to write them up in the Journal for five days; then we elected Mr. McStay, Journal Clerk, and he had to go to work and write up the Journal from the start. In other words, he had to do five days' extra work. Since that time we pay him eight dollars each day. He has had to write up the Journal five days for which he has got no compensation.

MR. TOWNSEND. Did not this Convention pay one man for that work?

MR. HILBORN. The minutes were kept by young Dobbins.

MR. GREGG. I would ask whether he was five days writing up these minutes.

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a question of information. Do we pay our Minute Clerks and Secretaries at the desk for every day of the session, the same as the members? Now, for instance, are our Secretaries and Clerks paid for this two days' adjournment, or simply for the time they are at work. If these gentlemen are paid for every day, I think it is out of place to bring in a bill for five days' work.

MR. EAGON. I offered that resolution, sir, for the purpose of paying Mr. McStay while he was not the Journal Clerk of this house, as I understood it; but whether he was or not, whether he did the work previous to or since his election, he is allowed under the law eight dollars a day for writing up the Journal of this body. He was elected five days after this house had been in session. The Journals, or the matter he had to copy into the Journals, had accumulated there, and he had to write them into the Journals. He done five days' work for this body for which he has received no compensation whatever, if he only gets pay from the time he was elected. Now, sir, his work is principally at night. He has to come here in the evening and get the minutes from the Minute Clerk, and work late in the night to have the Journals ready to be read on the next morning. This, I have no doubt, cost him some extra expense in order to have the Journals written up. He had to employ additional help, so I am informed, and it is nothing more than right that he should have pay the same as other officers who performed services here.

MR. REDDY. It seems to me that this Convention has already established a precedent that the salaries shall commence on the day of the appointment or election of officers of this Convention. It has just been established in the case of Willie Campbell. It is well known to every member on this floor that this little boy, for six long days, rendered faithful service here. No one finds any fault with him, and yet when he puts in his claim for pay the Convention votes and says: "We have accepted your labor, but in view of the economy necessary for this State to practice, we will accept the labor of this little fellow, and we will not pay him." Now, perhaps, Mr. Campbell is not old enough yet to have that principle recognized which declares that the laborer is always worthy of his hire. But, in this case now pending, it seems to me that there is a strong desire to pay a man for labor performed five days before his appointment. Now, if we are to proceed upon a principle and be bound by the precedents which we ourselves establish, I see no reason why this gentleman should receive pay when it is refused to this little boy. If he does, I should think that it would be proper to reconsider our action in the case of little Willie.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. I would inquire whether Mr. McStay was appointed by the Governor to officiate in that capacity.

The resolution was lost.

NOTICES.

MR. EDGERTON. I desire to give notice that the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department will meet at one o'clock P. M. to-day, in the Supreme Court room. The meeting is called for the purpose of considering the question of eligibility of Judge Fawcett, and it is desirable that every member of the committee attend.

THE PRESIDENT. I am requested to give notice that the Committee on Education will meet at two o'clock to-day, in room number fifty-five.

MR. CAMPBELL. The Committee on Executive Department will meet in room number fifty-five immediately after the adjournment of the Convention.

COUNTY AND TOWN GOVERNMENTS.

MR. SHAFTER, by leave of the Convention, introduced out of order the following amendment to article eleven, section four, of the existing Constitution:

SECTION 4. The Legislature shall establish a system of county and town governments, which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable throughout the State. Each county of the State shall be divided into so many compactly located towns as may be deemed necessary, not less than three; provided, that after three have been formed, no additional town shall be made containing less than thirty-six square miles. Each town shall be known as the town of ——, and may sue and be sued by such title. In each town there shall be elected, annually, one Supervisor, one Town Clerk, one Assessor, one Overseer of Highways, one Overseer of the Poor, one Constable (who shall also be Collector of Taxes), and one Justice of the Peace. The Supervisor of each town shall constitute a Board of Supervisors for that county, and shall assemble at the Courthouse thereof, on the first —— in ——, of each year, and proceed to audit the accounts of said county, examine the books of the Assessors, regulate and equalize the valuation of property, fix the county levies for the ensuing year, apportion the same among the various towns, and perform such other duties as shall be prescribed by law. It shall be the duty of each town to provide for the education of all its inhabitants, by maintaining proper free schools, to provide for paupers resident therein, and for the building and maintenance of necessary bridges and highways; and all taxes paid in such towns for these purposes shall be expended therein. The Legislature, at the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall provide for carrying into effect this article, and may thereafter give full effect to the same.

Read and referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

CHINESE.

Mr. MILLER, by leave of the Convention, introduced out of order the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to Chinese:

Section —. The Legislature shall have power to enact all needful laws, and to prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of alien vagrants, paupers, criminals, and invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous to the well-being and peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure to comply with such conditions.

Read and referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

LICENSE TAX ON CORPORATIONS.

Mr. LARKIN, by leave of the Convention, introduced out of order the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to a license tax upon the capital stock of corporations:

Section —. All corporations incorporated under the laws of this State, or doing business in this State, shall pay an annual license to the State, in a sum not exceeding one per cent. upon their capital stock.

Sec. —. The Legislature shall pass laws to enforce the above section.

Read and referred to Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

NOTICES.

Mr. EDGERTON. The Chairmen of all the committees are requested to meet here immediately after the adjournment.

Mr. OVERTON. The Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings will meet in the Sergeant-at-Arms' room immediately after the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT.

On motion of Mr. Edgerton, at twelve o'clock and twenty minutes A. M. the Convention adjourned.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

Sacramento, Friday, October 18th, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at ten o'clock A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I have a memorial from a number of taxpayers on the subject of local option, which I desire to have referred to the Committee on Legislative Department. I also ask that the petition received on the same subject from the same locality, on Wednesday last, and referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

MEMORIAL ACCOMPANYING LOCAL OPTION PETITION.

To the President and Members of the Constitutional Convention:

On behalf of the petition accompanying this memorial, transmitted herewith, your memorialists would most respectfully represent that the proposition embodied in the prayer of your petitioners, to wit: "The Legislature shall, at its first session, enact a law whereby the qualified voters of any county, voting precinct, town or city, by a majority vote, from time to time, may determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited within the prescribed limits," is identical with a clause presented by the Constitutional Convention of the State of Texas, and ratified by the people of that great commonwealth.

The proposition presented raises but a single issue before your honorable body, to wit: the expediency of the local prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors. In this statement we assume that the inherent right of the people to regulate or to prohibit by law, the said traffic, will not be denied. The principle which commends the proposition brought before you by this petition is, that it refers the question of the expediency of prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors to the people. This principle is in consonance with the very genius of republican institutions. The people of separate localities should have the right to determine for themselves, as to whether the sale of intoxicating drink is inimical to the best interests of their respective communities. This application of the principle of local sovereignty is not new, but extends already to other questions of local character. We assume that those citizens interested in the sale of intoxicating beverages, cannot reasonably object to the adoption of this proposition. No good citizen will demand protection in the right to engage in a business which, in the judgment of a majority of his neighbors, is demoralizing to the neighborhood; and if the traffic in liquors is not destructive of the morals and good order of a community, these separate communities may safely be trusted with such determination of the question as the facts warrant. In the opinion of your memorialists, any opposition to the proposition on the part of those engaged in the traffic in liquors must be based upon the ground, that should the proposition be incorporated into the Constitution, many communities would decide against the continuation of the traffic. This is in effect an admission that in all such communities the traffic is now carried on against the enlightened judgment and moral conscience of a majority of the people resident in such communities. The proposition herewith presented, if adopted, would relegate the whole question to the arbitration of the ballot box; and representing those who entertain the opinion that the traffic in intoxicating drinks is destructive of the best and highest interests of the commonwealth, we cheerfully submit the grave question involved to this high arbitrament. To deny the prayer of this petition will, in the opinion of your petitioners, be in effect a denial of a sacred right. The right to determine what is necessary and appropriate to accomplish the ends of government, establish order, and promote the general welfare of society, resides in the people, and all we ask is, that this right shall be recognized in the determination of the issues arising out of contending opinions concerning the character and moral tendencies of the unrestricted traffic in intoxicating liquors. The nature of the proposition herewith presented is such as to absolve us from the necessity of presenting any considerations or arguments tending to establish the expediency of prohibiting the liquor traffic. We have no data upon which to found the assumption that in practice, the proposition presented would result in such prohibition; the result would be dependent upon the will of the majority of the voters in the local subdivisions named. But it is obvious that the perpetuity or prohibition of the traffic will depend upon the verdict of the people, in whom resides the right to determine the necessity or reasonableness of all prohibitory laws.

And as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. President: I think the proper committee for the reference of these petitions is the Committee on Township Organizations. It is proposed to give to each particular township the right to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors, and the proper committee would be the Committee on Township Organization, and I move its reference to that committee.

Mr. HUESTIS. I have no objection, if that is the proper committee.

The PRESIDENT. There being no objections it is so referred.

Mr. WELLER. I desire to present the following memorial, signed by a large number of citizens, in relation to quicksilver mines, and ask to have it referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation:

The County of Santa Clara, in addition to its naturally rich agricultural advantages, makes a very important show in the extensive product of quicksilver from the two mines within its limits. From these, the New Almaden and Guadalupe, are procured nearly one half of the whole of this article manufactured in California; the other principal mines being the Redington in Napa County, Sulphur Bank and Great Western in Lake, Oakland in Sonoma, and New Idria in Fresno.

We have before us a tabulated statement of the actual number of flasks shipped from each of these mines during a period of two years, and an approximation of this current year's product, judging by the returns of the first six months, the result of which appears to be, that during that time the Redington produced 25,494 flasks, on which the average assessment is $15 89 each; Sulphur Bank, 30,849 flasks; average assessment, $10 08; Great Western, 14,266 flasks; average assessment, $9 84; Oakland, 4,687 flasks; average assessment, $7 11; New Idria, 17,846 flasks; average assessment, $10 74; Guadalupe, 18,952 flasks; average assessment, $13 36. So that the six mines produced 112,094 flasks in all, and were assessed on an average of $11.90 per flask. The returns of the largest mine, the New Almaden, are for the same period, 56,488 flasks, on which the average assessment is $17 66, forming rather more than one half of the total production of the other mines named above. We notice also, that the valuations of mines, lands, improvements, and personal property on the first six named mines amount for three years to $1,334,894 in all; whereas the similar valuations on the New Almaden are $997,645. Now, with such figures before us, there is need of some satisfactory explanation as to the great disproportion which the burdens on the New Almaden show to those of the other six mines enumerated, in proportion to the product of each of them. According to our understanding of these returns in our possession, there is a clear over assessment on the sundry valuations for the three years against the New Almaden mine of about $325,000, as compared with the other establishments, and of $5 76 on the average assessment per flask. This appears to be discrimination against the former out of reason, and of course places it at the greatest disadvantage in the manufacture of quicksilver when compared with the lighter taxation imposed on its competitors. It seems, therefore, opposed not only to all sound sense, but to fair commercial policy, that such an unequal distribution of assessments should be allowed to continue. The public are also interested in guarding so important an industry from being impeded by an extortionate drain on its advantageous development.

* Known production for first six months, 1878, doubled to make comparative yearly statement.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. THOMPSON, by leave, offered the following:

Resolved, That the President, by consent of the Convention, appoint Porters to take charge of the committee rooms.

Referred to Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, offered the following:

Resolved, That the Adjutant-General be requested to report to the Convention a detailed statement of the expenses of the Military Department of the State for the last two years.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. STRONG offered the following:

Resolved, That P. H. Keene be and he is hereby allowed a per diem from the twenty-eighth day of September to the seventeenth day of October, for services as Clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms, to be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention.

Referred to Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

RESOLUTION AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. MARTIN, of Alameda, offered the following resolution, in reference to the School and University Endowment Funds:

Resolved, That all losses to the Permanent School or University Endowment Fund of this State, which shall have been occasioned by the defalcation, mismanagement, or fraud of the agents or officers, or officers of the State, controlling or managing the same, shall be audited by the proper authorities of the State. The amount so audited shall be a permanent funded indebtedness against the State in favor of the respective fund sustaining the loss, upon which not less than six per cent. annual interest shall be paid.

Referred to the Committee on State and Municipal Indebtedness.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

MR. WINANS, from the Committee on Education, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Education beg leave to report back to the Convention amendment number one hundred and sixty-three, introduced by Mr. Tully, proposing an educational qualification for the right of suffrage, and respectfully ask its reference to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

The report was adopted, and the matter so referred.

MR. DEAN, from the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, to whom was referred proposed amendment number one hundred and forty-seven, introduced by Mr. Rhodes, creating a Board to supervise and prescribe the duties, powers, and liabilities of certain corporations, and for other purposes, beg leave to report the same back to the Convention, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

The proposition was so referred.

MR. MILLER, from the Committee on Chinese, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Chinese, to whom was referred the proposed amendment to the Constitution, number sixty-four, which is in these words: "Section —. The further immigration of Chinese to this State is hereby prohibited. Municipal authorities in the ports in this State to which they are destined shall have power to prevent their debarkation, and to reembark them if landed," have had the same under consideration, and now beg leave to report the same back to the Convention, with the recommendation that it be not adopted, for the reason that in the opinion of your committee the proposed amendment is in substance intended to regulate the affairs of commerce by the State, and is therefore in conflict with the Constitution of the United States, which delegates to the National Government the exclusive power to regulate commerce. MILLER, Chairman.

The proposition was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

RESOLUTION OUT OF ORDER.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I ask leave to send up the following resolution out of order:

Resolved, That M. A. Cook be appointed Night Watchman of this Convention, at a per diem of five dollars.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is out of order, under rule seventy-five.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I would like to ask that this report of the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses be taken from the table and disposed of—that part of it in reference to Night Watchman. The report of the committee was to the effect that a Night Watchman was necessary. They also reported in favor of the claims of a certain individual for that office. But rule seventy-seven disposes of that part of the report, and leaves the appointment with the President of the body.

THE PRESIDENT. The question will be on the adoption of the report, so far as pertains to the office of Night Watchman.

The motion being put, the Convention refused to adopt the report, on a standing vote: ayes, 58; noes, 59.

MR. BARBOUR, from the Committee on Chinese Immigration, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Chinese Immigration, to whom was referred proposed amendment number one hundred and thirty-one, introduced by Mr. Kleine, beg leave to report the same back, with the recommendation that it be not adopted, as, in the opinion of your committee, the State has not such power.

Also, the following, by MR. KLEINE:

Resolved, That a per capita tax of two hundred and fifty dollars should be levied upon each coolie immigrant, with the request that it be referred to the Committee of the Whole.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I desire to offer the following proposed amendment to section seventeen, of article four, of the Constitution.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order, unless by unanimous consent. The Chair hears no objection, and the gentleman will send up his proposition.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Proposed addition to section seventeen, article four:

No law shall take effect until ninety days after the first general election succeeding its passage. Every law shall be designated by a number. At any general election next succeeding any session of the Legislature, any person voting at such election may place upon his ballot the words, "Against Law No. ——," giving in figures the number of any law or laws passed at the session of the Legislature next preceding such general election; and if a majority of all the votes polled shall be against any law so passed at the next preceding session of the Legislature, then such law so voted against shall not take effect at all.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

Mr. WICKES, by unanimous consent, introduced the following amendments to sections one and two, article one, of the Constitution:

First—All men are endowed with an equal measure of liberty, and subject to an equal provision of restraint. They are, in fact, equal before the law. They may enjoy and defend life and liberty, acquire, possess, and protect property, and seek security and happiness by all lawful means.

Second—The people are endowed with political power. Government is divinely instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter and reform the same whenever the public good seems to require it.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

SUFFRAGE.

Section —. After the year eighteen hundred and eighty, no person who shall become a citizen of this State under the naturalization laws of the United States, and no minor who shall have attained his majority after that, shall be entitled to exercise the right of suffrage at any election, State, county, or municipal, who is unable to read and write in one known language.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. WILSON, of San Francisco. Mr. President: At the request of the Judicary Committee, I ask leave to send up the following resolution, and ask its adoption:

Resolved, That the Judiciary Committee be and they are hereby authorized to employ a clerk, at a compensation of five dollars per day for each day employed.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President: In order to find out what committee clerks are necessary, I offer the following:

Resolved, That all committees requiring clerks shall notify the Convention immediately.

Mr. EDGERTON. I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion prevailed, and the resolution went to the table.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move that when the Convention adjourns, it adjourns to meet on Monday, at two o'clock.

The PRESIDENT. I have been requested to state that the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal, will meet immediately after adjournment in room fifty-six; the Committee on Military Affairs will meet immediately after adjournment in room ten; the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights will meet after recess.

Mr. McCALLUM. I move to amend, until to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT. That will be the order any way.

Mr. McCALLUM. Then I move to lay the motion on the table.

Mr. WHITE. I second the motion.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. It is the first time I ever heard of a motion to adjourn being tabled.

The PRESIDENT. This is a motion that the Convention adjourn to a particular time when it does adjourn.

Mr. ESTEE. I made the motion at the request of other gentlemen. It was done at the request of committees, and I will withdraw the motion if the Convention does not desire to adjourn.

Mr. EDGERTON. I renew the motion, that when this Convention adjourns it adjourn until Monday, at two o'clock, and I would like to hear some good reason why we should not.

Mr. LARKIN. Mr. President: With the consent of the house, and at the request of the distinguished gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, I would say that there are a number of members of this Convention who have been absent on business most of the time since this Convention was called, and they have returned to visit us, and I desire them to stay here a few days longer. If we adjourn they will go to their homes again and we shall be deprived of their company. I think there is sufficient business without adjourning. The work of the committees is now proceeding, and may proceed without adjourning.

Mr. EDGERTON. Mr. President: In reply to the distinguished gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, I would say that the very object of this motion to adjourn is to enable all the members to meet in committee without interruption, and spend all day to-morrow at work. Why we should meet here and go through the ceremonies, talking about Night Watchmen, spending two hundred dollars or three hundred dollars, instead of going to work to-morrow and putting in a good day's work, I do not see.

Mr. CAPLES. In answer to the distinguished gentleman from Sacramento, I will state that he knows, and every member knows, that by adjourning over Saturday a majority of the members will return to their homes, thus involving the loss of a whole day, and I protest against it. It is an absolute waste of time, and every gentleman knows that our time is limited; that it is too short at best; that it is an open question whether we will be able to get through with the labors devolving upon the Convention, even if we should devote our entire time to work. Yet gentlemen seem to be willing to override the sense of this Convention for the sake of getting home. The gentleman knows there will be no committee work done if we adjourn over until Monday, and I protest against it in the interest of honesty, in the interest of the taxpayers of the State of California.

Mr. NOEL. Mr. President: I am opposed also to any useless waste of time, but for that very reason I am in favor of adjourning over until Monday. It is well known by every gentleman on this floor that there is nothing for the Convention to do, that the work of the Convention is in the hands of the various standing committees. We will meet here to-morrow morning and spend half the day, and nothing accomplished. If we have an adjournment these committees can go to work at their business, preparing their reports so that next week we may have something to do, something that will accomplish definite, positive results. This meeting every morning as we have for two days past, calling the roll, reading the Journal, amounts to nothing, and costs the people of this State hundreds of dollars. It will expedite business, and therefore I shall vote for an adjournment.

The PRESIDENT. The gentleman from Sacramento moves, that when this Convention adjourns, it do adjourn until Monday at two o'clock.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, Caples, and McCallum.

The roll was called, and the motion was lost by the following vote:

AYES.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM STATE OFFICERS.

THE PRESIDENT. I have here a communication from the Secretary of State, in answer to a resolution adopted by this Convention asking for information, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the communication, as follows:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
SACRAMENTO, October 19th, 1878.

To the President and members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Resolution No. —, adopted by your honorable body, on Thursday, the seventeenth instant, requesting me to furnish to the Convention all information in my possession upon the following subjects, to wit:

First—The number and classification of all corporations other than municipal now existing in the State of California, and formed under the laws of this State;

Second—The aggregate amount of capital stock of all said corporations, and the aggregate amount of capital stock of each class thereof;

Third—A declared statement of the principal place of business and location of the principal office of each corporation;

Fourth—A detailed statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by said corporations.

The various subjects enumerated in the foregoing resolution upon which information is sought, are recorded in books kept in my office for that special purpose, and in order that the Convention may have the desired information at as early a day as possible, I herewith place at your service the records of all corporations on file in my office, and which are in as condensed a form as the information sought by the resolution would warrant.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,
THOMAS BECK, Secretary of State.

The communication was accompanied by all the books of record of corporations on file in the office of the Secretary of State.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: As the mover of the resolution is not present, I move that the matter be laid on the table until he is here.

MR. MCFARLAND. I would ask if the report does not lie on the table now. [Laughter.]

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir; does the gentleman desire to have it read? [Laughter.]

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. NOEL. Mr. President: I desire to offer a resolution:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be returned to the Secretary of State for the promptness and dispatch with which he has complied with the order of the Convention directing him to furnish all information in his possession in relation to corporations other than municipal.

Resolved, That five hundred copies of such report be printed and laid on the desks of the members of this Convention. [Laughter.]

MR. MCCALLUM. I move that it be referred to the member from the rural districts (referring to a large owl that inhabited the chamber). [Laughter.]

THE PRESIDENT. It will be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

Mr. TULLY offered the following:

Resolved, That five thousand dollars of the money appropriated by the State to defray the expenses of this Convention be placed in the hands of the Hon. Thomas Beck, Secretary of State, to defray his expenses while engaged in compiling the information required by the resolution now under consideration.

THE PRESIDENT. It will go to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

PROPOSITIONS AND RESOLUTIONS RELATING TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I ask leave to introduce a proposition to amend the Constitution.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the gentleman will have leave. The Chair hears none.

THE SECRETARY read the proposed amendment:

PROPOSITION RELATIVE TO ALL MONEYS BEING MADE LEGAL TENDER.

Resolved, That the following proposition be inserted in the Constitution, and numbered section —:

SECTION —. All moneys of the United States, made legal tender in the payment of private debts, shall be received at its face value in payment of taxes, salaries, or other public dues authorized to be collected by the laws of this State.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

MR. REED presented the following report from the Committee on Corporations:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Corporations, to whom was referred resolution number three hundred and four, beg leave to report the same back, and ask that it be referred back to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

Also, resolution number three hundred and seventy eight, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

CHAS. F. REED, for Committee.

So referred.

MR. HILBORN presented the following report from the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred resolution number forty-nine, introduced by Mr. Berry, to authorize the Committee on Legislative Department to employ a clerk, have had the same under consideration, and herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be adopted.

Also, resolution number fifty, introduced by Mr. Estee, authorizing the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal to employ a clerk, have had the same under consideration, and report the same back, and recommend that it be adopted.

Also, resolution number seventy-four, offered by Mr Wilson, authorizing the Judiciary Committee to employ a clerk, and herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be adopted.

We have also had under consideration resolution number fifty-three, to allow P. H. Keene compensation for services as Clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms, and report the same back, and recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

Your committee have also had under consideration resolution number forty-eight, introduced by Mr. Noel, authorizing the Committee on Enrollment to employ a clerk, and report the same back, and recommend that the resolution lie on the table until such time as the Convention shall decide that this committee needs the services of a clerk.

HILBORN, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

MR. EAGON, from the Committee on Right of Suffrage, presented the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on the Right of Suffrage beg leave to report back resolution number forty-three, introduced by Mr. Tully, and resolution number eighty-seven, introduced by Mr. Davis, and request that they be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

So referred.

PROPOSITIONS AND RESOLUTIONS RELATING TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I ask leave to introduce a proposition, relative to taxation.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the gentleman will have leave. The Chair hears none.

REGARDING TAXATION.

Proposed substitute for section thirteen, of article eleven, of the present Constitution:

SECTION —. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All property in the State, including debts, credits, and choses in action, and excluding growing crops, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law. Every mortgage, deed of trust, or other contract or agreement, whether oral or written, which secures any existing debt or liability, shall, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an estate or interest in the property affected by such mortgage, deed, or other contract, and shall be assessed accordingly.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

IN RELATION TO TAXATION.

MR. RHODES, by consent, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

Resolved, That the following sections be appropriately numbered and incorporated in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. Taxation shall be uniform throughout the State. All property in this State (money, bonds, mortgages, and solvent debts included), other than property exempt under the laws of the United States, and that belonging to the State and to the several counties, municipal corporations, public schools, and school districts therein, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law, except as herein otherwise specially provided.

Sec. —. In assessing property for the purpose of taxation, small tracts of land under cultivation shall not be assessed at a higher value per acre than contiguous lands, in large tracts, of equal productive capacity and corresponding local advantages. Buildings, and other like improvements, shall be assessed separately from the land. The term "property," as used in this section, shall not be construed to embrace farm produce until the same is harvested and susceptible of manual delivery. Every person, and every incorporated company in this State may, if he or it so elects, present to the Assessor, when he proceeds to assess the property of such person or incorporated company, a verified list of his or its creditors, or of so many of them as he or it may determine, excluding all who are not residents and taxpayers of this State, and may ask the Assessor to deduct the amount of indebtedness, as shown by such list, from the assessed value of his property. The verification shall be by oath, or affirmation, and to the effect that each item in said list is a bona fide existing debt, entitled to no abatement by reason of the payment of any portion thereof; that it is not a contingent liability, nor a liability as indorser or guarantor for any other person, company, or association. If the Assessor shall be satisfied that said list is in all respects correct, he shall deduct the amount of indebtedness therein shown from the value of the property assessed to such person or corporation, and the remainder shall be the sum upon which tax shall be levied, subject, however, to revision by the Board of Supervisors, sitting as a Board of Equalization.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

Mr. TINNIN, by consent, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, regulating water and water rights:

The right to divert the unappropriated waters for mining, manufacturing, agricultural, or domestic purposes, from any stream or lake in this State, shall never be denied.

Referred to Committee on Water and Water Rights.

TO REGULATE WATER RENTS.

Mr. TINNIN, by consent, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, to regulate water rents:

Whenever any person, persons, or corporation shall offer for rent or hire any water for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, or domestic purposes, the Board of Supervisors in the county where it is offered shall fix the maximum price for said water.

Referred to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

TO REGULATE WATER PRIVILEGES.

Mr. TINNIN, by consent, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, regulating water privileges:

For the purpose of making ditches, canals, flumes, tunnels, drains, reservoirs, or aqueducts, for mining, agricultural, domestic, or manufacturing purposes, the right of eminent domain shall never be denied.

Referred to the Committee on Water and Water Rights.

THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Mr. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Judicial Department:

Section —. There shall be one County Court for each county of the State, and there shall be at least one Justice of the County Court for each county; and in counties where more than one Justice is necessary to perform judicial duties there shall be as many Justices as shall be sufficient, but each Justice shall try causes and questions at issue, and the Legislature shall direct the method of the distribution of business among the Justices.

Sec. —. There shall be provided in each county as many forums, or Court-rooms, as there are Justices of the County Court, and the forums shall be distinguished by enumeration. The assignment of particular Justices to the different forums shall be regulated by law, but nothing shall prevent the Justices from the freedom of interchange.

Sec. —. In the City and County of San Francisco a particular forum or forums shall be designated for probate business exclusively, also one or more for criminal cases exclusively, and the remainder for civil causes exclusively. The Legislature shall prescribe the manner of distributing the calendar of causes to the different forums, with full scope for redistribution and transfers. The Legislature shall have power to apply the provisions of this section to any other county whose growth and population shall render it necessary.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

REMOVAL OF THE CAPITOL.

Mr. SMITH, of Santa Clara, introduced the following provision for promoting the health of State officers and members of the Legislature, and for securing the property and the archives of the State from destruction by floods:

The Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings be requested to inquire into the propriety of incorporating into the new Constitution section one, article eleven of the old Constitution, which reads as follows:

The first session of the Legislature shall be held at the Pueblo de San José, which place shall be the permanent seat of government until removed by law; provided, however, that two thirds of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature shall concur in the passage of such law.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

Mr. SCHELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, concerning the Judicial Department:

Resolved, That the following be incorporated in the new Constitution:

Sec. —. When a judgment or decree is reversed or affirmed by the Supreme Court, every point fairly arising upon the record of the case shall be considered and decided; and the reasons therefor shall be concisely stated in writing and preserved with the record of the case; and it shall be the duty of the Court to prepare a syllabus of the points adjudicated in each case concurred in by three of the Judges thereof, which shall be prefixed to the published report of the case.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

ABORTION.

Mr. DOWLING introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, entitled, "To eradicate the horrible crime of abortion:"

Article I.

Sec. —. The crime of abortion is hereby considered a felony, and punishable with State Prison for life.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

FUTURE AMENDMENTS.

Mr. BLACKMER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to future amendments:

Amend section one, of article ten, of present Constitution, by striking out, after the word "people," in the tenth line, the words "in such manner and," and after the word "prescribe," in the eleventh line, insert the following, "and such amendment or amendments shall be so prepared and distinguished, by numbers or otherwise, that they can be voted on separately, unless it shall be found impracticable to so distinguish them."

Amend section two, of article nine, by striking out, after the words "less than," in the eighth line, the words, "that of both branches of the Legislature," and insert the following, "eighty nor more than one hundred." Also, strike out after the word "rejection," in the eleventh line, to and inclusive of the words "against the new Constitution," in the thirteenth line, and insert the following: "The Constitution so submitted shall be voted on as a whole, but the Convention shall have power to submit separate articles on any subject, to be voted on separately, and should such separate article or articles, or any portion thereof, be approved by the people, they shall then be considered as a part of the Constitution of this State, and shall be incorporated therein in place of the article, section or sections, in the then existing Constitution, which relate to the same subject matter."

At the close of section two, add the following: "If, however, it is found that any article, section or sections, submitted separately, have been ratified by the people, the Executive of this State shall, by his proclamation, declare such article, section or sections, to be a part of the then existing Constitution of the State of California."

Referred to Committee on Future Amendments.

LOBBYING.

Mr. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to lobbying in the Legislature:

Any agent, attorney, or person that, during the sitting of the Legislature, attempts to influence, bias, or induce any member of the Legislature to vote for or against any measure or bill pending before the members thereof, shall be adjudged guilty of contempt, and, on proof, shall be punished as the Legislature may direct.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

ON TAXATION.

Mr. TUTTLE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to providing for an annual assessment:

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Section —. The Legislature shall provide by law for only one annual assessment or valuation of property for taxation for State, county, city, township, school, or any other municipal purposes. Legislatures shall meet once in four years.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

RELATIVE TO CORPORATIONS.

Mr. VACQUEREL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to corporations other than municipal:

Resolved, That in all elections for Directors or Managers of any incorporated company, each shareholder shall have the right to cast only one vote, either in person or by proxy, no matter how many shares he may possess; and that to have the right of voting said shareholder must have been in possession of one or more shares at least six months before elections take place. All elections in opposition to this section shall be unlawful.

Referred to the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. GRACE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to the Legislative Department:

Section —. The members of the Legislature shall receive a fixed salary, to be prescribed by law, which shall be in full for their services, and no other allowance or perquisite, either in payment of postage or otherwise, shall be made. Nor shall any change be made in such compensation during their term of office, but the Legislature shall provide for ratable deductions therefrom on account of unnecessary absence during its sessions.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

ABOLISHING THE OFFICE OF LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

MR. STEDMAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the abolishment of the office of Lieutenant-Governor:

Resolved, That the following section be inserted in the Constitution, in lieu of sections sixteen and seventeen of the present Constitution:

SECTION —. In case of the death or resignation of the Governor, or his removal from office, the Speaker of the Senate shall exercise the office of Governor until another Governor shall be duly qualified: but in such case another Governor shall be elected at the next general election.

Referred to the Committee on Executive Department.

A PENAL COLONY.

MR. CROSS introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the establishment of a penal colony:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. The Legislature shall have power, when it shall deem it best, to establish a penal colony upon an island adjacent to, or included within, the State of California, and to provide that all or any portion of the criminals of this State may be confined to prescribed limits upon such island, under such rules, and under the supervision of such officers as the Legislature may by statute prescribe.

Referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. Kelley, of Yolo, offered the following, referring to the owl:

WHEREAS, The daily sessions of this Convention are open, and the proceedings are daily reported by the press of the State, but no adequate means have been provided to ascertain the mode of conduct of delegates in the interval between regular sessions, and especially in the nighttime; and whereas, an appropriation for the per diem of Night Watchman would be antagonistic to the true spirit of retrenchment and reform; and whereas, an individual member of the tribe that has a peculiar fitness as a diviner of ways that are dark has entered this chamber, and voluntarily assumed the duties of Night Watchman;

Resolved, That he be permitted to remain undisturbed on his perch, to view, in his wisdom, the proceedings in and out of session, of this Convention.

[Laughter.]

THE PRESIDENT. It will be referred to the Committee of the Whole Convention.

MR. HILBORN offered the following:

Resolved, That our visitor be assigned a desk among the other reporters on the floor.

[Laughter.]

MR. EAGON offered the following:

Resolved, That the Controller of State be and he is hereby directed to draw his warrant in favor of James Saultry for one hundred and five dollars, for twenty-one days' services as Night Watchman, and the Treasurer to pay the same out of the appropriation for the expenses of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. FREEMAN. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

MR. EAGON. It would be proper to refer it to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

The motion to table prevailed.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move we now adjourn until three o'clock next Monday.

MR. CAPLES. I move to make it ten o'clock Monday.

The motion to adjourn until three o'clock Monday was lost on a standing vote—ayes, 42.

MR. LARKIN. I move we now adjourn.

MR. REYNOLDS. I move we adjourn until two o'clock Monday.

MR. FILCHER. I move to make it ten o'clock Monday.

THE PRESIDENT. At ten o'clock and forty minutes, the hour for adjournment having arrived, the Convention stands adjourned until ten o'clock Monday.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Monday, October 21st, 1878.

The Convention met at ten o'clock A. M. President pro tem., Belcher, in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. If there are no reports of committees, a motion to adjourn will be in order.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: There is a vacancy, caused by the absence of Mr. Berry, a delegate from Modoc and Siskiyou, and I have a resolution to offer on the subject:

WHEREAS, It has been suggested that there is now a vacancy in this Convention from the Counties of Modoc and Siskiyou, caused by the insanity of Mr. Berry, delegate elected by those counties; therefore,

Resolved, That this Convention, on Friday, the twenty-fifth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, at eleven o'clock, proceed to the election of some qualified person to fill such vacancy.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. I think the resolution should be referred to some appropriate committee.

MR. LARKIN. I would like to inquire whether Mr. Berry has resigned? Under the present circumstances, I think it is due to the gentleman and his family that this resolution should lie on the table.

MR. TINNIN. I second the motion to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion prevailed.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. BURT. Mr. President: I would ask leave to introduce a proposition out of order.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. If there is no objection the gentleman will have leave. The Chair hears none.

POWERS OF BOARDS OF SUPERVISORS.

MR. BURT, by consent, then introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, increasing the legislative powers of Boards of Supervisors:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties, municipal cities, and towns, shall have power to enact all laws relating to the local government of their respective counties and townships, and municipal cities and towns; provided, said laws shall not conflict with any general State laws; also to fix the salaries, and manner of payment, of all officials (except the Judiciary) of their several counties and townships, and municipal cities and towns.

Referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Committee on Public Buildings will meet immediately after adjournment.

AN EXPLANATION.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I have been requested by the Secretary of State to make an explanation. He has understood from some of the members of the Convention that they think he was guilty of some disrespect to the Convention in sending the volumes here on Saturday. He desires me to say that he intended no possible disrespect to the Convention, but he simply desired to demonstrate to the Convention the utter impossibility of affording the information desired. The fifty-four volumes are entirely filled with articles of incorporation; and besides this, there are about five hundred not recorded. They are coming in at the rate of four to ten a day. It would have required the service of the entire force of his office for three months to make up the information required by the resolution. He intended no disrespect whatever, but simply desired to demonstrate the utter impossibility of complying with the request.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I hope this matter will remain until the mover of the resolution is present.

MR. TERRY. I simply desired to say that he intended no disrespect to the Convention whatever.

MR. LARKIN. I hope this matter will remain until the mover of the resolution returns. This is a matter for this Convention to determine, and it is disgraceful in the extreme. Judge Hale, of Placer, introduced the resolution. After having had a consultation with him, I called on Mr. Beck, and he said the information should be furnished. For some reason, or for some motive or suggestion, he saw fit to insult the Convention by bringing those books here—not to us, but to the people of the State who called this Convention and sent us here, and I desire to have the matter laid over until Judge Hale is here. He had no right to take those books away. Those books should have been retained here until the Convention saw fit to remove them.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: The report made here was not disrespectful, but was entirely proper. The resolution called for the number of corporations, the date of organization, amount of capital stock, the names and residences of the incorporators, etc. They were contained in fifty-four volumes, filled with nothing else, and could not have been condensed in less than one quarter of that space. It would have occupied no less than one quarter of the space occupied in these books, and it was simply to demonstrate to the Convention that the information was contained there, and in almost as small a space as he could get it. I have made no motion, but simply make this explanation for the Secretary of State—that he intended no disrespect to the Convention.

MR. BLACKMER. I desire to give notice that the Committee on Future Amendments will meet after adjournment in the Supreme Court room.

MR. LARKIN. I give notice that the Committee on Privileges and Elections will meet immediately after adjournment in room fifty-nine.

MR. EDGERTON. I give notice that the Committee on Revenue and Taxation will meet in their room immediately after adjournment.

MR. ESTEE. The Committee on Corporations other than Municipal will meet immediately after adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT.

At ten o'clock and twenty-five minutes, on motion of Mr. Noel, the Convention adjourned.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Tuesday, October 22d, 1878.

The Convention met in regular session at ten o'clock A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE'S REPORT.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I ask leave of the Convention to introduce a resolution out of order.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution, as follows:

WHEREAS, Heretofore, to wit, on the seventeenth instant, this Convention, by resolution, duly requested the honorable the Secretary of State of California, who is the legal custodian of the records of all corporations other than municipal, which have been formed under the laws of this State, to be informed by a detailed statement to be made to the Convention, embracing the following points of inquiry, to wit: the total number and classification of all such corporations; the aggregate amount of capital stock of all, and the aggregate amount of capital stock of each class of such corporations; a statement in detail of the principal places of business, and a like statement of the location of the principal offices of such corporations; also, a like statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by all such corporations; and,

WHEREAS, Said Secretary of State did, subsequently, to wit, on the nineteenth instant, in nominal compliance with the request contained in said resolution, place on the desk of the Secretary of this Convention a large and cumbrous mass of books from his office, said to contain the record evidences of all the corporations mentioned in said resolution of inquiry, and by his accompanying reply to said resolution proffered said record books to this Convention as the most condensed and accurate reply he could make thereto; and,

WHEREAS, Both by reason of the existing legal necessity that said books should be kept and maintained exclusively in the office of said Secretary of State as public records, and the utter want of reasonable facilities on the part of this Convention to make abstracts therefrom, covering and embracing the matters of inquiry specified in said resolution, it is the sense of this Convention that the Secretary of State has not complied, in letter or in spirit, with the requests contained in said resolution; also, that it is still his reasonable duty to make such compliance to the extent of his ability; therefore,

Resolved, That said Secretary of State have leave to remove all such record books to their said proper place of custody, and that he is respectfully requested to furnish to this Convention, by a statement in writing, such reasonable information touching said corporations as expressed in said resolution heretofore adopted, or so much thereof as he shall be reasonably able to so furnish; and if from any cause he is not able, in whole or in part, to make such compliance, then to report to the Convention the cause of such disability.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I desire in this connection to make an explanation, which is in part of a personal nature. I hold in my hand the original resolution, which, upon my motion, was passed by this Convention on the seventeenth instant, and also the return, which I will shortly read, made by the Secretary of State, in which he inadvertently or otherwise falls into a grave mistake as to its contents. I desire to read for the information of the Convention the resolution:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of State be requested to furnish to this Convention all the information in his possession upon the following subjects, to wit: First—The number and classification of all the corporations other than municipal, now existing in the State of California, and formed under the laws of this State. Second—The aggregate amount of capital stock of all such corporations, and the aggregate amount of capital stock of each class thereof. Third—A detailed statement of the principal places of business and location of the principal offices of all such corporations. Fourth—A detailed statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by all said corporations."

This resolution, Mr. President, being introduced on the day I stated, being carefully read to the Convention, was adopted without any amendment, or any motion to amend, so far as I know, and without any objection on the part of any member, so far as I could hear. On Saturday, the nineteenth instant, I was absent, unfortunately, from the deliberations of the Convention, on leave, however, but I see that the Secretary makes this reply, as published in the Sacramento Record-Union: [Reads.]

"The President: I have here a communication from the Secretary of State, in answer to a resolution asking for information, which the Secretary will read:

"STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
"SACRAMENTO, October 19, 1878.

"To the President and members of the Convention:

"GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Resolution No. ——, adopted by your honorable body on Thursday, October seventeenth, requesting me to furnish to the Convention all information in my possession upon the following subjects: First—The number and classification of all corporations other than municipal, now existing in the State of California, and formed under the laws of the State of California. Second—The aggregate amount of capital stock of all such corporations. Third—A declared statement of all the principal places of business, and the location of the principal offices of each corporation. Fourth—A detailed statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by said corporations. The various subjects included in the foregoing resolution, upon which information is sought, are recorded in the books kept in my office for that special purpose; and in order that the Convention may have the desired information at as early a day as possible, I hereby place at your service the records of all corporations on file in my office, and they are in as condensed a form as the information sought by the resolution would warrant.

"I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

"THOMAS BECK, Secretary of State."

Mr. President, I desire to call attention to the fact that if this is his response to the calls of this Convention, it is grossly inaccurate. This may be a typographical error; but I am assured by the Secretary at the desk that the Secretary of State was furnished with a correct copy of the resolution introduced. That, however, is a proposition of little moment.

Now, Mr. President, I desire to read a little further from the proceedings of this Convention occurring on that morning, to show what was the temper, the evident disposition, and the evident intent of this Convention, and the purpose of this report so made by the Secretary of State.

["The books, consisting of some fifty bound volumes, had been previously placed on a large table at the Clerk's desk.]

"MR. LARKIN said: Mr. President: As the mover of the resolution is not present, I move the matter lie on the table until he returns.

"MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I would ask if the report does not lie on the table now.

"THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir. Does the Convention desire the report read? [Laughter]," says the reporter.

"MR. NOEL offered the following:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be returned to the Secretary of State for the promptness and dispatch with which he has complied with the order of the Convention directing him to furnish all information in his possession in relation to corporations other than municipal.

"Resolved, That five hundred copies of such report be printed and laid on the desks of the members of this Convention. [Laughter.]

"Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

"MR. McFARLAND then said: I move the matter be referred to the member from the rural district. [Referring to a large owl which had during the night previous entered the Chamber, and which all day sat perched on the cornice above the President's desk, looking solemn and wise.]

MR. McFARLAND. Will the gentleman allow me to correct that? It was my friend from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, who made that motion.

MR. HALE. I accept the gentleman's explanation with great pleasure.

MR. TULLY then offered the following:

"Resolved, That five thousand dollars of the money appropriated by the State to defray the expenses of this Convention be placed in the hands of the honorable Thomas Beck, Secretary of State, to defray his expenses while engaged in compiling the information required by the resolution now under consideration."

"THE PRESIDENT. It will go to the Committee on Contingent Expenses."

There the matter seems to have been permitted to drop for the day. Again, I observe from the report of this Convention that the gentleman from San Joaquin yesterday rose to make an explanation on behalf of and in the name of the Secretary of State, which I read now, because it seems to be an authorized statement of the Secretary of State, and it is from that standpoint that I desire to call attention to it. It is as follows:

"MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I have been requested by the Secretary of State to make an explanation. He has understood from some of the members of the Convention that they think he was guilty of some disrespect to the Convention in sending the volumes here on Saturday. He desires me to say that he intended no possible disrespect to the Convention, but he simply desired to demonstrate to the Convention the utter impossibility of affording the information desired. The fifty-four volumes are entirely filled with articles of incorporation; and, besides this, there are about five hundred not recorded. They are coming in at the rate of four to ten a day. It would have required the service of the entire force of his office for three months to make up the information required by the resolution. He intended no disrespect whatever, but simply desired to demonstrate the utter impossibility of complying with the request."

Mr. Larkin then spoke as follows:

"MR. LARKIN. I hope this matter will remain until the mover of the resolution returns. This is a matter for this Convention to determine, and it is disgraceful in the extreme. Judge Hale, of Placer, introduced the resolution. After having had a consultation with him, I called on Mr. Beck, and he said the information should be furnished. For some reason, or from some motive or suggestion, he saw fit to insult the Convention by bringing those books here—not to us, but to the people of the State who called this Convention and sent us here, and I desire to have the matter laid over until Judge Hale is here. He had no right to take those books away. Those books should have been retained here until the Convention saw fit to remove them."

Then the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry, is reported as saying:

"MR. TERRY. Mr. President: The report made here was not disrespectful, but was entirely proper. The resolution called for the number of corporations, the date of organization, amount of capital stock, the names and residences of the incorporators, etc. They were contained in fifty-four volumes, filled with nothing else, and could not have been condensed in less than one quarter of that space. It would have occupied no less than one quarter of the space occupied in these books, and it was simply to demonstrate to the Convention that the information was contained there, and in almost as small a space as he could get it. I have made no motion, but simply make this explanation for the Secretary of State—that he intended no disrespect to the Convention."

Now, Mr. President, this may be a source of great merriment to the Convention. There are some gentlemen who think this a proper occasion for levity, and without desiring to express any disrespect for any member on this floor, I must still be permitted to say that I have never seen more ill-timed levity in anything, and I wish to state why. Mr. President, taking into consideration the tone of some gentlemen on this floor, and of the Secretary of State, it would appear that somebody has most egregiously blundered in this business, and I suppose to a certain extent I am responsible for introducing this resolution. Allow me to say, Mr. President, that I did not do it upon my own individual judgment alone, though I should have done so without any hesitancy. I did it after consulting and discussing the subject-matter with several well-known and eminent gentlemen of this Convention, and who concurred with me fully as to the purpose sought to be accomplished by the resolution.

Now, sir, I may have blundered, innocently though it may be, but the Convention nevertheless has shared in that blunder itself, because this resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice, and what was my original motion became its own deliberate act. If there was any blunder about this matter it is now material to know where it is. I still think, and shall think until I am convinced by evidence other than that furnished, that there was no blunder committed on my part in introducing this resolution, or by the Convention in its adoption.

Mr. President, before coming to this Convention, after having been honored by the people of this State by an election to a seat here, I have spent such time as I have been able to spare from other vocations in looking through the reports of Conventions in other States, called to perform duties like unto those incumbent upon us here. In doing so I had occasion to look over the reports of the State whence I came, Illinois, and also over the reports of the State of New York, and those of my native State, Pennsylvania; also, of Missouri and some other States; and, sir, I noticed by all the Journals and reports that Legislatures of those States had provided that the various officers of the State, Secretary, Treasurer, Controller, and all the State officers, should furnish to the Convention all information, upon its reasonable call, to enable the Convention to wisely perform their duties in framing a new organic law. And, sir, I have not been able to find an instance where a State officer has refused this information, though in several States the requisitions have been of the same class as the one I introduced last Thursday. I think I may say, within bounds, that I examined no less than fifty resolutions adopted by the Conventions, asking information of the State officers like unto that which we ask for, in every sense of the word, and, sir, in no instance can you find in any of the Journals or reports of those Conventions where the Secretary of State, or Controller of State, or the Governor of the State, or any officer of the State, availed themselves of any such privileges as this, or were permitted to make any such reply as has been made by the Secretary of State to this Convention. Now, allow me to call attention to the statute which the Legislature of this State passed—the Act under which this Convention was called and is now sitting: "The Secretary of State, all public officers, and Boards of Commissioners, shall furnish such Convention with all such information, papers, details, books, or other documents in their possession, as the said Convention shall order or require for its use from time to time while in session."

I think, sir, when I have read this, under these circumstances, that I shall stand, and that this Convention will stand, acquitted of all folly, of all stepping out of the usual and proper course in making this inquiry of the Secretary of State. Mr. President, I wish to say now in regard to the resolution which I have this morning introduced, that I have stated the facts of this matter, and I believe I have done so accurately.

Now, Mr. President, is it proper, because, if there be no motive—if there is no substantial reason why this Convention should still desire this information—then this resolution should not be adopted. In other words, we should make up our minds that we did a foolish act, and let it go.

My resolution calls for a different line of action. I thought, and the Convention evidently thought, that the resolution was well timed in its character. I think so still. Now, sir, what does this resolution call for? It calls, sir, for a statement of the total number of all corporations that have been formed, and that are existing under the laws of this State. That is one thing.

Again, sir, it calls for a classified statement of each class of the corporations so formed. Why do we desire this information? Allow me to say why. We all know—or at least every lawyer on this floor will remember—that in the olden times, in the beginning, corporations were not permitted to be formed as now. They were not formed under general laws. They were grants from the crown; they were charters; they were in the nature of special grants. In the course of time it was found that great corruption crowded into the administration of government, growing out of this practice, and in this State when they adopted the present Constitution, following after the laws of some of the other States, they provided that corporations other than municipal should be formed only under general laws, and we have been living and acting under that provision of the Constitution, and laws framed in pursuance of it, from that day to this.

It was said by Judge Terry—speaking for the Secretary of State—that there are fifty-four bound volumes of these records in his office, which contain nothing but the declared statements of the articles of incorporation of corporations which have been formed under these general laws. Now, if we look into the statute books—at least until the Codes were adopted—we find that corporations were permitted to be formed under general laws for certain specified purposes. They embraced a very large range of industries and pursuits, and business affairs in this State. When the Codes came to be adopted, the barriers which before that time had been permitted to stand were all swept away, and thenceforth, under the provisions of the Codes, they were authorized to form corporations, by compliance with a few statutory requirements, by a few individuals who had gathered together in a neighborhood for the purpose of carrying on the various industries, and all the various classes of business enterprises.

Now, sir, the purpose of this resolution was to make an exhibit of this state of facts. I was aware of the fact that there was this vast multitude of corporations, which are as numerous as the sands upon the seashore. I was not unaware of the fact that these corporations were so numerous that their names were myriad—all the way from a corporation organized for the construction and maintenance of a railroad or steamboat line down to a peanut stand.

One object of this resolution was to develop these facts in detail, so that when we reached that question we would have the record of facts from the proper offices, as a basis for action. Again, sir, there is another point. This resolution asks for the principal offices and places of business. Why did we do that? Why, sir, it is a fact that these corporations, whose names is legion, have places of business—by which I mean the properties to be operated, to be purchased, to be worked—established all the way from the northern extremity of the State down to the southern line, and from the coast back to the eastern boundary, and cover the whole Pacific coast, yet whose principal places of business, almost without exception, is on two or three streets of San Francisco; so that all mining, manufacturing, and agricultural pursuits—almost all the industries of the State, conducted by corporations, have their principal offices of business in San Francisco.

That was why I asked for this information, so as to present the facts in detail to the Convention, so that we, coming here as representatives of the people, may be able to say how far it would be wise to modify the system of laws under which these corporations hereafter shall be formed in this State.

Now, sir, it was said by Judge Terry that the Secretary of State cannot furnish this information. Why? I beg leave to ask, why? The law provides, sir, that when a corporation is formed that the few persons who are required only for that purpose shall sign articles of incorporation, and that they shall state their corporate name, state their capital stock, the amount of it, state the purposes, for which the corporation is formed, the principal place of business, and the location of their offices. These are matters simply of detail required to be filed under the law. Does the Secretary of State mean to tell us that he has no system of indexing or tabulation by which these few cardinal facts and points can be ascertained? It is incredible, sir, and I want to say, if such is the fact, it would be quite proper for this Convention, or some other authorized body, to pass a resolution requesting the next Legislature to see that this gross negligence is corrected. I cannot believe that it is true.

In the resolution I have offered, sir, I ask the Convention to express it, as its judgment, not that the Secretary of State shall absolutely furnish this information in full, but that he shall furnish us what he reasonably can. No impossible or unreasonable thing should be demanded of him, or anybody else, but the resolution says he shall furnish such information as he may have, to the extent of his reasonable ability, and so far as he is not able to comply to make his report to this Convention, stating simply why he is not able to do so, and that will be satisfactory.

I hope this resolution will be adopted. I hope so, because I think the information is important, and I think the people of this State expect us, as their representatives, sent here for the purpose of forming a new framework of government for ourselves and our children who shall come after us, to consider this subject well. I know, sir, and I think many other gentlemen will concur with me, when I say that the people of this State have not, for the first time, heard of these corporations. They have had their attention called to it for a long time, and they take a very serious view of the situation. They expect us to go to the various offices and ascertain the various conditions, and if there be an unsound sill, an unsafe pillar, or an insecure column anywhere in the structure of the government, that we will carefully examine the defect and wisely find the remedy, so that the structure of our State government will stand safely and securely in time to come, securing to us, and to our children after us, the blessings of a wise and free government. I believe, Mr. President, that this information will materially aid this Convention in the performance of its duty, and, therefore, I ask most earnestly, and yet respectfully, that this resolution may be adopted.

Mr. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I desire to second the resolution as presented by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Hale, and for these reasons: First, because I believe that the information called for by the resolution is of paramount importance to this Convention. I believe that that information should be in the hands of the Convention, and in the hands of the committees in whose charge these subjects are to be placed. I believe it ought to be furnished because it was provided in the Act calling this Convention that any officer of the State should furnish, upon the requisition of this Convention, such information for its use. I believe that that information has not been provided, in the spirit in which it was asked for, by the report of the Secretary of State as presented to this Convention. I believe, sir, that the report from the Secretary of State was not couched in such language as it should have been in reply to the very courteous request of this Convention for that information. If it was not in his power to furnish us the information according to the specifications that were put down in the resolution, it should have been his duty to have said in so many words, "I am not able to give you this information in full.' He should have given us what he could. But, sir, instead of that he sends up here a table loaded with books, large enough to be a load for any man to carry, fifty-four in number, and tells us that it is in as compact a form as he can give us the report.

Now, sir, I believe that the Secretary of State has made a great mistake in this report. Either he did not understand the purport of the resolution, or he did not understand the temper of this Convention. I believe that the resolution ought to pass, further, because it gives to the Secretary of State still opportunity to comply with the wishes of this Convention, and if he is not able to do it in full to give us what he can or give us the reasons why he cannot give it; and it certainly is his duty to do so. I am in favor of this resolution, and hope it will be adopted.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. President: I have no objection to the passing of this resolution, but I take a different view of this matter than that expressed by the gentlemen who have addressed this Convention. I am assured by the Secretary of State that no disrespect was intended, and for my part I think that all the information which is of any particular importance was afforded by the exhibition of those books upon that table. If it was important to show that these corporations had multiplied and had grown up—that they pervaded all parts of the State and every possible enterprise in the State—we had ocular demonstration of the fact—after the fashion of the popular mode of teaching—we had the object lesson before us. We found fifty-four volumes, averaging I should say at a rough guess, about eight hundred pages to the volume, or nearly forty-five thousand pages of articles of incorporation.

Now, what better evidence could we have of the immensity of this interest that has grown up under the lax system spoken of by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Hale, than the exhibition of the volumes here. And, sir, as to the ability of the Secretary of State to comply, it seems to me that it is easy to judge that it is utterly impossible for a tabulated statement to be made in the time before this Convention adjourns. These articles of incorporation are usually not very lengthy. It would require about a page and a half to contain the articles of each company. Then we would have from thirty to forty thousand corporations. Now, simply giving the names, amount of capital stock, and place of business of these corporations, it——

Mr. HALE. It does not call for the names of the corporations.

Mr. TERRY. You call for the place of business, the amount of capital stock, and the amount of capital stock paid in?

Mr. HALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. TERRY. That would involve the examination of the articles of incorporation of twenty thousand corporations at the very least. At thirty lines to the page, that would be eight hundred pages of the report—that simple statement alone; as I said, I have no objection to passing the resolution. It is the duty of the Secretary of State to give us all the information in his power, but I do not think that he is censurable to the extent that some gentlemen do. For my part, I think the levity was misplaced in a body like this, and that the Secretary perhaps made a mistake in not simply reporting, instead of exhibiting the books to the Convention, that it was impossible to collate the information in the time. Certainly the information called for would occupy eight hundred or one thousand pages, and would be of no use to the Convention unless it was printed and laid upon the desks of members; and I do not suppose that an expense of that kind is to be incurred for the purpose of printing this information.

Mr. WICKES. Mr. President: We have made many mistakes and some blunders. If any one has blundered in the premises, and if any one rests under a cloud of suspicion as to the conveyance of disrespect to this body, I think it would be better to exonerate all parties, and go on with the regular order of the day; and to simplify the matter, I offer this amendment as a substitute for the resolution.

The SECRETARY read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to make such cursory examination of the books in question as will determine whether the demand was inconsiderately made, or whether such examination of said books by a committee detailed to procure such information jointly, would be feasible and practicable, to report to this body at the earliest moment

Mr. LARKIN. Mr. President: The resolutions offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Hale, ought to be adopted by this Convention for several reasons. When that matter came up I made a motion to lay the report of the Secretary of State on the table. It had become the property of this house. The Secretary of State or some one else removed the books from this chamber without the permission of this Convention. They had no authority to do so. On the other proposition, that he be requested to furnish such information as he may have, or give the reasons why he cannot comply in whole or in part with the request of the Convention, I think is perfectly proper. I do not desire to crowd upon the Secretary of State, although his act has placed us in a very unenviable position before the people of this State. He has placed us in the position of being snubbed by the Secretary of State, and through us he has snubbed the people of California.

I insisted that this resolution should lie on the table until the mover returned. He has returned, and he has made a proper statement, and offered proper resolutions under the circumstances. I am satisfied that Mr. Beck now better understands his duty to this Convention and to the people of the State than he did when he brought these books in here in lieu of the report that we requested him to make. I hope that the resolution will be adopted, and that he will have a chance to take these books from here by leave of the Convention, and have an opportunity to make a proper report, or explain the reasons why he cannot comply with the request of the Convention.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on the passage of the resolutions.

Mr. TINNIN. It is on the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Wickes.

The PRESIDENT. There was no second to it.

Mr. BARRY. I second the amendment for the purpose of bringing it before the Convention.

Mr. LARKIN. I call for the reading of the resolutions.

The SECRETARY read the resolutions:

Whereas, Heretofore, to wit, on the seventeenth instant, this Convention, by resolution, duly requested the honorable the Secretary of State of California, who is the legal custodian of the records of all corporations, other than municipal, which have been formed under the laws of this State, to be informed by a detailed statement to be made to the Convention, embracing the following points of inquiry, to wit: the total number and classification of all such corporations; the aggregate amount of capital stock of all, and the aggregate amount of capital stock of each class of such corporations; a statement in detail of the principal places of business, and a like statement of the location of the principal offices of such corporations; also, a like statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by all such corporations; and

WHEREAS, Said Secretary of State did, subsequently, to wit, on the nineteenth instant, in nominal compliance with the request contained in said resolution, place on the desk of the Secretary of this Convention a large and cumbrous mass of books from his office, said to contain the record evidences of all the corporations mentioned in said resolution of inquiry, and by his accompanying reply to said resolution proffered said record books to this Convention as the most condensed and accurate reply he could make thereto; and,

WHEREAS, Both by reason of the existing legal necessity that said books should be kept and maintained exclusively in the office of said Secretary of State as public records, and the utter want of reasonable facilities on the part of this Convention to make abstracts therefrom covering and embracing the matters of inquiry specified in said resolution, it is the sense of this Convention that the Secretary of State has not complied, in letter or in spirit, with the requests contained in said resolution; also, that it is still his reasonable duty to make such compliance to the extent of his ability; therefore,

Resolved, That said Secretary of State have leave to remove all such record books to their said proper place of custody, and that he is hereby respectfully requested to furnish to this Convention, by a statement in writing, such reasonable information touching said corporations as expressed in said resolution heretofore adopted, or so much thereof as he shall be reasonably able to so furnish; and if from any cause he is not able in whole or in part to make such compliance, then to report to the Convention the cause of such disability.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: While I am disposed to see to it that all the State officers shall treat the Convention properly, and make all proper reports which this Convention has a right to call for, I am satisfied in my own mind that in this case we have called for more than the Secretary of State can give. The voluminousness of the matter is such that I am satisfied it would require a longer time than the sitting of this Convention to compile it, and comply with the resolution. I think the Convention acted hastily, though I have no doubt the Convention was impelled by a proper spirit to seek the information. But they acted I think without due consideration in this matter.

Now it seems to me, before we pass this resolution, we should be certain that we are right in the matter, and that the officer was in contempt. It seems to me the proper course would be to refer the whole matter to a standing committee of this body, and there is no more proper committee than the Committee on Corporations, selected with a view to dealing with that subject. That committee can go to the Secretary of State and examine the documents, and see if this Convention has properly understood the matter, and report back to this Convention, so that we may all be relieved from any improper course of action. In pursuance of this idea, I send up to the desk an amendment to the amendment, for the purpose of referring the whole matter to the Committee on Corporations, with instructions to investigate the matter and report to this Convention the proper action to be taken.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the whole subject-matter of the two resolutions introduced by the member from the Second Congressional District, calling on the Secretary of State for information concerning corporations, be referred to the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal, with instructions to investigate the matter and report to this Convention such course of action as in their judgment it is held for the Convention to take in the premises, at as early a day as possible.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I feel to favor this last amendment. I have heard a great deal said about this matter, and I have heard read the resolution of the gentleman from Placer. I am well convinced that at the time of the passage of that resolution this Convention desired only what was reasonable. Our desire was to have proper information in regard to corporations, and we wished to know everything that reasonably could be known. But I am thoroughly convinced that the resolution embraced too much. I am convinced, since the matter has been discussed in this body, that the resolution was too broad, and too much in detail for the Secretary of State to comply with in any reasonable length of time. For instance, he was to give the aggregate amount of the capital stock, and of each class thereof; a detailed statement of the principal place of business of each corporation, and the location of the principal office of each corporation, and a detailed statement of the amount of capital stock, and the amount actually paid up by all such corporations. This embraces a great deal in the aggregate and a great deal in the detail. I am fully convinced that although we were desirous of having this information brought before the Convention, yet there was too much required. I think we should allow a committee to investigate this matter, that we may know whether or not we do not have need of some information with regard to the vast amount of work that is required in this case. Therefore, I am entirely in favor of the last amendment.

MR. NOEL. Mr. President: It seems to me that ordinary prudence, and a decent regard for the dignity of this Convention, requires that this matter be dropped, and I move that the whole matter be indefinitely postponed.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I am in hopes this resolution will not prevail to postpone the whole subject-matter. I am in hopes that neither of the two amendments will prevail. In my humble judgment, Mr. President, this Convention to-day occupies rather an unpleasant position in regard to this immense amount of matter that was presented here, purporting to be a report from the Secretary of State in response to a resolution offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Hale. I would like to ask the gentlemen of this Convention, where are the volumes presented here as a report in response to the call of this Convention? If those documents are considered valuable, it is well that this Convention understand that they are responsible for their delivery. They were carted in here, in my opinion, with disrespect for this Convention, and they have been carted out with the same degree of disrespect. Now, sir, shall I, as a member of this Convention, wink at this thing, and say that a public servant shall become the master of the people's representatives in this Convention? I hope not. I don't wish to detain the Convention, but I hope the resolution offered by Judge Hale will pass.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I desire to say one word. I hope that the amendment to the amendment will not prevail. I understand how easy it is—I am not altogether unacquainted with parliamentary practice—I understand the old dodge of killing a thing by referring it to a committee. It is very similar to the process by which we bury out of our sight the dead things which we cannot have among the living. I do not think, Mr. President, that this resolution is intended to be of that character. This resolution which I offered is not intended—it expresses no censure towards the Secretary of State—and if it did, sir, I think it would be justified, under the circumstances; but it simply says:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of State have leave to remove all such books to their proper place of custody, and that he is hereby respectfully requested to furnish to this Convention, by a statement in writing, such reasonable information touching said corporations, as expressed in said resolution heretofore adopted, or so much thereof as he shall be reasonably able to furnish; and if, from any cause, he is not able, in whole or in part, to make such compliance, then to report to the Convention the cause of such disability.

I do not know how it is that these books are not here now. He brought them into the Convention, so says the report. I was not here myself. And he made an accompanying report, and stated that he made this in response to the resolution adopted by this Convention. I do not understand how it is that he has been permitted to remove them. I have seen no resolution permitting him or anybody else to remove them. He put them in the hands of the Convention.

Now, this resolution is, first, to get him out of that difficulty. It gives him leave to withdraw them, and return them to their proper place of custody. It is a respectful request to him to furnish the information specified in the original resolution, or so much thereof as he is reasonably able to furnish, and if not able in whole or in part to furnish it, then to report to the Convention the reasons of this disability. I submit that there is no need of the Committee on Corporations or any committee to investigate this matter. I think this expresses the whole matter. It returns this resolution, and asks him to comply, if able, and if not, to state why not. This certainly needs no report from any other committee to find out the propriety of this request. I hope this motion and the amendment and the amendment to the amendment will not prevail, but that the original resolution will be acted upon by the Convention.

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: I hope this whole matter will be laid on the table. We are now censuring an officer without giving him an opportunity of being here before this Convention. It is impossible for an officer to produce what was required of him by that resolution in the next three months. I hope, Mr. President, that this whole matter will be laid on the table. I make that motion, that it be laid on the table.

THE PRESIDENT. The first question is on the motion to lay the whole matter on the table. The Chair hears no second to the motion.

MR. HALE opposed the amendments, and urged the adoption of the original resolutions.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I submit that this motion to indefinitely postpone and the amendments should be voted down, and the matter disposed of on the original resolution; and I desire to call the attention of this Convention to a paragraph in the Secretary of State's report, which is in fact and in substance the whole of it: "The various subjects included in the foregoing resolution, upon which information is sought, are recorded in the books kept in my office for that especial purpose, and in order that the Convention may have the desired information at as early day as possible, I hereby place at your service the records of all corporations now on file in my office, and they are in as condensed a form as the information sought by the resolution would warrant." That, sir, is the whole report, except the recital of the resolution. I say the friends of the Secretary of State, in my judgment, should vote for this resolution. He should have an opportunity to set himself right. The information furnished by the gentleman from San Joaquin is not official information to the Convention. The Secretary of State should have an opportunity to state the reasons why he did not comply with the original resolution. There is nothing in his report either replying to the resolution or giving any reason for not doing so. And more than this, it is not accurate upon its face. Those books, the great mass of them, are records of the certificates of incorporation. We may have been in error from the beginning. It may be that this is a sort of comedy of errors from the beginning. The gentleman who made the motion may have been in error in asking too much. The Convention may have been in error in adopting the resolution. The Secretary of State was evidently in error in his facetiousness, for that evidently was the design of it, and he was in error in sending the books into the Convention.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The motion to lie on the table is not debatable.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion was not seconded.

MR. MCCALLUM. Now, the resolution offered by the gentleman from the Second District merely calls upon the Secretary of State for such information as he is able to furnish, and if he cannot furnish it all, to state the reasons. No reasons have yet been assigned to this Convention why he did not furnish the information, except what is indirectly stated by the gentleman from San Joaquin, no doubt correctly; but the information furnished by the Secretary of State is what he should have furnished to the Convention officially. There is no censure in the resolution offered by the gentleman from Placer, none whatever, but it gives the Secretary an opportunity to comply with the request or state the reasons why he has not done so. And, sir, that portion of the resolution which he could not comply with, if it is true that there are twenty-five thousand certificates of incorporation, he could have given that amount of information, and there are certainly other means whereby he could have furnished it without so voluminous a report; and, as to the balance, he could have stated the facts which he stated to the gentleman from San Joaquin. We can pass this resolution, and I have no doubt the Secretary of State will be glad to set himself right.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: A resolution was offered and adopted by this body, requesting the Secretary of State to furnish us with certain specified information. In response to this request, we are all aware that fifty-four volumes of records were brought into this chamber and laid before the Convention, accompanied by a report in which we were told that all the information asked for was contained in these fifty-four volumes, and in as condensed a form as it is possible to get it. It is indeed unfortunate that the State of California should have a Secretary of State who is no more competent to fulfill the duties of that high office than the present incumbent, judging him by his own admission. Every member of this Convention ought to know that when the Secretary of State brought those books into this chamber, he was guilty of a gross insult to this body, and Mr. Terry, this morning, as the representative of Mr. Beck, tells us that these books were brought here as a sort of an "object lesson," to teach us, like so many children, what we should do.

MR. TERRY. I beg to correct the gentleman. I am not the representative of Mr. Beck. I represent the people of San Joaquin.

MR. STEDMAN. He told us that these books were sent here as a sort of "object lesson," as we are regarded as children, not able to comprehend a report. Why did not the gentleman come to this Convention with a report couched in respectful language, as our resolution was? If it was impossible for him to comply with the request, why did he not inform this Convention of that fact in a respectful manner? Now, sir, I believe that the Secretary of New York, or Missouri, or Pennsylvania, or any other great State, where there are perhaps as many or more corporations as in this State, I believe the Secretary of State in any of those States would have been able to furnish such information as that asked for by the resolution. The only difficulty is, in my opinion, that the Secretary of State of California has not adopted a proper system of keeping these records. Whether he knows how or not, I cannot say, but his system is certainly not the proper one or the information contained in these volumes would have been epitomized in such a manner as to be easily placed before this Convention in proper shape. I hope the resolution will be adopted, and that the amendments will be voted down.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move to lay the whole matter on the table.

MR. REDDY. I second the motion.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon laying the whole matter on the table.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon referring it to the Committee on Corporations.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Hale, Wyatt, and Filcher.

MR. HALE. I withdraw the demand for the ayes and noes.

THE PRESIDENT declared the motion lost on a viva voce vote.

Division was called for, and before the Convention divided, Messrs. Hilborn, Larkin, and Filcher demanded that the roll be called.

The roll was called, and the motion was lost by the following vote:

MR. O'DONNELL. I refuse to vote.

THE PRESIDENT. The next question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Wickes. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to make such cursory examination of the books in question as will determine whether the demand was inconsiderately made, or whether such examination of said books by a committee detailed to procure such information jointly, would be feasible and practicable, to report to this body at the earliest moment.

The amendment was lost.

The original resolutions were then adopted.

PROPOSITION WITHDRAWN.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I ask leave, out of order, to withdraw amendment number three hundred and nineteen, for correction.

THE PRESIDENT. There being no objection, the gentleman will have leave. The Chair hears none.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

MR. EDGERTON presented the following petitions:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of California, respectfully and urgently request the delegates constituting the Convention authorized to prepare a Constitution for said State, to retain in said Constitution section four of the same, and to add to said section a provision declaring the Sabbath day, or Sunday, a day of rest.

Signed by Samuel Jelly, and many others.

THE PRESIDENT presented the following petition:

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., October 11th, 1878.

To the Members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: The Santa Barbara League wish to call your attention to the petitions now before your honorable body on the right of suffrage. We ask that the Constitution be so constructed that there shall be no disfranchisement on account of sex. The following are our reasons:

First—Because "all just governments derive their powers from the consent of the governed." Woman is governed by laws to which she gives no consent.

Second—Because woman has the same inherent desire for and power of self-government as man, and the same natural right to exercise that power.

Third—Because the ignorant and intemperate are enfranchised and intrusted with the privilege of making laws to govern her, and of employing their vested powers in restraining her from exercising a citizen's highest perogative, the right of ballot.

Fourth—Because woman is taxed, and taxation without representation is as much tyranny in eighteen hundred and seventy-eight as in seventeen hundred and seventy-six.

Fifth—Because it is a citizen's right to be tried by a jury of his peers, and woman is not so tried, in California.

Sixth—Because the well-being of the State demands that thousands of hard working women, who add greatly to its wealth and its intellectual and moral worth, should not be crippled in their power of usefulness.

Seventh—Because, with the ballot in the hands of all good citizens, the honor of our State would be asserted and the perpetuity of our government assured; for a nation's injustice is a prelude to a nation's decay.

The right to vote we consider inherent. Webster defines inherent, as naturally pertaining to; innate; as the inherent right of men to life, liberty, and protection. "To secure these rights, governments are instituted, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." The right to form governments is then an inherent right. To do this in our country it is necessary to vote; therefore the right to vote is inherent in every American citizen. If not, from whom acquired? If the people acquire the right from themselves and delegate it to others, the right must be inherent in the first place or they have nothing to give, no powers to delegate. We earnestly entreat your honorable body, so to frame the new Constitution, that women may be empowered to exercise this inherent right, the right of suffrage.

Yours respectfully,

MARY A. ASHLEY,
President Santa Barbara League.

MARY F. HUNT, Secretary.

Referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

PROPOSITIONS AND RESOLUTIONS RELATING TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MR. EDGERTON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the Bill of Rights:

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of the State. And to secure said rights, it is essential that one day in seven should be observed as a day of rest. The first day of the week, usually called the Sabbath or Sunday, shall be observed as said day of rest.

Referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

AGAINST OFFICE SEEKING.

MR. WICKES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to office seeking:

Any candidate who, in any newspaper, print or writing, announces, or consents to announce his name as candidate for nomination to any public office, by any party, club, caucus, or convention, thereby disqualifies himself from holding the office for which he thereby is announced as a candidate during the next term thereof.

Referred to Committee on Legislative Department.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. FILCHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to revenue and taxation:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State of California.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of taxation all property within the State shall be assessed at its full cash value, to be ascertained in such manner as the Legislature may direct; and property in the sense of this article shall be understood to include all rights, privileges, or franchises that have been or may be granted by the State, or any subdivision thereof, to any individual, corporation, or association, and every other conceivable thing that possesses any commercial or exchange value; provided, that the property of the State, and the property of the counties, and other municipal corporations, may be exempted from taxation.

SEC. 3. Land shall in all cases be assessed as an item separate and distinct from the improvements thereon, and in determining the value of land for the purposes of taxation, no discrimination shall ever be made between tracts of land possessing the same natural and other facilities, and of the same productive capacity, in consequence of any improvements that may have been made on one tract or piece of land more than on another.

SEC. 4. Any property of any individual, association, or corporation may be seized and held for the amount of the taxes due from said individual, association, or corporation, but any party in possession of, and paying the taxes on property that is incumbered by mortgage, or other legal lien, shall recover, without legal process, from the holder of said mortgage, or lien, an amount, in settlement, equal to the sum of the taxes on the amount of said mortgage or lien.

SEC. 5. Nothing in the foregoing shall be construed as depriving the Legislature of the right to levy a special tax on peddlers, auctioneers, brokers, hawkers, merchants, commission merchants, showmen, jugglers, inn keepers, grocery keepers, liquor dealers, toll bridges, toll roads, ferries, insurance, telegraph, and express interests or business, venders of patents, and persons, companies, or corporations owning or using franchises or privileges, in such manner as it may from time to time direct by general law, uniform in all cases as to the class upon which it operates.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

REGARDING THE UNIVERSITY.

MR. VAN DYKE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, regarding the University of California:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Whereas, the University of California is not, either in its origin or endowments, exclusively a State institution, but derived its origin from the College of California, and has received large endowments from the Congress of the United States upon certain conditions connected therewith affecting its organization, and also valuable endowments from individuals, which were designed to preserve and develop it in its present form, and in order to attain the full benefit and proper use of said endowments, and to give such stability to said University as will tend to acquire further endowments from private sources, it is expedient that it should continue to exist in perpetuity under its present organization and government, and incapable of change—it is declared that said University shall constitute a public trust, and that its organization and government shall be perpetually continued in their existing form, character, and condition, subject only to such legislative enactments as shall not be inconsistent therewith, and shall only pertain to its support and more complete development; and it is further declared that the Board of Regents, in their corporate capacity, and their successors in that capacity, their officers and servants, shall have, hold, use, exercise, and enjoy all the powers, authorities, rights, liberties, privileges, immunities, and franchises, which they now have or are entitled to have, hold, use, exercise, and enjoy, and the same are hereby ratified and confirmed unto them and to their successors, and to their officers and servants, respectively, forever. It shall be entirely independent of all party influences, and kept free therefrom in the appointment of its Regents and the administration of its affairs.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

MR. HOWARD. I call for the regular order of business.

MR. CAPLES. I ask leave to introduce this resolution, to be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

THE PRESIDENT. The regular order of business is called for.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM STATE OFFICERS.

The President presented the following communication from the Adjutant General:

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, SACRAMENTO, October 21st, 1878.

To the President and members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with the resolution adopted by your honorable body, on the eighteenth instant, I have the honor to submit the following, embracing the expenditures out of the respective appropriations for military purposes for the twenty-eighth and twenty ninth fiscal years ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight:

Armory rent and other expenses, First Brigade		$1,563 00
Armory rent and other expenses, Second Brigade		44,195 85
Armory rent and other expenses, Third Brigade		1,572 00
Armory rent and other expenses, Fourth Brigade		9,582 00
Armory rent and other expenses, Fifth Brigade		1,924 00
Salary of Adjutant-General	$6,000
Salary of Assistant Adjutant-General	4,000
Pay of Porter	600
Postage and expressage	200
		10,800 00
Cleaning and transportation of arms		1,131 20
Total		$71,038 05

In addition to the foregoing, a special appropriation of five thousand two hundred and two dollars ($5,202) was made at the last session of the Legislature, for payment for guard and other military duty, performed in San Francisco, in November, eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, and January, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, and expended as follows:

To Headquarters, Second Brigade	$148 00
To First Infantry Regiment, Second Brigade	1,316 00
To Second Infantry Regiment, Second Brigade	1,490 00
To Third Infantry Regiment, Second Brigade	1,416 00
To First California Guard	832 00
Total	$5,202 00

I deem it proper to state that the last Legislature increased the appropriation for armory rents and other expenses of the National Guard for the thirtieth and thirty-first fiscal years, to ninety thousand five hundred and twenty-eight dollars ($90,528), against sixty thousand dollars, the amount appropriated for the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth fiscal years.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. F. WALSH,
Adjutant-General.

MR. TINNIN. I move that two hundred and forty copies be printed. The motion prevailed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco, from the Judiciary Committee, presented the following report of the Judiciary Committee, with reference to the eligibility of the Hon. Eugene Fawcett, of Santa Barbara:

To the President of the Constitutional Convention:

The majority of the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department, to which was referred the resolution introduced by the Honorable Clitus Barbour, of San Francisco, instructing the committee to inquire into the eligibility of the member from Santa Barbara, the Honorable Eugene Fawcett, and his right to a seat in this Convention, beg leave to report that the subject has been carefully considered by the committee, and that we are of opinion that the Honorable Eugene Fawcett was eligible, and is entitled to a seat in this Convention.

As all the members of the committee do not concur in this view, we may be excused for stating some of the reasons which led the majority to this conclusion:

Before the introduction of the resolution of Mr. Barbour, Judge Fawcett had occupied his seat as a member of this Convention for nearly three weeks. No person had, or has yet, appeared claiming his seat. His own county and judicial district have raised no question, made no protest, and presented no memorial on the subject, but, on the contrary, were desirous of his election, and are well satisfied with him as a member of this Convention, as we are informed and believe. He is a gentleman of high character, of learning and ability, of judicial experience, and in every way well qualified to make a useful member. The objection to him comes from a point remote from his constituency, and without a suggestion of unfitness in any respect, is based upon a narrow literal and technical construction of section sixteen, of article six, of the State Constitution This declares Judges of the District Courts to be "ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected" As Mr. Fawcett is the Judge of the District Court of the First Judicial District of the State, and was such at the time of his election as a member of this Convention, it is claimed that he was ineligible, and not entitled to retain his seat.

It is manifest to the undersigned that this is not a correct view of the subject. We are satisfied that a membership of this Convention is not an office in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution; that a broader and more extended view must be taken; and that to hang upon the letter here is emphatically to hang upon the bark; that to be literal is to be wrong. The Constitution, as it is, creates a form of State government complete in itself. Under it the State was to be organized, officered, and launched into operation. It did not anticipate what should be done under a succeeding Constitution, but provided for its own practical working. Its great fundamental principle was the distribution of the powers of government into three separate departments—the executive, legislative, and judicial—confining each to its own sphere. There were to be a large number of offices, each of which at once took place in its separate department. As long as that Constitution should last those offices would last, and it was in view of that fact that section sixteen of article six was adopted, rendering Judges ineligible during their terms to any office in the executive or legislative department. This covered the usual ordinary and necessary workings and instrumentalities of the government under that Constitution. It kept the Judge from using his high judicial functions so as to advance him in the executive or legislative department, leaving him, however, free to seek advancement from a lower to a higher judicial position. But when we come to the question of a new Constitution, we have something effecting the most radical change possible. The old things are to pass away, and new ones take their place. A Constitutional Convention is, therefore, an unusual, rare, and merely occasional instrumentality of the government, and of brief existence. It is not one of the three great departments of government which are created for every-day operations, and is not to be thrust into the ranks and limits of one of these three divisions, and take its place either as executive, legislative, or judicial. The Constitutional Convention outranks them all; it is their creator, and fixes limits to their spheres of action, and boundaries to their powers. It is occasional, exceptional, brief, and peculiar. It represents the people in their primary capacity, and forms the organic, fundamental, and paramount law of the State. Its members are mere agents or delegates of the people, and they have no power to adopt or create, but, at most, can only propose and present to the people a draft of a Constitution for their adoption or rejection. To confound, therefore, the functions and duties of a member of this rare and exceptional body for the formation of a new organic law with those of an officer under the every-day working of an existing system, is in our minds to commit a manifest error. It is to confound the architects and builders of a grand edifice with the people who subsequently occupy it; or the foundryman and machinist who build the engine with the engineers and firemen who subsequently manage it.

When we examine the framework of the Constitution itself, we find it divided into articles, under which are systematically arranged the offices pertaining to each division, and their qualifications. Article four covers the legislative department; article five the executive, and article six the judicial. In none of these do we find any reference to members of a Constitutional Convention. Such Conventions are only referred to in article ten, a distinct and separate part of the Constitution, thus isolating this subject from those portions appertaining to the ordinary and every-day operations of the government. This article ten is as broad as can be; no test of eligibility is given; no qualifications are prescribed. The only limit is, that "such Convention shall consist of a number of members not less than that of both branches of the Legislature." From this it would seem that the people were left free to select whom they pleased. The statute under which the Convention was called is likewise free from any limitation or restriction in this regard.

The common practice of the people of the United States is in accordance with the views here presented. Mr. John Howard Hinton, in the second volume of his History and Topography of the United States (pages 324 to 327), treats of Constitutional Conventions, and, among other things, says: "The constituency who choose the delegates for a Convention is almost always the same constituency who choose the members of the State Legislature; but it seems to be open to discretion to make this occasional constituency even more extensive. A great peculiarity, however, of the character of Conventions is, that the delegates may be individuals from any class, including the ministers of religion, the Governor, and other public functionaries, and the Judges. In this point the reader will be struck with the resemblance it bears to the English county meetings, where peers and commoners, and clergy and all other men assemble to deliberate on any public concerns. Both institutions, indeed, are traceable to a common Saxon stock."

In Virginia the Governor of the State sat side by side with John Marshall, both delegates in the Constitutional Convention of that State, whilst the latter was holding the exalted position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Other distinguished officers were likewise delegates to the same Convention.

In the Illinois Convention of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, Judge O'Melveny was a delegate and had been Judge of one of the Circuit Courts within one year prior to his election as delegate. The Constitution of that State provided that the Judges of the Supreme and Circuit Courts should not be eligible "to any other office or public trust of profit" in that State or the United States during the term for which they were elected, nor for one year thereafter, and that all votes for them for such "other office or public trust of profit" should be void. Mr. O'Melveny's competitor contested his seat on that ground; but the Convention, acting upon the principle that a delegate to the Convention was not an officer within the sense and meaning of the Constitution, retained Judge O'Melveny in his seat.

That Convention consisted of the prominent men of Illinois, and numbered among its members jurists of national renown. That case affords an exact parallel to this, and is a precedent directly in point, whilst we have been unable to discover a single instance to the contrary.

Beside all this we cannot assume for a moment that the Convention which framed the present Constitution intended to trammel the succeeding generation in any such manner in the formation of a new or revised organic law. It would have been contrary to the accepted theories of our government, that they should claim a right to define who should constitute the representatives of the people in their great work of defining the fundamental law of the future. Such action would have been contrary to principle and to the common practice of the people in like cases.

We are, therefore, happy to vindicate the able and distinguished men who framed the present Constitution, from any such aspersion on their fame, and are entirely satisfied that their intention and meaning was merely to prohibit the Judges from discharging the duties of an office belonging to either of the other departments under that Constitution. Clearly the inhibition was intended to apply only to the government and the departments thereof created by that Constitution, and not to the rare and exceptional occasion of a Convention, in which the people, resuming their original sovereignty, undertake to change the whole government and select its own agents for that purpose.

So far we have attempted to maintain our conclusion upon reason and the common usages and practice of Constitutional Conventions. But we are not without the authority of some of the highest Courts of the country in our favor. The Supreme Court of this State directly maintains the principles on which we rely. That Court has construed the various sections of the Constitution referred to, and held that the Chief Justice of this State may lawfully hold the office of Trustee of the State Library, and that the Police Judge of San Francisco may act as Police Commissioner

See People vs. Provines, 34 Cal., 532 et seq., and People vs. Bush, 40 Cal., 340.

In the Provines case the Supreme Court held that the Legislative Department referred to in Article III of the Constitution, means the Senate and Assembly and nothing else. It is very clear then that a Constitutional Convention is not a legislative body in the sense of the Constitution.

Article III of our Constitution is borrowed from the Constitution of Iowa, and the Supreme Court of that State has held that under that Article one man may exercise the duties of Mayor of a city and Justice of the Peace, as the office of Mayor is not a State office.

Santo vs. The State of Iowa, 2 Iowa, 220.

The Constitution of Indiana provided that, "No person holding a lucrative office or appointment, under the United States or under this State, shall be eligible to a seat in the General Assembly; nor shall any person hold more than one lucrative office at the same time, except as in this Constitution permitted," etc.

The Director of the State Prison, which was a lucrative office, was also a Councilman of the City of Madison. The Supreme Court of Indiana held that the office of Councilman was a lucrative office, and though literally it fell within the clause of the Constitution referred to, it was not a State office, and that the Constitution only referred to offices provided for under the State Government.

See the State ex rel. Platt vs. Kirk, 44 Indiana, 405.

We therefore respectfully submit that the Honorable Eugene Fawcett was eligible at the time of his election, and is entitled to retain his seat in this Convention.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. I move that it be printed out of order, and made the special order for Thursday next, immediately after the reading of the Journal.

The motion prevailed, and the matter was made the special order for Thursday, October twenty-fourth, immediately after reading the Journal.

MR. BLACKMER, from the Committee on Future Amendments, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Future Amendments beg leave to return document number one hundred and nine, relating to female suffrage, and to suggest that the same be referred to the Committee on Right of Suffrage.

Yours respectfully,
E. T. BLACKMER, Chairman.

The document was so referred.

MR. LARKIN, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Privileges and Elections have had the following propositions under consideration, and report as follows: That proposition number forty-four, introduced by Mr. Turner, be indefinitely postponed; also, proposition number twenty, and recommend that it be referred to the Committee on Suffrage; proposition number one hundred and ninety eight, introduced by Mr. Freeman, recommend that it be referred to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation; proposition number three hundred and ninety-six, by Mr. Lavigne, and recommend that it be referred to the Committee on Legislative Department; proposition number one hundred and forty-five, and recommend that it be referred to the Committee on Suffrage.

LARKIN, Chairman.

THE PRESIDENT. The first report will go to the Committee of the Whole Convention, and the others be referred as recommended.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. CAMPBELL offered the following:

Resolved, That the President of the Convention be requested to appoint two Copying Clerks, whose duty it shall be to keep such papers and documents as may be required to be kept by the committees of the Convention which are not authorized to employ clerks, and that such Copying Clerks receive as compensation the sum of five dollars each per diem while so employed, to be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of this Convention.

MR. CAMPBELL. I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

The motion prevailed, and the resolution was so referred.

MR. TINNIN offered the following:

Resolved, That the resolution now on the table, in regard to the pay of James Saultry, be taken up and referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Adopted, and the resolution so referred.

PROPOSITIONS AND RESOLUTIONS RELATING TO THE CONSTITUTION.

The following resolutions and propositions, relating to the Constitution, were introduced:

ON EDUCATION.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. No teacher, State, county, township, or district school officer shall ever be interested in the sale, proceeds, or profits of any books, apparatus, or furniture, used, or to be used, in any school of this State, under such penalties as may be provided by the Legislature.

Referred to the Committee on Education.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

MR. SCHELL introduced the following proposed amendment to section nine, article one, of the Constitution:

SECTION —. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or the press. In all trials for libel, both civil and criminal, the truth of the matter alleged to be libelous, when published with good motives and for justifiable ends, shall be a sufficient defense to the person charged.

Referred to the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

RELATING TO THE UNIVERSITY.

MR. WEBSTER introduced the following proposed additional section to article nine of the present Constitution, relating to the University:

SECTION —. The University of this State shall be under the control of a Board of Regents, composed of fifteen members, two of which shall be elected from each Congressional District, by the qualified electors thereof, in such manner and for such time as the Legislature may, by law, provide. The remaining seven shall be ex officio members, and the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Speaker of the Assembly, President of the State Board of Agriculture, President of the Mechanics' Institute, and Superintendent of Public Instruction for the City of San Francisco shall, by virtue of their office, be the aforesaid ex officio members.

Referred to the Committee on State Institutions and Public Buildings.

ON REVENUE AND TAXATION.

MR. STUART introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in reference to revenue and taxation:

The following provisions shall be included in the Constitution:

First—The State tax on property, exclusive of tax necessary to pay any debt of the State now existing, shall not exceed forty cents on the hundred dollars on the valuation.

Second—No county, city and county, city, or municipal corporation, shall impose any tax exceeding thirty cents on the hundred dollars, exclusive of the tax necessary to pay any debt now existing in said county, city and county, city, or municipal corporation.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

IN RELATION TO EMBEZZLEMENT.

MR. THOMPSON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to embezzlement:

SECTION 1. Every person holding office in this State, be it township, municipal, county, or State, shall be held amenable for all money or property that may come into his hands or under his control, and in case of his appropriating or converting to his own use any amount under one hundred dollars, shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof he shall be fined in the full amount so appropriated, and imprisoned in the county jail for the term of six months. And for any sum exceeding one hundred dollars and under one thousand dollars, he shall be deemed guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof he shall be imprisoned in the State Prison not less than three nor more than five years, and in addition thereto pay a fine in the full sum so appropriated. And in all cases where the sum so appropriated shall exceed one thousand dollars in value, the penalty shall be imprisonment in the State Prison not less than ten nor more than thirty years, and in addition thereto he shall be fined the full amount so embezzled or appropriated; and he shall forever be disfranchised and ineligible to hold any office of profit or trust in this State in each and every case above enumerated.

SEC. 2. Any person in the employ of any incorporation or individual in this State who shall control or receive any money or other valuables into his custody and shall appropriate any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof he shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than one month nor more than three months, and he shall pay a fine in addition thereto of the full amount so taken. And for any amount exceeding one hundred dollars and less than one thousand dollars, he shall be deemed guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof he shall be imprisoned in the State Prison not less than one nor more than three years, and fined in the full amount so appropriated. And for any sum exceeding one thousand dollars, he shall be imprisoned upon conviction thereof in the State Prison for not less than three nor more than ten years, and fined in the full sum so appropriated.

SEC. 3. There shall be appropriate legislation to enforce the above provisions.

IN REGARD TO JURIES.

MR. CAPLES introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in regard to juries:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Grand juries shall be composed of seven jurors, and the concurrence of five jurors shall be sufficient for the finding of a presentment.

SEC. —. Trial juries, in all cases, whether civil or criminal, except in cases where, upon conviction, the penalty would be death, shall be composed of five jurors, and the concurrence of three jurors shall be sufficient for the finding of a verdict.

SEC. —. Trial juries, in cases where, upon conviction, the penalty would be death, the jury shall be composed of seven jurors, and a concurrence of the whole number shall be necessary to the finding of a verdict.

Referred to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

RELATIVE TO THE LEGISLATURE.

MR. WELLER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to the Legislature:

That all bills should be presented and printed within fifty days after the organization of the Legislature, to the end that their provisions may be known in the localities and among the interests to be affected by them, and an opportunity allowed by petition, remonstrance, and argument for presenting reasons for or against their enactment.

That the legalization of the acts of local officers, changes of names of persons and corporations, should be left to judicial inquiry in Courts of record, with power to apply the relief suited to each case, according to its merits.

That the regulation of strictly local affairs of counties should be intrusted within fixed limits to Boards of Supervisors, County Commissioners, or the County Courts, according as they are severally charged with county business.

That the internal and local affairs of towns, and cities, and villages, under like restrictions, should be left to the officers or Boards elected for their government, subject to the approval of the people, by an election upon questions involving taxation and expenditures.

That all Judges of Courts of record, inferior to the Supreme Court, shall annually report, in writing, to the Judges of the Supreme Court such defects and omissions in the laws, as their experience may suggest; and that the Judges of the Supreme Court shall, on or before the first day of each regular session, report, in writing, to the Governor such defects and omissions as they may find to exist, together with appropriate forms of bills to cure such defects and omissions in the laws. These the Governor is required to lay before the Legislature, that general and local laws should not conflict.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATIVE TO CHINESE.

MR. O'DONNELL introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to Chinese:

SECTION —. The right is hereby reserved to the State to protect its citizens from pestilence and plague, and, as a police regulation, to prohibit the entry of dangerous or criminal classes.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

IN RELATION TO ELECTORS.

MR. CONDON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to electors:

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION —. Any elector who shall receive any gift or reward for his vote, in meat, drink, money, or otherwise, shall suffer such punishment as the law may direct, and any person who shall directly or indirectly give, promise, or bestow any such reward to be elected, shall thereby be rendered ineligible for any office within the gift of the people of this State for the term of (6) six years, and be subject to such further punishment as the Legislature shall direct,

SEC. —. The Legislature may authorize the employment of a Chaplain for the State Prisons, but no money shall be appropriated for the payment of any religious services in either house of the Legislature.

Referred to the Committee on Legislative Department.

RELATING TO THE CHINESE.

MR. JOYCE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relating to the Chinese subject:

Resolved, That the following be inserted in the new Constitution:

SECTION —. All rents for use or occupation of any real estate or premises whatsoever in this State, leased to or occupied by any alien who is ineligible to become a citizen of the United States, under the laws thereof, shall escheat to and be collected by this State.

SEC. —. An alien who has not declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, under the laws thereof, shall not engage in any business in this State without having been first licensed so to do, in such manner and on such terms as the Legislature shall prescribe.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

MR. TUTTLE introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to privileges and elections:

All State officers shall be elected for a term of four years.

All elections for legislative, executive, and judicial officers to be held on the same day as that of Presidential Electors.

Referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

GRADUATED TAXATION.

MR. O'SULLIVAN introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to graduated progressive taxation:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION —. Taxation shall be equal and uniform. The State Board of Equalization shall classify all the lands of the State each second year into as many classes as by law shall be directed, each class to have its specific valuation per acre, and the said valuation to be the basis of the assessment; provided, that:

First—Whenever any one person shall, either in his own name, or in the name of any other person or corporation, own over one thousand (1,000) acres, fifty per cent. shall be added to the valuation of his land for taxes;

Second—That where such ownership shall exceed two thousand (2,000) acres, seventy-five per cent. shall be added to the valuation for taxes;

Third—That where such ownership shall exceed three thousand (3,000) acres, one hundred per cent. shall be added to the valuation for taxes;

Fourth—That where such ownership shall exceed five thousand (5,000) acres, one hundred and fifty per cent. shall be added to the valuation for taxes; and,

Fifth—That where such ownership shall exceed eight thousand (8,000) acres, there shall be two hundred per cent. added to its valuation for taxes.

Referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

NOTICE.

MR. McFARLAND gave the following notice:

Notice is hereby given that I intend to move to amend standing rule number twenty-four, by adding to the end thereof as follows: "And provided further, that the names of the members requiring the ayes and noes shall be entered on the minutes of the Convention." McFARLAND.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. O'DONNELL offered the following:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Convention that, under the Federal Constitution, the judicial power of the United States extends to all cases affecting the validity of treaties with foreign nations.

Resolved, That the Attorney-General be requested to institute proceedings necessary to obtain from the United States a decision in respect to the validity of the fifth, sixth, and seventh articles of the Burlingame treaty, or so much of said articles as recognizes or concedes the eligibility of Chinese subjects to American citizenship.

Referred to the Committee on Chinese.

MR. BARBOUR offered the following:

Resolved, That the Assessor of the City and County of San Francisco be requested to furnish to this Convention information upon the following points:

First—What was the amount of the assessment upon mining stock in the City and County of San Francisco for the last fiscal year;

Second—What was the amount of the assessments on churches, and the land on which erected, in that city and county for the last fiscal year.

The resolution was adopted.

ADJOURNMENT.

At eleven o'clock and fifty minutes A. M., the President declared the Convention adjourned under the rule.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Wednesday, October 23d, 1878.

LOCAL OPTION.

Mr. SCHELL presented the following petition, signed by numerous citizens of Stanislaus County:

We, the undersigned, citizens of this place and vicinity, believing it to be in accordance, and in harmony with the democratic principles of our Government, would earnestly petition the Constitutional Convention, now soon to be in session, for the insertion in the new organic Act or Constitution, the following:

Section —. The Legislature shall, at its first session, enact a law whereby the qualified voters of any county, voting precinct, town, or city, by a majority vote, from time to time, may determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited within the prescribed limits.

OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY.

Mr. HAGER presented the following petition, signed by many citizens of California:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of California, respectfully and urgently request the delegates constituting the Convention authorized to prepare a Constitution for said State, to retain in said Constitution section four, article one, of the same, and to add to said section a provision declaring the Sabbath day, or Sunday, a day of rest.

COST OF PRINTING.

The PRESIDENT presented the following communication from the Superintendent of State Printing:

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF STATE PRINTING,
October 23d, 1878.

Mr. President: In compliance with a resolution passed by your honorable body, requesting a statement as to the cost of printing ordered by the Convention, I have the honor to report that the total cost, up to and including the nineteenth instant, amounts to one thousand three hundred and eighty-nine dollars and sixty-three cents.

Respectfully submitted. F. P. THOMPSON,
Superintendent of State Printing.

The communication was laid on the table.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

The PRESIDENT presented the following communication from the Secretary of State:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
SACRAMENTO, October 22d, 1878.

To Hon. J. P. Hoge, President of the Constitutional Convention:

Dear Sir: Recently the honorable Convention over which you have the honor to preside passed a resolution asking for information as follows, to wit:

First—The number and classification of corporations other than municipal now existing in the State of California and formed under the laws of this State.

Second—The aggregate amount of the capital stock of all said corporations, and the aggregate amount of the capital stock of each class thereof.

Third—A detailed statement of the principal places of business and location of offices of all said corporations.

Fourth—A detailed statement of the amount of capital stock actually paid up by all said corporations.

I most respectfully call your attention to the obvious fact that the foregoing resolution calls for all the information contained in the record, and also for information not in the records of this office. In response to the resolution, and not intending any disrespect to the Convention, or any evasion of its demands, I had the honor to forward, as the only adequate compliance, the full record of the information asked for. I most respectfully represent that this action was the only course left me, since the clerical force at my disposal was not adequate to the task of making a complete transcript of the record in time to be of any service to the Convention, even if by so doing the information sought could be obtained. In view of this fact the original record was courteously placed at the disposal of the Convention. It is a matter of most sincere regret that this action has been misconstrued by the honorable gentleman who offered the resolution of inquiry, and that he and two others have seen fit to charge me before the Convention—when I had no opportunity to reply—with an intentional disrespect to that honorable body. I beg leave to assure you that no such disrespect was intended; nor can I see, in the action had, any justification for the charge.

The Convention asked for all the information in a certain record; the original of that record was promptly and courteously forwarded. I fail to see how the transmission of any record in this office can be tortured into an intentional insult to the Convention; and since this action is the full extent of my offending, I most respectfully protest against this gross misconstruction of my motives. If the response made by me was not sufficient, or if through any misapprehension of the request of the Convention I erred in forwarding the original record, I should most gladly have received any information of my error, and then, as now, would have been most happy to facilitate the deliberations of that honorable body with any official information desirable from this office, or any official courtesy or personal service within my power to bestow. Until otherwise informed or convinced, I most respectfully but firmly maintain the adequacy of the response made by me, and as respectfully and firmly disclaim any intention of disrespect to the Convention.

As to the charge that my action was an indignity to the people of California, I have only to say that I am of opinion when an officer does his duty to the best of his ability and preserves his own dignity, the people of California will find but little fault with him.

Hoping that this will receive at your hands that consideration which by reason of its candor it is entitled to, I have the honor to remain,

Your obedient servant,
THOMAS BECK,
Secretary of State.

Accompanying the above was the following:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of another resolution upon the same subject as the former, passed by the Convention on yesterday, to which I shall be most happy to reply at as early a moment as possible.

The PRESIDENT. The communication will lie on the table.

Mr. HALE. I desire to say one word in connection with the communication from the Secretary of State which has just been read; not to deal with its subject-matter, because the Secretary of State says, as I understand the reading of it, that he proposes to make a further report in answer to the resolution of this Convention adopted yesterday. But he says, as I understand the reading, that the author of the resolution, evidently alluding to me, imputed to him motives of disrespect to this Convention. I beg to say that I made no such statement consciously, and I have this morning looked over the report of the remarks made by myself and other gentlemen, and I fail to find any record of any such statement made by myself. I disclaim any such motive or feeling. My motive in offering the resolution was to bring before this Convention the information sought to be obtained, and to ascertain whether it was the sense of the Convention that the Secretary of State had properly complied with the request contained in the original resolution, all of which is duly expressed in the resolution adopted yesterday.

Mr. BLACKMER. I presume that the communication from the Secretary of State includes me as one of the two to whom he refers, besides the author of the resolution, as imputing to him motives that the communication from him could not warrant. I have simply to refer to the remarks that I made, and I call the attention of the Convention to this, that the only remark I made about the Secretary of State was to say that either he had mistaken the purport of the resolution, or he had mistaken the temper of this Convention, and I see no reason, sir, to recall that statement, because I believe it is a true one. He made one mistake or the other. I referred to the Secretary of State in no other part of the remarks that I had to make.

THE CASE OF JUDGE FAWCETT.

Mr. BEERSTECHER. I have here a minority report of the Judiciary Committee, in relation to the case of Judge Fawcett. I ask that it may be printed out of its order.

So ordered.

The report was as follows:

Mr. President: The undersigned, a minority of the Committee of the Judiciary, to whom was referred the subject of the eligibility of the Hon. Eugene Fawcett to a seat in this Convention, finding themselves unable to agree with the majority of such committee, make this minority report:

It is admitted, that the sitting member whose seat is contested was at the time of his election, and is now, Judge of the District Court of the First Judicial District of California. We think this fact renders him ineligible to a seat in this Convention; and we further think that this result is distinctly required by the present Constitution and the reasons which underlie it. The right of the sitting member has been put: 1st, upon the general ground that conventions are revolutionary bodies, and, that in their creation the people are emancipated from existing laws by which they are controlled in all other affairs, and that the Convention itself is possessed of power to disregard all rules but its own will; 2d, that the Constitution now existing, allowing it to furnish the rule of judgment, sustains his claim. As to the first ground, the language of the claimant himself, although somewhat guarded, may be accepted as a fair statement of it. He claimed that this was in no sense an office within the meaning of the Constitution. That even if it was, the people had a right to say who should represent them in the Convention to frame an organic law. That if the people of one generation had a right to dictate to the people of the next, they had a right to say how and what they should do; and we would virtually have no power to alter or amend the organic law.

In the cursory examination of the majority report, the same proposition is in equivalent terms. To a doctrine so unfounded and so dangerous, the undersigned express their unqualified dissent. The people of this Republic, with all their jural relation, constitute the State. The Government is that agency both of power and officers by which the business of the State is effectuated. That the people can assemble in any place, or in any manner which caprice or convenience may direct, for consultation, and to concert action for petition or other methods of procedure for change of their legal relation to the State, or to each other, disturbing in no manner the public peace, may be safely conceded. That they may follow this up by conventions to the same end, is equally true. These conventions, like hundreds of others of purely private character, are intended to collect and give expression to public opinion. Unlike other conventions, they propose to operate upon the law, through the law-making power. Directly of themselves, they claim no power over the law but that of petition and remonstrance.

There is another class of conventions which, sweeping aside constitutions, laws, institutions, and officers, at once resolves society into its individual elements, and taking a new departure from present chaos, endeavors therefrom to create order and institutions. This is simple revolution.

While it is not asserted that this Convention is exactly one of this character, yet it is intimated that if the people have, in Judge Fawcett's case, elected a gentleman ineligible under the present Constitution, they have the right to do so, and this Convention is bound to effectuate their choice. That is to say, every provision of the present Constitution, regulating the calling and purpose of this Convention, may be ignored at will, because it has been so ignored by a detached portion of the people.

This doctrine is dangerous to all alike. When this Convention is disposed to treat the constitutional inhibition as of no value, it is not perceived why it may not expel, as well as admit members, in execution of its mere personal preference. That this Convention is not a revolutionary body, and that it sits here only under the sanction of law, it requires but a glance to perceive.

The people operating in accepted modes, induced the Legislature to exercise a specific power given them by the Constitution, by passing a law submitting the question of general revision of the existing Constitution to the people. Upon the returns of such election, it was ascertained by the officers of the law, that a revision had been ordered by the people. Another Legislature directed by statute the election of delegates to this body. It was held, and the persons elected presenting themselves here, at the hour set by the Legislature, were organized by the designated authority, and took an oath to support the Constitution of the State, and to discharge the office of delegate. After all this, in presence of elements of disorder, which threaten destruction of all conservatism, the undersigned cannot permit themselves to be styled revolutionists, nor this body, as one ignoring constitutions and all legal forms, limitations, and restraints, without entering their solemn protest and dissent.

This doctrine of the sovereignty of the Convention was expressly denied by the founders of the National Constitution Mr. Wilson, of Pennsylvania, of whom it is said, he was one of the profoundest jurists our country has ever produced, said in regard to the power of the Convention: "I conceive myself authorized to conclude nothing, but to be at liberty to propose anything" This doctrine received the concurrence of Governor Randolph, of Virginia, James Madison, Mr. Paterson, of New Jersey, and of the Convention. The independence of the Convention and its sovereignty was asserted by Mr Dana, of Pennsylvania, in eighteen hundred and thirty-six. This was followed up in an Illinois Convention in eighteen hundred and forty-seven, and still later, in Kentucky and Massachusetts, in eighteen hundred and fifty-three. To those who desire the restatement and adoption of this theory, the tracing of these attempts to foist this doctrine upon Constitutional Conventions, down to their adoption, in effecting the actual withdrawal of eleven States of this Union from their allegiance to it, will be, if not a pleasant, still a most instructive employment. The undersigned have no wish for such restatement, nor for any further experience founded upon it. We persuade ourselves, however, that this Convention will reject all such vagaries, and will not accept the office, nor undertake to proceed upon the theories, nor to any extent discharge the functions of a revolutionary Convention, and that it will leave the claim of the sitting member to stand or fall upon the Constitution alone.

Every one must be aware that Constitutions owe their maxims and existence to the abuses resulting from the too great concentration of power in few or single hands. This idea was so fully conceded in the act of creating the Federal Constitution, that the only question largely debated was from which of the departments into which government was resolved was it that most danger was to be apprehended.

In the country from which the first Colonists came, for many centuries the Judges had been the personal advisers of the Crown. The duties they discharged were often of a political character. In the contest with the Colonies, they were, many of them at least, the enemies of the Colonists. America was smarting under indignities advised by the Judges and Chancellors of England.

It was in view of this historical fact that American statesmen, in distributing the powers of government, undertook at least to separate them by insurmountable barriers. Especially was the intention manifested of cutting off the judicial from all junction, overlapping, or intermingling with any other department of government. In short, we believe that a Judge is forbidden to perform or in any way to represent any function of a public character, during the term for which he was elected, other than those judicial in character, and we believe further that it is a conclusion justified by reason and authority.

It must be borne in mind that constitutional questions are not to be passed upon like those presented in a plea in abatement or special demurrer. As to these it may be right to stand upon precise terms. Treaties and Constitutions require a larger and more comprehensive view, by which the true intention of their terms may be sought. As to such instruments, "haeret in litera, haeret in cortice." The whole scope and purpose must be ascertained from all that is in and around the fact of the creation of the instrument to be interpreted.

The Committee of the Judiciary seem to put their resolution upon the ground that the word "office" does not properly indicate the function or place of a delegate in this Convention. The language of article six, section sixteen, is as follows: "The Justices of the Supreme Court, and the District Court, and the County Judges, shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected."

The committee make the whole question turn upon the interpretation of this word "office," and hold that it is not applicable to membership in this body. The undersigned do not concur in this opinion, and if we did, we do not see how it would strengthen the claimant's position.

Article III of the Constitution declares: "The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted"

The People vs. Sanderson, reported in 30 Cal., 160, we think is an authority which, accepted and fairly construed, is decisive of this controversy. The case was quo warranto to settle the title of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to hold a seat in the Board of Trustees of the State Library. In the information or complaint, in the defendant's demurrer, in the judgment below, in the statutes, and in the briefs of counsel, the right in dispute is called an office. The Court nowhere call it such, nor do they allude to the designation as affecting their decision. This went the whole length of asserting that the Legislature could not impose upon a Judge "any other duties than those of a judicial nature."

After reciting the third article above recited, the Court quote Burgoyne vs. The Board of Supervisors of San Francisco, 5 Cal., 9. That case, after reference to Article VI, says: "From which it follows, no duties except of a judicial character can be conferred on the Court of Sessions, inasmuch as the officers composing those Courts are persons charged by the Constitution expressly with the performance of judicial duties."

To further emphasize their view, the Court, in the main case, proceed to assign as a reason why a judicial officer could execute no other duties, that "no provision is to be found in the Constitution expressly directing or permitting a Justice of the Court to exercise any function appertaining to either of the above departments of government." In pursuance to this larger and more comprehensive interpretation to which we have referred, this Court say. "This provision of the Constitution, so far as it relates to the judicial department of the State, is, in our judgment, eminently wise. One of its objects seems to have been to confine Judges to the performance of judicial duties, and another to secure them from entangling alliances with matters concerning which they may be called upon to sit in judgment; and another still, to save them from the temptation to use their vantage ground of position and influence to gain for themselves positions and places from which judicial propriety should of itself induce them to refrain."

The Court then decide, "that, as the duties of a trustee do not appertain to the judicial department of the government, the Chief Justice could not execute them."

The impropriety of the action contemplated in the resolution reported by the committee, and the justice and necessity of the above opinion, is decisively enforced by the results of its adoption. If anything is certain to be done by this Convention, it is a remodeling of the judicial department One of the propositions already passed upon by the Judiciary Committee, and to be reported to this Convention, is the abolition of the District Courts, their name even is to be erased from the Constitution, and yet the majority resolution would retain a gentleman here who will be required to pass upon the further existence of his office and its emoluments, and perhaps to determine the result by his single vote. "No one ought to be judge in his own cause" is a legal maxim hitherto held to be of universal application.

We think further that a delegate to this Convention is the holder of an office in the sense that word is used in the Constitution. Jameson's book upon the Constitutional Convention, section three hundred and twenty-four, thus states his view: "In my judgment, there can be but little doubt that a member of a Convention is, in the enlarged and proper acceptation of the term, an officer of the State. A Convention is a part of the apparatus by which a sovereign society does its work as a political organism. It is the sovereign as organized for the purpose of renewing or repairing the governmental machinery. That same sovereign, as organized for the purpose of making laws, is the Legislature; as organized for the purpose of applying or carrying into effect the laws, it is the judiciary or the executive. These successive forms into which the sovereign resolves itself, are but systems of organization having relation more or less directly to the government of the society. Together they constitute the Government." Mr. Webster, in his great argument in the Rhode Island case, adopts upon this point equivalent terms.

The only case we have found which seems to deny the foregoing is that of The People vs. Provines, 34 Cal., 520.

It is a noticeable fact that this decision, as it is called, asserts itself as an act of judicial legislation. After reciting all the California and other cases, the Court say: "From them we deduce the following general rule, as embodying the law of the present case as it now stands: the third article of the Constitution prohibits all persons charged with the exercise of functions which are in their nature of either a legislative, executive, or judicial character, from exercising the functions of either of the other two classes." Having thus stated the actual condition of the law, the Court, with an admission that it was entirely unnecessary to disturb that condition, proceed to contrast the soundness of a long and unbroken stream of California decisions by which that law had been declared, and to overthrow, if possible, the authority of a case in which the Judge delivering the decision had been an unsuccessful defendant.

As to the precise case, three Judges undertook to overthrow the opinions of four Judges; but of so far as the cases show, of all the preceding Judges who had passed upon the question, one or two perhaps excepted. Such a decision we submit is not entitled to very favorable consideration. Nor within its own terms is it obligatory upon this body, which is sole judge of the eligibility of its members The assertion in this case, that the word "office" used in article three above cited, is to be confined to those offices which the Constitution created or designated. We do not admit this; but if it is a correct assumption, still it remains that the office of delegate to this Convention is precisely within this category.

In the discharge of the duty which our convictions create, we have not thought it proper to canvass or judge of the merits of the sitting member, nor the fact that there is no technical contestant. We agree, that if the wish of the voters, whose suffrages sent Judge Fawcett here, can be gratified under a proper construction of the existing state of the Constitution, it should be done. Having failed to reconcile ourselves to this conclusion, we dissent from the report of the majority, and recommenced the adoption of the accompanying resolutions.

NEW REFERENCE.

MR. REED made the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Agriculture, Manufactures, and Commerce, to whom was referred amendment number thirty-eight, relative to taxation of vessels, report the same back and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Revenue and Taxation; also report back amendment number sixty-three, with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Water and Water Rights

Respectfully,
CHARLES F. REED, Chairman.

FURTHER TIME.

MR. EDGERTON. This is the day fixed, by an order of this Convention, suspending the regular order of business, more than a week ago, upon which committees were instructed to report. On behalf of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, I desire to report that committee has held daily sessions since that order was passed and is able to report progress, but that it is unable yet to report a plan. This plan will very soon be perfected and ready to submit. Ask for further time.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, further time will be granted. Hearing none, it is so ordered.

MR. VAN DYKE. I have to state that we have agreed upon a draft of a Preamble and Bill of Rights, but have not had time to have it engrossed. We ask for further time until to-morrow.

THE PRESIDENT. So ordered, if there be no objection.

MR. ESTEE. The Committee on Corporations have had under consideration the questions arising in that department of the Constitution ever since its organization, have met daily and been in session a good many hours each day. They are not entirely through, but will be in a very short time. We ask for five days further time.

THE PRESIDENT. So ordered.

MR. TINNIN. I see that nearly all of the committees are unable to report at this time. I move that one week further time be granted to all committees.

So ordered.

NEW REFERENCE.

MR. ESTEE, from the Committee on Corporations, verbally reported back amendment number thirty-seven, introduced by Mr. Stedman, with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

It was so referred.

POSTAGE.

MR. BARBOUR offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the sum of five dollars be and is hereby appropriated for postage for the Secretary of this Convention on Correspondence, which is done by him by order of the Convention.

MR. BARBOUR. I introduced that at the request of the Secretary, who says that when we send for any information he has no postage to pay for it. That is all.

MR. BLACKMER. I suggest, that under the rule, that should go to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

So ordered.

PRINTING THE JOURNAL.

MR. HOLMES offered the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Reporting and Printing be and is hereby instructed and required to inquire into and report at an early day to this Convention, by resolution or otherwise, the expediency and possible cost of transcribing, indexing, and printing the Journal of this Convention.

Referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano, by leave, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to declaration of rights:

Digitized by Google

SECTION —. The public officers of the State Government, and all municipal governments formed thereunder, which shall be filled by appointment from the Governor or other authority, are public trusts, to be created and administered solely for the benefit of the people; and to make the tenure of said offices dependent on the ascendancy of any political party or any private interests is a gross perversion of power.

Read and referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the manner of filling public offices, and the tenure thereof:

Amend sections six and seven, article eleven, of the Constitution, as follows:

SEC. 6. All officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers whose offices may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people, or appointed, as the Legislature may direct. All appointed officers of the State Government must be appointed by the Governor, save such clerks or other subordinate officers in commissions or departments of the State Government charged with handling public funds, for whose faithfulness the official head of such commission or department may be personally responsible on bonds. The appointment of such designated clerks or subordinate officers may be vested in their immediate official superiors, if the Legislature so directs. No office shall be filled by appointment of the Legislature, or either branch thereof, save the offices of its own body.

SEC. 7. When the duration of any office is not provided for by this Constitution, it may be declared by law; but all officers of the State government filled by appointment shall be held during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment; provided, that the Governor shall not remove any officer without immediately communicating to the Senate (if the Legislature be then in session) an explicit statement of his reasons for making such removal, explaining why he deems it a furtherance of the public good; and if the Legislature be not in session at the time of making such removal, said statement shall be communicated within ten days after the beginning of the next succeeding regular or special session. In case of a Governor retiring from office before the beginning of the session following a removal from office, he shall, before the expiration of his term, place on file in the office of the Executive Department the required statement of reasons for removal, and such statement shall, by his successor, be transmitted to the Senate within the limit of time before specified.

Read and referred to Committee on Executive Department.

COLLECTION OF TAXES.

MR. AYERS introduced the following proposition to collect taxes in installments:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall have the power to provide for the collection of taxes in installments, by requiring the Treasurers to issue coupon receipts to each taxpayer for one twelfth, or any greater proportion, of his total annual tax, the same to be taken up at the option of the taxpayer in gross or in such installments as the law may fix.

Read and referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

MR. CONDON introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, in relation to capital and labor:

SECTION —. Transportation may be done, and supplies obtained for the State, by contract, but only with such persons, firms, or corporations, as employ no alien labor. Public work of all description, including buildings, roads, bridges, aqueducts, wells, and waterworks of every kind, to be constructed or repaired by or for the State, or by and for any county or municipality thereof, shall not be constructed or repaired by contract; but the State, county, or municipality shall pay directly to the laborers employed thereon such compensation as may be agreed on, and no alien, or person employing aliens, shall be employed thereon, or entitled to compensation for any labor he may perform thereon.

SEC. —. Eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work, for all work done by the State, or for any county, town, or municipality therein.

SEC. —. The above sections shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

Read and referred to Committee on Labor and Capital.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the Declaration of Rights:

SECTION —. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious opinions and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent in any manner, nor shall any person ever be questioned and forced to answer any questions concerning or on account of opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State. No law shall ever be enacted by the Legislature making it unlawful to do on any day that which may be lawfully done on any other day.

Read and referred to Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

TAXATION.

MR. BEERSTECHER introduced the following amended amendment—number three hundred and nineteen—relative to taxation:

LIQUOR TRAFFIC TAXATION.

SECTION —. The business of manufacturing and selling intoxicating liquors of every name and nature shall be subject to legislative regulation, by general laws having effect throughout the State; but this shall not be construed as giving to any Legislature the authority to enact prohibition laws, or delegate the power to enact prohibition laws to any political division of this State. The Legislature shall provide for an annual tax to be imposed upon intoxicating liquors, to be paid by every person, copartnership, company, and corporation who shall carry on or be engaged in manufacturing, selling, or disposing of such liquors otherwise than for medicinal, chemical, or mechanical purposes, for each place where such business is carried on by such person, copartnership, company, or corporation. Said tax shall be paid into the treasury of the county, city, village, or township where such business is carried on, and appropriated as the Legislature shall by general law provide. The sale or other disposition of such liquors to minors, persons under guardianship, insane and idiotic persons, paupers, and common drunkards, is wholly prohibited. Every person who shall carry on or engage in the business of traffic taxed as aforesaid in this section, without having first paid the tax imposed, or otherwise violate any provision of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both, as may be prescribed by law, and every sale, until the tax is paid, shall subject the party to such penalty; and all necessary laws shall be passed to enforce the provisions of this section.

Read and referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

APPROPRIATIONS.

MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, respecting appropriations:

No appropriation shall ever be paid out of the treasury of this State, or any of its funds, or any funds under its management, except in pursuance of an appropriation by law, nor unless such appropriation be made within two years next after the passage of such appropriation Act; and every such law making a new appropriation, or continuing or reviving an appropriation, shall distinctly specify the sum, and the object to which it is applied, and it shall not be sufficient for such to refer to any law to fix such sum.

Read and referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE STATE.

MR. MARTIN, of Alameda, introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to the adjudication of claims against the State:

SECTION —. The Legislature shall make no law authorizing the payment by any county, or municipal corporation, or town, of any private claim; but general laws shall be passed in such manner as the Legislature shall deem meet, providing for the adjudication of all such claims.

SEC. —. The Legislature shall make no law authorizing the payment by the State of any private claim against the State; but suit shall be brought against the State on any such claim in any Court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. —. In all such suits the Governor of the State shall be served with legal process, and such defense shall be authorized as in the case of a private individual.

Referred to Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department.

TAXATION.

MR. HAGER introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to revenue and taxation:

1. The taxing power may be exercised by the Legislature for State purposes; and by the counties, cities, and other public and municipal corporations, under authority granted to them by the Legislature, for county, city, and other corporate purposes.

2. All taxes shall be levied and collected by general laws, and for public purposes only. They must be equal and uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and may be levied on all subjects and objects of taxation.

3. All property subject to taxation shall be taxed in proportion to its value; but it shall be subject in proportion to its value to bear only its equal and relative proportion of taxation; and every person subject to taxation shall be taxed in proportion to what he may be worth in real estate, in personal estate, in money owned and in his possession, and in money owing him which may be reduced to possession.

4. The power to tax corporations and corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by Act of the Legislature. All corporations of this State shall be subject to taxation on the real and personal property owned or used by them in this State, on their gross earnings, their franchises, and their capital stock; and all corporations doing business in this State shall in like manner be taxed on the real and personal property, capital, and money owned or used by them in this State.

5. All laws exempting property from taxation, except as in this Constitution expressly prescribed, shall be void.

6. No county, city, town, or other public or municipal corporation, nor the inhabitants thereof, nor the property therein, shall be released or discharged from their or its proportionate share of taxes to be levied for State purposes, nor shall commutation for such taxes be authorized in any form whatever.

7. The making of profit out of State, county, city, town, public school, or other public or municipal money, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any public officer, shall be a felony, and shall be punished as prescribed by law.

Referred to Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. HOWARD. I call for the regular order of business.

THE PRESIDENT. Under the rule the Convention will stand adjourned until to-morrow morning.

MR. LARKIN. I hold that that resolution expired at the same stage as it passed.

THE PRESIDENT. The rule applies to the day. The Convention stands adjourned till to-morrow morning at ten o'clock. [Time, ten forty-five A. M.]

CREATION OF DEBTS.

MR. CASSERLY introduced the following proposed amendment to the Constitution, relative to creation of debts by city and county organizations:

ARTICLE —.

No debt or liability shall be created or expressly incurred by a city or by a department, board, or officer of a city, unless there shall be at the time in the treasury an unexpended appropriation applicable to such debt or liability, and sufficient to discharge the same, and all debts and liabilities previously incurred and payable out of such appropriation, and all contracts, engagements, or transactions in violation hereof shall be unlawful and void. Nor shall any debt or liability of a city be paid except out of money in the treasury appropriated thereto according to law. No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in the pursuance of an appropriation lawfully made. Nor shall any extra compensation or allowance be made to any officer, servant, agent, contractor, or employé of such government, beyond the compensation agreed upon or fixed by law. All transactions or violations of this section shall be illegal and void. The Legislature, at its first session after this Constitution takes effect, shall enact such laws, civil and criminal, as may be necessary or appropriate to enforce the provisions of this section.

ARTICLE —.

No money shall be borrowed by any city for the purpose of defraying any of the expenses of the city for which an appropriation has been made, except in anticipation of the revenue of the year for which the same may be borrowed applicable to such purpose; and all moneys so borrowed must be paid out of such revenue, or out of revenues specially provided to supply any deficiency in the collection thereof; provided, however, that temporary loans in anticipation of the taxes may be renewed so far as such taxes may not have been collected, when the same are fully secured to the extent of twice their amount by valid liens on real estate. In no event shall any indebtedness be incurred to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding —— per centum on the value of the taxable property of a city. Such value shall be ascertained from the assessment roll for State and county purposes made immediately previous to incurring such indebtedness; provided, however, that a city may borrow money under and in accordance with the following conditions and limitations, in addition to any other conditions and limitations contained in the Constitution, namely: The debt must be for some single work or object only, and must be authorized by a resolution passed by a vote of three fourths of all the members elected to the Board of Supervisors, and approved by the Mayor, distinctly specifying such work or object, and the whole amount of the debt to be incurred. The Legislature must, before the creation of such a debt, assent thereto by an Act passed by a vote of two thirds of all the members elected to each house respectively. Such vote shall be by yeas and nays recorded on the Journal of each house; such law shall also distinctly specify the single work or object for which the debt is to be created, and the amount of the debt authorized, and shall contain provisons for a sinking fund to meet the same at maturity, and requiring at least ten per cent. of the principal to be annually raised by taxation and paid into the sinking fund. Such Act shall not take effect until it shall be ratified at an election held in said city, at which no other matter is voted upon, and which shall be held within —— days after the passage of said Act. The Legislature shall make such laws as may be necessary to provide for holding such election and ascertaining the result thereof.

Read and referred to Committee on City, County, and Township Organizations.

REPORT ON PREAMBLE AND BILL OF RIGHTS.

MR. VAN DYKE made the following report from the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights beg leave to report that they have had under consideration, for a number of sessions, the subject-matter referred to them, and, having agreed upon a draft for a Preamble and Declaration of Rights, submit the same herewith to the Convention for its consideration.

At the outset of their deliberations, the committee adopted the plan to take up, in their order, the preamble and different sections of article one of the present Constitution, and consider the same as a basis for their action, with the understanding that only such provisions should be altered or amended as the public interest seemed to demand. Acting upon this plan, the committee first informally considered and acted upon the old preamble and separate sections of article one, seriatim, in connection with the various propositions bearing thereon which have, from time to time, been referred to us by the Convention. Afterwards the committee went over the work again, in the same manner, for final action.

PREAMBLE.

It being the opinion of the committee that the substance and general style of the present preamble should be preserved, they have reported the same, with only slight verbal amendment, as the preamble for the new Constitution. It expresses, in brief and appropriate language, the people's gratitude to the Supreme Being for their freedom, and their desire and determination to secure and perpetuate its blessings by the establishment of a constitutional government. This is all that seems to be required, without loading it down with unnecessary recitals.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTIONS 1–2. Sections one and two, of article one, have been retained, with the same numbers, in the new article, without any alteration. The former declares the inalienable rights of man, and the latter the object and purposes of government, in a manner and style that cannot well be improved.

SEC. 3. Section three of the old article, relating to the right of trial by jury, has been materially changed. There were a large number of propositions referred to the committee, having in view some modification of the jury system, and after giving them due consideration, and devoting considerable time to the subject, the committee agreed upon the section as reported, which has been inserted in the place of the old section seven, immediately preceding the section relating to the Grand Jury, and numbered accordingly. As section three of the article here reported, the committee have adopted a new section, which recognizes the Constitution of the United States as the paramount law of the land.

SEC. 4. Section four, in reference to the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, has been retained with the insertion of the words "or juror," after the word "witness," in the sentence, "and no person shall be rendered incompetent as a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief."

A number of memorials, quite numerously signed, having in view some modifications of, or addition to, what is contained in section four have been referred to us. A representative of the clergy also favored the committee with a brief statement of the reasons assigned by a large class of our people for desiring such changes. But after giving to the subject-matter all the consideration its importance demanded, the committee, with all deference to the memorialists, still remain of the opinion that it would be unwise to materially alter or add to the section as it stands in the old Constitution.

SEC. 5. Section five, relating to the writ of habeas corpus, remains as in the original article.

SECS. 6–7. Sections six and seven, in addition to the declaration in the former against excessive fines, cruel and unusual punishments, and the unnecessary detention of witnesses, bear upon the same subject, namely, the matter of bail. The committee, therefore, have transposed and consolidated these sections, and have added, by way of amendment to the clause relating to detaining witnesses, a prohibition against confining them in jails or rooms where criminals are generally imprisoned. At present it not unfrequently happens that a stranger or poor person, so unfortunate as to witness the commission of a crime, for want of bail is confined in some noisome prison cell, while the criminal, more blessed in the possession of friends or property, goes at large on bail.

Sec. 7. For section seven, as already stated, we have inserted the old section three, as amended. As thus amended, the right of a jury in criminal trials is still retained, but in cases not amounting to felony the Legislature may fix the number to constitute such jury, and in all civil cases the whole matter is left to be provided by law.

Sec. 8. Section eight has been divided so as to form, with the amendments proposed, three sections. The portion relating to the Grand Jury forms the eighth section of the new article. As amended, it provides for a Grand Jury in cases punishable by death, or imprisonment in the State Prison, with the usual exceptions, and in other criminal cases permits a prosecution by information or complaint, as may be prescribed by law. It also provides that while the Grand Jury is retained, two thirds may find a true bill, thereby making it more difficult to defeat action against influential parties than under the old system. Power is also conferred upon the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, to abolish and restore the whole Grand Jury system. In regard to the Grand Jury as well as the trial jury, the action of the committee may not have been as radical as the public sentiment demands, judging from the various propositions before them bearing upon the subject, but, if so, there is a degree of elasticity in the new system which the old did not possess, and the Legislature, guided by experience, will be enabled to meet the wants of the people in this respect.

Sec. 9. Section nine, declaring the right of freedom of speech and of the press, and prescribing a rule in criminal prosecutions for libel, has been retained as it existed in the old article.

Sec. 10. Section ten, declaring the right of the people freely to assemble together to consult for the common good, etc., has also been retained.

The committee, after duly considering the subject-matter of the two foregoing sections, came to the conclusion that it would be unwise to propose amendments to them, or to tamper with them in any respect. Their provisions have been construed, and are well understood, and it is hazardous to make experiments in such matters.

Sec. 11. Section eleven, declaring that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation, is retained.

Sec. 12. Section twelve, providing that the military shall be subordinate to the civil power, etc., has been amended by striking out the last clause, which limits an appropriation for army purposes, as that matter is covered by section twenty-two of the present article, added by way of amendment in eighteen hundred and sixty-six and eighteen hundred and seventy-one; and the latter section has also been left out of our draft, on the ground that it belongs more properly to the legislative article. To section twelve, as thus amended, we have added section thirteen of the old article, as it bears upon the same matter of restricting the military power.

Sec. 13. Section thirteen has been provided for by inserting in place of the old section, already disposed of, that portion of the old section eight, in regard to the right of the accused in a criminal trial, and has been amended. The amendment consists in adding certain other usually enumerated rights, mostly taken from article six of the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and which seem to have been omitted from that portion of the old section eight. We have also altered the clause in regard to putting a person twice in jeopardy, so as to remove any doubt, in case a jury on the trial should, for any reason, be discharged without rendering a verdict.

Sec. 14. The committee struck out the old section of this number, relating to apportionment, as it more properly belongs to the Committee on Apportionment and Representation. The committee have constructed a new section on the subject-matter of the last clause in the old section eight—that is, taking private property for public uses. In the section reported in our draft for section fourteen, it is provided that the time or services of the citizen, when required for the public, shall also be compensated in a manner to be provided by law. It may be that the labor of an individual is his only capital or means of support, and when his time or services shall be required for the public benefit there appears to be no reason why compensation should not be made the same as when private property is taken.

Sec. 15. Section fifteen prohibits imprisonment for debt, except in cases of fraud, and prohibits imprisonment for a militia fine. It has been retained in its place without alteration.

Sec. 16. Section sixteen, declaring against ex post facto laws and laws impairing the obligation of contracts, has been amended so as to prevent impairing the remedy for the enforcement or breach of a contract.

Sec. 17. Section seventeen, in regard to the right of foreign residents to possess, enjoy, and inherit property, has been amended so as to exclude from its provisions foreigners not eligible to become citizens.

Sec. 18. Section eighteen, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude, has been so amended as to read: "No form of slavery shall ever exist in this State, and there shall be no involuntary servitude, except for the punishment of crime of which the party shall have been duly convicted."

Sec. 19. Section nineteen, relative to the right of the people to be secure from unreasonable seizures and searches, is retained without amendment.

Sec. 20. Section twenty, in regard to treason, and the rights of a person on trial charged with the same, remains intact.

Sec. 21. Section twenty-one, declaring that this enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people, was the last section of the original article, and we have retained it as the last in our draft, and changed the number accordingly. In its place as section twenty-one, we have inserted a new section declaring against special privileges and immunities. Several propositions were referred to us bearing upon this subject, and many of the Constitutions of other States contain similar provisions.

Sec. 22. The present section of this number, added by amendment, as already stated, has been dropped from our draft as properly belonging to another article. The committee have prepared a new section to take the place of twenty-one, declaring against appropriations or grants to any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any institution not under the exclusive management and control of the State. Judging from the various propositions on this subject, there would seem to be a public demand for some provision of this kind, in order to prevent the funds and property of the State from being diverted and used for other than public purposes.

Sec. 23. Section twenty-three is a new section, in which it is declared that the provisions of the new Constitution, unless when declared to be otherwise, shall be mandatory and prohibitory. The purpose of this is, that where plain language is used in the Constitution declaring what shall be done, and what shall not be done, it must not be construed, in convenient cases, to be merely directory. This section has also been presented in deference to what seems to be a public demand for something of the kind.

Sec. 24. This is the last section in the new article, and, as already stated, is the same as the twenty-first, or last section in the original article.

Several other new sections were proposed before the committee, but failed of adoption—some for the reason that they were considered unnecessary or inappropriate, and others for the reason, simply, that they more properly belonged to some other department.

Herewith the committee returns to the Convention various memorials and propositions bearing upon the matters under consideration, up to this time, referred to them, and would recommend that so much of any or all the provisions contained therein as may not be embodied in the draft herewith submitted, be not adopted.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WALTER VAN DYKE,
Chairman.

MINORITY REPORT.

Mr. FREUD, on behalf of a minority of the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, presented the following report:

Mr. President and gentlemen of the Convention:

We, the undersigned, minority of your Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, beg leave to report the following two additional sections for insertion in the Bill of Rights of the new Constitution:

Section —. No property qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote, hold office, or become a juror.

Sec. —. The penalty for all crimes, except petty misdemeanors, shall be imprisonment, which shall be proportioned to the character and degree of the offense.

J. RICHARD FREUD,
JAMES N. BARTON,
CHAS. S. RINGGOLD,
A. E. NOEL.

Mr. VAN DYKE. The report which I sent up is accompanied by a draft for a Preamble and Article One of the Constitution. I ask that they both be ordered printed, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

So ordered.

Mr. FREUD. I ask that the minority report also be printed, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

So ordered.

The draft submitted by the majority of the committee is as follows:

PREAMBLE.

We, the people of the State of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure and perpetuate its blessings do establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

Section 1. All men are, by nature, free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing, and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

Sec. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

Sec. 3. We recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties, and the paramount law of the land.

Sec. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness or juror, on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

Sec. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless, when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require its suspension.

Sec. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses, when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

Digitized by Google

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained, or confined in any jail or room where criminals are usually imprisoned.

SEC. 7. In criminal cases, the right of trial by jury shall remain. In all cases except felony, the Legislature may provide by law the number necessary to constitute a jury; and in all civil cases, the number necessary to render a verdict.

SEC. 8. No person shall be held to answer for a crime or other public offense punishable by death or imprisonment in the State Prison (except in cases of impeachment and in cases of militia, when in actual service, and in the land or naval forces, in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in time of peace) unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury. In all other cases, offenses shall be prosecuted by indictment, information, accusation, or complaint, as concurrent remedies, as may be prescribed by law. A Grand Jury shall consist of not less than fifteen nor more than eighteen persons, two thirds of whom may find an indictment or true bill. The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house, may abolish and restore the Grand Jury system.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions on indictments for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right to freely assemble together to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by this State in time of peace, and no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 13. In criminal prosecutions in any Court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial; to appear and defend in person and with counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation, and to have a copy thereof, to meet the witnesses face to face, and to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf. No person after having been once acquitted by a jury, or discharged by the Court, shall again be put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor shall he be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.

SEC. 14. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been made to or paid into Court for the owner, except in cases of war, riot, fire, or great public peril, in which cases compensation shall afterwards be made; such compensation or damages to be assessed by a jury, unless waived by the parties; nor shall the time or services of any person, except when held or under arrest for crime, be taken without just compensation, to be fixed and provided by law.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in cases of fraud; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or the remedy for the enforcement or breach thereof, shall ever be passed.

SEC. 17. Foreigners eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws thereof, while bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native born citizens.

SEC. 18. No form of slavery shall ever exist in this State; and there shall be no involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime of which the party shall have been duly convicted.

SEC. 19. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable seizures and searches shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue but on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 20. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid or comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 21. No special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the Legislature; nor shall any citizen, or class of citizens, be granted privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not be granted to all citizens.

SEC. 22. No money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution not under the exclusive management and control of the State; nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State.

SEC. 23. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words it is declared to be otherwise.

SEC. 24. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

MR. LARKIN. I call for the special order.

THE PRESIDENT. The special order is called for.

THE FAWCETT CASE.

MR. EDGERTON. Regularly these reports ought to be read in open Convention. They have been printed and I believe distributed generally upon members' desks. It is the right of any member to have them read, but, unless some gentleman desires to have them read, and upon the assumption that everybody has read them, I move that the reading be dispensed with.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the reading will be dispensed with. The question is on the adoption of the report of the Committee on Judiciary.

MR. SHAFTER. The minority report contemplated the introduction of two resolutions which I see have not been sent up with it. They are exceedingly brief, and I ask leave to send them up now.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection they will be received.

THE SECRETARY read the resolutions as follows:

Resolved, That in passing upon any question submitted to this Convention, the qualification of its members included, this Convention disclaims all powers except such as are given them by the existing Constitution and the laws in accordance therewith.

Resolved, That the Hon. Eugene Fawcett is not entitled to a seat in this Convention.

MR. EDGERTON. I call for the reading of the resolution attached to the report of the majority of the Committee on Judiciary.

THE SECRETARY read:

"We therefore respectfully submit that the Hon. Eugene Fawcett was eligible at the time of his election, and is entitled to retain his seat in this Convention."

MR. EDGERTON. There was a resolution accompanying that report. It was the resolution that I called for the reading of. If it is not there, I know precisely what the resolution was in phraseology and I ask leave to send up a copy.

There being no objection the resolution was sent up, and the Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Hon. Eugene Fawcett is entitled to a seat in this Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the report of the Committee on Judiciary.

MR. EDGERTON. I suppose, regularly, it would be in order for the gentleman from Santa Barbara to make a statement.

MR. FAWCETT'S STATEMENT.

MR. FAWCETT. I do not rise for the purpose of offering any argument upon the merits, legal or otherwise, of this case, but simply for the purpose of giving a brief statement of the circumstances under which I came to be here at present. It is a fact, sir, that the people of my district—known as the First Judicial District of this State—have heretofore seen fit to honor me with a seat upon the bench of the District Court of that district. It is also a fact that, while continuing to hold that position, the people of a portion of the district further saw fit to honor me with the election to a seat in this body. The circumstances under which they elected me to represent them in this Convention are, perhaps, better indicated by a letter which I addressed to the people of Santa Barbara County, pending the election, concerning the question as to whether I could or would consent to attend this Convention as their delegate. That letter is as follows—perhaps, however, I should first state that the people of my county seemed to meet with some difficulty in agreeing upon a proper person to represent them here. They were divided into factions, as often happens to be the case, and from some reason—whether good or otherwise—they seemed to turn to me as the only person upon whom they could agree as their delegate to this Convention. When it was first proposed to me that I accept the trust, and consent to represent the people of that county here, I said in reply: "No; I am not eligible to the place." I believe that that view would strike nineteen minds out of twenty, superficially, and without an examination into the legal merits and aspect of the case. Without reflection, without examination, I entertained the impression that I was not eligible to a seat in this Convention, and so stated, and declined peremptorily to become a candidate. Other gentlemen, however, in whose opinions I had great confidence—gentlemen both of my own county and other counties in the district and elsewhere in the State, including eminent lawyers in different parts of the State—took issue with me upon that proposition, and, as a consequence, I was led to investigate the question, and finally reached the conclusion that upon the score of eligibility there was no objection to be entertained. Then, having been generally solicited by the people of my own county, belonging to all political parties—including the official heads of the two organized parties—and also having been urged by the people of the balance of the district—the Counties of San Luis Obispo and Ventura—to serve here as a delegate, to the best of my humble ability, I conceived that, perhaps, my original position was wrong, and finally consented to stand as a candidate for delegate to this Convention from the County of Santa Barbara, as announced in the letter which I now offer to read to the Convention. It is addressed to the local paper—the Press:

To the Editor of the Press:

Within the past two weeks I have received many communications from different parts of the county asking me to serve as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention which is to meet at Sacramento in September next. These communications are signed by representative men generally, including the official heads of the two organized political parties, and seem to indicate a general desire upon the part of the electors of the county that I serve them in the capacity indicated. It would be invidious to publish one of these papers without publishing all, and it is unnecessary to tax your columns to that extent.

I have already said, and still say, that I am not a "candidate" for this trust. But, after much anxious consideration of this matter, and moved by arguments that seem irresistible, I have reached the conclusion that if the people think they need my poor services I ought not to refuse. There are times when no man has the right to decline the performance of a public duty from any personal considerations, and the present emergency is one of that nature. Let it be remembered, however, that the people have already confided to me the performance of certain other duties, and that these later duties, if assumed, will necessarily conflict, to some extent, and for the time being, with the former. I cannot be present at the Convention in November, and hold a term of Court here also; nor can it be known at this time whether a substitute can be procured for the latter duty.

Digitized by Google

If, with a full understanding of the situation, and without intrigue, solicitation, wire pulling, or pipe laying on my part, or on my behalf, the electors of this county voluntarily designate me as their delegate, I will accept the trust. Personally, however, I would be much gratified if they could agree upon some other man.

Yours respectfully,

EUGENE FAWCETT.

Santa Barbara, May 10th, 1878.

Having published this letter, Mr. President, in pursuance of my regular duties I left the county, went upon the circuit, and did not return to that county until about five weeks after the election of delegates to this Convention. During my absence the people voted for and elected me as a delegate by about two thirds majority of all the votes cast at the election. I do not pretend to be exactly correct, but that was about the proportion. Now, I have stated that I recognize the fact, Mr. President, even if eligible to this trust, that I had strictly no right to withdraw myself temporarily from the duties which had already been confided to me, unless it was with the universal consent and by the universal desire of the people of the district. I recognized the fact that the people of my county had no right to withdraw me from those duties at the expense of the people of the other counties of the district; that I owed a duty to them; that I owed allegiance to them and the discharge of my duties to those in the other counties as well as to the people in my own county. And, sir, it was only after having been satisfied by an unmistakable expression of the opinion of a number of the people of those two counties that they desired me to temporarily abandon the judicial duties and come here in the capacity of delegate, that I consented to do so. And now, sir, as in the committee the other evening, to substantiate these statements—first, that the people of the County of Ventura desired to have me come here as a delegate—I appeal to the gentleman who represents that county as a delegate, Mr. Finney, elected on the Workingmen's ticket, to say whether or not these statements are true. I say that four fifths of the people of that county were desirous of having me come here and represent them. Is that so?

MR. FINNEY. Mr. President: It is certainly true, and I take great pleasure in saying that the people of my county were perfectly willing that Judge Fawcett should leave the duties of Judge for the time being and come here to represent the people of my part of the State.

MR. FAWCETT. I say that the people also of San Luis Obispo, by a very large majority—substantially they were unanimous upon that point—desired me to come here and represent our portion of the State to the best of my ability; and for the truth of that assertion, I appeal to the delegate from the Fourth Congressional District, Mr. Graves, to say whether or not I have stated the truth upon that subject.

MR. GRAVES. It affords me pleasure to affirm the truth of the statement. It is the almost universal wish of the people of San Luis Obispo County, which is one of the counties embraced within the First Judicial District, that Judge Fawcett should occupy a seat in this Convention.

MR. FAWCETT. That covers, Mr. President, all the territory in my judicial district. Another point, the question as to whether or not I could properly come here as a delegate, seemed to me to depend somewhat upon the state of the calendar of the business of the Court of that district. I am aware that in many parts of this State judicial business is allowed to accumulate and crowd the calendar, and that the Judge cannot at any time properly abandon his duties without leaving litigants to suffer who have business before his Court. In this connection I wish to state this further fact, and it goes to the question of expediency, that at this moment I, at least, have not a single undetermined case before me. No case has been tried, no question has been submitted to me as the Judge of the First Judicial District of this State which was not disposed of, decided, and cleared away before I left the district to attend this Convention. And there is no cause now pending in my district now ready to be tried at this moment. The business has been completely cleared away and the calendar swept, as is the custom in that district at all times; so that no litigant is suffering from my absence at present. Another fact is that the last term of Court in the County of San Luis Obispo came to a conclusion on or about the twenty-second of September, and that from that day to the first Monday in November, there is a vacation in that district, so that all of this time there was no judicial duty to discharge if I had been there. It is true that one term of Court in one of the counties of that district—the County of Ventura—will have to be postponed until after the Convention has concluded its labors. One of the other counties—Santa Barbara—will have a term, but I have already been fortunate enough to provide a Judge for that. This, Mr. President, only goes to a question of expediency. The facts which I have stated seem to me to justify me in consenting to come here as a delegate to the Convention, at the same time holding that of Judge of the First Judicial District. These matters go only to the question of expediency, and I say upon that ground I feel justified entirely, and stand before this Convention conscious of having done nothing wrong, either technically or otherwise, and having acted properly and with a due regard for the desires of the people of my part of the country. I consented to represent them to the best of my poor ability. They desire me to do so, and I submit to this Convention that unless there is great reason why I should take my departure hence, that I ought to be permitted to remain and represent them here as they desired. The fact is, that if I am excluded, the county from which I come will be substantially unrepresented in this Convention, and will have a Constitution thrust at them which they practically have had no voice in framing. I submit that it is now too late to choose a successor to sit here. Already one third of the time has passed, and before a successor could be found and seated here, perhaps another third of the time would have passed, and it would have been practically useless to pursue that course. I have nothing further to say upon this subject, and while this question is being argued upon its merits and in its legal aspects, I respectfully ask leave of the Convention to retire from the floor.

MR. EDGERTON'S ARGUMENT.

MR. EDGERTON. If I correctly understand the prominent position of the minority of the Committee on Judiciary, as set forth in their report, and as it will undoubtedly be expanded in argument by those gentlemen and others who coincide with their views, it is this: That, by the third article of the Constitution of the State, the whole power of the State is distributed into three departments—legislative, executive, and judicial. That that article provides that no person exercising powers and functions properly belonging to one of these departments can at the same time exercise powers or functions belonging to either of the others. That the powers conferred upon the members of this Convention are legislative powers, and that they are, therefore, prohibited to any person holding a judicial office, or to any one exercising the powers pertaining to the Judicial Department mentioned in article three. That article declares that "the powers of the government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments, and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions under either of the others." It is to be observed that the Constitution itself defines what these departments are. It goes on and determines where the legislative power and the whole legislative power of the State is lodged; where the executive power and the whole executive power is lodged; and where the judicial power and the whole judicial power is lodged. I call the special attention of the gentlemen who claim that we are exercising legislative power here to the first section of article four, which provides:

"The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California."

I say then, sir, that in express terms, in language unequivocal and that cannot be misunderstood, the framers of this Constitution have said that the whole legislative power of the State was lodged in the Legislature, which they describe as consisting of a Senate and Assembly. It seems to me that right here on the very threshold of this argument we meet with a complete, absolute, and satisfactory reply to the proposition alleged in this minority report.

Then, sir, comes article five, which defines the Executive Department spoken of in article three, and it is as follows:

"SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of this State shall be vested in a Chief Magistrate, who shall be styled the Governor of the State of California."

Section eighteen, of article five, provides that "a Secretary of State, a Controller, a Treasurer, an Attorney-General, and a Surveyor-General, shall be elected at the same time and place and in the same manner as the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, and whose term of office shall be the same as the Governor."

Now, I say, then, that the whole executive power of this State, as contemplated by article three, is lodged exclusively in the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Secretary of State, the Controller, the Treasurer, the Attorney-General, and the Surveyor-General; and there it ends. That is the executive power enumerated in article three. And then comes article six, which completes this distribution of powers. Section one reads:

"The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a Supreme Court, in District Courts, in County Courts, in Probate Courts, and in Justices of the Peace, and in such Recorders' and other inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town."

Now, sir, stopping here, I say that when this article three says that no person belonging to one of these departments shall exercise the functions belonging to another, it means that a judicial officer shall not exercise the powers of the Legislature, or powers which are vested in the Legislature of the State—that is, of the Senate and Assembly. When it says that Judges shall not exercise executive powers, it means that they shall not exercise powers belonging to the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Controller, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney-General, or Surveyor-General, and nothing more. It seems to me this is clear; but we have authority on this subject not only in this State, but abroad. Now, sir, I understand it to be a cardinal canon of interpretation of Constitutions and laws, that where a constitutional provision has been incorporated from the Constitution of one State into the Constitution of another State, or where a statute of one State has been taken bodily from the statute books of a neighboring State and incorporated in the statute books of another, that the Courts invariably turn to the decisions in that State to guide them in their interpretation of the provision or statute. I believe that is a rule that universally prevails throughout the American States. Now, sir, it is well known that this article three, of this Constitution of California, is copied verbatim et literatum et punctuatim from the Constitution of Iowa. In that State, this precise question of collision between these departments arose in the case of Santo et al. vs. the State of Iowa, reported in the Second Iowa Reports. Santo was Mayor of Keokuk, a city in Iowa, and exercised executive powers. He was made Justice of the Peace, by which he exercised a judicial power. He tried a case as Justice of the Peace, and to that extent exercised judicial powers. The point made was, that his judgment was void, because, under article three, it was argued if he exercised executive powers he could not exercise the functions of a Justice of the Peace. Now, sir, the Supreme Court of that State say this:

"The objection intended is, that the Mayor is an executive officer, and that judicial authority is conferred upon him, in conflict with that provision of the Constitution which says, that no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments—the executive, the legislative, or the judicial—shall exercise any function appertaining to either of the others. These 'departments' are the departments of the government of the State of Iowa. The Mayor of the City of Keokuk is not a part of the government of Iowa. He exercises none of the functions belonging to that department. Whatever executive offices he may perform, pertain to him only as an officer of that corporation. But we do not mean to say that he is an executive officer, in any proper sense. Similar provisions exist in the Constitutions of all, or nearly all, the other States, and yet from time immemorial, similar powers have been conferred upon the Mayors of cities. We are of the opinion that the objection is not well taken."

Now, sir, there is other authority in this State. There is the case of The People v. Provines, 34 Cal. I have not the book here, but I will state the case and the opinion, and its result as I understand it. Mr. Provines occupied the position of Police Judge in San Francisco under a law of the State, and while he was Police Judge he assumed and did exercise the powers of Police Commissioner—one clearly judicial and the other clearly executive. The point was made in that case, that being so, that he was prohibited under article three, he exercising judicial functions, from the performance of these executive functions. But the Supreme Court, in this State, in the case to which I have referred, after referring to the case from which I have just read, decided that article three refers to State government. It refers to officers who have jurisdiction over State affairs, and not local affairs, and they held that the Judge in that case could exercise the powers of that office, to wit: Police Commissioner, and that it was not at all in conflict with article three of the Constitution. So much for authorities.

And now, Mr. President, arguing this question a little further, from the basis of the Constitution itself, if the position of the minority of the Committee on Judiciary is correct, the whole discussion ends right here on article three. It puts an end to the whole thing, and the framers of the Constitution had accomplished all by force of that article. If that be so, then section sixteen, of article six, is mere surplusage—it is mere idle repetition. Section sixteen, of article six, is as follows:

"The Justices of the Supreme Court, and the District Judges, and the County Judges shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected."

I say, that if we take the position assumed by the minority, this means nothing; it can perform no office, because the claimant of this seat here is excluded by the force of article three. Now, sir, it is also another canon of interpretation that some motive must be assigned—some purpose to be subserved by any enactment or provision of a Constitution, which may appear to be surplusage, must be discovered if possible. Now, the question occurs, what is the purpose? I say, that outside of article three, there may be an army of officers created by the Legislature of the State. The Legislature creates any number of these officers, for the purpose of administering the government, which will occur readily to the mind of any gentleman. I say, that section sixteen of article six has reference to these officers and no others. It is not mere surplusage, because there is this vast mass of power, and there might be this multitude of offices outside of the section which they aimed to cover by section sixteen. These offices are incidental, or occasional, or transitory, and are created in the judgment of the Legislature. And when I say Legislature, I mean the Senate and Assembly, the legislative power having control of and governing them as specifically provided for in the Constitution. I say that section sixteen refers to these incidental, occasional, transitory powers of office which it may be found necessary for the Legislature to create in order to effectually administer the government in all its departments. I deduce that argument from these considerations. Observe the limitation. It is upon three classes of Judges. It is only upon Justices of the Supreme Court, District Court, and County Court, but there is a Judge of the Police Court of San Francisco; there may be a Judge of the Recorder's Court—there was once in Sacramento; there may be a Judge of the same character but differently designated in Marysville; there are Justices of the Peace. They are not excluded. That is to say, notwithstanding you have this article three, which provides that a person exercising judicial power shall not exercise functions belonging to the other departments, they put a limitation here upon certain judicial officers—Justices of the Supreme Court, District Judges, and County Judges. That is my interpretation of it. Now we come to the motive of the framers. It is to be borne in mind that the Supreme Court, the District Courts, and the County Courts issue their processes and they are mandatory in many forms upon every department of the government. They issue their injunctions and writs, and it would be in conflict with the dignity of these great tribunals, among which is this Court of sovereign judicial power, to be mixed up in these local offices like that of Police Commissioner or the various other commissions. The Justice of the Peace is different. While it would be proper to leave them to the Legislature on the score of economy, yet it would not be consistent with the dignity or the nature of the Court of sovereign power to be placed in this position. Therefore a limitation was put upon the Justices of the Supreme Court, the District Judges and the County Judges, leaving the Police Judges and Justices of the Peace and Judges of such inferior Courts as the Legislature might establish to exercise both executive, judicial, and legislative functions.

Now, sir, I say that the position of the minority is in contravention of the principle of this Government, from its foundation to the present hour, and in support of that position, I will give one illustration. The Legislature created a State Board of Examiners. It is an office unknown to the Constitution. It is an office which unquestionably the Legislature has the power to create. It is an office which I believe has been in existence for nearly a quarter of a century. Its functions are purely judicial. They sit in judgment upon the question of claims against this State; and yet that Board is composed of the executive officers of the State—the Governor, the Secretary of State, and the Attorney-General. They are executive officers, and yet we see them for a quarter of a century exercising these high and all-important judicial functions in this government. Did anybody ever question the constitutionality of that Board? Has anybody ever pretended, sir, that they were within the purview of this article three of the Constitution, cited in support of the position of the minority of this committee? I deny it. But there is another position that strikes me as a very singular one, which results in this: Gentlemen say that this is an office. I have heard nobody pretend but that the Justices of the Peace and Police Judges were eligible to this place. It cannot be maintained, under section sixteen, of article six, but that a Police Judge or Justice of the Peace may be elected to the Constitutional Convention, and invested with the solemn functions of framing a State law. And yet, sir, you are driven to the position to say that the framers of this Constitution intended, by section sixteen, of article six, to proscribe the Supreme Judges, the District Judges, and the County Judges from exercising these functions, and yet throw the doors wide open to these Judges of inferior Courts.

Now, sir, I see in the minority report, on page six, a clause which I am sorry to see. It is as follows:

"The impropriety of the action contemplated in the resolution reported by the committee, and the justice and necessity of the above opinion, is decisively enforced by the results of its adoption. If anything is certain to be done by this Convention, it is a remodeling of the judicial department. One of the propositions already passed upon by the Judiciary Committee, and to be reported to this Convention, is the utter abolition of the District Courts—their name even is to be erased from the Constitution; and yet the majority resolution would retain a gentleman here who will be required to pass upon the further existence of his office and its emoluments, and perhaps to determine the result by his single vote. 'No one ought to be judge in his own cause,' is a legal maxim hitherto held to be of universal application."

That, sir, is an argument addressed to the pecuniary interests of this claimant. Now, sir, if this Convention is to enforce it, I say enforce it upon everybody else here that is in the same category. You have resolution after resolution offered relating to bank corporations, to gas companies, to insurance companies; you have resolutions relating to quasi-public corporations, like railroad corporations. There are any number of gentlemen in this Convention largely interested in many of these corporations, and they have as directly to pass upon interests appealing to their pockets to a much larger extent than any such interest can appeal to the pocket of the claimant of this position. I think it is a degrading argument; that it was unworthy a place in this report of the minority of the committee; and that it is unworthy of the consideration of this Convention.

But another point: I say that of all men in the commonwealth the men best fitted to discharge the functions that we are here attempting to discharge are the gentlemen who occupy this high and exalted station. The station is one that commands a broader and a closer view of human life in all of its relations, social, political, and individual, than any other in society or under government. These gentlemen are brought in contact with human life at every point. Their habits of life and their duties lead them to a profounder study of the Constitution and laws than any other class in the community, and they may justly be presumed, without disparagement to any other class of gentlemen, to know more of the weaknesses and defects of the organic law than any other class of people in the community. Upon the score of intelligence, upon the score of information, upon the score of learning, I say, without disrespect to any gentleman here, that an honest, upright, learned, and enlightened Judge, is the one above all others to discharge the functions which we are here attempting to discharge.

Now, sir, right there in that connection, what has been the practice elsewhere? Why, sir, in Virginia, Chief Justice of the United States John Marshall was a member of the Convention of that State, and I shall have occasion to allude to that further on. He was a distinguished member of the Convention of Virginia of eighteen hundred and twenty-nine–thirty. There were eight or ten of the most distinguished Circuit Judges of that State in that Convention. The Governor of the State, himself, sat in that Convention—all of them, among the most illustrious gentlemen in the State or nation, or any other State or nation. It was one of the most conspicuous bodies that ever assembled upon this globe. It attracted to it the great civil leaders from Europe and America. The great statesmen were there in a body, watching its proceedings, and taking the deepest interest in it. It never occurred to these great men that they were not eligible. In the State of Illinois, their Judges have been members of their Constitutional Conventions, and performed the same duties we are sent here to perform.

It seems to me that the claimant here cannot be denied his seat except upon a technical interpretation of the word "office," in section sixteen of article six of the Constitution; and I come now directly to that point. What does the word office mean? In the Constitution of Maine—I have not the authority here—but on page one hundred and fifty-nine of Eastman's Digest of the Maine Reports will be found this syllabus:

"The term 'office' implies a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power of the Legislative, Judicial, or Executive Departments of the Government. An employment, or service as an agent, does not."

That is, it implies a delegation of the sovereign powers of the Legislative, Judicial, or Executive Departments; and the Constitution itself says that the legislative powers are vested in a Senate and Assembly, and the executive powers are vested in certain enumerated offices under the Constitution. I claim, sir, that that is direct authority upon the meaning of the word office.

Again, this matter was up before the Supreme Court of New York, in the matter of the oath to be taken by attorneys and counselors. In the twentieth of Johnson's Reports, page four hundred and ninety-two, the Court says:

"The lexicographers generally define 'office' to mean a public employment, and I apprehend its legal meaning to be an employment on behalf of the government in any station or public trust."

This is no part of the government of this State. The government is divided into these three departments, as defined in article three, and as described in articles four, five, and six. The Court goes on to say:

"I apprehend its legal meaning to be an employment on behalf of the government, in any station or public trust, not merely transient, occasional, or incidental. In common parlance the term 'office' has a more general signification. Thus, we say the office of executor or guardian; or the office of a friend. In my judgment, an attorney or counselor does not hold an office, but exercises a privilege or franchise."

The word "office" does not mean a public trust, which is merely transient, occasional, or incidental, and this is occasional, transient, and incidental. It may occur not once in a hundred years; it may occur not once in fifty or two hundred years. Whenever it does occur, it is merely occasional, transient, and incidental, and therefore, within the meaning of that opinion, not an office.

Again, in the case of Walker vs. Cincinnati, twenty-first Ohio, page fifty, the Court, in construing this clause of the Constitution—"The general Assembly, in cases not provided for in this Constitution, shall fix the term of office and the compensation of all officers"—says:

"This clause cannot be regarded as comprehending more than such offices as may be created to aid in the permanent administration of the government."

This is in corroboration of the view which I have already advanced, and follows directly in the line of the decision in the Second Iowa Reports. Now, further upon this question of authority. If I read the minority report correctly, I think they have, in a slurring way, said, or some one has said, that the majority could only find one precedent, and that was the precedent of Judge O'Melveney, who occupied a seat in the Convention of Illinois of eighteen hundred and sixty-two. There is another, sir, directly in point, from that State. The Constitution of the State of Illinois of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, under which the Convention of eighteen hundred and seventy was held, contains this clause:

"Every person who shall be chosen or appointed to any office of trust or profit shall, before entering upon the duties thereof, take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and of this State, and also an oath of office."

Now, sir, the law of Illinois which called the Convention of eighteen hundred and seventy, following that provision of the Constitution, and perhaps without reflection, supposing it was an office, contained a provision that every member of the Convention of eighteen hundred and seventy should take that constitutional oath. That is to say, before entering upon the discharge of his duties he should swear that he would support the Constitution of the United States; and of the State of Illinois. Yet, in the judgment of that Convention, that was not an office within the meaning of the Constitution. When the oath came to be administered, some gentlemen of the Convention had conscientious scruples, and refused to take the oath. They said that they were sent there to tear that Constitution limb from limb; that they intended to lay irreverent hands upon it, and that led to a very able and exhaustive discussion of that question, whether it was an office within the meaning of the Constitution of the State of Illinois. And I would here remark that the Constitution of Illinois, of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, was precisely like ours; that is, substantially like ours in every particular in regard to the amendment or revising of the Constitution of that State, and to calling a Convention. That question arose upon that clause of the Constitution, and it was debated for four or five days, and if gentlemen will consult the debates and proceedings, they will find forty or fifty pages of that discussion, participated in by such lawyers as Browning, of Illinois, Medill, one of the greatest editors of this country, Judge Skinner, of Illinois, who was a member of that Convention, and by others, the most eminent lawyers of the Northwest; and it was decided by an overwhelming vote in that Convention, or by a very large majority, that it was not an office within the meaning of the Constitution, and they modified the oath which had been prescribed by the Legislature, and instead of swearing to support the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of Illinois, they swore that they would support the Constitution of the United States, and the State of Illinois, so far as it was compatible with their duties as members of that Convention. There, sir, is an authority directly in point, corresponding exactly with the case before this Convention.

But I have another authority here which, perhaps, will win the confidence and respect of this Convention more than any yet cited. There was an ancient statute in Virginia, adopted about the time the Constitution of the United States was adopted, and just prior to the organization of the State government of Virginia under that Constitution, or, perhaps more strictly and correctly speaking, adjustment of the government of Virginia under these new rules—there was an ancient statute passed by that Legislature, I think, of seventeen hundred and eighty-eight—a Legislature of which John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States afterwards—was a member; and I have somewhere seen the statement that John Marshall's hands had more to do with the preparation of the laws of Virginia than any other man, or set of men almost, in the State. I find, sir, in the laws of Virginia of seventeen hundred and eighty-eight, an Act passed on the eighth of December of that year, which provides:

"Be it therefore enacted by the General Assembly, That the members of the Congress of the United States, and all other persons who shall hold any legislative, executive, or judicial office, or other lucrative office whatsoever under the authority of the United States, shall be ineligible to and be incapable of holding any seat in either house of the General Assembly, or any legislative, executive, or judicial office, or other lucrative office whatsoever under the government of the commonwealth."

Now, sir, that extract I hold to be applicable here. The law of Virginia provided that no person holding a judicial office under the United States should exercise a legislative office in the State of Virginia. That law has been preserved in that State to this day. It was passed in a Legislature of which John Marshall was a conspicuous and most influential member. In eighteen hundred and twenty-nine Chief Justice Marshall occupied a seat in the Constitutional Convention of Virginia, notwithstanding this provision in the statute which he helped to make, that no judicial officer of the United States could hold any office, legislative, executive, or judicial, in the State of Virginia.

Now, sir, I did not intend to occupy so much of the time of the Convention as I have done. I had deemed it my duty in the conflict of opinion that prevails in the press of this State, and perhaps in here, although I have talked with very few gentlemen on the floor upon this subject—I have deemed it my duty to go somewhat extensively into an expression of the grounds upon which I base my vote in favor of the sitting member. I do not believe that it is in any sense a legislative office which this body is exercising. I do not believe that it is within the prohibition of section sixteen of article six of the Constitution, and I shall therefore vote in favor of the claimant.

There is one other point I wish to call to the attention of the Convention. I take the position that it is incompetent for this body, or for any Constitutional Convention, to prescribe to posterity or to a future generation the agencies they shall select to change, revise, or in any way affect their organic law. Now, sir, section sixteen, to which I have referred, according to the gentlemen opposed to the sitting member, means this—the framers of the Constitution directed that a certain person should not hold position in this Convention. You admit that, and it leads logically and inevitably to this position: that if this Convention can say to a future generation who shall not sit in a Convention to frame its organic law, this Convention may also dictate to a future generation who or what class may convene for that solemn duty. You admit that power and there is no denial of this result, that you may say here in this Convention, that after twenty-five or twenty years, or any time, nobody shall revise this organic law except those gentlemen who belong to the landed aristocracy. You may say, without intending to reduce it to an absurdity, that it shall not be revised except by a Convention of old women. I deny the proposition. I say it is utterly beyond the power of this Convention to say who shall sit in its primary assembly to revise, change, alter, or frame an organic law that is to operate upon all generations to come.

Now, I have a little authority upon that point. In the Convention of Virginia, to which I refer, a resolution bearing directly upon this question was introduced in the Committee of the Whole, and it was adopted by the Committee of the Whole, adopting a clause in the Constitution of Virginia pointing out and prescribing, by definite limitation, the power to amend or change that Constitution in future time. John Randolph, who was a member of that Convention, assailed it upon the very point which I make, sir. He says:

"Wher is the necessity of this provision in the Constitution? Where is the use of it? Sir, what are we about? Have we not been undoing what the wiser heads—I must be permitted to say so—yes, sir, what the wiser heads of our ancestors did more than half a century ago? Can any one believe that we, by any amendments of ours—by any of our scribbling on that parchment, by any amulet, any legerdemain, charm, abracadabra of ours, can prevent our sons from doing the same thing—that is, from doing as they please, just as we are doing what we please? It is impossible. Who can bind posterity?"

He made a very powerful speech in illustration of that idea, and the proposition was overwhelmingly defeated in the Convention by a vote of sixty-eight to twenty-five, and among those voting against it were Chief Justice Marshall, James Madison, the oracle of constitutional law—the great master of American constitution makers. He voted against that proposition, and a long list of most illustrious names, gentlemen who subsequently adorned the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States and the bench of that State. Now, sir, I say that it is incompetent for any makers of constitutions to bind posterity in that way, and there is no revolution about it.

Now, I desire to see precisely by what right we are here and how far we are bound by the Legislature, even. Section two of article ten of the Constitution provides:

"And if, at any time, two thirds of the Senate and Assembly shall think it necessary to revise or change this entire Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors at the next election for members of the Legislature to vote for or against a Convention, and if it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting at such election have voted in favor of calling a Convention, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide, by law, for calling a Convention, to be holden within six months after the passage of such law; and such Convention shall consist of a number of members not less than that of both branches of the Legislature."

Observe the language. I say that the people do not convene to determine the question whether they will have a Constitutional Convention by force of any law. The primary action of the Legislature had no element of a law. It is time that they clothed their action with the form of an enactment, but it might have been done, and often is done, in Legislatures by a joint resolution. It did not require the signature of the Governor. It became a law when the Legislature—the Senate and Assembly—by a two-thirds vote recommended it. They passed no law. It bound nobody. If the whole people disregarded it entirely it carries no penalty with it. The people may act upon it or not. I say it has no element of law in it. And then as to the assembling of the Convention, what does the provision say? If the people vote for this Convention, the Legislature shall do what? They shall provide for what? They shall provide for calling a Convention. They shall make provision for calling a Convention. And there, sir, the powers of the Legislature end. Why is it necessary for the Legislature to make this provision? What is the meaning of the words "make provision?" They shall provide for the expenses of the Convention, and that is because there was no other instrumentality than the Legislature through which the funds could be extracted from the State Treasury; because they are acting under clearly defined powers which have their source in the Constitution. I say that when the Legislature had made that provision for calling the Convention, their powers ceased, and it was not in the power of the Legislature to say what this Convention could do. You admit that power, Mr. President, and what becomes of the Constitution making? Why, sir, if the Legislature can impose one restriction they can impose any. If they may say this they may say that. They might prohibit the alteration of the Bill of Rights, as they attempted to do in Pennsylvania, and that position was repudiated by the Convention en masse almost. If they could do that there is no limit to the legislative power, and this Convention might be hampered by a law that would render its work useless. We are not exercising legislative functions. I say that nobody will pretend that we are exercising executive functions, and in my judgment the functions we are exercising are neither, yet they are as much judicial as they can be said to be legislative. These are my views, and I shall vote for the sitting member.

MR. BARBOUR. Does the gentleman maintain that this Convention, not being bound by the Constitution and the law under which it was made, could refuse to submit its work to the people for ratification?

MR. EDGERTON. That is a relation between this Convention and the people. I say that this Convention draws its power from the primary source of all power, and that is the people. It is entirely outside and independent of this government—that is legislative, executive, and judicial, as defined there. We have nothing to do with either of these departments. We are independent of them. They cannot interfere with us. We are directly responsible to the people for what we do. And right here, in further illustration, is there any act we can do that enters into the concoction of an organic law? Are we not limited to the framing of an instrument to be submitted to the people. Now, there is a distinction between this and the Senate and Assembly, and that is borne out by Mr. Cooley in his work on constitutional limitations. An Act of the Legislature has binding force and power, but I say that when this body, whatever organic law we may frame, when we send it forth to the people, it takes with it no such seal of authority as does an enactment coming from the Legislature. It is binding upon nobody; neither is it a law. What we do here is merely to advise the people; and the people in their primary assemblages enact that organic law, or rather enacts that framework into an organic law. That is the position taken by Mr. Cooley.

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: It was no personal motive that led to the present inquiry concerning the eligibility of Judge Fawcett. In examining the report of the majority of the Committee on Judiciary, I find that the gentlemen making that report have seen fit to state that Judge Fawcett is a gentleman of high character, of learning, and of judicial experience, in every way qualified to make a useful member of this Convention. We, sir, raise no question as to the ability of the gentleman. We raise no question as to his honesty or as to his integrity. To us this seems entirely outside of the true issue to be determined here.

The gentleman, Judge Fawcett, has seen fit to make a statement in his own behalf. He has said that he was sent here by a majority of about two thirds of the votes cast in his judicial district. I beg leave to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that in his district there was one thousand one hundred and eighty-one votes cast, and out of that one thousand one hundred and eighty-one votes, he has but a majority of three hundred and sixty-one, which certainly is not a two-thirds majority if the figures that the Secretary of State has placed at my disposal, are correct. The question as to a majority or a minority in this case, I take it, has nothing to do with the issue. Judge Fawcett occupies a judicial position, and, as I understand it, a Judge is not the Judge of a majority of the people in his district, but the Judge of the whole people in his district. Suppose we do say that the majority have cast their votes in favor of the gentleman having a seat in this Convention; suppose we do say that a majority have delegated the gentleman to represent them in this Convention. I ask if the minority have not equal rights to the services of the Judge. The position of a Judge is a position different from that of any other officer in the government of the State, and the minority have equally as good claims upon his services as the majority, and if there were but one man, or one woman, yea, if there were but one person in that district who desired to have his matters adjudicated before the duly elected and qualified Judge of his district, he ought to have the right, and he ought to have the power to do it at any time.

The gentleman says himself, and the committee have seen fit to embody it in the majority report, that no one has appeared from that district in order to contest the seat of the gentleman upon this floor. I take it that it is a very delicate thing to attack a Judge. It might rebound with terrible force on the assailant. Gentlemen who have vested rights in the district of the member sitting here, the eligibility of whose seat is questioned, gentlemen having vested rights in that district, might hesitate before they come here to attack a gentleman who has the power to decide as to their rights judicially; and, therefore, it is not remarkable that no contestant has appeared upon the scene of action.

In asserting the ineligibility of Judge Fawcett, we do not have recourse, as stated by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, particularly to article three of the present Constitution. It says: "The powers of the government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the Legislative, the Executive, and Judicial—and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any function appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted."

But we place special reliance upon section sixteen, of article six. It says: "The Justices of the Supreme Court, and the District Judges, and the County Judges, shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected."

I desire in the course of my argument, to call your particular attention to the fact that although article three of the Constitution says, that there are three departments of government, and that any incumbent of one department shall be ineligible to occupy a position in any other department—although the very reading of the article would seem to be conclusive, and would preclude any individual occupying official position in any one of these departments from occupying an official position in any other department—although the thing is general and comprehensive, yet I call your particular attention at this point, and I shall more especially do so hereafter in my argument, to the fact that the people of the State of California deemed it expedient to insert another clause in the Constitution, and to particularly specify, designate, and say that certain Judges should not occupy any other office. I claim that section sixteen of article six is more comprehensive than the other, and I shall show that every decision that has been brought here by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, has sole reference to article three of the Constitution, and does not touch section sixteen of article six of the Constitution at all. It seems to me that the gentleman's case falls within the provision of section sixteen of article six.

In anwer to this position, it is maintained by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, and generally by the gentlemen who hold views in opposition to the views of the minority of the Judiciary Committee, first, that the position of delegate to this Convention is not an office; second, that if it is an office, it is of such a character that the people possess the right to choose any one they may desire to fill the position, regardless of any prescribed rule of action. That it is an office, seems to us beyond the power of successful contradiction, and in support of the theory that it is an office, I call your attention, first, to the very origin of the word "office." It originates from ob and facere, signifying "to do for or on account of." To do for or on acccount of any one. Mr. Burrell gives the following definition: "A position or station in which a person is employed to perform certain duties, and by virtue of which he becomes charged with the performance of certain duties, public or private." Mr. Webster defines an office to be a duty, or charge, or trust. Mr. Worcester defines it to be a public charge.

The matter of what the meaning of the word office under the Constitution of a State is, was passed upon in the case of Bradford vs. Justices Inferior Court, in the 33d of Georgia, page 332, in which the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia says:

"Where an individual has been appointed or elected, in a manner prescribed by law, has a designation or title given him by law, and exercises functions concerning the public, assigned him by law, he must be regarded as a public officer."

Again, in the case of Shelby vs. Alcorn, 36 Mississippi, 273, the Supreme Court of that State made use of the following language. This was a case in relation to a gentleman who had been appointed a Levee Commissioner, and it was claimed on the one hand that he was not an officer, and that it was not an office, and on the other hand that he was an officer, and the position he occupied was an office. The law creating and regulating the duties of the office of Levee Commissioner provides:

"That the incumbent shall receive his appointment from the Board of Police of Coahoma County, and hold his office for two years; that he shall give an official bond, and shall act as Treasurer, and as such shall receive and disburse public money; that he shall take an oath 'that he will, in all things touching his office, seek to promote the best interest of his country and of the State of Mississippi;' that he shall make a report of the cost of building and repairing the levees on the Mississippi River, and thereupon the Board of Police is required to levy a tax sufficient to meet it; that he shall receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars, payable out of the Levee Fund. The Levee Commissioner is also charged with the performance of other duties to the public, and is subject to removal from office for malfeasance or misfeasance, by the Board of Police.' Held: The post of Levee Commissioner is a civil office of profit, within the meaning of the Constitution. It is of the nature and essence of the fundamental law of the State, that it avoids every act done in violation of its provisions; and hence, the appointment of a member of the Legislature to an office, in violation of section twenty-six, article three, of the Constitution, is absolutely void, both for want of capacity in the appointee to accept, and for want of power in the functionary in whom the appointment is vested to make it."

In passing upon this question, the Supreme Court say, in speaking of what the term "office" means when used in the Constitution of a State:

"The term office has no legal or technical meaning attached to it distinct from its ordinary acceptations."

It has no technical meaning—no technical meaning aside from its ordinary acceptation, and, it seems to me, that any endeavor to bring in here any technical interpretation of the word "office," other than what "office" is understood to mean in the common parlance of every day life, is not in accordance with the decisions of the Courts, and is not in accordance with good common sense. Therefore, the Supreme Court of Mississippi has said, in this decision, that the term "office" has no legal or no technical meaning distinct from its ordinary acceptation.

Considerable of the difficulty and of the doubt—considerable of the gloom and of the darkness surrounding this subject, upon which we are called to pass, will be dissipated and dispelled, and light will be let in upon the subject if we merely consider the word "office" as we understand the word "office" in the every day parlance of life. If we endeavor to attach to it some technical, special, or specific meaning—if, by a system of straining, we attach to it some technical meaning, the difficulty of passing upon the question, as to whether Judge Fawcett is eligible to this position, will be tenfold increased. But if we cut off all verbiage, and we look upon the word "office" as used in the Constitution, in exactly the same sense and with exactly the same understanding that we look upon the word "office" as used in every day parlance, the matter will be clear as day, and there will be no difficulty upon that score. The Court go on to say:

"An office is a public charge or employment; but, as every employment is not an office, it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between employments which are and those which are not offices. It is generally, if not universally, true that a duty or employment arising out of a contract and dependent for its duration and extent upon the terms of such contract, is never considered an office. An office, as defined by Blackstone, is a right to exercise a public or private employment and to take the fees and emoluments thereunto belonging; whether public, as those of magistrates; or private, as bailiffs, receivers, and the like. (2 Blacks. Com., 36.) And it is laid down that a public officer is one who has some duty to perform concerning the public; and he is not the less a public officer when his duty is confined to narrow limits, because it is the duty and the nature of that duty which makes him a public officer, and not the extent of his authority (7 Bac. Ab. 280; Carthew, 479). And we apprehend that it may be stated as universally true, that where an employment or duty is a continuing one, which is defined by rules prescribed by law, and not by contract, such a charge or employment is an office, and the person who performs it is an officer. This was the rule applied by Chief Justice Marshall in the case of the United States vs. Maurin, in which it was held that an agent of fortifications was an officer (2 Brock. Rep. 102).

"Applying this principle to the question before us, there can be no doubt that the place or post of Levee Commissioner is an office, and the person appointed to fill it an officer.

"The powers vested in the government of the State of Mississippi are either legislative, judicial, or executive; and these respective branches of power have been committed to separate bodies of magistracy. It follows, hence, that whether an office has been created by the Constitution itself, or by statute enacted pursuant to its provisions, the incumbent, as a component member of one of the bodies of the magistracy, is vested with a portion of the power of the government, whether the portion of the power of the government which he is thus entitled to exercise is legislative, judicial, or executive in its character.

"It is, therefore, undeniably true, as maintained by the counsel for the defendant in error, that the words 'civil office under the State,' contained in the article of the Constitution above referred to, import an office in which is reposed some portion of the sovereign power of the State, and, of necessity, having some connection with the legislative, judicial, or executive departments of the government. It is a conclusion which is the necessary and logical result of the theory of the government itself. But, it is very evident that this conclusion can in no wise strengthen the position that the office of Levee Commissioner does not fall under the prohibition in the Constitution, unless it can be further shown that it is not an office, under the laws or government of the State of Mississippi.

"They say that 'there is a manifest distinction between an office and an employment under the government. We apprehend that the term 'office' implies a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power, and the possession of it by the person filling the office.'"

That seems to be the true criterion, that it implies a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power and the possession of it by the person filling the office. This decision seemed to us to be conclusive upon the point that the position of delegate is an office within the contemplation of the law. But it is claimed that it is not an office in a constitutional sense; that is, in a constitutional sense under the Constitution of the State of California. We are cited to article three of the Constitution, but it seemed to us that that has only reference to office in these three departments. As stated, great stress is laid on article three. The case of The People vs. Provines, 34 Cal., is cited as an authority. I have taken pains to examine this authority, and it does not seem to me that any consolation flows from this case to the gentlemen who contend that this is not an office, and that therefore Judge Fawcett is eligible to the position of delegate in this Convention.

The case of The People vs. Provines, 34 Cal., refers solely and alone to the third article of the Constitution. On page five hundred and thirty-four, the Supreme Court of this State say:

"In short, the third article of the Constitution means that the powers of the State government, not the local governments, thereafter to be created by the Legislature, shall be divided into three departments, and that the members shall have no part or lot in the management of the affairs of either of the other departments, 'except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.'"

It was decided in this case that article three had reference to State offices and to State officers alone, and that this gentleman, Mr. Provines, who was Police Judge of the City and County of San Francisco, not being a State officer, and his office not being a State office, therefore there was no disqualification upon his part; but the position of delegate—I do not see how it can be successfully controverted—if the position of delegate is an office, which we claim that it is, then it of necessity must be a State office. It cannot be claimed for a moment that the position of delegate to this Convention is a local office, as a district office, or as a county office; but it must be conceded that if it is an office at all that it is a State office. The decision of the Court in that case has relation solely and alone to article three of the Constitution. It does not speak, nor was the matter brought into question, nor was the matter argued before the Supreme Court of this State, by the respondent in that case of The People vs. Provines, about section sixteen of article six of the Constitution. We have particularly to deal with section sixteen of article six of the Constitution, which says that no Supreme, no District, and no County Judge shall be eligible to any office. That is the particular section of the Constitution that we are dealing with; and in this case of Provines, that matter was not entered into at all. The examination was confined solely and alone to article three of the Constitution, and the Supreme Court simply decides that article three has reference solely and alone to State officers.

If article three of the Constitution was sufficient to meet all the requirements and all of the questions that might arise in relation to officers occupying positions, then why was section sixteen of article six of the Constitution framed. If the framers of the Constitution, and if the people of the State of California who adopted it, would have deemed it sufficient to inhibit judicial officers from occupying positions under the State of California, then it was not necessary to frame a further provision. But because they considered and they believed that article three of the Constitution was not sufficiently broad, not sufficiently comprehensive to include every character of office—for that reason section sixteen of article six was embodied in the Constitution. If article three inhibits and prevents any person occupying a position in any of the three departments of the State government from occupying a position in any other department, and that has reference solely and alone to State offices, then certainly section sixteen of article six goes beyond that when it says that a Judge shall not occupy any office at all; not only the offices that are inhibited in article three, but all and every office in the gift of the people of the State of California, whether it be a State office or whether it be a local office. Otherwise, as the gentleman from Sacramento says, it is a piece of repetition.

Now, there is a principle in law and there is a principle of right, and founded in common sense outside of the law, and that is, when a law is made, and more particularly a Constitution, it ought to be so expounded and so decided as to give full force and effect to every provision of the law or Constitution, and it is not to be decided so as to declare any portion of the law dead or inoperative. Constitutions are always to be expounded liberally. No provision of a Constitution shall be declared a dead letter, or declared inoperative, and the men who framed that Constitution set down as numskulls or dunces, who put things into a Constitution that mean nothing at all. It is the duty of the Courts and of everybody that passes upon the provisions of a Constitution, or upon the provisions of a particular law, to give full force and effect to the whole Constitution or law, and to every article and section.

If you decide that article three embodies the whole law you decide that section sixteen of article six means nothing at all; that it was surplusage, and that it is a dead letter. But if you say that article three of the Constitution means one thing—that is, it means that no officer of any one department of the State government shall have any right to occupy any office under any other department of the State Government, having reference solely and alone to State officers—a position directly under the State and in the pay of the State—if you decide that, then you must go on farther, and give effect to the whole instrument and say that when section sixteen of article six was embodied in the Constitution, that the intention was to exclude those mentioned in that section from office—every possible officer, every possible position that could be created, in the gift of the people of the State of California. That seems to me to be the true construction.

I would now like to discontinue until after dinner.

MR. BEERSTECHER'S SPEECH CONTINUED.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: The propositions that have been advanced in favor of the eligibility of the gentleman here—to use strong language—are, in their tendencies, subversive of all established principles of stable government; a plea we consider evasive, and based upon convenience. In the first place, it is argued that the gentleman's position is not an office. Then we are told that if we should find it to be an office, nevertheless, it is not such an office as is contemplated by the constitutional provisions which rendered certain persons ineligible to hold more than one office. Of course, the second argument, if true, in substance concedes the first argument, which is that necessarily it must be an office. Proceeding from the first and the second, a third is reached, which is that if it is an office in the purview of those provisions of the Constitution which render certain persons ineligible to hold other offices than those which they do hold, then, nevertheless, this Convention is not bound by any such law, by any rule of action laid down by the Constitution. They say, "if you find against us on two points—that is, first, that it is an office; and second, that it is an office in the contemplation of the Constitution, in regard to the eligibility clause—if you find against us on these two propositions, nevertheless you must find for us upon the third proposition;" and that third proposition is that this Convention is above all law; that it is a revolutionary body; that it is controlled by no law or rule of action; that it is a law unto itself. Now, a finding for the gentlemen upon these two propositions necessarily lead, as we believe, those persons who see fit to sustain these theories to find that this Convention is beyond the pale of all law; that it is a rule unto itself; and we are not in a position to concede anything of that character. We claim that this Convention is called a Constitutional Convention, not because it is here for the purpose of framing a Constitution for the people of the State of California, but it is called a Constitutional Convention because it is called under the provisions of the existing Constitution. It is a Constitutional Convention, because it sits here by authority of law; because its proceedings are regulated by law, and not simply because it sits here to frame a Constitution for the people of California.

This Convention sustains an official relation to the people of this State. The gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, concedes this proposition. That is, I believe, he concedes this proposition, because he says that the resolution of the Legislature of the State of California, which gave unto the people of the State the privilege of voting as to whether or no they would have a Convention of this character, was not a law—it was not a legislative Act—it was not required to be signed by the Governor as legislative Acts are required to be signed by the Governor. He says that it is an anomaly in legislation; that it is not like unto anything that exists; that it is not a law. It seems to me that the proper explanation of that is simply this: the organic law of this State, the existing Constitution, contemplates the revision of the organic law. It contemplates within the instrument itself that the instrument can be corrected or a new one substituted in its place. It contemplates that it can be amended, and that it can be revised. And within the existing Constitution are the provisions for a department of the government which can be called into action by the voice of the people; and that department of the government is the Constitutional Convention. Therefore, I beg leave to say to the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, it was unnecessary for the Legislature of California to pass a legislative Act calling a Constitutional Convention. Therefore it was unnecessary for the Governor of California to append his signature to any Act of the Legislature giving power and vitality to a department of the government which exists within the present existing Constitution. That is the explanation of that matter, according to my ideas and according to my theories. We say that this Convention is a combination—an integral part of the government of the State of California, and it is in no sense a revolutionary body. Because it was here; because it had existence; because it was provided for; therefore the Legislature passed no law and the Governor signed no law. It was only necessary for the people to proceed in a marked-out direction. It was not necessary to send the pioneers into the primeval forests to hew a way by which these people might proceed to enact a fundamental law. The way was hewn for them; the road was macadamized, and all that was necessary was to send the column marching down that road that was already provided in the Constitution as it exists. Therefore the Legislature did not order out the pioneers; therefore the axes were not sharpened, and therefore the body of the people marched not into the forest to hew a new road. The Legislature merely let down the bars and opened the road to the people who were marching in the direction of a new Constitution. It is a component and it is an integral part of the organic law of this State.

Of course, gentlemen, if it is found that this is not an office, and that it is not one of the offices that constitute ineligibility under the Constitution, then, of course, it is not necessary to examine these matters; but if you find it to be an office—find it to be an office falling within the ineligibility clause—then of necessity you are obliged to go a step further, and that step is to declare that you are a revolutionary body and with all the communistic and socialistic ideas with which we have been charged. I am not prepared to say that I am a revolutionist before the people of California and the people of the United States at large. But the natural argument, and the natural tendency of the argument is, that we must of necessity declare this body a revolutionary body. We protest against declaring us a revolutionary body. We say that we are acting within forms of law and acting under law. Every man having a seat here took a constitutional oath to support the Constitution of the State of California, and to support the laws of the State of California, and to support the Constitution of the United States. Why is that done? In order that we may be revolutionary, or in order that we may sit under the forms of law?

Of course it may be argued that we swear to support a Constitution that we are about to tear limb from limb, and to separate and strew its fragments broadcast over this Capitol. That is not so. We do not tear, we do not separate the Constitution of California. The present Constitution remains the Constitution just as much after this body has created a new one as it is now. When we leave here, after we have signed the new instrument, yet the old instrument has full force and effect. We do not tear this Constitution to pieces. It is the people afterwards, who by their declarations at the ballot-box say whether they will retain the old one, or whether they will take the new one. Therefore, it is absurd to say that we are tearing the Constitution to pieces, because we are not doing any such thing. The people will decide whether they will have our instrument—that is, whether they will give it life and vitality or not, or whether the old instrument shall remain the law of the land.

I call attention to page three of Jameson on Constitutional Conventions. Mr. Jameson says:

"There are known to the social life of our times, in America, four species of Conventions, namely: I. The Spontaneous Convention, or Public Meeting; II. The ordinary Legislative Convention, or General Assembly; III. The Revolutionary Convention; IV. The Constitutional Convention."

These will now be considered in their order.

"By Spontaneous Conventions, I mean those voluntary assemblages of citizens, which characterize free communities in advanced stages of civilization, having for their purpose agitation or conference in respect of their industrial, religious, political, or other social interests. These gatherings are at once the effects and the causes of social life and activity, doing for the State what the waves do for the sea. They prevent stagnation, the precurser of decay and death. They are among the most efficient manufactories of public opinion; or rather they are public opinion in the making—public opinion fit to be the basis of political action, because sound and wise, and not a mere echo of party cries and platforms. Spontaneous assemblages, for such purposes, of the masses of the people, betoken a very high state of civilization, or instincts that are sure to develop into it. To be possible, in perfection, as we see them amongst us, freedom must be ripe and well nigh universal. But when rulers and social institutions do not favor them, to their occurrence at all would be necessary a native passion for liberty strong enough to break all chains, and which could be daunted by no perils. We are prepared, therefore, to believe that it is only our own race, here and in England, that has thus far successfully vindicated the right of freely assembling.

"The second species of Conventions, consisting of our general assemblies, is so well known that I need not dwell upon it. A general assembly is, in our American system, a collection of representatives of the people, freely elected in pursuance of the Constitution, and empowered to enact the ordinary statute law. Deriving its existence and powers from the people, through the Constitution, it can do nothing except by the authority contained in that instrument, and is, therefore, official or vicarious, but at the same time subaltern—the people being the principal and paramount source of power, yet, as we shall have occasion to note hereafter, though subordinate in relation to the people, considered as the creator of the government and Constitution, the Legislature is nevertheless prima inter pares, when compared with other departments of the government; or, as it has been expressed by speculative writers, is more nearly sovereign than any of the departments which are ordinarily regarded as coördinate with it.

"The third species of Conventions, as its name implies, is a part of the apparatus of revolution. It consists of those bodies of men who, in times of political crisis, assume, or have cast upon them, provisionally, the function of government. They neither supplant or supplement the existing governmental organization. The principal characteristics of this species are, that they are dehors the law; that they derive their powers, if justifiable, from necessity—the necessity, in default of the regular authorities, of protection and guidance to the commonwealth—or, if not justifiable, from revolutionary force and violence; that they are possessed accordingly to an indeterminate extent, depending on the circumstances of each case, of governmental powers; finally, that they are not subordinate or ancillary to any other institution whatever, but lords paramount of the entire political domain. To this may be added, that they are of no definite numbers or organization, comprising sometimes one and sometimes several chambers, and composed indifferently of ex-officers of the government that was, of persons possessing neither office nor the qualifications for it, nor even for the elective franchise, or a mixture of all of these together, as chance may have tossed them to the surface. The general purpose of the revolutionary Constitution, moreover, is to bridge over a chasm between two orders of things; an order that has expired or been extinguished, and an order emerging, under the operation of existing social forces, to replace it. In short, a revolutionary convention, is simply a provisional government.

"Examples of the Revolutionary Convention have been numerous in the political history of the world, and they are becoming daily more so. Among the most famous, and, for our purpose, the most important, are those held in England in sixteen hundred and sixty and in sixteen hundred and sixty-nine.

"Interesting examples of the Revolutionary Convention are found in our own history. The first occurred in New England simultaneously with the English Convention of sixteen hundred and eighty-nine, its assembly being the result, in part, of the same causes which led to that, but, in part, of causes local to New England. Both, however, were called and composed in a similar manner, and organized after the same model, that of sixteen hundred and sixty, convened at the time of the restoration.

"Enough has been said, however, to show the characteristic features of an institution, too often, as we shall see, confounded with the Constitutional Convention, to which I now pass.

"The last species of the Convention is the Constitutional Convention. It differs from the last preceding, in being, as its name implies, Constitutional; not simply as having for its object the framing or amending of Constitutions, but as being within, rather than without, the pale of the fundamental law; as ancillary and subservient and not paramount and hostile to it. This species of Convention sustains an official relation to the State, considered as a political organization. It is charged with a definite and not a discretionary and indeterminate function. It always acts under a commission, for a purpose ascertained and limited by law or custom. Its principal feature, as contradistinguished from the Revolutionary Convention, is, that at every step and moment of its existence it is subaltern. It is evoked by the side and at the call of a government preëxisting and intended to survive it, for the purpose of administering to its special needs.

"It never supplants the existing organization. It never governs. Though called to look into and recommend improvements in the fundamental laws, it enacts neither them nor the statute law, and it performs no act of administration. As John Randolph said in the Virginia Convention of eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, it is called as counsel to the people, as a state physician, to propose remedies for the State's diseases. But it is a physician whose ministrations are confined to the extraordinary maladies requiring a fundamental change in the Constitution, not to those constantly recurring but petty disorders which demand the interposition of the ordinary Legislature.

"It is apparent that institutions whose definitions mutually exclude each other, cannot be the same, however similar the names by which they are popularly known. But it may happen (instances will be hereafter mentioned in which it has happened) that the Constitutional Convention may, by usurpation, assume one or more of the powers of the Revolutionary Convention; or that the latter may exercise those of the former. How, in such a case, is the usurping body to be classed? This question is of great importance, but it is susceptible of a ready answer.

"A Revolutionary Convention, because it is ex vi termini, unlimited, in respect of both the kind and the degree of its powers, may take upon itself the functions of either of the three lower species of Conventions, under the same warrant by which it justifies the assumption of revolutionary powers. A body which can, violently and without law, uproot all existing institutions, can clearly do the lesser act of digesting, or even of enacting, amendments to the Constitution. But, in doing so, it does not change its original character; it is still a Revolutionary Convention, and all its acts must stand on the footing of those which involve the widest stretch of power.

"But the converse of this proposition does not hold true. If a Constitutional Convention step outside the circle of the law, it does not continue to be a Constitutional Convention, but, so far, becomes that whose powers or methods it assumes—a Revolutionary Convention. It leaves the domain of law, which is one of specified and restricted powers, and enters upon that of arbitrary discretion, within which law is silent, and where he is master who wields the greater force."

As we state in the minority report it would be just as competent for this Convention to determine arbitrarily who shall sit here, and who shall not sit here, and who may be admitted here, as to arbitrarily expel any man and take another person into his seat. It would be just as proper for this Convention to do that, as to say that it can run entirely outside of the pale of all recognized law and authority. Mr. Jameson continues, in section three hundred and twenty-four:

"In my judgment, there can be but little doubt, that a member of a Convention, is, in the enlarged and proper acceptation of the term, an 'officer' of the State. This follows, not simply from the reasonings in the Illinois Convention, of which, somewhat developed in details, an abstract has been given, but especially from the principles explained in preceding sections. A Convention is part of the apparatus by which a sovereign society does its work as a political organism. It is the sovereign, as organized for the purpose of renewing or repairing the governmental machinery. That same sovereign, as organized for the purpose of making laws, is the Legislature; as organized for the purpose of applying or carrying into effect the laws, it is the judiciary or the executive. These successive forms into which the sovereign resolves itself, are but systems of organization having relation more or less directly to the government of the society."

Digitized by Google

It has further been said that if the existing Constitution contains any provisions which limit the power of this Convention to admit any one to a seat in the Convention, or which limit the power of the Convention to decide as to the eligibility of any member of the Convention, or, in other words, if there is anything in the existing Constitution which lays down a test and rule of eligibility to the members of this Convention, that section and that clause of the Constitution is null and void, and of no effect. It is claimed that it is null and void and of no effect because the people of a past age cannot limit the people of the present age. It is claimed that this Convention would have no right to limit the power of the coming generations in the Constitution that they are about to frame. With due deference to the gentlemen who have advanced that theory, I am obliged to differ. If that were the case, no law could have any effect in this State, because the people of to-morrow would simply be obliged to raise up and say: "You people of yesterday had no right to prescribe to us what the law to-day should be." It is the reverence with which the laws are held that gives us a fundamental and stable government. The stability of the government rests entirely upon the respect that the people who are to-day living have for the laws that were made by the people of yesterday and day before yesterday. It is the respect that we have for the laws that were made at the organization of these United States that makes this a stable government. Any entering wedge that says that we have a right to disregard the opinions of the men of yesterday, because they do not agree with our opinions, simply because we are the sovereigns of to-day, is a pernicious doctrine, and it will inevitably run the ship of State into destruction and into despair. It is contrary to the opinion of every statesman from Washington down. Mr. Webster said—I quote from the works of Daniel Webster, volume 6, page 224. Mr. Webster was called the great expounder of the Constitution—as a man pre-eminently above all other men; as embodying the wisdom necessary to expound and explain the existing Constitution of the United States; a man who had devoted years of toil and years of study to that instrument. Mr. Webster says:

"I have said that it is one principle of the American system, that the people limit their governments, National and State. They do so; but it is another principle, equally true and certain, and according to my judgment of things, equally important, that the people often limit themselves. They set bounds to their own power. They have chosen to secure the institutions which they establish against the sudden impulses of mere majorities. All our institutions teem with instances of this. It was their great conservative principle, in constituting forms of government, that they should secure what they had established against hasty changes by simple majorities. By the fifth article of the Constitution of the United States, Congress, two thirds of both houses concurring, may propose amendments to the Constitution; or, on the application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the States, may call a Convention; and amendments proposed in either of these forms must be ratified by the Legislatures or Conventions of three fourths of the States.

"The fifth article of the Constitution, if it was made a topic for those who framed the 'People's Constitution' of Rhode Island, could only have been a matter of reproach. It gives no countenance to any of their proceedings, or to anything like them. On the contrary, it is one remarkable instance of the enactment and application of that great American principle, that the constitution of government should be cautiously and prudently interfered with, and that changes should not ordinarily be begun and carried through by bare majorities.

"But the people limit themselves, also, in other ways. They limit themselves in the first exercise of their political rights. They limit themselves, by all their Constitutions, in two important respects; that is to say, in regard to the qualifications of electors, and in regard to the qualifications of the elected. In every State, and in all the States, the people have precluded themselves from voting for everybody they might wish to vote for; they have limited their own right of choosing. They have said, 'We will elect no man who has not such and such qualifications. We will not vote ourselves unless we have such and such qualifications.' They have also limited themselves to certain prescribed forms for the conduct of elections. They must vote at a particular place, at a particular time, under particular conditions, or not at all.

"It is in these modes that we are to ascertain the will of the American people; and our Constitution and laws know no other mode. We are not to take the will of the people from public meetings, nor from tumultuous assemblies, by which the timid are terrified, the prudent alarmed, and by which society is disturbed. These are not American modes of signifying the will of the people, and never were. If anything in the country, not ascertained by a regular vote, by regular returns, and by regular representation, has been established, it is an exception, and not the rule; it is an anomaly which, I believe, can scarcely be found.

"It is true that at the Revolution, when all government was immediately dissolved, the people got together, and what did they do? Did they exercise sovereign power? They began an inceptive organization, the object of which was to bring together representatives of the people, who should form a government."

These are the words of Daniel Webster, that the people do limit themselves as to who can vote and who can be voted for. In this particular instance the people have said, by the fundamental law of the land, that no man who is a District Judge of the State of California shall have a right to occupy any office.

If the plea of the gentleman in favor of the eligibility of Judge Fawcett is not evasive, and if it is not a plea based upon convenience of seating the gentleman in a chair upon this floor, then I ask you what it is. The gentleman says himself, "when I first examined the law in reference to my case; when I first read the sixteenth section of article six of the Constitution, I was satisfied that I was ineligible." Therefore he admits that a plain reading of that section says that he is ineligible. I challenge any man to take that section and read it (the plain reading) and consider it any other way than to say that Judge Fawcett is ineligible to this office. Of course, it will be possible, if it is so determined, to conjure up something on which to base a declaration of eligibility. Of course it is well known how possible it is for men skilled in the law—for men skilled in matters of this character particularly—to conjure up something which proves that day is night and night is day. But if we are going to read, it seems to me that it is proper for us to read the plain text—the apparent and plain interpretation of the text. Article ten of the present Constitution, says that the Constitution may be altered, amended, or revised. It goes on in section one and provides how the Legislature may provide for an amendment to the Constitution. In section two it provides how a Constitutional Convention can be called and how it is to be called. Therefore the existing Constitution expressly provides for this department of the government, and I do not see how a party can go upon any other theory. The Constitution expressly provides that such a department of government, when necessary, shall spring into existence, and after such a department of government does spring into existence, then the men that occupy positions in that department of government hold office under the Constitution as it exists and under the laws as they exist to-day; and if they are officers they certainly are State officers.

Authorities have been read this morning which I take occasion to refer to at this time, and which I will briefly pass over before I close. The main reliance is placed upon the decision found in the 34th Cal. That decision passed upon article three, which says that the powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three departments—the legislative, executive, and judicial; that no person charged with the exercise of the powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any function pertaining to either of the others. The decision said that that had reference solely and alone to incumbents of these three departments of the State government—in other words, to State officers; that it had no reference to any persons who were not State officers. And the decision turns upon exactly these two points: first, the construction of article three, and second, the decision that article three has reference merely to State officers. But they never pretended to declare and lay down the rule of law for section sixteen of article six. Section sixteen says: "The Judges of the Supreme Court, and the District Judges, and the County Judges, shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office during the term for which they shall have been elected."

Now, gentlemen, if you closely follow the reading of article three of the Constitution, you will see that it says that no person charged with any of these duties shall have the right to exercise any function in any other department. That if he is a Judge he cannot be a legislator; if he is a Judge he cannot be Governor at the same time. It there states that the ineligibility shall be based solely and alone—and the exclusion clause there has solely and alone reference to the officers that are designated in the three departments of the government. It says that no incumbent of one of these departments shall hold any office under either of the other two departments. But by referring to section sixteen of article six, it will be seen that it does not say that no Judge of the Supreme Court, no Judge of a District Court, no Judge of a County Court, shall hold office in any of the three departments of the government. Why don't it say that? The other speaks of the government. Article three speaks of the departments of the government, but section sixteen of article six does not speak of the departments of the government. It directly asserts that no Judge shall hold any office—any office. There is a clear distinction. The gentlemen try to drive us back into article three. Article three has got no application to this case at all. It might as well be struck out from the Constitution, for the purposes of this case. Article three confines it so that a man holding one office in one department shall not hold an office in either of the other two departments; but section sixteen of article six comes out, broadly and comprehensively, and says that a man who is a Judge of a County Court, or a District Court, or of the Supreme Court, shall hold no office at all other than the office of Judge. If it desired to confine the inhibitions and the ineligibility merely to these three departments, then, gentlemen, I ask you why didn't it say so, as article two says? It inhibits these Judges from holding any office other than the office of Judge, whether the position be in these three departments or not.

As I took occasion to state this morning, it is the plain duty of the members of this Convention, sitting as judges, to give full effect to that Constitution. You have got no right to say that any provision of the existing Constitution is a dead letter. Everything must have vitality; everything must have life within that Constitution, if vitality and life can be given thereto. Section sixteen of article six merely goes beyond, is more comprehensive and more expansive than article three, and both of them, when judicially interpreted, will have life, and both of them will have vitality. If the vote of this Convention is to be based upon the words of law; if it is to be based upon precedent; if it is to be in consonance with the avowed principles that underlie the American system of government, then, of course, it is necessary to critically examine and pass upon what those principles are, and what the decisions have been upon this point. If, however, the vote is to be merely a complimentary vote; if we are merely to vote for the gentleman because he is a gentleman—and I recognize that fact with every gentleman here to-day—I recognize Judge Fawcett to be a gentleman, a perfect gentleman; I recognize his ability; I recognize his learning. We are not crusading against him or his character. This is not a personal fight. It is a mere matter to determine what the status of this Convention is; whether this Convention is a lawful Convention, or whether it is a revolutionary Convention. We are merely determining what the law is. It is from principle that this action has been taken, and not from feeling at all.

From the examination that I have been able to give the subject, I have come to the determination, first, that it was an office; second, that it was an office that clearly fell within the ineligibility clause of the existing Constitution. I have been unable to agree with the worthy and learned gentlemen who form a majority of the Judiciary Committee. Of course it may be my clouded intellect, and it may be my ignorance; but it seems to me the position that I take in this matter is a position based upon honesty and integrity. I believe it to be the law as I have stated the law to be, and I believe that that law asks and demands of this Convention that Judge Fawcett be declared ineligible to hold a seat in this Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I do not feel inclined to take up any great length of time in defining my position before this body, and stating why it is that I cast my vote as I shall. It would be much more convenient, especially with the intense cold that I have and my bodily weakness, if I could make myself heard without having to exert myself to the utmost capacity of my voice, but I will endeavor to be heard in this large room and by this large assemblage. Now we have presented before us the idea that a certain member who has been acting with us in this Convention, and holding a very high and prominent position in one of the committees of this house, should be expelled. I am now speaking by way of introduction, with regard to what might be considered the impropriety of taking up this subject at this time, when one third of the time allotted to us to attend to the forming of a new Constitution has expired. But if it be true that this gentleman is ineligible to this office, and if it be clearly proven before this body that he unconstitutionally holds the position here which he does hold, as a matter of course the members of this body are bound by the strong obligation of an oath to exclude him from their deliberations. You have had presented before you the idea that if we do not arrive at certain conclusions, and if we do not interpret the Constitution as some other members in this body interpret it, that we are revolutionary. We must see through the glasses of some men; we must take the standpoint that they do; we must go through the process of reasoning that they do, and arrive at the same conclusions, otherwise we are acting unconstitutionally—otherwise we are acting revolutionary. I do not think thus. They are the gentlemen's views, of course. We hear their statements as to constitutionality and the positions they take; the reasons why they arrive at their conclusions, and if those conclusions appear to us to be incorrect, as free agents and representatives of the people, we hold it to be right to lay their views aside, however sincerely they may believe them it matters not. Now we have heard so much said concerning constitutionality, and it was supposed to be so clearly proven in some instances, that it would seem to be almost improper to say anything more whatever upon the subject, but when we take into consideration what is said in article three, the section with regard to the powers of government, it seems to me that we must arrive at some conclusion so far as that matter goes. It says:

"The powers of the government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, the executive, and judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted."

Now, it appears very plain that those occupying a judicial position, having an office of that nature, cannot have either of the others. One position upon the subject is that this is legislative; that it is a branch of the Legislature. Let us examine article four, section one. It says: "The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly." There is where the legislative power of the State is vested. "The legislative power of the State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated the Legislature of the State of California." Now, gentlemen have inquired if certain things were so; was, or not, the Constitution so and so? Here we inquire again if it be that this body is legislative, why didn't the Constitution say so? It says here plainly, says indubitably—too clearly to be misunderstood—that the legislative power shall be vested in the Senate and Assembly. There is where it is. Now, it is plain to me that this is only a council. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, in his effort to prove this an office, read from an authority where it referred to a body of this description as a council. I think it is a kind of advisory council; and nothing that has been done here has life or vitality until the voice of the people—not the signature of the Governor—but the vote of the people gives it life and vitality. Would the gentleman conclude that the people are officers; that they are the Governor in this respect; I conclude not. But the great difficulty seems to be with section sixteen of article six, which says:

"The Justices of the Supreme Court, and the District Judges, and the County Judges, shall be ineligible to any other office than a judicial office, during the term for which they shall have been elected."

Now this matter has been explained, but I will tell my reasons why I vote as I do. I am convinced that what we have read concerning offices as carrying out the great principles under the laws and the Constitution of this State, and on its operations, that this body is extraordinary in its tendencies and that it is different from any legislative body, comes to this, that the great mass of the people are appealed to; that what is done goes before them, and it is with them to determine whether what is done is done correctly. Now it seems to me that when we take this into consideration—and it is highly important that we should consider that this body of men are attempting to carry out the purposes and views to suit the people—that there is nothing legislative in this. It is only advisory. We are sitting for that purpose, and if our acts are approved by the people, why, then, as a matter of course, what is done here will become the great fundamental law of the country. With these views of the subject, and many others that I might state if my health permitted, I have no hesitancy in voting for Judge Fawcett to retain his seat, even though it should be said we are revolutionary.

MR. JOHNSON'S REMARKS.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I cannot agree with all of the sentiments which have been uttered by any one gentleman on the occasion of this debate. The fact is, as Judge Fawcett himself said, I suppose that nineteen twentieths of our people, and perhaps our reflecting people, would have said on the occasion of the first presentation of this proposition to them, that he was ineligible. But on reflection, these first opinions are very often dissipated, and when we come to sift the case and to test it by its merits we come to a different conclusion. Now sir, it seems to me that the argument is reduced down to about this point. If Judge Fawcett had been sent here as a delegate to this Convention before the case reported in 34th California was decided—the case of The People vs. Provines—I should say that, under repeated decisions before that, he could not hold his position as a delegate in this Convention. Why so? Because article three does not use the word "office." The language is different and therefore the rule is different. Now, let us look at this provision in article three. It says:
