

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

could hold two hundred feet along the gulch. Then, when that was worked away these old forty-niners came along and said, you are gobbling up all the wealth of the country, and then they made a law that we could only hold one hundred feet. They wanted the thing divided up and cut down. There's where we learned the rule of division. There is where I got the spirit of dividing the land, and now we are going to apply it to these gentlemen who applied it to us. I don't ask to take a foot of land from Mr. Wilson, or anybody else. But when the gentleman from Alameda tells us there are yet forty million acres of land belonging to this State, we want to apply a limit to that to stop the land grabbers from gobbling it up. I don't blame my friend from Gilroy, Mr. Tully, for speaking in the interest of the land grabbers. I like to hear a man speak his sentiments fearlessly. I don't want to take anything from Lux & Miller, or from anybody else. But we want to fix some limit, so as to protect the remainder of the public domain from being stolen by the land grabbers. We want to fix some limit. It has been treated as a humbug. It has not been fairly considered by this Convention. We are not trying to take anything from any man who has come by it honestly. But we want to apply the limit to the lands which are still owned by the State, and prevent them from being gobbled up by the great corporations. I am here to go for what is right. I want to restrict corporations, and I will not here speak of the railroad company, but I will say that amidst all, the Central Pacific Railroad Company has done something for the country. They have opened up a market, they have helped to settle up the State. They have made it possible for the settler to get his grain to market. But I want some gentleman to tell me what in the name of the people of California any land grabber ever has done for the people. They are doing nothing. They are a fraud on the face of nature. If the railroad companies have taken our lands they have given us something in return, but the land grabber is a dead weight.

SPEECH OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. Chairman: I would not detain the Convention if I had had a fair opportunity before to give my views on this question. I wish to speak on this amendment offered by Mr. McCallum, and I shall not detain you long. Now, if the gentlemen of this Convention knew the history I have gone through in my county for the last four years no such accession would be made. I have fought this question before I ever heard of the Workingmen's party. I have not fought it because I have any prejudice against land holders; not because I was a Workingman, but because I was laboring for the best interests of the State. We don't want the public domain for sheep and cattle alone, owned by men who live in New York or Washington, leaving their Superintendents in charge. We want the country settled up by men with families, who will live on their possessions, become a part of our community, and have an interest in common with ours. Every impartial man knows that California is far behind other States in this respect. Now, I was told by a President of a railroad company—the largest railroad company in the United States—a man who has had experience in many other States, and ought to know whereof he speaks, and he told me that a great deal of injury had been done to the prosperity of the State in this way. That the policy was detrimental to the capitalists, as well as to poor men. The gentleman from Santa Clara, whom I admire very much, says it is nothing but humbug; and he goes to the extent of saying that there is no such thing as land monopoly in this State. Is there no such thing as land monopoly in this State? Now, it seems to me, if we are sincere in this proposition, we cannot object to this amendment. It is the policy which has been pursued by this State heretofore. I have before me the law which limits the sale of school land to three hundred and twenty acres. It is the law and the policy of the Government of the United States to limit the amount of land which an individual may purchase. It is limited to actual settlers on the public domain. Why, you might as well say that a few men may own all the air, as to say that a few individuals can own all the soil upon which the people must rely for sustenance as much as they do on the air which they breathe. The large land holder can afford to make five per cent. on his money; whereas, if the land is divided up, it will yield twenty-four per cent. You might as well say that a man would have a right to enter and hold the Bay of San Francisco, where the commerce of the State is done; where the trade of the State centers. It has been argued here that a man has a right to buy all the stock there is on the market; and, to be consistent, he must be allowed to buy all the land he pleases. But there is a vast difference in the propositions. I do not advocate this in the interest of any party. I am not a candidate for office, else I would not stand here and advocate a proposition of this kind, for the capitalists and land holders control my county to a very great extent. They are a power in themselves. There is no man on this floor who has less desire for public notoriety than myself, if I do have to say it.

SPEECH OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I have been listening to this discussion for two days, and I am very sorry to see these large landed gentlemen from the interior falling into such a state of error in regard to our position. They seem to think that the people of San Francisco are determined to steal their land, and at the same time they talk about what good titles they have. We don't propose to take a single acre of land from any man in the State, not even from the clients of the gentleman from Santa Clara, who have one million seven hundred thousand acres of land in two of the largest counties of the State. We say, if they have got it, let them have it. But when gentlemen tell us there is no land monopoly in the State, that there is plenty of land to be had, they are mistaken. He is the only gentleman on this floor who asserts that there is no land monopoly in this State. I am very glad to find out from him that there is nothing to complain of. Now, the gentleman says: "Do you know of anybody who wants land?" I do. I know of several people who want land. I know very well that the tide of immigration has been cut off from California, because it is almost an impossibility to get land. I don't know that I am prepared to support the whole of the proposition offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan; in fact, I have never advocated that measure. My plan is not to wrest from you your lands already acquired, but to put a stop to this wholesale grabbing; stop this grabbing large tracts of land, holding it out of the market. Let these gentlemen who hold these large tracts of land cultivate them, and pay their fair share of taxation, and we will not complain. But when we hear of men like Lux & Miller, owning six or seven hundred thousand acres of land out of market—holding it entirely for grazing purposes—and when their representative is so anxious to protect their interests, and tells us there is no land monopoly in this State, then we must beg to differ. I shall propose an entirely different plan, and I shall offer an amendment, when the time comes, that the Legislature shall provide by law for the breaking up of large tracts of land, of uncultivated land, by a graduated system of taxation. I maintain that the only way to reach this evil is by taxation. We don't propose to take land from any man who has a title, unless it has been acquired by doubtful means. We don't propose to confiscate any of your lands, or rob you, but we propose that you shall pay taxes on it. Therefore, I propose if a man has one thousand acres, to tax him by one system; if he has two thousand acres, to tax him by another; and three thousand at a still higher rate, and so on, until it will become very convenient for him to sell. That will take the land and place it within the reach of poor people, just as it was when these gentlemen found it here in eighteen hundred and forty-nine. Other people, who have come since eighteen hundred and forty-nine, should have something. It is no reason, because they came in eighteen hundred and forty-nine, that they should have the whole country. Now, we don't propose to disturb your titles. The Workingmen's party do not desire to take a single acre of your land. The gentleman from Tulare, Mr. Brown, says that sheep tramp the ground in his county; and yet he is not willling that the land should be cultivated. I would like to offer an additional amendment, if it is in order.

THE CHAIRMAN. Not in order at present.

MR. WELLIN. When an opportunity offers I will try to present it. It is simply for a graduated system of taxation.

MR. TULLY. I move the previous question.

[Not recognized.]

SPEECH OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I had not intended to speak upon this very important question. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the arguments here, and I am very glad to find out that there are so many of the Workingmen who are anxious to take up land. I am very glad to know there is such affiliation between the Workingmen and the Grangers who belong to this Convention. I presume in consequence of that close conversation they had during the session, they have imbibed this feeling. I do not happen to be one of those men who own large tracts of land, though there is another gentleman of my name who owns a large lot of land. I have heard it reported that I was that very man. I am not. I have had a great many letters inquiring whether I was willing to dispose of my land. Having none, of course I made no reply. I have a little swamp land down here on the bay. If anybody can take it and pay me what it cost me, I will be glad to dispose of it. I never could get to it for the water, not having a right of way. As far as the land question is concerned, to use a favorite expression, I am willing to pool our lands, and have an equal divide all round. My friend Wilson, from Tehama, and my friend from Los Angeles, General Howard, both large landholders; and my friend Biggs, from Butte, another one; my friend from Marin, Judge Shafter, and various others, to them I say, let us pool our lands and have an equal divide. I would be willing to do that.

Now, sir, what is the fact? The public lands of the United States have been open to everybody. Anybody who saw fit could go and take them up. I have been asked time and again if I did not want to join parties and take up land in the San Joaquin and other valleys, and I declined to do it because I did not think it was profitable. I have no doubt there are many on this floor who didn't do it because they didn't think it would be profitable. It was a venture which they did not choose to make. I recollect the time when the Palo Alto Ranch, where Oakland now is, could have been bought for ten thousand dollars. Some gentlemen went to look at it, and came back and said they would not give ten thousand dollars for the whole country. They declined to take a ranch that is now worth millions. Who could foresee the future of California at that time? It is only when success becomes success that we slow-goers, who run behind the race, find out that we have lost the opportunity of making fortunes. That is the truth these people are now beginning to realize, because, as I said, these lands have been open to you all. The State lands and United States lands are open to you now. There is a large quantity of Government land accessible now to any one who wants to take it up. When we came here this was a country something like that which prevailed in the days of Abraham, where the Mexicans had large tracts of land which had been given to them because they had cattle. It was a grazing country. They had no market except for cattle. They owned large ranches, and herds of cattle and horses. The Americans came among them, like the wolf on the fold, and swept away their herds—took them without license and without consent. I know cases where they took possession of springs, and deprived them of the privilege of watering stock. They had large tracts of land simply for grazing purposes, and by these means they were really divested of their lands. In that way they were deprived of their possessions. That is the way these large tracts of land came into the possession of individuals, because it was necessary for their purposes; because they had no use for it for anything else. And I cannot see, after all I have heard, that anybody has been injured. Why, the largest land holder in this State is as much a workingman as any one in this Convention. He commenced as a hardworking laboring man. Lux & Miller commenced as humble butchers, working at their trade. I know another who commenced as a clerk, on a salary of one hundred dollars a month. These are the men you are hurling your anathemas against. Go and do as they have done. They built their fortunes by perseverance and industry. There are many who might be better off if they had saved their money instead of wasting it. Do as they have done. Be industrious and saving, and you will acquire a competence for yourselves and for your children, and then you will have less, perhaps, to complain of. Many of these rich men were in the same position you are.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. There is no proposition here to take a dollar away from these men.

MR. HAGER. No, sir; but you say these men have got too much. That is the complaint here. It is the people of the country who have made the laws, who administer the laws, and if there is any fault to-day it is because these lands have been acquired too easily from the Government. Now, if a man buys three hundred and twenty acres, can't he sell it to the man who wants to accumulate land? The same process of accumulation would still go on.

MR. TULLY. I want to ask a question. What right has a man to the exercise of superior sagacity in this country?

MR. HAGER. Do you mean political sagacity? I think this is owing to the Republican party. Under the old Democratic party we didn't have this monopoly. It was the policy of the Republican party which gave to these men the opportunity to gobble up lands.

SPEECH OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I don't intend to detain the committee but a few moments. I desire as far as possible to regulate this question of land monopoly, and to correct these abuses. I have supported propositions declaring that no corporation in this State shall hold land exceeding five years, except such as is absolutely necessary for their purpose. That is one of the greatest and most important measures passed in correcting the abuses of land monopoly. If the provision prevails (and I believe the Supreme Court will sustain it) it will do away with grants covering nearly one third of the State, and throw it open to the people, which it ought to do. I believe it is practical, I believe it is correct. But whether it is sustained or not, we have provided, in this Constitution, which I am satisfied a majority of this Convention will determine on, that no corporation shall hold land exceeding five years. That regulates the matter. That regulates it in the proper manner.

Another proposition we have made, is to compel the assessment of land by sections and fractions of sections. That will do more to regulate this land question than any of the propositions offered, though they are offered in good faith. I am aware he is in earnest in this matter. But this proposition will not accomplish as much as requiring the lands of this State to be assessed by sections. You have done that. You will stand by it when the final vote, when the ayes and noes come, and you will correct land monopoly, because each section will be assessed the same as cultivated land adjoining. When you come to assess these large tracts of lands at what they are really worth, then they will divide them up into small farms, and that will correct these abuses. We have provided still further, that this land shall be assessed, cultivated and uncultivated, alike. Now, in order that the abuses which have grown up in the assessment of land in this State shall not continue, that even the Assessor of each county may be under the control of the land owners no longer, we have provided a State Board that will place the land upon its cash value. That limits large tracts of land, because they could not make it profitable. In addition to the proposition offered by the author of the resolution, we have prohibited persons not citizens from owning land. That proposition I believe to be wrong. This Convention should determine that a person ineligible to become a citizen shall not have a right to own land. It will go into the Constitution that a man ineligible shall not own any land. We have invited men from Europe to come into our mines and settle, and help develop them; and to say to them, you shall not own any land, is wrong. We will take your land from you. That policy will never do, because they have an immense amount of money invested in the mines of this State, helping to develop these mines; encouraging immigration; encouraging capital to help develop the resources of the country. Accept this proposition to prohibit corporations from owning land over five years, this proposition to assess land according to its agricultural capacity, with the proposition that land shall be equalized by the State Board of Equalization, and the prohibition against persons incapable of becoming citizens of the United States from owning or renting lands, and you have done all that is in your power. You will have accomplished a revolution when the Constitution goes into effect, a greater revolution than ever was made in correcting abuses. We have accomplished all that the most sanguine men in this State could expect. I say, we have done all we should do in this matter. The proposition pending, of Mr. McCallum's, is not as complete as the present law. It is not from the law, it is from the mismanagement of it. The Surveyor-General's office of this State has been conniving at the sale of land contrary to law. With the exception of the present incumbent, there has not been one that has been sustained by law. The present law is correct; but the present proposition is this, to limit to three hundred and twenty acres of cultivated land in this State. It does not affect the amount of land a man may own to keep sheep on.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. Chairman: It is not because I have any ill will towards this committee that I desire to occupy a moment or two of your time, but because I am profoundly impressed with the importance of this question. It is but a few words I can say within the limited time. But allow me to say to the gentleman from San Francisco who last addressed us, and to many other gentlemen, that it is no answer to the argument against land monopoly, that the time once was when the land could have been had for the taking. The facts are that it has been taken in large quantities, and held for speculation, and not for use. These are the facts, and are overwhelming reasons against the arguments advanced here on the other side. I want to call attention to some figures that were cited here this morning by the gentleman from Los Angeles. As they were read they convey a deceptive impression. The figures show the number and size of farms in California in eighteen hundred and sixty and eighteen hundred and seventy respectively:

	1860.	1870
Three acres and under ten	829	2,187
Ten acres and under twenty	1,102	1,086
Twenty acres and under fifty	2,344	3,064
Fifty acres and under one hundred	2,428	3,224
One hundred acres and under five hundred	6,541	12,248
Five hundred acres and under one thousand	538	1,202
One thousand acres and over	262	713

Now, in criticising these figures, we find, that of the farms of fifty acres and over, and less than one hundred and sixty acres, the number has has scarcely increased; that of farms of twenty acres and under fifty, the number was scarcely increased at all; and the number of small holdings—ten acres to twenty—was scarcely increased at all. The number of farms of three acres up to ten, was about doubled, while the number of one thousand acres and over, was more than trebled: hence it will appear, according to this table, that during these ten years, the number of large holdings were increased manifold more than the small farms. But the enlargement of the evil lies not in large farms, but in the ownership of large tracts of land which are not farms. Not in the putting of the land to use, but in holding these immense tracts of land for purposes of speculation, and putting the land to no use at all; there is where the evil lies. The land monopolists have made the assertion that a man has the right to buy all the land he can pay for. Let us see where that leads to. The logical result is, that a man, if he has the money, may buy the whole State of California, and give the nine hundred thousand people notice to quit, and declare that they must go, that they are trespassers. Is that public policy? What advocate of land monopoly will answer, aye? I pause to hear. That is the logical result, and there is no getting away from it. Has the State a right to prevent this? I answer, that it has just as much right as it has to guard against infected ships, or to impose taxes, or to do any other act of sovereignty. The State has a perfect right, and now the question is: Shall the State exercise this right? I wish I had time to rehearse a few facts in answer to some of the arguments here. Land monopoly is a question, the importance of which was early seen and recognized in this country. The question of a limited ownership of land is rapidly becoming one of national importance. When the public mind became once agitated on the subject of slavery, it culminated in civil war, and the conflict against land monopoly was, for the time, forgotten. The result of it was the amazing and almost incredible fact that, from eighteen hundred and sixty-two to eighteen hundred and seventy-two, Congress gave away to railroads, over one hundred and nineteen millions of acres of land. The Central Pacific, or rather, seven of the Directors, were endowed with one twelfth of this land. Add to this, that in eighteen hundred and seventy, nearly ten years ago, over seven hundred holdings in this State exceeding one thousand acres each, and see where you are——

[At this point the gavel fell.]

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: This discussion has only led us to believe what was already believed before, that vast concentrations of land under one ownership are great evils; and we have also been led to believe what we believed before, that if these monopolists are not stopped they will seize upon every river and creek in the country. Now, sir, I believe we are all agreed upon this subject. I believe the discussion can do no more good, and I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Biggs, Evey, McConnell, and Ayers.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Dowling.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

Division being called for, the amendment was adopted, by a vote of 71 ayes to 26 noes.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I wish to offer an additional section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Perpetuities and monopolies are contrary to the genius of a free government, and shall never be allowed; nor shall the law of primogeniture or entailments ever be in force in this State."

Mr. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I do not desire to speak upon the curse of land monopoly. It has been canvassed by others. But I call attention to section sixteen of the old Constitution, which provides that no perpetuity shall be allowed except for eleemosynary purposes. This is substantially the same thing. It prevents land being vested in a member of the family, or in a corporation for ever.

MR. MCCALLUM. That belongs under the head of Miscellaneous Subjects. It is already in that report.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I don't know anything about that report. It is better to put it here. It also guards against primogeniture. If this amendment is worth adopting, there is no better time and place than the present, under the head of land and homestead exemption. This provision is found in almost every Constitution in the United States.

MR. JONES. I apprehend, from the importance manifested, that it is the intention of the Convention to vote down the amendment.

Digitized by Google

MR. ROLFE. I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No perpetuities shall be allowed, except for eleemosynary purposes."

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: That is the language of the present Constitution. It is the provision which has stood for twenty-nine years, under which no perpetuity has ever occurred in this State. It includes everything that there is in the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, which is only redundancy.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. West, Howard of Los Angeles, Murphy, and Steele.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute of the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe.

Division being called, the substitute was adopted by a vote of 73 ayes to 35 noes.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I offer an additional section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature shall provide by law for the breaking up of large tracts of uncultivated lands by a gradual system of taxation."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature shall have power, and it is hereby made its duty to pass laws to prohibit and prevent the monopoly of land, by regulating the representation, use, and occupation thereof, by restricting the possession and tenure thereof, and to pass all necessary laws, not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States, to prevent the accumulation of large landed estates in single hands."

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I offer this, sir, because it seems to me from the discussion here, that it ought to be free from objection, except the objections of those who are contending upon the floor of this Convention that there is no such thing as land monopoly in this State. To those nothing is acceptable. There is another class who believe that the thing is self-regulating. If they are satisfied that there is no such thing as land monopoly, they really ought not to object to a proposition of this kind. Now, sir, the assertion has been made upon this floor, that there is no such thing as land monopoly. Those of the Democratic party on this floor, who seem to take that view, I refer to the very last State platform of their party, and ask them what they meant when they came before the people of this State saying, that land monopoly is a curse, and ought to be abated? There must have been some reason for that platform. And the Republicans of this Convention stood upon about the same platform before the people of this State; and now gentlemen of this particular faith come upon this floor and tell us that it is all a myth. No sir, they say, there is no such thing as land monopoly in this State. Is it, sir, merely to play with the people that these platforms are made? Are they simply taffy to catch flies? I want to tell the Democratic members upon this floor, whose grand old party was organized in the United States on the principle of opposition to monopolies, that they will not be able to explain to the people how it was, after they have been talking so glibly about the reserved power of the State, the sovereign power of the State, that they can find no way to do anything about land monopoly. They can find law to regulate the Chinese; they can find power to put them in ships and send them away from this coast; they can curb corporations; but they cannot curb this great evil of land monopoly. Sir, it will never do. If there is one subject matter over which this State has complete control it is over this very matter. It is by the very power and protection of the State that these men own and hold their property. If a man has a cattle range extending over a thousand hills, how long would he be able to maintain possession of it against the tide of settlement, should the protection of the State be withdrawn? What mean the laws with respect to the subjects of ejectment, partition, adverse possession, and the whole list of laws regarding the acquisition, transfer, recording, and conveyance of land. It is the power of the State, sir, over the subject matter. Now, sir, my time is too short to discuss this whole question as I would like to do. I would like to reply to these gentlemen who have been for two days misrepresenting the position of my colleagues upon this subject. They have been for two days declaring that we were in favor of dividing up the property of this State. There never was a more infamous misrepresentation of our position. We do not want one foot, or one inch of it, and gentlemen know it. But we do want to have this matter under State control, so that this may be the land of the people, and not the land of the monopolist. We only want to harmonize the policy of the State with the policy of the United States. We only want to do what the government has done, make the people owners of the soil rather than tenants of great landlords. [Applause.]

MR. TULLY. I move that the committee now rise, and report that the report of the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption be indefinitely postponed.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I move an amendment, that the committee rise and ask leave to sit again.

MR. REYNOLDS. Is it competent for the committee to rise while an amendment is pending?

THE CHAIRMAN. The committee can rise at any time. The question is on the motion to rise.

Lost.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. FARRELL. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Beerstecher, White, Howard, of Los Angeles, and Lindow.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

Division was called, and the substitute was lost, by a vote of 49 ayes to 53 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wellin.

Lost.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise and recommend that the amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole be adopted by the Convention.

Division being called for, the motion prevailed, by a vote of 63 ayes to 45 noes.

IN CONVENTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: I am instructed by the Committee of the Whole to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption, have adopted certain amendments thereto, and recommend the adoption of the report as amended.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. CAPLES. I move we take a recess until seven o'clock.

MR. SHOEMAKER. I move we adjourn.

Carried.

And at five o'clock P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTIETH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Saturday, January 25th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at ten o'clock A. M., President pro tem. Belcher in the chair.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for one day was granted Mr. Schell.

Two days' leave of absence was granted Messrs. Laine and McComas.

Three days' leave of absence was granted Messrs. Johnson and Winans.

Indefinite leave of absence was granted Messrs. Graves and Overton.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

MEMORIAL TO CONGRESS.

MR. AYERS presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That a special committee of three be appointed by the President to draw up a memorial to Congress, protesting against the further issuance of scrip which can be located on vacant Government lands, whether surveyed or unsurveyed.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer this resolution so that this Convention may be enabled to protest against the practice which has grown up in this Government of issuing preferred scrip on public lands, whether surveyed or unsurveyed. This practice has resulted not only in great injury to the honest settlers, but it has caused great wrongs in regard to titles that already seemed to have been settled. Take the Valentine scrip for instance. That scrip has been held by parties and laid in wait to find a flaw in some title to land located in one of the populous and wealthy centers, and whenever a flaw has been found, this scrip has pounced upon it and taken it. I find, Mr. President, a dispatch in one of our public papers relative to this matter, showing that we are about to have a new avalanche of this scrip, which will go in and precede the settler, take away the choice lands, and do great public injury:

"WASHINGTON, January 21.—The House Committee on Public Lands to-day agreed to recommend the passage of Luttrell's bill providing for the issuance of scrip to owners of the Oregon wagon road grant of July third, eighteen hundred and forty-four, for the number of acres equal to the quantity of lands within the limits of said grant, subsequently embraced in the Klamath Indian Reservation. The proposed scrip is to be locatable on any unoccupied and unappropriated public lands, not mineral, whether surveyed or unsurveyed. It could be used apparently just like the Valentine scrip, and the amount called for by the terms of the bill, though not stated, is understood to be very large."

Now, sir, I for one protest against this practice of issuing scrip which may disturb titles, and which may gobble up the land which settlers ought to have. It is a practice which is ruining the country, and I hope that the resolution may be adopted, and that a committee will be appointed to investigate this matter and send on a proper protest.

MR. WEST. I second the motion.

The resolution was adopted.

LAND AND HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that nine hundred and sixty copies of the report of the Committee of the Whole upon the minority report of the Committee on Land and Homestead Exemption be printed as a supplement to the report already made.

MR. ESTEE. Was not the original minority report printed?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes.

MR. ESTEE. Well, then, I do not see why we should print a second edition of the minority report. This Convention has acted upon the report in Committee of the Whole. It will be printed and come on the file. Now, as I understand it, the original minority report was printed.

MR. BEERSTECHER. The motion is to print the report of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. HAGER. The motion is all right enough except the number of copies.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I move that the number be four hundred and eighty—the usual number.

The motion prevailed.

REPORT.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I send up a report.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Labor and Capital have had under consideration Proposition No. 517—in relation to the hours of labor—and have directed me to report the same back to the Convention, with a recommendation that it be not adopted.

They have also had under consideration Propositions Nos. 74 and 476—in relation to a State Department of Labor and Labor Statistics—and being unable to agree upon the same, have directed me to report them back to the Convention without any recommendation.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I. S. BELCHER, Chairman.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the report be placed upon the general file for action by the Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. It goes there without a motion.

CHANGE OF RULE.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I gave notice that I would to-day move to amend Rule Twenty-four by striking out the last proviso in that rule, which motion I now make. Rule Twenty-four, under the head of calling the ayes and noes, provides: "On all questions and motions whatsoever, the President shall take the sense of the Convention by ayes and noes; provided, five members present shall so require. When the ayes and noes are taken no member shall be allowed to vote who shall have entered the Convention after the calling of the roll is finished. The names of members shall be called in alphabetical order."

I do not propose by my motion to interfere with that rule at all. The last proviso and the one which I move to strike out is this: "Provided, further, that on all resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution, the final vote shall be taken by ayes and noes."

Under this rule the ayes and noes would have to be taken on every motion which would come before the committee. It would make no difference how unanimously we might be agreed upon it; no matter though it was sections of the old Constitution, about which there is no question, the ayes and noes, under that proviso, would have to be taken upon every section. And in those cases where there are different questions involved, as is frequently the case, the ayes and noes would have to be taken upon the different propositions. We find that in our Constitution, as it is, there are one hundred and fifty-three sections. We have to pass upon each section, whether we amend it or not. We have to pass upon it as a part of the proposed new Constitution. I could not, if the time permitted me, say how many sections there would be in this new Constitution. It is safe to say it is double the number, which would be three hundred and six. Besides we have several articles in addition to what we had before. We have, in fact, thirty committees, and each committee reports something. I suppose that is upon the idea that if they did not report something it would be thought they had not done their duty: and that makes the instrument more voluminous than it would otherwise have been. Estimate only ten sections to a committee, and it would make three hundred sections. We have a report of the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal which contains some twenty-six sections, which is entirely different from the old Constitution, being in a separate article; another report on revenue, which is entirely a separate article; and in a number of articles which I have had an opportunity to examine I find that the sections are considerably increased. I understand that it takes twenty minutes to call the roll, or it will average twenty minutes. There would be three hundred roll calls; that is six thousand minutes; how many hours is that? One hundred hours. That would be twenty days at five hours each day. It would actually take twenty days time to call the roll, and do nothing else. Under the rule five members can call for the ayes and noes, and where there is no material difference of opinion it is not necessary to call the roll on every section. This is only to avoid the inflexible rule, that it must be called anyhow. I think it will be passed by a unanimous vote, if there is a correct understanding of it.

MR. WHITE. Would this disturb the right of five members to call for the ayes and noes?

MR. McCALLUM. No sir. Five members may call for the ayes and noes anyhow.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I believe, sir, that if that be stricken out, there will be no time gained at all, because there will be a sufficient number of members upon this floor who will be anxious to have the ayes and noes go upon record, and consequently the ayes and noes will be called by five members. The Chair will then be under the obligation of saying: Is the call for the ayes and noes supported? These members must then arise, their names must go upon record upon the Journal, and the very fact of obliging five members to call for the ayes and noes will consume as much time as the roll will, taken under the rule. I know that it has been the common practice with certain men upon this floor, after the Chair has decided that the vote was in their favor, to then jump up and ask for a division. I have known men to do it upon this floor more than fifty times. The same thing will happen in relation to a call for the ayes and noes, and the very fact of calling for the ayes and noes will use up more time than if we go on under the rule. I am opposed to the change.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I am opposed to amending this rule as proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, but if we have one that no one can offer any more than one amendment to each section, I think it will facilitate business and meet with the approbation of the Convention.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. White, Swing, Larue, and Martin of Santa Cruz.

The ayes and noes were demanded, on the adoption of the amendment, by Messrs. Farrell, Bell, Harrison, Nelson, and Smith of San Francisco.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote, not being two thirds in the affirmative:

SCHEDULE.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President pro tem. in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the report of the Committee on Schedule.

The motion prevailed.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the substitute for section ten, offered by Mr. Moreland.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for section ten: 'In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the terms of all officers elected at the first election under the same, shall be respectively one year shorter than the terms as in this Constitution provided, and the successors of all such officers shall be elected at the last election before the expiration of the terms as in this section provided. The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to the amendment offered by Mr. Moreland, and I am in favor of the report of the Committee on Schedule as the same stands in section ten. If the substitute of Mr. Moreland were adopted, the consequence of its adoption would be that we would have a general election in September of this year, and that we would have another general election for all State, county, and municipal officers next year. In other words, we would have two general elections within one year's time. And if the substitute of Mr. Moreland were adopted, with the Constitution as the same now stands, allowing two Boards of Supervisors in the City and County of San Francisco, or a legislative body with two departments in that city, one of these departments would only be in power and in operation about four months before they would be out of office under the provisions of the Moreland substitute. Now, every member upon this floor knows that if this Constitution that we are framing be adopted, in order to give the people of this State the benefit of its provisions, it will be necessary that legislation be had upon the subject. It will be necessary that force and efficacy be given to the several sections by legislative enactments. The Legislature cannot sit at all until next January, and the laws that that Legislature passes cannot go into force until some time in May, June, or July of next year, and yet the Moreland amendment proposes to wipe out all elected officers next year, virtually allowing them to act under the new Constitution only about six months. If we desire to adopt anything of this character it would be less expensive for us simply to say that there shall be no such election this Fall, but that every person occupying official position in this State shall continue in office until a year from now.

MR. MCFARLAND. Do you recollect whether or not we have established a day for the general election anywhere in this Constitution?

MR. WYATT. The day of the Presidential election.

MR. MCCALLUM. There is its effect. It is assumed by the Committee on Schedule that we did change the time to the even years. We have not done that. This report assumes that, but that is not correct. It has not been done by any article yet. We have not changed the year, but we have fixed the day in the year when the election will take place.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: Section ten, as reported by a majority of the committee, provides that those persons elected to positions under the new Constitution shall continue in office until the next Presidential election; that is, those who are elected for two years shall continue in office three years and those elected for four years will hold but three years. That will bring the next election succeeding the election which takes place this Fall with the Presidential election of eighteen hundred and eighty-four, and will make matters all right and smooth. There will be no trouble about it. The government, under the new constitutional machinery, will be established and in perfect working order. This other way, we put into office a set of men who will have barely been in office before they are to be out of office, or at least before it becomes necessary to have another general election. I cannot see the object in electing men for six months. I cannot see the object of obliging people to go to the polls twice within one year. I believe that the amendment offered by Mr. Moreland is undesirable, and that the report of the committee is a desirable report.

MR. WHITE. Under this report all members of the Assembly have to be elected——

MR. BEERSTECHER. I am speaking of the amendment as affecting the whole State, not particularly Assemblymen. I believe that the report of the committee is a good and proper one, and the one usually adopted in Constitutions.

REMARKS OF MR. MORELAND.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. Chairman: The elections in this State have heretofore been and are now in odd years. The plan of the Constitution that has been adopted so far, is to transfer the elections from the odd years to the even years, and it therefore becomes necessary to make some provision in this Constitution whereby these elections may be transferred from the odd to the even years. To do that it is necessary either to shorten or to lengthen the terms of the first officers elected under the Constitution. This section, which is reported in the schedule, says:

"SEC. 10. In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the term of all officers elected under the same, and whose term of office is four years or over, shall be, respectively, one year shorter than the term provided for in this Constitution, and the term of all officers whose term of office is two years shall be, respectively, one year longer than the term provided for in this Constitution, except the members of the Assembly, whose first term of office shall be one year; and the successors of all such officers shall be elected at the last election before the expiration of the terms as in this section provided. The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law."

MR. MCCALLUM. What provision do you refer to wherein we have agreed to have the election on the even years?

MR. MORELAND. I do not believe that we have established it in the Constitution itself, but it seems to be an understanding in the Convention.

MR. MCCALLUM. The discussion is going to be whether it shall be on even or odd years. There are two sides to that question. Read the section in the legislative article.

MR. MORELAND. I do not know that it is yet settled. It has not yet been settled in the Constitution that the election shall be transferred to the even years. But it has been my understanding all the time that they would be.

MR. STEDMAN. Does not the report transfer the elections to the even years after the first election just as well as the amendment? Both the report and the amendment transfer the election to the even years.

MR. MORELAND. Yes; I think it is generally understood. This section endeavors to conform to the Constitution, to that requirement. Of course, if the Constitution decides otherwise, there will be no necessity for this section; but I am arguing on that hypothesis. This section is defective in several respects. First, it says that the terms of all officers elected under the Constitution. It does not say whether they are the first officers elected or not.

MR. SWENSON. Are you not aware that that is a clerical error in the report? I have already introduced an amendment to rectify that.

MR. MORELAND. I did not draw up this section, and am not responsible for any of its defects. The section that I have introduced provides that the terms of all officers elected at the first election under the new Constitution shall be respectively one year shorter than the terms fixed in the Constitution. Now, Mr. Beerstecher seems to go upon the hypothesis that we are to have no election next year, but I would say that we are. The section excepts members of the Assembly, and says that their terms shall be but one year, consequently we will have to have an election next year for members of the Assembly. Under this section, as reported by the committee, the Senators elected for the short term would serve two terms in the Legislature, and those elected for the long term would serve three terms in the Legislature. I do not think the Convention want to provide that the Senators shall serve so many terms. The section I have introduced provides for cutting off the terms of all officers, without making any distinction, one year. That is, the Judges of the Supreme Court would serve nine years instead of ten. The State officers would serve three years instead of four, and county officers one year instead of two. The object is to bring the elections upon even years. I think the section I have introduced is more perfect than the other, and ought to be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I desire to present an amendment. I propose to strike out lines one and two, down to and including the word "same," in line three, and insert "the term of all officers elected at the first election under this Constitution." I will say, in connection with the amendment offered by Mr. Moreland, that I think the section as originally reported had better remain, so far as the substance is concerned. I am in favor of the report just as it stands, with the exception of the preamble, which I think is wholly unnecessary. There is no necessity of a preamble where it is unnecessary to carry out the objects and purposes of the section. I think the amendment as proposed by Mr. Moreland ought to be rejected, and that the report of the committee as it stands, so far as the substance is concerned, ought to be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman: As a member of the Committee on Schedule, I want to say that this same proposition was introduced in the Committee on Schedule. We disapproved of it, sir, for what we considered very good reasons. According to some of the work already performed by this Convention, County Boards of Supervisors will have more power than they ever had before, to legislate our county matters. Now, sir, this Constitution is undergoing serious changes, and being that these gentlemen would have more to take into consideration, in the few months that they would have to remain in office, than they ever had before, we thought that the best thing that could be done to give these gentlemen an opportunity of legislating for the best interests of their counties and constituents, would be to transfer the shorter terms for one year, and give a longer term one year, so that we would agree in bringing the elections on the even years. That would meet the Congressional matter in a better shape than what it is in at the present time. But, sir, to carry out the amendment as he has it now, men will just about begin to organize for the purpose of making local laws, when a new election is called. My friend, Mr. Moreland, went in considerable on economy, but if his amendment is adopted, it will cost the State fifteen hundred dollars for every election that is held, and that might go to pay the back pay of the members of this Convention. So much saved to the State. Sir, I hope, for the better interests of the State and the people at large, that the report from the committee will be adopted by the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I suppose we all understand what the object of this section is, and what the object of the amendment is. If the new Constitution should go into force, the elections would come on a different year from what they have been heretofore. Therefore, to inaugurate the new system it is necessary to change the terms; either to shorten them or lengthen them. The question is, whether we should shorten the terms, or lengthen the terms. Now, if there are any persons here who are ambitious or desirous of obtaining office under the Constitution, the policy would be to prolong the term one year; but if we are indisposed to accept office, I think the better plan would be to shorten the terms. But without regarding any person's ambition, what ought we to do? What would be the best policy in inaugurating the Constitution under the new system? As I understand the last amendment, it is intended to shorten a two years' term to one year, and a four years' term to three years, so that the officers elected at the first election for two years will hold for one year, and those elected for four years would hold three years. Now, next Fall we have an election; the Fall after that we will have another election, and the regular elections under the Constitution will come on the even years. The elections under the old Constitution come on the odd years. By the old Constitution we have an election next Fall, and by the new Constitution we have another the year after. We will have an election at the time of the Presidential election. I think myself that if this Constitution is adopted by the people, we ought to have a Legislature meet next Winter, and a Legislature meet the following Winter, in order to inaugurate the new system. We will then have two succeeding Legislatures, one following the other for two years, and then after that it will be biennial. As far as I have thought of the matter, it seems to me that in all probability in inaugurating the new system under the new Constitution it may be desirable to have a Legislature next Winter and a Legislature the following Winter, although I do not know that it is absolutely necessary; but perhaps, as we have to have an election, and have to inaugurate the Constitution, it may be well enough to have two Legislatures, one succeeding the other, as the years succeed each other, in order to better inaugurate the new system under the new Constitution. Those who are elected for a four years' term will hold three years, and those elected for a two years' term will hold one year. The other proposition is, that those who are elected for two years should hold for three years. I do not think that is desirable. I do not think that we ought to prolong a term. I am inclined to favor the amendment which is offered by the Chairman of the committee, to reduce the two years' term to one, and the four years' term to three.

MR. JOYCE. Did you not go in for long terms all through this Convention?

MR. HAGER. No; I am a short term man. I should vote for a short term. I am not in favor of a twelve-year term for Judges. I would prefer to have it six. I prefer always a short term, and if you get good men for the short term, it is easy enough to reëlect them. I am in favor always of short terms where they are elected by the people.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen of the Committee: As I understand it, there is only one question involved in this amendment, and that question has been stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager. The question is, Shall we increase the term of the local officers to three years after the first election, or shall we fix it at one year after the first election under this new Constitution? It is a question of policy only. So far as I am concerned, I believe that it will redound to the best interest of the State, and it will have an effect upon the adoption of this Constitution, if it is thought worthy of adoption, which I believe it will be, to shorten the first term instead of lengthening it. I do not think that we ought to provide in this Constitution that the local officers of the City of San Francisco should hold for three years. The long terms have been tried, and it has been the universal opinion, so far as I have been able to observe, that in that city short terms for local officers is the true policy. As Judge Hager has well said, if a person proves by the exercise of his office, during a short term, that he is capable and honest, he will be reëlected. That has been the rule in San Francisco, regardless of party influence. I am in favor of short terms for local officers. My friends who are candidates for office may think otherwise. The idea of electing men for two years, and lengthening their terms to three years, I think will not meet with the approval of the people of that city. I hope that the amendment as proposed by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland, will be adopted for that reason. I think it will be a wise provision, and I indorse what Judge Hager said in regard to it.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. Chairman: I look upon this section as one of the most vital that we shall adopt, from the very fact that the frequency of our elections have been a great burden. If we elect for three years, commencing at the present time, we will have another election in eighteen hundred and eighty-two—a gubernatorial election for the State. The Presidential election comes in eighteen hundred and eighty, and every two years we will have an important election—a gubernatorial once in four years and a Presidential election once in four years—and that will draw out the general vote of the State each election. I do not see the objection to having our officers remain in office under this Constitution, even if it is new, for three years. Those that hold office for four years would be elected again in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and bring the elections on even years, and then alternately the gubernatorial election and the Presidential election. I favor this section that would elect the State officers for three years from eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, those who would hold office for four years, so as to bring the election again in eighteen hundred and eighty-two. Then the Presidential election would come in eighteen hundred and eighty-four, and the regular State election in eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and so on. I look upon this section as a very important one; one that involves a very important interest of the State. I think we should be very careful to regulate our elections so as to come on even years.

MR. WHITE. The section reported by the committee I see no objection to if the word "Legislature" was put in place of the word "Assembly." "Assembly" only takes the lower house.

MR. MORELAND. My amendment says the first term of the officers——

MR. WHITE. I would say "except the members of the Legislature."

MR. ESTEE. Will my friend permit me to make a suggestion. The original section now says: "In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the term of all officers elected under the same, and whose term of office is four years or over, shall be, respectively, one year shorter than the term provided for in this Constitution, and the term of all officers whose term of office is two years shall be, respectively, one year longer than the term provided for in this Constitution, except the members of the Assembly, whose first term of office shall be one year." Now, the result is that the term will always be three years unless that is amended.

MR. WHITE. I supposed it was provided in the legislative article that we have adopted that the term should be four years, and that this merely provided for the first term. That should be amended, of course, in that respect.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: This discussion is assuming a proposition to have been agreed upon by this Convention, which has not yet been met and determined. I trust gentlemen will not vote upon a long term or a short term, until we meet the question squarely and determine whether we are going to change the elections from the odd to the even years. I say that the legislative committee has made no such change. On the contrary, the Constitution upon which we have acted contemplates State elections on the odd years, the same as it has been heretofore. If this stands as reported by the legislative committee, then this whole section ten of the Committee on Schedule is entirely unnecessary. It ought to be struck out, and the amendment ought to be voted down. It will stand then exactly as it was before. Now, sir, the error into which gentlemen have been led, who were not connected with that committee and familiar with its transactions, is the fact that the election should be held in November, because Presidential elections have been held in November, and it has been assumed that therefore State elections were to be held on the even years. The committee did not see proper to take any further action upon the subject that is reported in this section three, which is the only thing on the subject.

"The members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, and their term of office shall be two years."

That is the amendment which I proposed, having introduced it, not to bring the elections on the even years, but simply to have a uniformity, inasmuch as the Act of Congress requires that national elections shall be held that time of year, and so we changed from December to January as to the time of the meeting of the Legislature; it was thought to be just as good a time. Whether that amendment is a good one or not is of course not proper for me to say. I do not think it is of very much consequence—the change from September to November. The question is will we change from the odd to the even years? That is another thing, and in order to get a vote—I suppose it is in order—I move to strike out section ten of the report of the committee, simply to present that idea. There is only one real objection to this. That is, that by going on as heretofore we will have a Presidential election every four years, in which we have no other election—when no other officers are elected except Presidential electors and Congressmen. Now, there will be the expense of an election under this proposition, which might be saved if we would change this system. I submit that the saving is not worth the change.

It has been said here, that we must have two sessions of the Legislature successively, in order to meet this difficulty. If we elect members of the Legislature this year, and then elect them again in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, under the proposed change we would have no session of the Legislature for three years—the next session in eighteen hundred and eighty, and the following session in eighteen hundred and eighty-three. Therefore there would be a necessity to have succeeding sessions of the Legislature, and, sir, the cost of this extra session of the Legislature amounts to more than the costs of an election for President. Now, we have had this system heretofore, and I say it works well. My judgment is, that too much consequence is given to national politics, and too little to State politics. It is often of more consequence to the people who is elected Supervisor of a district, than who is elected President of the United States. I have been about as strong a partisan as most gentlemen on the floor, but my experience in the matter has convinced me that more attention to the local offices—and this is particularly true where the issues between national parties can scarcely be defined. I would like to see more consequence given to State politics, and less to national politics. I think we had better keep it as it is. There are so many difficulties about having two sessions of the Legislature in succession, which would be involved in this idea reported by the Committee on Schedule. I present this motion to strike out this whole section. As to whether the terms of officers should be extended, I would be in favor of shortening them rather than extending them—but I am discussing the main question, as to whether we should change our system or not.

MR. MORELAND. I hope that this motion to strike out will not prevail.

THE CHAIRMAN. The motion is not in order, and will not be entertained until the other motions are disposed of.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the amendments now before the committee will be voted down, and that the motion to strike out will prevail. I do not see any necessity for changing the time for holding the general elections in this State, and I say that the argument is strong and forcible that the general elections should be kept as they are now, apart from the national or Presidential elections. Under this Constitution we have created a very great many important offices which it will be more important for the people of this State to fill judiciously, than it will be whether this man or that man is elected President of the United States. It will be proper to keep our elections apart from the general elections of the Federal Government, and I hope that the amendment will be voted down, and that we will agree to the motion of the gentleman from Alameda to strike out the section and leave it as it is.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the motion to be offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum. I think the section ought to be stricken out——

MR. HAGER. If that motion is not before the House then you have spoken once on the subject pending.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I desire merely to say if the section is stricken out to the word "the," in the ninth line, it will be sufficient.

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment to section ten will be voted down, and the motion to strike out, offered by Mr. McCallum, will prevail. Section three of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, which Mr. McCallum referred to, expressly says, that the members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, and their term of office shall be two years. Now, we have agreed upon that in committee, and section ten is in direct conflict with section three of the legislative article, by providing that the terms of the members of the Assembly shall be but for one year. I do not think that we ought to undo what we have already done, especially, as this is better as it now stands. I have heard no objections with regard to the members of the Assembly holding for two years; and as I have claimed before, on this floor, upon questions of this character, where there is no change demanded by the people, I believe that we, acting in the interests of the people, should not favor a change where there appears to be no change demanded, and no change necessary. If there is any one thing that is more essential than another in official duties it is experience in office. The experience that a man has in public offices makes him qualified to perform his duties. I think that if section ten is stricken out and this report of the Committee on Legislative Department, section three, is agreed upon when we come into Convention, that then the ends will be subserved which the Committee on Schedule desire to have subserved by their report on section ten.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that you do not all understand this section alike. Now, the gentleman from Los Angeles says, that he is opposed to State elections coming on the same day with the Presidential election. Now, I understand that by this section we elect all our States officers on a year other than that in which the Presidential election is held. For instance, the next Presidential election is in eighteen hundred and eighty. We elect our Governor and State officers in eighteen hundred and eighty-two. We elect a President again in eighteen hundred and eighty-four, and State officers again in eighteen hundred and eighty-six. The only election that we would have at the time of the Presidential election would be some local officers and members of the Legislature. We certainly could stand that. It does seem to me that every two years is often enough to have an election. Now, if this amendment of Mr. Moreland is adopted, we would have an election every two years, and that is enough.

MR. AYERS. Wouldn't it bring the election for State officers and Presidential Electors on the same year?

MR. McFARLAND. The State officers would be elected in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and the President in eighteen hundred and eighty-four. County officers would be elected both in eighteen hundred and eighty-two and eighteen hundred and eighty-four. One election in two years would be enough. They would both be important elections, and would both bring out the full vote.

MR. AYERS. Then I understand the gentleman to go on the idea that the State officers shall be elected in eighteen hundred and eighty-two instead of eighteen hundred and eighty. That is not the question before this Convention.

MR. McFARLAND. Under this section our State election will come in this year, in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and again in eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and never touch the Presidential election—that is, if the section, as it stands, is adopted.

MR. AYERS. But suppose the amendment is adopted.

MR. MORELAND. It would come just the same under the amendment.

MR. McFARLAND. I think that is right. It will give an election every two years.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: The terms of the State officers, including judicial and legislative offices, are fixed in the Constitution, and it is probable that this motion has reference to some other class of officers. I would inquire what officers they are, that are elected for two years under this Constitution?

MR. McCALLUM. Members of the Assembly and county officers.

MR. SHAFTER. County officers are constitutional officers, but their terms of office are not fixed in the Constitution at all, and will not be governed by this amendment at all. County officers are utterly unaffected by it, for they are not elected for terms fixed in the Constitution. It simply declares that they shall exist. But their terms are not fixed in the old Constitution, and I am not aware that they are fixed in this.

MR. MORELAND. This last clause says that: "The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law."

MR. SHAFTER. They are elected under the statute, and not under the Constitution. It only applies to the constitutional terms.

MR. AYERS. Would a motion be in order to pass this section until after we consider the article on legislative department in Convention? I think it would be well.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I desire to ask, whether the chair will entertain my motion to strike out, if this amendment should be adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. Yes. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Swenson, to insert the word "first," between the word "the" and the word "term," as it occurs the last time in line four.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. WEST. The last clause of this amendment says, that "the first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution, shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law." The statute, at present, provides for the election of members of the Assembly, in September. They would hold office for one year under this provision. The point I wish information upon, is this: Do the committee expect to provide for the first two sessions of the Legislature, under the new Constitution, to be annual instead of biennial?

MR. McCALLUM. That would be the effect. I now make my motion to strike out section ten.

MR. SHAFTER. I move to strike out the word "shorter," and insert the word "longer."

MR. HAGER. This is out of order. It is going back to the original proposition. This proposition is to amend.

MR. McCALLUM. My motion is not in the nature of an amendment. My motion is simply to strike out.

THE CHAIRMAN. I entertain the motion, but all these motions precede a motion to strike out.

MR. WELLER. Mr. Chairman: The word "longer" will bring the gubernatorial and Presidential election both in the same year, and Mr. Moreland's amendment will bring the gubernatorial election in eighteen hundred and eighty-two. We do not want a Presidential election to interfere with our important State elections. We want an important election every two years. The consequence will be, under Mr. Moreland's substitute, that we will have our elections, Presidential and gubernatorial, alternately every two years.

MR. KEYES. Mr. Chairman: It appears to me that this Convention does not understand the proposition. I think for my part, that it is decidedly perferable to have the elections on the even years, and that is the proposition in the Moreland amendment. The people do object to having so many elections. It has been a cause of complaint in my part of the country, that we have too many elections.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: This matter is a matter that would properly have come before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, but as the Committee on Legislative Department saw fit to report upon this matter in relation to the election of Senators and Representatives, I have seen fit to allow this discussion without calling a meeting of that committee for this purpose. I am certainly opposed to extending the time of any officer beyond the time provided in the Constitution. I believe that the true policy would be to elect the State officers this Fall for three years, and then again in eighteen hundred and eighty-two. It would bring our county elections on the even years. It will obviate the necessity of a special Act of Congress every two years for the election of our Congressmen. A special Act was passed because we did not want to hold an election last year. To extend the time will throw the gubernatorial election with the Presidential election, which I think should be defeated.

MR. CROSS. My opinion is that the people did want an election this last year.

MR. LARKIN. I speak of the Legislature as representing the people. Now if you adopt the Moreland amendment, you will bring the State election in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, in eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and so on between the presidential elections on even years. It will bring your county elections on even years, and I think it would suit better. To extend the term of the Governor and State officers, I do not approve of. The officers elected next Fall will be elected for three years. The officers elected for county officers would be elected for one year, so as to make it come on the even year. We can elect county officers in eighteen hundred and eighty, at the time of the presidential election. We would elect again in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, so it brings your elections uniform on even years. It avoids election expenses and the complaints that Mr. Keyes alluded to. The people demand that we should retrench upon this matter, and should provide for elections so that all officers should be elected every two years, and that the city, county, and township elections should conform to the general elections. It costs as much to elect county officers as State officers. All elections should be so that they can be held on even years. That will correspond with the provision offered by Mr. Moreland.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: I merely wish to call the attention of the Committee to the fact that if the amendment offered by Mr. Moreland is not adopted, we will have an election every year. If you do not adopt this section, you will have State elections every odd year, and National elections every even year. We have had one or two special laws of Congress, and such was the dissatisfaction that they are going to compel the Congressional elections to be uniform throughout the United States; and they will come on the even year preceding the Presidential election. Then without this section we will have an election every year. It seems to me that it is a foolish expenditure of money. If you go on with the present system, you are bound to have an election every year, whereas, if you adopt the amendment, you will only have an election every two years.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I submit to the members of this Convention whether it would not be better to strike this out, and, in connection with the article on legislative department, correct it as we wish. The fact is, we do not exactly understand the bearing of it.

MR. McCALLUM. What necessity is there for correcting the legislative article?

MR. WHITE. I say if the majority of the Convention wish to alter it, it appears to me that is the proper time and place to do it. I suggested that we would strike that out, and get it into a shape that would do it much better, and make no conflict between the two sections. There are a great many gentlemen who do not understand the bearing of the two sections upon each other. When we get into Convention we can alter it to suit.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: If the amendment of the gentleman from Marin prevails, one year is to be added to the terms of all offices. For instance, the first terms of the Supreme Court Judges will be thirteen years, the Governor five years, our Railroad Commissioners, all of whom are to be elected for four years, will serve five years. No opportunity for any change whatever for five years in that case. As to the two propositions, I am in favor of the shorter, if this system is to be adopted at all.

MR. AYERS. Would not the amendment of Judge Shafter bring the general State elections and the Presidential elections on the same year?

Mr. McCALLUM. Yes.

MR. AYERS. That is an evil which we should guard against.

MR. McCALLUM. It would extend the term one year instead of shortening it one year. If the amendment should be adopted it would not only not be in conformity with the legislative article, but the legislative article would have to be amended to conform to it, because all officers are to be elected at the next general election. We would then have to change that clause which requires them to be elected biennially, so as to be consistent with what we have already done. We have to vote down this amendment and strike out the section.

MR. WYATT. I believe that we are as well prepared to vote now as we will be. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Freeman, Howard, of Los Angeles, Ayers, and West.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the substitute, offered by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland.

The substitute was adopted on a division, by a vote of 46 ayes to 40 noes.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out the section.

MR. TERRY. It has been adopted by the committee and cannot be stricken out. It is not an amendment or a substitute.

MR. McCALLUM. I asked that specific question, whether a motion to strike out could be entertained, and the Chair answered in the affirmative. To say that we could not make that motion would be simply to deprive the Convention of an opportunity to vote upon it at all. The President of the Convention has uniformly ruled for the last two weeks that this was the last motion to be put.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: This is nothing more than an amendment. It is adopted as an amendment, and the motion to strike out is perfectly in order, because the substitute is nothing more than an amendment.

MR. ESTEE. A motion to strike out without inserting anything is out of order.

MR. TERRY. The action of the committee in inserting these words is binding, and it cannot be stricken out. We have already adopted it, and we cannot undo what we have done.

MR. BLACKMER. There is nothing before the committee.

THE CHAIRMAN. There is a motion before the house. The point of order is raised that that motion is not in order. In the opinion of the Chair it is in order. The Chair will entertain it. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Alameda to strike out the section.

MR. SHAFTER. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Seconded by Messrs. Reed and Blackmer.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair has decided that the motion to strike out the section now, after it has been amended by a substitute, is in order. From that ruling there is an appeal taken by the gentleman from Marin. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Committee?

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: The general rule, as I understand it, is that after a legislative body has adopted a single proposition it cannot be overruled nor subverted by any process whatever. The only exception made is in our Rule Twenty-one: "Any member may call for a division of a question when the sense will admit. A motion to strike out and insert shall be deemed inadvisable; but a motion to strike out being lost shall neither preclude amendment nor a motion to strike out and insert." There has been no motion to strike out that has been lost. The section has been adopted just as it stands precisely, and it does not fall within this rule by any manner of means. If it did then you could have moved to amend, but having been adopted upon a distinct motion to adopt it, I do not see what power this committee has over it. It has been so ruled twenty times by the President during the session of this Convention. If a substitute is adopted we must pass to the next section. A motion to strike out a part of it and insert is not the adoption of the proposition itself. Here there has been a distinct vote to adopt it.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: I refer to Rule Thirty-two: "A substitute shall be deemed an amendment, and be treated, in all respects, as such." Now, according to the parliamentary rule, as I understand it, there is no such thing as a substitute at all, it is merely an amendment. The name substitute came into use by moving to strike out certain words and substitute others. This motion that has prevailed changes only about two words of that old section. The section is the same. A practice has grown up here which I have never seen anywhere else. I have seen whole sections recopied, with the change of only one or two words, and offered as a substitute. But this rule says that "a substitute shall be deemed an amendment and treated, in all respects, as such." The proposition offered by the Chairman of the Committee on Schedule was nothing more than an amendment.

MR. TERRY. Mr. Chairman: The motion of the gentleman from Alameda, as I understand it, was to strike out section ten, as reported by the committee. Now, that has been stricken out and another adopted. Now, what is there before the House? There is no motion to strike out the substitute.

MR. McCALLUM. My motion was to strike out section ten.

MR. TERRY. Section ten has been stricken out and other words put in its place.

MR. HAGER. Mr. Chairman: As I understand this thing, it is to put this thing back under the old Constitution, and have the elections in the odd years, instead of the even years. But perhaps we had better be cautious. A great many members are in favor of having the elections as they have been heretofore, so as to get them out of the Presidential elections, and of United States politics. Now, that is the question that ought to be determined first, by the Convention, whether we should have the elections in the odd or even years. It is a very easy matter. I regret the previous question was moved so early, because that is an important matter. I am inclined to favor the odd years. There is but one objection to it, and that is in regard to the congressional elections. Our congressional election should have been last year. This is an important question to be settled by this Constitution, whether it is disposed to have these elections as they were, in the odd year, or, as some think, and as it is proposed to change, to the even year? If this substitute stands as it is now, we are confined, of course, to the even years by the change, but if we strike it out, it leaves it open to an arrangement in the future. I am therefore in favor of striking out, and I am in favor of sustaining the ruling of the Chair. Under the rule we have adopted, this must be considered as an amendment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: Mr. McCallum, of Alameda, made a motion to strike out. The Chair at that time decided the motion was not in order. There were two amendments before the House, one of which was adopted. The amendment offered by Mr. Moreland was also adopted. Now, the Chair decides that the motion to strike out is in order. Unless the ruling of the Chair is sustained, Mr. McCallum's motion to strike out is totally ignored, and any motion to strike out that may be made in this House must necessarily hereafter be ignored.

MR. TINNIN. Is a motion before the House until it is entertained by the Chair?

MR. BEERSTECHER. The Chair decided that the motion was not in order at that time, but would be in order after the amendments were disposed of. I shall vote to sustain the ruling of the Chair.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: As I understand it this body has adopted a substitute for section ten. That is, this House was not satisfied with the original section, so it adopted something else different from the original section. It is true that our rules say that that substitute is nothing but an amendment, bnt it is an amendment representing the final action of this House. Now, the proposed amendment interposed by the gentleman from Alameda, is to strike out just what this House has just adopted, and that is unparliamentary. It cannot be done for this reason, that there never would be an end to the action of a legislative body; and the only means of reconsidering the action of a legislative body is by some member, who voted in the affirmative, giving notice of a motion to reconsider, and having it come up in its regular order. Again, let me say, that the ruling is not correct for another reason, that the gentleman moves to strike out section ten as originally presented. Section ten has been changed, and the result is as Judge Terry has stated. I think the house cannot reconsider. It is a well established proposition, that when a legislative body adopts any proposition, that proposition must remain as the action of that House, unless the proposition as amended be added to; but the original action cannot be changed except by adding to. You cannot strike it out. For that reason I shall have to vote to sustain the appeal.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me that the ruling of the Chair is entirely correct. It does not follow because this body has amended a section that it has expressed its opinion in favor of the section. A majority of the committee may be against the whole subject-matter, and it may be willing to amend it, so as to get it in the best form it may be got into. Suppose a majority were opposed to section ten; how are we going to get rid of it? There is only one way, and that is to strike it out. We do not adopt these sections in Committee of the Whole. We simply take up the section, consider it, and amend it. If the committee does not amend it, we go on. Suppose a majority of the committee are opposed to the whole provision; what can they do except to move to strike it out? Will gentlemen say, that because this committee has amended this section they cannot strike it out? Suppose a majority of the committee, being undetermined how to vote on the whole proposition, vote to amend it, and after they have looked at the section as amended, they say: "Well, we are opposed to it anyway, notwithstanding the amendment. The amendment makes it better, but it ought not to be adopted even as amended." Is it not proper then to strike it out?

MR. HOLMES. Could the committee turn around now and strike out section nine?

MR. McFARLAND. Unless it was held that we had passed it and proceeded to the consideration of another section. Suppose the Moreland amendment had only referred to a portion of section ten; could you not have moved to strike out the whole section? Now his amendment really only relates to the amendment of the section. It is in the shape of a substitute, but it is an amendment in theory and substance. Will any gentleman tell me that after you have amended a section at all you cannot strike it out? If that is so the smallest amendment in the world would prevent the committee from striking out a section. I do not think that gentlemen ought to indulge in a violation of parliamentary rules. I am opposed to the motion made by the gentleman from Alameda, and should hate to see the section stricken out, but it seems to me that the committee has a right to strike it out if they see fit to do so. The committee has only adopted an amendment to the section, and now it is claimed that because we have adopted an amendment we cannot strike the section out.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. Chairman: I wish to say that, in my judgment, the ruling of the Chair is not only in conformity with the ruling of the President of this Convention, but is in accordance with correct principles, and that the proposition has been argued entirely upon a wrong theory. The President of this Convention has frequently decided that the friends of a proposition had a right first to amend before a motion should be made to kill it, or indefinitely postpone it.

MR. ESTEE. Striking out is not the equivalent of indefinitely postponing.

MR. McCALLUM. The gentleman makes the mistake of supposing that this is like a legislative body passing bills, whereas it is a Constitutional Convention, acting upon different sections independent in themselves, as this is. Now, sir, if the gentleman were proceeding as Speaker of the Assembly, he would hold that the friends of a bill have a right first to amend it. After getting through with the amendments, if a motion was made to indefinitely postpone it he would entertain it. It comes up in its order after the amendments are disposed of. That is the only intelligent way.

MR. ESTEE. The object of going into Committee of the Whole is only for the purpose of suggesting amendments. That is what the Committee of the Whole is for. It does not finally dispose of any measure.

MR. McCALLUM. The rules of this Convention, prepared by a committee of which the gentleman was Chairman, provides, that in Committee of the Whole, the rules of the Convention shall govern, so far as applicable. This motion is equivalent to the one I have mentioned—that is to say, it shall not pass as amended; or, in other words, to strike out; or, in other words, to indefinitely postpone. To say the other thing would be to say that the object of all parliamentary law could be defeated by a parliamentary trick. Fearing that this question might be raised, and not knowing what might be the views of the Chairman, I raised this very point to ascertain whether the Chair entertained the views of the President, before the question was put on the amendment. The Chair said he would entertain the motion after the amendment was disposed of. I concede that an amendment cannot be amended after it is adopted. There is where the gentleman from Marin falls into an error. But this is not an amendment I offer. I propose substantially to indefinitely postpone, although a motion to indefinitely postpone is not in order in Committee of the Whole.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. The motion is simply a motion to strike out, and under the rules of the House of Representatives, the rule under which this Convention is operating, and under the universal practice of legislative bodies, it is proper to permit a motion to strike out after the friends of the section have come as near perfecting it as they can.

MR. WEST. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

Seconded.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I claim the right, under the rule, to be heard last.

THE CHAIRMAN. There is no such rule.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as a judgment of the committee? The case is this: An amendment was offered to the section, called a substitute, and at that time the Chair was inquired of if a motion to strike out would be in order. The Chair ruled that it would not be in order until the friends of the section had amended it so far as they might wish to amend it. The question was put on the amendment, and it was adopted, and the Chair then entertained the motion to strike out. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as a judgment of the committee?

The decision of the Chair was sustained, on a division, by a vote of 51 ayes to 37 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The decision of the Chair stands as the judgment of the committee. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alameda, to strike out the section.

The motion was lost, on division, by a vote of 39 ayes to 54 noes.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I desire to give notice that I will on Monday move to reconsider this vote.

THE CHAIRMAN. A motion to reconsider will not be in order. The Secretary will read section eleven.

CONSTITUTION TO TAKE EFFECT.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 11. Should this Constitution be ratified at the election for the ratification and adoption thereof, it shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock meridian.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section eleven, line three, by striking out all after the word 'the,' to and including the words 'eighteen hundred and seventy-nine,' and insert the following: 'First day of March, eighteen hundred and eighty.'"

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: The reason for that amendment, or for some amendment requiring the Constitution to go into effect after the meeting of the first Legislature, seems to be obvious. There will be no code of practice for the new Courts prescribed in this Constitution, and there will be no machinery by which these Courts could be held in their respective counties and administer justice. This puts it only two months after the Legislature meets.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I call the attention of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, to section one of the report of the Committee on Schedule:

"SECTION 1. That all laws in force at the adoption of this Constitution, not inconsistent therewith, shall remain in full force and effect until altered or repealed by the Legislature; and all rights, actions, prosecutions, claims, and contracts of the State, counties, individuals, or bodies corporate, not inconsistent therewith, shall continue to be as valid as if this Constitution had not been adopted. The provisions of all laws which are inconsistent with this Constitution shall cease upon the adoption thereof, except that all laws which are inconsistent with such provisions of this Constitution as require legislation to enforce them shall remain in full force until the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, unless sooner altered or repealed by the Legislature."

I would inquire of the gentleman whether he has read that section before.

MR. ESTEE. Well, I have read it before, certainly; but it is entirely inconsistent. Under the new judicial system we will have a Judge in every county in the State, and several Judges in some counties. Now we are obliged to have a Practice Act. Under the present system everybody knows, we have County Judges and we have District Judges.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I do not myself see, and confess that I am unable to see, how a Legislature could meet and work under a Constitution not in force.

MR. ESTEE. Under the new Constitution are not the names of the judicial officers all changed, and their duties changed?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I do not see any difficulty in that.

MR. ESTEE. Then my friend does not understand the Practice Act, that is all.

MR. BEERSTECHER. This section which I have read provides that "the provisions of all laws which are inconsistent with this Constitution shall cease upon the adoption thereof, except that all laws which are inconsistent with such provisions of this Constitution as require legislation to enforce them shall remain in full force until the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, unless sooner altered or repealed by the Legislature." That seems to me to meet every objection of the gentleman. The only tangible thing that the gentleman has urged has been in relation to the judiciary, and there is nothing in that. The Practice Act will apply just the same in the Superior Courts as it applies to-day in the County Courts. The only thing will be that the District Judges will be wiped out. There will be no practical difficulty in the way at all. The idea of officers coming into power and assuming official functions, and the Legislature meeting here and attempting to legislate under the provisions of a Constitution not in force would seem to me to be decidedly an anomaly in the system of government. I am unable to see how it would be done. I think that section eleven, in connection with the other sections of the schedule, is not subject to criticism, and ought not to be amended or changed.

MR. TERRY. As there seems to be some difficulty in understanding what is going on here amid the confusion which prevails, I move that the committee now rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I would like to offer an additional amendment, if the gentleman will withdraw his motion for that purpose.

MR. TERRY. I give way for a moment.

MR. SHAFTER. The section declares that "should this Constitution be ratified at the election for the ratification and adoption thereof, it shall take effect," etc. I want to know when it will take effect, if it is not ratified and adopted? I move to strike out the word "should" in the first line, and from the word "Constitution" in the first line down to the word "shall" in the second line, so that it will read, "this Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock, meridian.

MR. TERRY. I now renew my motion.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Terry, that the Committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion was lost.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Ayers, West, Larkin, and Holmes.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter.

The amendment was adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles: Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report the article back as amended, and recommend its adoption.

The motion prevailed,

IN CONVENTION.

President pro tem. Belcher in the chair.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the article on schedule, have amended the same, and recommend its adoption as amended.

MR. MORELAND. I move that the usual number of copies be ordered printed.

The motion prevailed.

NOTICE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I send up a notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice that on Monday, the twenty-seventh day of January, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention, this day, refused to adopt the amendment offered by Mr. McCallum to Rule Twenty-four."

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do now adjourn. [Twelve o'clock, M.]

The motion was lost.

MR. GRACE. I move we go into perpetual session.

[Confusion.]

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I move that we take up the article on executive department in Convention.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope that when we approach the important duty of revising what we have done, that we will not do it without deliberation, and without a full house. I hope that if there is anything we can do in Committee of the Whole, we will do it, and commence, on Monday, with the understanding that we will take up the articles in Convention as they are on the file; and not commence on a Saturday, when we know we never have a full house, and that due deliberation is not given to the subject.

MR. AYERS. I hope that when we go into Convention that we will begin at the beginning. I hope that when this Convention goes into——

[Confusion.]

MR. HAGER. I would like to know what the question is?

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. There is a motion before the house, that the Convention take up for consideration the report of the Committee of the Whole on the Executive Department.

MR. AYERS. Now, all I wished to say was this, that I think that when we do go into Convention to finally consider these reports, that we shall proceed in order; that we shall commence at the Bill of Rights, and go through in the regular order. If we jump from one report to another, we shall find ourselves in confusion worse confounded. Now, I have no objections that this Convention should adjourn until Monday, but I am anxious to get through with the work. I have been here five months and have not been home. My business is suffering from my continued absence.

MR. McCALLUM. I withdraw my motion.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I move that we adjourn. [Twelve o'clock and six minutes P. M.]

[Cries of "Division!" "Ayes and noes!" and continued confusion.]

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The gentlemen must take their seats, or business cannot proceed. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

The motion was lost.

BOUNDARY.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President pro tem. in the chair, for the purpose of considering the article on State boundaries.

The motion prevailed.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the article.

THE SECRETARY read:

ARTICLE XII.

BOUNDARY OF THE STATE DEFINED.

SECTION 1. The boundary of the State of California shall be as follows: Commencing at the point of intersection of forty-second degree of north latitude with the one hundred twentieth degree of longitude west from Greenwich, and running south on the line of said one hundred twentieth degree of west longitude until it intersects the thirty-ninth degree of north latitude; thence running in a straight line, in a southeasterly direction, to the River Colorado, at a point where it intersects the thirty-fifth degree of north latitude; thence down the middle of the channel of said river to the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, as established by the treaty of May thirtieth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight; thence running west and along said boundary line to the Pacific Ocean, and extending therein three English miles; thence running in a northwesterly direction and following the direction of the Pacific Coast to the forty-second degree of north latitude; thence on the line of said forty-second degree of north latitude to the place of beginning. Also, all the islands, harbors, and bays along and adjacent to the coast.

MR. McCALLUM. That is the old Constitution. I move that the committee rise, report it back, and recommend its adoption.

MR. HAGER. I would ask the Secretary to read the history of the report.

MR. GRACE. It is a part of the history of our beloved country.

MR. BIGGS. I understand that our eastern boundary has been changed since the old Constitution was adopted. I ask for information.

MR. LARUE. I move to amend by adding as follows: "and to include Lower California, Sonora, Sinaloa."

MR. McCALLUM. My motion is, that the committee rise, report the section back, and recommend its adoption.

MR. SHAFTER. I hope that the gentleman from Alameda will not cut off amendments. I hope we will get some island in there, so that the workingmen can get some farms. Besides, the phraseology of the section is not good.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion that the committee rise, report back the article, and recommend its adoption.

The motion prevailed.

IN CONVENTION.

President pro tem. Belcher in the chair.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the article on State boundaries, report the same back, and recommend its adoption.

REPORT.

MR. DEAN. Mr. President: I desire to make a report from the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects respectfully report that proposed amendments Nos. 8, 37, 52, 140, 141, 162, 164, 167, 176, 215, 220, 230, 235, 236, 243, 273, 281, 304, 317, 366, 375, 414, 416, 446, 463, 482, 488, 492, 507, 529, 530, and the several memorials and petitions relating to local option and mechanics' liens, have been considered by your committee, and the same are reported back to the Convention, with the recommendation that no further action be taken thereon.

The committee respectfully submit eighteen sections, forming an article on miscellaneous subjects, and recommend their adoption.

Messrs. Dean and Schomp dissent from sections sixteen and eighteen, and Mr. Lavigne from section eighteen.

Messrs. Farrell and Lavigne dissent from section fifteen.

Following is the proposed article:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. The City of Sacramento is hereby declared to be the seat of government of this State, and shall so remain until changed by law; but no law changing the seat of government shall be valid or binding, unless the same be approved and ratified by a majority of the qualified electors of the State voting therefor at a general State election, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature by a two-thirds vote of each House may provide, submitting the question of change to the people.

SEC. 2. Any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within this State or out of it, or who shall act as second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, shall not be allowed to hold any office of profit, or to enjoy the right of suffrage under this Constitution.

SEC. 3. Members of the Legislature, and all officers, executive and judicial, except such inferior officers as may be by law exempted, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of ——, according to the best of my ability."

And no other oath, declaration, or test, shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

SEC. 4. All officers or Commissioners, whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers or Commissioners, whose office or duties may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people, or appointed, as the Legislature may direct.

SEC. 5. The fiscal year shall commence on the first day of July.

SEC. 6. Suits may be brought against the State in such manner and in such Courts as shall be directed by law.

SEC. 7. No contract of marriage shall be invalidated for want of conformity to the requirements of any religious sect. But no marriage hereafter contracted in this State shall be valid between the parties thereto unless a public record thereof be made in such manner as may be provided by law.

SEC. 8. All property, real and personal, owned by either husband or wife before marriage, and that acquired by either of them afterwards by gift, devise, or descent, shall be their separate property.

SEC. 9. No perpetuities shall be allowed except for eleemosynary purposes.

SEC. 10. Every person shall be disqualified from holding any office of profit in this State who shall have been convicted of having given or offered a bribe to procure his election or appointment.

SEC. 11. Laws shall be made to exclude from office, serving on juries, and from the right of suffrage, those who shall hereafter be convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, or other high crimes. The privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence thereon from power, bribery, tumult, or other improper practice.

SEC. 12. Absence from this State, on business of the State or of the United States, shall not affect the question of residence of any person.

SEC. 13. A plurality of the votes given at any election shall constitute a choice, where not otherwise directed in this Constitution.

SEC. 14. The Legislature shall provide, by law, for the maintenance and efficiency of a State Board of Health.

SEC. 15. Mechanics, material-men, artisans, and laborers of every class, shall have a lien upon the property upon which they have bestowed labor or furnished material, for the value of such labor done and material furnished; and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens.

SEC. 16. The amount named in either a fire or marine insurance policy shall be deemed to be the true value of the property insured for insurance purposes.

SEC. 17. When the term of any officer or Commissioner is not provided for in this Constitution, the term of such officer or Commissioner may be declared by law; and, if not so declared, such officer or Commissioner shall hold their position as such officer or Commissioner during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment; but in no case shall such term exceed four years.

SEC. 18. No persons other than citizens, or those who have declared their intentions to become such, shall hereafter acquire or own, either by purchase or otherwise, real property in this State contrary to this provision—such property shall escheat to the State; nor shall any lands in this State be held in trust for any alien; but the creation of any trust in lands for the benefit of an alien shall at once escheat the land to the State.

MINORITY REPORT.

MR. FARRELL. Mr. President: I send up a minority report.

Following is the report:

MR. PRESIDENT: The undersigned, a minority of your Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, while agreeing in the main with the report of the majority herein, beg leave to submit their report, recommending that the following additional provisions be incorporated in the Constitution:

SECTION 1. Mechanics, artisans, laborers, material-men, and miners shall have liens upon the building, structure, mine, or other improvement upon which they have performed labor or supplied material, for the value of the work done or material furnished. And the Legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of such liens, making such building, structure, mine, or other improvement, and the owner thereof, responsible for such liens, notwithstanding any payment, settlement, or contract made by him with contractors or sub-contractors before such liens have been paid.

SEC. 2. Eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work.

SEC. 3. All public work—State, county, city, and city and county—shall be done by the day, and no contract shall be allowed except for supplying of material.

SEC. 4. The Legislature, at the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall provide by law for the compilation and printing of a complete series of school text-books, all the necessary mechanical work connected therewith to be done in the State Printing Office. The text-books thus compiled and printed shall constitute a uniform series of text-books, to be used in the public schools of this State after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and shall be furnished to pupils at cost price. The printing of the codes and statutes of the State shall also be done in the State Printing Office.

SEC. 5. If any one who is a candidate for either House of the State Legislature shall publicly declare his intention to support, advocate, and vote for any particular measure or proposed law, and shall, after election, refuse to support, advocate, or vote for such measure or law, he shall be deemed guilty of a breach of trust; or if such a person make a public declaration that he will oppose, try to defeat, and vote against some particular measure or law, discussed before the people during his candidacy, and shall afterwards support, advocate, or vote for any such measure or law, he shall be deemed guily of a breach of trust, and in either case he shall, upon the sworn complaint of any five of his constituents, be brought to trial before a jury in the District Court of the county in which he resides, and, if convicted as charged, he shall forthwith forfeit his office, be fined a thousand dollars, and be ineligible thereafter to any office of honor, trust, or profit in the State.

SEC. 6. The complaint provided for in the previous sections shall be full and specific in its character, and among other necessary allegations allege that the complainants voted for the person complained of, and were induced to do so, in part, because of the public pledges given by him.

SEC. 7. A member of the Legislature proceeded against, as provided for in the two foregoing sections, can claim no exemption from prosecution on account of being a member of the Legislature.

SEC. 8. Any person who shall, directly or indirectly, offer, give, or promise any money, or thing of value, testimonial, privilege, or personal advantage to any executive or judicial officer, or member of the Legislature, to influence him in the performance of any of his public or official duties, shall be guilty of bribery, and be punished in such manner as shall be provided by law.

SEC. 9. The offense of corrupt solicitation of members of the Legislature, or of public officers of the State, or of any municipal division thereof, and any occupation or practice of solicitation of such members or officers to influence their official action, shall be defined by law, and shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 10. No person from whom a divorce has been obtained shall, during the lifetime of the person obtaining the divorce, be again allowed to contract a marriage; such divorces to be obtained by civil action, in the District Courts only, for causes provided by law.

SEC. 11. No person possessing property, real, personal, or otherwise, and who has one or more direct heirs, shall ever be allowed to dispose of more than one third of said property, either by will or gift, in favor of any other person, corporation, society, or association. The remaining two thirds, shall become the property of his heir or heirs. And any sales which may prove illegal or fraudulent of any part of said property shall be declared null and void.

S. J. FARRELL,
P. M. WELLIN,
R. LAVIGNE.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Under the rules of this Convention, it is the duty of the Chair to declare a recess until two o'clock.

MR. GRACE. I move that the minority report be read.

MR. MORELAND. I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Surveyor-General be requested to furnish this Convention the proper boundary of this State.

Adopted.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I was one of those who signed that report, but I should have dissented from that section where it says that the State shall be sued. I dissent from that section. I hope that the minority report will be read.

MR. BLACKMER. I move that the usual number of copies of the report be printed.

The motion prevailed.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Convention will take the usual recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

REPORT.

MR. FARRELL. Mr. President: I wish to present a minority report from the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, and ask that it be printed.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the minority report be printed?

Carried.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, the President in the chair, to consider propositions number seventy-four and four hundred and seventy-six, on labor and capital.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE SECRETARY read section one of proposition number seventy-four, introduced by Mr. Beerstecher, and reported back by the Committee on Labor and Capital.

Mr. McCallum in the chair.

"SECTION I. There shall be a State Department of Labor and Labor Statistics, whenever the Legislature by vote shall so determine."

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. Chairman: I will state that these propositions were referred to the Committee on Labor and Capital. The committee were unanimously of the opinion that it would not be expedient to establish a Constitutional Labor Bureau, and if it had been left entirely with the Chairman of the committee, it would have been reported back with the recommendation that it be not adopted. But upon the solicitation of Mr. Beerstecher, in order that he might state his reasons before the Committee of the Whole, it was reported back without recommendation.

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: As the author of this proposition, I desire to state the object. It is introduced at the solicitation and request of a large number of citizens of this State. It is not new to the people of the State. At the last session of the Legislature a bill to the same effect was introduced establishing a department of labor and labor statistics, or, as it was called, a Labor Bureau. The matter came up for consideration, and after full discussion of the merits and demerits of the project, it was finally adopted by both branches of the Legislature. The bill passing the latter part of the session, the Governor pocketed the same, and there the matter ended. In the present session of the Legislature of Nevada, a similar bill has been introduced and is pending. A Department of Labor and Labor Statistics has been in successful operation in Massachusetts, and exists there to-day. As the section reads as amended, it leaves the power in the Legislature, where it is to-day, but gives the measure the sanction of the Constitution. It has been found that the plan here proposed works well in Massachusetts. An examination will show that the condition of her laboring classes has been vastly bettered since the establishment of this department. It will be seen that they have no labor strikes, no destruction of property by labor riots. Whereas, though the advocates of a like measure have been agitating the question in Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, and other States, they have not met with success, and the consequence was that in July, eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, there were violent labor outbreaks, which, in Pennsylvania alone, destroyed over fifty million dollars' worth of property.

A number of the intelligence and employment offices of San Francisco are operated by unprincipled men, who prey upon the necessities of the poor. I know, from my personal observation, that men have gone to these employment offices and have been informed that situations were awaiting laborers at Marysville and other interior towns—after paying two dollars and fifty cents for the addresses of persons wanting labor, proceeded to the designated points, failed to find employment, and were informed no demand for labor existed. Having expended their all for bogus information, they turned their faces towards San Francisco—tramps. Weary and footsore, discontented and moneyless, they return from whence they started. The worthless manager of a worthless employment fraud refuses to return the two dollars and fifty cents paid upon false representation. The workingman is remediless; no one cares for him. A short time ago, since the session of this Convention commenced, a report was published in a newspaper of Sacramento that men were wanted near Truckee; that three dollars per day would be paid. Numbers went, and found it a cruel hoax. If this department were established, it would have supervision over the labor of this State; would furnish reliable data in relation to the labor demand; also, report to the Governor and Legislature, and recommend such legislation as would be desirable, with reference to the laboring classes. As it now is, if labor troubles occur, no reliable information can be gotten. Perchance a legislative committee is formed in haste and sent to the city or town where the trouble exists, and upon a report hasty legislation is had. What individual or committee can make an intelligent report upon labor and its needs, having given the subject a mere twenty-four hours' examination? But the managers of a State department for this special subject can give intelligent and reliable information, upon which needed legislation can take place. If the laboring element of society in this State ever breaks loose, as it did in Pennsylvania in eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, more property would be destroyed in twenty-four hours than it would cost to maintain a labor bureau for fifty years.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: This proposition is a most remarkable proposition. It might be well in Europe, where the citizens belong to the Government, but not here. To a certain extent, the idea of establishing a Labor Bureau has been tested in this State, by the Act providing for a Bureau of that kind, in eighteen hundred and sixty-seven. The principal man connected with that was Mr. White, of San Francisco. In eighteen hundred and sixty-nine they came to the Legislature and asked for ten thousand dollars to continue operations; the majority of the committee reported against them, but, by a combination in the Senate, it was carried, and five thousand dollars appropriated. The session following, they presented themselves again, and asked for ten thousand dollars more. Upon that, Dr. Pardee, of Alameda, moved for a committee to investigate the matter, and the report of that committee will be found somewhere in the Journals of eighteen hundred and seventy-one–seventy-two, showing that it had been a curse to the laborers of San Francisco. They had accomplished no good in that respect. It is only to make places for a few men, and no benefit will result to the free laboring man. It will tend to make laboring men dependent upon the Bureau for employment, rather than upon their own resources. I cannot support any proposition of this kind.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I see no need for a department in the shape that this is, anyway. If there is anything that is of real benefit to the laboring man, that I can see is a benefit to him, I will support it; but I consider this about as little benefit to the laboring classes as anything that could be imagined. Laboring men do not care for philosophical disquisitions upon labor and capital; they don't care for statistics showing the law of supply and demand, nor do they care for a great mass of statistics; what he wants, is to find out where he can get employment. If this was a proposition for an employment office, where the laboring man could be given employment, I would have no objection to it. If it would tend to bring employer and laborer together more effectually, I would have no objection, but it seems to me that this power exists in the Legislature already; it is not necessary for the Constitution to confer any such power upon the Legislature. But this seems to look only to the compiling of a huge mass of statistics, which would be of no practical value to the laboring man. It is not necessary to cumber the Constitution with anything of this sort.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the first part of this report—the first section, as amended. But the balance I don't think is necessary at all. I have been somewhat interested in this movement—not merely for a year or two years, but for ten or twelve years. The working people of San Francisco desire to have some place where employé can meet employer without being subjected to the expense and trouble of these so-called intelligence offices. But I do not think it necessary to put this report into the Constitution. We desire to have some recommendation in the Constitution, but we desire to leave it flexible. Therefore, I ask that this Convention adopt the first section as amended.

MR. HUESTIS. Notwithstanding the very able and plausible argument of the gentleman, I am of the opinion that it would be entirely wrong to incorporate this in the Constitution, and I therefore move to strike out the first section.

MR. HERRINGTON. I ask leave to offer a substitute to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall establish a Bureau of Statistics. It shall be the duty of this department to collect and publish, semi-annually, statistical details concerning every class of labor in the State, and the condition of all mines of the State, and the character, location, and condition of all lands belonging to the State, or the United States within this State, and their location, with such facts as will aid in their settlement and occupation."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. I understand that measures of this kind are of the highest importance, and should receive the most careful consideration. It makes but little difference how you may view this question, in view of the Constitution which you are now about to frame and submit to the people, you cannot ignore the fact that labor is the chief element upon which the national prosperity rests. It is that upon which we must depend. You cannot live upon speculation. You cannot live upon railroads. You cannot even live upon mines, as far as that is concerned. Labor is the foundation of our institutions, and that is the subject upon which the mind of the people have turned and are now resting. I submit that this is one of the most important departments of the State, and one which should receive the most earnest consideration.

MR. ESTEE. Cannot this be done by the Legislature, without any constitutional provision?

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, sir; but it is not mandatory on them to do it. They have done nothing the past twenty-five years, and how do we know that they will do anything during the next twenty-five years. I desire to put it in an instrument that is to be submitted to the people, in order that they may put the stamp of their approval upon it, so that their wishes cannot be ignored. That is what we desire. You understand how the Legislature has been captured and controlled in times past better than I can tell you. This thing has been made of secondary consideration ever since the foundation of the State. Now, I say put into this instrument something which will be mandatory, and which will compel the Legislature to act. We have a provision in the Constitution which says that its provisions shall be mandatory. If we put this in the Constitution the Legislature cannot fail to act. I do not wish to leave it optional with them any longer. Twenty-five years' experience has shown us that they are unmindful of the interests of the laboring classes. I want the laboring men to know, when they come here, where our mines are; where our farms are. I hope that this subject will receive that careful consideration which its importance demands.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee now rise, report back the subject under consideration, and recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: The Legislature has full power over this question. There is no doubt about that. I do not believe there is any gentleman here who will deny that proposition. In the next place, if we say that the Legislature shall have power to do so and so, it does not control them in the slightest degree. Not at all. The Legislature would have a perfect right to disobey it. Now, I make no objection to the first section, that there shall be a State Department of Labor Statistics when the Legislature shall see fit. I have no objections to that. I think it is all well enough. But when you undertake to make a bureau, and make a dozen officers, you undertake what will result in nothing, in my judgment. Now, some years ago, I had the privilege of knowing something about one of these labor bureaus in San Francisco, and I indorse all that Mr. Larkin has said, that the bureau was a total failure. It was merely to make a place for a lot of broken-down politicians, and did not benefit labor one dollar. The men who howled the loudest for this bureau were the ones who never did a day's work in their lives. When it was established a lot of old political hacks controlled it. I do not say that it will be so in future, but my idea is, if we attempt in our poor way here to establish a labor bureau, we will do that which will result in nothing to the laboring man. It will be a place for some of you gentlemen, and that is all. It will be saddling a labor bureau upon these men which will do them no good. I indorse the remarks made by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, about statistics. You might as well try to teach a hungry man religion. You cannot succeed until you fill his stomach. They don't want statistics, they want bread for their families; they do not want a bureau, they want enterprises left open to them wherein one man's right hand is just as good as another's. And whenever you can propose any legislation in that direction, you will find that a large majority of this Convention will go with you. And when you attempt to impose a labor bureau of this kind on them, you are doing a great wrong, and injuring the cause you are striving to benefit.

I have no objections to declaring that there shall be such a department whenever the Legislature shall so provide, but they can do it just as well without any provision of this kind, and they can do it safely without our putting in any of these details about the salaries, etc. I venture the assertion that the man who would get that salary of two hundred dollars a month would be a man who never done a day's work in his life. He would be a man who has some kind of political influence. That is the kind of workingmen who usually get that kind of places. I don't think the gentleman who is the author of this proposition knows any more about the laboring interests than any other lawyer on this floor. He has had but a few months experience in California, while others of us have been here twenty-five years. I do not think he knows anything more about the laboring man than many of the rest of us, who have labored with our hands. I think there is a good deal of buncombe in that kind of a laboring man, who never did a day's work in their lives, and never expect to. When you tell me that labor is confined to any particular walk in life, or to any profession, you are denying the very first principles of labor, according to my idea. Wherever a man can do good; wherever a man can make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, there you will find the true laboring man, who is of service to the country, and to the community where he lives. So far as a provision of this kind can do real good, I am for it; but so far as it amounts to buncombe and humbuggery, I am against it.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. Chairman: I wish to say that I am in favor of that motion. I wish to embrace this opportunity to express my views and what I believe to be the views of the people of this State, against every form of bureaucracy. I believe, sir, the people of this State have not given up their faith in representative and responsible institutions. I believe that notwithstanding it is their habit to growl at the actions of each succeeding Legislature, that they do it by virtue of their inalienable right to growl at anything that does not suit them. I believe that the people of this State have not lost their faith in republican institutions, and that it is still their wish that the laws of this State shall be made by the representative Legislature of this State. That these matters shall be subject to change and revision; that they shall not be so embodied in the organic law as to be beyond the control of the people or the Legislature, and therefore it behooves us to be extremely careful not to embody anything in the organic law of the State which may properly be trusted to the Legislature, and which properly belongs to the legislative functions of the law making power of this State, elected by the people for that purpose. I am in favor of leaving this matter to the Legislature. I do not believe the people propose to surrender all their rights into the hands of these bureaus. I presume that most of the members agree with me on that proposition. I believe in holding the Legislature responsible. I believe in the right of the people to growl at them when they do wrong. Now, as to this matter, it is a matter coming fully within the power of the Legislature elected every two years. They can do any specific thing which the people may demand, that is not prohibited in the Constitution. We have already established one constitutional bureau, an irresponsible bureau, which in my judgment is quite sufficient. If this bureau should prove worthless, as it probably will, the people could not get rid of it without amending the Constitution. Now, sir, I don't believe that the Legislature of this State will ever be materially worse than the people who elect them. They are fully competent to represent the demands of the people, and as they have full power in this regard there is no earthly need of a constitutional provision of this kind. If we want a bureau of this kind, to lend encouragement to any class, we can have it any time we want it. I am in favor of the motion to indefinitely postpone this whole matter.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I hope this motion to postpone the consideration of this important subject will not prevail. It is not treating those interested with due courtesy. If we are wrong in this matter, let us come to a vote and determine the issue. I desire to say to the gentleman from Mariposa, Judge Jones, who has spoken of representative government, that what we are after is a representative government—one in the full sense of the term. We want a government that represents every man, woman, and child, every class and condition, every interest in the State. What we do not want is a government which represents one interest and ignores all others. We do not desire the representing of capital at the expense of labor. Therefore, I appeal to gentlemen on this floor to say that the laborers' demands shall be recognized. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, grows eloquent talking about what he pleases to call "something else more desirable." This is an easy way to evade an obnoxious proposition, to say: "Give us something else." If the gentleman has something else, something better than that proposed, why in the name of reason and of justice does he not offer it? His "something else" is a method of evading a direct issue upon this question before the Convention. The gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, who claims to be a hard-fisted son of toil, says this is a "European proposition, and antagonistic to American institutions." I deny the assertion. Had the gentlemau been paying attention to the debate, he would ere this have known that Massachusetts some years ago established a State Bureau of Labor and Labor Statistics, which has proved a blessing not only to the poor, but also to the rich. We desire this article to be incorporated in the new Constitution, that the laborer, the workingman, the hard-fisted son of toil, shall have a department of the State government devoted to his interests. The irrational, unconstitutional legislation of last Winter directed against the workingmen of San Francisco, would have been prevented by the existence of such a department of State, and the ferment in that city would have ceased long ere police and military forces were called into requisition. The rights of the working classes cannot be denied and withheld, and their wants ignored, for any length of time; for what they demand in justice they surely will receive, not as an act of justice to a class, but as an act of necessity for the nation's integrity; as an act tending to elevate the material, mental, moral, and physical condition of the people.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion that the committee rise, report back the matter to the Convention, and recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

Division being called, the vote stood—ayes, 40; noes, 29; no quorum voting. The question was put again, resulting in a vote of 43 ayes to 33 noes—no quorum voting.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I move that the Convention now adjourn.

Carried.

And at three o'clock P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until Monday morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Monday, January 27th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M.

SECRETARY SMITH. The Convention will come to order and elect a temporary President, in the absence of the President and President pro tem.

On motion of Mr. Huestis, Mr. McCallum was chosen to preside.

Mr. McCallum in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

One day's leave of absence was granted Messrs. Mills, Biggs, and Harvey.

Three days' leave of absence was granted Mr. Boggs.

MR. McFARLAND. There is barely a quorum present, and I move that this Convention take a recess until one o'clock.

[Cries of "Two o'clock."]

MR. LARKIN. There are some ten or twelve more members in town. There will be from eighty-five to ninety-five members here, and I object to taking any recess.

MR. McFARLAND. There is nothing to do except to commence upon the final action by the Convention upon the reports, and then if we should manage to keep a quorum here until noon, it will hardly be fair to act upon these questions with a bare quorum. At one o'clock we will have a large body.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: The members are slowly coming in, and if we get in the habit, Monday morning, of leaving off business, members that are somewhat negligent will grow more so. I am under the impression that this Convention should act in such a way as to let members know that it is intended to proceed with business at once. I think it would be very improper to adjourn at this time.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland.

The motion was lost.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

THE CHAIR. If there be no objection, the reading of the Journal will be dispensed with.

MR. FREUD. I object.

MR. AYERS. I object.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan.

The motion prevailed.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I move that we take up the bill of rights in Convention.

MR. AYERS. I second the motion.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. McCallum in the chair, for the purpose of further considering the section relating to labor and capital.

MR. WHITE. I withdraw my motion.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan.

The motion prevailed.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher.

MR. ROLFE. The question was on the motion to rise, report back the subject-matter, and recommend its indefinite postponement.

THE CHAIRMAN. No motion would be in order except for the committee to rise, because there was no quorum present.

MR. ROLFE. I make that motion now. I wish to say——

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is not debatable except by unanimous consent.

[Cries of "Object."]

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion that the committee rise, report the article back, and recommend its indefinite postponement.

On a division, the votes stood 47 ayes to 21 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. No quorum voting. Gentlemen will please vote. There is a quorum present. Vote on one side or the other.

On a division, the vote stood 44 ayes to 26 noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will count the committee.

MR. STUART. I move that the Convention take a recess.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. I move that the committee rise.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary is counting the committee.

MR. FILCHER. I think these gentlemen ought to be compelled to vote, under the rule.

THE SECRETARY. Seventy-six members present.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Chair will direct the committee to rise, and direct the Secretary to call the roll.

IN CONVENTION.

The roll was called, and the following members found present:

Andrews,	Holmes,	Prouty,
Barbour,	Howard, of Mariposa,	Rhodes,
Barry,	Huestis,	Rolfe,
Barton,	Hughey,	Shurtleff,
Beerstecher,	Hunter,	Smith, of Santa Clara,

Herold,	Neunaber,	Wilson, of Tehama,
Herrington,	Ohleyer,	Wyatt—83.
Hilborn,	O'Sullivan,

THE CHAIR. There being a quorum present, and there being no objection, we will be considered in Committee of the Whole again.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe, that the committee rise, report the article back, and recommend its indefinite postponement.

The motion prevailed, on a division, by a vote of 48 ayes to 34 noes.

IN CONVENTION.

Mr. McCallum in the chair.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration the article on labor and capital, report the same back, and recommend its indefinite postponement. The report of the Committee of the Whole will go on file.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I move to take up the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I understand that the report has been sent to the printer; that it is not yet printed, and the manuscript is in the hands of the printer. Consequently there is no report of the Miscellaneous Committee here.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I withdraw the motion.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I move that the Convention take a recess until two o'clock to-day.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege. In yesterday's Bulletin there appears, under the head of "The University Land Grant," the following:

THE CHAIR. I suppose this is not in order. A motion to adjourn until two o'clock is pending.

MR. MCFARLAND. I will withdraw the motion for the present, with the consent of the Convention.

MR. WYATT. The communication I refer to reads as follows:

EDITOR BULLETIN: Permit me through your journal to correct what would seem to be an erroneous statement of the amounts of land sold by the Regents on account of the Congressional grant of one hundred and fifty thousand acres, during the debates in the Convention, January twenty-second, in which it is admitted that the Regents have sold land in excess of the grant of one hundred and fifty thousand acres. The following statement, made by a special committee of the Board of Regents, in an interview in December last, with General Williamson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, will show the true status of the grant:

Number of acres listed	140,475.96
Certificates of purchase issued (listing asked for)	4,814.45
Total	145,290.41

From this amount of one hundred and forty-five thousand two hundred and ninety and forty-one hundredths acres must be deducted, at the lowest estimate, one thousand acres—erroneously listed—thus leaving five thousand seven hundred and nine and fifty-nine hundredths acres not listed or sold on account of the Congressional grant. In the Convention reports by the Record-Union, under date of the twenty-third instant, Mr. Wyatt stated "that a bill has been introduced into Congress confirming to the University forty-five thousand acres of land in addition to the grant already made. It was introduced at the request of the Regents of the University." The statement is not true. On the contrary, a draft of a Congressional bill was submitted to the Board with a request that they would, by their influence, aid its passage. The proposition was discussed by the Regents present, and it was thought best not to aid in the proposed legislation—the Regents being desirous of closing up the business of the Congressional land grant at as early a date as possible consistent with the best interests of the University.

A. S HALLIDIE.

San Francisco, January 24th.

I am not aware, Mr. President, what position Mr. Hallidie holds in connection with the University, if any. I suppose some connection with the land grant——

MR. AYERS. He is President of the Mechanics Institute.

MR. FREUD. He was.

MR. WYATT. Yes. The telegram to which I referred in the discussion on the twenty-second instant, with reference to the State University, is to be found in the Chronicle of January twenty-first, under the head of "Washington Telegrams," and reads as follows:

"Davis (by request). A bill to permit the University of California to purchase of the government, at the usual rates, forty thousand acres of public lands which have been selected in its behalf, but not allowed, in addition to the one hundred and fifty thousand acres granted by the government. It appears that the land agent having the subject in charge has overrun the limit, so as to select, on behalf of the University, one hundred and ninety-two thousand acres; and this is an attempt to legalize what is believed by some officials in the Land Office to be a great land grant. Davis introduced the bill by request, as he delays assuming the responsibility till after consultation with the authorities at the University."

In the discussion of this subject, on the twenty-second instant, the position which I took with reference to this matter was that it would be dangerous for this Convention to adopt section ten, as reported by the Committee on Education, because its adoption included all the acts of the University of the State of California by its Regents, and all the Acts of the Legislature, and that to do so would be a dangerous and unheard of proceeding, and that it might involve the State of California in a large law suit. I referred to this telegram as a part of the current history of the day, and it then made an impression upon my mind, from its reading, that it had been introduced at the request of the University, and I believe it will convey that impression to the minds of all readers. If the bill was not introduced at the request of the University, then it has been introduced at the request of some men who are making a cat's-paw of the University for the purpose of private peculation. Now, the communication of Mr. Hallidie says that "the proposition was discussed by the Regents present." How many Regents were present is not stated in the communication—whether one, two, three, or more. Whether those that were not present caused this to be introduced is not stated. In other words, it is left as loose and vague as possible, as to what is the action of the University upon this subject, in connection with these bills introduced into the Congress of the United States. On the twenty-second a telegram appears in the same paper, under the same head, which says:

Davis has written to the Regents of the University of California in regard to the bill validating the location of lands in addition to its grant of one hundred and fifty thousand acres, and will not press the bill till an answer is received. It is not likely the bill will pass.

Then in the Record-Union of January 25th is to be found the following telegram:

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 22, 1879.

Register and Receiver Stockton Land Office: You will neither receive nor file in your office any further selections on account of any grant to the State of California.

J. A. WILLIAMSON, Commissioner.

MR. TULLY. Where is the point of the privilege? What is your question of privilege?

MR. WYATT. The point I make as to the question of privilege is, that it is stated that the statement I made in referring to the telegram in the Chronicle was not true.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that it is a question of privilege to that extent.

MR. TULLY. I make the point that the gentleman is making an original speech.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman has a right to speak specifically as to the proof of his statement—no further.

MR. HERRINGTON. I propose that the gentleman from Santa Clara have leave to withdraw.

Mr. TULLY. I have no objection to hearing any points the gentleman may have to make, but I do not wish to listen to the speech of last Saturday over again.

MR. WYATT. My statement was in the discussion of that subject, that the bill had been introduced referring to the telegram as read by myself here, giving the paper and head under which it was to be found, and that whatever idea would be conveyed in that to the mind of a reader, was the idea simply that I conveyed to this Convention.

BILL OF RIGHTS.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move that we proceed to consider the preamble in bill of rights.

MR. MCFARLAND. I move that the Convention take a recess until two o'clock.

Lost.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move we take up the executive department. There are very few amendments made to it.

THE CHAIR. That would involve a suspension of the rules. The Chair cannot entertain it as an amendment. If the gentleman moves the suspension of the rules——

MR. EDGERTON. My friend from El Dorado is probably more interested in the executive department than anything else. [Laughter.]

MR. LARKIN. What district do you represent?

MR. EDGERTON. I represent the Second Congressional District—El Dorado included.

MR. LARKIN. My reason is that the Chairman of the Committee on Bill of Rights is away.

MR. MORELAND. Is not the Chairman of the Committee of Executive Department away also?

MR. EDGERTON. I would ask if the Chairman of any other committee is not away.

Digitized by Google

MR. LARKIN. I withdraw my motion, as the Chairman of the Committee on Taxation is here, having arrived from the lower country [laughter], and we will allow him to take up his report.

THE CHAIR. The motion is to take up the bill of rights.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: Now, in the course of an hour or two, we will have two thirds of this Convention here. At this moment we have a bare quorum. Now I ask if it is fair to take up as important a matter as this? It seems to me that we might wait until there is at least a fair representation here. If a bare quorum undertakes to do anything that is not in accord with the views of the Convention, it will be overturned sure. There are plenty of ways of doing it. We are just starting in upon the Constitution in Convention. We will have a very full meeting this afternoon. I have no doubt but that from that time on we will have a full body, because I think that gentlemen from San Francisco and that part of the State coming here will perhaps stay over next Tuesday, and we may have next Saturday and Monday a full representation of the body. It seems to me that there would be no good come from starting in now with a bare quorum.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope we will proceed. The gentlemen from San Francisco all knew that we were going into Convention this morning. If we adjourn now it will keep us adjourning. I am in favor of continuing right at it, and show these gentlemen that they must be here if they intend to take any interest in this Convention.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland, to take up the bill of rights.

[Cries of "Division," "Ayes and noes," and great confusion.]

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I ask for the ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Huestis, Larkin, Hilborn, Joyce, and Barbour.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

AYES.

Ayers,	Herold,	Nason,
Barbour,	Herrington,	Neunaber,
Barry,	Holmes,	Prouty,
Barton,	Hunter,	Smith, of Santa Clara,
Bell,	Joyce,	Smith, of 4th District,

Gorman,	McNutt,	Turner,
Hilborn,	Ohleyer,	Vacquerel,
Howard, of Mariposa,	O'Sullivan,	Wilson, of Tehama,
Huestis,	Rhodes,	Wyatt—30.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read the first section.

Mr. TULLY. I move that the Convention adjourn until two o'clock.

Lost.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read the first section.

THE SECRETARY read:

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing, and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

THE CHAIR. Is there any amendment to section one?

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. Rule Forty-nine says: "Every resolution proposing any alteration in the Constitution shall be read on two several days before it is finally acted upon and adopted by the Convention."

MR. WATERS. I understand that it has been read several times now.

MR. AYERS. All the reports have been read in Convention when reported.

THE CHAIR. Section one of the article on bill of rights has been read in Convention when reported by the committee, besides being read in Committee of the Whole. The Chair is of the opinion that this is the second reading. If there is no amendment to this section the Secretary will call the roll. Those in favor of the section will say "aye," when your names are called, those opposed, "no."

The roll was called, and the section adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Blackmer,	Davis,
Barbour,	Brown,	Dean,
Barry,	Burt,	Dowling,
Barton,	Charles,	Doyle,
Beerstecher,	Condon,	Edgerton,
Bell,	Cross,	Evey,

Larkin,	Shurtleff,	Wilson, of Tehama,
Larue,	Smith, of Santa Clara,	Wyatt—85.
Lavigne,	Smith, of 4th District,

NOES—None.

THE CHAIR. The Convention has agreed to section one.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I would like to state my views about this. I do not think it is policy for us as representatives of the people to go on now to final action on these sections, when there is such a thin house as this here.

MR. AYERS. Order.

MR. WYATT. Order.

[Cries of, "Order;" "Go on;" "Sit down;" and general confusion.]

THE CHAIR. The Convention will come to order. The Secretary will read the second section.

POLITICAL POWER.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two by adding thereto as follows: 'but government can be altered or reformed only in accordance with previously established law.'"

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I move that we adjourn. I think it is a crime——

THE CHAIR. It is out of order.

MR. HILBORN. A motion to adjourn is always in order.

MR. ROLFE. I second the motion.

MR. GRACE. I move that we take a recess until two o'clock.

THE CHAIR. The gentleman can move that the Convention adjourn until a certain time. A motion to adjourn now without fixing the time is not debatable. You have to first fix the time to which you will adjourn, and then move to adjourn. That is my ruling.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: There is a working majority here present—a quorum of this Convention. It is proper and right that we proceed.

MR. HILBORN. The motion is not debatable.

MR. GRACE. I made a motion to take a recess until two o'clock.

THE CHAIR. It is a motion substantially to adjourn now until two o'clock. The word recess don't change the substance of the motion.

MR. AYERS. I move to amend the motion. I move to adjourn until five minutes of two o'clock.

MR. WEST. I second the motion.

The amendment to the motion was lost.

MR. WEST. We are now in Convention. There is a quorum present. It is legitimate and right that we proceed in regular order in the discharge of the duties imposed upon us by our office, and by our oath of office. Now there is a disposition here this morning, on the part of members, to postpone and to demoralize, and by foolish motions—pardon me for that expression—to stand and oppose the regular order of business. I hope that the Convention will not entertain any of these motions, but that we will proceed in regular order to the consideration of this report, and that we will spend no more time foolishly.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to take a recess until two P. M.

The motion was lost.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two by inserting in line three, between the words 'same' and 'whenever,' the words 'by proceeding in accordance with law.'"

MR. JONES. Mr. Chairman: The amendment I think, has substantially the effect of that offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, but does so by the interposition of three or four words, without changing the form of the paragraph. It is a clear expression of that which I suppose has been intended to be the meaning of that section. At the same time, the section without these words has been understood, by some persons, to be a sanction in the Constitution itself, of the right of revolution. The right of revolution is an ultimate right. It is not one to be provided for in the organic law, because it not supposed that we will embody in the Constitution the seeds of its own destruction. I think it is proper that these words should be added there, to take away all the ambiguity, and all chance of its being so construed.

MR. WHITE. If your theory is right, how could your Colonies ever secede from England?

MR. JONES. They took the ultimate right of revolution. No government ever provided in its laws for its own destruction.

MR. WHITE. The question is, if your theory is right, could the Colonies ever have seceded from England?

MR. JONES. Yes; they would have seceded from England just as they did. The right of revolution is a fundamental, legitimate right; but we are not providing for revolutions in this Constitution. We are providing for that which shall proceed by process of organic law.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I suppose that these amendments are in the nature of a resolution to change and alter the Constitution. They certainly are original propositions, and have not been read upon two several days, as provided for in Rule Forty-nine. I make that point of order, that the amendments are original resolutions, proposing to change and alter the Constitution, and that they have not been read on two several days.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is not well taken.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Larkin, Reed, Hunter, and Morse.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland. The Secretary will call the roll.

MR. McFARLAND. I desire to say a word upon that question.

THE CHAIR. The Chair has deprived the gentleman of the opportunity, by directing the Secretary to call the roll, under the impression that the Convention was ready to vote. I suppose that courtesy would induce the gentleman from Del Norte to withdraw his motion.

MR. LARKIN. The Chair directed the Secretary to call the roll, and the Chair could not recognize the gentleman after the roll commenced to be called.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that the point is not well taken; that until the roll call has been commenced, the gentleman has a right to address the Chair. The gentleman from Sacramento has the floor.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The previous question upon these pending amendments was moved by the gentleman from Del Norte, and seconded by the requisite number. The Chair did not put the motion. The gentleman from Sacramento is not in order until that motion is put.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Del Norte was recognized, but his motion was not at that time put on account of an apprehension, on the part of the Chair, that the vote would be taken. Then the Chair again called upon the gentleman from Del Norte to know whether he desired to withdraw his motion, and he declined to make any response. The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Sacramento as having the floor.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I am sorry, indeed, that some of my friends are trying to distract business by raising these points of order. I am in earnest in this amendment. My amendment is practically the same as that of the gentleman from Mariposa. I never heard of a Constitution recognizing in its text the right of destroying it illegally and unlawfully—the amendment is to put the Constitution on the well recognized theory of the American Government. I want to have in this Constitution the principle announced by Thomas Jefferson and Daniel Webster, that you cannot change your Government except in accordance with the law. It seems to me that either the amendment I have offered or the one offered by the gentleman from Mariposa, should be put into this Constitution, so that when we are undertaking to frame an organic law we will not put into its text a proposition for its destruction. This section as it stands provides that the Government may be changed in any way.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I wish to ask if the section as reported is not the same as the present Constitution?

MR. McFARLAND. Yes. I supposed that the gentleman from Shasta was here for the purpose of changing this Constitution. What folly it is to say that a thing must be done because it is in the old Constitution. Now, if the gentleman will join with me and say that nothing shall be changed in the old Constitution, I shall consider his argument will have some weight. In framing the Constitution now, we ought to say that our Government can be changed only in accordance with this Constitution and the laws provided under it. I hope that my amendment, or that of the gentleman from Mariposa, will be adopted.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will call the attention of the Convention at this time to the fact that it is his impression that under Rule Fifty-five these amendments, offered to the sections in Convention, do not require the ayes and noes. The ayes and noes will come on the section as amended, unless demanded on the amendments by five members.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I am opposed to these amendments, and I am opposed to them because they will subserve no good end; and I would like, Mr. President, if the Convention would simply get down to work instead of creating confusion and trying to delay business. It is held by authority that is unimpeachable, that has stood the test ever since the organization of the government of the United States, and every State in it, that the theory of our political system is that the ultimate sovereignty is in the people, from whom springs all legitimate authority. The people of the United States created a national Constitution, and conferred upon it powers of sovereignty over certain subjects, and the people in each State created a State government to exercise further powers of sovereignty, so far as they were allowed to exercise them at all. By the Constitution which they established they not only tied up the hands of their official agencies, but their own hands as well. But neither the officers of State, nor the whole people as an aggregate body, are at liberty to take action in opposition to this fundamental law. But in every State, although all persons are under the protection of the government and obliged to conform their actions to its laws, there are always some who are excluded from participation in the government, and are compelled to submit to the authority of the government in the creation of which they have no voice. It does not appear that original sovereignty in any case has ever existed since the organization of the Government of the United States, and whenever a State Constitution is framed and adopted the people themselves place themselves under it. Now we have made a provision for the amendment of the Constitution. We have embraced in the article on future amendments all the provisions requisite to tie up the hands of the people, in so far as we desire them to be tied up. Now what is the use of doing anything further and putting into this section a clause which is not only perverting the sense of the section, but is endeavoring to tie us down to the action of the Legislature. It is not the policy of the people. Their acts should be left free. Their minds should be left free to act, in so far as they see fit to act, in reference to this clause which is put in the Constitution authorizing them to alter or reform it whenever the public good may require. It is simply a declaration of the right which we all admit to exist.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Ayers, Hunter, Condon, and Murphy.

The main question was ordered.

MR. WYATT. I call for the ayes and noes.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Ayes and noes.

MR. HILBORN. Ayes and noes.

MR. HUNTER. Ayes and noes.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. HILBORN. Five members called for the ayes and noes.

THE CHAIR. Only three were recognized. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mariposa, Mr. Jones.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. BARBOUR. I desire to offer an amendment.

THE CHAIR. It is not in order.

MR. BARBOUR. I have been on the floor every time endeavoring to offer an amendment which was offered in the Committee of the Whole, and I have a right to offer it here.

THE CHAIR. The Chair did not hear the gentleman. I am under the impression that the previous question in Convention reaches the original section.

MR. BARBOUR. And cuts off all amendments?

THE CHAIR. I think it does.

MR. GRACE. There are some gentlemen who have not had——

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the roll.

MR. GRACE. I have a right to be heard here.

THE CHAIR. Order! The gentleman can rise to a point of order, but not address the Convention.

MR. GRACE. I rise to a point of order. The rules of the Convention specially provide that the moving of the previous question shall not prevent the offering of further amendments.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is under the impression that the rule was made to apply to the Committee of the Whole. If some gentleman will find the rule——

MR. GRACE. The rules applied to the Convention and the Committee of the Whole the same.

THE CHAIR. The general parliamentary rule requires that the previous question reaches the original proposition. The Secretary will proceed with the call of the roll.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President——

The roll was called, and the section adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

NOES—None.

THE CHAIR. The Chair would call the attention of the Convention to Rule Thirty-five, and also to Rule Fifty-six, with reference to this point of the previous question reaching the main question. In Convention, by Rule Thirty-five, the previous question reaches the main question. No amendment can be made in Convention after that. Rule Fifty-six was amended so as to apply to the Committee of the Whole. There is that difference.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I now give notice, that on to-morrow I will move to reconsider the vote by which this section has been adopted.

RIGHT OF SECESSION.

MR. FILCHER. I move to strike out section three.

MR. TINNIN. I second the motion.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section three, and then the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole as a substitute for it.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 3. We recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties, and the paramount law of the land.

By the Committee of the Whole:

SEC. 3. That this State shall ever remain a member of the American Union; that the people thereof are a part of the American nation; that there is no right on the part of this State to secede, and that all attempts, from whatever source or upon whatever pretext, to dissolve said Union, or sever said nation, shall be resisted by the whole power of the State.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I move to strike out the section, and in doing so I wish to remark that there is no such section in the present Constitution. Section four in this report occupies the place of section three in the Constitution, as it now stands. Among the principles enunciated, there are some which I cannot indorse. As far as the secession clause is concerned I do indorse it. I believe it is unnecessary to make a declaration of this kind. If there was any apprehension that the people of this State are unloyal to the Union, or ever had been, it might be wise and judicious to make some declaration of our loyalty and allegiance. But, further than that, there is a principle enunciated here which is purely political in its character, and for that reason is decidedly objectionable. That is the declaration that the people are a part of the American nation. I hate to refer to politics on this floor. There are those in the Republican party who declare and believe this to be a nation, but it is not the universal idea even in that party, and there is no Democrat that indorses the doctrine. We believe it is a representative government, and not a nation; a confederation of States, bound together for the protection and good of all. Since it is partial, and not universal in its application, and as it has no significance in the Constitution, I am in favor of striking it out entirely. If, in the judgment of this body, it is thought that something of the kind is necessary to show the allegiance that we owe to the government, in the event that the motion to strike out should fail, I would offer a proposition of this kind: "Every citizen of this State owes allegiance to the Constitution and government of the United States, and any law or ordinance of the State in contravention or subversion thereof shall have no binding force." There is a doctrine accepted by every loyal American citizen; one that we can all consistently indorse, and which I apprehend will be objectionable to none. It is unwise to insert in the Constitution that which, without doing any good, would excite the prejudices of some. Therefore I hope that the motion to strike out will prevail.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Joyce, Larkin, Hunter, and Reddy.

The main question was ordered, on a division, by a vote of 48 ayes to 34 noes.

MR. McFARLAND. I call for the ayes and noes.

Seconded by Messrs. Hilborn, Holmes, Herrington, and Freeman.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: We must first take a vote upon the report of the Committee of the Whole, and then will come the vote upon the motion to strike out.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that that is the form. The first question will be on the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. McFARLAND. I understand that the report of the Committee of the Whole was adopted by the Convention. I understand that the amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole form the report. I understand that they take the place of the report.

THE CHAIR. This is different. The first question is: Will the Convention agree to the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole? on which the ayes and noes must be taken. The Secretary will call the roll.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The point of order is this, if the previous question is sustained and the main question is now to be put, I would call the attention——

[Confusion.]

THE CHAIR. The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. HERRINGTON. I do not rise to a point of order for the——

MR. TINNIN. I want to know what we are voting on.

THE CHAIR. Voting on the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. McFARLAND. I want this matter determined. My point of order is this, that there is no such question before the Convention as the adoption of the section reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Our action is on the section reported by the Committee of the Whole. That takes the place of the original section as reported by the committee, except a motion to strike out should prevail. My understanding is, that the amendment was adopted in the place of the original section.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the roll.

THE SECRETARY commenced the calling of the roll amid great confusion.

THE SECRETARY. Mr. President: There is too much noise. I cannot hear the responses.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary cannot hear the responses. The Convention will preserve order.

MR. EDGERTON [when his name was called.] I vote "aye," upon condition that the Committee on Revision and Adjustment make a decent, grammatical, and intelligent section of it.

Upon the question: Will the Convention concur in the amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole? the ayes and noes having been demanded by the requisite number, the roll was called, and the amendment was rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

Barry,	Hilborn,	Ohleyer,

THE CHAIR. The substitute proposed by the Committee of the Whole is lost. The next question is on the motion to strike out the section.

MR. BARBOUR. Nothing can be done but to vote on the original section.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to strike out.

MR. ROLFE. I would like to inquire what there is to strike out?

MR. TULLY. Would a substitute be in order?

THE CHAIR. We are acting under the previous question. A substitute is not now in order. The question is on the motion to strike out.

Messrs. Beerstecher, Barton, Larkin, Brown, Hunter, and Freeman demanded the ayes and noes.

MR. GRACE. I rise to a point of order. My understanding is that the previous question goes only to the pending amendments.

THE CHAIR. The Chair decides that the point of order is not well taken.

MR. GRACE. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. WEST. I rise to a point of order. My point of order is this, that the main question and the only question before this Convention was, on the agreement with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, and that the previous question was exhausted and the final vote was taken in rejecting the section reported by the committee.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is not well taken. The gentleman from Placer had made his motion at the time the previous question was moved. The question now is on striking out the section as reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights.

The roll was called and the motion lost by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I have a substitute to offer.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that we are still under the operation of the previous question. The question is now on agreeing with the section as reported by the Committee on Bill of Rights.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I have an amendment to offer to section three.

THE CHAIR. The previous question reaches the main section.

AN APPEAL.

MR. STEDMAN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Messrs. Filcher, Tully, and Blackmer seconded the appeal.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will state the question. An amendment is offered to section three. The Chair decides that the previous question having been sustained in Convention no amendments are in order; that the rule which says that the previous question shall only apply to pending amendments applies exclusively in Committee of the Whole; that under Rule Thirty-five, under the previous question, no amendments can be offered; and that the previous question reaches the main question, which is the section itself. The question is on the appeal: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: In appealing from that decision I hold that Rule Thirty-five has been changed, and that the previous question now only applies to pending amendments. That rule was changed in Convention. It applies to the Convention and to the Committee of the Whole.

THE CHAIR. Will the gentleman read it.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: The amendment that the gentleman refers to only applies to Rule Fifty-six. I have no doubt in the world but that the Chair is exactly correct in his ruling.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read Rule Fifty-six as amended.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Rule No. 56. The rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole so far as they may be applicable, except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, but the previous question may be moved; provided, that when the previous question is sustained, it shall only apply to the amendments then pending, and other amendments may be offered to the section."

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read Rule Thirty-five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"RULE NO. 35—THE PREVIOUS QUESTION—HOW PUT.

"The previous question shall be put in the following form: 'Shall the main question be now put?' and all debate upon the main question shall be suspended until the previous question shall be decided. After the adoption of the previous question the sense of the Convention shall forthwith be taken: first, upon amendments reported by a committee, then upon pending amendments, and then upon the main question, without debate."

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: The whole question turns upon the point: What is the main question? and that resolves itself into this: whether or not a motion to adopt the section is not necessary. Now, in my judgment it is. In my judgment a section of this Constitution cannot be voted on, or cannot be adopted, except upon a direct motion to adopt. It has never been adopted at all. It is simply before the Convention for adoption, and a motion must be made to adopt it. No motion had been made to adopt it when the previous question was ordered, and the previous question, therefore, only included the motions before the Convention. We have got rid of the amendments; we have got rid of the motion to strike out, and now we have before the Convention simply this section. Now, it is necessary to have a motion to adopt the section, which motion was not made before the previous question was ordered; therefore, I think the ruling of the Chair is wrong.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I shall vote to sustain the Chair, because I believe it is correct; but I don't like it. I maintain that the main question is the original section reported by the committee—not the Committee of the Whole, but the committee on the article. That is the only main question that there is. The pending amendments, under this rule, have been disposed of, and this section is to be considered.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I am one of those who appeal from the decision of the Chair. I do so on the ground that the rules under which we are acting are not the rules of the Committee of the Whole, but the rules of the Convention. The rules provide that the previous question shall only extend to the amendments under consideration; therefore, I claim that the ruling of the Chair, cutting off amendments, is not in accordance with the rule. For that reason I appeal.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I appeal from the decision of the Chair, on the ground stated by the gentleman from Sacramento, Judge McFarland.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. My point is, that after the previous question is ordered, debate upon points of order is not in order; that points of order and appeals are to be decided without debate. We can have no debate under the previous question, even on an appeal.

THE CHAIR. That is the very point to be decided, whether the Chair is right or not. If the Chair is right, then debate is out of order. If the Chair is wrong, then debate is in order, because it would not be under the previous question.

MR. WATERS. Could not the vote be taken without debate in that instance?

THE CHAIR. That would be assuming that the Chair was necessarily correct, which the Chair cannot assume. That is for the Convention to decide.

MR. BLACKMER. Now, sir, because the Chair assumed that the question had been ordered upon the section after we had passed upon the motion to strike out, it does not follow that this is the main question, and it is upon that ground that I appeal. I believe, with the gentleman from Sacramento, that when we pass one of these sections, it is necessary to have a motion to that effect. They are here, presented by a committee to this Convention, to act upon them, and if we are to act upon them, and the main question is to reach that point, there must be a motion to adopt the section; consequently the main question exhausted itself upon the motion to strike out. It left before the Convention the section as proposed by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, before amendment by the Committee of the Whole. Upon that ground I take the appeal.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: These are called the Standing Rules of the Constitutional Convention of the State of California. Now we are in Convention. If these rules do not refer to this Convention, then I would like to know what they are for. Then there is another thing. We all know that there are a great many articles, or sections, that were adopted in the Committee of the Whole, that do not meet the wishes and views of a majority of this Convention. We want to discuss them and amend them. That is what we are here for. Some gentleman can send up some humbug amendment, and then the previous question is ordered, and we have got to take what we don't want. We can never get things right. If these rules only apply to the Committee of the Whole, we had better go to work and get up a set of rules to govern this Convention. I shall sustain the appeal.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: In reference to the point made by the gentleman from Sacramento, I wish to read the latter part of Rule Twenty-four. I think it will satisfy the gentleman, and all others, that under the rules of this Convention every proposition must come to a vote. The latter part of Rule Twenty-four says: "Provided further, that on all resolutions and propositions relating to the Constitution, the final vote shall be taken by ayes and noes."

MR. McFARLAND. What is the final vote? It is upon the adoption of the section. How does that come up?

MR. ANDREWS. It necessarily comes up. I contend that the question now before the Convention, under the previous question, is, shall the Convention adopt section three. That is the question under the rules of the House, as provided in the latter part of Rule Twenty-four.

MR. BLACKMER. But there must be a motion.

MR. ANDREWS. Under the rules the motion comes up of itself.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I move to lay the appeal upon the table.

Messrs. Stedman, McFarland, Tully, Wyatt, and Glascock demanded the ayes and noes.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will state before the vote is taken, that Rule Fifty-six, in the opinion of the Chair, is applicable only to the Committee of the Whole. "The rules of the Convention shall be observed in Committee of the Whole, so far as they may be applicable, except that the ayes and noes shall not be taken, but the previous question may be moved; provided, that when the previous question is sustained, it shall apply only to the amendments then pending, and other amendments may be offered to the section."

That, in the opinion of the Chair, in plain words, refers exclusively to the Committee of the Whole. Then, under Rule Thirty-five: "After the adoption of the previous question, the sense of the Convention shall forthwith be taken, first, upon amendments reported by a committee, then upon pending amendments, and then upon the main question, without debate." The Chair is of the opinion that the main question is section three, as reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. On that proposition, under Rule Twenty-four, the ultimate question is to be taken by ayes and noes. It is whether section three shall stand as reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. The ayes and noes are demanded upon the motion to lay the appeal upon the table. Those voting in the affirmative will, as their names are called, say "aye;" those voting in the negative will say "no." The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

RELIGIOUS WORSHIP.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness or juror on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'allowed,' in the second line, between the words 'be' and 'in,' and insert the word 'guaranteed' in lieu thereof."

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I propose this amendment, because it is quite evident that the word "allowed" conveys the idea that the right to disallow or deny exists. Now, sir, I deny that any Government or any power on earth has a right to grant or deny freedom of religious belief. No such power exists, and where it is attempted to be enforced, it is simply despotism. Freedom of thought is inalienable. Our Government, being republican, should guarantee full liberty to the citizen in his actions. "Guarantee," therefore, is the proper word to be used in this case, because its meaning is in full accord with the genius of our institutions, which recognize the inalienable rights of all men.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the fact, that when the last vote was taken the Chair stated that the amendment was adopted. Did the Chair mean that the amendment was adopted?

THE CHAIR. The Chair meant that section three was agreed to by the Convention. We were voting upon the section. The section is agreed to as reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. The question now is upon the adoption of the amendment to section four, offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 43 ayes to 36 noes.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the section as amended, upon which the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the first three names.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. My point of order is, that it must be read twice in Convention, on two several days. It has been amended now and cannot be acted upon the same day.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary has commenced calling the roll.

MR. HILBORN. The section should be read as amended before being adopted.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that it is not necessary, but, by unanimous consent, it could be read now.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: Parliamentary law requires that the section should be read, with all the amendments, before it is finally put to the Convention for adoption.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read the section as amended.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be guaranteed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness or juror on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience, hereby secured, shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the roll on the adoption of the section as amended.

The roll was called, and the section, as amended, adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

NOTICE.

MR. AYERS. I give notice that on to-morrow I shall move to amend Rule Thirty-five, by striking out the words in the last two lines, "and then upon the main question."

Mr. TINNIN. Mr. President: I think the gentleman will accept this amendment which I offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend Rule Thirty-five, by striking out all after the word "amendments," in the sixth line, and insert the following words, "and other amendments may be made to the section."

MR. AYERS. I accept that.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section five.

THE HABEAS CORPUS.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require its suspension.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for the word 'privilege,' in the first line, the word 'right.'"

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer that amendment for the reason that the "right" of habeas corpus should be inserted in place of "privilege," because it is a right, and not a privilege.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: As there seems to be some attention turned to this section, I would barely state that the word "when," in the second line, appears to me to be meaningless. If the gentleman would omit that in his amendment——

MR. AYERS. It would not read right then.

MR. BROWN. You are right. It is correct as it is.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will call the roll on section five.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer ——

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President ——

The roll was called on section five, and it was adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Herold,	Ohleyer,
Barbour,	Herrington,	O'Sullivan,
Barry,	Hilborn,	Prouty,
Barton,	Holmes,	Reddy,

NOES—None.

MR. BIGGS. I wanted to make a point of order.

THE CHAIR. The gentleman did not state that he rose to a point of order.

MR. BIGGS. My point of order was this, that under Rule Sixty-five all members shall vote unless excused by the Convention. I want to make that point of order.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I rise to offer an amendment to section five.

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that it is too late. Section five has been agreed to.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I move that we take a recess until two o'clock. The next section is the famous whipping-post section, which was got through the Committee of the Whole. I see that Mr. Campbell is not here, but he probably will be after recess. We ought to allow him to be here, and I make that motion, that we take a recess until two o'clock, when the train will arrive. I do not state positively that he will be here.

MR. TULLY. He will be here on the train, so he told me. This is a very important question.

The motion was lost, on a division, by a vote of 44 ayes to 48 noes.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section six, as reported by the committee, and then section six as proposed to be amended by the Committee of the Whole.

PUNISHMENTS.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted; nor shall witnesses be unreasonably detained, or confined in any jail or room where criminals are usually imprisoned.

The following amendment was reported by the Committee of the Whole:

"SEC. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit the infliction of corporal punishment for crime. Witnesses shall not be unreasonably detained, or confined in any jail or room where criminals are actually imprisoned."

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I move to strike out, in lines four and five, the words, "but nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit the infliction of corporal punishment for crime."

MR. AYERS. I second the motion.

Upon the amendment the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Filcher, Shurtleff, O'Sullivan, and Murphy.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Brown,	Evey,
Ayers,	Condon,	Freud,

THE CHAIR. The amendment is adopted.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I give notice that, on to-morrow, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted.

MR. LEWIS. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'jail or,' in the sixth line."

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Lewis.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 50 ayes to 34 noes.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I desire to give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the gentleman from San Joaquin was adopted.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen who have given these notices are all requested to send their notices up in writing, and there will be no mistake. The question is on the substitute reported by the Committee of the Whole, as amended. The Secretary will read it as amended.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted. Witnesses shall not be unreasonably detained, or confined in any room where criminals are actually imprisoned."

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. It is the same point I raised before. I read Rule Forty-nine: "Every resolution proposing any alteration in the Constitution, shall be read on two several days before it is finally acted upon and adopted by the Convention." This section six has been amended some now, and before we can finally adopt it, it will have to be read on to-day, as amended, and then on some other day.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is not well taken in the pending question. The ultimate question will be on the passage of the substitute after agreeing to it. We have not yet reached the ultimate question. At that time the gentleman can make his point.

MR. WEST. I move that the further consideration of section six be postponed until to-morrow.

[Cries of "No," and great confusion.]

THE CHAIR. The question is on agreeing to the substitute.

The amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended was adopted.

MR. WELLER. I move to strike out in section six the words "nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted."

THE CHAIR. The Chair is of the opinion that the amendment is not in order.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I give notice that I will move to reconsider the vote by which the section as amended was adopted.

[Cries of "Call the roll."]

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I move that the Convention take a recess until two o'clock. It is within ten minutes of the time.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read the substitute as amended. This is the ultimate vote.

THE SECRETARY read the section amid great confusion.

THE CHAIR. The hour having arrived, the Convention will take a recess until two P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President pro tem. Belcher in the Chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

RESOLUTION—COMMITTEE ON ADDRESS.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I wish to offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President of this Convention is hereby authorized to appoint a committee of five members of this body, whose duty it shall be to draft and publish a memorial to the people of this State, such recommendations as they may think proper in regard to the adoption of the Convention [Constitution?] formed by this body. Said memorial or recommendation to be ratified by this Convention before publication.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I move that the resolution be laid upon the table.

Carried.

NOTICE.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Mr. President: I wish to send up a notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice, that on the twenty-eighth instant, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention adopted section three, of article one, of the Constitution, as reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights."

RECONSIDERATION.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: Pursuant to notice heretofore given, I now move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention last Saturday refused to adopt the amendment to Rule Twenty-four, offered by Mr. McCallum.

MR. HARRISON. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman voted in the negative, and is not entitled to make this motion.

MR. ROLFE. It will be observed that this is a motion which requires a two-third vote to carry. I voted with the losing side. There were sixty-three ayes and thirty-nine noes, and I was one of the sixty-three. It will take more than sixty-three to carry.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion is made to reconsider.

MR. McCALLUM. I wish to say, that the gentleman who makes this motion——

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Chair has entertained the motion. The question is upon the motion to reconsider.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move that this motion be made the special order for two o'clock to-morrow afternoon. By that time, we can see whether it is necessary to amend the rule or not.

Carried.

PETITION.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I wish to present a petition from citizens of Newcastle, requesting the exemption of certain property used for charitable, educational, and church property, from taxation.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. If there is no objection, it will be received and laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

REPORT.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I wish to make a report.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses report back the resolution relative to the appointment of an Assistant Journal Clerk with the recommendation that it be adopted.

THE SECRETARY read the resolution:

Resolved, That the President be and he is hereby authorized to appoint an Assistant Journal Clerk for this Convention, whose salary shall be six dollars a day.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that the recommendation of the committee be concurred in.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I will say this, that the Journal Clerk has shown to us conclusively that he will not be able to get out the Journal for to-morrow morning. Throughout the session we have we have been working most of the time in Committee of the Whole, where the roll was not called, and where the amendments offered were not recorded, hence the Journal has been very light; but now we have got back into Convention where we will have roll calls, not only upon the main propositions, but upon amendments. There are some ten or twelve to-day, and whenever there is an amendment proposed it must be reported in the Journal, and it will at once become very much larger, and it will be impossible for one man to complete the Journal in time for it to go to the printer that night. I believe, from the information we have, that it is a necessity. It has been suggested that one of the Clerks at the desk might be detailed to do it, but the work of the Clerks will be increased also, and it will be hardly fair to take a Clerk who has worked hard all day and detail him for night work. It seems to me the very best kind of economy.

MR. BARBOUR. This provides that the President shall appoint a Journal Clerk. It seems to me, if I remember rightly, the rules of this Convention provide that the Convention shall elect. I make the point that it is not in order.

The resolution was adopted.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: It was held by the President that motions to reconsider should be sent up in writing. I wish to send up the following notices.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I give notice that to-morrow, January twenty-eighth, I will move the Convention to reconsider the vote by which the Convention voted to strike out from line five, of section six, of declaration of rights, the words 'jail or.'"

"Also: I give notice that to-morrow, January twenty-eighth, I will move the Convention to reconsider the vote by which the Convention has to-day voted against the amendment offered by me to section two, of article on declaration of rights, viz.: to amend said section by inserting in line ——, between the words 'same' and 'whenever,' the following words: 'by proceedings in accordance with law.'"

MR. TERRY. My recollection is that the gentleman voted with the minority.

MR. JONES. I voted for the express purpose of moving a reconsideration.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. I don't think that these notices of motions to reconsider an amendment that was adopted or rejected are in order. I think the only motion that can be made to reconsider is on a section that has been adopted or rejected.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Those are questions that will rise to-morrow when the notices are called up.

MR. HILBORN. What will be done with this?

MR. JONES. I hope the President will decide now.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Not being very well acquainted with this matter I have been speaking to others about it, and it strikes me that the motion ought to go to the section. But I cannot pass upon it now. The section before the Convention is section six as amended. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called on section six, as amended, and it was passed by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Grace,	O'Sullivan,
Ayers,	Harrison,	Reddy,
Barbour,	Harvey,	Rhodes,

NOES.

Caples,	Holmes,	Lampson,
Glascock,	Kelley,	Prouty,
Heiskell,	Keyes,	Turner—9.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Secretary will read section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 7. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but in civil actions, and in cases of misdemeanor where the punishment does not exceed six months' imprisonment or a fine of five hundred dollars, or both, three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. A trial by jury may be waived in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, by the consent of both parties, in open Court expressed, and in civil cases by the consent of the parties, signified in such manner as may be prescribed by law. In civil cases, and cases of misdemeanor, the jury may consist of any number, less than twelve, that the parties may agree upon in open Court.

NOTICES.

MR. JONES. I am uncertain as to what will be the ruling of the Chair, so I will give notice that on to-morrow I will move to reconsider the vote by which section six was adopted.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I wish to send up a written notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice that on the twenty-eighth instant I will move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention decided to adopt section six; of article one, of the proposed Constitution."

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Secretary has read section seven, as adopted by the Committee of the Whole. There is nothing else before the Convention. The Clerk began to read the original section, as reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, and the Chair rules that the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole is the one to be read and acted upon.

MR. LARKIN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair. My ground is this: that section seven, as reported from the Committee on Bill of Rights, has never been acted upon in Convention. Section seven, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, was considered in Convention, and reported back. The section as amended is before the Convention. I hold that that is the section to read, and then the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I think in the present instance only the report of the Committee of the Whole is before the Convention. If any gentleman desires to substitute the other section it is an easy matter to offer it.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: The Convention originally appointed regular standing committees. Those committees reported to the Convention, and the Convention accepted their report, and referred these reports to the Committee of the Whole. The Committee of the Whole had under consideration these reports, and recommended substitutes therefor. The question now properly before the Convention is, shall the Convention concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole? If the Convention refuses to concur in the recommendation, then the question comes on the original section as reported by the standing committee.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: This strikes me as being a very clear proposition, and the only question before the Convention now is: Shall the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole be concurred in and adopted by the Convention? This Convention resolved itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of such legislation, and after having acted on the reports, reported them back to the Convention with the recommendation that they be adopted by the Convention as amended. This is the usual course in legislative bodies. Now, the question before the Convention is: Shall the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, as to section seven, be adopted by the Convention? That is the first and only proposition. But any gentleman has a perfect right, under the rules, to move an amendment. That is the privilege of any gentleman on this floor. But the original section is not before the body, because it was disposed of by the Committee of the Whole. The Committee of the Whole refused to adopt it, and did adopt another one.

MR. WEST. Can the Committee of the Whole dispose of anything.

MR. ESTEE. Yes sir, they have that right.

MR. WEST. Their action has to be passed upon in Convention, and if the Convention concurs, then that disposes of it.

MR. ESTEE. Certainly, and that is the first question—shall the action of the Committee of the Whole be adopted by the Convention, as to section seven. If it is so adopted, that disposes of it. If it is not, then it is either stricken out or amended. I appeal to any of the old members who have served in the Legislature, if that has not been the rule always. I understand that it is the rule in other bodies. If it was not, the action of the Committee of the Whole would have no binding force upon this body. This is a matter of some importance, and I think we should settle it right now. I think my friend Larkin is clearly in error.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: If I understand the question correctly, it is not as stated by Mr. Estee; but the question is, whether the section, as reported by the committee, shall be read first. That is the question.

MR. ESTEE. If it was not read, then it will have to be read. I cannot say whether it has been read or not.

MR. ANDREWS. I understand the Secretary was about to read the section as reported by the committee—not the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole. The Chair ruled that he should not read that, but the amended section, as reported by the Committee of the Whole. I contend that the recommendation of the standing committee ought first to be read; then that the amended section, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, should be read.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: It seems to me, sir, that the ruling of the Chair is perfectly correct. The original section seven is not before the Convention at all. This Convention appointed a Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, to present to this Convention their suggestions as to what should be adopted. When the Convention got hold of these reports what did they do with them? They referred them to the Committee of the Whole. The Committee of the Whole took charge of them, and they have reported them back to the Convention. Now all there is before the Convention is what the Committee of the Whole reported. They reported section seven as amended, and the original section is not before us at all. It has been disposed of by another committee. It was stricken out and an amended section reported in its place. The question, then, before the Convention is that amended section.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I don't undertake to say what the precise effect of the step taken will be, but there was another step in the proceeding. The Committee on Bill of Rights made their report to the Convention. Now the Convention, upon the earnest solicitation of the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, referred to the Judiciary Committee sections seven, eight, nine, thirteen, and fourteen, and that committee made a report on these sections, which will be found under date of November first, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight. Now I do not remember precisely the action that was taken on the report of the Judiciary Committee, but my recollection is that the report was adopted and substituted in lieu of the report of the Committee on Bill of Rights, as to these four sections. If we did adopt that report, that will alter the case. My impression is it was adopted.

MR. STEDMAN. I shall vote to sustain the Chair. I hold that the report of the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights was disposed of by the Convention when it referred it to the Committee of the Whole, and this is the report of the Committee of the Whole. I hold that the report of the Committee of the Whole is now before this Convention for action. In support of that I wish to read from Cushing's Law and Practice, paragraph two thousand and fourteen——

MR. TINNIN. I rise to a point of order. There is no appeal from the decision of the Chair.

MR. LARKIN. I wish to state the grounds of my appeal—not through any discourtesy to the Chair, but because I want the question to be settled.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. I will state to the gentleman from Trinity that there is no second to the appeal. The Chair decides that the report of the Committee of the Whole is before the Convention for action, and that the original sections will not come up for action unless offered in the shape of amendments.

MR. LARKIN. I wish to ask you a question. Suppose we take up an amended section as reported by the Committee of the Whole, and the Convention refuses to concur in the recommendation of the committee. What is our position then? Then you will have to take the original section. This Convention may perfect the section, may it not?

MR. ESTEE. Then the original section comes up. There is no doubt about that.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I confess I am heartily sick of this discussion—sick of it. If it had been proposed here how many two and three make, and should have gone into a discussion to determine what the sum total of two and three were, I should have been about equally ashamed. Now, in all reason and common sense can there be any question about what is before the Convention. Is there anybody here who can doubt what is before the Convention? Certainly there is not. The report of the Committee of the Whole is before the Convention—nothing else. Why, do you propose to set aside the amended section for the original section, which was rejected? Why, I never heard of anything so preposterous in my life. There is nothing before the Convention but what was reported by the Committee of the Whole, and everybody knows it, or ought to know it.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. There is nothing before the body except the appeal.

MR. LARKIN. I withdraw the appeal.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Then the question comes on the adoption of section seven, as amended and recommended by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'actions,' in line two, down to and including the word 'both,' in line four."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: That will make the section read, that in civil cases three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. There are a vast number of criminal actions that are less than felonies in magnitude, but equal in their disgraceful effects upon human character, and I submit that the rule that there shall be a unanimous verdict in all criminal cases should not be departed from, unless there is some stronger reason presented than was presented before the Committee of the Whole. It was argued upon that proposition, that crimes of the character of misdemeanor were not of sufficient magnitude to require a verdict in all cases to be unanimous. In criminal cases, a man's liberty is just as dear to him when considered in connection with the County Jail as with reference to the State Prison. In either case he is deprived of his liberty, and it is equally disgraceful in the eye of the law and in the sight of humanity as when he is sent to the State Prison by the unanimous verdict of a jury. Their effects are oftentimes equally destructive of character and upon society. There should not be any distinction made with reference to the punishment, when the liberty of the citizen is at stake. I do submit that this change from the old rule ought not to be made. There out to be a unanimous verdict in all criminal cases.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 7. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate forever; but a jury trial may be waived by the parties, in all civil cases, in the manner to be prescribed by law."

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I suppose it is unnecessary for me to say to this Convention that this is the section of the present Constitution. I do hope, sir, that the Convention will take this matter into serious consideration, and not make this innovation upon the jury system which is contemplated in the section reported by the Committee of the Whole. I am in hopes that this Convention is not prepared to try any such experiment as this, or to incorporate into the Constitution any such section as this proposed section. It is really, sir, virtually doing away with the jury system. It is a sacred system, which has been handed down to us through the wisdom of ages. If there is anything more dear to the American heart than another, it is that a man shall not be deprived of life or liberty without the unanimous verdict of twelve good men. And, sir, I do not believe that we are prepared to depart from this rule, so far as any grade of crime is concerned. I do not believe we will provide in the Constitution that any citizen of the State of California may be convicted of any crime except upon the unanimous verdict of twelve men. I believe we are ready to adopt the amendment as proposed by the gentleman from Santa Clara; but it does not go far enough. Why make the departure in relation to civil cases? Why depart from a perfect verdict? and a perfect verdict can only be obtained by having a unanimous verdict. I say, the idea of a perfect jury has been handed down to us through centuries, and that is the unanimous opinion of twelve good and true men. I would rather you would reduce the jury to six men and make their verdict unanimous, than to make the jury consist of twelve men, and allow three fourths of them to render a verdict. I wish to call your attention to the position in which we have placed ourselves. I say, it is a dangerous innovation, and one we should thoroughly consider before we adopt it. I do hope that the Constitution as it stands now will remain the Constitution of California in this regard.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I desire to correct the gentleman from Shasta. He alludes to this section as having been reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Now, if the gentleman will look back and reflect, he would recollect that the first section here which some gentlemen wanted to have read, was the section reported by that committee. That section was rejected. After having discussed it for some time it was referred to the Judiciary Committee, and the Judiciary Committee took several days to consider it, and did thoroughly consider it, and reported it, after several days, to the Convention. Now, the second section seven, as read from the desk, is the section that was formulated by the Judiciary Committee, and not the section reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Now, sir, in regard to the merits of the proposition, I cannot but reflect how the gentleman from Shasta, being a lawyer, could think it so necessary, so essential to the rights and liberties of the people of this State, that a man who follows thieving should be entitled to a verdict of a unanimous jury. But if he be a murderer, and his case comes up in the Supreme Court, why it is not necessary to have a unanimous Supreme Bench to say whether the bill of exceptions shall entitle him to a second trial or not, while the chicken thief must have a unanimous jury of twelve men—a unanimous verdict. Where is the logic of the thing? I see no sense in it, and if there is any I think the gentleman from Shasta must have a monopoly of it. This proposition was formulated by the Judiciary Committee, with a great deal of care and pains. It was a compromise measure, and having been adopted by the Committee of the Whole should receive the sanction of this body. Why not? Well, if you take the theory of the gentleman from Shasta, that a chicken thief should have a unanimous verdict, while the man whose life hangs in the scale can only have a majority of the Court—if you accept that theory, I can see where the logic comes in. But I deny that there is any reason or sense, and I maintain that the innovation, if it be such, and it is, is one that is dictated by every consideration of sound public policy. Now, let us see what the result of a unanimous verdict is. Here is a petty larceny thief, tried by a jury of twelve men. There may be one man on that jury, who, through feelings of sympathy for the prisoner, may control the other eleven. They fail to agree, and the result is he must go back to jail and wait for another trial. It may be nothing to him, because his time is of no valne; but in the meantime the taxpayers are footing the bill, to subserve no good purpose, but rather to defeat the ends of justice. I deny that there is any sense, or logic, or sound public considerations in this system. It was expected that there would be some innovations upon the old Constitution; hence this Convention was called. But, sir, if we are going to tie ourselves down by an iron-bound rule, and say we will make no innovations, then we do not need any Convention; we do not need a Legislature once in forty years. But, sir, we are not acting upon that theory. We are acting upon the theory that this country and this people are progressing, and that new emergencies are constantly arising. I hope, sir, that the amendment will be voted down, forty to one.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I am not one of those who believe in great innovations, but I am under the impression that this matter has been studied upon and thoughtfully considered and acted upon by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, and then by the Committee of the Whole. We all know that this matter of jury trials has been discussed and canvassed before the people of this State before the meeting of this Convention, and it was the impression adopted long ago that unanimous verdicts were hurtful, and did not subserve the purposes for which they were intended. After discussing this matter thoroughly in committee, and then in Committee of the Whole, I have nothing to say. I believe that no new light can be shed upon this question, and I hope the Convention will come to a vote upon it, and adopt it as it was adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: It has been the habit of Judges to charge juries in all criminal prosecutions that the defendant is entitled to the benefit of all reasonable doubts. It has been a fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that every man charged with crime shall have the benefit of the doubt. Now you propose to not only change that system, but also to change another principle. What will be the use of the Judge charging the jury that the defendant is to have the benefit of all reasonable doubts, when, at the same time, you say that three of the jurors may doubt as much as they please—in fact, may be convinced of the entire innocence of the defendant, and yet not avail anything? That nine of them may be convinced beyond all reasonable doubt, but the other three may doubt as much as they please. In order to change the jury system you will have to change the entire common law rule of evidence, which has been sanctioned by the wisdom of centuries, that if the facts of the case are insufficient to convince the mind beyond all reasonable doubt, the defendant is entitled to an acquittal. Now, it seems to me that we ought at least to be consistent in providing for any change in the system of criminal jurisprudence. It seems to me that this change will not be applicable hereafter. Then what rule will you apply where three fourths of the jury may render a verdict? What sort of a rule will you apply? You must say first, that a preponderance of evidence is sufficient, and having said that, you say how many of them shall determine what is a preponderance of evidence. I am satisfied that we ought to allow the jury system to remain as it is. I shall therefore vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Shasta.

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I am in favor of the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole. It has met their approval, and I believe it is exactly right. Every lawyer recognizes this fact, that if he has a good case, he will trust to the Judge, and when he has a bad case he always wants a jury called, from the fact that he has a chance to get some one man upon the jury favorable to his side, and thereby defeat the ends of justice. I believe this amendment is clearly in the interest of the people.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: In Committee of the Whole I spoke upon this question. It seems to me that the argument to day does not meet the whole of this question. We have a law to punish the guilty, but that law is also for the purpose of protecting the innocent. We must not forget that innocent men are often accused of crime. Now, I am for the jury system as it has been. I am for that jury system because it has worked well. I am for that system because it is a perfect barrier against injustice, persecution, and oppression. One gentleman who spoke so pleasantly, Mr. Caples, said that if a chicken thief was put upon trial under this system, he must have a unanimous verdict. But when it comes to a question involving a man's property, we propose to allow a three-fourths verdict. I hope that few gentlemen on this floor have come to value property more highly than individual liberty. They don't realize that there is a great difference between taking a man's liberty away unjustly, and taking his property. We must remember that in civil cases if the jury make mistakes now there is a higher tribunal which can pass upon the mistake and correct it. But, sir, in criminal prosecutions, if the jury makes a mistake as to facts, I beg the Doctor to remember that there is no appeal, and that the mistake is without a remedy. There is no way by which a man unjustly convicted of crime, by a majority of a jury, can have the case raised again. Let us consider these matters. Let us not be too hasty about it. I believe in throwing all the safeguards we can about individual liberty. We do not know how soon this question may come home to us. Innocent men have been accused of crime in the past, and will be again. They have been placed under very adverse circumstances, and will be so placed again. I hope that the amendment proposed, which will result in saying that a man shall not be deprived of his liberty except twelve good and fair minded men are convinced of his guilt, will prevail. If a man is clearly guilty, I believe twelve men can always be convinced of the fact.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: As a general thing, all these discussions should be conducted in Committee of the Whole. I regard the pending amendment, however, of the gentleman from Santa Clara, one of such importance as to justify me in saying a few words in favor of the amendment. I submit that the proposition reported by the Committee of the Whole is grossly inconsistent in itself, in this: it makes a distinction between criminal cases. I submit to every member of this Convention, and especially to every lawyer who is familiar with criminal practice, that it will work an injustice. It is making a distinction in crimes where there is no sufficient difference. It is a distinction against the humbler class of criminals. I have little to say about the old Constitution. This jury system has come down to us for ages, as far as that is concerned. But in this age of improvements and material progress, lawyers will be far short of being even with the age, unless they can devise improvements in the system of jurisprudence. But, sir, I propose to be consistent. When you propose to make a distinction of this kind, when you propose to say that one class of criminals may be convicted by a part of the jury, while another class shall have a unanimous jury, you are making a distinction that is beneath the dignity of a Constitution. I have been unable to find such a provision, and I may safely say there is no Constitution in the civilized world where the right of trial by jury has been infringed as it is proposed here.

MR. REDDY. If a man steals forty-nine dollars, nine men may convict him; but, if he steals fifty dollars, it requires a unanimous verdict.

MR. MCCALLUM. Yes, sir; the point is well made.

MR. HILBORN. Does it not make this distinction, that one is confined in the County Jail and the other goes to State Prison?

MR. MCCALLUM. That is no answer to the objection of giving one class of crimes a different mode of trial from another. There are many cases, such as libel, where the punishment is greater than imprisonment. It may be twelve months, or it may be five thousand dollars, and yet be a case which don't blast a man's reputation in the slightest degree, and the verdict must be unanimous. But if it is for stealing forty-nine dollars and ninety-nine cents, involving the character of the man, nine out of twelve can find a verdict. The gentleman proposes to strike out certain words, which will leave the section complete. I hope we will strike out these words, and let it stand as it always has stood in this Constitution and in other Constitutions. I prefer the amendment to the old Constitution, because, in civil cases, there is no wrong to anybody. This is safe enough in criminal cases, and will save costs to the parties oftentimes.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the amendment by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Wyatt, Keyes, Herrington, Stedman, and Cross.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Shasta.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seven so as to read as follows: 'Section 7. The right of trial shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but in civil actions three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. A trial by jury may be waived in all criminal cases, where the punishment does not exceed six months' imprisonment, or a fine of five hundred dollars, or both, by the consent of both parties, in open Court expressed, and in civil cases by the consent of the parties, signified in such manner as may be prescribed by law. In civil cases, and in all criminal cases where the punishment does not exceed six months imprisonment or a fine of five hundred dollars, or both, the jury may consist of any number less than twelve that the parties may agree upon in open Court.'"

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: The amendment simply fixes the words in the latter part of the section, where felony and misdemeanor appear. When this matter was up before the Committee on Judiciary, it was declared that the words misdemeanor and felony were not distinct enough, as drawing the lines between the two classes of crime, because the statutes could transpose the crimes if they saw fit. Therefore, these words, "six months' imprisonment, or five hundred dollars fine, or both," were placed in the first part of the section, and intended to be placed in other parts of the section, where the distinction is used.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I second the amendment proposed by the gentleman, because it makes it more clear and distinct. These are merely statutory crimes, and the distinction is left entirely with the Legislature. It may be that the punishment for a misdemeanor is greater than the punishment for felony, except that the party could not be sent to the State Prison. For instance, the crime of libel may be punished by a fine of five thousand dollars and imprisonment in the County Jail one year; and if the party is unable to pay the fine, he may be imprisoned seven or eight years, which is a greater punishment than is suffered for many felonies.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kern, Mr. Smith.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Shasta, Mr. Andrews.

Lost.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I move to insert the word "in" after the word "and," in line eight.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'felony,' in line five, to the word 'law,' in line seven."

REMARKS OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: My reason for offering that amendment is this, that there cannot be any case tried without a jury, unless a jury is waived in open Court. The jury must be on hand, ready to try the case. The curse has been that our Police Courts and Justices' Courts have been obliged to keep a jury on hand to try these petty cases. It is a great burden to the people of the country, who are continually annoyed by being called as jurymen. It is certainly not necessary that a jury trial should be waived in open Court, in this class of small cases, such as are tried every day in our Police Courts.

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I think the amendment proposed by the gentleman is a very proper one indeed. Now, under this section, it will be impossible to transact the business in the Police Courts of San Francisco or Sacramento. In those courts there are from twenty to fifty persons for drunkenness every morning, or other misdemeanors, and every one of these men, in addition to the offenses committed against society, can inflict further damage by calling away twelve men from their vocations to hear their cases. I do not believe that there should be any iron rule here, or that these men should be obliged to have a jury whether they demand it or not.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: The gentleman from Santa Clara, and the gentleman from Solano, are both mistaken. Section three, of the present Constitution, provides that the right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate forever; and that a jury may be waived by the parties in all cases, in the manner to be prescribed by law. The theory that inferior Courts and Police Courts proceed upon is, that there is a waiver of a jury in every case. There is never a jury trial in the Police Court. If a man desires to have his case passed upon by a jury, his case goes to the Superior Court.

MR. HILBORN. If we adopt this section, he will have to waive it in open Court.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That matter was fully discussed in the Judiciary Committee, of which the gentleman is a member, and we came to the conclusion there, that trials might be had in the Police Courts without the adoption of this provision.

MR. WELLER. Are you not aware that this matter was brought up at a late hour, when this section was under consideration.

MR. BEERSTECHER. "By the consent of both parties in open Court expressed." Now in every State in this Union these inferior Courts proceed in a similar manner. A person accused of crime is guaranteed the right of trial by jury, as I stated before. But the very fact that a man submits to the jurisdictions of these Courts, is taken as a waiver. If he desires a jury trial he says so, and his case goes to a Superior Court. There is no difficulty about it at all, and the section should remain as it is.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Stedman, McConnell, Davis, and Moreland.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

NOTICES OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. BERRY. Mr. President: I give notice that I will move to reconsider the vote by which section seven was carried, whereby the Convention agreed to strike out that portion which allows three fourths of the jury to agree upon a verdict in cases of misdemeanor. I voted aye on the section, for the purpose of reconsidering.

MR. MCNUTT. Mr. President: I give notice, that to-morrow I will move to reconsider the vote by which section three, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, was rejected.

INDICTMENTS AND INFORMATIONS.

THE SECRETARY read section eight, as reported by the Committee of the Whole:

SEC. 8. Offenses heretofore required to be prosecuted by indictment, shall be prosecuted by indictment or by information, after commitment and examination by a Magistrate, as may be prescribed by law; but a Grand Jury shall be drawn and summoned at least once a year in each county.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I desire to offer an original section in place of that. I will draw it off, and will offer it now as a substitute.

MR. HARVEY. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

"Amend section eight, of article one, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, by striking out all after the word 'law,' in line three of said section."

MR. HARVEY. Mr. President: I do not wish to have any particular debate upon this, but simply to say that it does away with the Grand Jury system in the Constitution, and leaves it entirely to the discretion of the Legislature, in the same form that it is left in the Constitution of the State of Wisconsin. The Constitution of that State says, no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law. In this case they would be held to answer as prescribed by law.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: The committee thought it was necessary to have at least one Grand Jury every year, for the purpose of examining the books and accounts of the several county officers. I think it ought not to be left to the Legislature.

MR. BEERSTECHER. This proposes to provide that the Legislature may abolish the Grand Jury entirely. I don't think that is a proper step. I think there ought to be a Grand Jury once a year, if for no other reason than to present indictments against county officers.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I offer the original section of the old Constitution as a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime (except in cases of impeachment, and in cases of militia, when in actual service, and the land and naval forces, in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in time of peace, and in cases of petit larceny, under the regulation of the Legislature) unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury; and, in any trial in any Court whatever, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend, in person and with counsel, as in civil actions.

[No second.]

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I desire to make another appeal to this Convention to stand by the compromise measures adopted in Committee of the Whole. As I remarked some time since, the Committee of the Whole referred this matter to the Judiciary Committee.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. There is no amendment before the house.

MR. CAPLES. May I not be permitted to speak in support of the section.

[Cries of "Call the roll!" "Call the roll!"]

MR. JONES. I wish to offer section eight, as presented by the Committee on Bill of Rights, as a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. No person shall be held to answer for a crime, or other public offense, punishable by death or imprisonment in the State Prison (except in cases of impeachment, and in cases of militia when in actual service, and in the land and naval forces, in time of war, or which this State may keep, with the consent of Congress, in time of peace), unless on presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury. In all other cases, offenses shall be prosecuted by indictment, information, accusation, or complaint, as concurrent remedies, as may be prescribed by law. A Grand Jury shall consist of not less than fifteen nor more than eighteen persons, two thirds of whom may find an indictment or true bill. The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, may abolish and restore the Grand Jury system."

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I desire, sir, to support the section as presented by the Committee of the Whole. I desire to stand by the compromise. We discussed this matter several days in the Committee of the Whole, and being unable to come to any conclusion we referred it to the Judiciary Committee. That committee, after due deliberation, reported it back in this shape, and it was adopted by the Committee of the Whole; and I desire to know now if this Convention proposes to stand by the compromise. It does appear to me, Mr. President, that if we are ever going to recognize the fact that the taxpayers have some rights that other people are bound to respect, it is time that we now begin to assert it. This, as well as the former proposition, is looking towards economy in the administration of government, and was framed by the majority of the committee in conformity with that principle. [Applause.] Mr. President—— [Applause.] Mr. President, if the Convention does not desire to hear me, I am sure I don't desire to be heard. But I felt that it was my duty to make an appeal to this Convention to stand by its former action. As I said before, this section is the result of careful deliberation on the part of the committee. [Applause.] It was framed in the spirit of compromise, in the interest of economy, and ought to be adopted, in my judgment, by this Convention, and I hope that all amendments will be voted down and that the section will be supported as it stands. [Applause and laughter.]

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

MR. JONES. I hope the previous question will not be sustained.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. I heard no second.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. I will not detain this Convention long, but I wish to correct an error. Mr. Caples seems to think that this section, reported by the Judiciary Committee, was fully discussed in Committee of the Whole.

MR. CAPLES. So it was.

MR. JONES. No, sir; the only discussion was had when it was being referred to that committee, if he will recollect. [Applause.] There was a good deal of discussion upon this fifth section. [Applause.]

MR. CAPLES. I ask the gentleman a question: Were there not various amendments offered? [Applause.]

MR. STEDMAN. I rise to a point of order. With all due deference to the gentleman, I submit that the previous question has been moved. It has been seconded by a number of members in this part of the house.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Is it seconded?

MR. ESTEE. I second it.

MR. DUNLAP. I second it.

MR. BLACKMER. I second it.

MR. MCCONNELL. I second it.

MR. STEDMAN. I withdraw it.

MR. JONES. I think I am not mistaken in regard to the fact, being upon the Committee on Declaration of Rights, and we gave them very careful consideration. [Applause.] My recollection is very distinct, that after the sections were reported back there was no discussion of consequence. I ask the members to compare the section reported by the Judiciary Committee and that reported by the Committee on Bill of Rights, and upon such comparison, I submit, sir, that section eight, as reported by the Committee on Declaration of Rights, is more desirable to adopt on the part of this Convention than section eight as reported by the Judiciary Committee. [Applause.] I don't believe it is any member of this Convention that is making that noise. I believe the members of this Convention are all gentlemen.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. That noise must be discontinued.

MR. JONES. I submit that if a Grand Jury is not needed oftener than once a year, it is not needed at all; and in cases of felonies, or other offenses punishable by death or imprisonment in the State Prison, need to be examined by the Grand Jury once a year, they need to be so examined every time they are brought forward. As a matter of fact, in many counties of this State a Grand Jury is not now found necessary to be called more than twice a year. In the county I represent, a Grand Jury is not called oftener than twice a year. They can be called oftener if necessary. Now, this leaves it to the Legislature to experiment in this regard. They can obey the mandates of the people, and if they find they have made a mistake, they can rectify it.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on the adoption of the substitute.

MR. HERRINGTON. I would like to offer the section of the old Constitution. It is unnecessary to rehearse the arguments that have been made here upon this subject. [Applause, and continued stamping of feet.] I say, sir, that a system that has been tried for over eight hundred years [continued interruption, stamping of feet, and applause], and which has proved a safeguard to the rights and liberties of the people, should not be so hastily set aside. It is the safety of the people that you are sent here to guard, and not to tear down the bulwarks of freedom.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I shall not detain the Convention but a moment. It seems to me that gentleman are acting in this matter with something like improper haste, and without regard to the consideration which the importance of this subject demands. We are discussing a question here that I consider is covered by the Constitution of the United States, which provides that no man shall be tried for any infamous crime, except upon the presentation of a Grand Jury.

MR. TERRY. I will ask the gentleman if he does not know that this applied to United States Courts.

MR. ANDREWS. That is a proposition contained in the Constitution of the United States. I ask if it is not a guard that is thrown around every citizen of the United States.

MR. STEDMAN. Does the gentleman not know that they have abolished the Grand Jury in Wisconsin by a large majority.

MR. ANDREWS. That is no reason why we should adopt that provision here. It is the Constitution as it stands now, it is the Constitution as it ought to stand, and I call for the ayes and noes upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara.

No second.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is upon the amendment.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is upon the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Mariposa, Mr. Jones.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Barton, Grace, Huestis, and West.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Secretary will read section nine, as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to find a general verdict, as in other criminal cases. Indictments found or information laid for publications in newspapers shall be tried in the county where such newspapers have their publication office, or in the county where the party alleged to be libeled resided at the time of the alleged publication, unless the place of trial shall be changed for good cause.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in lines seven and eight, the words, 'the jury shall have the right to find a general verdict as in other criminal cases,' and insert 'the jury shall have the right to determine the law and fact.'"

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer that in order to restore the language of the old Constitution which was stricken out in Committee of the Whole by a very equivocal vote. I do not know whether it is necessary here to go over that question again. I hope the Convention will adopt the amendment.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I shall support the amendment. The words of the old Constitution have answered very well for twenty-nine years. The freedom of the people and the freedom of the press are intimately connected; in fact, there can be no freedom without a free press. We want no hampering of the press in this free country.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: This question has been misrepresented, I don't know whether intentionally or by mistake. The argument has been put forward that in twenty-seven States of this Union the Constitutions make libel cases rest on the same basis as other criminal offenses. Now, sir, this argument is defective in one thing. These gentlemen forget, when they make that assertion, the other material fact that in those States the jury renders a general verdict. Sir, in determining what words will injure a man's reputation, the jury is fully as competent as the Judge, and far less liable to be biased. When we consider the origin of the provision we are now seeking to strike out, we can understand the animus that prompted it. It originated from a man who decided that persons in his Court were in contempt for questioning the jurisdiction of his Court. And farther, sir, when the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, his attorneys say he was right on the ground that this Convention is not a legally constituted body. I have no desire to discuss the motives which actuated that gentleman in this matter, but I have this to say: that the proceedings of that particular case show that the Judge is no more infallible than the juryman, and when we submit to a Judge of this State to say that particular words spoken of a man will or will not injure his character, we take away from the jury the very substance of the case. Experience of many years has shown that it is necessary to protect newspapers from unjust prosecutions for libel. I believe in punishing the libeler the same as I would any other offender, but, sir, I hold that the question of what constitutes a libel ought to be left to the jury and not to the Judge.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I do not propose, sir, to take up the time of this body. I am in favor of the amendment; I think it is a good one. The matter has been discussed by the newspapers of this State, and the great majority of them are in favor of that clause in the Constitution upon this subject, that the jury shall have the determination of the law and the fact. Now it is evident in this case that the jury are not likely to be under the same obligations to the newspaper that the Judge might be. And it is also evident that in many cases there might not be the same prejudice existing in the minds of the jury as in the mind of the Judge. In these times we know that Judges belong to one or the other political faith, and that their claims are advocated by certain papers, and they must necessarily feel grateful to the men who have helped them. For these reasons, Judges being only human beings, I think it is far safer to leave the law as it now stands. Leave the jury to determine the law and the fact, and not the Judge. I am under the impression that this amendment will meet with but little opposition.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: Inasmuch as the two great defenders of the section to abridge the liberties of the press—Judge Fawcett and Doctor O'Donnell—are absent, I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. West, Evey, Huestis, and Wyatt.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Blackmer, Belcher, Huestis, Jones, and O'Sullivan.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for one day was granted Messrs. Larue, Schell, and Lindow.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITIONS.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano, presented the following petition, signed by a number of citizens of Solano County, asking the exemption of certain property from taxation:

To the Honorable J. P. Hoge, President, and to members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: Your petitioners, citizens of the State of California, and residents of Solano County, most respectfully request your honorable body to exempt from taxation all property used exclusively for charitable, educational, and church purposes.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

Messrs. Hoge, Wilson of Tehama, Belcher, Burt, Larkin, Tully, and Reed presented similar petitions.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

NEW PROPOSITION.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I ask leave to introduce a proposition, and have it read and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, the executive, and judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

SEC. 2. The Legislature may provide that causes submitted in a Court shall be decided within a limited time, under such conditions as may be provided by law.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to say a word in explanation of that, in offering it at this time. There is no committee having charge of the subject of the distribution of powers, and I have offered this proposition to cover that omission. Section one is in the old Constitution, and I have added a new section, proposing to constitutionalize the action of the Legislature requiring Courts to decide cases within a limited time, under conditions. There is no committee to which that can properly be referred. If it is in order, I move to refer it to a Committee of the Whole. It might be printed in the Journal, but I am indifferent as to whether it is printed or not. The second proposition is as I have stated. We have a statute of the State which provides that the Courts shall decide all cases within a certain time, but it is held to be unconstitutional. This is intended to constitutionalize the action of the Legislature in that respect. I move that it be referred to the Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection it is so ordered. The Chair hears none.

RECONSIDERATION.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move that the vote by which the report of the Committee of the Whole on section three of the article on preamble and bill of rights was defeated yesterday, be reconsidered. Notice was given by Mr. McNutt.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I move to lay the motion on the table.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I have the floor, I believe. I understand that my excitable and Democratic friend from Trinity would like to table the motion to reconsider; but, Mr. President, the question, I believe, is now before the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider. The Secretary will read the section reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. That this State shall ever remain a member of the American Union; that the people thereof are a part of the American nation; that there is no right on the part of this State to secede, and that all attempts, from whatever source or upon whatever pretext, to dissolve said Union, or sever said nation, shall be resisted by the whole power of the State."

MR. TINNIN. That is not the section adopted by the Convention. The motion was to reconsider the section that passed.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the question is to reconsider the vote by which the Convention rejected the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. TINNIN. I did not understand that to be the motion yesterday.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: When this question was before the Committee of the Whole the committee struck out section three and all the amendments that were proposed to that section. The result was that there was nothing in the preamble and bill of rights relating to our relations with the General Government. At the time it was stricken out there were three amendments pending, and each one was thus disposed of. I then, without debate on my part, proposed section three, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, and it was adopted by that committee; but on yesterday, during my absence, it was defeated, and section three was adopted as originally reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Section three as originally reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights reads as follows:

"SEC. 3. We recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties, and the paramount law of the land."

MR. TINNIN. I rise to a point of order. I claim that the notice given by Mr. McNutt was to reconsider the vote on an amendment, and I desire the Chair to decide whether a notice of reconsideration can be given on an amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks that a notice may be given. The Chair is also of the opinion that the vote taken on section three was altogether out of order. No vote is taken upon the separate sections of a report, but only upon the amendments.

MR. TINNIN. Does the Chair rule that notice can be given to reconsider an amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will, for the information of the Convention, state what is its opinion on the entire proceeding on the report of the Committee of the Whole. I will state it now so that members can govern themselves accordingly. My understanding of the rule is this: When a report from the Committee of the Whole comes back to the Convention with amendments, the first proceeding is to read over the entire amendments adopted and recommended by the Committee of the Whole, and then to take up each amendment in its order for the action of the Convention. The question would be upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in the amendments recommended, and it would be in order to amend the amendments, to suit the Convention, as they may think proper; and then to pass to the second amendment in the same way, and through all the amendments. After the Convention have gone through all the amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole, then it would be in order for any member to move an additional section to the article. If that is not done then it would be in order to move any amendment to any portion of the article. If that be not done, then the question arises: "Shall the article be engrossed and read a second time?" So that there is never any vote taken upon the adoption of separate sections, but the vote is taken upon the entire article as amended or prepared by the action of the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope the interruption will not be taken out of my ten minutes. I have no vanity about the adoption of this section as presented by me. It, however, represents three propositions which meet my approval. First, that this State shall ever remain a member of the American Union—that there shall not exist the right to secede. This is not buncombe; there is nothing political about it. I did not suppose there was any member here that would object to an expression so plain, so clear, and I think so patriotic. The next proposition is that the people "thereof are part of the American nation.' Why, sir, in the very first sentence of the Constitution of the United States declaration is made that "we, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America." I claim that we were a nation, that we were Americans, and that we should not be afraid anywhere or under any circumstances to enunciate that proposition. I thought that we ought to be proud of our citizenship—of our nationality. I thought we ought in some manner to express it in this solemn document, and I thought it was due to the people of the State of California that this Convention should show their allegiance to this great nation, and for that reason I placed that second proposition there. The third reads: "There is no right on the part of this State to secede." The reason this was inserted was that it has hitherto been claimed that the right—the legal right—to secede was a right the State possessed. Therefore I thought it was but fit and proper that this question should be settled in our organic law. Thus far I think that section ought to stand. The latter part of it I care nothing about. If that part of the reconsideration of the Committee of the Whole should be adopted I would move that the remaining portion be stricken out. I believe that it is fit and proper this should be done. I know that this is not intended as a red flag, thrown in the face of any one, but when the American flag is a red flag to any man, then, in my judgment, he is unworthy of American citizenship. No man is so good a Republican, so good a Democrat, or so good a Workingman, but that he can afford to adopt the first three propositions in that amendment. They are all right—all patriotic. Nor is this question anything new. We find similar provisions in many of the Constitutions of the different States of the Union, and at this time in this State, so remote from our sister States at the East, we ought to give expression to our devotion to our common country. We are told that the time will come when we will have a Pacific Republic. For one I wish to place upon record my utter abhorrence of that idea. For one I recognize my paramount allegiance to the United States, and only a secondary allegiance to the State of California. I believe this is the sentiment of a large majority of the people of our State, and I must think this section will represent the best thought and the average judgment of the people of the State and the members of this Convention. These are some of the reasons why I proposed that amendment, and why I make this motion. I hope, therefore, that the motion to reconsider the vote by which the report of the Committee of the Whole upon section three was rejected will be adopted, and that we will have an opportunity then to amend it in such a manner as will meet the wishes of the Convention and of the people of the State.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: As a member of the Workingmen's party, I wish only to state that I am in favor of this section as adopted, and have been. The Workingmen's party is in favor of it. Their platform says: "We recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties, and the paramount law of the land." I am a man that was born and raised under the Constitution of the United States. I was raised also under the flag of the United States; and in favor of the Constitution and laws of the United States. I believe that this is the best government that was ever founded by man, and I am opposed to this doctrine that was inaugurated by the Southern Confederacy, that the government has a right to tumble to pieces. I hold that the nation is perpetual, and I cannot see why we should not, as American citizens, say this in our Constitution here, that the Constitution of the United States is the charter of our liberties. It is the bulwarks of our institutions. I am favor of sustaining it here and everywhere. I know that the Workingmen's party is in favor of it. I do not know what the Democrats and Non-Partisans are in favor of.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: When this question was up before, my recollection is, that the gentleman from San Francisco voted not to strike out that section; but whether that is so or not, I say that the principles enunciated in section three, as reported by the committee, are fully as loyal and patriotic as that proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco. I say more, sir. If we adopt the amendment offered by him, we would cast rather a stigma upon the State of California. California never did secede; never showed any disposition to secede; and she stood loyal to the government during the whole struggle. Now, sir, we intend to stand loyal. That amendment is taken from the rebel States. It has been adopted in the Constitutions of all the rebel States, and we do not want to class ourselves with those States that made that terrible foolish move of trying to secede from the Union. We want to stand where we stood, with the Northern States; and not one single Constitution in the Northern States, or the States that remained loyal to the Union, has any such amendment as that. The declaration we adopted yesterday, is full, decided, and loyal. It declares the Constitution of the United States to be the charter of our liberties, and I believe it to be a charter, although some say there are other bulwarks that would stand between us and anarchy, but I do not think so. I trust, Mr. President, that we will retain the declaration that we made yesterday, and that the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco will not be adopted, for the very reason that it casts a stigma upon California, which she does not deserve.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I hope that no partisan feeling will induce us to either reject or adopt any particular language in reference to the Constitution of the State. I voted for the article reported by the Committee of the Whole, of which, I believe, the gentleman from the First District, Mr. Estee, was the author. When that was rejected, I also voted for the article as proposed by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, which was adopted. My judgment is, that neither article contains fitting language for the Constitution of the State of California. Section three, as adopted yesterday, because it reads as follows: "We recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties, and the paramount law of the land." To say that it is the great charter of our liberties is, for every man who puts himself on record in favor of it, to write himself down—well, I will not use a strong phrase—as unfit to be a delegate to this Convention, because he does not know the meaning of the English language, or the meaning of the history of our country. The Constitution of the United States is not the great charter of our liberties. If there is any national paper that is sometimes called so in fourth of July orations, it is the Declaration of Independence; but as to the charter of the liberties of the people of this State, if it is proper to use the word charter at all, the Constitution of the State of California is the charter of our liberties; therefore it is not true what we have here in our Constitution. I voted for it in preference to other very foolish and remarkable propositions made here yesterday, and I am satisfied that the debate taking a partisan course has induced the Convention to do that which I will venture to say is not the deliberate judgment of twenty men on the floor of this Convention out of over one hundred members here this morning. Why, the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, took occasion to use language such as I have not heard used since the war ended. He absolutely declared, in the presence of this Convention, that the United States was not a nation! I am aware that those of the same political faith as himself claim that that was the substance of the argument of those who believed in the doctrine of secession, but I never heard one of them put it in that bold form. He said it was not a nation, because it was a republic. He had an amendment to say that it was a confederation of States, and so on. I do not believe there are ten men in the Convention that will say that the United States is not a nation. This kind of argument induced the Convention to strike out the amendment of the Committee of the Whole and then adopt the article reported by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights. Now, I believe in every word of the report of the Committee of the Whole, but I submit to the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, if this is fitting language for a State that has ever been loyal to the American Union as California has been. It is the language of a reconstructed State. It is the language of a defeated people, and not the language of a people who have been true to the Constitution and government to the end.

Now, sir, I say that this motion to reconsider, in my judgment, ought to prevail. Let us adopt some language more fitting than that we adopted yesterday. I submit to gentlemen whether it would not be satisfactory to every one to adopt the language of the Constitution of the United States, namely: that "the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land." That is the language of the Constitution. I have an amendment which changes that only in one word, and it seems to me to be important. I submit it to the gentleman because some gentlemen do not like to vote for the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole. "The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the nation." I do not use the word "land," I use the word "nation." It covers both points.

I hope this motion to reconsider will prevail, and that we will improve that section. When an opportunity offers I propose to offer that as the language of section three. I admit that there might be no necessity to say anything upon the subject, had it not been for the discussion of the committee; but now we must say something, or put a weapon in the hands of the enemies of our work. Let us say that. It is brief; it is pointed; it covers the whole thing.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: This is a very delicate question. It is surrounded with great difficulties. The fact of the business is, sir, this is a wearisome world, and this Convention is a place where men are bothered a great deal. Now, there is no doubt in the world but what the proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, is correct. It is correct in principle and asserts just what should be asserted. But it must be recollected that if anything of this kind was adopted, it would have a great tendency to break down this Constitution; because, sir, it is a mistake to say that the people in California are loyal. No such thing. It was shown here yesterday, by the action of this Convention, following quick upon the secession speech of the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher, that perhaps a majority of this Convention are in favor of secession. If we are going to adopt the principle of loyalty there is great danger that a large number of people in the State of California, who do not believe that this is a nation, or do not believe in loyalty and constitutional government, will be induced to vote against this Constitution. Then where will we be, sir? This is a matter to be taken into serious consideration. I presume that the principle involved in this section is the most important question that ever arose in American politics—a question that has been discussed in the Legislatures of the State, and in the Congress of the United States, and has been fought out upon the battle field. That is the very question fought out in the war of the rebellion—the question whether or not this is a nation. And yet it was asserted here broadly, yesterday, that this is not a nation, asserting the very doctrine for which the southern armies fought. And yet, right upon the heels of that gentleman's speech, a majority of this Convention, rushing in the previous question, followed him.

Now, sir, my course is very plain. My purpose is to go for whatever I think is right; but it may be seen here that a majority of this Convention are not voting for what is right, but for what they think is policy. They suppose that some great aim is to be accomplished by carrying this Constitution right or wrong, and when a proposition is presented here which is supposed to lose this Constitution votes, then gentlemen go against it.

MR. AYERS. Do you consider that the delegates to the Convention are here in a representative capacity?

Digitized by Google

MR. McFARLAND. Yes.

MR. AYERS. Should they not try to represent the views of their constituencies?

MR. McFARLAND. Represent their own.

MR. AYERS. And not the views of their people?

MR. McFARLAND. You say, be true to the people. How, sir?

MR. AYERS. By carrying out their views.

MR. McFARLAND. No, sir:

"To thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou can'st not then be false to any man."

MR. AYERS. That is in the play.

MR. McFARLAND. This is somewhat of a play. I say the man is a moral and intellectual coward who stands upon this floor and says he will not vote for what his conscience tells him is right, because it is not popular. It is a question of popularity. A man who says he will not follow his conscience or judgment, because his constituents are against it, simply says he will not vote for what is right, because it is unpopular; and you cannot get out of it. Now, I say this proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco includes the very greatest principle and the greatest truth in American politics, and California is a part of the United States of America. I say that the most important question that ever arose in this nation, or in California, is, whether we believe we are a part of the American nation, or whether we believe that the Government of the United States is a mere temporary need of the several separate nations? I say that if we believe that the proposition here is true, it should be asserted. Now, the gentleman from Alameda says that it is only necessary and proper for certain States in this Union, who have fought for the opposite doctrine, to say that this doctrine is right. I say, that in the Constitution of Virginia, they have reiterated the same doctrine that the gentleman from Placer asserts in this Convention. I say that, although that doctrine of secession was put down by force of arms, it is still alive, and has its advocates in California and in this Convention; and when gentlemen talk to me about the people of California being loyal, and having always been so, I say it is not true, because, if General Sumner had not come to this State just as he did, this State would have gone to the Southern Confederacy, the arsenals would have been turned over to traitors, and loyal men would have been put down, until the time that the Government at home could have sent us support, and everybody knows it.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I must say that, having given a great deal of attention to the subject, I remember of nothing that warrants the gentleman in saying that the State of California would have left the Union under any circumstances.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I know that a majority of the people of the State of California, are loyal, but I know that there is a large element here that is disloyal, and that if they had the power they would have taken this State out of the Union. I know that there are able men in the State of California who have never given up the doctrine of secession, and who stand for it to-day. I am not blaming them. If they follow the dictates of their consciences, all right; but when we come here we ought to determine what is right. I make no charges against these men personally. I have no disrespect for the men who fought in the Southern army. No man's judgment is entirely infallible. Perhaps the South was right. Perhaps the doctrine of secession was the correct doctrine, and a man is a man for all that. Every man has a right to his opinions. Perhaps they were right, sir, but the question for us to determine is whether they were or not. What does this Convention think? Does this Convention think the doctrine of secession was right or wrong? If they think it was right, smooth it over the best you can. If they believe the United States is a nation, and this State a part of the nation, why not say it in the fundamental law? If the majority of the Convention believe that this is not a nation, say so. If there are men who believe this is not a nation, let them take the bold manly ground taken by the gentleman from Placer, and say whether this State is a part of this nation, or whether it is an independent sovereignty, bound together by a temporary need. Let us determine in this Constitution what is the truth. I do not claim that other men may not be right who do not agree with me. It is possibly true, sir, that this is not a nation. I do not believe it. I believe that the flag that waves over this country is the emblem of the grandest nation that the world ever saw. But if other gentlemen do not believe it, let them say so. Let us take ground one way or the other, and let us determine whether we are a part of the American nation or not, or whether there is any such thing as the American nation. If we are not, say so, and let this Convention say so. But if we believe in the doctrine that we are part of this nation let us put it in this Constitution. Therefore, I say that the question should be met, and it should not be skulked around. Let us not hide behind subterfuges.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: This seems to be a good time for making speeches for buncombe, and I do not know why I should not improve the opportunity. The gentleman from Sacramento claims that in his opinion a majority of this body is disloyal.

MR. McFARLAND. I did not say so.

MR. BARBOUR. So I understand him. He infers it, because we refuse to have the bloody shirt—that beautiful garment which has been used until it is somewhat worn out—waved at all times and in all places. I have some right to speak upon this subject. I threw down my law books and went into the fight. I do not know how many rebels I may have killed and eat, but I think perhaps as many as the gentlemen who are so fond of waving this bloody garment, and charge us now with damnable secession notions. [Applause.] We may be defenders of the great and glorious country in which we were born, but it does not follow that we must be eternally parading that bloody shirt. We are here, sir, making a Constitution for the State of California, and for the government of the people within its jurisdiction. The Federal Government is able to hoe its own row. We can neither add to nor detract from its power. Now, a few of the Southern States have inserted in their modern Constitutions a declaration of the supremacy of the Government, and that they do not propose to secede; but it is not necessary for us to assure the Government of our loyalty. It is not necessary, because, as gentlemen say, we are not bound to insert in this Constitution everything that is true. Is it necessary to put in everything that is true? If so, we should put in the Sermon on the Mount, and the Ten Commandments, if they are true. But, sir, we must confine ourselves to the duties devolved upon us. What ails gentlemen? What is the trouble here? We have inserted a full and complete declaration of allegiance, as far as it is necessary for us to go. Yes, sir, we may have gone beyond the legal and historical fact by the assertion already inserted. But, forsooth, it happens to be an exact transcript from the Workingmen's Platform. That is just what ails gentlemen. I supposed that it would be so, and that any language which has been in the mouth of that party would be so odious to them that the gentleman from San Francisco would rather sink the whole business than permit it to be incorporated in the Constitution. I hope the motion to reconsider will not prevail. We have adopted all that is necessary, and perhaps more than was necessary. Whether it be true or whether it be not true, the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco is unnecessary, and I am even willing to go with the gentleman in his argument. To the gentleman from Sacramento I have to say, that I am not now speaking a Record-Union editorial, and I am willing to admit that I am disloyal in his sense of the word. I am disloyal to the corporations, and those who would like to strike out the words "Constitution of the United States," and insert the "Charter of the Central Pacific Railroad Company." I suppose that they would be content to have it go in that way. I am loyal to the country, but I am not loyal to the Record-Union and the Central Pacific Railroad Company's charter.

MR. McCALLUM. Don't you think the language would be more appropriate to a Constitution without using that phraseology?

MR. BARBOUR. That would suit me.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: We have got into this difficulty, sir, by endeavoring to engraft some political pyrotechnics upon the fundamental law of this State. It was in bad taste. It exhibits bad history and worse law, and I regret exceedingly that an attempt has been made here to give it a party turn. Formerly I offered as a substitute for the third section, the language of the Supreme Court of the United States, which was the language of Alexander Hamilton. Now, sir, I regret, also, that the gentleman from Sacramento should have thought it his duty here, to the interests of his party, to exhibit the nether part of the bloody shirt. It seems to me that it was a wrong thing. As for myself, I have only to say that I began political life by supporting the proclamation of General Jackson, in eighteen hundred and thirty-three, against secession; that I wrote essays, in the State of Mississippi, in favor of the doctrines of the proclamation; and that subsequently, in the Legislature of Mississippi, in eighteen hundred and thirty-six, I voted for Wilbur J. Walker, who was the advocate of the doctrines of the proclamation, against George Pendegast, who was on the secession side. This is a matter of no great importance, but I may be pardoned in saying it in justification of myself. I am opposed to the third section. I hope this motion to reconsider will prevail, and that we will strike out of the Constitution everything about it. It is, from beginning to end, a miserable clap-trap. We cannot add to the Constitution of the United States; we cannot take away from it, and the Congress of the United States, and the Supreme Court of the United States would not pay the slightest attention to what we may say or declare here. It is, therefore, an idle and miserable piece of party humbug.

Now, sir, let us look at its language. The third section says—and that is the reason why I believe with my friend from Tehama, that we should reconsider the vote on the third section, which is now before this body. The gentleman from Tehama, I imagine, is as loyal as anybody here; he has borne the flag of his country in foreign war on some well fought fields. The third section declares: "We recognize the Constitution of the United States as the great charter of our liberties, and the paramount law of the land." Sir, the whole statement is true in substance and in fact. As to the palladium—I regret that the Chairman of the committee is not in his seat, because I understood him to deny the paternity of "palladium," and to impute it to my worthy friend from Monterey. Now, what is a palladium? The great American lexicographer gives it primarily as a statue of the goddess Pallas, which represented her as sitting with a pike in her right hand, and in her left, a distaff and spindle. On the preservation of this statue depended the safety of Troy. Well, I deny that it is a charter. I believe that palladium was stricken out in committee, but it shows the idea of the committee.

MR. FREUD. As a member of the committee, and as the author of that section, I will say that as it stands now so was it introduced in the committee.

MR. HOWARD. I was under the impression that palladium was in the original. I may be wrong about that, and I am very glad to learn that my young friend is the author of it, and that he goes back on that old lady. Now, sir, if it can be said in any sense that our Constitutions are the charters of our liberties, it cannot be said exclusively of the Constitution of the United States, for our constitutional government is a dual system, composed of the Constitutions of the United States and of the States. I am rather inclined to agree with the gentleman from Alameda, that the State Constitution is as much or more the charter of our liberties than the Constitution of the United States. It is, therefore, untrue when the committee says, in substance, that the Constitution of the United States is the exclusive charter of American liberties. It is not so, sir, and Alexander Hamilton, in one of his most brilliant numbers of the Federalist, declares that the Constitutions of the States are, more than all others, a protection to the civil liberties of the citizens. Therefore, sir, it is an extraordinary proposition to undertake to say here, in effect, that the Constitution of the United States is the exclusive charter of the American liberties. It is not true. No learned jurist ever said that is true. The Supreme Court of the United States, in three or four decisions, have repeatedly said the reverse. Why do we seek to innovate upon the great doctrines of that Court, and of all the statesmen of the country?

I hope the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco will prevail, and I hope that we shall strike out anything upon the subject in the Constitution of this State, for it has no place here. It has no meaning here, and I am opposed to it, because as it stands now it is an untruth, legally and historically.

Now, sir, in the second place, the Constitution of the United States is not the paramount law of the land except as to treaties, and Acts of Congress made in pursuance of the Constitution. It is the paramount law of the land within the sphere of the Federal Government, as Chief Justice Marshall says. It is not the paramount law of the land, nor is it valid when it goes a step beyond that sphere, and the Supreme Court of the United States has so decided in the case which I read here the other day, which decision was rendered since the close of the rebellion. The Supreme Court of the United States repudiates altogether the doctrine that the character or nature of our government was changed by the rebellion, or that the victory at Appomattox had anything to do with the fundamental principles of government. Therefore, I say, sir, that this whole thing is a miserable humbug; is a pure party claptrap without sense and without merit. It is not true. It is bad rhetoric, and if we should put it into the Constitution, some future Disraeli, who was looking up the curiosities of literature would be apt to include it in his book. It is a false quotation, so far as it assumes to be a quotation. It reminds me of a declaration of a friend of mine, a former Governor of Texas, who quoted a line from Shakspeare, and attached to it the preface, "as it is said in Holy Writ." It ran through all the newspapers in the country——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time is exhausted.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: Having been elected here as a non-partisan, I propose to carry that out to the best of my ability during this Convention, and when I see gentlemen elected upon the same ticket as myself come here and try to throw fire-brands among us and get political sections engrafted in the Constitution, I must denounce them, in unmeasured terms, as following the tricks of the demagogue. I ask no cheap notoriety. It is demagogism of the darkest dye. It is damnable, trashy stuff, and I move to lay it on the table.

MR. FILCHER. I have a right to say a word on this question.

MR. BIGGS. I withdraw that motion for the present.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR FILCHER. Mr. President: I would have no disposition to speak further on this matter, except that I have been placed in a somewhat peculiar light, and it may be gratifying to hear a little more from a good, strong secessionist like myself. Mr. President, I never knew, until this morning, that there was any taint of secession about me, or in the family bearing my name. Because, sir, in deference to principle and in repugnance to demagogism, I had the temerity to get up and say what I did, and speak of the bad policy of adopting such a section as was presented here, I am denounced as a secessionist, and as giving the alarm here, starting a cry at which they all want to strike out a loyal plank in the Constitution, and virtually put this Convention and the people of California on a footing with secession States. I did declare this, and I repeat it, that it is bad policy to insert in this Constitution that the American government is a nation. My reason is this: In all governments it has been the desire of ambitious statesmen and rulers to aggrandise their government by giving to it the title of nation. Others, in controvention of this idea, have ever maintained and recognized the God-given doctrine that a nation was those of one blood, and none but those of one blood, or coming from one descent, can form a nation. We have, in the city of San Francisco, a Chinese nation. We had, at one time, a Cherokee nation. I do not know to which of these the honorable gentleman from Sacramento belongs; but we have here, on the great American continent, a great American Republic, formed by the people. A republic carries with it the idea of simplicity, purity, and self-government—a very excellent idea, and an improvement on the old nation doctrine. I, for one, believe in simplicity, purity, and self-government. I believe in a government in which the people are the supreme rulers, and I understand that to be the theory of this government.

Now, I am not speaking from a partisan standpoint, except on that one point; but I say that as a rule the Republican party is considered a more aristocratic party than the Democratic party, and they have aimed to inculcate the doctrine of aristocracy in the Republic itself, and lead to centralization by calling it a nation. We all refer to it in the general sense of the National Government. It is just an idea, a custom, and is not borne out by the absolute facts. Now, sir, I would ask, though I myself might indorse the doctrine, would it be policy to flaunt it in the face of the people, and thus doubly secure the defeat of the work we are trying to perform? As to being a secessionist, those who know me would laugh at the idea. I was instrumental in my community, though not of age, in forming what we called the "Union Club," and got into it almost everybody in the community. I never dreamed of secession. If this Convention wants to declare against secession, I have no objection. Take this section reported by the Committe of the Whole: "That this State shall ever remain a member of the American Union." I do believe in the Union, compact and consolidated for the benefit of the people, and a Union which I believe there is no man on this floor would go further than myself to defend and to uphold. "That there is no right on the part of this State to secede, and that all attempts, from whatever source or upon whatever pretext, to dissolve said Union, or sever said nation, shall be resisted by the whole power of the State." There is a declaration that might satisfy anybody, and I would vote for it, and uphold it, if it was policy. It is a declaration of allegiance; it is a declaration that every man could stand up to. But I repeat, sir, that since there is a difference of opinion, since there is a question, one that goes home to the hearts of many people, about the policy of confirming this Government as a nation, I ask, is it policy to assert what a large portion of the people are yet disputing about? We are not disputing about secession. We recognize that the doctrine of secession has been settled by the arbitrament of the sword. The Union, and Union forever, is coexistent with the existence of the whole Government.

In conclusion, I would simply say that I regret that the matter was brought up in the shape it was. I regret that an opportunity has been given here for some of our friends to repeat their political speeches, and yet I hope that good will come of it. Unless something better than this can be had, I would be in favor of striking out the whole thing. We can not add one jot or tittle to the Federal Constitution. We cannot make the State loyal by declaring so; nor disloyal by declaring to the contrary. It is but buncombe at the best. The section as finally passed I do not like.

THE PRESIDENT. Time.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment as agreed upon in the Committee of the Whole; therefore, I hope that the Convention will reconsider this vote, and that we will be permitted again to vote upon the amendment as recommended by the Committee of the Whole to this Convention. Permit me to say that I feel it is unfortunate in this stage of our proceedings that this question has been broached in the manner in which it has—in a political, partisan sense. I believe it was a mistake, perhaps inadvertently made by my good friend, Mr. Filcher, whose patriotism I indorse, when he said that no Democrat, as such, could indorse the principles of section three as recommended by the Committee of the Whole. It pained me when that declaration was made, and I knew very well then that it would excite the partisan feeling, and perhaps give rise to unpleasant words. I am one of those who fought this bloody rebellion through, and there is not a gentleman on this floor that feels more toleration, or will bridge the chasm with a better grace than I will to-day. I believe that those who fought on both sides will unite with me in saying that the issues which we fought over then and there should be buried forever. But while we may be guided in the future by the lamp of experience, and while I favor burying those issues in the past, there is no gentleman who will pretend to say that this nation—and I use the word nation in its broadest sense—will never be invaded, and its perpetuity and existence threatened by the same spirit that it was in the late war. Questions that were fought over there are now settled, but however clear our horizon may be to-day, there may be clouds in the future. There are clouds that threaten us, but not from the same source; and those gentlemen, be they Democrats or whatever else they are, should unite in saying that this State never can secede.

I do not claim that the perpetuity of this government will ever be assailed from the same source as before, but it may be that among the political factions that spring up every day, the right of secession may be claimed, and the right to defend themselves against imaginary wrongs, that they think they have suffered at the hands of the General Government, and you will have a Mexico here in the United States. I hope that the American people, and the people of California, will once and for all assert in their organic law, that secession is no remedy for any of the evils that exist in our governmental structure; that the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of California, will provide the constitutional, legal means for the redress of all grievances which in fact exist, or which may be imagined by the citizens of this State; and that all proclamations of independence against any governmental power in the United States shall be forever discountenanced and put down. I plead for this. I ask for it, feeling and knowing what this country has suffered by the too loose and too careless consideration of the relations of the States to the nation. Now, Mr. President, I believe that every lover of his country, I believe that all here, will unite upon the necessity of this. They may say that these are glittering generalities, but we have seen the time when these words meant something. If we believe that this State is a part of the American Union, let us say so. It matters not particularly whether it is in the language of the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher; of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum; or of the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole. I care not for the language so long as the substance is there. I cannot be satisfied as a citizen of the State, and the people of this State will not be satisfied, if we fail to insert in the new Constitution, that this State is a part of the American nation.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I presume that I am one of the parties at least, that the gentleman from Sacramento, Judge McFarland, alludes to as secessionist, because I saw fit to vote contrary to his ideas on yesterday. Now I mean to say, that I do not think anybody who knows me will deny the fact, that so far as my politics is concerned, I always speak saying, and vote just what I think. I believe that the Constitution of the United States, in one sense of the word, is the supreme law of the land. I think if anything was established in that conflict, that that proposition was established; and I sent up to the desk yesterday an amendment to that effect, but failed to get it in: That we recognized the Constitution of the United States of America as the supreme law of the land.

Digitized by Google

MR. MCCALLUM. Don't you think it would read better this way: "The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land?"

MR. TULLY. Yes. I am willing to vote for that. I am sorry that this discussion has sprung up. I am sorry that any gentleman should have thought fit to introduce it. Matters here should be discussed with a clear and cool head, without regard to partisanship, and without regard to the effect that any vote may have upon the coming political campaign. Now, the gentleman from Sacramento—and I am sorry that he is not in his seat, because he generally makes it convenient to dodge all castigations, [laughter]—said that the man who would not vote for what he conscienciously believed to be right, was a moral coward. I concur with the gentleman in that proposition, and we have some evidence of it on the libel question. On one occasion we had seventy-four noes and yesterday seventeen. They fell down in this Convention like camels in a sand storm. I pity, from my heart, the man who has not the moral courage to say and vote as he thinks is right. But if there is one man that I pity more than a moral coward, it is a political humbug, [laughter]—a political demagogue, sir—a man who will try to cover up his shortcomings in this Convention, and the many outrages that he has committed upon the rights of the people, by appealing to the prejudices, as he has, of a large number of gentlemen who are here. He seeks to so blind their intellects, and rouse so much partisan prejudice, that they will forget the purposes for which they are called here, and blindly follow his dictation. He is like a cuttle fish, sir, that pours forth a dark fluid to color the water behind him that he may escape from his enemies. He wishes to blind us that he may escape his shortcomings. Mr. President, I believe that is all I have to say upon the subject. I merely wish to set myself right upon the subject. Perhaps I might add one other word to Mr. West. He says he entertains no hard feelings against us. We are all pretty good fellows, and if we all just do right in his way we will all got along harmonious. So far as the Constitution of the United States being the charter of our liberties, that is a falsehood. It would simply be a declaration of a lie. No human being that lives on the earth enjoys a single liberty or a single right that he derives from the Federal Constitution, as an original source. There is not a respectable authority in America, there is not a decision of a Court, nor a respectable writer on law, nor a gentleman who stands high in the jurisprudence of the country, that has ever or ever will maintain such a proposition, because it is subversive of the common sense views of the country. Now, I despise all this claptrap, and I hope this vote to reconsider will prevail, and that we will put in the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, that the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I believe that these matters were fully settled at the Appomatox Court House several years ago, and I do not think it is the time now to open the question. I believe every gentleman has sufficiently made up his mind, and I therefore move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Dean, Tully, Waters, and Smith of Santa Clara.

MR. HOWARD. I hope that motion will not be carried.

The main question was ordered, on a division, by a vote of 64 ayes to 37 noes.

MR. HOWARD. I demand the ayes and noes.

Messrs. Shoemaker, Freud, and Herrington also demand the ayes and noes.

MR. WEST. Will it cut off amendments?

THE PRESIDENT. It only applies to the motion to reconsider.

The roll was called, and the previous question ordered by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section three by striking out all after the figure '3,' and inserting as follows: 'The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land.'"

REMARKS OF MR. CASSERLY.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: The controversy which has been debated this morning seems to me, with all due respect to my colleagues in this Convention, very much an affair of fighting shadows. It seems to me as if the question was whether we are a nation, or a people. Now, in regard to the use of the word nation it is certainly significant, if not remarkable, that in the Constitution of the United States under which we now live, the word "nation" is nowhere to be found. It is always the American people, or the people of the United States. The word Union is found as representing that indissoluble partnership between the States of the Union united under one head, that head being the General Government. It seems to me, therefore, that the whole question resolves itself very much into a matter of fancy whether the word nation ought to be used, or the word people. Besides the hated and very significant omission of the word "nation" in any part of the Constitution of the United States there is this further to be offered, that the common use of the word nation is not applied to countries like our own. The common use of language is that we say the French people, the English people, or the German people, but we do not say the French nation, the English nation, or the Spanish nation. The good old Anglo-Saxon word people is the word which was selected by choice and by intention, by the makers of our Constitution and the makers of our form of government; and certainly, if I was disposed to press the etymological signification, I should oppose the use of the word nation. But for myself I would not quarrel one moment with any member of this Convention whether the word nation was used, or the word people. What I have said I have endeavored to say for the purpose of justifying such of our friends as prefer to adhere to the word people rather than give way to, and adopt the word nation. I think, sir, that what George Washington and that illustrious galaxy of men of whom he was the central figure, thought fit to eschew, we can get along without, that is the use of the word nation, substituting for it the word people, to my mind a grander idea than the word nation, because composed of several different nationalities and several different races. When you speak of the word people, you speak of a great and powerful people raising the structure of whose government we see from day to day. Let us not fall out by the way. We are all, I trust, equally devoted to the glory and the power, and the firmness of this grandest structure of ancient and modern times, known in popular language as the American Union; known also in Courts of law as the American law. Now, sir, if we do not wish to adopt the word nation, which I will admit is a very grand word, why not take the word people. And if the word people be objectionable, why, let the gentlemen who differ from me upon this floor present a better one. But what I object to with some feeling, I must admit, is the manifest and most unfair and improper effort made by certain gentlemen upon this floor, to make a division among men who are not divided in point of loyalty, or in their love for the doctrine that this is one of the permanent governments of this world, as long as this globe shall last. I repudiate with scorn, and I had almost said with contempt—but that word is not parliamentary and I withdraw it—I repudiate and defy the efforts, from whatever source, to put upon any considerable number of men in this Convention the brand of secession. We have had enough and too much of divisions in this country. Who is it, sir, that proposes to bring back here into this body the terrible feud which drenched this land with blood, which left us the corpses of a million or more of brave men who fought on each side. I ask not to know who was in the right, or who was in the wrong, but what I demand from every man here, is that whatever was best, proudest, and bravest in the way of self denial and heroism on either side shall be remembered, and that all else shall be sunk deeper than the tomb of oblivion ever sunk it. [Applause.]

REMARKS OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: I have an amendment that I drew when this first one was drawn, that I like a little better than the one that is now up for consideration. It reads: "Every citizen of this State owes paramount allegiance to the Constitution and Government of the United States, and no law or ordinance of this State in contravention or for the subversion thereof can have any binding force." Our Government is known as the United States of America, and as the United States, and when we say that every citizen owes paramount allegiance to the Constitution and Government of the United States, we say all that we can say in regard to the people of this State; and that no law or ordinance of this State in contravention or subversion thereof can have any binding force. It seems to me, if anything is expected of us in this Constitution to express our allegiance to that Government, it can be expressed in that many words, and with as much effect as we can express it at all. I would therefore offer the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. There is an amendment to an amendment pending already. The amendment is not in order.

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I rise merely to say a few words in reply to the radical argument of the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Howard. I, sir, recollect that speech. I think I heard it twenty-five or thirty years ago. But I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the cases he has cited have been overruled by a more recent case—the case that was alluded to by the gentleman from Marin, Judge Shafter—the case of Grant vs. Lee, decided at Appomattox, in April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five. This decision is written in blood. There never has been a new trial asked for. There never will be one granted. There never was an appeal in that case, because the decision was rendered in the highest Court that ever set upon the American soil. It was an appeal to the God of Battle, and that judgment is written in blood, and will stand forever. That is all.

MR. HOWARD. Since that decision, the Supreme Court of the United States has overruled Chief Justice Grant by deciding clearly and squarely, twice, that the Constitution of the United States since the rebellion remained unimpaired, and that the principles of the Government were still in full force as they were before.

MR. HILBORN. The American people will see that this decision is not overturned, and they will see that the Supreme Court of the United States shall never fritter it away.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I do not feel inclined to say a great deal upon the subject as to whether we should be considered a people or a nation. We are all here in favor of progress, but in some cases I am under the impression there is danger of going a little too rapidly, and I am under the impression that in certain cases the expressive and sensible terms of the fathers are preferable to those which are brought up at present. I agree with the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Casserly, upon this subject, that there is something grand and excellent, and that there is something of principle connected with the idea conveyed when speaking of the people of the United States—calling them a people. I am opposed to attempting much in the line of improvements. I was opposed to the section three that was adopted yesterday in Convention; but I voted for it in preference to other amendments, because I thought it better. I am now under the impression that there is an amendment that was attempted to be got before the Convention yesterday, but did not succeed, that is better. It expresses the idea more completely. It is this: "The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land." We are convinced that this is in accordance with the relationship existing between the States and the United States. I am well aware that any language may be found objectionable in part. The State possesses certain rights that we all wish to hold, otherwise we would not be here in Convention at this time. There are rights which were not given over to the United States, and which are guaranteed to us as a State in that instrument. Therefore, we are here as a Constitutional Convention at this time, in order to make such laws—provided the same shall be adopted—as may suit the interests of this people; to make a fundamental law for this purpose. I shall be entirely in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, which amendment is: "The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land."

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I took some part in moving to reconsider this matter. I asked Mr. McNutt to give the notice yesterday, for the purpose of bringing this up for the consideration of the Convention. I did it because I believed the adoption of section three as originally reported by the committee was not right. It did not meet my favor, nor do I think it meets the favor of one tenth of the members of this Convention. I agree most heartily with those gentlemen who say that the Constitution is not the charter of our liberties, but that it is the supreme law of the land. I think it was wise to reconsider the vote of yesterday, and I think it would be wise to now adopt at least a portion of section three as reported by the Committee of the Whole. I have not changed my mind from the first on this question. Now, Mr. President, there have been some references made to the political questions involved, or which are claimed to be involved, in this amendment. Some have claimed that this section was presented for buncombe. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to face all such charges. I have made no personal allusions, and have none to make. I know that there are different opinions in this Convention on this subject, but I cannot but believe there ought not to be. I do not criticise any member for his action on this or any other subject. I am here trying to do my best to have some recognition of our name, nation, and political character, inserted in this Constitution. I am not here for the purpose of talking buncombe or doing buncombe, and I do not assume that you are. I did believe that it would be unwise, or even extraordinary, for the Constitutional Convention of California to pass by this subject and make no allusion to our relations with the General Government, and for one, with a due regard for the opinions of others, I desired to insert something in this Constitution that would show both our allegiance to the General Government and our disclaimer of any right of secession. If this is flaunting the bloody flag in any gentleman's face, then I have to say that he is too sensitive to be patriotic. I did not think there was anything wrong in expressing broad, patriotic, national sentiments. I do not think it ought to offend any true American citizen, to assert in any manner or form that this is a nation. I do not doubt the sincerity of those who fought against our country, but only those who talk against it. I know men never risk their lives for a cause they do not believe in. I always did detest their doctrines, and never could believe they were right. I therefore made the attempt to put such provisions in this Constitution as should forever set at rest these questions. I wish to say it shall not be legal to secede. I know it can be done by revolution. I remember well, in this city, many years ago, a political Convention declared that the right of secession was an inherent legal right, reserved to the States under the Constitution and laws of the United States. I did not believe it then; I do not believe it now. For one, I am willing to assume all the responsibility of putting a clause into the Constitution declaring that now and hereafter it shall be unlawful to secede from the American Union. Now, sir, if this is flaunting the bloody flag, if it is offending the sensibilities of any gentleman on this floor, I am sorry for him. I am sorry that he is so sensitive upon a question which should be so near his heart. Now, Mr. President, and gentlemen of the Convention, I hope that an opportunity will be presented to amend section three as reported by the Committee of the Whole, so that it will convey that idea, so that California will march in the line of those States that have declared that it is against the settled policy of our Government to secede from the Union. The people of this State, regardless of party, ought to make this expression, for I deny that there is any party in this question, unless the gentlemen make it so. This Constitution, if adopted, shall be a declaration of principles for the people and not for a party. Democrats, Republicans, and Workingmen may, if they will unite upon one common platform, and that platform shall be a broad national one. I hold that we ought all to be willing to stand upon that principle; and if there is partisanship, gentlemen of the Convention, with all due respect to your feelings, those of you who differ will have to make the most of it, for they are my honest convictions.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. I would suggest to the gentleman from San Francisco that he insert, in lieu of the amendment he has proposed, the words: "The flag of our country, the Union forever."

[Laughter.]

MR. ESTEE. That would be a very good amendment, probably.

MR. HERRINGTON. I am in favor of it. I would just as soon it was there as the proposition which is introduced by the gentleman and proposed to be engrafted upon the Constitution. The two are parallel precisely. If I say that I am white, this Convention would think that I was about to stultify myself.

MR. TULLY. I don't know about it.

MR. HERRINGTON. That is the question you are arguing now, and the dispute would be about the same. The proposition is that we are a part of the American nation.

MR. MCFARLAND. It has been doubted on this floor. It has been said that we are not a part of the American nation, or that it was not a nation.

MR. HERRINGTON. The boy, when he thought it was hardly discernable whether his picture was a horse or not, wrote directly underneath: "This is a horse." Everybody could see it. The gentleman from San Francisco desires to write in this instrument, we are a part of the American nation. Who ever doubted that proposition? It is sought by the power of a stream of eloquence to insert it in the Constitution that we are a part of the American nation; just as if that could make the fact any stronger. We are a part of the American nation, and I do not think that the question is debatable, therefore I do not think it needs assertion. It stands self-evident. In every instance where we elect an officer we require that he shall acknowledge his allegiance, by taking an oath before Almighty God, and in the presence of a Judge, to support the Constitution of the United States.

MR. TULLY. Does he swear allegiance to the American nation?

MR. HERRINGTON. No, sir. I am talking of allegiance to the Government, and if you have any ears to hear, sit still and hear.

MR. TULLY. Is there any reference to the American nation?

MR. HERRINGTON. I am not talking of the American nation only in the sense that it is offered in this resolution, and if you sit still you will hear more than you know now. Some gentleman stands in his place upon this floor and says that this is not the great charter of our liberties, and the gentleman from San Francisco says that it is meaningless humbug when we attempt to assert in the Constitution that we recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties. Now, what is a charter? Was there any such thing as a republican form of government prior to the inauguration of the Government of the United States of America? What liberty have you got except that which is regulated by law? And if that was not the inauguration of that liberty which was established under republican forms, in God's name, what is it? If that is not the charter of your republican liberties to-day, where is that charter? I do not know of any other law which says that Congress shall guarantee to every State a republican form of government. If that is not the charter, if that is not the issuance of an authority to the government to go forth, if that is not the charter of your liberties, where is the charter? You have no other liberties except those guaranteed under republican forms, and these are the liberties which are chartered liberties, and you have none other to-day; and if this is not your charter of liberties, where is your charter? The great people of the United States made the charter. "We, the people of the United States." I acknowledge no other authority for this charter. This is simply what you are called upon to recognize. Some gentleman says it has no sense in it. Was it not the foundation upon which our liberties arose? Any other liberty than that which is guaranteed by that instrument is license, and beyond law. There are certain other views about this proposition which I would like to refer to, if the time permitted. This proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco is but a glittering generality, and embraces no principle in it whatever—certainly none that the people of the United States have not called upon this State to recognize. The other is a matter of obligation upon which we are all sworn, and to which we all should admit allegiance—every one of us—and we should do it when we go to the ballot box. We should submit it in the Constitution, so that every man, when he votes, shall assert his allegiance to the Constitution of the United States.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I will express my views on this proposition from my own standpoint. I have a substitute for the section, and it reads as follows:

"The Constitution of this State is the supreme law of California, and we the people of California recognize the Constitution of the United States as the supreme law of the American Union; and we declare this State an integral part of the United States of America."

I believe that first of all I owe my allegiance to my adopted State, as long as that State remains in the great family of the American States, I will bow to the will of the majority. I do not believe that a minority of the States have a right to secede, and I hope I never will see them secede. I acknowledge the Constitution as the supreme law of the Union; but, sir, the Constitution was adopted when an immense country lay uncultivated; when it was overrun by Indian tribes; when it was open to immigration from Europe; because, sir, the founders of that Constitution never dreamed of China then. But, sir, westward the star of empire takes its way. The States have come to the borders of the Pacific Ocean. Here we are without anything to shelter us from the immense hordes of Asiatic slaves that are willing and ready to come into our midst. It was never dreamed by the founders of the great Constitution of America that we would be here without a mantle to protect us from the incubus under which we are at present suffering. When the Constitution of the United States interferes with our liberties, with our rights as American citizens, we should not respect this mandate. But, sir, I know, and I accept the doctrine, that under the Constitution of the United States it is not lawful to bring serfs and slaves into California. Under the Constitution of the United States we would be protected in all our rights; and, therefore, I am willing to accept it as the great paramount law of the land. Now, sir, what did we see in eighteen hundred and forty-eight, when Abraham Lincoln, that immortal patriot, whose name will live forever, said in Congress: "That any people having the power have the right to raise up and shake off the existing form of government, and form a new one to suit themselves, according to the circumstances by which they are surrounded." I will offer this as a substitute for the section. It meets my views, and I do not care whether it meets anybody else's or not.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: As the author of this amendment perhaps I would be justified in saying a word in support of it. The substance of the language which I have quoted will be found in article six of the Constitution of the United States. It reads:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

MR. HAGER. I believe that the gentleman has spoken once upon this question, and there are a great many others struggling to have the floor.

MR. MCCALLUM. I have not spoken before on my amendment. I simply introduced the amendment. I will give the gentleman from San Francisco, or whoever else may desire the floor, an opportunity in a very few minutes. This is the section. I have used only the words applicable to the Constitution of the State. "The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land." That is the amendment which I presented in Committee of the Whole. The same amendment, I understand, was yesterday offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Tully. It was not in order then, as we were operating under the previous question. I wish to assure the gentleman that I have not offered this amendment for the purpose of getting any particular language of my own in the Constitution, and take this opportunity to disclaim any such intention. I prefer it to the article reported by the Committee of the Whole. This section, which the gentleman from San Francisco adheres to with such tenacity, reads as follows:

"SEC. 3. That this State shall ever remain a member of the American Union; that the people thereof are a part of the American nation; that there is no right on the part of this State to secede, and that all attempts, from whatever source or upon whatever pretext, to dissolve said Union, or sever said nation, shall be resisted by the whole power of the State."

I submit that that is the language of a people who admit that they have been subjected, and promise, in their Constitution, that they will never behave badly any more. As this is a loyal State, however, it would be wholly unbecoming. There is another objection to it similar to that which was made by Colonel Benton to the celebrated Kansas and Nebraska bill. He said, speaking of a section of it, that it was a stump speech in the belly of the bill. This section three is a stump speech in the body of this Constitution. It is not proper language for a Constitution, and while I concede, especially in view of this debate, it is proper that something should be said, I cannot see that there could be anything better than to use the language of the National Constitution. I do not see the necessity of saying a single word in addition. The gentleman from Santa Clara asks me who made the Constitution of the United States? If he will read the preamble to the Constitution he will see that the people of the United States made the Constitution, and if he will read the history of the country he will find that the very question he is now asking is the question that Patrick Henry asked of the Virginia statesman, when upholding the Constitution of the United States because it used that language, "We, the people of the United States." But I am not aware that, after it had been adopted by the requisite number of States, any gentleman, except the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Tully, has asked the question since. I want to say one word further, with reference to the course of members here in voting upon propositions of this kind. On all propositions of this sort, as to the principle, I yield my sentiment to no man, nor to no number of men. If I were instructed on a question of magnitude, like this, to vote contrary to my sentiments, I would resign my position before I would do so. There are some other questions, however, which are not of that nature. I confess, sir, that I am one of the many who voted for a certain clause in section nine. I am aware that I reflected my sentiments, and my sentiments have not changed. I am aware, further, that as to my sentiments they were not made the subject of discussion before I was elected, and that after my vote was rendered, about a month and a half ago, I found not only the newspapers of my county opposed to the vote which I had given, but without an exception my constituents who expressed themselves upon the subject. As to the advocacy of what was called the Fawcett amendment, it is confined to very few papers in the State. I think those few papers were right, and that the others were wrong. My constituents were against it, and those even who were convinced by considerable argument that I was right and they were wrong, still thought, as a matter of policy, we ought not to put that amendment there and lose the support of the public press; that we desire to support this Constitution on matters of greater moment. I can say to the gentleman from Sacramento, who puts himself up here as a schoolmaster, that his advocacy of the Fawcett amendment, and the advocacy of it by the Sacramento Union, did not contribute in the slightest degree to the popularity of the Fawcett amendment. I am not here to be lectured by fellow members. This, I believe, is the first vote I have had occasion to change in public life. I am not ashamed of having changed it, because there are certain great principles which I desire to see become a part of the organic law of this State, and I will sacrifice more than my vote on a question like the libel law before I would sacrifice these greater principles, which I hope to see become a part of the organic law. I am not here for the purpose of any claptrap with reference to those who have differed with me in times past, when there were causes for difference with reference to the issues involved in the late civil war.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time is exhausted.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I regret that this amendment by my colleague from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, has been proposed, and this debate thereby precipitated. He claims it has originated in patriotism, and that we ought, in this manner, to place ourselves under the flag of the Union as our platform. I can hardly conceive the amendment had its origin in patriotism, nor do I believe that my colleague has any more patriotism or loyalty to the Federal Constitution and flag than I have. When the first gun was fired upon Sumpter, each of us took our stand by that Constitution and under that flag, and there we remained. During the rebellion we fought in a common field; hand in hand, and shoulder to shoulder, we went together through the struggles of that unfortunate conflict—that is, in spirit; personally, we remained at home [laughter], and let others fight the actual battles of the civil war; therefore I can claim as much patriotism here as he does. I am no more a secessionist than he is. I am as patriotic and loyal as he is. Why should we renew this struggle here in this Convention? I stated that the proposed amendment did not have the merit of patriotism. It has not even the merit of originality. It was not conceived in the brain of my friend, but it originated in one of those carpet-bag governments forced on the people under the Reconstruction Acts of Congress, while a military Governor presided over the State—in the State of North Carolina. Now, see how exactly parallel the two paragraphs are, and see if my colleague can claim originality for the proposed amendment. I will read from the Constitution of the State of North Carolina, to show how exactly he has copied:

"That this State shall ever remain a member of the American Union; that the people thereof are a part of the American nation; that there is no right on the part of this State to secede; and that all attempts, from whatever source, or upon whatever pretext, to dissolve said Union, or sever said nation, shall be resisted by the whole power of the State."

I believe my colleague's amendment is word for word the same as the clause I have just read from the Constitution of the State of North Carolina; and we are called upon as patriots to denounce the doctrine of secession by taking a paragraph from the Constitution of a disloyal State, placed there as a condition of their re-admission into the Union, and incorporate it in the Constitution of the loyal State of California. Well, as the delegate from Santa Clara has just recommended, "The flag of our country and the Union forever" might also be incorporated in the Constitution. But if the "bloody shirt" is to be the battle cry in the next campaign, I would suggest to my colleague the adoption also of those other lines:

"By that dear shirt we wave the sword on high,
And swear by it to live, for it to die."

As I have said, the amendment has neither the merit of patriotism or originality. Let us cast it aside as a disturbing element about which, as members of this body, we have no concern.

Mr. President, in regard to the original paragraph that recognizes "the Constitution of the United States of America as the great charter of our liberties," etc., I have no objection to the principle, but I should prefer the language of the Constitution of the United States as it is. And I have drawn an amendment which reads: "We recognize the Constitution of the United States and the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof as the paramount law of the land." If we have any declaration I would prefer it should be in this form. But there is another paragraph in the Constitution of the United States to which, in this connection, it is well to refer: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people" (article eleven, section nine). There the Constitution of the United States recognizes some other authority than the Government of the United States. "Reserved to the States;" "reserved to the people." What does that mean? Does it mean an all-powerful, omnipotent government? Or does it mean a government of delegated powers, and that all other powers are reserved to the States and to the people? It is not then a paramount government, paramount over the people, and paramount over the States; but paramount to the extent of delegated powers. As such I recognize it. I recognize the Constitution of the United States and the laws made in pursuance thereof as the supreme law of the land; and I recognize the power in the States and the power in the people, as it is recognized by the Constitution. Now, is it the great charter of our liberties? What was the Declaration of Independence? I read a paragraph:

"We, * * * by the authority of the good people of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these united Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and do all other acts and things which independent States may of right do."

There we find the great charter of our liberties, and who can gainsay it? There it is, and we will put a falsehood in this Constitution if we declare the Constitution of the United States to be the great charter of our liberties. No American that knows the history of his country, and the wars of the revolution and the rebellion against Great Britain, can say otherwise. Next we had the Articles of Confederation, under which we had a government, and next the Constitution of the United States—the third charter of our liberties, if it be a charter at all. Therefore, I am opposed to the section as adopted in Committee of the Whole, and prefer to it the proposition of my friend from Alameda.

I had drawn an amendment, and if it is necessary to put in anything at all, I would be willing to adopt this: "We recognize the Constitution of the United States, and the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, as the supreme law of the land." That is somewhat different from Mr. McCallum's.

MR. ESTEE. See if it is in the Constitution of Missouri.

MR. McCALLUM. Why not use the briefest mode of expressing it?

MR. HAGER. I thought of the Chinese question. I was afraid some one would get up and move an amendment, excepting the treaty with China.

[Laughter.]

MR. McCALLUM. Inasmuch as the Constitution of the United States uses that same language, why the necessity of adding the words, "and the laws of the United States, made in pursuance thereof?"

MR. HAGER. I wrote mine before I heard the luminous amendment that the gentleman proposes.

MR. ESTEE. I want to know if there is anything in the Constitution of Missouri on this question?

MR. HAGER. There is, sir. I thought at first that I had followed the Constitution of Missouri, but come to look at it I find I have not. Why should we admit that there is anything like secession in this State, or anything like disloyalty, and place ourselves in the position of a reconstructed State?

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time has expired.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment when an opportunity offers, which reads as follows: "Amend section three so as to read as follows: 'We recognize the Constitution of the United States of America as the supreme law of the land, and the State of California as an inseparable part of the American nation.'" It occurs to me that it is less objectionable than any that has been offered, and covers all the cardinal points in both the original proposition and the one offered by the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. KLEINE.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. President: I have been a citizen of the United States twenty-eight years. I am willing to respect the United States Government as long as the Government protects me; but, gentlemen, as long as the Government of the United States won't protect its own citizens, I do not see any reason why we should respect the Government. I listen to these gentlemen here quote the United States Constitution. Mr. President, there is just as much difference as day and night between the Government of the United States one hundred years ago and now. Fifty, sixty, or seventy years ago our Government was in favor of the poor; it protected the poor man, but now it has become an aristocracy. The poor man has no chance whatever. Here in our beautiful State, which I have been a resident of over twenty-six years, and I know very well whereof I speak, it is covered with beggars, men that have fought in our civil war. In Sacramento I see between eighty and ninety American citizens watching right there at the corner for a piece of bread, for something to keep soul and body together. I ask them, "what is the matter with you?" "We have been traveling all over and we cannot get work." Some gentleman said, "I have fought in the civil war and have bled for the stars and stripes, and this is what the Government gives me." They are passing laws now in the eastern States, what we call the Tramp Law, to arrest every man that seeks for work. Now, if our Government progresses as it has done so far our Government will be just as bad as the Governments of Europe, and the capital class will rule. The idea here is that no matter what our Government will do we have no right to secede. I differ with you, gentlemen. If our Government don't protect us, and if our Government is to make this State a China Empire, I say that we have a right to secede, and we have a right to protect ourselves.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I believe I am as much devoted to the Constitution of the United States as any of the gentlemen. I opposed secessionism during our civil war and cast my vote twice for Abraham Lincoln. Therefore I cannot be charged with secessionism or any taint of it. But, sir, we are surfeited with the bloody shirt being flaunted on all occasions by parties who staid at home instead of going to the front. It is simply political claptrap, and we want none of it in this Constitution. California never wanted to go out of the Union. There never was any attempt made to take her out of the Union. Secessionism was not entertained by one man out of a hundred here during the civil war. Therefore we are not called upon to reproach ourselves with that heresy. I shall, therefore, vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Barton, Lampson, Wilson of Tehama, and Dean.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will not enforce the rule, in case the previous question is sustained, on this particular amendment. The previous question would bring up all the amendments pending to the whole article, one after another, and then the main question would be, whether the article be engrossed and read a second time.

MR. MORELAND. I withdraw the motion under those circumstances.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. McCallum, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, O'Sullivan, Tully, White, and McCallum.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

Adopted.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment, to be added to the end of that adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendments as reported by the Committee of the Whole, commencing at section thirteen.

THE SECRETARY read section thirteen, as follows:

"SEC. 13. In criminal prosecutions, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial, to have the process of the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and to appear and defend, in person and with counsel. No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, nor be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. The Legislature shall have power to provide for the taking and using of depositions of witnesses in criminal cases, where there is reason to believe that from any cause the witness will not attend at the trial, or may be unable to do so."

THE SECRETARY read section fourteen, as follows:

"SEC. 14. Private property shall not be taken for public use, without just compensation having been first made to, or paid into Court for the owner, and no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation other than municipal, until full compensation therefor be first made in money, or ascertained and paid into Court for the owner, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, in a Court of record, as shall be prescribed by law."

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order at present. The Secretary will read section sixteen, there being no amendment to section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed."

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section eighteen, there being no amendment to section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State."

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section twenty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 23. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise."

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section thirteen.

DEPOSITIONS OF WITNESSES.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 13. In criminal prosecutions, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial; to have the process of the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and to appear and defend, in person and with counsel. No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, nor be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. The Legislature shall have power to provide for the taking and using of depositions of witnesses in criminal cases, when there is reason to believe that from any cause the witness will not attend at the trial, or may be unable to do so."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring in the action of the Committee of the Whole upon that amendment.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment to section thirteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out all after the word 'law' in line seven."

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I understand, sir, that the object of inserting the words which I now move to strike out was to relieve witnesses from the very manifest hardship in cases where they are unable to furnish bail, and who reside at some other place than where the charge is made. That is certainly a meritorious object, and if it could be attained without danger of sacrificing the rights of citizens who are charged with crime, I should most heartily favor it. But, sir, in order to attain that object we have to abandon one of the rights which has been heretofore so highly prized, the right of being confronted with their witnesses, and meeting their accusers face to face. That has been regarded as a right of the defense, not to be lightly thrown away, for hundreds of years by the English speaking people. It is important and essential in the safe administration of justice that the defendant should meet his accusers face to face, that he should see the witnesses and have an opportunity of cross-examining them, to ascertain what sort of character they possess; whether they are men of truth and standing in the community, or whether they are mere perjurers, and persons liable to be suborned. All this is to be thrown away if we adopt the section as it is. If we do now abandon it, we cast ourselves upon an untried sea, and trifle and experiment with the lives and liberties of ourselves and our fellow citizens. It is well known to all gentlemen acquainted with the proceedings of Courts, that depositions do not stand as having the same authority, as being entitled to the same weight as the sworn verbal testimony of a person who can be seen, who can be judged by his character and standing, as to his truth, as to his qualifications, as to his title to be believed. They do in law stand equal, but practically they do not. A man in a strange city may find himself brought up on a charge of murder, or any other charge, and, under such a provision as this, he may find himself confronted on the trial by the depositions of a lot of criminals, and he cannot put his eyes upon any one of them, and no man in the vicinity may know them. A mass of testimony could be piled up in that way which could not be refuted, and which would stand as good against other witnesses. You could not impeach it. The witnesses might be in the Empire of China by the time the trial comes on, and yet leave their depositions, which would stand, like the testimony of reliable witnesses. There would be no chance for the defendant to meet the witnesses face to face, and cross-examine them as to their bias, as to their previous lives, and as to their character, as to their having been imprisoned for crime, or indicted for crime, in half the States of the Union. No such examination can take place. All you need, in order to convict anybody, is to get hold of a mass of worthless men, and take their depositions. Upon the day of the trial they will be somewhere else, doing the same thing. This is making the most dangerous class of perjurers in the community the most convenient tools to carry out the most infamous crimes against any citizen. I don't know of any State in the Union where the lives and liberties of the citizens have been exposed to such a danger as this. Upon the contrary, they all seem to think that one of the most valuable guarantees to the liberties of the citizens, that they shall, when accused of crime, meet their accusers face to face, and have the right of cross-examination, not only in regard to the matter involved in the charge, but as to who they are, what they are, and where they came from; where they have been, and how many times, if at all, they have been in prison; and how many times, if at all, convicted of perjury. Under such a system no man would be safe except in his own immediate neighborhood. No man would be safe in a strange place, provided anybody saw fit to charge him with crime. Without the right to impeach the man bringing the charge, there would be no safety. For these reasons I feel a strong personal desire that these words may be stricken out. I should prefer section thirteen, as reported by the committee, that the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial, etc.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I think it is very important to take depositions in that kind of cases. The complaint is not so much that innocent men are convicted, as that the guilty escape punishment. Now, on the other side, when complaint is made against any person charged with crime, there is often delay, sometimes for weeks and months, and when the period of trial comes, the witnesses cannot be found. They are gone. They cannot be got. Sometimes they are spirited away, and the result is that they defeat the ends of justice. Sometimes we lock men up because they cannot give bail. Thus an innocent man is made to suffer when he has committed no crime.

MR. JONES. Do we not propose that they shall not be put in jail.

MR. HAGER. If they are not put in jail, and do not give security, they are liable to be spirited away. I am speaking of the difficulties we have encountered, and the remedies we are trying to adopt. Now, I will ask my friend over there what can be the objection to taking the deposition of a witness in the presence of the party accused. If the party accused is present, that is being confronted with the witnesses; and what objection can there be to it. How can he suffer any wrong. He is confronted with the witness. He can cross-examine the witness; he can impeach him, the same as if the testimony was taken in Court. Why, in some cases, all the testimony is in the form of depositions. I have here an amendment which I will send up. I will read it:

"Strike out the words 'and using,' in line eight, and insert as follows: 'in the presence of the party accused and his counsel.' In the same line, after the word 'cases,' insert the following, 'other than cases of homicide, and using the same.'"

MR. JONES. I would suggest that you insert, "and with the assistance of counsel."

MR. HAGER. I think that is provided for in another section. I will state again that it is very necessary and essential in the administration of justice in large cities, that this privilege of taking depositions should be obtained; otherwise there will be a failure in the administration of justice in many cases, because the witnesses cannot be had.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: When this matter was up before the Committee of the Whole, I took occasion to express my views. I do not desire to do so again, but I desire to call attention to the reasons which seem to me to be very strong against the adoption of this section as it stands. I am in favor of the amendment offered by Judge Jones. If that does not carry, I shall certainly support the amendment of Judge

Hager. I would be in favor of the original section reported by the committee, because it provides that the defendant must be brought face to face with the witnesses, and that is the only correct principle of law. Now, it seems to me that it violates every security to life and liberty to say that a man shall be tried without the witnesses being present before the tribunal which tries him. Take a man who is charged with crime, and is here in jail. He is served with notice to appear at the taking of a deposition in Los Angeles or Shasta. He is poor and cannot go there himself. He has not the money to hire an attorney. Now, what is the consequence? Why, the leading witness in the case gives his testimony, and the accused has no chance to cross-examine him. That principle is wrong. No man in this house, if charged with crime, would like to have his case tried upon depositions taken at remote points of the State, and beyond the notice of the tribunal before which he is tried. I know there are some difficulties in the way of getting witnesses before the Court; but that is a small matter compared with the necessity of giving a defendant a fair trial. I say, it is no trial at all, when a man's life is in jeopardy, to be tried upon written depositions taken two hundred miles away. It is contrary to the law of this State. The old Constitution says nothing about it, leaving it to the Legislature; and the Legislature never has provided that a man may be tried upon depositions. Depositions taken in the committing magistrate's Court, when the defendant is present, may be used afterwards, and that is all.

MR. HAGER. The Legislature did so provide, but the Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional.

MR. MCFARLAND. Well, that was so long ago that only a few of us can remember it. The law has always been, that in criminal trials the defendant must be confronted by the witnesses in Court. The jury which tries a man must see the witnesses, so as to be able to determine from their appearance what credence to give to their testimony.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I wish to send up an amendment to the section. Insert in line eight, after the word "cases," the following: "other than cases of homicide."

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I think, sir, that the truth lies between the two propositions which have been presented here upon either side. I see a great deal of force in the argument of the gentleman from Mariposa, and a great deal of truth in the arguments presented by the gentleman from San Francisco and the gentleman from Sacramento. The question is, what is the proper medium between these conflicting views? Now it is certainly a great objection that when a crime is committed upon a stranger, as has been the practice in the past, he must either give bonds for his appearance as a witness against the accused, or else go to jail and stay there until the time of the trial. That is a very great objection. Upon the other hand, it is considerable of an objection that a man should be convicted of a high crime without having the witnesses in Court and before the jury. But it seems to me that by confining this to cases other than cases of homicide, that there could be but very little objection. This amendment which I propose could either be inserted in the amendment of Judge Hager, or in the section itself. Now when you come to a case of homicide, where the life of the accused is in danger, I think he should have every opportunity of establishing his innocence. Every chance should be afforded to him for a fair trial, and he should have an opportunity of letting the jury see the man who is swearing away his life. The jury are said to be the best judges of the credibility of the witness. They look at his actions, at his manner, at his mode of testifying, at his intelligence, who he is, and where he came from. All those things I think a man should have an opportunity of presenting to the jury who are trying him, in a case where his life is at stake. It must be admitted by all that it is a very great hardship for a man to be confined in jail when he has committed no crime, when he is charged with no crime. There are many instances in the City of San Francisco, in New York, and in other large cities, where crime goes unpunished, merely because the victims cannot afford to make complaint, for fear of being detained. They may be robbed on the streets or at their hotels. They may have taken passage on some outward bound steamer, and they make no complaint of the crimes committed upon them, because if they do they are likely to be locked up in jail, and by that means lose their passage upon the steamer. So, in order to avoid the delay, they do not complain. Now, in order to harmonize these conflicting opinions, I think the depositions of witnesses should be allowed in all cases where the punishment is not capital. In capital cases we should adhere to the safer rule.

MR. HAGER. I will accept that amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager, as modified by the amendment of Mr. Wilson.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Mariposa, Judge Jones.

Lost.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out all after the word 'that,' in line nine, and insert in lieu thereof, 'the witness, from inability or other cause, will not attend at the trial.'"

MR. SHURTLEFF. That is simply to correct the phraseology.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Division being called for, the vote stood: Ayes, 47; noes, 22—no quorum voting.

THE PRESIDENT. There is evidently a quorum present. The question will be put again.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the section, reported by the Committee of the Whole, as amended.

MR. MILLS. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend amendment, adopted in Committee of the Whole, to section thirteen, on line four, after the word 'counsel,' add and insert the following words, 'to have the jury selected from the district, county, or township in which the crime is charged to have been committed, unless the venue be changed, as provided by law.'"

MR. MILLS. Mr. President: The object of that amendment is, that in criminal cases, the venue may be changed; to have the jury selected from the district, county, or township in which the crime is committed. I believe there is no other provision in the Constitution providing that the defendant shall be entitled to a change of venue. There is no provision in the statutes providing that the venue may be changed on the part of the prosecution. It seems to me highly necessary.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, as amended by the Convention.

Adopted.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section fourteen. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation having been first made to, or paid into Court for the owner; and no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation other than municipal until full compensation therefor be first made in money, or ascertained and paid into Court for the owner, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, in a Court of record, as shall be prescribed by law."

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. Amend by adding the following, viz.: 'Nor shall the time or services of any person, except when held or under arrest for crime, be taken by virtue of any lawful writ, process, or order of any Court or magistrate, without just compensation, to be fixed and provided for by law.'"

SPEECH OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I desire, as briefly as possible, to explain the object of that amendment. Something similar to it was offered in the section presented by the committee, but it was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole. The amendment offered will include all cases in which witnesses and jurors are taken from their business, and their time and services appropriated by the State, in matters in which they have no special concern, without compensation. As originally presented by the Committee on Preamble and Bill of Rights, these other words were not included. Now, there is a grievous wrong done here. The people of the State maintain Courts for the administration of justice. In order to do so they have to employ agents or officers, and these are paid, embracing the Judge to preside at the trial, and he is paid a fair salary. They employ Clerks to keep the record of the proceedings. They employ District Attorneys to prosecute in criminal proceedings. They employ Sheriffs to serve the processes of the Court, and perform other duties pertaining to their office. The counties pay them all, and pay them justly, as they ought to. It has never been contended that their services can be taken without compensation. But there are other men, whose services are equally necessary and indispensable in the administration of justice, who have no personal interest whatever in the matter—none whatever, except the general interest which all good citizens should feel—the same interest which the Judge, and the Sheriff, and the Clerk should have. These men are taken from their homes, in criminal cases, by the process of the Court, which is compulsory, and if they do not obey they will be punished. They are compelled to leave their business and go to the county seat, there to remain, at their own expense, for days and weeks. I have known witnesses to be so held for more than three weeks.

MR. WATERS. Don't you know we have a provision now for paying those who are unable to pay their expenses?

MR. JONES. No, sir. There is a provision. There is a provision that if a witness called to testify on behalf of the people, and against the defendant, will swear that he is too poor to pay his expenses, and has no property, the County Judge may allow his expenses. I do not call that compensation. It is not a fair way to treat a citizen who is brought into Court by the process of the Court, in a matter he would gladly get away from.

MR. ESTEE. Would not the Legislature have power to make such a law as that without a constitutional provision.

MR. JONES. I think it would.

MR. ESTEE. Then why not leave the whole subject to the Legislature?

MR. JONES. Because the Legislature has never exercised that power. I think it should have been exercised long ago. For twenty-nine years it has never done it, and every year shows more and more how oppressive and unjust the law is in this regard. I know a number of instances where men were compelled to travel one hundred miles to the county seat. I have no doubt other gentlemen know of similar instances. It is a great hardship, and one which the citizens ought not to be compelled to endure. He is called on to serve in a case in which he has no possible interest. He does not want to go. His wife and children are at home. He has the living to earn. But when he protests, the Sheriff can only say: "Sir, it is the order of the Court."

MR. GRACE. Under this amendment the defendant might have a right to have counsel employed for him.

MR. JONES. I am willing to guard against that by making an exception.

MR. WATERS. This matter is already provided for in the law, and when any matter is already provided for by statute there is no sense in repeating it in the Constitution. If the gentleman will turn to section one thousand three hundred and twenty-nine of the Code, he will find this matter freely covered. There is no need of enacting a full Penal Code in the Constitution. I hope it will be stopped.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Mariposa, Judge Jones.

Lost.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I offer the following amendment to section fourteen: In line one, after the word "taken," insert "or damaged."

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The original section reads, that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use. I propose to restore those words. In some instances a railroad company cuts a trench close up to a man's house, and while they do not take any of his property, it deprives him of the use of it to a certain extent. This was brought to my notice in the case of the Second street cut in San Francisco. There the Legislature authorized a street to be cut through, which left the houses on either side high in the air, and wholly inaccessible. It was destroyed, although none of it was taken or moved away. There are many such cases, where a man's property may be materially damaged, where none of it is actually taken. So I say, that a man should not be damaged without compensation. I think the original report of the committee was right in that respect.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I think it would be dangerous to change this provision in this respect. This is the form in which it is found in nearly all the Constitutions in the United States. Now, to add this element of damage is to enter into a new subject. It is opening up a new question which has no limit. You take the case of street improvement, and this question of damage will open up a very wide field for discussion. My recollection is that when this question was under discussion in the Committee of the Whole, there was a very large preponderance of the committee in favor of this amendment to section fourteen. I regard it as very dangerous to undertake to enter into a new field. I have no disposition to enter into an argument upon it.

MR. HAGER. I refer you to the Constitution of Illinois which says that property shall not be taken or damaged.

MR. WILSON. That is one.

MR. HAGER. And the Constitution of Missouri. [Laughter.]

MR. WILSON. If it comes all the way from Pike, it must be good. [Laughter.]

MR. CASSERLY. I am sorry to see my friend's faith shaken in the Constitution of Missouri. He is now quoting from Illinois.

MR. WILSON. I will say here that the fact that it is found in the recent Constitutions is no argument in its favor. But that it is found in nearly all the old Constitutions is an argument, because it shows that they have tried it. An experiment untried is no argument at all. Now, these new Constitutions which my friend constantly intrudes upon this Convention are simply untried experiments. They do not know whether they will work well or not. They are simply trying the experiment. In twenty years from now our children can refer to them, and if they have worked well, that will be an argument. But to present the Constitution of Missouri here without knowing whether it will work well or not, is no argument at all.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: It will be remembered that the Committee of the Whole thoroughly discussed this question. These words, "or damaged," were reported by the Committee on Bill of Rights. There were many reasons urged why these words should be left out. A man's property might be damaged, when he would be entitled to no compensation. A man might have a public house on a public highway, and the highway might be changed for some good cause or other. The value of his property would be lessened by reason of the travel being diverted, and yet he would not have a just right to claim damages. He would be damaged by reason of a public use. I think it would be dangerous to insert such a provision as this. I am opposed to the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: What if a corporation wanted to build a road through the streets of a city. Take for instance, the Second street cut. The property there is absolutely destroyed, and yet not a foot taken. The houses on either side are in absolute danger of sliding off into the street below. I know that what the gentleman from San Francisco says about this being an untried experiment, is true, but it strikes me that the justice of it is apparent; that when a man's property is damaged it ought to be paid for. I am in favor of the amendment. I think it is the best we can get.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Division being called, the Convention divided, and the amendment was adopted, by a vote of 62 ayes to 28 noes.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'owner,' line three, down to and including the word 'corporation,' in line six."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I desire to call the special attention of the Convention to that portion of the section. I ask your careful and patient attention for a moment, and I think it will need no further argument. "Private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation having been first made to or paid into Court for the owner," etc. Now, the first part of that section is in very plain terms. That ends the matter, as far as a municipal corporation is concerned. But there can be no use for the second clause, after we have said expressly that the compensation must be first made or paid into the Court for the owner.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after 'jury,' in line seven, 'unless a jury be waived, as in other criminal cases.'"

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I will state briefly the object of this. This section provides that all cases where damages are assessed, in taking private property for public use, it must be assessed by a jury. I see no reason why this should always be done by a jury, if both parties choose to waive a jury. The question of damages in this class of cases is no different from the question of damages in other cases. It is enough to give either party the right to demand a jury. The jury entails considerable expense, and if both parties choose to waive a jury, that is all sufficient.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I would merely make one suggestion, that the same object can be accomplished by striking out that portion in relation to a trial by jury, and then section seven comes in and says that the right of trial by jury shall remain. That will make the section shorter, instead of longer.

MR. CROSS. I would prefer to do it this way, and then there will be no danger of the Legislature getting around it, and saying that the question of damages may be determined by the Courts.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole, as amended by the Convention.

Adopted.

OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section sixteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall ever be passed."

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I give notice that to-morrow I will move a reconsideration of the vote taken on section fourteen.

THE PRESIDENT. Send it up in writing. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in section sixteen.

Carried.

RIGHTS OF FOREIGNERS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section seventeen.

"SEC. 17. Foreigners eligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, while bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native born citizens."

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The reason I voted against striking out this section is, that we have prevented the Chinese from holding property in this State. Foreigners, who are eligible to become citizens, may hold property. Any man, eligible to become a citizen, can hold property. Now, I think we would make a mistake if we strike out this section. The Chinese might come here and acquire all the property in the State of California. It would allow persons ineligible to become citizens to hold real estate.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The reason I oppose the striking out of this section is, that there is a great deal of foreign capital invested in this State, and I think any act to disturb that class of investments in this State, or to impair their rights, would be wrong. I think this provision should remain. I think all persons who are eligible to become citizens of the United States should have that right. The understanding is, that persons who are eligible shall hold it. I think it ought to remain. I think it is a blow at the mining interest of this State to strike it out.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I am in hopes this section will stand just as it is. I think it is the most effectual blow we can give to Chinese immigration. I am in hopes that the section will be allowed to remain.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: It is wonderful what changes time works. My friend Cross and his friends, in Committee of the Whole, voted to strike out this section. The reason upon which they acted was that the question as to whether the Chinese were eligible to become citizens or not was a mooted question; that many of them had already been naturalized, and that it was very uncertain as to where we would stand. These were the reasons upon which the section was stricken out, and I am sure my friend Cross voted that way.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: There is no reason why this section should be retained in the Constitution. There is no probability of the Legislature refusing to grant to foreigners the rights which they should be granted. This was stricken out because it was supposed to be aimed at the Chinese question, and it was thought to be more proper in another place. They did so consider it in that article, and made a section providing, among other things, that no alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States should be permitted to catch fish in the waters of this State, nor purchase, lease, own, or hold real property in this State. That section will reach the evil which this is designed to reach, and there is no need of this.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I hope this section will be stricken out. This morning we adopted section three of this very article, which says that we recognize the Constitution of the United States as the supreme law of the land. Therefore, we recognize that the United States have a right to make a treaty; and, sir, if you look in the treaty you will find the rights of foreigners perfectly well established. Look at the treaties of Germany, and Italy, and France, or whatever nation you please, and their rights are well defined. Therefore, I think this section is perfectly useless. The treaty making power is the one to regulate this question.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: This section is in the present Constitution, the only change being, foreigners eligible to become citizens. While it is true, as the gentleman from Sacramento says, that the Legislature might not do thus and so, I venture the opinion that most of the foreign born people will feel extremely sensitive upon the subject, unless this is put in the Constitution as it now is; because in the absence of such a provision in the Constitution, the Legislature could preclude that right. I do not remember what reasons were given in the Committee of the Whole for striking it out, but I believe one was that it was provided for in the article on Chinese, and that there was the proper place. That reason was not sufficient. Those who are eligible to become citizens should have their rights guaranteed by a Constitutional provision.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: Section seventeen, so far as it applies to foreigners of the white race, or of African descent, ought to be in the Constitution of this State. There is no reason why Frenchmen, or Germans, or Scotchmen, or Irishmen, or any other foreigners of the white race, who are bona fide residents of this State, should not be entitled to the privileges contained in this section. And, as one gentleman said, there is a good deal of foreign capital invested in our mines. There is no objection to having this class of persons. I believe under the common law these persons would have a right to hold property for the purpose of carrying on business. Why should they not be permitted to own property here? If it is feared that this section may give the Chinese the right to hold property, then the section should not be stricken out, but amended. I would propose, therefore, that instead of striking this out it be amended something like this: "Foreigners of the white race, or of African descent, eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws thereof, when bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights," etc.

MR. LARKIN. Foreigners of African descent, are they eligible to become citizens?

MR. WILSON. Yes, sir, they are. That language is used in the report—persons of African descent. Whenever it is in order I will move an amendment to that effect.

MR. CROSS. When the section says "foreigners eligible to become citizens," does not that include them?

MR. WILSON. I think it does, but I want to obviate whatever quibble might be raised. I am desirous myself of having a clause which will permit bona fide residents to have those rights.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Suppose the Congress of the United States should pass a law whereby the Chinese could become citizens.

MR. WILSON. Then we could do nothing.

MR. DUDLEY. They would have all the rights of citizens.

MR. WILSON. Certainly. I pray God he may never become naturalized. When that time comes we will cross the bridge.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope the section will be retained. I think we ought to be ashamed to refuse a foreigner eligible to become a citizen of the United States the same rights that Americans enjoy in the civilized countries of Europe. I am not at all afraid that by conferring this right we shall confer upon the Chinese the right to hold property. Not at all, sir. We must take some chances. I am not afraid that it will ever be decided by the Courts, as the law stands now, that Chinamen can ever become citizens. As to the question of the possibility of Congress passing an Act conferring citizenship upon them, I do not think there is any danger from that source, from the way Congress is acting at the present time. Possibly, after the Presidential election, we may have some trouble; but so long as California holds the position she does, Congress will never pass such a law. I would suggest to the gentleman that the same object which his amendment contemplates can be attained by inserting the word "present," so as to read: "under the present naturalization laws thereof."

MR. WILSON. I do not stand upon the form of it. I do not care which one is adopted.

MR. CASSERLY. How many amendments are pending?

THE PRESIDENT. No amendment is in order at present. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. RINGGOLD.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I shall be compelled to vote against retaining it. There is no use of it. There are a few Chinamen who are already citizens. I would like to tell my friend, Mr. Cross, if he is interested in favor of the Chinese, all he has got to do is to retain this section, because the Burlingame treaty will not always stand as it is to-day. It will be changed, and the Chinese will become citizens. Then what will this provision amount to? I think Mr. Wilson's idea is correct. I would like to see it inserted.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I trust that this section will be retained. It seems to me the reasons are very good. It has been the law of this State heretofore, and grossly unjust too, to exclude foreigners who have invested in real estate from holding that real estate. As to this matter of the Chinese, we do not get rid of the trouble by striking this out, because it all depends on the question of "white." The Act of Congress declares, that nobody but white men and negroes—that amendment having been made by the party in power—the whole question hinges upon the word "white." In this State, our Supreme Court has decided that Chinamen are not white men, but Indians. But the Supreme Court of the United States might upset that theory, therefore I am in favor of saying, directly, that the Chinese shall not hold real estate. They are still talking about persons ineligible to become citizens. Let us meet the issue squarely; we don't meet it by striking out the section.

MR. STEDMAN. I call for the previous question, and demand the ayes and noes.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I am in favor of retaining this section. It is the doctrine which exists in all the modern Constitutions, that aliens shall be entitled to hold real and personal property. It is a provision found in all the Constitutions, and it is perfectly proper here, except that the privilege should be confined to those who are eligible to become citizens. Now, this section was introduced, ex industria, for the express purpose of reaching the Chinese. I believe, as the section stands, it does apply to and exclude the Chinese. It has been decided by Judge Sawyer, that the Chinese are not eligible, and that is the popular view, the almost universal view. The section, or the amendment proposed by Mr. Wilson, ought to be adopted. This right ought to be conferred by the State of California upon foreigners who come here. There is an immense amount of foreign capital in this State, and the owners ought to be protected in the use and enjoyment of it.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I am in favor of striking out the section. I don't believe in giving any alien, whether Chinese or European, the right to hold property here. We have seen, in our civil war, these aliens holding large property in this State. I want to provide that no alien shall hold real property in this State.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole, in striking out section seventeen.

The Convention refused to concur.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section eighteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State."

MR. WEBSTER. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section eighteen so as to read as follows: Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall ever exist in this State."

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: That is in better form I think. That is in nearly the exact language of the Constitution of the United States, and it is more explicit and covers the ground more fully.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon that amendment.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-two, which was stricken out.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 22. No money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution, not under the exclusive management and control of the State; nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State."

MR. McCALLUM. That is in the legislative article.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Section twenty-two was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole, because it was covered by a provision in the legislative article. It belongs really to that department.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the action of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 23. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise."

Adopted.

MR. BARBOUR. Will a new section be in order now?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

THE WHIPPING POST.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I wish to make an inquiry. The gentleman from San Joaquin, Judge Terry, made a motion to reconsider some words that were stricken out of the sixth section, and requested me to bring it to the notice of the Convention. The words stricken out were with reference to the whipping post. On this matter

Digitized by Google

I have not much to say. If it is reconsidered I shall move to limit the whipping post to garroters, hoodlums, and Chinamen.

MR. WEST. And wife-whippers.

MR. HOWARD. No, sir. I do not see any other mode of repressing hoodlums and garroters, and punishing Chinese misdemeanors, because when a Chinaman gets in jail he is in as good a place as a hotel. The only way is to whip him, and I am in favor of doing it. I move to reconsider that vote.

MR. MURPHY. I move to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider.

MR. REDDY. I move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which that portion of the section was stricken out.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard, West, Hitchcock, Winans, and Wilson of Tehama.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard of Los Angeles, Winans, Prouty, Keyes, and Nason.

The roll was called, and the motion to reconsider was indefinitely postponed, by the following vote:

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: Is it in order to add to section three as amended?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I gave notice yesterday of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to adopt the amendment to Rule Twenty-four. I now wish to call up that motion.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order now, while we are in the middle of the consideration of this article.

PROPERTY QUALIFICATIONS.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: I would like to offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. No property qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote or hold office."

REMARKS OF MR. FREUD.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: This provision ought to be found in the article on right of suffrage, but it is not to be found there. There is no restriction upon the Legislature in the enforcement of a property qualification. You will remember that, some time ago, when the Committee of the Whole had this provision under consideration, it read, that no property qualification should ever be required for a person to vote, hold office, or become a juror.

You will notice that the provision as now presented, merely covers suffrage and office. It is my sincere conviction, however, that the jury ought to be placed in the same category. He who wields the ballot decides the liberty and the destiny of a great nation. He who wields the gavel decides merely the life and fate of an individual. The ballot is the mighty sun; the jury is but the revolving satellite. But, sir, I do not wish to hazard the greater to win the less, and I am therefore reluctantly persuaded to sacrifice the rights of the juror to the safety of the citizen. Some gentlemen seem to believe that this section has no proper place in the bill of rights; they certainly are in error. On the contrary, if there be an article in the whole Constitution to which this section of right and of reason belongs, it is the declaration of fundamental principles. Why, in the ballot is the epitome of progress; the office is the emblem of stability. What right is there broader than liberty? What principle grander than equality? Every State of the Union that has risen to this declaration has placed it in the bill of rights. No Constitution of which I know, has it elsewhere. No other committee of this Convention has reported the subject. There can be no doubt that its proper and only place is amongst the corner-stone maxims of a State.

Let us see what is a bill of rights? "A bill of rights," says Judge Story in his Commentaries, page 697, "is an important protection against unjust and oppressive conduct on the part of the majority of the people themselves. In a Government modified like that of the United States, the great danger lies rather in the abuse of the community, than of the legislative body. The prescriptions in favor of liberty ought to be leveled against that quarter where the greatest danger lies, namely, that which possesses the highest prerogative of power. But this is not found in the executive or legislative departments of government; but in the body of the people, operating by the majority against the minority."

Now, sir, the American nation is eminently a nation of landholders and property owners. This provision, then, is essentially a protection and encouragement to the small landless minority. It is a privilege and comfort to the unfortunate few in their desperate struggles for existence. Perhaps the most admirable feature of the Republic is, that the minority of to-day often becomes the majority of to-morrow. Here, sir, neither poverty nor wealth is immutable or immortal. Let a wealthy majority of this House refuse to sanction this protecting shield, and the evil day may yet come, when as a poor minority it will forever mourn its heedless tyranny. No other place is so fit as the bill of rights, and no other time is so opportune as now, to inscribe indelibly upon the organic scroll this ancient and noble declaration of the sovereignty of the people. There are three great and grave thoughts bearing directly upon this subject, to which no reference has as yet been made. Perhaps more than any other they have induced me to strive for the insertion of this section. It will take but a few minutes to lay before you a skeleton of each.

First, the ballot is the best educator of this age. The press, the pulpit, and the rostrum engrave principles upon men's minds; but the ballot awakens the innate genius of the citizen. It is, therefore, the creator and instrument of the highest manhood. "Among the foremost benefits of free government," says John Stuart Mill in his Considerations on Representative Government, page one hundred and seventy, "is that education of the intelligence and of the sentiments which is carried down to the very lowest ranks of the people, when they are called to take a part in acts which directly affect the great interests of their country," by which it must come. The free exercise of the ballot infuses and diffuses intelligence and independence. To vote is to think, and thought is the essence of all knowledge. Political discussion is worth more to the manual laborer than all the books on political economy. Political action is the very best teacher of the science and ethics of government. And so it is that the American citizen has come to be famous for his political sagacity and worldly knowledge. "I have lived," says De Tocqueville in his masterly work on American Institutions, page three hundred and twenty-two, "a great deal with the people in the United States. The citizen of the United States does not acquire his practical science and his positive notions from books. He learns to know the laws by participating in the act of legislation; and he takes a lesson in the forms of government, from governing. The great work of society is ever going on before his eyes, and, as it were, under his very hands." Rather, then, I say, part with the public school than with the public ballot, for knowledge without freedom is like the spectroscope without its prism. Liberty, like the sun, breaks on the soul and fires all the faculties. What property is to the rich, the franchise is to the poor. It is in truth the great leveler of society. So long as the public school instructs the youth, and the public ballot enlightens the citizen, I have no anxiety for the future of our country. The school house is the heart and the ballot box is the lungs of the body politic. Destroy or cripple either, and the Republic must crumble or fall.

In the second place, the ballot is the mother of patriotism. I do not mean the patriotism arising from the instinct of native land, for that is merely transient and soon withers, but the patriotism nurtured by the exercise of civil rights; the patriotism that is perennial and forever green. Upon this point, let me read you a few lines from DeTocqueville's masterly work on American institutions, page two hundred and forty-four:

"I maintain that the most powerful, and perhaps the only, means which we still possess of interesting men in the welfare of their country, is to make them partakers in the Government. How happens it that in the United States, where the inhabitants arrived but as yesterday upon the soil which they now occupy, and brought neither customs nor traditions with them there; where they met each other for the first time, with no previous acquaintance; where, in short, the instructive love of country scarcely exists; how happens it that every one takes as jealous an interest in the affairs of his township, his county, and the whole State, as if they were his own? It is because every one in his sphere takes an active part in the government of society."

It is that feeling of something in common and inseparable between the government and the subject that inspires the citizen with an undying love for the Republic. Such is the spirit that will elevate the dull coward into the bold patriot. Such is the power that has raised the servile slave into the aspiring citizen. And such is the mighty link that binds together forever the hearts of a people and the fate of their country.

The third and last thought that occurs to me is one for which I respectfully ask your earnest and deepest consideration. It involves the peace and safety of the State. As on the one hand, the ballot is the great educator of the people, so on the other it is the great safety valve of their discontent. Free governments must progress, otherwise they decay. The ballot is the instrument of reformation; take it away and revolutions must ensue. It is, therefore, preëminently the conservator of peace. As Ralph Waldo Emerson, in his late essay on the Fortune of the Republic, has well said: "We began with freedom, and are depended for shocks now for a century, by the facility with which, through popular assemblies, every necessary measure of reform can instantly be carried. A Congress is a standing insurrection, and escapes the violence of accumulated grievance. As the globe keeps its identity by perpetual change, so our civil system by perpetual appeal to the people and accepting of its reforms."

Now, sir, when a people once free, are, by despotism, deprived of the right to express their will and judgment through the ballot, every true man owes it to freedom to rebel against such outrageous tyranny. History shows that it is easier to hurl the rooted mountain from its base than force the yoke of slavery upon men determined to be free. The ballot then, is the mighty instrument that educates, inspires, and pacifies the American people. It is its use, as Webster has somewhere said, that casts about us general enlightenment and manly independence. That noble privilege, I hold, ought never to be caged or restricted. To it are we indebted for this magnificent structure of American liberty. Unshackled and untrammeled, it will yet build for us the foremost State on earth; for that government, says Bentham, is the best which best promotes the morality, intelligence, and activity of the human beings composing the community.

These are the reasons then, why I regard the adoption or rejection of this section of so paramount importance. It, indeed, affects the rights and privileges of the citizen of to-day. Its omission imperils the liberty of posterity. Let some patrician Legislature rob the plebian of his political rights and the freedom of his child will soon be mangled into the serfdom of a slave. Property qualifications inevitably lead, first, to aristocracy, then to monarchy. Liberty once lost to a people is rarely ever regained. Republics fall through disease and stagnation; they never die of too much freedom.

"Let the American youth," says Story in his imperishable commentaries (pages 718-19,) "never forget that they possess a noble inheritance, bought by the toils and sufferings and blood of their ancestors, and capable, if wisely improved and faithfully guarded, of transmitting to their latest posterity, all the substantial blessings of life, the peaceful enjoyment of liberty, property, religion, and independence. The structure has been erected by architects of consummate skill and fidelity; its foundations are solid; its compartments are beautiful as well as useful; its arrangements are full of wisdom and order, and its defenses are impregnable from without. It has been reared for immortality—if the work of man may perfectly aspire to such a title. It may, nevertheless, perish in an hour by the folly, or corruption, or negligence of its only keepers, the people. Republics are created by the virtue, public spirit, and intelligence of the citizens; they fall when the wise are banished from the public councils, because they dare to be honest, and the profligate are rewarded because they flatter the people in order to destroy them."

The American revolution broke out, and the doctrine of the sovereignty of the people, nurtured in the bosoms of the colonists, took possession of the State. Battles were waged for that great doctrine; every class enlisted in its cause; disasters were met and victories were won for it, until now it stands as the law of laws. The noblest men of our country fought in its defense, and cheerfully died that it might live. Such is its history, and such has been its cost. Reverence for a principle so historic and precious ought to prevent and guard it against irreverent hands.

The American Republic is yet an experiment. One hundred years is but the childhood in the lifetime of a great nation. Unfortunately there are already many who have lost faith in the American system of government. From that un-American class has arisen that uncharitable demand for property qualifications. But, sir, let it not be forgotten that the ancient republics of Sparta, and Athens, and Rome, had property qualifications, and they each fell a victim to the tyranny of despotism. I tell you, sir, it is the very absence of those infamous tests, both of property and of religion, that sustains this free Government to-day. Once begin to raise up discriminations in deference to wealth, and you mar the beauty and mutilate the utility of the whole system—the American Republic will be a republic but in name.

This momentous problem ought, then, to be solved now and forever. No one who has at heart the peace and welfare and prosperity of California, will consent to leave so serious a question to the freaks and fancies of a fickle Legislature. To do so would be to jeopardize the magnificent future of our State. I want to see California in the vanguard of progress. I want to see her shine forth as the brightest star in the galaxy of forty bright States. Let this Convention, then, upon which are hanging the hopes and the fears of an anxious people, declare for all time to come, that within the great State of California no honest man is too poor for the highest citizenship, and no worthy citizen is too humble for the most exalted office.

MR. SWING. Mr. President: Having gone through with the amendments of the Committee of the Whole, I believe it is now acceptable to move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Murphy, Reddy, Vacquerel, and Prouty.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

MR. McCALLUM. I would like to have the Chair state the effect of it.

THE PRESIDENT. If the Convention resolves to put the main question, it goes to the amendment pending, and to the whole article. If the Convention refuses to order the main question it goes over for twenty-four hours. If the Convention orders the main question it brings us to a direct vote, first, upon the amendment, and then the question will be, shall the article be engrossed and ordered to a second reading?

MR. SWING. I withdraw it temporarily.

MR. CROSS. That rule was amended by the Convention while the President was absent. It was amended on the third of January.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is not aware of any such amendments to the rules.

MR. CROSS. Yes, sir; an additional rule, on January second, as you will see by the record.

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir; I see it. Then the question will remain just as though the previous question had not been moved. The question now is upon the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Freud.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I do not consider it necessary for me to add anything to the very able presentation of this proposition by my young colleague, Mr. Freud. The article of this committee, of course, covers the right of suffrage. But as to the right to hold office there is no real provision. Therefore, I hope the section will be adopted, and that this Convention will place itself squarely upon the record.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Stedman, Wellin, Cross, Freud, and O'Sullivan.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. McCALLUM. I move an amendment to section fifteen.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order now, if there be any additional sections to offer.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: Yesterday the Convention adopted section seven, whereby the words between the words "actions" and "both" were stricken out. I now move to reconsider that vote.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to reconsider.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Casserly, Wyatt, McComas, Charles, and Stuart.

The roll was called, and the motion to reconsider was lost by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I now wish to add to section three as amended.

THE PRESIDENT. Section three cannot be amended any further. The Convention adopted a substitute for it.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'fraud,' in line two, 'or in civil actions for torts, except in cases of willful injury to person or property.'"

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: If the Convention desires to adjourn I will explain in a few words the object of this. Gentlemen will remember that, in the Committee of the Whole, Judge Shafter offered an amendment making this same point, as did also the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. There was no difference of opinion in the Committee of the Whole as to the necessity of making this amendment. There was a difference of opinion as to the phraseology. I have drawn this up with considerable care and submitted it to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and he is of the opinion that it is properly drafted, and I believe is willing to accept it. There was no argument made against the principle of this thing in Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Division was called for, and the amendment adopted, by a vote of 54 ayes to 28 noes.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: Would it be in order to move that the Convention now adopt this article as amended.

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir. If there be no further amendments the next question will be: Shall this article be engrossed and ordered to a second reading. That motion will come up after it is engrossed.

MR. WILSON of First District. Mr. President: I have an amendment to offer to section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"'Of the white race or of African descent,' to be inserted after the word 'foreigners,' in section seventeen."

Adopted.

RECONSIDERATION.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I now move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention voted against the amendment offered by me to section two, of the article, to amend the section by inserting between the words "same" and "whenever," the following words, "by proceedings in accordance with law."

It has been impossible to reach the matter, and I now move to make it the special order for to-morrow morning. I have two such notices pending, and I wish to make the same motion as to both.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider.

Carried.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I now move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention voted to strike out from line five of section six, the words "jail or."

MR. TULLY. I move to indefinitely postpone the motion to reconsider.

Carried.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I call attention to a motion that is to be made to-day. The gentleman from San Bernardino gave notice of a motion to reconsider certain amendments to Rule Twenty-four. It was made the special order for to-day, but by some oversight the Judge did not observe it. Will the Chair rule that the ayes and noes are to be called upon every section now, or only upon the article?

THE PRESIDENT. Only upon the article upon the final vote. The amendment is unnecessary to the Rule.

NOTICE.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I wish to give notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I give notice that to-morrow, January twenty-ninth, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment to section fourteen, offered by me to-day, in the following words, viz: 'nor shall the time or services of any person, except when held or under arrest for crime, be taken by virtue of any lawful writ, order, or process of any Court or Magistrate, without just compensation, to be fixed and provided for by law,' was rejected."

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I move we adjourn.

Lost, by a vote of 51 ayes to 60 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the article be engrossed and called to a second reading?

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. It is that, pending a motion to reconsider, the final vote cannot be taken on the whole article.

THE PRESIDENT. Not well taken.

MR. WILSON. I didn't believe it was, I only wanted the ruling of the Chair. [Laughter.]

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard of Los Angeles, Ayers, Beerstecher, Huestis, and O'Sullivan.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

AYES.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And at five o'clock and thirty minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Wednesday, January 29th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITION.

MR. McCONNELL presented the following petition, signed by a number of citizens of Sacramento County, asking the exemption of certain property from taxation:

To the Honorable J. P. Hoge, President, and to members of the Constitutional Convention:

GENTLEMEN: Your petitioners, citizens of the State of California, and residents of Sacramento County, most respectfully request your honorable body to exempt from taxation all property used exclusively for church purposes.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

RESOLUTION.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the several articles of the new Constitution, when passed by the Convention and ordered engrossed, be printed under the direction of the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: The article that was passed by the Convention yesterday was ordered to be engrossed. The Committee on Engrossment and Enrollment is at present somewhat dilapidated, owing to the absence of the chairman, the gentleman from Lake, Mr. Noel, and by a resolution, since we were authorized to elect a clerk of the Committee on Engrossment, the clerk has been discharged, so that we are at present without any efficient means of engrossing the article; and further, I think it would be much preferable to have the article printed, so that it will be placed upon the desks of members. We have perfected many of the sections, and it is desirable to see what condition the article is in at present. The article, as proposed to be engrossed, can be turned over to the Committee on Reporting and Printing, who are competent to read the proof, and see that it is perfect; and I think it will expedite matters very much to have it take that course.

MR. McCOMAS. Mr. President: It seems to me that it is hardly necessary to have this printed until it has gone to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment. I do not think it is necessary to incur all this expense until it is passed upon by the Committee on Revision.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I think the resolution of the gentleman from San Diego is correct. It will expedite business and avoid extra expense. The Committee on Reporting and Printing being experts as proof readers, will examine the proof, correct any mistakes that may be made, and present it to the Convention, instead of having clerks attending to this matter. The work, as passed upon, will go directly to the printing office, under the Supervision of the Committee on Printing. I deem it the best and most economical plan we can adopt.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: There is still another reason why this should be adopted. The Convention has no money with which to pay a clerk. He will be obliged to take certificates and discount them. The pay, as set down by this Convention, is five dollars per day. Gentlemen can figure out whether it is possible to obtain a clerk to do this work properly at what he would receive for it.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I understand that the second reading has been had.

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir; it will be read a second time after it is engrossed.

The resolution was adopted.

PARDONING POWER.

THE PRESIDENT. The next measure on the file is the report in relation to the pardoning power. The Secretary will read the section as presented by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"ARTICLE 5.

"SECTION 13. The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, pardons, and commutations of sentence, after conviction, for all offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions, and with such restrictions and limitations, as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason, the Governor shall have power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature, at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. The Governor shall communicate to the Legislature, at the beginning of every session, every case of reprieve or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence, and its date, the date of the pardon and reprieve, and the reasons for granting the same. Neither the Governor nor the Legislature shall have power to grant pardons, or commutations of sentence, in any case where the convict has been previously twice convicted of felony."

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the section the following: 'Except when new evidence is discovered after conviction, establishing the innocence of the convicted party.'"

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding: 'Unless upon the written recommendation of a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: That there ought to be an amendment to the section seems to me very clear. This, as it stands, provides that no pardon shall be granted by the Governor in any case where the convict has been previously twice convicted of felony. Now it may happen—and both of these amendments contemplate that idea—that a man may be erroneously convicted a third time. It is true that when a man has been convicted once and sent to a State Prison, if that fact is known when he is charged with a new offense he is more easily convicted than he would be if he had never been to a State Prison. Let a man be indicted in any of these counties charged with some offense—highway robbery, or burglary—and let it be known that he has been once or twice before convicted of a similar offense, and it is very easy to convict him the third time. But if it be true that a man is convicted when he is not guilty, there ought to be a way to get him out. If he be not guilty of the offense of which he is charged, there ought to be a way, when that fact appears, of his being let out. Now, the gentleman from San Bernardino has provided that he may be pardoned, if new evidence appears tending to show that he is not guilty, but there is no way of testing how that fact shall be shown. It seems to me that it would be better, where such cases arise, to have somebody to whom that evidence can be submitted, and it seems to me that the evidence might best be submitted to the Judges of the Supreme Court; and if a majority of them say that the man ought to be pardoned, in view of the new facts elicited, then the Judges may recommend to the Governor, in writing, that the man be pardoned, because a majority of the Supreme Court will never sign a paper recommending the Governor to pardon, in a particular instance, unless there be something that clearly recommends him to the mercy of the Governor. There can be no doubt that there ought to be some provision. There may possibly be a case of a man being in prison after having been twice previously convicted who is not guilty of the offense for which he is last sentenced, and if it does appear that he is not guilty, there ought to be some means to let him out. As it stands, though it appear that he is as innocent as a babe unborn, if he has been twice convicted before, he must stay there, for neither the Legislature nor the Governor has power to turn him out. This ought to be amended. The question is whether you will take the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Diego, or the one drawn by me, or some other one. I think it would be better to have some tribunal to whom that evidence may be submitted, to determine whether a man is guilty or not, and that the Justices of the Supreme Court in this case would be the best tribunal to submit that question to. If a majority are satisfied that the man ought to be turned out, then they could make that recommendation to the Governor.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: With all due respect to the gentleman from Yuba, I am opposed to making the Judges of the Supreme Court doorkeepers to the pardoning chamber. Now it is possible, as Judge Belcher suggests, that an accused party might possibly be innocent, notwithstanding the fact that he had been twice before convicted of an infamous crime; but I submit, Mr. President, that it is an extremely improbable case. I think, upon general principles, there could be no great harm done if he was convicted the third time, because the two former convictions establish the fact that he is an enemy to society and a bad man, and it is of little consequence then whether he is sent to State Prison a third time on general principles or sent to the gallows, or wherever it may be most convenient. But what I object to is making the Judges of the Supreme Court doorkeepers to this pardoning chamber. It seems to me of all officers in the State they should be the last who should be harassed with applications for pardons. When this subject was up before the Committee of the Whole, and it was proposed to make the Judges of the Supreme Court ex officio members of the Boards of Pardons, I was honestly opposed to it for the reason that I thought that the Supreme Court ought to be kept clear of all such harassing demands upon their time, and attend to the business of their office. And here the proposition comes to this, that in cases of this character application must be first made to the Supreme Court. Now, it is conceded, and gentlemen of the profession on this floor have shown us, when this subject of the judicial department was under discussion, that the Supreme Court Judges were crowded with business, and that they did not have time to discharge the duties of their office. Hence, they ask an increase of the number, and that they might set in departments and in bank. But if they make this change proposed by Judge Belcher, it seems that there is no serious demand upon their time. In my judgment it would be detrimental to the cause of justice to impose upon them the onerous and, I think, unnecessary burden which is so foreign to the duties of their office.

Now, I admit that Judge Belcher ought to be a good Judge of this matter, having himself been upon the bench. I will admit, too, that my opinion is worth but little. Still, Mr. President, I cannot but think that, upon a more deliberate reflection, gentlemen, particularly gentlemen of the legal profession, will see the impropriety of imposing upon the Judges of the Supreme Court other foreign matters that would, in the very nature of things, distract their judgment, or take from them a portion of that time which should be devoted to the peculiar functions of their office. Now, in regard to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Diego, while I object to it, the objection is not so serious. But I maintain that there is really no necessity for any change in this article upon the pardoning power, as adopted in the Committee of the Whole. It was discussed here for two or three days—thoroughly and amply discussed, and agreed upon, and I believe satisfies the views of the majority of the members. I hope that all amendments will be voted down, and that we will adhere to the action of the Committee of the Whole and adopt that action as the action of this Convention.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: There is but one side to this question, I think. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Hunter, Tully, Dunlap, and White.

MR. BLACKMER. I think it is but fair that I should have an opportunity to be heard——

MR. MCCALLUM. I ask——

MR. WATERS. I insist upon my motion. If the Convention do not want the previous question they need not order it.

The Convention refused to order the main question put, on a division, by a vote of 37 ayes to 62 noes.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. Chairman: It seems to be the opinion——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman has already spoken once.

MR. BLACKMER. I was not aware of the fact that I had spoken. The chair is mistaken.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman spoke to the question when he introduced the amendment. The chair is not mistaken.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba will be adopted. It seems to me that the views taken by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Caples, are not well taken. This amendment would not make the Supreme Court the doorkeepers of the pardoning power.

MR. CAPLES. Is the gentleman aware that there are some three, or four, or five hundred convicts in California, in the State Prisons, who have been convicted two, three, four, and a half dozen times?

MR. ANDREWS. I presume that is the case. That does not meet the suggestion made by the gentleman from Yuba where there might be exceptional cases in which it would be a great hardship and outrage that the pardoning power could not be exercised. The gentleman from Sacramento asserted that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba would make the Supreme Court Judges doorkeepers to the pardoning power, but it only applies to these exceptional cases. I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Yuba will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: After considerable investigation I have discovered that my speech was a silent one, and consequently I will now endeavor to make myself heard. Perhaps it was because there is so much confusion that I did not hear it. Now, sir, in regard to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba, Judge Belcher, I have this to say, that it is in reality making the Supreme Court a Board of Pardons, and the Committee of the Whole refused to entertain that proposition. They decided that it was not advisable to institute a Board of Pardons, any member of which should be upon the Supreme Bench. That question was discussed here. I endeavored, as the Convention will remember, when this article was up, to make this provision apply to all pardons, and the Committee of the Whole voted it down. But this question, notwithstanding the understanding of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Caples, in regard to the last clause, where persons had been twice convicted, was not discussed in Committee of the Whole. Now, sir, it is not improbable that a man who has been convicted twice will be convicted again wrongfully. In fact it is very probable that he may be convicted wrongfully a third time. While it may be true in law that the person charged is not prejudiced, it is not true in fact. A prejudice will exist when a person has been twice convicted that will influence to a certain extent his conviction a third time, when, perhaps, if it had been his first offense he would not have been convicted. There is that easier way of getting a conviction than upon the first offense.

Now, sir, as to the question whether it makes any difference or not in the case of a person having been convicted of a crime twice, whether he is innocent or not when he is convicted, if the gentleman from Sacramento can take that stand I am willing he should keep it. I do not wish to. If a person is innocent of the crime for which he has been convicted there should be no punishment, and we should leave the door open, so that he can be pardoned. I believe this is the only way to do it: that whenever evidence is discovered, after the conviction, establishing his innocence, that the evidence should be brought before the Governor upon this point as to whether there are some circumstances going to mitigate the case and warrant a pardon. The evidence now must be brought to him. He must be brought to see and believe that there is a wrong being done; that it would be better for the individual and community that he be pardoned. This evidence which proves his innocence may just as well be brought there, and he can just as well pass upon it. This confines it then to this single case, and it is more easy to decide these cases where they are decided upon the evidence than where the sympathy is to be worked upon. I believe this to be the best way, so that when a party has been convicted twice before, if his innocence is established by evidence, there shall be still a right in the Governor to pardon him.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I desire to say but one word in regard to the amendments which are now pending. The section as reported by the committee I think should be amended, because it puts it out of the power of any part of the government, or all the combined powers of the government, to relieve a man from imprisonment who has been twice convicted before, no matter under what circumstances he is imprisoned, or what new facts have been developed. I am opposed to any such iron clad provision as that, that any person can be imprisoned so as to be beyond the reach of all departments of government. Now persons may be convicted under such circumstances that the pardoning power would not relieve him if he were only convicted once. Now, after he has been convicted twice the same reasons might apply, and the pardoning power might, in its discretion, doubt whether he was convicted properly, and in view of some other reasons men of sense would say that the man ought to be pardoned, yet we have placed it out of the power of the officers to pardon him. It has been suggested to me by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Freeman, that this case may occur. A man may be convicted of three offenses at the same term of Court. He may be convicted, say, of embezzling funds at different times, every one constituting an offense. Having been convicted of three offenses he is beyond the reach of the pardoning power. Now it certainly would be impolitic to establish a rule like that. I think the amendment proposed by Judge Belcher should be adopted. I see nothing in the objection that it is done on the recommendation of a majority of the Supreme Court. It does not make the Supreme Court the pardoning power at all. It merely is a restriction upon the power of the Governor. When the Supreme Court have recommended the Governor to exercise the pardoning power, after an examination of the case, he still has to exercise his judgment. The Supreme Court has no power to pardon; they recommend it to the Governor, but he is not compelled to act upon it. He is the pardoning power, and they are no branch of the pardoning power at all. They simply recommend. The Senate, when it sits to approve of the appointment of an officer by the President or the Governor, does not appoint. The President appoints, with the advice and consent of the Senate. In this case it is not as strong as that. They simply say, "we have examined the case and we think this man should be pardoned," and then the Governor is thrown upon his own judgment to say whether the man should be pardoned or not. I do not see why we should doubt the Supreme Court in a case of this kind. They are better able to judge whether there are any peculiar circumstances under which the man has been convicted which would make it a proper case for the interposition of executive clemency. For these reasons, I am in favor of the amendment as proposed by the gentleman from Yuba, Judge Belcher.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: If this section is to stand as reported by the Committee of the Whole, I think that will be a very proper amendment; but I have an amendment which was defeated in Committee of the Whole by only one or two votes, and if it should be adopted, would cover substantially the thing aimed at in this amendment. I propose to read it now for information, as I propose to offer it whenever it will be in order:

"Add after the word 'reprieve,' in line one, as follows: 'and the Governor, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Attorney-General, or a major part of them, of whom the Governor shall be one, shall have power to grant.'"

Then the section proceeds to state that they shall grant pardons, etc. This proposition was discussed at considerable length in Committee of the Whole, and I do not propose to invite a renewal of that discussion; nor do I propose at any time, in the Convention, to offer propositions here which have been defeated by any decided majority in the Committee of the Whole, because it would be a useless consumption of time. As to this particular proposition, I have hope that it may succeed, and I therefore propose to offer it whenever it will be in order. I may say while up, that it embraces what was reported by the Committee on Pardons in the first place, as they propose to add the Chief Justice to the pardoning power, the Governor being one. My colleague, Judge Campbell, proposed to insert "Attorney-General." My proposition was to make the three—the Governor, the Chief Justice, and the Attorney-General—comprise the pardoning power, and I took occasion to say at that time, that at least so far as we who come from the second county of the State are concerned, we were pledged to your political platforms, those of both parties, to vote in favor of a proposition, that there should be a commission, or Board, to have charge and control of the pardoning power. I state this now merely by way of explanation. I shall vote for the amendment of Judge Belcher; but if it should not prevail, I shall offer this. As to the clause which provides that a party twice before convicted of felony shall not be pardoned, it is wrong in principle, and ought not to be put in a Constitution. It is very easy to suppose a case where gross injustice might be done. I will vote to strike the whole of it out; but as the best that can be done in the present instance, I shall vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: When the proper time comes, I desire to submit a substitute for the whole section.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I trust we will adhere to the report of the Committee of the Whole. As to the amendment of the learned gentleman from Yuba, and also the amendment of the gentleman from San Diego, they will both be found mischievous in practice—utterly so. If adopted, they will destroy all responsibility in the matter of the exercise of the pardoning power. Now, sir, what is the amendment of the gentleman from Yuba? That a pardon shall be granted wherever a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court recommend it. What is the effect of that? It is not a public and judicial act; it is not a public inquiry in Court; it is not a public examination, regularly; but each Judge is subjected to private solicitation by parties outside, and is to be run down by petitions, and the tears of women and children. That is not safe, sir. The safety consists in having the responsibility direct, and holding the Governor and his party responsible for a proper exercise of the power. Equally fatal would be the amendment of the gentleman from San Diego. It is to be granted on newly discovered evidence. The Governor is made a Court, practically, and grants a new trial, and reëxamines the whole case upon the merits, and decides as to the weight of the newly discovered evidence. If there is newly discovered evidence, the Court below will grant a new trial. If the Court below refuses, an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court, and then it can be examined regularly, under the responsibility of the Court, and under the learning of the Court. A man being in the penitentiary does not prevent his being heard. If there is new evidence, he is entitled to a new trial, and will get it by a regular judicial inquiry, and the evidence will be produced where it can be scrutinized and examined. But how can that be the case if produced before the Governor? How is he to examine the effect of the new evidence upon the whole case, and whether a new trial ought to be granted, or whether a pardon ought to be extended on the alleged discovery of new evidence? It cannot result otherwise than in abuses; nor is there any necessity for it. If a man is convicted, and it is shown to the Governor, from newly discovered evidence, that he has been wrongfully convicted, as the law now stands, and as it is proposed in this report, the Governor will still have a right to grant a pardon. I am in favor of the report as it stands, because there is some responsibility in it. The moment you divide it out with the Judges of the Supreme Court, all responsibility ceases. I did not favor the latter clause of the report, that pardon should be withheld from a man because he has been twice convicted before. But I do not see that it will work much hardship. I am in favor of the report as it now stands, and I hope it will be adopted. I do not want to discourage gentlemen who desire to make a large reputation by small amendments. But I think the safe thing is to adhere to the report of the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I am not in favor of prohibiting a pardon in any case where the party has been previously twice convicted. A person may be convicted twice or thrice at the same term of Court. That is, there may be three or four indictments, and he may be tried on them, and there may be two or three convictions. Take the case of Duncan, who has recently been tried in San Francisco. He was indicted upon eight or ten charges, and has not been convicted. But suppose there had been a conviction on three or four indictments at that term, then in that case, if a presentation was made for his pardon, he would come up as a person who had been twice or thrice previously convicted. Yet it would be one offense, or crimes growing out of one offense; that is, a succession of offenses. Now, the pardoning power is nothing more than an arrest of the legal administration of justice. How often should we arrest the legal administration of justice, and when, is the question which presents itself here. Why, we might say, if a man was convicted according to the law, and punished according to the law, there should be no arrest of the administration of justice, because that would be an infraction upon the law itself. I do not think myself that the pardoning power should be exercised to the extent that it is in this State and in other States, because it has a tendency to create an impression in the community that if a man should be convicted there is a possibility of his being pardoned. But in a case where a person has been convicted twice, or thrice, and so on, a case may arise where the pardoning power should be exercised just as much as in other cases. If I had a chance to offer an amendment I would put it in this shape: "No pardon shall be granted to any person previously twice convicted of felony, unless on the recommendation, and with the approval of a major part of all the members of the State Senate." I would prefer it in that way rather than to resort to the Supreme Court. Now, the Judges of the Supreme Court are exercising judicial powers. I do not think they should be importuned constantly by parties seeking pardons for their friends, and interfered with in the performance of their judicial functions, to turn their attention towards the pardoning power. In some of the States the Senate have entire control. It is a political body to a certain extent. They are more likely to be conversant with the case as they come from every portion of the State. If I had my way about this whole matter I would require that a pardon should be granted on the recommendation of the Governor with the approval of a majority vote of the Senate, and I would have the Senate meet once, twice, or three times a year for that purpose; that the Governor may call the Senate together as a Pardoning Board. I think it would be a better system. The Governor is importuned as we all know, and in a great many cases, in all probability, pardons are granted where they would not be if they had a Board to act upon it deliberately. I oppose the amendment offered by Judge Belcher upon these grounds. I would rather leave it, as I say, to a vote of a majority of the Senate, on the recommendation of the Governor, and have the Governor call the Senate together for that purpose whenever he may see fit.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: As the Chairman of the committee, of course, I can say that all these propositions were passed upon by the committee and partly by the Convention itself in Committee of the Whole. Where the pardoning power should be lodged is a question foreign to the specific amendments proposed here. It is very apparent that after a man has been twice convicted, in the opinion of the convention he ought not to be pardoned except in the exceptional case of his innocence having been demonstrated, and if it is so demonstrated he ought to be pardoned. The question is who shall decide? I am willing to leave it to the Govenor. I would be equally willing to leave it to the Supreme Court. There is some weight in the argument that it should be left to a judicial mind. I am inclined to the opinion that the Judges of the Supreme Court are the most competent tribunal, and the one to which this question could be most safely left. They must recommend to the executive and he pardon. It is said that a new trial may be had. It will be seen that if that is true, which I do not undertake to controvert at all, it would be a very inefficient remedy. The Judge before whom the case was tried may be dead or out of office. If a new trial is to be had the party will suffer by being unable to get his witnesses together again. But the Judges of the Supreme Court could take up the whole record of the case as tried before just exactly as well as a jury could, and better too, and be more likely to arrive at a correct result. It strikes me that it would be quite as well to leave this matter to a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court to advise the Governor as any other way.

MR. HOWARD. This amendment does not submit it to the Court; it submits it to a majority of the Judges to be run down outside of Court.

MR. SHAFTER. If it is objectionable on that account, it can be very easily provided that the petition shall be made to the Supreme Court, and that that Court shall decide. That will be a majority of the Judges. As regards the suggestion of Mr. McCallum, that has been already settled by the Convention. One thing is certain—if a man can prove his innocence he ought not to be confined in the State Prison. It is possible that there might be some exceptional cases where a new trial would be desirable, but I think in the most cases it would be better to leave it to the Judges of the Supreme Court.

MR. McCALLUM. Are you aware of any State where the Governor and Judges of the Supreme Court have this power?

MR. SHAFTER. In Delaware, I think it is so.

MR. McCONNELL. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Waters, Murphy, Howard of Los Angeles, and Hunter.

The main question was ordered, on a division, by a vote of 70 ayes to 40 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba, Mr. Belcher.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Casserly, Condon, Joyce, Grace, and Ohleyer.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

The amendment as amended was adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

Carried.

NOTICE.

MR. MCCALLUM. I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move a reconsideration of the vote by which the Convention adopted the article on pardoning power and ordered it to be engrossed and read a second time, for the purpose of amending said article so that the same shall embrace the following amendment:

"Insert after the word 'reprieve,' in line one, and before the word 'pardons,' in line two, as follows: 'And the Governor, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Attorney-General, or a major part of them, of whom the Governor shall be one, shall have power to grant.'"

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The next measure on the file is the report of the Committee of the Whole on the executive department. The Secretary will read the amendments in order as proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. AYERS. I rise to a point of order. These amendments do not seem to be printed.

THE PRESIDENT. The amended report is printed with the amendments in. The original section is not printed, but the amendments are all in.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In section three, strike out 'thirty' and insert 'twenty-five,' in line three."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In section eighteen, strike out 'fair' and insert 'correct,' in line three."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In section nineteen, add after 'Controller,' in line nine, 'Attorney-General and Surveyor-General;' and strike out, in lines sixteen and seventeen, 'it shall, by law, fix the compensation of the Attorney-General and the Surveyor-General, and.'"

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will not prevail. Now, sir, the office of Lieutenant-Governor is the second office of importance in this State. The Lieutenant-Governor is liable under many contingencies to be Governor. It is a position that ought to be sought after by the best men of the State, and yet you prevent the Legislature from giving him any more salary whatever, except an increased per diem for the month or two that the Legislature sits. It is a matter that ought to be left to the Legislature, but here you provide positively that he shall receive the same per diem as may be provided by law for the Speaker of the Assembly, to be allowed only during the session of the Legislature. I hope the amendment will not be concurred in.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be concurred in. A man who is in that position, if he gets to be Governor, will have the same salary as the Governor has, and while he does nothing, he should get no pay. I trust, that as a matter of economy, the matter will be left just as it was amended by the Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Will the Convention concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole?

The report of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in, on a division, by a vote of 78 ayes to 16 noes.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line sixteen, section nineteen, add after the word 'Constitution' the words, 'no salary shall be authorized by law for clerical service, in any office provided for in this article, exceeding eighteen hundred dollars per annum.'"

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line nine, section nineteen, add after the word 'Assembly' the words, 'to be allowed only during the session of the Legislature.'"

Concurred in.

MR. MCFARLAND. I have an amendment to section nineteen.

THE PRESIDENT. It is first in order to move separate sections. If none are offered, any portion of the report can be amended.

MR. MCFARLAND. I offer an amendment to section nineteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section nineteen by striking out the word 'three,' in line eleven, and inserting in lieu thereof the word 'four.'"

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: The object of that amendment is to give the Convention an opportunity to change their minds upon this matter, as they have done upon a great many others. The word "three" fixes the salary of all the State officers here, except the Governor, at three thousand dollars a year. This amendment proposes to make it four thousand dollars.

The amendment was lost.

MR. TINNIN. I desire to offer an amendment to section nineteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section nineteen, in line nineteen; after the word 'annum' insert the words, 'for each clerk employed.'"

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: As that reads now it might be construed that, for instance, the State Controller would be compelled to run his office for one thousand six hundred dollars per annum for clerk hire. It is open to that construction, and this is for the purpose of explaining it more fully.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section nineteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend line eighteen by striking out 'sixteen' and inserting 'eighteen.'"

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: It seem to me that for clerks, such as are required in the State offices, there should be no limit to less than one hundred and fifty dollars a month. Most of these men have families. At least men ought to be able to take these positions who do have families. Now, with a family, a man cannot live upon less than one hundred and fifty dollars per month, respectably. The Legislature should not be prohibited from giving at least one hundred and fifty dollars a month.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment in the interest of economy. [Laughter.] Now, sir, there are plenty of men that can be had for fifty dollars a month. One thousand six hundred dollars a year seems to me to be a very large sum. After you have cut down the salary of the Controller and all these officers to three thousand dollars, you propose now to allow the Controller, under the disguise of clerks, to run up the expenses of the office to enormous sums. You do not undertake to limit the number. The Legislature may allow them twenty clerks. They can go to work and hire clerks for seventy-five dollars a month, and make seventy-five dollars out of each man. [Laughter.] Why not fix it positively—say that they shall not have more than one or two, or one and a half, or somewhere along there? But to make the people understand that we are in the interest of economy, after cutting down the salary of a State officer to three thousand dollars you must not allow him to have clerks at one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

MR. LARKIN. I am satisfied that the gentleman is in favor of the amendment or else he would not have spoken against it.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: The gentleman, in Committee of the Whole, opposed this one thousand six hundred dollar salary. Now, he opposes an amendment to raise it, and has given no reason for this change of spirit. I think, perhaps, that he hopes by opposing it he may succeed in having the amendment adopted. I confess that I think that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba is just; that in the Constitution we ought not to fix a limit at less than one hundred and fifty dollars a month or one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will prevail, though I have not much hope that it will, knowing that certain members here never change their vote upon a principle unless instructed by their constituents. I therefore move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Yuba, Mr. Belcher.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section nineteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section nineteen by striking out the word 'six,' in line seven, and insert the word 'five.'"

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will prevail. As this matter was discussed considerably in Committee of the Whole, I now call for the ayes and noes on this amendment.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Keyes, Condon, Evey, and Mason.

The roll was called, and the amendment was rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I offer an additional section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 20. The Governor shall not, during his term of office, be eligible as a Senator of this State to the Senate of the United States."

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I would like to ask the gentleman by what authority the State fixes the qualifications of the Senators of the United States. I think it has been decided about forty times that we had no such right.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I do not know what General Howard has just been saying, but as I understand it, he claims that this would be fixing the qualifications of Senators of the United States, and that the State has no control over it.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. That is what I said, and it has been so repeatedly decided in the Senate of the United States.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: It has been suggested to me that I ought to have stricken out the words, "of this State," so that it will read, "the Governor shall not be eligible as a Senator to the Senate of the United States."

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the gentleman can correct his amendment.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. There can be no quorum voting on this amendment, because gentlemen who are candidates for Governor cannot vote, and we will have no quorum.

[Laughter.]

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: As the section stands I concede the full force of the argument that the State cannot do anything about it. The Senate of the United States decides upon the eligibility of its members; but we have a right to say in the Constitution that the Governor shall not be elected a United States Senator during his term of office, and to say the least, the Legislature that would do it would be guilty of moral perjury, having sworn to support the Constitution of the State. I move that as an amendment—I move to insert in place of "be eligible," the words "be elected."

MR. JONES. I accept the amendment. I will revise the section.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. That is subject to the same objection.

MR. McCALLUM. In answer to the remarks just made, I will ask the gentleman from Los Angeles, suppose it was worded in this way, that the Legislature shall not elect a Governor to the United States Senate during his term of office, if that would not be a mandatory provision in the Constitution preventing it?

MR. HOWARD. No, sir. It is a distinction between tweedle dum and tweedle dee. If the Constitution of the United States leaves it to the United States Senate, it is perfectly clear that the State cannot add to or take away from it. I admit that this is a vicious practice, but we cannot correct it in this way.

MR. TOWNSEND. I hope that the amendment will not be adopted. The State ought to be allowed to elect her best citizens to the Senate of the United States.

MR. ESTEE. I hope it will be adopted, because it is a declaration of State rights.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be adopted. It is well known that the most corrupting thing in State politics is the election of United States Senator, and it is ten fold more corrupting when the Governor aspires to that position. It has been the custom in the past by most everybody who has been elected to the office of Governor, to make it a stepping-stone to the United States Senate. Immediately upon accession to the gubernatorial chair, they have commenced laying the pipes and using all the influence of their executive station to secure the position of United States Senator. I understand the objections that are urged. But I understand that this will be placed in the Constitution, and will be a moral obligation to the members of the Legislature of the State of California, and I am satisfied that they will obey it.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Murphy, Dean, Dunlap, and Wyatt.

The main question was ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment as now proposed by the gentleman from Mariposa, Mr. Jones.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 20. The Governor shall not, during his term of office, be elected a Senator to the Senate of the United States."

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Jones, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Dudley, Keyes, Farrell, and Gorman.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question now is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

Carried.

CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next measure on the file is the report of the Committee of the Whole on corporations other than municipal. The Secretary will read the amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole in order.

THE SECRETARY read the amendments proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the first amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend the second clause of section one so as to read as follows: 'All laws now in force in this State concerning corporations, and all laws that may be hereafter passed pursuant to this section, may be altered from time to time, or repealed.'"

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section one, as amended by Committee of the Whole, by adding thereto as follows: 'But no vested rights shall be destroyed by the altering or repealing of such laws.'"

The amendment was rejected.

The amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole concurred in.

The Secretary read the amendments offered by Messrs. Webster and Terry, and adopted in Committee of the Whole as follows:

"Amend section three to read as follows: 'Sec. 3. Each stockholder of a corporation, or joint-stock association, shall be individually and personally liable for such proportion of all its debts and liabilities contracted or incurred during the time he was a stockholder, as the amount of stock or shares owned by him bears to the whole of the subscribed capital stock or shares of the corporation or association. The Directors or Trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation, or joint-stock association, during the term of office of such Director or Trustee.'"

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'and stockholders.'"

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: The original amendment reads as follows:

"SEC. 3. Each stockholder of a corporation, or joint-stock association, shall be individually and personally liable for such proportion of all its debts and liabilities contracted or incurred during the time he was a stockholder, as the amount of stock or shares owned by him bears to the whole of the subscribed capital stock or shares of the corporation or association. The Directors or Trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation or joint-stock association during the term of office of such Director or Trustee."

Now, I propose to amend it by striking out of the second clause the words "and stockholders," so that it will read: "The President or Trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors for all moneys." The reason of that is this, that so far as my experience goes, and I think it is the experience of all, the stockholders of corporations have usually done the combining; that, as a rule, the stockholders pool the stock and control the whole action of the corporation; that they always elect the officers or Directors, and that the Directors are their instruments, right under their control.

MR. TINNIN. What protection would a minority have?

MR. ESTEE. That is provided for in this article. There is a system of cumulative voting in electing the officers of a corporation. The object here is to protect the creditor, not the stockholder. There are savings banks with stockholders. There are savings banks organized under the statute, where there are stockholders and where there is stock. But there are some that are mutual institutions entirely, and it would not then apply. It would not apply to savings banks at all, except in those cases where they have stockholders. The great danger of savings banks has been in those institutions where they have stockholders and have reserve funds for the benefit of those stockholders, not in the mutual savings banks, but in those institutions where it is the interest of the stockholders to pay the stock a large amount from the income of other people's money that should be distributed to the depositors.

MR. DOWLING. Who should be the directors and stockholders of a corporation?

MR. ESTEE. A man should be director who gets the most votes, and a man stockholder who is a subscriber and pays in his stock.

MR. DOWLING. Who should be the directors and trustees of a corporation by right?

MR. ESTEE. Does my friend make a distinction between a trustee and a director? It is a different name for the same thing.

MR. DOWLING. If the stockholders are the directors or trustees, don't you think that it would place the institution on a safer basis?

MR. ESTEE. I would state that a man cannot be a director unless he is a stockholder. Then he is liable to himself for his stealing. He should be liable to the creditors. I will state here that in my judgment there is no reason, and I do not think there can be any good reason given for holding the agents of a corporation responsible to their principals for what they do. What we are interested in, and what the community is interested in, is to protect those who have not the means of knowing the ingoings and outcomings of that institution. It is the creditors of the institution that we should protect, and for that reason I propose this amendment. The Convention of course will do as it likes.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Is an amendment to Judge Terry's amendment now in order?

MR. PRESIDENT: It is not in order now.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I am opposed to striking out that word stockholders. I have always been of the opinion, and am yet, that the directors of a private corporation ought to be responsible for their employés, the men that they put into place. They have the control of the affairs, they appoint all the officers, they know all about them; they can inquire about them, and why should they not be responsible. Now, how is it in regard to our municipal corporations. An officer is elected to a position there, and he is held responsible for all his deputies and all their acts. If they embezzle the funds he is held responsible for them. In regard to the federal officers throughout the country they are responsible for all the officers appointed by them. Take our county officers in the city of San Francisco, they are all held responsible for the acts of their employés, and would be liable on their bonds. These directors can require bonds of their employés if they choose. These embezzlements are going on all the time. Now take the bank of California, take the French Bank, take the Duncan Pioneer Bank. If these officers who were put in there as Directors—as figure heads—were responsible for the men that were placed there these corporations would not have been swindled. The Cashier of the Bank of California had unlimited control of the funds and when he failed there was nothing left. The Cashier had taken it all. The Directors knew it; the managing men knew about it; their Executive Committee had the control. Take the case of the French Bank. Does any one suppose that if the Directors had been personally responsible that anything would have been abstracted from that bank. Now a man is not bound to be a Director of a corporation in an association, or a Director of a corporation. It is a voluntary act. If he takes the position knowing that he is responsible for the men employed there he will see that honest men go there, or else he will not take the place. I would not take it under the circumstances, perhaps, unless I had the control of the appointing power. If a man was put in there that I thought was not a responsible man, I would resign because I would not be placed in a position where I would be liable to suffer by his acts. I hope, therefore, that this proposition to strike out the word stockholders will not prevail. The Directors should be responsible for the malfeasance of the men that are placed there. If they were placed there against their wishes that would be another thing, but they are not.

MR. ESTEE. Under this amendment should they be placed there against their will would not the Director be responsible?

MR. HAGER. A Director would resign in that case. If an improper person is placed there, the minute that a Director finds that he is not a proper person, he could resign his position. He could retire and report to the stockholders that there is something wrong going on in that institution. I am satisfied that there should be something done with regard to these corporations, and the management of them. Take our mining affairs. Why, it is a disgrace to the civilization of the age. This is the rule in the Federal, State, and municipal governments, and if it is good in a municipal corporation, why should it not be in a private corporation. I would like my friend to answer the question. If the Treasurer in San Francisco is responsible for the men that he places there, why should not the Directors of a private corporation be responsible? Is there any good reason for it?

MR. ESTEE. That is not the effect of it. The people elect one man, and the law provides he shall give a bond. I want to ask the gentleman if this amendment stands as it is, will it not result in driving all good men out of the directorship of these institutions?

MR. HAGER. If you should break them up it would not do much harm.

MR. ESTEE. What will you do with your gas company?

MR. HAGER. If we cannot have good men, do not let us have any men. If the Treasurer of San Francisco is responsible, the State Treasurer is responsible, why should not these men be? The Treasurer necessarily employs assistants, but he is responsible and he must take care that his assistants indemnify him by some bond or otherwise. The Directors ought to take care that proper men are placed there. They have a right to demand security of any one they employ.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not prevail. That is one of the main pillars of this edifice. It is said in argument here that we are making stockholders responsible to themselves. Well, so we are to the amount of stock that a Director or Trustee may hold, but when it comes up they are generally found not to own any stock to speak of, so that the amount of responsibility that a stockholder will bear to himself amounts to very little. But, sir, the proposition is this: We desire to make Directors and Trustees responsible to the stockholders, because the stockholders are the very first class to be robbed by the management. We seek by this amendment to make them responsible to the creditors and stockholders alike. Perhaps there may be no creditors, and yet the corporation may be run into a condition of bankruptcy. Stockholders may be ruined. Hence I hope that the amendment will not prevail, and I am astonished that the gentleman who propose to make the Directors of the corporation liable to the creditors, are not likewise willing to make them liable to the stockholders. Why, the stockholders are the very first ones robbed. They are robbed first, last, and all the time. Creditors generally manage to take care of themselves. The first act of a mining corporation is to levy an assessment and then misappropriate the funds.

MR. ESTEE. Under our statute now a majority of the stockholders can remove a Director any time.

MR. REYNOLDS. Where is the protection of the minority? There is where all the skulduggery comes in. They levy an assessment, and they collect it of the minority stockholders, and the minority draw checks, that are not to be presented, in payment of their assessments. Why, sir, if you had the power to set on foot a committee of investigation, you could find one hundred millions of assessments stowed away in the offices of these companies in the City of San Francisco, of checks drawn by the majority of the stockholders, that have never been presented, and were never intended to be presented; and they go on collecting assessments of the other stockholders, nevertheless. It is them that we desire to protect. Mr. President, about these days stockholders are becoming troublesome in the City of San Francisco. They are wont to set on foot investigations, and within the last six months there has never been a time that there has not been three or four companies of dissatified stockholders holding unsuccessful meetings, and making unsuccessful inquiries and investigations into the affairs of the Directors; but at last they find, generally, that there is nobody responsible. The Directors hold ten or a dozen shares of stock, and the time is frittered away, and their rights are gone. It will do no harm to make them responsible. There is no argument here in opposition to this proposition to make them responsible. It is no argument to say that you are making them responsible to themselves to the extent of their stock. So they are, and they ought to be; but they ought to be responsible to all the others. We want the section just as it stands.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: It appears to me that the proposition to strike out of the section, as reported, these words, is nothing more nor less than a bold, glaring attempt to permit the continued robbery of the people by those who are intrusted with funds which are placed in their hands, and under their control. The whole object and intent of this section, although it refers to all corporations, is aimed at those who are in charge, in trust of the funds of the people, put in their hands for the purpose of honestly administering that trust. Now, sir, what are they? What are your depositors in the savings banks? They are stockholders receiving their dividends, and the gentleman says that they have power to step in and remove the Directors. When do they have that opportunity? Why, sir, it is after the bank fails. That is when they find it out. That is when they meet. That is when the investigation is made. It is a plain proposition of fraud on the face of it to say that two, or three, or five depositors of a savings bank are supposed to be seeing the proceedings of that institution, watching every day, and calling meetings to displace Directors. It never happens until after the fraud is consummated. It is said that these good kind capitalists, these prudent men, won't go into these institutions, and won't accept this position. If that is the logical conclusion, I say let them go and let them disappear from the face of the earth. This country won't suffer. If they cannot be honest and go into these positions, let them go. The money will then go where it ought to go, into the development of the country instead of being put out for interest. It will go into manufactories. If you cannot stick it into a savings bank, and if you cannot get these eminently respectable gentlemen to take this position and handle the funds of the people, they will find other investments, and they ought to do it. If this continual stealing is to go on, it is better that they should be wiped off the face of the earth, and that the government should establish for the people a place to deposit their earnings, secured by the credit of the Government. That is what I hope to see done yet, and if we carry this amendment it will probably be the conse-

LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question before the Convention is the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: With reference to the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, I am sorry that this amendment has been moved, and I hope it will not prevail. It will let all the milk out of the cocoanut. It is a well known fact that in the practical operation of corporations the stockholders taking stock elect a certain number of the stockholders as Directors. These form the inside ring of the corporation, and conduct its business. All the stockholders outside of that inside circle are perfectly ignorant of the actions of the managers. If the ring is disposed to deal unjustly, and squander the property, they ought to be held strictly accountable to the balance of the stockholders. Such an amendment as that would be fatal, and I hope it will not be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I agree with the gentleman entirely. Take the first part of this section, which says that the stockholders of a corporation or joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for their proportion of the indebtedness and liabilities—I don't see, in all reason, how there can be any objection to this. And then, as to the Directors being liable for the misappropriation of moneys, it appears to me it is just. It was certainly discussed at length before, and we thought it was just. We did not suppose it could be gotten up in any form so that some objection could not be urged against it. It seems to me it is correct as it is, and I am in favor of it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, O'Sullivan, Barton, Larkin, and Dean.

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

"Add to line five as follows, 'where such embezzlement or misappropriation shall occur through the direction, collusion, fault, or negligence of such Director or Trustee sought to be held liable.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCCONNELL.

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: It seems to me this is all the friends of the proposition should want. There cannot be any justice in any amendment that will hold the minority of a Board of Directors severally liable for the criminal acts of the majority. That amendment will place the blame and the responsibility where it justly belongs. I trust it may receive the favorable consideration of this body. If you do not adopt an amendment you will drive out every honest member of the Board of Directors.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: This Convention, in Committee of the Whole, fully considered this matter, and after deliberating three weeks upon it, adopted it. I have seen no amendment, and I hardly think there will be, that will improve this article. I believe it stands as well as it can be made. The amendment offered would qualify the effect of that section. That section, I think, is right as it is. If those gentlemen who are Directors of corporations will attend to their duties—if one member will examine into the books and deposits of corporations engaged in banking, they may protect the stockholders. Those men who simply allow their names to be used as Directors, and never attend to the duties, ought to be compelled to.

MR. McCONNELL. But you provide there for holding the minority directly responsible for the conduct of some one over whom they have no control, which will drive the best men out of the Board.

MR. LARKIN. That is the point I desire to state. Under that amendment there would be room, under one plea or another, to clear each and every Director of his responsibility. It is all right as it is. I don't think it can be any better. It will make the bank directors of this State responsible. If one half of the banks of this State were closed it would be better for the people, who are robbed and plundered when there is no responsibility attached to the Directors. Individuals engaged in banking are responsible, and corporations should be held responsible.

SPEECH OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: It might be quite possible that the people of this State would be better off if some of these corporations were wiped out. The gentleman from El Dorado seems to think it would be better if half the banks should go out of existence. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, seems to take similar grounds. Now, it is quite possible that the gentlemen are both right. But, sir, is it at all certain that the better half of these corporations will remain in existence under this section as reported by the Committee of the Whole? I am very strongly under the impression that the worst half will remain in existence. I feel very sure that a very large number of the better class of corporations will be wiped out of existence. Men will not become responsible, to the extent of their entire private fortunes, for the transactions of other men over whom they have no control, who have been placed in position without their consent, and even without their votes, and against their wishes and interests. They will retire from the management of these corporations. Now, the result will be that either the corporation will retire from doing business, or there will be substituted for men of responsibility men of straw. This is not at all unlikely. Designing men have sought that manner of doing business for the purpose of further gulling the public into thinking that they are doing a legitimate business. It is quite probable that the dime savings bank of Sacramento, and the Duncan institution of San Francisco, were institutions of that kind. If we can do anything to hold the party who commits the wrong directly responsible, why, of course, it ought to be done. That is one of the wrongs that ought to be remedied, but it is one of those wrongs that we ought to guard against without making the responsibility so broad as to crush out good corporations.

Now, I am under the impression that there are some good corporations in this State; that there are banking institutions of character and stability in this State, that are doing an immense amount of good; they are doing a legitimate business, and yet they all come under the same rule. Everybody knows there is no institution but what is liable to get within its office men who are unworthy and dishonest. This has been the case with some of the best institutions of the country, some of which have become bankrupt from that cause. Now, there is no good reason why the Directors should be made responsible, in all cases, for the employés of an institution. It is true, I believe, that the corporation is responsible to the extent of its entire property. The corporation is a person known to the law. Private individuals, doing business upon their own responsibility, are responsible for their own acts and for the acts of their employés. Now, the law has brought into existence these artificial persons for the purpose of doing business. The joint property of these artificial persons is held responsible for the mismanagement or misappropriation of moneys, and I see no reason why the responsibility should be extended any farther. I don't understand that it is possible for the law to stand sponsor between the private individual and all his bad investments. I understand that every individual can exercise his own judgment as to where and how he shall invest his funds. It is optional with the depositors of San Francisco whether they shall deposit with Duncan or not. They did so because he offered greater inducements than any other bank. I know, and every sane man ought to know, that no such institution can live. I believe the people should exercise their own judgment in this matter. If they do business with a private individual they take their chances, and I see no reason why they should not do the same thing in dealing with corporations. I have conversed with the people in the neighborhood where I live, and in that neighborhood there is a bank. There is a large agricultural country around there. It is a thriving institution, doing a safe business. I know the Directors are honest, responsible men. In a conversation with these gentlemen, they told me if this should remain in the Constitution they would be under the necessity of retiring from the institution. There is not one of them who would be willing to stand responsible for all the business done in the institution, when they were in the minority. I hope that the amendment will be adopted.

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: It is with some hesitation that I attempt to speak upon this amendment, for the reason that so many gentlemen of much larger experience are in favor of it. Now, sir, I think it would be better for these gentlemen who are in favor of this amendment to bring forward a proposition squarely to strike out this section, and then we can take the direct sense of this Convention as to whether the stockholder is without any remedy against the Directors or Trustees of a corporation for the misappropriation or embezzlement of the funds by the officers chosen by those Directors.

Now, if this section, as amended by Messrs. Terry and Webster, is adopted, it seems to me that three good results will follow: First, when the Directors are made directly responsible for the acts of the officers whom they choose, they will be exceedingly careful in the selection of those officers; the result will be that corporations will have a more reliable class of officers. Second, when they have chosen those officers, they will watch their acts with greater care, because they know that they themselves will be held responsible. Then, sir, when a savings bank or trust company has failed, instead of the Directors coming forward and saying they have not looked at the books for five years, supposing everything was all right, they will have to answer directly in Court for the loss of the money by reason of their negligence. Now, sir, the third beneficial result to flow from this is, that good and responsible men will not lend their names to be used as Directors of badly managed institutions. That, sir, has been one of the worst features in the management of corporations in this State. A few men, without money and without responsibility, organize a corporation, and borrow the names of certain men of character and standing in the community. The result is, that good and responsible men are induced to stand godfather to irresponsible corporations and associations, and the people, who do not understand such matters thoroughly, seeing these names of good and responsible business men attached, are induced to repose confidence in the corporations which they otherwise would not do. Now, with such a provision as this in the Constitution, no man of standing will allow his name to be used in that way, unless the scheme be a responsible one. Then the great business of this State, instead of being carried on by irresponsible corporations, would be done by private individuals and copartnerships. Then, sir, the men who take the profits would also take the risks. It is said that they ought not to be held responsible for the acts of employés. When a man employs a clerk or cashier, he takes the chances of losing money by his dishonesty.

Now, sir, it is claimed here that these Directors, being made responsible in this manner, will not act as Trustees and Directors. I believe that is the strongest argument in favor of the section reported by the Committee of the Whole. If men are connected with an institution which they know is responsible and under good management, with good officers in charge, they will not be afraid to stand in with it. And when it becomes apparent that the management is bad, they will get out of it. So the result will be that we will have responsible corporations managed by responsible men. Now, this amendment proposed is a delusion and a snare. The author is not a lawyer, but if the most talented lawyer on the floor had drawn it, it could not have been more skillfully done. Now, it says that they shall be held responsible when such misappropriation occurs through the fault, negligence, or direction of the Trustee sought to be held liable. Then what? Whenever a stockholder sues the Trustees, he has got to prove what? He has got to prove that the loss occurred through the negligence or direction, or through fraud on the part of the Director, or through his direction. How is he to prove it? How is he to know who did it? No, sir, it will not do. If the President of the bank stole the money, could he prove that the Trustees directed him to steal it? Gentlemen want to cut the head off, and leave us the shadow without the substance. It will never do, sir.

SPEECH OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I do not think I misrepresent the opinions and wishes of these gentlemen who are opposing this amendment when I say that this is intended to destroy corporations in this State. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, says if this provision is allowed to stand as it is, that it will probably secure the result of transferring all corporate institutions over to the government, for the simple reason, I presume, that these provisions will destroy all corporate life. The argument just closed amounts to the same thing. If that is the desire, let them come squarely out and say, we will have no corporations.

MR. BARBOUR. I did not make use of any such expression. I said if that should prove to be the fact. But there is no danger but what they will hang on to it.

MR. SHAFTER. I understand that is the effect. A man is presumed to intend to do just what the natural effect of his act is. Now, I attempted to argue in the Committee of the Whole that a man ought to be responsible for his own individual misconduct, but nothing beyond that. The gentleman from Nevada says that a man cannot prove this negligence. If I am walking along on the street, and a man comes along driving an unbroken horse, and runs over me, I sue him for negligence, and prove it. You can prove it from the records, and in various ways. I am for treating these Directors the same as I would treat anybody else. I am not going to try them by a different rule from that which I judge the rest of mankind, simply because they occupy these positions. Sometimes illustration is better than argument. Here is a package of money comes into the bank, into the hands of the teller, who is perfectly competent for the place—has had years of experience. He takes it and passes it back upon the desk, and turns to the business at the counter. Another clerk, whose business is in another department, comes along and slips it under his coat, and in an hour he is off with it. This is an instance which occurred. Now, this teller had been in the bank for years, and was considered perfectly trustworthy, and nobody questioned his honesty. Now, you propose to say that the Directors of the bank shall be responsible for the loss under just such circumstances. The Directors have no business in the bank. They have no business there, and ought to be driven out if they go there. The Directors have no power at all, except the power which the stockholders give them. If they give authority to the Directors to compel the employés to give bonds, they can adopt such regulations as they please. The Directors exercise their judgment to the best advantage in selecting these employés. If the drayman, hauling a lot of bullion on the dray, drops one off to a confederate, the Directors are responsible for that. Make the corporation liable to the depositor—that is all right—no matter how it is lost. The corporation must pay the depositor. But why should the Directors, who are hired by the corporation, be made responsible to the corporation, or to the stockholders, when they have done everything which the stockholders required them to do? I hope, if the section is to be allowed to stand, that it will be got into something that looks like business and common sense.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: The section now under consideration involves a proposition, which, in my humble judgment, is the most absurd that has been presented to this Convention, and that is saying a good deal. It is the cap-sheaf of folly. Independent of the serious consequences that would follow its adoption, it will make us the laughing-stock of the nation. An instance of the practical result of this section will illustrate how little it is based upon reason or good sense. We will suppose a case in which the officers of a bank shall embezzle half its capital. The loss would be directly a loss to the bank—the corporation. Yet this section gives no right of action to the bank for its lost capital, but only an action to the stockholders. It is a sound principle of all our statutes on the subject of corporations, that no dividend shall be made to stockholders out of the capital, but only out of the surplus profits. This section violates that sound principle and practically gives the stockholders a dividend out of the capital. Such a loss would be a direct loss to the corporation, and in it alone should be vested the cause of action; otherwise there is an unpardonable confusion of the corporation with the stockholders, the right of each being entirely separate and not to be confounded. If the corporation were in such case to retain the cause of action as at present, then on a recovery of the loss the capital would be restored and the creditors could look to it as a fund for the payment of their debts, and the stockholders be incidentally benefited. Their stock would be increased in value and the chances of dividends be advanced. But to allow the stockholders to recover and divide the stolen capital, is not only to allow a dividend to be made out of the capital before the payment of debts, but it takes away a cause of action from the corporation to which it rightfully belongs, and makes it proceed in its business, if indeed it can, with an impaired capital; and diverts from the creditors a fund on which they have a claim and lien paramount to that of the stockholder. Could anything be more irrational?

When the section was under consideration, which imposed new and extraordinary liabilities upon the Directors of corporations, it was urged upon the one side that no Director should be liable for any loss in which he was guilty of no neglect, fraud, embezzlement, or other wrong. Some urged, in reply, that no matter how the loss should arise the Directors should be responsible, and should make it good, because corporations are often badly managed. The gentleman from El Dorado was very clear in his views, and made a forcible argument on the subject of the responsibility of Directors who should be guilty of fraud or negligence. No one here has contended the contrary. All have agreed that every Director should be held responsible for any loss occurring through his fraud, complicity, or neglect. The only difference has been on the subject of holding men who shall be innocent of any wrong, and innocent of any neglect, responsible for the wrongs and crimes of others. The gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross, wants the members to go upon the record on these questions. For one, I am perfectly satisfied to have it go plainly upon the record that I am unreservedly opposed to holding a man responsible for any loss concerning which he has been free from guilt and free from all complicity or negligence. The latter gentleman insists that no money could be stolen from these institutions without the fault of the Directors. The very instance given by the gentleman from Marin County shows that this is not true. An officer of a bank in the very midst of the business with which he is necessarily intrusted, and in business hours, in open bank, might steal money, and the Directors might be entirely free from any guilt or any neglect. Such a case might easily occur, in which no one could be blamed in the nicest scale of morality except the thief himself. But it is said that in such a case the bank itself would be responsible to the third person, who might thus be injured by such a theft committed by such an officer. Upon this basis it is said that if the innocent corporation is liable for the loss occasioned by the theft, or other wrong of its officer, why should not our innocent Director be liable for the act of a fraudulent officer? Such a mode of reason results from simple confusion of dissimilar things. A corporation is always responsible to its creditors, and a loss of its assets by a wrongful act of its officer does not discharge the debt of the creditor. The relation which the bank sustains to its customers is one resulting from contract. Such contract liability remains until satisfied in some ordinary legal manner.

To hold the Directors of a corporation responsible for the act of an officer, when the Directors are entirely free from fault or negligence, is like holding a foreman of a mine responsible for the independent acts of the men under him. The corporation might be responsible for such acts; but on what principle could we hold the innocent foreman liable? The owner of a ship may be liable in a case where there would be no wrong done by the master. If a sailor should rob a package of merchandise, why should an innocent master make good the loss? That is too absurd to be advocated, yet it involves the precise proposition embraced in the section now before this body. It is characterized by neither fairness, justice, nor common sense.

SPEECH OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: The appointment of officers of a corporation will depend on the Acts of the Legislature, and the by-laws they may make in pursuance thereof. Now, no matter how they may provide for the appointment or election of officers, no matter what by-laws they may make—that is to say, as to whether they shall be appointed by the Directors or by the corporation at large—in either case the Directors are responsible for those officers. For instance, the by-laws provide that the officers of the corporation shall be elected by the corporators. Then, under this provision, the Directors would be responsible for the acts of the officers; responsible to the corporators for the acts of the officers which they themselves had appointed or elected—responsible for the acts of agents in whose selection they had no part.

MR. CROSS. Does the gentleman not know that under the present law the Directors must appoint the officers?

MR. REDDY. That is a mere statutory provision which the very next Legislature may change. Now, do you propose to make the Directors responsible for the acts of officers in whose appointment they have not a word to say, and over whose actions they have no control whatever? They cannot remove or discharge them, and yet they must be held responsible for their conduct. There is a disposition shown here by members to go away beyond everything that is sanctioned by reason or sense. It is overturning all the well settled rules of law. You are making men responsible for the acts of an agent he can neither hire nor discharge. Suppose you have a mining corporation and a Board of Directors. The corporation, at the same time they elect the Directors, elect a Superintendent. The Superintendent runs away and defrauds the company; does any sane man pretend to say that it would be just to hold the Directors responsible for the loss, when they had no voice in his election?

MR. HEISKELL. If the Directors accepted the position knowing that this provision existed, and accepted the responsibility, I would answer yes to your question.

MR. REDDY. No sane man, who is financially responsible, would accept the position. Now if you are aiming to destroy all corporations, that is another question. The difference seems to be between regulation and destruction. One party wants to destroy, and another party is willing to make reasonable regulations. There is a wide difference between regulating and destroying, which some gentlemen do not seem to understand, or else they don't want to understand for their own convenience. Now, I do not propose to argue this question any further, but I will merely say this: Make your rules just as stringent as you please; adopt any rule that aims at the punishment of guilty parties, either of negligence or fraud; but do not put in any clause that will punish the innocent alike with the guilty. That is not statesmanlike. It is not just or reasonable. It certainly cannot result in any good. Do not make a man responsible for the acts of another.

MR. REYNOLDS. Did you ever hear of a man becoming responsible for another on his bond?

MR. WILSON, of First District. Without being sorry for it? [Laughter.]

MR. REDDY. Yes, sir; but there is no rule of law which compels him to be responsible.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to have the gentleman explain where there is any essential difference.

MR. REDDY. In the one case a man may be compelled to enter into a corporation for the purpose of protecting his own interest. I have only to say this in addition, that this is certainly a very good measure to destroy all corporations, and should be headed to that effect.

SPEECH OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I am surprised at the efforts being made here to overturn the decision of the Committee of the Whole, and, sir, I seriously hope the section will be allowed to stand as passed by the Committee of the Whole. I believe among the good things passed by the Committee of the Whole, this section is one of the best; and, sir, I further believe that no action upon the part of this Convention assembled here, has received so hearty a response, such unanimous approval as this, among the people of this State, as expressed through the interior press. Now, sir, it seems to me that the responsibility provided for here is more than just. If I borrow your money and my clerk steals it, are you going to exempt me from responsibility. No, sir. Some great calamity happens to the property, and destroys your money, are you still going to hold me responsible? The thief comes along in the night and takes that money, are you going to make me responsible for that money? This would work a very great hardship on me, and yet, sir, it is the law of the land, and against that law I have never heard any complaint. Now, sir, I say if corporations cannot be made equally responsible with private individuals without destroying them, let corporations be wiped out of existence. Apply the same rules as you would to individuals. I believe in equality before the law. I believe one individual ought to be placed exactly on the same footing before the law as another. If corporations cannot exist upon this footing, let them go down. But I say they will exist. If Directors assume the responsibility which they know is attached to these positions, then they should be held responsible.

MR. ESTEE. Is there any such thing as insuring, except through corporations.

MR. FILCHER. Yes, sir. But I am not for destroying corporations, and I do not hold with those who say that this provision will wipe them out.

MR. ESTEE. Without this amendment, would not an insurance company of San Francisco—would not the Directors of it—be responsible for the errors of all the traveling agents?

MR. FILCHER. Yes, sir. If Mr. Estee establishes a business in San Francisco, and sends an agent to Nevada City, he is responsible for the acts of that agent.

MR. ESTEE. That is a different thing.

MR. FILCHER. Why should not the Director be responsible? I fail to understand. I repeat, sir, there is no difference. If we cannot place corporations on the same footing before the law, let them go down.

SPEECH OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: This Convention was called together to represent all classes of constituents, all interests, and all kinds of property in the State. It was intended to be fair, equal, and impartial. It was based upon the doctrine that the wants of the entire community were to be represented. In utter contravention of that principle, the whole course of policy in reference to corporations is aggressive. The section here is a direct blow at capital. That is what it aims at. That corporations will be destroyed if this principle is carried out there can be no doubt. Of all the propositions that have come before this body, without exception, this is the most radical and wrong. There is none that so utterly ignores the interests of the people, and so thoroughly disregards the claims of capital in all its forms. Sir, if this should be passed you will extinguish corporations. They connect themselves with every description of transactions in the commercial world, and yet, sir, they are sought to be involved by the principle here involved. No men in their right senses will consent to be managers of an institution where they are personally liable, without their own default, without error of omission or commission, where the innocent are to be punished for the sins of the guilty. That is the doctrine here involved—that the innocent are punished for the crimes of the guilty.

As was remarked by the gentleman from San Francisco, there are certain kinds of business that can only be carried on by corporations, and, sir, men will not take hold of these institutions if they are made responsible in this form and to this extent. What then? They will degenerate and pass into the hands of irresponsible men, and the institutions themselves, if not abandoned by the better order of people, would fall into discredit, and finally into disuse. That is the result of this sweeping, monstrous, doctrine. It strikes at the very roots of the tree of public prosperity. It aims its deadly efforts at the very foundation of affairs. It subverts, bankrupts, and brings them down upon the heads of the very men who are doing this thing. I hope men will not allow themselves to run against their own interests as well as the interests of the State. If they will consider this question they will see that the middle course is the best and safest. There is a middle line which runs through, and to go upon one side is to tolerate abuses which now exist, and upon the other to destroy instead of correcting. Let us consider this thing calmly, and without passion. Come and let us reason together. Let us have something that is equal and just. If there are abuses they ought to be corrected, but this can be done without destroying them.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: Society totters upon its very foundation, and the sky is portentious. Bloody and fearful spectres float around the air. The signs of the times portend the destruction of society, of law, of order, and of the world. What can we do, sir? What is the cause of all this threatened devastation and destruction? The ghost of Banquo stalks through these halls, and will not down. Look at it, sir, and weep. These Directors have been held up as figureheads to induce the hard-working sons of toil to go to these institutions and deposit their earnings; and now, because we propose to infuse a little life into these figureheads, a little responsibility, we are denounced as trying to destroy them. That's all. That is all there is in the proposition here that is shaking the foundation of society, and running the ship of State upon the rocks. The like of it never was heard of, and has no parallel anywhere. Let us reason together. What is the hardship they talk about? Where is the wrong? They beseech us to restore and preserve the present condition of things. What is the present condition of things? Why, the door to fraud has been left wide open, and people have had no redress against the bold robberies of the men who have managed these institutions. It may work a hardship in some individual cases. Not a law is ever passed and enforced that does not, in some instances, work a hardship. But we have heard nothing new on this proposition. Not a single new argument has been advanced. Not a single new reason has been given here. It is a rehash of the old wail which for weeks went up in Committee of the Whole. The same old argument of the innocent Director; that is what we have had rehashed time and time again. Why, they are all innocent. The Directors of Duncan's bank, and all those institutions that have failed, are innocent. Why? Because you cannot fix the responsibility upon them. You never can. The question is here, are gentlemen willing to give the people some protection? That is the question. If these Directors do not want to take this responsibility they can resign. They can take their money and go into something else. They are not compelled to take these positions. All we are requiring of them is that they shall be responsible for the faithful discharge of the trust which they have undertaken. That is all it amounts to.

REMARKS OF MR. REED.

MR. REED. Mr. President: I am opposed to this section. I believe it is a vicious provision. I did not vote for it in the Committee of the Whole, and I do not propose to vote for it now. I think the tendency will be to cripple a great many banks. It is well known to all gentlemen living in the country that farmers, as a class, are large borrowers, and require additional banking facilities for securing money. The tendency of this provision is to drive men from the position of Trustees and Directors.. I do not really believe that any sound business man would accept such a position. I do not believe that a single man in this Convention, if he is a man of money, would accept such a position under this section. I would not look upon him as a sound business man if he did. This will have a tendency, of course, to cripple these institutions. It is impossible for the farmers to go to San Francisco to obtain money. I know one of the largest farmers in this State went to San Francisco last month, with two hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of property, on which to borrow forty thousand dollars, and could not get it. They do not want to take property in the interior as security. I shall certainly oppose the section.

SPEECH OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: When this subject was up for discussion in the Committee of the Whole, there was something said with reference to these banking institutions that should have been borne in mind by these gentlemen who are now so anxious to perpetuate these evils on the community. They ought to have learned, by this time, that it was by the sufferance of law that these combinations of capital were allowed to be made, with limited liability. This is a prerogative which they enjoy exclusively. They are responsible only to the amount of money which they put in there. For this reason poor people, who trust them with their savings, have been swindled and robbed, and there is no redress—nobody responsible.

MR. SCHELL. Does the gentleman know where poor people have ever lost a cent by these institutions, except in the City of San Francisco?

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, sir; all over the State of California. Right here, in the City of Sacramento, two banks have gone down with every cent in the vaults. The cause of all this is the lack of responsibility, and that alone. These corporations have been working under special privileges, and have thus been able to monopolize the business of the country. Private individuals and partnerships cannot compete with them, because they are liable to the last extremity. There will scarcely be a sound institution upon this coast, if business is allowed to run along the way it has been running. That is the kind of business we desire to stop. It is all caused by a want of business responsibility. Gentlemen say we must not take away their rights in relation to a limited responsibility. They forget that it is not a right, but only a privilege. What right have you to run your bank, except as a private individual, except as the law gives you the right? It is nothing but a swindle, permitted by the law. It is a legal fraud to allow the bank owners to be responsible only to the amount they put into the concern. This is the system which we desire to check. It is against this special privilege we are entering our protest. It is against this system of wholesale wildcat banking, which runs through the whole long list of corporations in this State, that we are waging war. We say that the men who have the management of these institutions shall stand as security, not alone to the depositors, but to the stockholders, whose eyes are closed after the election is over. We ask that the Directors shall be responsible to duty, so that they cannot be frozen out, as they have been so often; so that the money cannot be diverted to the construction of planing mills, to the construction of railroads, and other things outside of the business of the institution.

MR. ESTEE. I believe you have a local railroad company in your county?

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, sir.

MR. ESTEE. A good, honest company, composed of good, honest citizens?

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, sir.

MR. ESTEE. Would it be fair to hold the Directors responsible for the dereliction of those who act in the capacity of officers?

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, sir; it would be fair.

MR. ESTEE. All right; that is all.

MR. HERRINGTON. If the Directors appointed them they ought to be responsible for them. They elected me to that position.

MR. HAGER. If they knew they were responsible for your acts, would they not resign?

MR. HERRINGTON. No, sir; they know me better than my constituents who sent me here. (Laughter.)

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I believe this section was adopted by a very few votes. I voted against it then, and I shall vote against it now. It seems that a raid is to be made upon the country banks, because a few banks in the City of San Francisco have failed. The gentlemen from San Francisco have been very profuse in their denunciation of thieving institutions, when the thieving has mostly been done in their own city. Now, in the country, it is well known by every farmer on this floor the banks are in a sound and healthy condition. They are the only medium through which we can get money in the country, because capitalists from San Francisco do not like to loan money on country property. Therefore, I would like to have Sonoma County exempted from this clause. But it seems this is to stretch all over the State because there has been swindling in San Francisco.

SPEECH OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I expressed my opinion before on this proposition, and what I have to say now will be very brief. I cannot see any harm at all in this proposition. It is the most harmless thing I ever saw. There is nothing in it to injure any one. All it demands is that the stockholders of a corporation are responsible for the indebtedness of the company; that the Directors or Trustees are responsible for the embezzlement of the officers that they elect themselves. I am sorry that men can't go upon such a proposition as that. It is worth forty millions to the people of the State of California to have this inserted in the Constitution, because hereafter it will prevent such banks as Duncan's. There would never have been such losses to the people if there had been such a clause as this in the Constitution. It is not a new thing. They have it in England.

MR. ESTEE. No, sir. They have banks there with limited liability.

MR. DOWLING. That is a limited liability Act. A man knows what the responsibility is before he goes into it. And, sir, if a man understands what he is doing all the time he will never do wrong. I will vote for the proposition, because it is a good scheme.

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I don't wish to make a speech, but simply to enter my protest against the adoption of the section. The effect will be to crush out every country bank in the State. I don't think the people of this State sent me here for any such purpose. If this section is adopted every man of means connected with a country bank will resign at once. Business men will not accept these positions, because, in order to protect themselves, they would have to exercise a personal supervision over the bank, and this they could not afford to do unless they are paid a salary. The country banks would have to close their doors, for the reason that they cannot afford to pay them salaries.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I wish to say, sir, that since this section was adopted I have taken considerable pains to know what the opinion of the banks were in our section. I understand that not a single Director of that county will resign. They are perfectly satisfied. They are honest in the administration of their affairs. I therefore think this will have no weight. Not one man in a thousand will resign. It will make them look out for the bank. They will not stand by and see the funds stolen, and then make the lame excuse that they knew nothing about it, and then sneak out and allow these poor people to suffer. They will not resign, but they will be ten times more watchful.

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I am in favor of this section as it stands. I am in favor of it because I look with suspicion upon the banking institutions of the State, and this is verified by my past experience and knowledge of the banks of San Francisco. We want something that will compel them to do a legitimate business, and no man need fear that his business will be injured, if he is doing a legitimate honest business. Honest men do not shun responsibility. It cannot effect men who are doing a legitimate business. Poor men and women, when they go and deposit their savings, will have an assurance that when they go there they will get their money with interest. Now, if they put it in they don't know whether they will ever see it again or not. If we don't put the screws upon these swindling institutions the country never will prosper.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I was absent when this matter was considered before. I am decidedly opposed to it. I am in sympathy with the bank depositors, though my own bank account is on the wrong side of the book. Your Legislature has appointed a Bank Commission, who are traveling over the State examining the banks of the State. You may safely leave the matter where it is, and with the Bank Commissioners there is no danger of your banks. I presume these gentlemen who are talking so much, the banks have lost more money by them than they have ever lost by the banks.

MR. HEISKELL. Is there not a large banking institution in this State defying the Bank Commissioners at this time?

MR. BIGGS. I understand so, but I presume that the Commissioners will go and do their duty. I know these men, and there is no back down to them. Now, I ask these gentlemen what in the name of heaven do they want to put this clause in the Constitution for, shooting at the banks of the country. The gentleman says he talked with Directors, and they do not oppose it. I do not think he ever found one in favor of it. I have talked with a Director upon this floor, and he tells me he will resign as soon as this is adopted. I do not want to be held accountable for what other men do. Now, I ask you not to cripple the institutions of the country. I do not believe San Francisco is out of the State yet, and I do not desire to see her institutions crippled.

REMARKS OF MR. BARTON.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: If it is desired that this country shall be overrun by such men as Max Marcuse, and Jo. Davis, and Duncan, and other thieves of that ilk, it is proper and right that you should adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento. It is argued that if an an employé in a bank should steal the money the Directors should not be responsible. That is not the issue. The issue is just exactly in these two words. We propose to provide against the embezzlement and misappropriation of our funds, and the subject of stealing is not mentioned at all. But the bankers and the friends of bankers, go off upon that theory in order to distract attention from the real live issues involved in this proposition. I do not wish to detain the Convention, but I do want to make an appeal to the friends of the people on this floor to stand by their guns, and incorporate this section into the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope the section will be adopted just as it came from the Committee of the Whole, without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t." Major Biggs says that if this section is adopted the bank owners and bank directors will be obliged to resign and leave the State.

Digitized by Google

MR. BIGGS. I said no such thing. I said one Director told me so.

MR. WYATT. Now, sir, when we were discussing the railroad problem we were told that we would ruin Stanford and the railroads if we did thus and so, and that we were doing a great injustice to a large portion of the community. And then when we came to regulate land monopoly another set of gentlemen set up a cry about the wrongs to the poor land monopolists, and they said, gentlemen, the possessions of these men must not be touched. If they have stolen in the past their stealing has been crystallized into law. If none of these are evils, then what have the people been complaining about. We have been here one hundred and twenty-four days trying to find some evil that ought to be corrected, and when we attempt to do so we find that instead of being evils these things are really blessings in disguise, and must not be touched. In the name of reason what are we here for. I hope the Convention will stand by the section.

REMARKS OF MR. LEWIS.

MR. LEWIS. Mr. President: I wish to enter my solemn protest against the section as it now stands, in the name of the people of the county which I represent. I admit that Judge Terry is the author of this section. But it is utterly repudiated by the people of San Joaquin County as far as I have been able to learn. It will be the means of ruining a large number of farmers. That is all that is necessary for me to say.

REMARKS OF MR. THOMPSON.

MR. THOMPSON. Mr. President: I had made up my mind not to say any thing on this question. But since there has been so much said on both sides by learned gentlemen here, I cannot refrain from making a few brief remarks in my humble way. According to my view this is a most iniquituous proposition, as it will cripple all the business interests of this great and glorious State. My theory is and always has been since my advent into this State, that we should hold out all the inducements possible for the encouragement of capital, in order that what we have will remain here, and millions more will come, in order to develop the resources and industries of the State, so that the hum of the mill and the sound of the hammer shall resound through the length and breadth of our beloved State. If this section should be passed as it is, in my humble judgment no intelligent business man would take either stock or directorship in a bank or other corporate body in this State. I for one believe that corporations are necessary; and I believe in restricting them to the fullest extent, and if the law is not strict enough let future legislation make it more so. Let them punish neglect of duty, or fraud, as a felony, with imprisonment, but I do not believe that it is the duty of this Convention to cripple and destroy them. I cannot conceive how any Workingman in this Convention can vote to sustain any such infamous proposition.

REMARKS OF MR. STEELE.

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: I did not vote for that proposition in Committee of the Whole, and I do not intend to vote for it now, because I believe it is wrong in principle, and will be vicious in practice if adopted. It seeks, sir, to make one individual responsible for the misdeeds of another over whom he has no control. I do not subscribe to any such doctrine. I believe an official should be required to discharge his duties rightly. If they discharge their duties honestly and effectually, that ought to be all that is required of them; but to require them to be responsible for the misconduct of others, is not founded on any principle of justice or rule of law. If this proposition is adopted it will be a very great detriment to the business interests of the country.

MR. LINDOW. I don't want to take any time of the Convention. I move the previous question, and vote for the section as it is.

THE PRESIDENT. That will cut off every amendment and every section. It goes to every amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. INMAN.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I believe this is an outrageous proposition. If these gentleman who have lost so much money in the savings banks had taken their money and put it into land, there would have been less trouble about land grabbing, and less trouble about the savings banks of San Francisco robbing them. I do hope that gentlemen will consider this amendment; it will drive out all responsible men and leave men of straw in their places. I am a Director, and I would resign to-morrow if this should pass. I would not involve my little property to benefit others if I could get out of it. It is a mutual association, with fifteen hundred stockholders who pay me nothing. I would not hold a position where I would have to be made responsible for the misdeeds of others. I can see no good in this proposition. It will drive out all responsible men and leave irresponsible men, men of straw in their places. You cannot get along without capital; you must have aggregated capital. Our great trouble is to get money; we must have that money from the banks. It will drive out these moneyed men from business. Let these men take their money and go into the country and buy homes.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: The people of this State have long felt the necessity of some protection of the character of that which is sought to be attained by this provision. It is a notorious fact that nearly every banking institution in this State has a set of officers and directors, who are paraded and advertised as men of responsibility. But when misfortune comes, when collapse comes, these men are not responsible. The depositors have to suffer the loss. Now it is no more than just, it seems to me, that the depositors should be protected as far as misappropriation and embezzlement by the officers of the bank is concerned. In some respects this proposition is stronger and more effectual than the one I offered, but I am willing to accept it as it is. If it will lessen the number of corporations in this State, why I guess we can stand it. It may weed out a class that give us only trouble, and leave us the responsible institutions, which need have no fear of this provision. It is time that the people ought to be protected, and that is what is sought to be accomplished by this amendment. I think that public policy requires that we should adopt this amendment. It will have the effect of restoring confidence in these institutions which are honestly managed. A man does not know, when he puts his money in a bank, whether he will ever see it again or not. Such a provision as this will make the strong institutions all the stronger, and restore public confidence.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I believe, sir, in holding guilty parties strictly to account. I believe also in protecting the innocent. Sir, there is a question in my mind not yet answered, in connection with the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento. It provides that when such embezzlement and misappropriation shall occur through the dereliction, collusion, or fault of such Directors, that then they shall be held responsible. Now, will some gentleman, learned in the law, tell me upon whom the burden of proof will fall, as to whether there has been negligence or fault upon the part of the Directors. Is it to be the word of the Directors against the word of the majority, who have perpetrated the fraud, or is there to be some method by which he must at the time make a record that shall be susceptible of proof, that he has entered his protest against such work? There ought to be something, in my judgment, whereby a Director or Trustee, knowing that a misappropriation is anticipated, and that there is to be a misdirection of the funds, can point his finger to the record and say, there is where I entered my protest; and thus the burden of proof, if it fall upon the innocent man, will be sufficient to clear him. But I want to know where are your proofs? Upon whom does the burden fall?

MR. CROSS. The amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento throws the entire burden of proof upon the stockholders.

MR. BLACKMER. There ought to be an amendment to the amendment covering that point. I was on the point of offering it, but I ascertained that I was out of order. I think there ought to be something of the kind, whereby a protest entered in writing, or in the proceedings of the Board, will be taken as sufficient evidence of the innocence of such Director or Trustee.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Don't you know that the process of Court can take all the books and records into Court to show whose fault it is?

MR. BLACKMER. There might not be any records. Now, I am in favor of the idea of this amendment, but I want it framed in such a way that the effect of the section will not be frittered away. It is said this will be the subject for legislative enactment, that the details will be provided by the Legislature. It seems to me that this part of the details ought to be provided for here. I believe there ought to be an amendment to that amendment, but I do not know how to do it under the rules.

SPEECH OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I am opposed to this amendment. I believe it to be wholly and radically wrong. I believed so when it was up before, I believe so now. I believe there is no good in it, and it can do no good by any possibility. Now, I hear gentlemen talking about popular interest in this measure. What the popular opinion may be as far as the gentlemen have ascertained, I do not know, but I have talked with several gentlemen of intelligence since this was adopted, and I have heard but one expression, and that is complete condemnation. I have heard more than one able man say that if adopted it ought to defeat the Constitution. I do not know what their information may be, but as far as I have heard there has been a unanimous expression against the adoption of this provision in the Constitution. That expresses my opinion of it. I believe it will injure this Constitution. I believe it will furnish just cause for men, if they are looking to the best interests of this State, to vote against it. Gentlemen have been talking exclusively about banks. Why, sir, the banks form but a small part of the corporations we have in this State. They are not confined to banks. It takes all corporations—manufacturing, mining—all corporations doing business in this State. It provides that the Directors shall not only be responsible for their own actions, but that they shall also be responsible for the shortcomings of all their subordinates appointed by themselves, as well as for those appointed by the stockholders, and who are entirely beyond their control. I say it is not just, it is not right. The effect will be, must be, that the men who are made responsible to such an extent will sever their connection with these institutions at once. We do not want the corporations of this State driven out. We want corporations for many purposes. The gentleman from Nevada wants corporations to develop mining claims. Corporations have done well in this State. They have built up the manufacturing interests of this State, and are building them up still further. The farmers need them. They unite the farming and manufacturing interests. They build large warehouses for their wheat. You have corporations among the farmers for this purpose. Having formed your corporation, you must elect your Directors, and when you have chosen your Directors you must select somebody to take charge of your warehouse and the wheat in it. Now, you say, if he, or anybody misappropriated the money of that corporation, the Directors shall be jointly and severally liable for the loss. Where is the farmer who would be a trustee in an institution like that. Take the Farmers Bank of San Francisco—would they ever have organized a bank for the benefit of the farmers of this State. One of the Directors I believe is a member of this body. They are farmers scattered around the State. They are not in the bank managing its affairs. Other persons are selected to conduct the bank by the stockholders themselves. They know what men are going to be selected when they select the Directors. When the election occurred a few days ago, men were elected Directors with the understanding that they were to vote for the men who are at present managing the institution, and they did vote for them. Now, if Mr. Colby, the President of that bank, is to be held responsible for the shortcomings of everybody else, is he going to remain in that position? If Mr. McConnell is to be held personally responsible for the shortcomings of Mr. Colby, is he going to occupy that position. No, sir; he could not afford to take that position. He will refuse, because it is a business that may ruin him. We expect them to be honest. We want to get honest Directors and honest employés, but now and then a man who is supposed to be honest betrays his trust. Sometimes they become involved in stock transactions and are led away, and thinking to replace it, take money from the safe. Now, sir, I did not rise to make a speech. I am willing to go upon the record as opposed to this section. I hope somebody will call for the ayes and noes when we reach a vote.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Mr. President: I am for the section as it stands. When I first came to this country there were no corporations, but the business was conducted by plain, simple, honest men. We knew who we were dealing with. But then come these corporations, among which was this Sierra Flume and Lumber Company. They swept the country of some eighty thousand acres of the finest timber in this State. They closed out all the little mills. They got all kinds of men to take stock in the concern, and they were going to carry on business with a high hand. Well, they got in debt to our people. There were seven or eight hundred men working there for nine months without a cent. These were the Directors that were doing this. Now, we all understood that Hayward was the company, and the only company. When we come to find out, Mr. Hayward comes in as a one million seven hundred thousand dollar creditor, and absorbs the whole business that the company was worth, and we were left out in the cold. Now, these Directors were carrying on this business all the time. I say, whenever I hire a man to superintend my business, I am responsible for what he does; I am held responsible to the community for his conduct; and I ought to be. That is just as it ought to be. And a man is no better because he belongs to a corporation than I am. He has just as much right as I have to be made responsible. We have seen enough of this irresponsibility, and we want to stop it.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I am physically unable to make a speech, but I wish to say a few words on this subject. I will promise you not to speak long. I differ with Judge Belcher, who has just taken his seat, in regard to public opinion as to this section. I have found nothing said in regard to this question but praise; in fact, from all I can hear, this is the most popular thing we have ever done. Now, I have been merchandising for nearly seventeen years, and I do not see why such a distinction should be made between those who carry on merchandising and those who do a banking business. Now, I have two partners, say, and during my absence they employ a clerk, and a customer comes in and deposits money with the clerk; I would be held responsible for that money if it was lost or stolen. Why should not the managers of a corporation be held responsible in a like manner under like circumstances. I say, they are one and the same thing. The responsibility should rest on one as much as the other. I can see no possible evil that will arise from the adoption of section three. Those who desire to support the section should vote against this amendment, for it will destroy the section and render it nugatory.

MR. HUESTIS. Ayes and noes.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: It was not my intention to say anything upon this question. I would always rather remain quiet and listen to the argument of others. But there are some peculiarities about this discussion which may be of interest to notice. I have heard no gentleman upon this floor quote from the Constitution of any other State. [Laughter.] The Constitutions of Iowa, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Missouri have never been mentioned in this debate. Not even a word from the Constitution of Missouri. [Laughter.] I take it if this section is adopted, we will be the first in the list of States. I have not examined the Constitutions of other States, but the fact that nothing has been said about it shows pretty conclusively that in the other thirty-seven States there is not to be found any provision which can be quoted as authority for the adoption of this. I regard this section as vicious. I believe it should not be passed, and I hope this Convention will not act hastily upon this important subject. We are not a Legislature. What we do here, if sanctioned by the people, is not an act that can be undone. When I took my seat here I firmly resolved that in any question between a new proposition and the old Constitution, if there was any doubt in my mind, I would stick to the old Constitution. I am standing upon that ground now. I have more than a serious doubt as to this proposition. It is vicious. The very fact that it holds the innocent Director of a corporation responsible for the acts of the guilty, is enough to condemn it. It is a vicious principle, which cannot be successfully defended upon this floor. I do not believe that corporations, if properly guarded and regulated, are inimical to the public good. I will go for no vicious provision that seeks to destroy them.

REMARKS OF MR. TOWNSEND.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I rise simply to enter my protest against this section, and the amendment known as the Terry amendment, and I am in favor of the one offered by the gentleman from Sacramento. I believe the amendment of Judge Terry to be one of the most mischievous provisions ever presented to this Convention. I have never myself alluded to the people in regard to what they think of what we are doing in this Convention. In regard to this matter, it seems to be the almost universal opinion of those with whom I have conversed that this is a vicious provision. It has been talked about on many occasions when I was present, and has been denounced almost universally. The opinion prevails that this Convention is attempting to destroy and pull down, instead of advancing and building up, the people's interests. I know that to be the case. At the time I was nominated for this Convention the question was asked me whether I was in favor of making Directors responsible, individually, for the full amount. I most emphatically said no, and I was indorsed by the people, because they believed that it would be the means of crushing and destroying corporations completely. I believe that corporations, properly guarded, are necessary for the development of the resources of this country, or any other country. We could not, as a people, do business without them. Anything that is calculated to destroy them or crush them, as I believe this provision will, is certainly detrimental to the interests of the people. I cannot see why men here, having business views, legislating for the business portion of the State, can take so one-sided a view on this subject. I do not suppose there is a business man on the face of the earth who would jeopardize his property, by taking the position of Bank Director under such a provision as this. I appeal to any man on this floor—would you, if you were worth five or fifty thousand dollars, become responsible to the full extent of your fortune, without any recompense whatever, for the acts of men over whom you can exercise no control? I hope the members of the Convention will take this matter home to themselves, and reflect upon what they are doing.

REMARKS OF MR. OHLEYER.

MR. OHLEYER. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, and if that is not adopted, I am in favor of striking out section three. Will it be in order to move to strike it out now?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir, not at present.

MR. OHLEYER. I have conversed with the people of my county, and while they are in favor of holding the corporation responsible to the stockholders, they are not in favor of holding the Directors personally liable for the criminal acts of the employés. In other words, they are not in favor of punishing the innocent for the acts of the guilty. That is what this section proposes to do. They would be entirely satisfied with the section as it was reported by the Committee on Corporations—that each stockholder of a corporation shall be individually liable for his proportion of its debts and liabilities. If they want any more, they would be satisfied with the further amendment offered by Mr. Webster.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I do not propose to make a speech. I hope this Terry amendment will stand. Who are these Directors? Do they not superintend and control the whole concern? Do gentlemen propose to exempt them from all liability, so that they may employ men who will rob the depositors, at will, and yet nobody be responsible for it? Why, sir, the idea is absurd. I trust that every man who has heretofore sustained this section—the Terry amendment—has got backbone enough to stand by it now. How are these Directors appointed? Why, when scheming men have a scheme on hand, they go to influential men in the community and borrow their names, and give them stock enough to qualify them for the position. Then those borrowed names are paraded before the community, and on the strength of it, men come and do business with them. I challenge any man to deny it. It is a fact in every community in this State. And every man who has got sense enough to find his way home at night knows it.

MR. STEELE. Where do they do that?

MR. TULLY. All over the State.

MR. STEELE. Name one.

MR. TULLY. I, myself, have acted in that capacity, in Santa Clara County.

MR. McCONNELL. My amendment covers that.

MR. TULLY. I do not want any amendment. It is good enough as it is. It is all right, let it stand.

MR. WILSON, of First District. I wish to ask a question. In section twelve, where the minority chooses to cumulate their votes upon one man, they can always have a representative upon the Board to protect their interests. Now, would not this man, by this section, be responsible for the misconduct and misappropriation of the majority, though he should vote and protest against it. Are you in favor of that?

MR. TULLY. There is no man obliged to serve. If he goes in there, let him pay or let him sell out. Some gentlemen have said that they have consulted their constituents about this. I am not in the habit of consulting people as to what I shall do. I believe it is right, and I shall vote for it. Now, I said I didn't want to make a speech, but I just want to see how many men in this Convention will fall down. I want to see how many have nerve enough to stand by the report.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Wyatt, Lindow, Wilson of Tehama, Van Voorhies, and O'Sullivan.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: Does the previous question carry with it the whole article?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes sir. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McConnell.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Barton, Ayers, O'Sullivan, and Huestis.

The roll was called, and the amendment was lost, by the following vote:

Mr. ROLFE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

The SECRETARY read:

"Add to Terry's amendment to section three as follows: 'except when such Director or Trustee sought to be held liable shall establish that it was not through his direction, collusion, fraud, or negligence that such embezzlement or mismanagement occurred.'"

Mr. LARKIN. I raise the point of order that this is the same amendment just voted down.

Mr. ROLFE. Mr. President: It is different in this respect, that the burden of proof is upon the Director to show affirmatively that the loss was not through his direction, collusion, fraud, or negligence.

Mr. CASSERLY. Mr. President: There is so much moving about and noise here that it is impossible to hear what is going on.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. SMITH, of Fourth District. I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And at five o'clock and fifteen minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at half past nine o'clock.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Thursday, January 30th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

PRESENT.

Andrews, Ayers, Barbour, Barton, Beerstecher, Belcher, Bell, Biggs, Blackmer, Boucher, Brown, Burt, Caples, Casserly, Chapman, Charles, Condon, Cowden, Cross, Crouch, Davis, Dean, Dowling, Doyle, Dudley, of Solano, Dunlap, Estey, Estee, Evey, Farrell, Filcher, Freud, Garvey, Glascock, Gorman, Grace, Gregg, Hager, Harrison, Harvey, Heiskell, Herold, Herrington, Hilborn, Hitchcock, Holmes, Howard, of Los Angeles, Howard, of Mariposa, Huestis, Hunter, Inman, Johnson, Jones, Joyce, Kelley, Kenny, Keyes, Laine, Lampson, Larkin, Larue, Lavigne, Lewis, Lindow, Mansfield, Martin, of Alameda, Martin, of Santa Cruz, McCallum, McComas, McConnell, McCoy, McFarland, McNutt, Miller, Mills, Moffat, Moreland, Morse, Nason, Nelson, Neunaber, Ohleyer, O'Sullivan, Prouty, Pulliam, Reddy, Reed, Reynolds, Rhodes, Rolfe, Schell, Schomp, Shafter, Shurtleff, Smith, of Santa Clara, Smith, of 4th District, Smith, of San Francisco, Soule, Steele, Stevenson, Stuart, Sweasey, Swenson, Thompson, Tinnin, Townsend, Turner, Tuttle, Vacquerel, Van Voorhies, Walker, of Marin, Walker, of Tuolumne, Waters, Webster, Weller, Wellin, West, Wickes, White, Wilson, of Tehama, Wilson, of 1st District, Winans, Wyatt, Mr. President.

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

REPORT.

Mr. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I wish to make a verbal report from the Committee on State and Municipal Indebtedness, of an article on that subject.

The SECRETARY read:

ARTICLE —.

STATE INDEBTEDNESS.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not, in any manner, create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except in case of war to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by some law for some single object or work to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means, exclusive of loans, for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years of the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people, and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all moneys raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created; and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each judicial district, if one be published therein, throughout the State, for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people.

Mr. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I ask that the usual number of copies be printed.

So ordered.

NOTICES.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President: I send up a notice.

The SECRETARY read:

"I give notice that, on to-morrow, I will move to amend Rule Thirty-five, in reference to the previous question."

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President: I send up a notice.

The SECRETARY read:

"Mr. PRESIDENT: I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, January thirty-first, move to amend Rule Forty-three, line one, by striking out the word 'ten' and inserting in place thereof the word 'five.'"

THE RULES.

Mr. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I sought yesterday to get the floor to give notice of a motion to amend a rule of the Convention—Rule Thirty-five—which seems necessary to amend at once. I did not succeed in giving the notice, and I now move to suspend Rule Thirty-seven, which requires one day's notice to be given to amend a rule, and ask that the rule which I have sent up be read, to show the application of the motion.

The SECRETARY read:

"When an article of the Constitution is under consideration, the previous question, when moved, shall reach only the amendments to the section then under consideration."

Digitized by Google

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I wish to suspend Rule Thirty-seven, in order that that rule may be considered now. The object is, that when an article is under consideration and the previous question is ordered, it will only reach the amendments to the section then under consideration. Yesterday the Convention desired to cut off debate on a section that seemed to be sufficiently discussed, but did not wish to cut off amendments to the entire article.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope that rule will not be suspended for that purpose to-day.

MR. AYERS. I gave notice the day before yesterday that I would move to amend Rule Thirty-five, and had no chance to make a motion yesterday.

MR. McCALLUM. It is Rule Thirty-seven I move to suspend.

THE PRESIDENT. All these propositions are out of order at present.

MR. McCALLUM. I move to suspend the rule.

THE PRESIDENT. Rule Thirty-seven has nothing to do with anything except reconsideration. Rule Sixty is the one which would apply to a suspension of the rules.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: It is Rule Sixty that I move to suspend. We will lose a good deal of time again to-day unless we adopt this Rule as an amendment to Rule Thirty-five. Under the decision of the Chair, if the previous question is ordered it will reach the whole article. I would like to have that rule considered at this time, and I believe two thirds of the Convention are of the same opinion. The vote will show whether I am mistaken.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that the motion is out of order. I do not think the latter portion of the rule has anything to do with the first portion of the rule. I do not think that a standing rule of the Convention can be changed without one day's notice.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: In the Journal of January twenty-seventh, I find the following notice, by Mr. Ayers: "I give notice that, on to-morrow, I shall move to amend Rule Thirty-five, by striking out the words, in the last two lines, 'and then upon the main question.'" I would like to know if I lose the opportunity to make that motion because I did not make it on the following day. I did not see any necessity for refusing to work under your ruling until last evening, and therefore allowed the notice to lay on the table. The question is whether that notification is lost.

THE PRESIDENT. I suppose the gentleman would have the right to call up his motion.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I call up my notice and make the motion to amend Rule Thirty-five, by striking out the words, in the last two lines, "and then upon the main question." The object of that notice was this, that under the ruling of the gentleman from Yuba, who occupied the chair in your absence, the previous question carried with it all questions connected with the question before the house down to the main question, and then he intimated that it would also carry the whole article. Then when you took the chair yesterday—at least up to yesterday—I did not see that the rulings were going to operate in that way, until you explained it last evening. Now, the trouble with that ruling is this: that if, in the early part of the consideration of an article, a few trivial amendments are got in on one or two sections, five gentlemen on this floor can move the previous question and shut out all debate and all amendments, and the whole article has to be voted on as it came from the Committee of the Whole. I think the rule, if it operates in that way, is injurious, and will result, perhaps, in not permitting us to perfect the instrument here as we would wish to. In fact I am afraid it would defeat the entire object of the revision of the work of the Committee of the Whole. Until I found that practically the rule was going to work that way I did not care to call up my notice, but now I feel inclined to call the attention of the Convention to its operation, and see if we cannot so amend the rule, so that we can perfect the rule, at least measurably.

MR. GORMAN. Is the gentleman's motion before the house?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes.

MR. GORMAN. I would like to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the end of Rule Thirty-five: 'Provided, that when the previous question is adopted it shall only apply to the section, and amendments to the section then pending, and not to the whole article.'"

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles will not prevail, because it seems to me that it will not accomplish the object he intends. If the amendment prevails, then after the previous question is ordered, the first question will be upon the amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole, and then upon amendments offered in Convention, and that is all there would be of it. I am not in favor of changing this rule at all. We saw yesterday the wholesome check that this rule had upon this house by deterring it from sustaining the previous question when it was to carry the whole article with it, because it was seen at once that there could be no opportunity for deliberation; consequently the house refused to sustain the previous question. That will be the result, and we shall have an opportunity to discuss these questions. If it is changed some one will move the previous question as soon as there is an amendment in, and there will be no opportunity, unless the house refuses to sustain it, to look over this work. It will be hurried through without any deliberation whatever. I hope the rule will stand as it is.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I join with the gentleman from San Diego in hoping that this rule will not be amended. It will result, I think, in very hasty action on the part of this House. Now, we have a notice in of a motion to limit debate to five minutes, and if that shall be adopted to-morrow it will relieve this House from all the evil of a lengthy debate. I think this amendment would be very dangerous in the final consideration of articles to go into this Constitution. I have no interest in prolonging debate, for the session of this Convention. From my experience I can say that whenever a deliberative body attempts to remedy supposed or real evils by constantly amending the rules of that body, in nine cases out of ten, they find themselves placed in greater difficulties than the original ones. If we, every day, undertake to amend the rules, why I think that we commit a great wrong. I hope that the amendment will not be adopted, and that the amendment proposed by Mr. Davis, limiting debate to five minutes, will be adopted, and then there can be no danger of a prolonged debate. Every gentleman ought to have a right to offer an amendment, and they ought not to be cut off. The only thing we can afford to cut off is debate.

MR. WEST. It appears to me that the gentleman from San Francisco misunderstands it. It would simply bring the vote direct upon the amendments then pending, and would leave the section susceptible of future amendments.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Los Angeles would bring us to a vote upon all the amendments to the whole article.

MR. WEST. My supposition was different.

MR. McCALLUM. The very evil complained of is what will happen in this Convention unless this amendment is adopted.

MR. AYERS. Immediately after the notice given by me was one by Mr. Tinnin, which I accepted. It was incorporated in my notice; it was as follows: "Amend Rule Thirty-five by striking out all after the word 'amendments,' in the sixth line, and insert the following words: 'and other amendments may then be made to the section.'"

MR. McCALLUM. We ought to reach that section. I hope the gentleman will not accept that. If the previous question is ordered it ought at least reach the amendments to that section. I believe, with all due deference to the Chair, that that is a proper construction of Rule Thirty-five, but the Chair has decided that it reaches the whole article. My judgment had been that the section was to be considered as a bill, and not the whole article, but the Chair has ruled otherwise, and we are endeavoring to change the rule so as to make it apply to the section. Let the previous question cover the section.

MR. AYERS. That was my object.

MR. McCALLUM. I think the gentleman should stand by his amendment as proposed. The amendment proposed by Mr. Tinnin would only cut off discussion upon pending amendments. Other amendments could at once be offered, and there is no end to the section. Therefore I hope that the gentleman will stand by his amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. There is no question before the Convention except the amendment moved by the gentleman from Los Angeles.

MR. AYERS. I understand the Chair to intimate that that would carry the whole article.

THE PRESIDENT. It goes to all the amendments. It would simply exhaust the previous question on the amendments.

MR. McCALLUM. When an article of the Constitution is under consideration——

MR. AYERS. I withdraw my amendment.

MR. McCALLUM. I believe I have the floor.

THE PRESIDENT. There is nothing before the house except——

MR. McCALLUM. I ask the Chair what the decision is? Is the amendment ruled out of order? What is the pending motion?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has made no decision. The gentleman from Los Angeles has asked leave to withdraw his proposition. That is all I know about it.

MR. AYERS. I will state that the President has ruled that no amendment can be had to my notice to amend the rule. If that is the case, there is no use of urging it.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I rise to a point of order. There is nothing before the house.

MR. McCALLUM. Is that the decision of the Chair, that the amendment of the gentleman cannot be amended?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair simply ruled that he could not accept the notice given by the gentleman from Trinity, Mr. Tinnin.

MR. McCALLUM. I offer the rule I have sent up as an amendment to his rule.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman withdrew his amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. That is what I understood. The Chair is not able to find out that there is any question before the house. The gentleman from Alameda is before the body. [Laughter.]

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I would like to give notice that, on to-morrow, I will move an amendment to the rules, so that any amendment offered in the Convention during the consideration of any report of the Committee of the Whole may, by itself, be laid on the table. That will expedite business better than the previous question. It is the rule that they have in the House of Representatives.

THE SECRETARY read:

"That to-morrow I will move to add to Rule Fifty-five, or amend the rules otherwise, so that any amendment offered in Convention during the consideration of any report of the Committee of the Whole may, by itself, be laid on the table."

MR. McCALLUM. I rise to make a motion of which I gave notice upon yesterday, which I will ask the Secretary to read——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman has not been recognized.

MR. ESTEE. I move that the whole question of the amendment to the rule be laid on the table.

THE PRESIDENT. There is no question in relation to that rule pending now.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I rise to make a privilege motion. I move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention upon yesterday adopted the article on the pardoning power, in pursuance of notice given yesterday, and I ask the Secretary now to read the notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I give notice that I will on to-morrow move a reconsideration of the vote by which the Convention adopted the article on pardoning power, and ordered it to be engrossed and read a second time, for the purpose of amending said article so that the same shall embrace the following amendment: Insert after the word 'reprieve,' in line one, and before the word 'pardon,' in line two, as follows: 'And the Governor, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Attorney-General, or a major part of them, of whom the Governor shall be one, shall have power to grant.'"

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is mistaken in supposing that the Convention adopted the article. It was ordered to be engrossed.

MR. MCCALLUM. I move to reconsider the vote by which it was ordered to be engrossed and read a second time. I have heard it said that the Chair has ruled, or intimated that it would rule, that on a second reading of these articles they would be open to amendment. I had supposed not. I am informed that the Chair has intimated such a ruling. If that is the case, this motion would be a useless consumption of time.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion, that after engrossment on second reading it is open to amendment.

MR. MCCALLUM. The same as before? I do not know what the Convention may rule about that, and I will therefore present my motion now, as I have stated, to reconsider the vote by which that article was ordered engrossed. I do not desire now, and shall not hereafter, consume time when I know the Convention is impatient to get through with the business, but I do desire a vote upon this proposition. Yesterday the previous question cut me off without having an opportunity even of presenting the measure. In the Committee of the Whole it is true the proposition was voted down, and it is also true that of all the various propositions pending it came nearest receiving a majority vote. I ask now to have a full vote in Convention upon it. It is copied from the article in the Nevada Constitution, except this, that in Nevada the Governor, Justices of the Supreme Court, and Attorney-General constitute the pardoning board.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order in discussing this motion now. It passed under the previous question, and there can be no discussion upon it. It is not debatable when the previous question was upon it.

MR. MCCALLUM. The Chair rules that the previous question reaches a motion to reconsider.

THE PRESIDENT. Undoubtedly.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I move to lay the motion on the table.

The motion prevailed.

PETITION.

MR. WATERS presented a petition, requesting the exemption of certain property, used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The pending amendment before the Convention is the amendment moved by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Rolfe, which the Secretary will read.

LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to Terry's amendment to section three, as follows: 'Except when such Director or Trustee sought to be held liable shall establish that it was not through his direction, collusion, fraud or negligence that such embezzlement or mismanagement occurred.'"

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I will ask leave to make a verbal correction. The word "mismanagement" should have been "misappropriation," to correspond with the original Terry amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the correction will be made. The Chair hears none. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Rolfe to section three, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Farrell, Holmes, Dean, Larkin, and White.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

Belcher,	Johnson,	Schell,
Biggs,	Keyes,	Schomp,
Blackmer,	Laine,	Shafter,

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the amendment, as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. REED. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section three, by striking out all after the word 'association,' in line five."

MR. REED. Mr. President: This amendment strikes out that portion which is really the Terry amendment. As I understand, this is printed separately, under a misapprehension, and it is all one section, composed of the amendments offered by Messrs. Webster and Terry, and adopted in Committee of the Whole. Am I correct?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Barton, Condon, Larkin, and Dunlap.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in its amendment.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend the Terry amendment as follows: Insert after 'association,' in line two, as follows: 'during the time they hold such office;' and strike out all after the word 'association,' in line four."

MR. HAGER. Mr. President; The object of this amendment is to hold the Director responsible only during the term of office of such Director. A Director may be elected for a term of one year. He may hold the office for one month, and resign. The object of the amendment is to make him liable during the time he holds the office, rather than during the term for which he is elected. A strict construction of it as it is would be during the term of office for which he is elected.

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I am in hopes that this amendment will be voted down. This section don't affect anybody who is doing a legitimate business. Where a company fails, and where their funds are misappropriated, somebody is going to lose it. Now, who is it that the depositors look too? They look to these big figure-heads for protection, and if we do not make them responsible, then the common people, the depositors, have to lose it. I would like to have some rule by which the poor, honest peasantry may be safe. There is nothing to protect them. We want to bring these men down to a point that they have got to be responsible. They are in no danger if they are compelled to do a fair, honest, and legitimate business. If we adopt this amendment we destroy the whole thing. If a Director sees that the funds have been misappropriated and squandered and gone, then he can resign, and would not be responsible, because he has nothing more to do with it, and the depositors have to lose it. Adopt this amendment, and I would not give anything for the whole section. I am in hopes that the Terry amendment will stand.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I hope, sir, that this and all amendments will be voted down. This amendment, if it should prevail, would have this result, as I read the section, that if a Director or Trustee of a corporation finds that the liability of this section is about to attach to him, or that it has already attached to him, he has only to resign his office and escape liabilities. Of course I do not mean to say that the gentleman moving this amendment intends this result, but it seems to me that it will be the inevitable consequence. The language will be as amended:

"The Directors or Trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations, during the time they hold such office, shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation, or joint-stock association."

Now, then, although a Director may be elected for a year or for a specified term, he can always terminate his office by resignation. A vacancy occurs and his liability ceases. I do not think that that is the intention, but that will be the result. If there is to be any mutilating of this let it be openly and plainly done. For one I am prepared to vote for this section just as it reads. It will admit of no two interpretations as it is framed. Its meaning is obvious to the mind of a child. The shrewdest lawyer cannot wrest it from its purpose. I am perfectly prepared to accept the consequences of it with its plain and obvious meaning, notwithstanding all that has been said about its being ridiculous and about its destroying rights. So far as I have heard expression among the people, no other section commends this Constitution to the thinkers of the people of this State as does this provision. I am prepared to vote for it as it stands, for if it is adopted it will have the effect of stopping the high-handed and wholesale thievery and outrage that has disgraced the State of California, and which has called forth the outcry from the people that has evoked this Constitution. It is no new thing in the policy of government. We adopt the principle on which it is rested in a thousand forms, in all the forms of government that exist in the civilized world; in Europe, in America, with the Federal Government, with the State Government, the principle permeates everywhere, that when a trust is created security shall be given for the execution of it. Take your County Treasurer, your Sheriff, your State Treasurer, all of the State officers, with the exception of the highest judicial officers, and so throughout the nation and throughout the world, men who hold moneys and execute trusts are required to give security for the faithful administration of them; and if there be default or loss, except from the act of God, they and their bondsmen are held responsible. Why, sir, there are twenty thousand of these corporations in this State, with at least eighteen thousand five hundred of them centered in San Francisco with their Directorships. Their stockholders and creditors are scattered all over the world, and these persons hold in trust these funds and represent a majority of the wealth of the Pacific Coast. The proposition of this section is to secure a faithful execution of this trust, and those who do not want to assume this responsibility let them stay out. If it is true that it will result in these men not assuming this responsibility their credit will be gone, the funds will be withdrawn, and we shall find the wealth of this coast dispersed back whence it was drawn to be more usefully employed than it is now, in the hands of these few Directorships. They are afraid of this responsibility in San Francisco. Let us adopt this section, and I tell you that the people will adopt it, and they will thank us for giving them the opportunity of doing it. I hope, sir, that this and all amendments will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: Nothing that the opponents of the Terry amendment have offered has ever been as unjust, has ever been as infamous, as the proposition which is now made. The proposition now made is to limit the liability of the Directors to the mere time that they were in office, and that makes the matter a great deal worse than it is now; for now if you could show a misappropriation, a fraud, or a negligence, which caused a loss, and the Directors were directly responsible for them, you could prosecute them though they should subsequently resign; but this proposed amendment is that the Directors or Trustees shall, during the term they are in office, be liable. Instead of being an extension of their liability, it is a limit to their liability, and instead of being in the interest of honesty, is opening the door wide to wrong.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I ask leave to change my amendment so that it will read as follows: "In line four strike out all after the word 'association,' and insert 'during the time they shall hold office as such Director or Trustee.'"

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: How would it do to make them responsible for the balance of their lives?

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This is a very simple matter if it is understood by the Convention. I was going to say——

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. There is so much noise here that it is impossible to understand anything that is going on.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The Convention will come to order.

MR. HAGER. If I am not to be permitted to explain the matter I will sit down. My purpose is to perfect this amendment, not to destroy it. There is no trick about the proposition that I offer, and that is very certain; but I say this, that a man may be elected a Director in a corporation, and he may serve for three months; the other Directors may put in some bad man that he is not willing to be responsible for. Now, I ask whether he should be held responsible for the acts of that man after he goes out?

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I see no need for this amendment. It will not be assumed, and Judge Hager himself will not assume on this floor that if a Director or Trustee be elected for a year and resign at the end of one month, that that does not end his term and end his liability. But we do not wish to end his responsibility for acts that have been committed. We want it to end only by the statutes of limitations. This section is good enough as it is. We do not need to define the term of office any otherwise than it is in this section. Judge Hager will not assume that their resignation does not end their responsibility.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I am astonished at this proposition this morning. I mean to say to the friends of this Terry amendment, that I want you to just stand by your guns, and vote down every amendment you know that is proposed. California looks to you men, to-day, to do your duty, and don't you be misled by these amendments. Now, so far as the word "term" is concerned, every man in this Convention knows exactly what it means. It means during the time that he serves. Now don't be misled. Stand right square up to your work and don't surrender the fortress. I expect you to stand right up and take the Terry amendment, pure and unimpregnated.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to say but a word. It seems to me that in the construction of this amendment the gentleman did not pay attention to the English language. I have no doubt but that the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco is intended to meet the objection which he points out, but it is placed in the wrong position, and with all the words he has used he has not accomplished his purpose. If you will carefully read the section as he has proposed to amend it, it does limit the liability, and if it should be discovered after he had resigned that a misappropriation had occurred while he was in office he could not be held. It results from placing his amendment with all these words in the wrong place. That is all. It is true that in this section that I propose to support the word "term" of office is used, which I think is bad, and may lead to trouble. We have provided in this Constitution for filling unexpired terms, showing that the word "term" applies to the duration of the office, and not to the time that a man serves. Now, I would limit this to defalcations that occur while the man is actually in office, as in the case of a man, or a guardian or executor's bond. You go upon his bond, and you are responsible while you are on his bond. You may be discharged and cannot be held for his future acts. This whole matter can be made plain, and the section still preserved by an amendment which I shall offer if I have an opportunity. I would strike out the words, "term of office," in the fourth line, and make it so as to read, "during the time such Director or Trustee shall be in office."

MR. HAGER. That is the amendment as I propose it now.

MR. LAINE. Not at all.

MR. HAGER. It says, "during the time they shall hold office as such Director or Trustee."

MR. LAINE. It is in the wrong place. I limit the responsibility to the time it occurred.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I would like to ask the gentleman if there is any power in the Legislature to make them responsible for anything that occurred while they were not in office?

MR. LAINE. This is an attempt to do it.

MR. HOWARD. I do not think there could be any quibble in any Court about it.

MR. LAINE. The term of office is one thing, and the time a man serves is another thing.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment as proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager.

THE SECRETARY read:

"'In line four strike out all after the word 'association,' and insert 'during the time they shall hold office as such Director or Trustee.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Barton, Lindow, Grace, and Larkin.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in the amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole, to section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but corporations or associations may be formed for such purposes under general laws; but no corporation, association, or individual shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, to circulate as money."

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to that.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after 'circulation,' in line four, and insert, 'as money, anything but the lawful money of the United States.'"

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: It is with very great reluctance that I offer this amendment. It is addressed partly to that portion of the Confederacy called the City and County of San Francisco, and partly to that portion of the Confederacy of the State of California exclusive of that city. The original section contained a provision that the banks might put in circulation the lawful money of the United States; but this section, as it is now proposed, prohibits the banks of this State from putting in circulation the lawful money of the United States; that is, the paper currency of the United States. For one I desire to see this State use the money of the United States Government, issued under the Constitution and laws of that Confederacy, as lawful money. I think we should do the United States Government the courtesy of using its money until we entirely separate from them in business matters and commercial interests. If it was a nation, we might be under different circumstances.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: It seems to me that the amendment is somewhat ridiculous. No bank of this State issues the money of the United States, nor does it put it into circulation; the Government does that; but it circulates it after the Government has put it into circulation.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I hope this amendment that is proposed by the gentleman from Marin will not be adopted, because it will entail upon us the difficulty suggested by the gentleman from Santa Clara. We cannot make the lawful money of the United States. The difficulty recurs by retaining the word "make." I am fully in sympathy with the idea in the argument of the gentleman from Marin, and therefore I am in favor of the substitute which was adopted by the Committee of the Whole. Now, that substitute eliminates the objectionable matter, and is as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any special charter for banking purposes, but corporations or associations may be formed for such purposes under general laws; but no corporation or association shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, to circulate as money in this State, except the lawful money of the United States."

Now, sir, under the laws of the United States, we circulate the money of the United States. It is not necessary to say anything about that. It is a part of the law of California, and therefore I say that this amendment should not be adopted; and if it is not, I would like to offer a substitute when it is in order.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I hope the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Marin will be adopted, and I congratulate him in coming back to the good old States' rights doctrine.

MR. SHAFTER. I wish to withdraw the amendment. [Laughter.]

MR. HOWARD. I object to its being withdrawn. We have got him on our secession side, and I propose to hold him. I am in favor of the amendment, because, according to what I think is a tolerably well settled construction of the Constitution of the United States, nothing is lawful money but gold and silver. That was settled at a very early date. It is true that the Supreme Court have since waltzed around a little, but they did it on the ground that greenbacks was a war measure, and they have never decided that it was money, except as a war measure, and that was also the decision of the Supreme Court of this State; and therefore, as gold and silver are the only legal money of the United States, and, of course, the only legal money of this State, as the great producers of gold and silver, it is clearly our interest to keep them in circulation as currency. I am glad my friend from Marin has come over, and I will give him the fraternal embrace of secession.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I ask for the ayes and noes upon this proposition. The words "the lawful money of the United States" includes gold, silver, and greenbacks, and when this Convention struck that out they did it for a purpose. The gentleman who moved it did it for a purpose, and I do not choose to let that purpose go unchallenged. Here are these words, "make, issue, and put in circulation." To make is one thing, to issue is another, and to put in circulation is another still. The words are used ex industria. My friend from Santa Clara is utterly in error in his construction of it. The whole world would understand that when we struck out the words "except the lawful money of the United States," it was done for the purpose of disparaging the greenback currency, and could not be done with any other object. With these views I call for the ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Jones, Evey, Cross, and Wyatt.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

Herrington,

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring in the amendment of the committee as amended.

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section six.

SPECIAL OR EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGES.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. All special or exclusive privileges, whether claimed by general laws or by special grants, shall have no validity, unless such claim for special or exclusive privilege shall have been appropriated, by occupancy and organization, and business commenced in good faith, before the adoption of this Constitution."

MR. HERRINGTON. I have a substitute to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

Digitized by Google

"SEC. 6. All existing charters, franchises, and special or exclusive privileges, whether claimed under general laws or special grants, shall have no validity, unless such special or exclusive privileges and franchises shall be appropriated and exercised by the grantees thereof, and organization and business under said charters, laws, and grants commenced in good faith before this Constitution takes effect."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President and gentlemen of the Convention: I call attention to the peculiar wording of this section six, as amended in Committee of the Whole upon the motion of the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter:

"SEC. 6. All special or exclusive privileges, whether claimed by general laws or by special grants, shall have no validity, unless such claim for special or exclusive privilege shall have been appropriated by occupancy and organization and business commenced in good faith, before the adoption of this Constitution."

It leaves out, Mr. President, "charters" which ought to be in there. The latter clause says: "before the adoption of this Constitution." In my judgment it ought to be, when this Constitution takes effect. It will give timely and ample notice to the parties, that they must commence their operations and be organized at that time. By the time we are through our business here we will have, perhaps, reached the first of March. It will only be two months until the first of May, and if this Constitution is adopted the first of May, there will be numbers that are perhaps interested in franchise and in charters of corporations that will perhaps not be aware even of the provisions of this Constitution requiring any such organization to be entered upon, or any such occupancy to be made. Many of them, perhaps, may not be apprised of it even within a week of the time that they would be called upon to vote upon the provisions of this Constitution. I think, therefore, that the substitute ought to be adopted, as avoiding the possible and almost certain difficulty that will arise from the working of this section as presented by the gentleman from Marin. Undoubtedly the clause that follows has reference to the word "claim," and does not have reference to the special grants and privileges that are mentioned in the first part of the section. I am satisfied that it was intended to have it refer to the special grants and privileges, but it does not so refer.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: This was drawn in very great haste, indeed, for the purpose of preventing, according to the supposed idea of the Convention at that time, an idea very preferable to that in the original section itself. If the section itself, as it stands, is subject to the exception made, it can all be remedied by striking out the words "claim for." But the real point of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington, is as regards the time that this is to operate. This amendment proposed by me was the result of the discussion upon that question at that time. There were several gentlemen from the mining districts commented upon the propriety of the time at which these claims ought to be perfected, and advocated a brief period of time. That is a question of expediency. The object is to cut off these spurious organizations that do not intend to do anything. The time is a matter of judgment upon which other gentlemen are better informed than I am. Certainly a brief time should be allowed to perfect these claims. There are a vast number where nothing at all has been done, except to organize, and perhaps to collect the first ten per cent. The quicker they are terminated the better. However, it is a question to be submitted to the discretion of this body. I think as it is, it will be a sufficient notification to these people to go to work and close up these corporations; either disincorporate and go out of that form of business, or else go on with the commencement of business.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the substitute of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"All existing charters, franchises, and special or exclusive privileges, whether claimed by general laws or special grants, shall have no validity, unless such special or exclusive privileges, charters, or franchises shall be appropriated and exercised by the grantees thereof, and organized business under said charters, laws, or grants commenced in connecnection with them before this Constitution takes effect."

The amendment was rejected on a division, by a vote of 36 ayes to 61 noes.

MR. McCALLUM. I desire to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section six, 'this section shall not be construed to legalize any special or exclusive privilege which is otherwise invalid.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: This is a question which was presented in Committee of the Whole, and received very little attention there. I believe it was not discussed, although I think it may have been referred to. But I submit that it is no question of mere phraseology. In this case we can trust something to the Committee on Revision. Now, I ask the attention of the Convention to the reading of the section as it stands:

"SEC. 6. All special or exclusive privileges, whether claimed by general laws or by special grants, shall have no validity, unless such claim for special or exclusive privilege shall have been appropriated, by occupancy and organization, and business commenced in good faith, before the adoption of this Constitution."

Now, as regards those which have been so appropriated, the assertion of the one is the exclusion of the other, and the point is that by declaring that those in which there has not been an appropriation, by occupancy and organization, shall have no validity, all others are made legal, as the Constitution is silent with reference to them. This is a point which has been so frequently presented to this Convention and go undisputed, that it would seem to be unnecessary to consume time in arguing it here. I submit that if we adopt the section as it is we will have done great harm. If we adopt it with this saving clause I think we will have accomplished much good.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: It strikes me that there is no end to human endurance. The idea of putting something into this Constitution stating that this section shall not be construed to legalize that which is already illegal or invalid. I do not propose to discuss the question, but the necessity for such a provision, it strikes me, is entirely beyond the comprehension of a lawyer, and I am amazed that the gentleman should have presented it.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I am also opposed to it, because, according to the newspapers, the public are sufficiently disposed to make fun of us now, and they would have just ground to do it if we should adopt this.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I think the idea sought to be arrived at is a good one, but he has it in the wrong language. The amendment should read in this wise: "but this shall not revive lapsed or forfeited franchises." I think we ought to say that the franchises that have already lapsed should not be revived by this. The franchises may be legal, but they are lapsed, they are forfeited. They are legal in the first place. Now, saying that they are illegal is a contradiction of terms, but if we should say, directly, that this shall not be construed to revive lapsed or forfeited franchises, then I think we should express our intention. That is an amendment I desire to offer.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: It appears to me that the fundamental objection to the proposed amendment is this: If this doctrine is to be accepted that the expression of one is the exclusion of the other as regards this section, the evil is aggravated to a fearful extent by the application of the same doctrine to the whole Constitution. By asserting in this section that it is not to be construed to legalize what is otherwise invalid, you declare in regard to the rest of the Constitution that it is intended to legalize what is otherwise invalid.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. McCallum, O'Sullivan, Grace, Herrington, and Beerstecher.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding the words, 'but this shall not revive lapsed or forfeited franchises.'"

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I wish to address the house one moment upon this question. Now, there has an amendment been adopted to the effect that section six, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, should not revive any forfeited privilege or franchise. Now, the gentleman from San Bernardino proposes another amendment, to the effect that any franchise that has lapsed shall not be revived or given validity to. Now, I wish to say that it is quite unnecessary to incumber this section in this way. Now, does it not read correctly in connection with the other amendment? I make this objection, because I think that it is highly unwise for this Convention to amend a section that has gone through the deliberation of the Committee of the Whole, unless it meets some clear, distinctive, marked evil, so clear, positive, and well known that we cannot be mistaken. Now, the amendment that has already been adopted certainly accomplishes whatever is sought by this, which I think amounts to nothing. But it has been adopted, and when you read the amendment of the gentleman from San Bernardino in connection with the amendment that has already been adopted, it does not make sense.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. WATERS.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: Now, this section as it originally stood in Committee of the Whole, would have the effect of reviving every old franchise that has lapsed or become forfeited. That was the known result of it at the time it was adopted. But it was adopted hastily, and any gentleman who recollects the circumstances will know it. Now, all I propose to try to do is to place this language so that it cannot bear that construction. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda does not cover it. The language which he proposes to insert is so that it shall not legalize franchises which were illegal in their incipiency. I propose that these lapsed or forfeited franchises shall not be revived even though they were legal in the first place. Now, that is the object. If it is not expressed in clear language I would recommend that the gentleman from San Francisco be placed upon the Revision Committee, and then he can make it conform to the rest of the section. We can leave that to the Revision Committee. But I would ask leave to insert the word "nor" instead of the word "but."

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the word will be changed. The Chair hears none.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I dissent utterly from the law of the gentleman from Alameda, and the gentleman from San Bernardino. I say that the rule cited does not apply here at all. They are entirely mistaken upon that point, and I defy the gentleman to point to a solitary case that bears him out. I admit that where a man sits down and undertakes to enumerate something that he is going to sell, that the enumeration of some things excludes others that he may have forgotten to insert. Here is a declaration that a certain class of claims shall not be valid unless certain acts are done before a given time, and I deny that the principle referred to has any application. You are cluttering up the section without doing any good. Both amendments fall under the same principle. I hope that this last amendment will not be adopted, and that the other will be stricken out when we get into the next stage of the bill.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment which reads as follows: "The section as it was now amended by adding: 'Nothing in this section shall be so construed as to interfere with the business of the day of judgment, or raise the dead.'" [Laughter.]

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I understood the gentleman, whom I believe is the author of this section six, to state in the forepart of the discussion that he had been unable to give much attention to it, and had drawn it in haste. Its language bears evidence of that fact, although I admit that, so far as the affirmative principle of it is concerned, it expresses the object sufficiently. I now say that not only under that rule which has been referred to, that the including of the one excludes the other, but on account of the peculiar phraseology it is plainly implied in this section. I submit that I read it correctly when I say that it amounts to this—that they shall have no validity unless in certain cases. In the other cases they have validity. Now, the point made by the gentleman from San Bernardino is one of the points I seek to accomplish, and I suppose is accomplished. I have no objection except to the use of so many more words in adding that to it. My judgment is that the language of the amendment which has been adopted would cover it; and yet, if there is any danger whatever, inasmuch as the amendment of the gentleman occupies but little space, I do not see any particular reason why it should not be adopted. As to the criticism of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, if he could have thought of the single word "nor," as has been inserted, he would have found that it would read perfectly simple, as it now is provided that the amendment should be adopted. I have no objection to the amendment, myself, and I am not sure that it is really necessary, but if there is any doubt I shall vote for it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Waters.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: If the Committee on Revision and Adjustment has the power to adjust the section by striking out words and changing the sense of it, I do not desire to offer this amendment; but unless they possess that power I desire to move to strike out the words "claim for."

THE PRESIDENT. The chair will decide that question when it comes up.

MR. HERRINGTON. Then I offer that amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'claim for,' in the second line."

MR. SHAFTER. I concur in the criticism, Mr. President.

The amendment was adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in their amendment to section six.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will not concur in the report of the Committee of the Whole, because I do not believe that it is an improvement upon the section reported by the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal. Now, I hope, that the Chairman of the Committee on Corporations will stand by this section as reported. I do not remember the proceedings in Committee of the Whole by which this substitute was adopted, nor the reasons given, and I am unable to conceive of any reasons, and I defy any gentleman here to point out to me wherein the section reported from the Committee on Corporations does not fully and completely cover the whole ground and carry out the intent, which is to wipe out all these existing franchises and charters which have not been used and appropriated. The language is broader and better than the substitute reported by the Committee of the Whole. The language used is as follows:

"SEC. 6. All existing charters, grants, franchises, special or exclusive privileges, under which an actual and bona fide organization shall not have taken place, and business been commenced in good faith at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall thereafter have no validity."

We picked out the best we could and reported it accordingly. It is nearly the language of the Constitutions of Pennsylvania, Missouri, Illinois, Colorado, and all of the States that have held late Conventions. Now, why it is that the Committee of the Whole reported a section leaving out the word "charters," I do not know. I insist that the section as reported by the Committee on Corporations is better than the one reported by the Committee of the whole, and I hope that the Committee will not concur.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I think that the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, is right. I think the section reported by the Committee of the Whole is better than it is as it now stands, and I am of the opinion that the original section as reported by the Committee on Corporations other than Municipal, is far preferable to the section as it now stands, as amended by this Convention and in the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: It is difficult to see wherein the substitute for section six is an improvement upon the original. It certainly is narrower and more limited in its scope, and fails therefore to reach the entire extent of the evil sought to be guarded against. Furthermore, as it now reads, it says: "Unless such privilege shall have been appropriated by occupancy." Now, how are you to occupy a privilege? I think the language is entirely defective in expressing a sound and sensible idea. It was not so as it emanated from the hands of the honorable member from Marin, but by the amendment. The original section reported by the committee is far more extensive in scope; far more general in application; far more capable of running into all the varieties and conditions of the subject, and reaching all that character of grants, charters and franchises which lies latent now for want of use, although it has been made the subject of legislative grant. For that reason I am in favor of the original section as reported by the committee.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: The gentleman from San Francisco, who has just been upon the floor, has said, that it is very difficult to see how the substitute is any improvement upon the report of the Committee on Corporations. I would add that it is impossible to see any improvement upon it; and I am happy in this case to agree with the three gentlemen from San Francisco upon this subject. I am convinced that the substitute here has been so amended and changed and beclouded, that it is out of the question for it to subserve any good purpose, and may in certain respects be very mischievous in its effects. But it appears to me that section six as it was originally reported by the committee is clear, full, forcible, and explicit, and it covers the ground that was intended; whereas the other, by various changes, does not even read well, and is far from the object of a majority of this committee. I am therefore in hopes that section six will pass as originally introduced by the Committee on Corporations.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring——

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I would inquire whether it would be competent for us at another stage of proceeding to strike out the amendment which has been made now in Convention to the section as it came from the Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. The article will be subject to amendment after its second reading.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: Then I hope that section six, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, will not be voted down; it is preferable to the original section in this. If I am not mistaken, it was pointed out in Committee of the Whole. The original section provides:

"SEC. 6. All existing charters, grants, franchises, special or exclusive privileges, under which an actual and bona fide organization shall not have taken place, and business been commenced in good faith at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall thereafter have no validity."

Now, then, it was pointed out, if I am not mistaken, in a case of this kind. The Code provides that the first step in appropriating water in the streams of this State, shall be by location—by a publication of notice of location. Within the time thereby limited, forty days, I think it is, actual work in the construction must be commenced and continued uninterruptedly, except for some cause, until completion, else the right to the original appropriation shall be lost as in favor of one subsequently appropriated and continuing according to the requirements of law. It was suggested that it might occur, that at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, that period might be running between the original act of location and the subsequent acts necessary to complete and perfect the location, and that in this way the word "occupancy" was properly used. The substitute, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, reads:

"SEC. 6. All special or exclusive privileges, whether claimed by general laws or by special grants, shall have no validity, unless such claim for special or exclusive privilege shall have been appropriated by occupancy and organization, and business commenced in good faith, before the adoption of this Constitution."

Now, the amendment striking out the words "claimed for," was proper, but the other amendment did not improve, it really mars it. Whatever is unnecessary is very likely to be pernicious. It would be competent for us, on the second reading of this article, to retain the section reported by the Committee of the Whole without that amendment, and I believe it would be an improvement upon the section as originally reported by the Committee on Corporations. Upon the assumption that we can make that correction, I shall vote to retain it.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: The gentleman from Placer correctly states the argument used in Committee of the Whole in regard to this section, and I recollect of his speaking of the water question at the time. Now, these water companies have gone and appropriated water by making surveys and notice of location. They have commenced business by paying a surveyor. They may have organized and talked about contracts, and commenced business by collecting money to meet expenses, but they have not struck a stroke, and they will not strike a stroke for ten years. They will let it lie right there until they get ready to sell it, or until they get ready to do something else, and make something out of it. Now, if the word "occupancy" is not the proper one, it is simply a criticism, and nothing else. The term itself is intended to represent the actual fact of going into possession; not only of organizing and carrying on business, but going into possession. The original section excludes that idea. That is the only evil there is to be looked out for. We cannot divest them of any rights they may have acquired if we should try to; but we can compel them to go forward and do what they profess they intended to do—occupy the property, and supply the people with water, or anything else for which they have been granted these privileges. Otherwise they may let it lie right there. When the article comes up for second reading there will be no difficulty in retaining the section reported by the Committee of the Whole, and striking out this piece of nonsense which has been adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I am in favor of the section just as reported by the Committee on Corporations. There appears to be a trimming down of this section, just so as to eliminate the words, "charters, grants, franchises," retaining only the words, "special and exclusive privileges." Now, I see no use in eliminating these words. If these companies have commenced business, they are protected by section six. There is no use at all, on account of a tender regard for these corporations or companies, for us to cut down section six, so as to adapt it to their convenience. Section six was good enough as it stood; and although I believe as a general thing the Committee of the Whole acted wisely in their amendments, yet I do not concur in this amendment, and I hope that section six as originally reported will be adopted.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope that section six, as reported by the Committee on Corporations, will be adopted. These companies assume these privileges under an agreement to commence business in good faith. Now, the very fact that they let them lie for five, ten, or twenty years, shows that business has not been commenced and carried on in good faith, and they are justly entitled to forfeit their franchises.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the amendment of Committee of the Whole as amended.

The amendment was rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment as reported by the Committee of the Whole is rejected. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section eight.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be so abridged or construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies at their own valuation, as made for the purpose of taxation, and subjecting them to public use the same as the property of individuals; and the exercise of the police power of the State shall never be so abridged or construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals or the general well-being of the State."

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'companies,' in line three, up to and including the word 'taxation,' in line four."

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: That proposed amendment strikes out the words "at their own valuation, as made for the purpose of taxation." That section was placed in the report of the Committee on Corporations for the purpose of allowing the Legislature to provide for taking the property, including the franchises that may have been granted to corporations, for public use. Now, the Committee of the Whole amended that by adopting a new section in its place, and in that new section they inserted these words among others, "at their own valuation, as made for the purpose of taxation;" that is, that the Legislature is allowed to take private property and franchises of incorporated companies at their own valuation, as made for the purpose of taxation. My objections to that are, first, that corporations nor individuals never have made the valuation of their property for the purpose of taxation. It is an impossibility under the provisions of this Constitution. It is done by the Assessor and not by the company. Secondly, they have no day in Court, and it would be in direct controvention of section fourteen of the bill of rights, as adopted by this Convention, which provides the manner of taking private property for public uses. That is my first objection, that the valuation is not made by themselves for the purpose of taxation under the statute or under the Constitution, except personal property. Real property is always assessed by the Assessors who are elected for that purpose. And I hope that the amendment will be adopted for the other reason, that it would raise a very great question, whether valuation fixed by the County Assessor, as to the value of a man's property to be taken for public uses, would stand. I apprehend that every person is entitled to his day in Court.

MR. HALE. Is it not within the scope of the article on taxation that the party has simply to give a list of property, and that the Assessor or the State Board of Equalization are to fix the value?

MR. ESTEE. That is what I say. They do not fix their own valuation on the property for the purpose of taxation. We have expressly provided that they shall not fix the valuation; the people are going to fix the valuation.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I presume the Legislature might pass a law requiring every man to give in a list of his property at its valuation, and I believe that this Constitution does provide that every person shall, on the first of March, give in a list of all his property; but if the Assessor were to take that valuation as given, still this would be a most unjust and unfair provision, and I hope that the amendment will prevail, or else that the Convention will refuse to adopt the amendment of the Committee of the Whole. We all know the proceeding by which the right of eminent domain is exercised. When property is needed for public uses we have to go into Court and determine the value of property upon testimony. That would be the rule even if you adopt this section, except as to corporations. And it provides that where the property of a corporation is to be taken there shall not be any hearing; they shall not be confronted with any witnesses, but simply go to the assessment roll, and that shall be the valuation. For instance, here are two mining companies, owning adjoining grounds presumed to be of the same value, one incorporated and the other not. It becomes necessary to take a portion of each for public uses. In the one case the party has a right to go into Court and have the valuation fixed upon the testimony of witnesses. In the other case you go to the assessment roll. Take two water companies, and it is the same. Why don't you apply the same rule to both. Take the case of two ferries, one incorporated and the other not, each using and owning property. In the one case the party has a right to go into Court, and in the other case he has not. Now, how unjust and unfair that is. More than that, property frequently rises in value between one year and the next. Property in land frequently rises to a very great extent during the lapse of one year. Under this rule, if that land happens to be owned by a corporation, the public could take it for public uses, for the benefit, really, of some other corporation, by going back to the assessment roll of the year previous and having that to be the standard upon which the valuation shall be fixed. We all know that while theoretically property is supposed to be assessed at its real value, that it has never been and never will be in the course of human events. There is no property in any part of this State really assessed at its full value. It is a peculiar habit among Assessors, and I suppose it is fair enough, if they equalize it properly. Under this section, if property happens to belong to a corporation, they are bound absolutely by the assessed valuation; and other men, having the same kind of property, who do not happen to be associated as corporations, have a right to have the value of their property determined in the usual way. I hope the amendment will prevail, or else that the original section will stand.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: For once I find myself in accord with my friend Judge McFarland. The Judge has reasoned logically, rationally, and justly against the proposition to establish a special rule for the exercise of the right of eminent domain in the case of condemnation of corporate property. He has argued from a standpoint which has reason and common sense for its base, and I heartily concur with him. But, Mr. President, it is not necessary to argue this question from that standpoint, because the proposition contained in the section as amended in Committee of the Whole is utterly inadmissible. It is an attempt to do that which we cannot do. The law of eminent domain, as defined, is unchangeable. It is an inherent, unalienable right of political sovereignty. It is a right that is fixed and cannot be changed. Now, Mr. President, what are the facts in this case? The proposition here is to substitute a special rule, different and distinct from the general rule, for the condemnation of property of corporations. Can you do it? that is the question. I say, Mr. President, that we cannot do it, and I propose to read from one of the greatest lights that America has ever produced—Daniel Webster. His definition of——

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

SPEECH OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: Section eight, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, proposes the establishment of a special rule, for the condemnation under the statute—the right of eminent domain of corporate property. I certainly think the State cannot do this. Corporate property, as well as all other property, may be condemned for a public use under and by virtue of the State right of eminent domain, but it must be done in accordance with law, and subject to and within that clause of the United States Constitution, declaring that no man shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. Now, what is due process of law? I say that a special rule for the condemnation of that kind of property is not due process of law. It is defined by Webster, in the Dartmouth College case, as rendering judgment only after trial. The meaning of this is that every citizen shall hold his property under the protection of general rules which govern society. Now, sir, this is not a restriction, not a condemnation, not a taking away of any part of the State right. Nor could it be possible to do it, for the reason that this is an inherent right of sovereignty. It is one of the necessary attributes of the sovereign power, and the State has that power, and we can neither enlarge it nor abridge it. It is a right of itself, and it is impossible for this Convention either to enlarge it or diminish that well defined and well understood power. But, sir, if it were possible for us to do this thing, it is not desirable that we should do it. Why do we seek to establish a special rule for the condemnation of the property of corporations? Admit, for the sake of argument, that we have the power to do it, why should we do it? I hold if it were possible to do it that it would be an act of gross injustice upon the face of it. I say this whole section is unnecessary. It is surplusage. It proceeds upon the hypothesis that the Legislature may fritter away the State's right of eminent domain, so that it may not have power to condemn corporate property for public use. That is a mistake, for there is no power to take away this power on the part of the State. I propose, in conclusion, to read from Cooley's Constitutional Limitations. He says:

"When the existence of a particular power in the government is recognized on the ground of necessity, no relegation of the legislative power by the people can be held to vest authority in the department which holds it in trust to bargain away such power, or to so tie up the hands of the government as to preclude its repeated exercise, as often and under such circumstances as the needs of the government may require."

It has already the power. The State has ample power to take the property of a corporation the same as the property of an individual, but it must conform to a general rule, which comes within the prohibition of the Constitution of the United States. The very essence of law is uniformity—a rule that operates justly upon all alike. I am in favor of the amendment proposed by Mr. Estee, to strike out the obnoxious portion of this section, because it is unjust, illegal, unconstitutional, and revolutionary. I favor that amendment which proposes to strike it out.

SPEECH OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I would like to explain an amendment which I propose to put in if I have a chance. It seems to me that the clause proposed to be stricken out by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, needs correcting, for the reason that it does not accomplish what its friends intended to accomplish, because they may fix their own valuation. They are not bound to fix a valuation for the purpose of assessment. Now if the word "assessed" were inserted in line three, it would make it read better. It would reach the object intended. The Assessor would, under the old law, be bound to make the assessment. But if it was left to the companies to make it they certainly would make the assessment to suit themselves, wherever they could make anything by it. There might be many chances to put a high valuation upon it. The additional taxes that they might have to pay would not be so much as they might be able to make by the condemnation.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: There are two or three series of corporations whose property is liable to be taken. I suppose the assessment would be fixed by the State Board of Equalization. But there is other property belonging to other classes of corporations, such as water companies, liable to be taken for public use. When I offered my amendment on the article on Revenue and Taxation, I had two objects in view, one of which was to bring them up to something of a correct valuation for the purpose of taxation; and the other was that it should be taken as an estimate, which is competent for the State to take, as it is their own estimate made under oath. Now we are accused, at least the gentleman from San Francisco was accused, because he proposed to authorize any city to purchase waterworks, of trying to insert a provision in the Constitution compelling the purchase of Spring Valley at high rates. Now the gentleman comes forward and moves to strike out a proposition which enables the city to take these works at their own valuation. I believe it has never been rated higher than six million dollars, but when they were going to sell to the city it was fifteen million dollars. Now if they are willing to make returns under oath that this is the value of their property, I can see no objection to retaining it. It would not be in conflict with other provisions of the Constitution in regard to the condemnation of property. I think there ought to be a correction made, however, if it is not striken out.

SPEECH OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: There is one difficulty about the execution of this provision as it stands. Under the bill of rights we have adopted, it requires the intervention of a jury to settle the question of damages when property is to be taken for public use. This is property to be taken for public use. As far as the rate of taxation is concerned, that is fixed by the State Board, so far as railroads are concerned. Now, if this should be the rule, that the property should be taken at their own valuation, and they made none, it could not be taken. If they made none, then it would be the duty of the Assessor to make it; and that is the law now. I had some tide lands, and I never made any valuation, and never heard anything about it until I heard it had been sold for taxes. Then, in case no valuation was placed on the property by the owner, this section would not be applicable, as far as I can see. Now, if the provision should read, that when the jury come to fix the valuation they shall take into consideration the valuation fixed upon it by the owner, that might do. Now, the Legislature does not take property as a Legislature; they pass laws by which it may be taken. The word "Legislature" ought to be left out. Now, if you say they shall take it at their own valuation made for the purposes of taxation, the question arises, can you take it at any other valuation? And suppose they do not make any valuation; you cannot take it by the Assessor's valuation. Therefore, I think the section is wrong. But if it is so arranged that when the jury come to assess the value they shall take the owner's valuation, for purposes of taxation, into consideration, that might do.

SPEECH OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I think it is dangerous and wrong to allow these words to remain in this section. I think they ought to be simply stricken out. It is no doubt the intention to allow the Legislature to take property, to exercise the right of eminent domain, the same as corporations are allowed to do, and to take property from them for public use; that is all right, but my objection goes to that portion which the gentleman moves to strike out. It says it may be taken at their own valuation for purposes of taxation. Now, it may be that they will never be allowed to make a valuation. The Assessor and Board of Equalization may make it. The assessment of the Assessor cannot always be taken as a criterion. A mining company might have ten acres of ground which is assessed at what it is apparently worth. The next week after, a rich deposit of gold or silver is discovered on the ground, which makes it worth ten times what it was assessed for. I suppose the owner of the mine is honestly entitled to the enhanced value, and yet, if it were to be condemned for public use, he could only receive the assessed valuation, according to this proposition.

Another hardship might result. In large tracts of land we have made provision that it must be assessed in quantities of not more than six hundred and forty acres. It is probable that no tract of land, not containing more than six hundred and forty acres, will be divided up. Now, the company may have fifty acres of land in one tract, and that may be very valuable, the most valuable in the whole tract, while the other may be almost worthless. But under this provision no Assessor is authorized to assess that except in one assessment. Perhaps it is assessed at ten dollars an acre. That might be a fair average, and still the larger part of it might not be worth one dollar an acre, while a few acres might be worth one hundred dollars an acre. So, ten acres of that good land might be taken for ten dollars an acre. On the other hand, that part which the State takes might not be worth five cents an acre, and still they would have to pay at the rate of ten dollars an acre for it. In some instances these things might work a great hardship. There is no equality about it. There might be good reason for it, when taken in connection with the Spring Valley Water Company, in the City of San Francisco, but we do not want to perpetrate a great wrong upon every company and every individual in the State for the purpose of aiming a blow at Spring Valley. I say the only just and proper course is to place corporations upon an equal footing with individuals. Section three, of this article, was supported this morning on the ground that corporations ought to be placed on the same basis as individuals in regard to responsibility. If that was good argument then, it ought to be good argument now. If property is to be taxed, it ought to be paid for at a fair valuation, and this ought to be determined by a jury, after hearing sworn testimony. Now, it is a well known fact, that property, whether of individuals or corporations, is not assessed at its full value. If we get property assessed at seventy-five per cent. of its true cash value, we will be doing better than any State ever did do yet, and if the Assessor does not assess property at its full value, then he is the one that is to blame. The Assessor has one duty to perform when he assesses the property of individuals or corporations. The Boards of Equalization have another duty to perform when they equalize it. Another duty of the State is, that when property is taken for a public use, against the will of the owner, he shall receive a fair price for it; and I say the State will not be doing justice if it lays down any other rule, or any rule which will preclude the owner of that property from going into Court and having the value of that property determined by a jury, as provided in the bill of rights; if not, there will be a direct contradiction of terms.

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I do not know that I shall say anything extremely useful, but it seems to me that this is a very vicious amendment. Now, sir, I do not know that the State wants to go around picking up property here and there. I do not know that there is any necessity of giving the State the right of going down into Los Angeles County, and taking their ranches. I do not know what the State could do with them. My understanding of this section originally was that the City of

Digitized by Google

San Francisco is desirous of getting hold of the Spring Valley Water Company's property.

MR. ESTEE. That was not the origin at all. It has no relation to water companies. It is intended to give the State the same right to condemn the property of corporations that the corporations themselves have.

MR. CROSS. This section authorizes the Legislature to take this property. Now it seems to have another object; to force the companies to assess their property at a full valuation, for fear the State will seize upon it. Now, it seems to me, when we put that provision in the Constitution—with all deference to the gentlemen, we are going too far. There is such a thing as going too far. Now, suppose that a corporation owns a certain piece of land for the purpose of growing oranges on it. Suppose they do have it assessed at its full cash value, and then some time during the next year put improvements upon it that will double its value. It will be the interest of the State to seize it, because something can be made out of it. It may have a growing crop upon it. The growing crop is not assessed, and that would go for nothing.

Now, the proposition is to take the property of Spring Valley. Now it is assessed to-day, say, at eight million dollars. Suppose the Legislature does take it. It will not belong to the City of San Francisco, but to the Legislature. I do not know—I have understood that members of the Legislature don't care much about water, anyway. It would not belong to the City of San Francisco; it would be legislative property, I suppose. I don't know what they would do with it. I have heard that when a session is over members are in the habit of gathering up whatever is on their desks and packing them up for removal. I suppose each one would be entitled to a faucet and piece of pipe. For the life of me I cannot see the need of this provision, and it certainly can do no good. This would not work at all. It is in conflict with the provision already adopted in relation to the right of eminent domain, unless we propose to make a radical distinction between corporations and individuals, which I am opposed to. A mine might be assessed at ten thousand dollars to-day, and next week a mineral discovery might be made which would make it worth two hundred thousand dollars.

SPEECH OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: This idea was taken from one of the recent Constitutions—that of Pennsylvania. We find a verbatim copy of this section in the Pennsylvania Constitution, except that part which I propose to strike out. Now, that was adopted by the Committee on Corporations, for the reason that they desired to place their right of eminent domain, in the Legislature, over and above the franchise and corporate property; and that seemed to be necessary, because it had been claimed that after the State had granted a franchise she could not condemn it for public use. Now, that was the reason. The purpose was to place this matter entirely above all cavil. There was no thought of Spring Valley, or any other valley, or of mines, or mining property. They were not referred to, and I am very much amazed at the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, who saw fit to make such a statement as he did. Now, if he proposed this amendment to reach that class of cases, it is a most extraordinary amendment. Now, it may be true that Spring Valley is only assessed at seven million dollars; yet, if the city desired to get hold of it, it would be an easy matter for them to assess it at a much larger amount. If that was to be the basis they would be pretty apt to put a high valuation upon it. Now, we are not legislating to meet particular cases that have existed in the past. Now, in assessing property in this State, it is not assessed at its cash value. It is assessed at its relative value. My land and your land must be assessed equally. My land must not be assessed at more than my neighbor's land of the same quality; so that an amendment of this kind would be utterly futile. My chief objection to the amendment is, however, that it is in direct conflict with that which we have adopted—section fourteen of the bill of rights, and of the section adopted in reference to the taxation of corporations. It is in direct conflict with those, and I do not think we can afford to adopt a section to-day, and to-morrow adopt another, that presents a different idea that will be in direct conflict with the other. For these reasons I propose to strike out these words, so as to leave the section as it was reported by the Committee on Corporations, and I hope the motion will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: This amendment was proposed, as I understand it, to compel large corporations and land owners to give an exact return to the Assessor of the amount of their property, so that it cannot possibly avoid the responsibility of paying its just proportion of taxes. But as the section reads, it strikes me as a little ambiguous. As far as the Spring Valley Waterworks are concerned, I don't think any one who understands the Spring Valley works would attempt to purchase them, because they are not adequate to supply San Francisco with water. It might be enough for a town like Nevada City, but for San Francisco it is too small. Now, sir, suppose the Spring Valley Waterworks assessed their property at fifteen million dollars, and suppose that they had a majority of the Legislature of this State, then I say what is to prevent the Legislature from condemning them at their own valuation. I am in favor of striking out. I don't see any use of the section. I don't see the necessity of the State owning large vineyards, and farms, and mines, and all that kind of property. I would go in for striking out the section entirely. If it is not striken out, I will vote for the amendment proposed by Mr. Estee. It will then read so that we can understand it.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will pardon me for one moment. There is an effort to make a distinction between corporations and private individuals. Now as has been pointed out, in taking land for a public use, you cannot gauge its real value by the assessment roll. The conditions are not the same. I do not see any necessity for this section at all. The penalty is excessive. The gentleman from Nevada hit the key-note the moment his ox was threatened. The State does not want to go into the mining business. This property when taken, must be taken for some proper purpose. It must be taken just like any other private property. It is private property. I protest against making this distinction between private property and public property. It is simply tyranny. There is no pretense of reason, or justice, or common sense in it.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: It seems that this section is intended to express certain ideas and principles, and that principle is the right of the State to exercise the right of eminent domain in any case, with regard to incorporated companies and their franchises. Now, it is no doubt correct. But when the matter is carried further than this, as has been presented on this floor so fairly and forcibly, and it is declared that the property is to be taken according to the assessed value, then, sir, it is out of order, and never should have been recognized in this body.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Barbour, Bell, Nelson, Freud, and Farrell.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I wish to offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The property and franchises of incorporated companies shall be subject to condemnation for public uses the same as the property of individuals. Neither the power of eminent domain nor the police power of the State shall ever be exercised, or their exercise abridged or construed, so as to authorize or permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals, or impair the general well being of the State."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: (Stamping and confusion.) Do all the hollowing you are going to. I shall detain the Convention but a moment. (Stamping.) Mr. President, I can whip any man who does that. I do not believe any gentleman would be guilty of anything of that kind. To the gentlemen of this Convention I now address myself. There are but one or two objections to the amendment proposed by the committee, and I think they will be avoided by the amendment I propose. That is in reference to the use of the word "Legislature." It takes the property of corporations and subjects it to condemnation the same as private property of individuals.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I know of no means of exercising the right of eminent domain except through the Legislature. I find that the word "Legislature" is used in all other Constitutions where like provisions are found, especially in the Constitutions of Missouri and Pennsylvania. This section has received judicial determination, and I think it is unwise to adopt a new rule when we have a well established rule for our guidance. If that is the only objection the gentleman can urge I think we had better adopt this as it is. We know it has worked well, because it has been tried in other States.

MR. HERRINGTON. When this declares that this property shall be subject to condemnation, there can be no mistake about that, can there?

MR. ESTEE. I am not passing upon the gentleman's amendment. I do not think we know what it does mean by simply hearing it read at the desk, whereas this proposition has been carefully considered by the committee and recommended for adoption.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I am glad to hear my friend from San Francisco acknowledging the Constitution of Missouri as authority. I have known for a long time that he got most of his report from the Constitution of Missouri. If he had taken some other things from that Constitution it would have been better still. But in regard to the word "Legislature" he is wrong—it ought to go out.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

Adopted.

GOVERNMENT OF CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. No corporation shall engage in business other than that expressly authorized in its charter, or the law under which it may have been or may hereafter be organized; nor shall it hold any real estate for a longer period than five years, except such as may be necessary for carrying on its business."

MR. BARBOUR. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

Strike out the word "five" in line four and insert "three."

MR. BARBOUR. It seems to me that three years is long enough for any corporation to hold land upon speculation. It seems to me we might make that difference between corporations and individuals.

The amendment was rejected—ayes, 25.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

MINORITY REPRESENTATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twelve.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 12. In all elections for Directors or Managers of incorporated companies, every stockholder shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, for the number of shares of stock owned by him, for as many persons as there are Directors or Managers to be elected, or to cumulate said shares and give one candidate as many votes as the number of Directors multiplied by the number of his shares of stock shall equal, or to distribute them, on the same principle, among as many candidates as he shall think fit; and such Directors or Managers shall not be elected in any other manner, except that members of coöperative societies formed for agricultural, mercantile, and manufacturing purposes, may vote on all questions affecting such societies in manner prescribed by law."

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I move to insert the word "mining" after the word "agricultural" in line nine.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon that amendment.

Lost—ayes, 36.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole.

Adopted.

CORPORATION BOOKS.

THE PRESIDENT: The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section fourteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. Every corporation other than religious, educational, or benevolent, organized or doing business in this State, shall have and maintain an office or place in this State for the transaction of its business, where transfers of stock shall be made, and in which shall be kept, for inspection, by every person having an interest therein, and legislative committees, books in which shall be recorded the amount of capital stock subscribed, and by whom; the names of the owners of its stock, and the amounts owned by them respectively; the amount of stock paid in, and by whom; the transfers of said stock; the amount of its assets and liabilities, and the names and place of residence of its officers."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the whole.

Carried.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the additional section known as section fifteen, recommended by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. No corporation organized outside the limits of this State shall be allowed to transact business within this State on more favorable conditions than are prescribed by law to similar corporations organized under the laws of this State. The Legislature shall enforce this section by appropriate legislation."

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: The latter part of this section, "the Legislature shall enforce this section by appropriate legislation," is unnecessary. There is a clause in section twenty-four that covers the same ground. I move to strike out that portion of the section.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment to this section.

THE PRESIDENT. Out of order; there is an amendment pending. The question is on the motion to strike out.

Carried.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The national and State banks shall be taxed alike."

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: As I understand it now, the national banks escape taxation altogether. It is the complaint of all the other banks in this State. I have here a letter from one of the most respectable bankers in this State, in which he says: "Permit me to make a suggestion in regard to the taxation of national banks. There are eight of those banks in this State, which do not pay any State, county, city, or town tax or license, though they represent a capital of five million dollars on the surface. It is very unjust to our State banks, and private banks. Many of our commercial banks are now considering the advantage of changing into national banks, for the purpose of avoiding taxation, and enjoying exemption from our Bank Commissioners. If they do, it will take from thirty to fifty millions of capital from State taxation, unless our laws are amended. The national bank law provides that shares in the national banks may be taxed by State authority the same as shares in the State banks. But in this State such shares are not taxed, but the bank corporation is taxed as a whole, and in this way the national banks escape. In most of the eastern States they are all taxed alike, their laws having been made to conform to it. If our Constitution says that all corporations shall be taxed as a whole, I do not see how the shares of national banks are going to be reached. But if it can be made so that the shares of State banks and other moneyed institutions can be taxed at their market value, then the national banks can be made to pay the same tax. It will be a great wrong, both to the State and to individuals, to have all this national bank capital escape taxation."

I do not see any answer that can possibly be made to the statements contained in that letter. It is clearly true that the property of the national banks ought to be taxed equally with that of the State banks.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Why would it not be better to consider it under the head of taxation?

MR. HOWARD. It is equally applicable here. It is eminently just and proper. I do not understand that the gentleman makes the point that it is not in order now. It is certainly proper here. The Act of Congress authorizes it, and it is also true that it has been approved by decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. ROLFE. I do not know but what this is a proper amendment, but I think it is in the wrong place. Bring the matter up when we get under the head of taxation. I raise the point of order that it is not in order under this head.

MR. HOWARD. Then I will withdraw it, and give notice that I will introduce it at a future time.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the report of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section sixteen, as recommended by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

CORPORATIONS—HOW SUED.

"SEC. 16. A corporation or association may be sued at the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises, or breach occurs; or at the county where the principal place of business of such corporation is situated, subject to the power of the Court to change the place of trial as in other cases."

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

COMMON CARRIERS.

"SEC. 17. All railroad and transportation companies shall be common carriers, and subject to legislative control. Any association or corporation organized for the purpose under the laws of this State, shall have the right to connect at the State line with railroads of other States. Every railroad company shall have the right with its road to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad, and shall receive and transport each the other's passengers, tonnage, and cars, without delay or discrimination."

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert the word 'canal' after the word 'railroad,' in the first line."

MR. SMITH. Mr. President: I will state that this word "canal" was in the original report of the committee, and Mr. Estee moved to strike it out, as there were, he said, no canals in this State. There is now being constructed a navigable canal in Kern County, connecting with the San Joaquin River. There is no reason why the word should not be there as well as the word "railroad."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Division was called for, and the amendment adopted, by a vote of 62 ayes to 30 noes.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen, after the word 'control,' in line two, by adding the following: 'Railways and navigable canals heretofore constructed, or which may hereafter be constructed in this State, are hereby declared public highways, and shall be free to all persons for the transportation of persons and property thereon, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: This is the amendment which I offered in Committee of the Whole. It appears to me that the gentlemen who objected to it misunderstood the question. I hold that this is one of the most necessary declarations to enter into the Constitution. When we have declared that they are common carriers and subject to legislative control, we have not more than half done the work. But the declaration that they are public highways, asserts a principle which is the very basis of the power of the State to regulate and control corporations. Now, sir, I have examined the subject more closely since that time, and I find that the assertion that the authorities do not support the decision that railroads are public highways, was erroneous. Every writer, and every decision entitled to a grain of respect, holds that they are public highways, and treats them as such, and the authority of this State to deal with, regulate, and control them comes from the fact that they are public highways. Now, sir, the narrow, technical objection was made here to this declaration, because it was assumed by some gentlemen that it was a necessary implication, that John Doe and Richard Roe would be entitled to take their cars upon the track of the railroad, and run them where, when, and how they pleased. Sir, there is no such implication. It is to be done, if ever done at all, in accordance with regulations prescribed by law. But it may be necessary to bring competition to bear, and the State should assert the right which she possesses to establish such competition wherever it is absolutely necessary. I insist that this is a proper declaration to go into the Constitution. They are public highways. They are the king's highways in a certain sense. They are highways for the use of the people, subject to the control of the people; not to be used, of course, without compensation. As a matter of course, tolls must be paid. I hope this declaration will be inserted in the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: This is a matter, sir, that was argued in Committee of the Whole, and of course, I suppose every gentleman understands the matter thoroughly. It was certainly clearly maintained that the whole control we have over these corporations is by reason of their being engaged in a public employment, and not, in any manner, because they are public highways. This would involve the question of the right of police control, and I hope we will put no such useless declaration in the Constitution.

SPEECH OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I presume, sir, that the gentleman will admit that railroads are private property. Very well. If they be private property, and the State desires to appropriate them, how shall it proceed? There is the Code. We have just been discussing the power of the State to exercise what is called the right of eminent domain; that is the only road by which we can reach that kind of property. If the State desires to condemn it she has the power to do so, but what kind of a declaration would this be, that they are public highways, and that other men could come and put cars upon them and run them? What kind of condemnation would this be? What species, what style, what form of condemnation would this be? How does he propose to take them? He says, under certain regulations of law. Now, would such regulations of law amount to a legal condemnation under the State's right of eminent domain? I deny it; it would be no condemnation that would be recognized as such. If we desire to make these railroads in fact public highways, there is but one way to do it, that is to condemn them and pay for them, under the law of eminent domain. Again, sir, what would be the practical result? Would it be possible to run the railroad? Would it be possible for any company to operate a railroad where this man and that man, this company and that company had cars upon the road? No, sir; it would be simply an impossibility. The whole scheme is utterly impracticable and absurd; it is an attempt to take private property without due process of law, and that is what it is not competent for this Convention to do, because we are limited to the power of eminent domain. There is a restriction imposed by the Federal Constitution, that provides that no man shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, yet the gentleman from San Francisco proposes to ignore that due process of law; he proposes to condemn private property by some species of legislative control. It would be a special provision, and therefore would not be in accordance with the law of the land. It would be a violation of the provisions of the Federal Constitution, which places a limit upon the exercise of that right. It would be a special provision, and therefore would not be in compliance with the law of the land. It would be in direct conflict with the Federal Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: In coming here to regulate the affairs of railroads we ought to be guided somewhat by experience. We ought to be guided by the experience of other States which have had this matter on hand a great deal longer than California has. In looking over the Constitutions of other States, where they have been adopted within the last few years, I find without exception that they have a declaration that railroads are public highways. In looking over the debates of these Conventions I did not find any such objections as have been urged here. And when I go to the law books I find that they are called public highways, and are treated as such by the law. And are they not public highways, as much as a public road? A turnpike is a public highway. It is under the control, to a limited extent, of the owners of the road. It is under the control of the laws of the State, and so is the railroad. What other States have done in this matter we can do. We should follow their experience to some extent, because we have not had the experience that they have had.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to correct the phraseology.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert between the words 'and' and 'transportation,' in the first line, the word 'other.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

Adopted.

POOLING RATES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 20. No railroad company or other common carrier shall combine or make any contract with the owners of any vessel that leaves port or makes port in this State, or with any common carrier, by which combination or contract the earnings of one doing the carrying are to be shared by the other not doing the carrying. And whenever a railroad corporation shall, for the purpose of competing with any other common carrier, lower its rates for transportation of passengers or freight from one point to another, such reduced rates shall not be again raised or increased from such standard without the consent of the governmental authority, in which shall be vested the power to regulate fares and freights, authorizing such change."

MR. GLASCOCK. Mr. President: I offer the following amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'standard,' in eighth line, and insert, 'without the consent of the Legislature, by at least a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each house.'"

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: The amendment commends itself to my judgment. I believe it will strengthen the principle which is conveyed in this section. It will protect the people from these short competitions, gotten up for the purpose of competing rival lines out of existence. It seems to me that it would be well to adopt this provision, for the reason that at some future time there might be elected a Board of Commissioners, and they would have authority as required in the article. There might be a Railroad Commission who might be captured by the railroad companies, and in that case benefits would be secured to the people by this section that otherwise would be lost. I think that this power may be safely reposed in two thirds of the members elected to the Legislature. If it should become a public necessity, no Legislature will refuse to concede it. I think the amendment will strengthen the section, and it shall receive my favor.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I wish to say that I hope this will not be altered from the original report of the Committee of the Whole, for the reason, that the Commissioners which we have established will be the best judges of when they ought to be raised and lowered. They will have all the facts before them, and it will be easy for them to do it if it is necessary. They will be upon the spot. The Legislature is not in session for two years at a time, and it appears to me, that if we are going to trust this Commission—and I find no hesitation in doing so—we should allow them to use their judgment in this matter. They are the proper judges, and they can exercise their power without waiting for the Legislature, and the public interests may demand that they shall do so without any delay.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Glascock, Kelley, Moreland, Biggs, and Hunter.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. REED. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty by striking out the words, 'that leaves port or makes,' in second line, and insert 'leaving or entering any port.' Also, strike out the words, 'doing the carrying are to be shared by the other not doing the carrying,' in the fourth and fifth lines, and insert, 'performing shall be shared by the other not performing the service.'"

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: This amendment is entirely verbal in its character. It seems to me the language, as it now stands—"leaves port or makes port"—is too commonplace and technical for a document such as this, where so much precision and nicety is required. The language suggested in the amendment is a great improvement in the phraseology. And again—"whereby the earnings of the one doing the carrying are to be shared by the other not doing the carrying." That language, too, is lame. The amendment improves that, also, and I think it would be well to make the change suggested.

MR. ESTEE. The language is commonplace, and that is the reason it is right to the point. It is better than the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment.

Rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

DISCRIMINATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section twenty-one, as as amended by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 21. No discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation shall be made by any railroad or other transportation company between places or persons, or in the facilities for the transportation of freight or passengers within this State, or coming from or going to any other State. Persons and property transported over any railroad, or by any other transportation company or individual, shall be delivered at any station, landing, or port, at charges not exceeding the charges for the transportation of persons and property of the same class, in the same direction, to any more distant station, port, or landing. Excursion and commutation tickets may be issued at special rates."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section twenty-two, as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 22. The State shall be divided into three districts as nearly equal in population as practicable, in each of which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the regular gubernatorial elections, whose salary shall be fixed by law, and whose term of office shall be four years. Said Commissioners shall be qualified electors of this State and of the district from which they are elected, and shall not be interested in any railroad corporation, or other transportation company, as stockholder, creditor, agent, attorney, or employé; and the act of a majority of said Commissioners shall be deemed the act of said Commission. Said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad or other transportation companies, and publish the same from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records, and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have process of the Courts; to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their decisions and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts. Said Commissioners shall prescribe a uniform system of accounts to be kept by all such corporations and companies, and they shall keep their accounts according to such system. Any railroad corporation or transportation company which shall fail or refuse to conform to such rates as shall be established by such Commissioners, or shall charge rates in excess thereof, or shall fail to keep their accounts in accordance with the system prescribed by the Commission, shall be fined not exceeding twenty thousand dollars for each offense, and every officer, agent, or employé of any such corporation or company, who shall demand or receive rates in excess thereof, or who shall in any manner violate the provisions of this section, shall be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. In all controversies, civil or criminal, the rates of fares and freights established by said Commission shall be deemed conclusively just and reasonable, and in any action against such corporation or company for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge or jury, recover exemplary damages. Said Commission shall report to the Governor, annually, their proceedings, and such other facts as may be deemed important. Nothing in this section shall prevent individuals from maintaining actions against any of such companies. The Legislature may, in addition to any penalties herein prescribed, enforce this article by forfeiture of charter or otherwise, and may confer such further powers on the Commissioners as shall be necessary to enable them to perform the duties enjoined on them in this and the foregoing section. The Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, to remove any one or more of said Commissioners from office, for dereliction of duty, or corruption, or incompetency; and whenever from any cause a vacancy in office shall occur in said Commission, the Governor shall fill the same by the appointment of a qualified person thereto, who shall hold office for the residue of the unexpired term, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified."

Digitized by Google

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line eight, after the word 'employé,' as follows: 'and no member of the Constitutional Convention which adopted this Constitution shall be eligible to the office of Railroad Commissioner at the first election therefor under this Constitution.'"

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: As soon as this Constitution goes before the people, it may be proclaimed that these offices were gotten up for the members of this Convention themselves, when everybody knows that there is no man in this Convention who is a candidate for any office. [Great laughter.] It is important that this provision be inserted, because it will silence one of the arguments which may be made upon the stump against this Constitution. For that reason I have offered this amendment in all seriousness.

MR. McFARLAND. I desire to offer an amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order.

MR. HILBORN. I hope that amendment will be adopted. It is in accordance with the spirit of the present Constitution, which prohibits members of the Legislature from filling offices which they themselves have created, or helped to create.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I hope that amendment will be adopted, because the railroad newspapers and others have repeatedly made this charge, and I hope we will refute it by adopting this amendment.

MR. JONES. I raise the point of order, that the amendment is not germane to the subject under consideration.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will prevail. It is the same as the present Constitution in reference to members of the Legislature. It will be found in section twenty. It says: "That no member of the Senate or Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit," etc. There is the same principle, that these offices shall not be created by the Legislature for the members to fill. This Convention is here in the character of a Legislature. We are creating offices, and it is no more than right to say to the people, that we will not allow the members of the Convention to become candidates for these various places. I would be willing to go further, and declare that no member of this Convention shall be eligible to any office at the first election under this Constitution. If that amendment is offered in the proper place I will vote for it.

MR. BIGGS. If the gentleman will go further and accept such amendment——

MR. WILSON. I will accept it so far as the gentleman from Butte himself is concerned. [Loud and continued laughter.]

MR. PROUTY. Mr. President: I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Gregg, Gorman, Stedman, and Davis.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment upon principle, sir. But if those gentlemen are so ingenious as to call the ayes and noes I shall vote for it, because I do not like to go upon the record on the other side. [Laughter.] Now, I would like to have an opportunity, as a citizen of this State, to be a candidate for that or any other good office if I can serve the people, and, therefore, I am opposed to the amendment—[laughter]—if it can be voted upon without calling the ayes and noes. [Laughter.]

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I shall vote against this proposition, believing that it was offered as a burlesque, and I think it will be so understood by the people. I think the motion is out of place and in bad taste, and an infringement of the rights of the people.

MR. HILBORN. Was it in bad taste for the framers of the old Constitution to prohibit the members of the Legislature from holding offices which they had created?

MR. WEST. The gentleman well understands that the duties of Legislators are very different from these; we are simply formulating an instrument to submit to the people for their ratification. It is their own business who shall fill the offices afterwards.

MR. WATERS. Now, sir, as there seems to be a misunderstanding as to what the present constitutional provision is, as it comes from men who know better, I will take it upon myself to set them right. I think Judge Hager and Mr. Hilborn both know that that provision does not apply to elective officers. It expressly excepts elective officers. Members of the Legislature always have run for offices created by themselves. The limit is upon appointed officers. I agree with the gentleman from Los Angeles, that this is a matter of buncombe, and we ought not to be carried away with it.

MR. ESTEE. I move we adjourn, as this is a very serious matter.

MR. HUESTIS. I am very loth to believe that the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, would undertake to burlesque this Convention. I think the proposition is one eminently proper to be adopted, and therefore I am in favor of it.

MR. WINANS. There will be another good accomplished, it will show the people of this State that we who urge the adoption of this Constitution are doing so upon its merits, and not from any selfish ends.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I am opposed to this amendment. It is now nearly five o'clock, and I think we had better put off further discussion until to-morrow morning. I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And at four o'clock and fifty-five minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Friday, January 31st, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President pro tem. Belcher in the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITIONS.

Messrs. Johnson, Shurtleff, Mills, Martin of Alameda, Moreland, and Shafter, presented petitions requesting the exemption of certain property used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

RESOLUTION.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President of this Convention be requested to appoint, at an early day, a committee, to consist of one from each judicial district, whose duty it shall be to prepare an address to the people of this State, setting forth concisely the principal amendments proposed by this Convention to the present Constitution, and, as far as practicable, the reasons therefor; said address to be submitted to the Convention for action thereon before its promulgation.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. Such a resolution has already been tabled.

MR. HUESTIS. That was——

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move to lay the resolution on the table.

MR. HUESTIS. I claim the floor.

MR. TINNIN. I rise to a point of order. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. There is a resolution offered, and there is a motion that it be laid on the table. That motion is not debatable.

MR. HUESTIS. I suppose that it is the parliamentary practice that the mover of a resolution has the floor, at least until he can explain the object of the resolution.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The motion is to lay on the table.

MR. CROSS. I raise the point of order that the motion to lay on the table was made before the resolution was seconded.

THE PRESIDENT pro tem. The Chair is unable to tell about that. The question is on the motion to lay on the table.

The motion prevailed, on a division, by a vote of 60 ayes to 32 noes.

President Hoge in the chair.

AMENDMENTS TO RULES.

MR. GORMAN, in accordance with notice, offered the following amendment to Rule Thirty-five:

"After Rule Thirty-five add the following: 'Provided, that when the previous question is adopted, it shall only apply to the section or amendments to the section then pending, and not to the whole article.'"

MR. GORMAN. Mr. President: This amendment is about the same as that adopted for the Committee of the Whole, and I believe that is what is needed by the Convention. Now, in the Committee of the Whole every question has been debated fully, and it is very lately that the previous question has cut off debate before every one has been satisfied, and I believe that every gentleman on this floor will be allowed to speak as much as is needed by the Convention. We have debated every question fully, and a great deal of the debate on the last article, and on every article, so far, has been almost the same thing over again. There has been very few new ideas. I believe that this previous question is needed, and that we need the power to move the previous question on the sections, and not on the whole article. I believe that if we keep on in this way that the Convention will order the previous question on the whole article. I noticed yesterday that when gentlemen spoke longer than some of the members thought was needed, they commenced stamping upon the floor, and the result of that will be worse than the previous question applied to the section and the amendments to it pending.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: There is one objection to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, and that objection rises now for the first time, that is, on the second reading and engrossment of these articles. If this amendment is adopted after we get through with all the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole, and take up the article, then it will be impossible to check amendments and debate. It will be a very great injury, and will interfere with the expedition of business, so far as I am able to observe. My idea is that the true way is to go on just the way we are. If this House is in favor of moving the previous question, as the rule now stands, it goes to the whole article; but if this amendment is adopted, there can be no such thing as moving the previous question on the whole article after we shall have gone through with it in the Convention. I hope, therefore, for this and other reasons, that we will not change this rule.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: There is another reason why this amendment should not be adopted. The effect will be that a section may be brought before the Convention and two amendments may be offered, or if it is an amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole one amendment may be offered. Neither of them may be such as the Convention would like to adopt, and yet they desire to perfect the section as presented by the Committee of the Whole. If the previous question is moved we are brought to a vote upon the amendment, or the amendment to the amendment, and that is the end of it. We can do nothing further with the section. We must then come to a vote upon either the objectionable amendment or upon a section that is objectionable. For that reason I hope the amendment will not prevail.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: Yesterday I gave notice that I would move to amend the rule, so as to allow any amendment, by itself, to be laid on the table. That is the rule that prevails in the House of Representatives, in Washington. For instance, now, in considering this proposition any member moves an amendment that we do not consider worthy of consideration, we can move to lay that amendment on the table, which stops debate, and leaves the other amendment to the proposition before the Convention. I think if we had that rule established here it would be very beneficial, and expedite business. I think it would be a better proposition than this, which is an amendment in regard to the previous question.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I think we are going rather fast with this matter, and I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The motion prevailed.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: In accordance with previous notice, I send up an amendment to Rule Fifty-five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend Rule Fifty-five, by adding at the end thereof the following: 'And any amendment proposed in Convention to a proposition reported by the Committee of the Whole, may, by itself, and without carrying with it the proposition, be laid on the table.'"

MR. ESTEE. It will take just as long to dispose of it as it would to lay it on the table.

MR. HAGER. When a motion to lay on the table is made, that stops all debate. That is a summary way of getting rid of an undesired amendment.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I call the attention of gentlemen to Rule Sixty, which excepts Rules Fifty, Fifty-one, Fifty-two, Fifty-three, and Fifty-five from the possibility of being temporarily suspended.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: It seems to me that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco simply includes amendments that may be offered by the Committee of the Whole. It should apply to all amendments, if any. It seems to me that it is absurd to include one and not the other. I think it is an unwise provision, any way. The effect will be that we shall find this Convention at times in a temper that it will not entertain any amendment, whatever it may be.

MR. HAGER. It applies to all propositions raised on the report.

MR. ESTEE. That is the reason it should not be adopted.

The amendment was rejected.

ASSISTANT JOURNAL CLERK.

The President, in accordance with resolution adopted on January twenty-seventh, appointed Charles N. Post as Assistant Journal Clerk.

CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume the consideration of the report of the Committee of the Whole on the article on corporations other than municipal. The question is on the amendment to section twenty-two, offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I would ask that the amendment be read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line eight, after the word 'employé,' as follows: 'And no member of the Constitutional Convention which adopted this Constitution shall be eligible to the office of Railroad Commissioner at the first election therefor under this Constitution.'"

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am satisfied that the proposition in the main is correct. I think we should go further, probably, and prohibit members in this Convention from holding any office, either legislative, executive, or judicial. I think probably we might go still further, and prohibit attorneys that may be attorneys for corporations from holding any position in the State. Therefore, I offer as a substitute for Mr. Wilson's amendment the following:

"No member of this Convention, who is an attorney for any corporation, shall ever be eligible for any office within the gift of the people of this State."

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment is not in order.

REMARKS OF MR. HEISKELL.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I shall not vote for Mr. Wilson's amendment. There are many gentlemen in this Convention that I would like to see returned to the Legislature, or elected to any of the offices provided for in this Constitution, if it should be ratified. They are able, and I believe they are honest. I will not, then, exclude any one from holding any elective office who has had a hand in making it. They have stood here in defense of the producers of this State, and the producers of this State will remember them for it. Mr. President, there are gentlemen upon this floor that would not have been here but through the connubiating at the Palace Hotel, and they know that they cannot come back.

MR. PULLIAM. I would ask what the gentleman means?

MR. HEISKELL. I mean the connubiating between the leading Democrats and the leading railroad men.

MR. PULLIAM. I was there, and if the gentleman means to insinuate that I come here——

MR. HEISKELL. Not at all. Such men as you were put on to carry the thing through, not that they thought that you would be with them. Such men as you gave it weight. They put you on to pull the thing through. Now, I shall not vote for any such thing.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I have an amendment here that I desire to send up and have read. I think the gentleman from San Francisco will accept it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the Wilson amendment, 'or practice law in any Court, or act as Judge in the same.'"

MR. TINNIN. I think my friend from San Francisco is laboring zealously in behalf of the people, and in order to add to the merits of his amendment I am confident that he will accept that amendment.

MR. WILSON. I will accept it with this addition: "or own any of the land that is to be taxed."

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I am very glad that I did not obtain the floor last evening and commit myself to the amendment of Mr. Wilson. In the heat and flurry and excitement of the moment I think I should have done so; but having seriously contemplated the thing last night; having looked over it in all its various points and ramifications, I am satisfied that this amendment is vicious, and that it will subserve no good purpose if placed in this Constitution. Now, sir, what is the logical result of this amendment? If we adopt an amendment that no gentleman on this floor shall be voted for as Railroad Commissioner, we must, if consistent, and as a logical sequence also, exclude every gentleman on this floor from the judicial offices which this Constitution shall create. And further, sir, every gentleman on this floor will be incompetent to be a member of a State Board of Equalization. Whatever other office this Convention may vote the members of this Convention ineligible to fill, I say, sir, that this is a limitation to the rights of the people to vote for the persons whom they see fit to fill the offices of the State.

MR. WILSON. Are they not already limited by this section twenty-two? We exclude certain persons from being Railroad Commissioners.

MR. AYERS. Yes, sir; they are limited. We limit them to the proper persons.

MR. WILSON. This only adds one other class.

MR. TOWNSEND. Did you not vote to limit them to electing the Governor to the United States Senate?

MR. AYERS. I did, sir.

MR. HILBORN. Didn't you vote to prevent them electing any Judge to sit in any Constitutional Convention?

MR. AYERS. I don't think I did. If I gave it a thought I did not. I believe that the people have a right, in reorganizing the organic law, to send whoever they please. Now, sir, I say that this is in the nature of a limitation of the franchise of the people, and I do not stand here for any such purpose. The gentleman from Stanislaus has well remarked, that there are gentlemen on this floor who are eminently capable to fill honestly, ably, and conscientiously any office in the gift of this people. Why should they be secluded if the people want them? What have they done on this floor that should ostracise them from the right that every American citizen has? Where is our fault? Where is our error? Perhaps we have struck deep into some places, and there is where our fault lies. [Applause.] Now, sir, it has not been charged on this floor, as I know of, that I seek any office, but if I did, if I wished any office, it is my right to seek it, and it is the right of the people to elect me or reject me. Who stands here to limit my right? But I seek no office. "Let the galled jade wince, my withers are unwrung." "Shake not thy gory locks at me, thou canst not say I did it."

MR. WILSON. I would ask the gentleman if he is in favor of the section adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the article on judicial department, making membership in the bar a qualification for the Judges?

MR. AYERS. I am, sir.

MR. WILSON. Then you cannot be a Judge.

MR. AYERS. The gentleman has already said I am not competent to judge of judicial questions.

MR. WILSON. Are you in favor of that clause?

MR. AYERS. I know what right is, and in the olden time right was law.

MR. WILSON. Are you in favor of requiring that test?

MR. AYERS. I am.

MR. WILSON. Then you cannot be a Judge.

MR. AYERS. How do you know that I am not a lawyer?

MR. WILSON. Your argument is enough.

MR. AYERS. It requires no deep technical knowledge to fill this position, but I think a technical knowledge necessary to dispense justice under law. I say, Mr. President, that this is a fair representative body of the intelligence, of the ability, of the industries, and of the wealth of this State. I say that we have no right to say to the people of this State: You can vote for any man in this state, for any office created by this Constitution, except the one hundred and fifty-two gentlemen whom they have seen fit to clothe with the great and important duty of framing for them an organic law, which may last for ages. We have no right to do it, and I shall vote against the amendment offered by the gentleman.

MR. HAGER. It is only the first election.

MR. AYERS. The first election is a very material one.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I know there is rather high authority before this house for this amendment of Mr. Wilson, of San Francisco, and for the others that have been presented. Now, sir, I am opposed to all of them, and as the order of the day is free investigation, and as in a Constitutional Convention above all places, there should be freedom of research and freedom of thought, where minds should be allowed to strike against mind, and intellect vie with intellect, and in that way arrive at matters of fact, I contend that is just and proper that each measure, or any amendment, let it come from whatever source it may, should be thoroughly and fairly criticised before this body. Now, sir, may it not be considered at once by the press of this State, and the enemies of the work of this body, that the members, if they pass such an amendment as this, have lost entire confidence in themselves; that they have gone so far, that they have said that there is not the first man in their body who will do to trust as Railroad Commissioner; that you must go outside of them; that there is corruption there; and that it will not do to trust any of them; or that there is such a degree of jealousy on the part of some that others may reach this high and responsible position that, like the canine animal in the manger, they conclude that as they cannot reach it themselves the others shall not. There is no large question that I can see, and no great principle to reach in this measure. I am convinced that it is sinister in its tendency, whether so in its inception or not. All should look upon it in that light. I am convinced that the amendments were introduced to some extent to expose the matter. Let us study upon the matter for a moment. Suppose there be men in this body that have faithfully and ably performed their parts, who have shown themselves worthy of the confidence reposed in them. I am not one of those who conclude that there are no competent men in this body. I am convinced that the people of this State sent the men that they thought most competent, most reliable, and most able to make the great fundamental law of this State, that is the class of men, and it would be wrong in me or any other gentleman to say that this grand and august body of men are afflicted with incompetency or imbecility. But here is the point in connection with this subject. Say, for instance, that these men perform their part well, it would be a contradiction of holy writ to say that the people who indorse this Constitution should not be allowed to say to them: "Well done, good and faithful servant; you have been faithful over one thing, I will make you ruler over others." It will controvert this principle. This is a matter that we should look at in all seriousness, Mr. President.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I call for the ayes and noes.

Seconded by Messrs. Ayers, Huestis, West, and Pulliam.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President. As abnegation is a virtue that every man ought to feel proud of, and as the humblest representative of the reform party in this body, I regret that the gentleman from San Francisco has taken the wind out of our sails, by proposing the fundamental principles of the new party. I hope that the ayes and noes will be called, and I am satisfied that every member of the San Francisco delegation will vote in accordance with that proposition, which is the first principle of the Workingmen's party. [Applause.]

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: As one of the San Francisco delegation I shall certainly vote no. I believe that there is a larger proportion of honest men in this Convention than has ever been seen in any public body in this State since the first Constitutional Convention. I shall vote against this amendment. The people have a right to choose whom they please. This amendment is a small torch, unworthy of consideration. It comes with a bad grace from a gentleman who represents one quarter of the people of his district.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President. I was brought up in the good old orthodox school, and was taught to believe that there would be punishment after death. The proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco, I presume, is punishment after death. It is not enough to be a member of the Convention. That is not enough. It is said that every member of the Convention has killed himself, and now he proposes a punishment after death. I presume that those who believe in that, and hold to the good old doctrine should vote for the amendment. In my opinion the gentleman should have started in earlier, along with the balance of us—when we proposed that a man who was a District Judge and employed by the State to perform his judicial functions, should not come up here and draw another salary. In addition to the fact that he was drawing a double salary from the treasury, he was called upon to pass upon the very identical measure which might affect his own judicial position. Gentlemen then could not see it. Their sensitiveness, and their honor could not possibly see that there was any impropriety in a Judge sitting here, acting, and voting upon measures affecting the judiciary, his own salary and everything else. Their honor could not see that that was improper. Let us go the whole hog. There are thirty or forty candidates for Governor in this Convention. The gentleman has proposed now to render ineligible to the office of Railroad Commissioner every member of this Convention, and leave them eligible to the office of Governor; who may have the appointment of all three of them. They might die, or if the Legislature removes them as provided in here, the Governor fills the place, and yet you want to make them eligible for Governor. I want to shut the wind off from all the candidates for Governor. And let us go on further. This section is declared to be unconstitutional, and the universal declaration has been all the time that it would not hold water. Now, there are sixty or seventy lawyers of us in this Convention. It may be said by these sensitive people that these lawyers are fixing that up in order to make business for themselves. Hereafter they will come into Court with demurrers, points, impeachments, injunctions, and the Lord knows what all, on account of this provision. Now, let us put in that no lawyer, a member of this Convention, shall be eligible to raise a question in a Court of law, or take a retainer from any corporation to test the validity, or constitutionality of any section of this Constitution. [Applause.] Why not? You can say to the world, gentlemen, we have no axes to grind. We are too sensitive to put into the Constitution business for lawyers. I may have some of the chicken pie—some of the turkey. Who knows? Or, let us draw up an agreement, "whereas, this Constitution is full of unconstitutionalities; therefore, we the undersigned, lawyers, members of the Constitutional Convention of the State of California, do hereby positively agree and bind ourselves to one another as men of honor that we will not accept retaining fees from corporations to test the validity of this Constitution." Let us be consistent. Let us go the whole hog. Now, if we are not office seekers, if we are not grinding our own axes, let us come right up and say so and put ourselves upon the record. There are other offices besides that of Railroad Commissioner. There are Congressman and Senators, and hundreds of others. Most of us say that we are not trying to make capital for these positions. Let us draw up the paper and put it forth to the world. Let us be fair. Some men know they cannot get these offices, and they do not want any one else to get them. Whatever is put in there should be general, broad, and sweeping, and applied to everybody.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: It is very apparent that there has not been time to concur upon this proposition. I therefore move that this Convention do now adjourn.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not be adopted. I think the adoption of this amendment will be the assertion, on the part of the members of this Convention, that they have had to put something in that section to convince the people of this State that they are perfectly unselfish. It looks to me utterly ridiculous for this Convention to attempt to convince the people by a constitutional amendment that they are acting honestly.

MR. WILSON. Have you any serious idea that this Convention would adopt this amendment?

Digitized by Google

MR. ESTEE. I do not know. Here are a dozen most respectable gentlemen favoring it.

MR. WILSON. You expressed that opinion yesterday.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I think, sir, it is not strange that certain of the newspaper editorials and correspondence of this State have treated this Convention with contempt, when, sir, the Chairman of the most important and honorable committee in this Convention attempts to fling contempt upon the action of the Convention. To me it looks like this: that gentlemen in this Convention, having been disappointed in the adoption of some provision which they opposed, now seek to throw contempt upon that provision by trying to make it appear that members have been acting from personal motives. Now, sir, it seems to me that if this is not, it ought to be a dignified body, and every member of the Convention should treat the Convention of which he is an honored member as a respectable body, and that the members of this Convention who have studied and worked for the adoption of so important a measure as this, and one which has met with such serious opposition, should not have thrown upon them any contempt by proposing any such thing as this. What would it look like in the Constitution of the United States to have had a provision in that Constitution that offices to be filled under that Constitution should not be filled by members of the Constitutional Convention of the United States? If such a provision had been there, would it not have merited and received the contempt of every thinking man? And what would have been the effect? We should not have had Washington for the first President. We should have lost a whole galaxy of great names. If we adopt the provision that no member shall be elected to the office of Railroad Commissioner, while we are overturning the Supreme Court to make a new Supreme Court, and making seven members, why not make a provision that no member of the Convention shall be eligible for that high office? I do not remember that the Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary proposes to interject any such provision into the article on judiciary.

MR. WILSON. I will.

MR. CROSS. Why don't you offer it.

MR. HILBORN. I offered it and the gentleman voted for it,

MR. CROSS. I do not understand that the position is one which should take from a member of the Convention his rights as a citizen of this State. I do not know whether we have any fit material in this Convention for Railroad Commissioner or not. But the people of this State are the ones to determine that question and not this Convention. One thing is sure that certain persons upon this floor who have from the first opposed this Railroad Commission must by this time understand that their chances for being elected Railroad Commissioners are exceedingly small, and it may be for that reason that they seek to interject so miserable a provision into it. If there is any member of this Convention who has been able to pass the trying ordeal and so maintain his position as to satisfy the people that he has done his best for the highest and best interests of this State, why should the people of the State be cut off from having the serviees of such a man. For my part, sir, I would consider myself contemptible if I voted that any man upon this floor should become ineligible under the Constitution of this State, because he had helped to make this Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: A great many gentlemen have told us what they think, and while it may probably be of little interest what I think, still, as it is the fashion, I shall say what I think; and here goes. It is this, Mr. President, that it is high time that we put an end to this disgraceful farce. That is all. The gentleman who offered this amendment did so for no other purpose in the world only as a joke. That is what he intended, and he had not the remotest idea that it would lead to such a discussion as this.

MR. WILSON. I have offered it in dead earnest, and I am in favor of it.

MR. CAPLES. I will say that the gentleman was aglow with laughter when he introduced it, and I beg to say that the Convention understood it as a joke at the time. I am sorry to hear the gentleman disown the joke, for I think that view of the matter would be more creditable to him than the position he takes by his explanation. Why should we do this thing? It would be a burning reproach and contempt upon the action of this body, and I am unprepared to think that any gentleman regards it in any other light than as being actuated by a feeling of hostility to the Constitution that may be framed by this body. It is well known that the gentleman who moved this amendment was violently and bitterly opposed to the leading feature of the report of this Committee on Corporations.

MR. WILSON. What was I opposed to that is contained in section twenty-two?

MR. CAPLES. The Commission.

MR. WILSON. I was not, sir. I was in favor of the Commission; but I differed from this section, as I wished to require it to be subject to the control of the Legislature, and not independent of it.

MR. CAPLES. I understand that the gentleman favored such a Commission as they have in Massachusetts, an Advisory Commission. It is understood by the people of this State that an Advisory Commission is no Commission at all, and it would be the equivalent of doing nothing. But when I say that the gentleman was opposed to the whole scheme, I say no more than is understood by the members upon this floor.

MR. WILSON. I was in favor of the Commission, and am now with certain regulations.

MR. CAPLES. I admit that the gentleman was in favor of an Advisory Commission, and I think I will be supported by the view of this Convention, when I say that such a Commission is sounding brass and tinkling cymbals. It is a cheat, a delusion, and a swindle. It may operate in Massachusetts, but it won't here.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman must confine himself to the question before the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I am rather sorry that this Convention should have had this motion presented for a third time. It is true, it has come in a certain form that would convey the idea that every delegate here is a candidate for some office. Now, in order to counteract that, some one offers a proposition shutting them entirely out. I think they may feel very hardly about it. I do not think there are as many candidates as they seem to think, and if there are it is a question between themselves and the people. It is a matter with which we have nothing at all to do. This amendment places members in an awkward position. If they do not vote for this amendment everybody says: well, they are candidates. Now, as I suppose I have never been charged with being a candidate, I will say that I am opposed to this amendment. I am opposed to wasting the time of this Convention. We might have finished this report and entered upon another one. I look upon this proposition as foolish, and not offered in good earnest.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected, by the following vote:

POWERS OF THE COMMISSION.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out after 'shall,' in line fifteen, section twenty-two, to and including 'Courts,' in line twenty, and insert, 'have power to issue subpœnas and other necessary process, to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record. They shall also have power to correct abuses in the administration of railroads and other transportation companies, to hear and determine all complaints against them, to issue such process as may enable them to do so, and to enforce their decisions in such respects through the medium of the Courts. It shall be the duty of all Sheriffs and Deputy Sheriffs to execute the process and orders of said Commissioners. Said Commissioners shall be allowed to travel free of charge upon all such railroads and on the conveyances of all such transportation companies in the discharge of their duties.'"

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: The object of this amendment is to make the section clearer, and also to impose the duty upon the Sheriffs and deputies of executing the processes issued by the Commissioners; and, further, to allow the Commissioners to do as they are allowed to do now by law, to travel free upon all these conveyances in the discharge of their duties. As the amendment reads, it provides that they shall have the power of examining the books and records. It would read in this way, commencing at line thirteen, after the word "make:"

Digitized by Google

"To examine the books, records, and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have process of the Courts; to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their decisions and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts. Said Commissioners shall have power to issue subpœnas and other necessary process, to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record."

That gives them that power for the purpose of enabling them to examine the books and records of all railroad and other transportation companies. Then follows this:

"They shall also have power to correct abuses in the administration of railroads and other transportation companies, to hear and determine all complaints against them, to issue such process as may enable them to do so, and to enforce their decisions in such respects through the medium of the Courts."

Then is added the duty of Sheriffs to execute their process in this way:

"It shall be the duty of all Sheriffs and Deputy Sheriffs to execute the process and orders of said Commissioners. Said Commissioners shall be allowed to travel free of charge upon all such railroads, and on the conveyances of all such transportation companies, in the discharge of their duties."

It goes down to the word "Courts," in line twenty. It simplifies the section and makes it simple and complete in its operation.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I trust that that amendment will be adopted. It is necessary to give legal sanction to the acts of the Commission, and it is not wise to create a tribunal with powers and give it no power to enforce its action. Therefore it is that the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda is a proper amendment, and I think will aid and facilitate the Commission very much in enforcing their action and their orders and decrees in relation to transportation.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: So far as I have been able to read that section, as proposed by the gentleman, he wishes to make it the duty of certain executive officers to serve the process and writs of this Commission. Originally it was the intention of the committee not to make this section self executing entirely, but it was so amended by the Committee of the Whole that penalties were attached to it, and it was made as near as possible self-executing. Therefore I think that part of the gentleman's amendment will meet a necessity if we leave the section as amended by the Committee of the Whole. It provides for the duties of the Commissioners; it prescribes how they shall perform their duties; it fixes penalties; and this amendment, except the change in certain verbiage, only meets the one point, making it the duty of Sheriffs and Deputy Sheriffs to serve their writs and process. I see no objection to it, and, for one, I would like to see it adopted.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I confess that I do not understand the amendment In reading the amendment alone, it cannot be understood. But there is just one part of it that I would like to see stricken out, and that is making the railroad carry the Commissioners free. Mr. Adams, of Massachusetts, has just resigned his position as Railroad Commissioner, and he gives no other reason in the world than that there were so many little attentions and courtesies shown him on their trains that he could not, out of considerations of hospitality, fill the office. I hope Judge Campbell will strike that part out, although I think it is really very beneficial.

MR. ESTEE. I would like to state that it should be understood that this State now pays interest on a million and a half of dollars, namely: One hundred and five thousand dollars a year, to these companies, and that hitherto we have been transporting public property free, under that arrangement, or a certain class of public property, like arms, and I suppose that was the reason this was put in.

MR. HEISKELL. I made the suggestion for the reason Mr. Adams gave.

MR. ESTEE. I think probably it had better be left out.

MR. CAMPBELL. Strike it out.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, and for the reason that the section now seems to be vague as to where the Commissioners are to get their process and how they are to enforce their orders. The amendment of the gentleman makes it perfectly clear that they shall have power to issue their own process. It makes it imperative upon the officers, upon the sheriffs, and the deputy sheriffs, to execute that process. In other words it clearly and distinctly constitutes them a Court for the determination of the matters that are placed within their jurisdiction, and therefore, it is an improvement upon the section as it stands. It is in accordance with the spirit of the section. As far as riding free upon the railroads is concerned, I do not see that that is any objection at all. Mr. Adams in his letter states that he resigns by reason of the courtesies that he received from the railroads; but the facts are, in the case of the Government Commissioners of which Mr. Adams was one, their salary was paid by these railroad companies. Here the salaries of these Commissioners are not paid by the railroad company, but are paid by the State out of the State Treasury and not out of the railroad companies' treasury. As far as riding upon the trains that run upon the railroad is concerned it is giving them no more privilege than a privilege of entering a warehouse of the company, or the privilege of entering the private office of the company, or the privilege and power of opening the safes of the company, and examining the books of the company. You might just as well say that there was danger of these Commissioners going to Fourth and Townsend streets in San Francisco and going into the office of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company there and occupying the rooms of the company there to make an examination, that there was danger that the company might treat these gentlemen too generously, and therefore, they could not act properly. Of course if there was anything extraordinary connected with this it would be objectionable, but wherever there are Railroad Commissioners in the States they have the right to ride over the roads free of charge. Why, because they ride over them on public business. It is their duty. When this State pays over one hundred thousand dollars a year to the railroad companies of this State, it has a perfect right to say that the railroad must carry its officers free of charge. In the interest of economy I urge that the amendment ought to pass as offered. In the case of Mr. Adams, the railroad companies actually paid Mr. Adams a salary. Here we want to give them the power to ride over the roads just as we give them the power to enter the office of the company. There is no danger in it at all. It is a right that is exercised in every State in the Union where a Commission of this character exists.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I would just like to call the attention of the Convention, in this connection, to the Act of eighteen hundred and sixty-three and sixty-four, relative to the duties incumbent upon the Central and Western Pacific Railroad Companies. By this Act the State guaranteed the interest on one million five hundred thousand dollars, which amounts to one hundred and five thousand dollars a year that the State pays. Now, section four of that Act, which is the obligation that the companies assumed to the State, provides that they shall transport all public messengers, or convey over their road the public messengers and all public property. That is the only consideration the State gets, except the construction of the new railroad. I apprehend, therefore, on a more careful consideration, that it will not be imposing any burthen upon them, so far as the Central and Western Pacific are concerned, or place the State or the Commissioners under any obligations to them for traveling over their roads while the State pays one hundred and five thousand dollars a year to promote the railroad interest. I merely call the attention of the Convention to this fact, as it may have escaped the consideration of some of the members.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: For myself, sir, I am not satisfied with the article reported by the Committee of the Whole, either as it stands, or as it is proposed to be amended. In fact, to my mind, the amendment increases the objections to the article. I know very well that I am speaking for one view of this section, and of the governmental and constitutional principles involved in it. I understand perfectly well that there are gentlemen here of large experience and learning, who take a diametrically opposite view, but to me this is a departure such as I have not met with in any reading of mine, or in any information gathered in any way of any government which has been known upon the North American Continent. It is a departure from the principles which, in general, the people of the United States have heretofore adhered to in these respects. In this State, with its regular State Government divided into coordinate branches, the legislative, executive, and judicial, this section, it seems to me undeniable, is erecting a new tribunal, possessed of legislative and judicial functions of the very highest character, only limited to one great and important branch of the public interests and industries. The only distinction between it and an absolute Legislature in a Court of last resort is, that its jurisdiction is not general. It only reaches—and that is a great deal—to the entire transportation business of this State, so far as such transportation business is conducted by companies or corporations.

Its machinery consists of three Commissioners, but two of them may act. If gentlemen will regard the language of the section they will see that it amounts to this: That two men in this State shall be selected. They shall first make certain laws within the scope of those matters which they are to treat of. After having made these laws, they shall sit as a Court of last resort in judging of their interpretations, in judging of their infraction, and in judging of the punishment to be meted out; and they shall have the power to inflict that punishment by their own process, and by substantially their own officers, for the Sheriffs are made their officers by the amendment, though not by the original section. I undertake to say that this is something that has never been seen and never before heard of, so far as I know, in any State in this Union, to ask a State to erect in the midst of the coördinate branches of their State government a power like that—legislative and judicial, so far as its action is to pertain to its own legislation, and no other. And when this high Court, then, having sat upon and determined upon its own high legislation, it is authorized here, as I understand it, to impose a fine for any breach of the laws it has passed, and perhaps for any contempt it may adjudge may be committed towards it, of twenty thousand dollars for each offense. It is the judge of its own contempt, and if a contempt has been committed, it can cause the party to be incarcerated until he shall have performed the act required, or until he is punished according to their sense of justice and propriety. Now, I wish to say, in brief, that to me that seems to contain all that could be contained in any absolute edict by any power, the most absolute in the world, within a generation. The Emperor of Russia cannot do more than that in Russia. He cannot do more than that to his railroads and the men that run them, or the persons that he sees fit to call upon as witnesses to ascertain any fact in regard to them.

Now, if all this seems to be absolutely necessary to the State in order that the State may have control over these corporations, I should have to study a while longer before I would take such control from the State. But I think that a power may be given to these Commissioners entirely sufficient for the efficient performance of the duties necessary for them to perform in order to protect the people of this State from the abuses complained of, and to put the control of these corporations within the power of the State; and that these Commissioners may be coördinate with the Legislature; that their judicial functions may be enforced by the Court.

I propose if I have an opportunity to offer an amendment to this section, which I claim gives to the Commissioners all the authority which it is wholesome they should have, and all the authority it is wholesome for the people to part with, and all that is necessary to the efficient performance of the duties desired by the people. I would like to have it read for information.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-two by striking out all after the word 'Commission,' in lines nine and ten, and add as follows: 'Said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to revise the rates and charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad and other transportation companies, as fixed by such companies; and, whenever they shall deem it necessary or just, to provisionally alter such rates and charges, and to establish just rates and charges for such transportation, and to publish the same from time to time, subject, however, to the revision and alteration of each successive Legislature. They shall also have power, and it shall be their duty, to collect all available statistics and information that may serve as a reasonable basis for their own action in the performance of their duties, and for the action of the Legislature in the regulation and control of such corporations, and in the regulation of freights and fares for the transportation of freights and passengers by such transportation companies. Said Commissioners shall at least biennially, and at least six months before the regular biennial meeting of the Legislature, file in the office of the Secretary of State a compiled and digested report of their proceedings, and of all the useful statistics and information collected by them in pursuance of their duties, together with their recommendations, for the information of the people and of the Legislature of the State. For the purpose of the performance of their duties said Commissioners, and each of them, shall have the right to examine the books, records, and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and they shall have the process of the Superior Court of the county in which such books, records, and papers may be, to enforce such right; and shall have the right and power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and take testimony; and any witness who shall willfully swear or affirm falsely to any material matter before said Commissioners, or any of them, shall be guilty of the crime of perjury; and any witness who shall, when duly cited to appear and testify before said Commissioners, willfully refuse, or neglect to so appear and testify, shall be guilty of contempt, and shall be punished therefor, upon proper complaint and notice by a Superior Court, as in cases of contempt of such Court. Any officer of any railroad or other transportation company, and any person having the care, custody, or control of the books, records, papers, or documents, of any such company, who shall refuse any of said Commissioners access thereto, when at any reasonable time requested, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished therefor as may be prescribed by law; and any officer, agent, servant, or employé of any such company who shall demand or receive any greater rate or charge for the transportation of freight or passengers than the rate or charge provisionally established by said Commissioners, or as regulated by the Legislature, shall be guilty of misdemeanor and punished therefor as may be provided by law. In any action against any railroad or other transportation company for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge, or jury, recover exemplary damages. The Legislature may impose other and additional duties, and confer further powers upon such Commissioners, and shall provide for the printing and public distribution of the reports of said Commissioners, prior to each election of members of the Legislature.'"

MR. ANDREWS. I do not know if I understand the object of the amendment offered by Judge Campbell. If I understand it, it is to prevent the Commission from having the power to determine——

MR. CAMPBELL. It gives them power to herein determine complaints and correct abuses, but they are required to enforce their decisions through the medium of the Courts. In the first part it gives them power to issue subpœnas, etc., in relation to books and papers, and it gives them the power to issue process and compel the attendance of witnesses; to examine them under oath and punish them for contempt without going to any Court whatever, under any circumstances. As for the other part, it leaves it, as I took it was the intention of the section, with the power for them to correct abuses, and herein determine complaints; and their decisions in that respect are to be enforced by the Courts. That is the clear language of it, and after the gentleman hears it read again, he will see that that is its intent and purpose.

MR. ANDREWS. As I understand the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, it would strike out, from the commission, that power to determine in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record.

MR. CAMPBELL. The gentleman is mistaken in its bearing. I ask the Secretary to read my amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out after 'shall' in line fifteen, section twenty-two, to and including 'Courts,' in line twenty, and insert: 'have power to issue subpenas and other necessary process, to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record. They shall also have power to correct abuses in the administration of railroads and other transportation companies, to hear and determine all complaints against them, to issue such process as may enable them to do so, and to enforce their decisions in such respects through the medium of the Courts. It shall be the duty of all Sheriffs and Deputy Sheriffs to execute the process and orders of said Commissioners. Said Commissioners shall be allowed to travel free of charge upon all such railroads and on the conveyances of all such transportation companies in the discharge of their duties.'"

MR. BARBOUR. I call for the ayes and noes.

Seconded by Messrs. Huestis, Stuart, West, and Ayers.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President. In regard to this amendment, I hope that the provision in regard to the Commissioners riding free will be retained, and I think there is a mistake in regard to that in the Convention. It is not that they ride over the roads by favor of the companies, but by virtue of the sovereign power of the State. The people engraft it in the Constitution. They do not go there asking a favor of the company, but they go there armed with the Constitutional power to demand, as a right, that they shall ride on the road. That is what Mr. Adams complained of, that in his case it was a matter of favor by the company. This is an entirely different case. The Railroad Commissioners of this State ride free by virtue of an Act of the Legislature. Mr. Tuttle went on the road, and he announced that he was the Railroad Commissioner. The conductor says: "I do not know you; you must get off, or you must identify yourself." Mr. Tuttle says: "I am the Railroad Commissioner. It is your business to know who I am, because the State says I must ride free. I demand, sir, by virtue of the authority of the Legislature of the State of California, to ride free here, not as a matter of favor or concession, but as a matter of right." And that is what it would be here. These Commissioners are under no obligation to the railroad at all. There is no analogy between their case and that of Mr. Adams. In his case he rode free by their courtesy, and I believe that they paid him, and he says he resigned the position for that reason. I hope that this provision will be retained, that they shall, by virtue of the Constitution itself, have the right to ride free.

In regard to the other portion of the amendment, so far as I understand it, I think it is an improvement upon the other. I would like to see Judge Campbell put in a clause after the word "enforce," so that it will read, "to herein determine all complaints against them; to issue such process as may enable them to do so, and to enforce the rates of charges established, and their decisions, in all respects through the medium of the Courts." Now, that is not in there. There is no power to enforce their decisions in regard to rates of charges established. The words "in such respects," as found in the amendment, apply only to the last clause, that "they shall have power to correct abuses in the administration of railroad and other transportation companies; to herein determine all complaints against them; to issue such process as may enable them to do so, and to enforce their decisions in such respects through the medium of the Courts." "In such respects," is limited to that clause. If you say "all decisions through the medium of the Courts," then it would be comprehensive, but by the use of the term "in such respects," it is a limitation upon the sentence. It ought to come out. I have found that there is a defect in this Commission for the reason that the Commissioners, or the parties aggrieved, have no right to enforce, in a summary way, the rates of charges established by the Commissioners. There ought to be some easy and summary way, when rates of charges are established, by which the party aggrieved shall have his remedy, and that the Commissioners may enforce their decisions in that regard through the medium of the Courts, and compel the performance and acquiescence of the railroad. The penalty is by fine, which is no remedy at all. It ought to be distinct that the Commissioners have a right to enforce their orders. That, I think, is the most essential part of this Railroad Commission, if we are to derive any benefit from it whatever.

MR. CAMPBELL. I have another amendment that will cover it.

MR. HAGER. I insist that "in such respects" ought to be stricken out.

MR. CAMPBELL. No. I think the danger of that would be this, that where, for instance, they had punished for contempt, as previously provided, they would have to go to the Courts to enforce that decision. There is the difficulty about that. Now, there is an omission, I find, in my amendment, which ought to be corrected, and that is, after saying, "They shall also have power to correct abuses in the administration of railroads and other transportation companies, to hear and determine all complaints against them, to issue such process as may enable them to do so," the words ought to be inserted, "and punish for contempt thereof, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of Record, and to," I ask leave to insert these words in my amendment.

MR. HAGER. There is no power to enforce that in this section. They ought to be allowed to go into the Courts and compel the company to comply with the rates of charges established.

MR. CAMPBELL. I add an amendment to the subsequent portion of the section, a separate amendment, which would cover that. I would ask leave to insert these words in my amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, leave is granted.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: The original section, reported by the Committee on Corporations, had this proposition which is in the amendment. I believe this whole section, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, turned upon the amendments which now throws it directly back to the provisions reported by the Committee on Corporations; it is virtually adopting the original section reported by the Committee on Corporations. I do not understand the purpose of the amendment. It makes it too general. If we depend upon the corporations, let us say so directly, as the report of the Committee on Corporations originally stood; if we do not, let us retain the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: It seems to me that the section is defective, and also the amendment proposed by Judge Campbell. It gives the Commissioners power to "hear and determine all complaints against them." They may hear and determine all complaints against corporations, but are not authorized to hear any complaints on their side. I think the words "by and" ought to be inserted before the word "against."

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I submit that the railroad company does not allow any of its customers to get in debt to them. They exact payment on delivery, at all times and in all cases, and have no need to make complaint on that score.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: An amendment which is very lengthy, involving a large number of propositions, which is only read twice at the Secretary's desk and copied by a few at most, is liable to be misunderstood. Now, sir, I think I understood fully the temper of this Convention when it acted in Committee of the Whole upon this matter. I understood it to be the purpose of the Convention, acting as Committee of the Whole, to give to the Railroad Commission power, first, to establish rates of freights and fares; second, to hear and determine complaints against railroad companies where their reasonable rates are not complied with; and, third, when so determined, to enforce their provisions. They were given these three powers: first, legislative, in establishing rates of freights and fares; second, judicial, in hearing and determining cases; third, in enforcing their decisions. This amendment, so to speak, takes the whole life and efficiency out of the whole provision. In our anxiety to do too much, let us not lose the whole matter. This provision provides that the Commission may establish rates of freights and fares, and hear and determine cases, but when they have so determined it has no validity whatever. That is, the Railroad Commission, under this amendment, has no power as a judicial body. I understood that the Convention wanted to give them some judicial power, and it attempted to do so. But the result of this amendment, very clearly, is to take that power away from the Railroad Commission.

MR. CAMPBELL. It is the same in that respect as it was in the original.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

Kenny,

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section twenty-two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after line ten and insert, 'to inquire into abuses by railroad corporations and other transportation companies, and report the same, annually, to the Governor; and to exercise such further powers over such corporations and companies, as shall be conferred upon them by the Legislature. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of the powers hereby given said Commissioners, and for the enforcement of such other powers as shall be hereafter conferred on them by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I do not desire to reopen this discussion, but I wish briefly to state my views. I offer this amendment now, sir, with the hope that after two or three months deliberate reflection this Convention may possibly have come to the conclusion not to give the arbitrary and despotic power to any three men, which is contained in this section. My amendment strikes out all after the tenth line. The Convention will see what is then left. It gives the Commissioners power to examine into all abuses by railroad companies and other transportation companies, and report the same, annually, to the Governor. It also provides that it shall have such other powers and supervision over these companies as shall be given it by the Legislature, and that the Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of the powers given the Commissioners. Now, sir, I believe that in any new system of law we need experience, and we can only arrive at what is true and just by experience. My amendment gives to the Commissioners, in the first place, the power to examine into all abuses. It gives the Legislature the power to confer upon them the authority to correct those abuses. If they find abuses and have not sufficient power to reach them, this amendment gives the Legislature the power to confer upon them further powers, from time to time, as necessity shows needful; and in the end they could confer upon them all the powers conferred here, if necessary. But it would not be an attempt to put in one clause of the Constitution a provision which by one blow takes away all control of this matter on the part of the Legislature, and sets up a Commission, first, with power to legislate upon the subject; second, to decide judicially upon their own legislation; and in the third place, to execute their own decrees. It is creating a government within a government. It is taking away from the sovereignty of the State a large portion of its just and well recognized powers, and giving them to three men, irrevocably and irretrievably. It appears to me that the method I propose is one that can grow up in accordance with the demands of the people from time to time. Additional powers can be conferred whenever necessary, and if the powers are not sufficient to remedy evils, and yet the whole power is kept in the hands of the people through their Legislature. I hope that the amendment will be adopted, though I cannot say that I expect it will. I believe that under it a system would grow up that would be satisfactory to the people and just to the companies.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I do not desire to prolong the discussion upon this question, because I do not believe the Convention desire it, or will change. I opposed this measure in the first place, and then gave my reasons. More mature reflection has but fastened that conviction upon me with increased power. I am satisfied that we are now entering upon a scheme that will be injurious to the people of this State. I am satisfied that we are abandoning our system of government and drifting into a position which will only be followed by calamity. In my intercourse with the people, and in trying to arrive at a just conclusion, I have found no one outside of this Convention who favors it. I may state, without impugning the motives of any man upon this floor, that this scheme is perfectly satisfactory to the railroad company; and I draw that conclusion not only from these provisions, but from the fact that whenever a Legislature meets in this State, whenever the railroad has anything to fear from what may be done, it chokes this lobby and these corridors with men of influence, to prevent its being done. But, sir, since this scheme has been fastened upon this Convention, so that it was evident that it would be adopted, there has been no such lobby, and no such influence, and it is as silent as the grave. I believe, now, that they are in San Francisco chuckling over our folly. I desire to enter my solemn protest against the whole scheme. I know in my own judgment that it will pass; that a majority of this Convention will indorse it. I am satisfied that it will. But there is a minority here of some respectable gentlemen, at least, and we simply desire of this Convention to have an opportunity to place upon permanent record our views in this matter; and I am before the Convention simply to ask that when these amendments are disposed of, they will permit that minority to present what views they believe to be correct, and have a vote, with the ayes and noes, upon it. This is what I desire to offer. I simply desire to read it. It is this:

"The Legislature shall pass laws to correct abuses and prevent unjust discriminations in the rates of freight and passenger tariffs on the different railroads in this State, and shall, from time to time, pass laws establishing maximum rates for the transportation of passengers and freight on said railroads; provided, that said maximum rates shall not exceed three cents per mile for passenger rates nor three cents per ton per mile for freight, which maximum rates are hereby fixed and established until the same shall be lowered by the Legislature."

Thereby we will accomplish something, and leave it to the people of this State, after the ordinary manner of governments being managed heretofore, to work out the problem. I hope that the Convention will allow me, when the time comes, to offer this, and such persons as believe not in abandoning our system of government, may place their names on record.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I concede to every man on this floor the right to have their own views, and they have the right to the expression of their opinion in regard to carrying out the report of the Committee of the Whole. The intimation of the gentleman from Santa Clara that the railroad company is satisfied with that report is no matter that concerns me. I know and he knows full well that they have attempted, through their press and otherwise, to intimidate us and denounce any action of this Convention affecting their interests. I know that they have sought, in different ways, to force an adjournment of this Convention, until this Convention has been a month defeating measures of adjournment. This is one of the most important questions that we were called together to decide. Every man who is familiar with the course of the Legislature of this State since its organization, knows that it has been the supreme power in the State; that it has dictated legislation; that it has controlled it; and it now asks, through its agents here upon this floor, to hinder this equitable legislation in the interest of the people. I say to you members who have been here, who came here in good faith, stand by the report of your Committee of the Whole. Stand by that. The people will indorse it, and those men who go out and spend a majority of the time looking for a man to indorse this Constitution, will, when we adjourn find plenty of them that will indorse the action of this Convention, and repudiate those who have stood in the way of it. We have accomplished a good work, and we should stand by it and submit it to the people, and it will be carried by a two-third vote of this State. Don't accept any other. No intimidation. I am willing to go upon the record. I have been here every hour since we met, and the record I make I am willing to stand by. The people will determine that this shall be the Constitution of the land.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: As I took up no time in Committee of the Whole upon this subject, I desire now to make a plain statement of my views. I am opposed to the report of the Committee of the Whole; and I want gentlemen to understand that I do not wear the collar of the railroad, nor any corporation, nor anything else. I am opposed to this report. It gives too much power to these men. I am decidedly in favor of the amendment suggested by Mr. Laine, of Santa Clara. It is what the people want, and what they expect. I do not propose to tie up the railroad with what two individuals can do. There is no appeal. They are lords of all California; they are the lords of everything. They control everything, and there is no way of reaching them, except by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature. It is nearly impossible to impeach them or turn them out of office. I expect to vote against every amendment that has been offered, and the report of the Committee of the Whole. I believe that gentlemen are divided upon this question. They will see that if they will adopt something like the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Santa Clara, that it is what the people of this State want. I have confidence in the people, and believe it would be wisdom in this Convention to adopt the amendment which was read by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

MR. LARKIN. Have not the Legislature that power now, without calling this Convention?

MR. BIGGS. They have not, most emphatically. I hope the gentleman will pay attention and he will see: "Provided, that said maximum rates shall not exceed three cents per mile for passenger rates, nor three cents per ton per mile for freight, which maximum rates are hereby fixed and established until the same shall be lowered by the Legislature." Put it in the Constitution in living letters—in golden and glittering letters—that every person in the State may know what it is.

MR. SWENSON. Is not that more than what the railroad companies charge now?

MR. BIGGS. No, sir, it is not. In the interior it is more than double that. It may be on the little roads around San Francisco.

MR. SWENSON. Did not you indorse this same proposition?

MR. BIGGS. Never have I indorsed any such thing. I say if the railroad is corrupt, and if they control Legislatures as is charged here, it is much easier to control two individuals than it is to control a whole legislative body.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I offered a few remarks when this question was under consideration before, and I should have been content with that had it not been for the insinuation of the very eminent statesman from El Dorado. Now, it is a very easy matter for gentlemen to intimate that all who differ with them are corrupt, or that they have fallen down before the railroad company. It is very easy to intimate that we have not come here in good faith. No gentleman came here in better faith than I did. No gentleman came here more untrammeled than I did. No gentleman came here with less good feeling towards the railroad company, as such, than I did. Very few have had more occasion to feel rather dissatisfied with it than I have. But I recognize this fact; that this power over the corporations is a power that belongs to the people of the State of California; that for ten, fifteen, or twenty years the people of California and the United States have been contending that that power belonged to the people.

Now, it is proposed here, by one fell swoop, to take that power from the people and give it into the hands of a triumvirate. That triumvirate to a very great extent is independent and above and beyond the reach of all the other branches of the government of this State. Now, I believe it is a mistake. I believe it will prove to be a sad mistake; it will be worse than a snare and a delusion, as said by the gentleman from Sacramento. He affirmed that a Commission without this provision would be a delusion and a snare. This will prove a deep and a bad one, and it will be many years before the people are extricated from it. I believe that this State ought to have a Commission. I believe it should have been a Commission with advisory power; but I protest against the people surrendering this power over the railroads and over the corporations. It is a power that belongs to the people, and it is a power that the people are capable of using, and using judiciously. It is the saddest mistake this Convention has made to put it into the hands of this Commission.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I understand the gentleman to say that he is opposed to taking the power from the people and putting it in the hands of the Commission. Is the gentleman opposed to taking away from the people the executive power of the government and putting it into the hands of one man?

MR. DUDLEY. It is necessary that we shall have officials; these officials are amenable to the legislative branch of government, and this Commission, to a very great extent, is not; now, I shall vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, although it is not what I would like, it is not what I desire. I wrote a proposition here that would have suited me, and I believe it is the best thing that could be had, but I am very much like others, and much inclined to think that my own ideas are the best. I do not propose to press them because it will be only wasting time, I am satisfied that they would not be indorsed by the Convention. I have no doubt but what the report of the Committee of the Whole will be indorsed, and I simply rose for the purpose of assigning a few reasons why I am opposed to it, and to say that, notwithstanding, the insinuations of the gentleman from El Dorado, I came here in good faith, and propose to act in good faith as I have in the past, according to my judgment, in this matter for what I think will be the best interests of the people of this State.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I have just one word to say. The gentleman from Santa Clara is opposed to it because it changes our form of government. That seems to be the position of the gentleman from Solano. I wholly dissent from it. I maintain that these Railroad Commissioners are just as near the sovereign power of this State as the Legislature.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I do not propose to attempt to go over this subject again. I have only to say that the minority here have a right to present their views and put themselves upon the record, and I will aid them in doing that in every possible way. I am glad that the gentleman from Sacramento has offered this amendment, because it shows one thing about which there has been attempted to be some quibbling here. It shows that, together with other propositions presented here, that the railroad companies, from the beginning to now, have been opposed to this commission; and if anything was wanting to the letter of the President of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which was written expressly to attack this Commission, the persistent action of the friends here would remove all doubt.

Now, sir, I have no time to go over this subject, but in relation to keeping this in the hands of the people, I say it is as much in the hands of the people in the hands of the Commission as it is in the hands of the Legislature. The members of the Legislature are only representatives, they are only attorneys, they are only agents of the people.

MR. BIGGS. Will you allow me to ask you one question? Can you find, in any Constitution of any State in the Union, where there is any Railroad Commissioners having the power you propose to give them in this?

MR. HOWARD. What of that? You might as well ask me what is in the Pentateuch. I do not propose to go into the argument. I say, that in nearly every State in the Union there is a Railroad Commission; and it is immaterial whether it is organized by the Constitution or by the Legislature. That is the fact about it. Now, sir, I repeat that a representative is merely a trustee or agent of the people. The whole Government, from top to bottom, is representative, and nothing more. Therefore, it is idle quibble to say that we take the power from the people when we give it to a Commission; we give it to the Commission as we give judicial functions to the Supreme Court, because these respective tribunals are the most intelligent, the most learned, and the most fit for the functions of government which the Constitution confides to them. It is a mistake to say that we take it from the people. There is nothing in it. It is a fallacy.

Now, sir, it was said on a former occasion—and there is another idea advanced here. Those who in the beginning were entirely, or many of them, entirely opposed to any Commission, have now fallen down to a Commission without power; to a Commission powerless to do good or harm; to a Commission that could ride over the road and tell what experience they have had in their travels, but do nothing to regulate the corporations.

Now, sir, my only objection to this report is, that in addition to the Commission, it does not fix a maximum, as they have done in Wisconsin. It was said the other day that the Commission had been a failure in Wisconsin, and had been abandoned. I hold in my hand a letter received from the present Commissioner of Wisconsin to a member of this body, in which he says that a Commission exists there, with a maximum fixed to regulate the Commission; and he says more, that it has produced there a wonderful reformation, the benefit of which no one disputes. Now, I will ask the Secretary to read what I have marked there.

MR. PULLIAM. We want to know who it is. Read the whole letter.

MR. HOWARD. You will not know from me. The gentleman can state if he chooses.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I send you the railroad laws of this State as requested. Our State maintains its right to control railroads and all other corporations. Since the right of the State to do so has been affirmed, both by our Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of the United States, we have had no trouble, but the utmost harmony exists between the companies and the people. The Legislature at first established cast iron rates for the railroad companies, but in a couple of years they found it advisable to substitute maximum rates for cast iron rates, since which time there has been no conflict. Both the companies and the people are satisfied, and now I think the railroad companies would not repeal the law if they could; and a bill to repeal the law last winter was defeated by nearly a unanimous vote, so I suppose that the people desire to retain it."

MR. HOWARD. I wish to state merely that Mr. Nemo, the head of the bureau of statistics of Internal Revenue, has said the same thing, that wherever a Commission exists there is no trouble between the Commission and the railroad; that the railroad gives way and does what is right and just. Now, one word in relation to the parliamentary regulation in England. In eighteen hundred and fifty-four, there was no Commission in England with power to regulate. A debate took place in Parliament in eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and the Chief Justice stated that the Court upon whom that duty was devolved could not discharge it. Parliament organized a Commission and a subsequent decision makes the decision of the Commission binding upon all Courts. The Chief Justice said that no tribunal, except a special tribunal like the Commission which was then created, and like the Commission which we have now proposed to create, could deal with this subject with any intelligence, and with any efficiency, and with any power. That is an example for us. It is an example founded upon the experience of Great Britain, where the railroads were first organized, where they have done vast work, and where they are vast interests.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

PETITION.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I wish to present a petition signed by a large number of citizens of Solano County, asking that charitable institutions be exempt from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSION.

THE PRESIDENT. Section twenty-two and pending amendments are before the Convention.

SPEECH OF MR. GLASCOCK.

MR. GLASCOCK. Mr. President: Perhaps it becomes necessary for me to explain why I shall vote for this Railroad Commission. Some time ago there was published in several papers of this State, a notice that the people of Colusa County were opposed to the Railroad Commission. There was a meeting to consider matters pertaining to this Constitution. This matter of the Railroad Commission was discussed, but our views were unchanged. The sentiment of that meeting was against the Railroad Commission, as it stands, but they were in favor of it with the amendment which I offered yesterday. They were opposed to the commission having power to consent to the railroad company increasing its rates after having once reduced them. But, sir, I shall have to vote for this Commission. I shall do so upon my own judgment. I believe it will be for the interests of the people of this State. I believe there is some good left in it yet; and I shall support the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, if he will offer it, fixing a maximum for the government of that Commission. I shall vote for it for another reason—it will take this power from the Legislature. Every other interest of the State has been compelled to give way to this one interest. I believe the railroad company have controlled freights and fares so far, and if they control these Commissioners they will do no more in the future than they have done in the past, and the people of the State will be relieved from legislating upon that subject.

REMARKS OF MR. TOWNSEND.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I take this opportunity of saying that I shall vote against this Commission scheme, believing, when I do so, that I am doing what is just and right. I believe that it is a complete delusion, and that it will not accomplish what the people desire to accomplish, and that it does, in effect, as stated by the gentleman from Santa Clara, change our form of government, and creates a Commission never contemplated by the people. I am aware that it is a very unpopular thing to do in this Convention, but I shall vote against it, and leave it to time to vindicate my action.

SPEECH OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: As far as I am concerned, I am not going to attempt to go over the arguments that were made when this subject was under consideration before. The amendments proposed are nothing but a rehash of the old amendments considered by this Convention in Committee of the Whole, namely: Leave the whole question to the Legislature. The question has been left to the Legislature for the last ten or fifteen years, and we know exactly what the Legislature has done, and we know what they could not do. I think I may safely say that no thoughtful man, who has been in the Legislature of California, will state upon this floor that the Legislature can intelligently fix rates of freights and fares so that they will be just, and so that they will commend themselves to the consideration of the people as fair and just. They have not time to do it. They have not the means to do it. They have not the knowledge necessary. They only meet once in two years, and they have not the time to remedy the evil. Therefore it has been thought wise by the Committee on Corporations to report a measure whereby there will be a Commission. It has been admitted by people who have given this subject consideration everywhere, that any iron rule that cannot be changed as the necessities of the hour require would be a very great injustice, both to shippers and to people who are engaged as common carriers. The proper way is to have some power that can remedy the evils as they arise, hour after hour. Since the discussion of this question some time ago, Congress has taken hold of this subject, and the lower house of Congress, in pursuance of a resolution adopted, has passed a bill providing for the regulation of inter-State commerce—that is, commerce between States. One of the sections of that bill embodies the substance of the twenty-first section of this article, which we have already adopted. We find that by the Constitution of Wisconsin the Railroad Commission has about the same powers as ours will have here. The Commission of the State of Illinois is very similar to this one. It is true that the powers given them are powers given by the Legislature, and not by the Constitution. But that makes no difference as to the powers of the Commission.

Now, Mr. President, and gentleman of the Convention, I hope we will provide for a Railroad Commission. I believe that you can trust the people to elect three men who will deal fairly with these great evils. I believe it is wise to have an individual, personal responsibility resting in one, two, or three persons. Great responsibilities always bring great attention to duty, and I believe that the very existence of such a Commission will have a most marked influence upon the future prosperity of this State. I find in looking over the congressional debates on the Reagan bill, just passed, that it was shown conclusively, and not denied, that whenever wheat or corn, in the State of New York, increased in value eight, ten, or fifteen cents per bushel, the transportation companies made an increase in price of transportation by the pooling process, so that the producer received no benefit whatever from the increase in values. That was shown upon floor of Congress, and never denied. It was claimed that Congress should take charge of this matter, both as to freight and passengers, as between the States, and by a very good vote the lower house of Congress passed that bill. I think we can safely do as much as has been done by section twenty-two. I hope the amendment, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, will be adopted.

Before I sit down I wish to say one word as to section twenty-five. There is no earthly necessity for such a section. It was proposed by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington, who is not here. It is that the companies shall accept in good faith the provisions of this article before they shall receive any of the benefits. Now, if any gentleman on this floor can tell me what that means I will be obliged to him. As I understand it the companies do not want this amendment adopted. I believe that to be true. And I do not see what benefits there are in particular for them to accept. They much prefer the law as it is. I speak of it now because the previous question may shut it off. I hope that section twenty-five will be stricken out, because there is no reason for leaving it there.

SPEECH OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: It seems to be the order of the day to get on the record. I wish to put myself on the record on this question. Of course I know very well it will be said that I am sold. But I know my own motives, and I do not hold myself responsible to any one on this floor. I have always opposed this Commission scheme, and I shall continue to oppose it. I do not believe in taking away this power from the Legislature. The Legislature is the direct representative of the people, and when you take that power away you are violating the first fundamental principles of Republican institutions. This is anti-Republican. It is a Commission with unprecedented power. I am in favor of a Commission, but I want the Legislature to have control of it. I want the people to control it. If I was in Mr. Stanford's place nothing would suit me better than this Commission. Why? Before he has had to buy sixty or eighty men to carry his point. Now he has a chance to accomplish his purpose by buying two men. That is the point. When I came to this Convention I came under a pledge that I would reduce the taxes of the people; that I would try to devise some means to render this Government more economical. On the contrary, the way we are creating offices, it will cost fifty thousand dollars a year more to the people, and I have yet to find out where the people will be benefited one cent by it. Now, it is said that we cannot depend upon the Legislature, and yet we propose to rely upon the discretion of three men. Why, if the Legislature is so corrupt, I want to know where you are going to find three honest men to fill these positions. Now, sir, I am for regulating these corporations, as much so as any gentleman upon this floor. I am as radical as any man can be. I do not believe in half-way measures. If you want to take radical measures I shall sustain them. But in taking such measures you must be prepared for them. I want to go according to the law. I want to do what I think is right for the people. Consequently I don't want to create an expense that the people will have to pay, and where they do not receive any benefit in return. Let us pass laws governing these corporations. Let us pass laws compelling them to do what we tell them to do. But let us not take this power away from the people which the Government gives them, and place it in the hands of three men. I don't care what my enemies may say; I don't care what the correspondents may write down to the San Francisco papers, I shall stand up here like a man and express my views. I shall oppose this Commission scheme, unless the Legislature is given power over them.

SPEECH OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I promised the Convention that unless something occurred to make it necessary I would not address it again. Now, sir, before I came to this Convention I was solicited by the agent of the railroad companies to support this Commission clause. I declined. That the railroad at that time wanted this Commission I have no reason to doubt. I have no doubt that they can aid them in doing their work. You will recollect, sir, that after this Commission bill had passed this body, the Sandlot changed front, and from being opposed to it were in favor of it. And it is well known that the king of the Sandlot and the moneyed head of the State, Leland Stanford, had been talking together upon this subject. I do not know what connection there is between this and the vote, but if there is any devil's work in it, you can look in that direction for it. Gentlemen who are working for this Commission are going to do the railroad companies a great service. Those who are howling the loudest for this thing are doing the railroad work the best. Go on and get your Commission. You have left the Legislature to provide the machinery for this Board. Mr. Campbell wanted to give them the machinery of the Courts, so that Sheriffs would obey their orders. You voted that down. I voted against it because he refused to put in a proviso that these Commissioners should hear both sides. It was an eminently wise provision, and should have been adopted. How are you going to get along? What Court is going to issue them process? How is that process to be procured? Under what circumstances? I want you to tell me how it is to be done. There is not a man among you who can open his mouth and tell me. The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction originally. It is an appellate Court. The Superior Court must have jurisdiction beyond three hundred dollars. There may not be a cent involved. Without the provision which Judge Campbell offered you can do nothing. You say they are to hear and determine complaints against the railroad companies. It ought to be by and against the railroads. You have no officers to enforce your decrees. That is all left to the Legislature, and if the Legislature refuses to give you these officers, what are you going to do about it? How are you going to execute your orders? How are you going to enforce them? Of course Governor Stanford will control the Legislature. Of course he will. And he will control two out of three of these Commissioners, and you know it and I know it. I simply call your attention to these defects in this article, so that you may remedy them and make it effective if you want to. The learned gentlemen of the law ought to see to it, because their reputations are involved.

MR. ESTEE. If this amendment of Judge Campbell's was such a good amendment, how is it that you did not favor it?

MR. SHAFTER. Because he refused to put in an amendment that I wanted. I did not say it was perfect. It was good as far as it went, but it did not provide that the Commissioners might hear complaints in favor of the corporations, as well as against them.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I have no idea that we can amend this provision, or that we will do it, so that it will suit the gentleman from Marin. I would sooner undertake to provide a scheme of this sort that would suit the President of the Central Pacific Railroad Company himself, and certainly I should much prefer, and wish, that Leland Stanford himself should occupy a seat on this floor to some of the gentlemen he has sent here.

MR. SHAFTER. I beg to say that if the gentleman refers to me, it is a falsehood. I was nominated without the knowledge, or consent, and without my concurrence.

MR. REYNOLDS. 'Whose withers are wrung let him wince. The gentleman from Los Angeles this morning read from the Quarterly Review to show that this scheme has worked well in England. If gentlemen will look into the matter, they will find that this scheme, in many respects, is identical with that of England. There it has worked well, and has served to reconcile the railroads and the people. The universal experience has been that it is impossible for the Legislature to cope with the question. Now one section of the last bill in England is particularly applicable. It says that "any decision of the Commissioners under this section shall be binding in all Courts, and in all legal proceedings whatsoever." This Commission is made the Court of first instance, from which there is no appeal. It is the Court of first instance, and the Court of last resort at the same time. Its decisions are binding on all Courts, and it is in reference to that section that Mr. Adams remarks, that the power given to that Commission by that section has almost done away with the necessity for a Commission. The very fact that there is power in this Commission to decide these questions as they arise, renders it unnecessary for them ever to decide them. The railroad companies do not care to provoke the power of that Commission. They do not care to force a decision from that Commission. Why? Because they have reason to believe it would be just, and from it there is no appeal. Why, by that section the whole power of the kingdom is centered upon the railroad company, and from it there is no appeal. It is subject to appeal, it is true, but the whole power is given to them for the time being.

Now, the result of the amendment sought to be introduced here will be to leave the matter right where it is now. If any citizen of this State feels himself aggrieved at any charges or abuses whatever, he must go to law, with the sides so unequally balanced as between a single individual upon one side and the Central Pacific Railroad upon the other. That is the result of the amendment sought to be introduced here. I do not need to refer gentlemen of this Convention to the unequally balanced sides. Now, I do not expect or hope that we can amend this section so that it will suit the gentlemen who oppose it. I have no hope of that at all. But I do hope that in determining upon the amendments offered here, and in determining upon the final passage of this section, that we shall take into consideration the experience of the English Parliament upon this subject, and what Mr. Adams has said in reference to their action, that the very fact of having such a Commission has done away almost with the necessity of remedial measures. That is the effect of the statute there, and it will be the effect of this provision here. We are not without experience in our own country—in the Western States. They have had experience with Commissions without power, and they have brought little or no relief. This Commission must have power or it will avail us nothing.

SPEECH OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: In a few moments I expect to be called upon to cast my vote upon a proposition I don't believe has any precedent in history. It is a body entirely above the laws, and it is dangerous. Every State in the Union is subject to the laws of the Legislature. But, sir, I fear we are creating a body so powerful that it will be beyond all laws. It is a very easy matter to say that two thirds of the Legislature may impeach any member of this Commission. But I do not believe it can ever be done. How are you going to impeach them? Here is a Commission above the law, and how are you going to impeach them? That is the question as it appears to me. Now, sir, the gentleman from Los Angeles has read a letter here from the State of Wisconsin, showing that in that State there is no difficulty between the Commissioners and the railroads. That is a Commission created by the Legislature, and subject to the legislative power. And if that Commission worked well in Wisconsin, why should we try the experiment in the Constitution? Let these gentlemen stand upon this floor and say that the Constitution is the place to try experiments. In two years from now we don't expect to have another Convention meet in this State. It will be a woful experiment. If my party told me to vote for a Commission I would do it, because I consider their judgment superior to mine. But my platform is silent on that proposition. What is the Legislature to do? Here is one of the most formidable powers on the face of the globe to-day, that wields the destinies of millions of dollars, and you are going to bind the hands of the Legislature and say that they shall not open their mouths. There is the law-making power of the State, and you propose to bind their hands completely. Now, sir, the next question is, would it not be easy for the railroad company to control this Commission? Would it not be easier for them to buy one third of the Legislature than to buy a majority? By buying one third of the Legislature they can prevent the Commissioners from being impeached. If you are going to govern the State by absolute Commissions, why not extend it to all departments. I am not opposed to Commissions, but I want them to be subject to the will of the people, and not above it.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The controlling idea of the Committee on Corporations, in proposing a commission, may as well be stated again. Briefly it is this: The regulation of fares and freights could not be accomplished by any general law. There you have it in a nutshell. The universal experience of all Legislatures of all States attempting to deal with this subject is, that regulation cannot be accomplished by general law. That fact was realized, and the idea of a permanent Commission was adopted; a constitutional Commission, to do all that could not be done by general law. The gentleman from Santa Clara proposes to provide for a Commission subject to the control of the Legislature, with a maximum rate fixed. I deny that it would be fair and just to the railroad company. What would be a fair rate for this part of the State, where the bulk of the business is done, would be no rate at all for the rest of the State, consequently it is all a matter of regulation. It must be flexible; it must be determined by the business, by the trade, by the state of the market, by the demand; everything tends to change and fluctuate. Now, the gentlemen who are contending for legislative control lose sight of two propositions which inevitably follow. One of them is, that to say that it shall be under legislative control, is exactly equivalent to saying the Legislature shall regulate—can any gentleman point out the difference? Secondly, if the rates fixed are to be revised by the Legislature, it is better to leave it to the Legislature at once. And again, the members of this Commission are just as near to the people as the Legislature, and why do they want to draw this distinction? This section goes on the presumption that honest officials can be found. If the argument is good against giving this power to these Commissioners, it is equally good against giving such power to the Governor, to the Judges, and other officers. You place the property of the citizen in the hands of the Judges; why do you do it, and that without any financial security? You must trust to the honor and integrity of men. It is an utter impossibility to regulate freights and fares by general law. That was the conclusion of the Committee on Corporations, that it could not be done by general law; that it must be done by men elected for the purpose, who would make their calculations on what would be a fair return on the capital invested.

Another reason is this: that the people will have these officers, to whom they make their complaints. We want officers who can take hold of these abuses wherever and whenever found. All these things we took into consideration when considering this provision. We understand what we are doing here. We are not working into the hands of the railroads. The gentleman from Marin tells us he was solicited by the agent of the railroad company to come here and advocate this measure. I suppose, if he had told the whole of it, it would have been further, that he should come and tell us that such a request had been made of him. I would like to have the balance of the members who have been solicited to tell us who solicited them, and give us a few facts and figures. If we are going to regulate our conduct by the action of the railroad company—going against what they favor, and favoring what they go against—it is well that we should know it. I care not what may be their opinion about it; if it commends itself to my judgment, I shall give it my support. That is all there is about that. There ought to be no such motives in the minds of men. I am certain that the members of this Convention cannot be driven about by tales of that kind which are brought in here. They must handle the thing upon its merits, and if it is sufficient as a remedy, then give it their support. Now, the proposition of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland, is a better proposition than that of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine. It brings us to a direct issue upon the question. To move to strike out the whole would amount to the same thing. Either we want to know whether we are in favor of a Commission at all, and then whether we are in favor of a Commission with power to regulate freights and fares and correct abuses. That is all there is about it. If we are to have them controlled by the Legislature, I would be opposed to inflicting such a permanent tribunal upon the people. I would prefer to leave the whole subject to the Legislature at once. That would be consistent. I don't want a Commission of mud; of straw. We want a Commission with some power to compel obedience to its mandates; otherwise we want none at all.

REMARKS OF MR. CHAPMAN.

MR. CHAPMAN. Mr. President: I fail to see anything in this as a business proposition; therefore I want to go upon the record as opposed to this scheme, and I shall vote against it. In doing so, I will say this: that I believe freights and fares can be regulated by a Commission; but it is like buying stocks—you may get a good one, and you may not; therefore I want to put myself on record against it.

SPEECH OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: If I am forced to vote for or against this section, as it now stands, I shall have to vote for it. But I do so with extreme reluctance, because I believe that it is so imperfect that it is doubtful whether it can be carried into full operation. So far as the mode of appointing the Commission is concerned, I differ with the majority as to the mode of appointing and the tenure of office. In that I was overruled. I have nothing further to say upon that branch of the subject. But in looking at the machinery by which we propose to carry out the scheme, the more I look at it the more imperfect I find it, and I do hope that the friends of this measure will rerefer this section to the Committee on Corporations, for revision.

Now, allow me to point out a few of the difficulties which will arise under the section as it now stands. Judge Shafter referred to the difficulty about having the process of the Courts. I endeavored to have that remedied, to enable the Commission to issue subpœnas, and to punish in the same way as Courts do, a failure to obey its orders. In looking over it I see some things in it which did not strike me at first, which have not been mentioned upon this floor, and which are of vital importance towards the execution of this scheme. After saying that it shall have process of the Courts, it goes on: "To hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, administer oaths and take testimony, to punish for contempt of their orders and processes in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their decisions and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts." Now, how will the Courts interpret that? Now, if that be one sentence, are they to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record? If so, then they must have all the machinery of Courts of record. They must issue their summons, publish their complaints, and file them, and proceed to a regular trial, as in other cases, and then the parties will be entitled to a jury trial before the Commissioners. Now, I had supposed the object of this plan was to invest the Commission with full power to hear and determine complaints. But if that is the intention, it is so bunglingly expressed that it is liable to misconstruction, and especially in a case where such vast powers are vested.

Another thing: as it stands now, it is to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies. Complaints for what? There is no limit to it. It is not limited to complaints relating to the transportation of freight and passengers, or for the non-execution of any particular contract, for instance. Then you say: "To enforce their decisions, send for papers, etc., to the same extent as Courts of record." After giving them all this power, still you say that they have to exercise this power and enforce their decisions through the medium of the Courts.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will confine himself to the amendment before the Convention.

MR. CAMPBELL. As far as the amendment is concerned, I am opposed to it. I hope that some of the friends of this measure will move to have it referred to some committee for revision.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: Personally, I have no enmity towards the railroad, or any other corporation in this State. But, as between the people of the State of California and the railroad companies, I am for the people all the time. Therefore I shall support the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole, fully believing that there are plenty of honest men in this State from among whom three good and proper men for the place can be chosen. If I did not do all in my power to correct these abuses my constituency would call me to account for not having done so. Therefore I am very sorry to see some of the Workingman's delegates upon this floor fall down on their knees, after having voted for this Commission in Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Mr. President: I am for the section as it stands. What seems to be the matter is that this railroad company has constituted itself the law, the Judge, and the jury, and whenever the people begin to want to be the law, the Judge, and the jury, then the cry is raised that we are trying to destroy corporations. We gave these lands to the railroad people. We gave them the money to build this road, and they have been putting on airs ever since. Now, we claim the right to have something to say about it, with regard to freights and fares. Whenever the railroad gets above the authority of the people, then it ought to be proclaimed a nuisance and abated.

SPEECH OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I desire to say one word. The gentleman used a very ingenious argument, though I am surprised that he should use so shallow a one, that the railroad wanted this Commission. The gentleman from Marin said they solicited him to go for it. I am sorry he said it, because it is impossible to believe it, and I am sorry the gentleman from Santa Clara ever made use of the argument. This Convention has been denounced by the subsidized press all over the State for passing this Commission bill. We have been vilified upon this floor, and denounced for the Constitution we are making. We are trying to inaugurate the reforms which the people have demanded. There was a desperate effort made to defeat the calling of this Convention, and then to cripple it. The same people are trying to defeat our work here. We promised the people we would reform taxation, and we have done that. Then we proposed to curb the railroad, and that they do not want, and they come here and tell us we are doing the work of the railroad, and a gentleman of character and standing in the community comes forward and says we are doing Leland Stanford's work. I tell you, if we stand by our guns, this will be the greatest victory the people have ever won over aggregated wealth, and over the moneyed power of the country. I again appeal to the men who are for the people to stand by their guns.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: The reason I was in favor of a Commission, as a member of the Committee on Corporations, was that I realized that it was utterly impossible for the Legislature to fix rates of freights and fares for the very reason that the very first principle in these rates is that they must be reasonable and just. This question of fact is always involved, and always will be, in fixing rates—are those rates reasonable, and just, and fair, as against the railroad company as well as against the people? Now, even our Commissioners, when they act, must act with reference to that fact. Are the rates just and reasonable? We can declare that the rates so fixed shall be deemed just and reasonable; but, sir, if we fix the rates at three cents per mile, here arises the question, is that a reasonable rate? If it is not it is bound to work a hardship either to the companies or to the people. There is nothing flexible about it. It is a freight and fare bill in the Constitution, which cannot be altered as the case demands. Now, that ought to be an open fact, and the Commissioners have power to decide that fact. I am, therefore, in favor of a Commission. I do not like this section reported by the Committee of the Whole. I am in favor of the original section reported by the Committee on Corporations. It is short, direct, and to the point. I hope the Convention will vote this down and adopt the original section.

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

Mr. GRACE. Mr. President: I had thought it would be unnecessary for me to speak upon this question. Perhaps the Convention think so still. There has been a great deal of talk about going on the record, and I too propose to go upon the record. I intend to favor the section as it is, though it is not yet perfect, not exactly what I want. There are some things in the amendment of Judge Campbell I would like. I believe these Commissioners should ride over the railroads free of charge. I am sorry to see one of the members from the sand lot, Mr. Joyce, has fallen down. When I see a disposition on the part of men to go back on the very principles they were pledged to represent and support, I cannot help but feel sorry. It is the duty of every working man in this State, of every producing man, and every business man, to stand squarely up and toe the mark on this question. I know the people of these corporations, and I want this section amended until it is perfect. If these people can get a loop-hole made in it they will drive a cart through.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: I rise to make a personal explanation. I wish to inform the gentleman's ignorance, that as far as I am concerned, I have been opposed to this Commission all the time. All my colleagues know that I have been against a Commission.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Didn't you vote for it in the Committee of the Whole?

MR. JOYCE. I voted for it as I shall to-day, for a Commission with limited powers and some modifications.

MR. WELLIN. I will say that Mr. Joyce never did favor a Commission.

MR. GORMAN. Mr. Joyce never did favor this Commission. I wish to correct the mistake. He was elected from the same district as myself, and he never favored the proposition. I am in favor of a Commission, though I would rather accomplish the object in some other way, but I can see no other possible way to do it. It must be a permanent body in order to do any good. The Legislature will sit but sixty days every two years, and they cannot possibly act intelligently in regulating freights and fares. I must support this bill, because I see no other way.

MR. GRACE. It seems they are trying to misrepresent what I said. I said I believed he had fallen down. I had not been personally acquainted with him. I had never learned that he was against it. I did not charge that he was, but I believed so, and I still believe so. [Laughter.]

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order, in regard to the rights of Mr. Joyce—that he who stands up for what is right has not fallen down at any time.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland.

MR. GORMAN. Ayes and noes.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I beg leave to say three or four words. I am here to represent the people of San Francisco, and I shall endeavor to do so, and to do my duty as I understand it. I shall vote in favor of section twenty-two. I do not think that it is entirely correct. One reason is that it takes a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to the Legislature to remove them. In my opinion it places the Commissioners too far from the people, in case a Commission is created. For that reason I do not like that portion of it. But if we cannot get anything better I shall vote for it, for the reason that I do not believe the Legislature has time to regulate fares and freights. Every man has a right to vote as he thinks right, and any man has as much right to vote against this as I have for it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland. The Secretary will read the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after line ten and insert, 'to inquire into abuses by railroad corporations and other transportation companies, and report the same, annually, to the Governor; and to exercise such further powers over such corporations and companies as shall be conferred upon them by the Legislature. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of the powers hereby given said Commissioners, and for the enforcement of such other powers as shall be hereafter conferred on them by law.'"

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Gorman, White, Heiskell, Farrell, and Wellin.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out all after the words 'section twenty-two,' of the report of the Committee of the Whole, and insert the following, viz: 'The Legislature shall pass laws to correct abuses and prevent unjust discriminations in the rates of freight and passenger tariffs on the different railroads in this State, and shall, from time to time, pass laws establishing maximum rates for the transportation of passengers and freight on said railroads; provided, that said maximum rates shall not exceed three cents per mile for passenger rates, nor three cents per ton per mile for freight, which maximum rates are hereby fixed and established until the same shall be lowered by the Legislature.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

SPEECH OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I wish to say a word on that amendment. I know, sir, that the gentleman from Santa Clara is entirely honest and sincere in this matter. I think he offers this amendment in the utmost good faith. I have to object to it in the first place, because it takes the whole thing away from the Commission and submits it to the Legislature, which is practically submitting it to the lobby. Then, sir, he provides for placing the maximum for freights at three cents per ton per mile. Now, Commissioner Tuttle testified before the committee that the present average rates of the Central Pacific was two cents and one hundred and seventy-seven thousandths, and therefore this would be merely an invitation to the railroad company to raise its rates. Again, it applies to all roads in the State, and short roads could not be operated at any such rates. Therefore I regard the provision as entirely impracticable. Those are my reasons for opposing the amendment. I do not question the sincerity or the honesty of any man who votes for it; I merely say it does not conform to my views of what is proper.

Now, the statement has been made here by the gentleman from Marin, and I am sorry that he is not in his seat. He tells you that the President of the Central Pacific is for this Commission. Now, sir, I am informed from a source which I entirely believe, which I know to be one of integrity—who might be mistaken, but who would not make any intentional mistake—that at first the President did favor a Commission. But after the report was made he sent it to his associates in New York, and they wrote back instructions that it should be opposed and defeated at all hazards, and upon that followed the letter of Leland Stanford attacking the report of the committee. That is the history of that thing. That is the whole of it. And, therefore it is I say that the President and his company have been fighting this Commission all the time. He also stated that there had been a conversation between the king of the Sandlots and Leland Stanford on this subject, and that thereafter the Sandlot changed front on the subject. Now, sir, that may be true, and it may not be true. The statement of the gentleman is the first evidence of its truth that I have ever heard. Now, sir, I have this to say, that the course of the Workingmen upon this floor upon this subject has raised them in my estimation, and I have a much higher opinion of them than I had when I came to this Convention. I believe they are sincere and honest. I know, sir, that a certain dark sheet in this town has been whispering in the ears of members of this Convention, as the serpent, in the Garden of Eden, whispered in the ear of Eve. The members have been invited to dinner and wine at an open place of entertainment, and I am surprised that so few have yielded to corrupt influences. Gentlemen, for one, when it comes to an election, I shall vote for a candidate for Governor without reference to party, if he is only sound and to be trusted in this matter. [Applause.]

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

Lost.

MR. BIGGS. Ayes and noes.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Ayes and noes.

MR. WELLIN. Ayes and noes.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting between the word 'incompetency' and the word 'and,' in forty-sixth line, the following: 'and whenever the Legislature shall, as herein provided, remove from office any one or more of said Commissioners, it may also, by a two-thirds vote, modify or set aside such act or acts constituting the cause of such removal.'"

SPEECH OF MR. HUESTIS.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: Now, sir, this amendment is in substance the one I offered in Committee of the Whole, and being at a late hour, the Convention was tired. It received considerable support, though it was defeated. In offering this amendment, I want it distinctly understood that I favor the theory of a Commission. I am impliedly pledged to that idea. But I am also opposed to the idea advanced by Judge Campbell, that this report should be recommitted to the committee. We have got to meet this issue, and I am for meeting the issue squarely. But at the same time I implore the friends of this section to give it full and ample consideration, and to allow it to be amended and perfected as far as possible before we come to a final vote upon it. Now, sir, the Committee of the Whole, by their report, have recognized the principle of Legislative supervision by providing that the Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to both houses, to remove any one or more of said Commissioners. Now the amendment I propose is simply this, and it seems to me to be not at all antagonistic to the general theory of the section, that the same Legislature, or any subsequent Legislature, may, by the same vote, modify or set aside the act or acts of said Commissioners constituting the cause of removal. I submit to the gentlemen of this Convention, that this is perfectly right and fair. I submit further, that it will remove a great stumbling block in the way of the adoption of this Constitution. That is one of the greatest objections urged, that you are empowering three men with legislative, executive, and judicial functions, who are not responsible or subordinate to any branch of government. I will here state that I will vote for this section as it now stands, provided I cannot secure the amendments which I deem necessary. But I would like to see some of the defects rubbed out, and the section perfected. No man can question my standing upon this proposition, for votes speak louder than words.

MR. BIGGS. I rise to inquire whether the minority have any rights upon this floor to put themselves on record on this thing? If we have, the previous question was asked for by the requisite number. The ayes and noes were asked for. The Chair didn't recognize either Mr. Laine or myself.

THE PRESIDENT. The decision was announced before any one called for the ayes and noes.

MR. BIGGS. I would like to state the circumstances——

THE PRESIDENT. The matter is not before the Convention.

MR. BIGGS. Then I understand that the minority cannot place themselves on record; is that the ruling?

THE PRESIDENT. You don't understand any such thing.

MR. LAINE. I am satisfied the Chair is mistaken. The demand was made before the vote was ever taken, by the requisite number standing up. I appeal to the Convention as to the truth of that.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: Will not the vote be upon the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara? Are not the ayes and noes called for now?

THE PRESIDENT. The thing has been voted down, the result is announced, and it is not before the Convention. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis.

MR. HUESTIS. Ayes and noes. [No second.]

The amendment was lost.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-two by striking out all after the word 'Commission,' in lines nine and ten, and add as follows: 'Said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to revise the rates and charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad and other transportation companies, as fixed by such companies; and, whenever they shall deem it necessary or just, to provisionally alter such rates and charges, and to establish just rates and charges for such transportation, and to publish the same from time to time, subject however to the revision and alteration of each successive Legislature. They shall also have power, and it shall be their duty, to collect all available statistics and information that may serve as a reasonable basis for their own action in the performance of their duties, and for the action of the Legislature in the regulation and control of such corporations, and in the regulation of freights and fares for the transportation of freights and passengers by such transportation companies. Said Commissioners shall at least biennially, and at least six months before the regular biennial meeting of the Legislature, file in the office of the Secretary of State a compiled and digested report of their proceedings, and of all the useful statistics and information collected by them in pursuance of their duties, together with their recommendations, for the information of the people and of the Legislature of the State. For the purpose of the performance of their duties, said Commissioners, and each of them, shall have the right to examine the books, records, and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and they shall have the process of the Superior Court of the county in which such books, records, and papers may be, to enforce such right; and shall have the right and power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and take testimony; and any witness who shall willfully swear or affirm falsely to any material matter before said Commissioners, or any of them, shall be guilty of the crime of perjury; and any witness who shall, when duly cited to appear and testify before said Commissioners, willfully refuse or neglect to so appear and testify, shall be guilty of contempt, and shall be punished therefor, upon proper complaint and notice by a Superior Court, as in cases of contempt of such Court. Any officer of any railroad or other transportation company, and any person having the care, custody, or control of the books, records, papers, or documents of any such company, who shall refuse any of said Commissioners access thereto, when at any reasonable time requested, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished therefor as may be prescribed by law; and any officer, agent, servant, or employé of any such company who shall demand or receive any greater rate or charge for the transportation of freight or passengers than the rate or charge provisionally established by said Commissioners, or as regulated by the Legislature, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished therefor as may be provided by law. In any action against any railroad or other transportation company for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge or jury, recover exemplary damages. The Legislature may impose other and additional duties, and confer further powers upon such Commissioners; and shall provide for the printing and public distribution of the reports of said Commissioners, prior to each election of members of the Legislature.'"

SPEECH OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I know when the Convention are as tired as they are now they would much rather talk of something else besides railroads. I understand, as most members do, that amid all the noise and confusion it is impossible to understand what an amendment is by simply hearing it read at the desk, and under these circumstances, I beg leave to explain the amendment which I offer. Now, sir, in the first place, I would like to say that I hope the vote on this may not be reached until after the adjournment of this Convention; until you can have a chance to see what it is, and whether the section is worth amending at all; and even if it is not worth amending, there may be something else that is worth considering, distinctive from the report of the Committee of the Whole as amended. I am satisfied, in the first place, that substantial control over the transportation companies of this State can be exercised by the Legislature of this State without the aid of a Commission. It seems to me that does not require any argument; and the question before this body has been, whether, first, shall we have a Commission; and second, shall it be merely an Advisory Commission, or shall it be a Commission with final powers? Now, sir, I hold that a Commission without some power is an utterly useless thing. I have no recommendations to make in regard to a Commission of that kind, but a Commission supplied with power to obtain full and accurate statistical and other information upon which any legislative body might reasonably act within the limited time of their session. They could take the recommendations of the Commission for what they are worth. I would be satisfied with such a Commission as we have at the present time, but I recognize the fact that the demand is made by men of high character, and by a considerable amount of public opinion, for a Commission with further powers. I have, therefore, distinctly and deferentially proposed to this Convention the idea of a Commission armed with power to acquire the necessary information upon which a legislative body might reasonably act. I have also provided that "said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to revise the rates and charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad and other transportation companies, as fixed by such companies; and, whenever they shall deem it necessary or just, to provisionally alter such rates and charges, and to establish just rates and charges for such transportation, and to publish the same from time to time, subject, however, to the revision and alteration of each successive Legislature. They shall also have power, and it shall be their duty, to collect all available statistics and information that may serve as a reasonable basis for their own action in the performance of their duties, and for the action of the Legislature, in the regulation and control of such corporations, and in the regulation of freights and fares for the transportation of freights and passengers by such transportation companies. Said Commissioners shall, at least biennially, and at least six months before the regular biennial meeting of the Legislature, file, in the office of the Secretary of State, a compiled and digested report of their proceedings, and of all the useful statistics and information collected by them in pursuance of their duties, together with their recommendations, for the information of the people and of the Legislature of the State." I confess I do not know whether it is necessary or not to make this provision, as it will be only about a year and nine months in which they will have the exercise of this power, but I am willing to make this concession. I will read the remainder of it:

"For the purpose of the performance of their duties said Commissioners, and each of them, shall have the right to examine the books, records, and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and they shall have the process of the Superior Court of the county in which such books, records, and papers may be, to enforce such right; and shall have the right and power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and take testimony; and any witness who shall willfully swear or affirm falsely to any material matter before said Commissioners, or any of them, shall be guilty of the crime of perjury; and any witness who shall, when duly cited to appear and testify before said Commissioners, willfully refuse or neglect to so appear and testify, shall be guilty of contempt, and shall be punished therefor, upon proper complaint and notice by a Superior Court, as in cases of contempt of such Court. Any officer of any railroad or other transportation company, and any person having the care, custody, or control of the books, records, papers, or documents of any such company, who shall refuse any of said Commissioners access thereto, when at any reasonable time requested, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished therefor as may be prescribed by law; and any officer, agent, servant, or employé of any such company who shall demand or receive any greater rate or charge for the transportation of freight or passengers than the rate or charge provisionally established by said Commissioners, or as regulated by the Legislature, shall be guilty of misdemeanor and punished therefor as may be provided by law. In any action against any railroad or other transportation company for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge or jury, recover exemplary damages. The Legislature may impose other and additional duties, and confer further powers upon such Commissioners, and shall provide for the printing and public distribution of the reports of said Commissioners, prior to each election of members of the Legislature."

Now, I respectfully submit this proposition, and hope that it will be given due and careful consideration.

MR. MURPHY. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Reddy, Mansfield, Tinnin, and Hunter.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the Convention refused to order the main question, ayes 47, noes 48.

MR. BIGGS. I wish to give notice——

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

MR. BIGGS. There was a rule made that notices to reconsider must be sent up in writing.

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mariposa, Judge Jones.

Lost—ayes, 1. [Laughter.]

MR. PROUTY. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting after the word 'House,' in line forty-four, 'to either change the action of, or.'"

MR. PROUTY. Mr. President: It occurs to me that we ought to be very careful, and not place the power that is now in the hands of the people entirely beyond the reach of the people. We propose here that the Legislature shall have power over them by a two-thirds vote, to remove any one or more of them. Now, it seems to me, if you confide in the Legislature the power to remove the agents that you place here to do the business of the people, that we ought to give them power to change any harm that may have been committed by the Commission. We can simply remove them, as it stands now, while the wrong they may do remains.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I call for the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Howard, West, Evey, White, and Inman.

MR. LAINE. Does this bring us to a vote upon the whole article.

THE PRESIDENT. Yes, sir. First upon the amendments, and then the question comes upon the engrossment of the article.

MR. ESTEE. If there is any amendment I will withdraw it. It strikes me that the subject must be exhausted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the Convention refused to order the main question, by a vote of 51 ayes to 56 noes.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: There is no amendment pending now. The question is now upon the report of the Committee of the Whole. I wish to make a few remarks. I believe, from the beginning to the end of this debate, I have been in favor of the appointment of Commissioners. When it was before the Committee of the Whole I defended the measure with all my weight and power. My effort has been to obtain a Commission in the Constitution. Now, while I favor this provision, I would like to see that it is put in some efficient shape, so that it can be operated. And when we are called upon to stand to our guns, that is well enough in battle. It is well enough when you are contending for a principle, and the principle here is that such a Commission should be established. If that is what you mean, then I stand by my guns. But if it means to stand by the document as it is, whether it be right or wrong; whether it be efficient or not; whether it is a worthless piece of paper, or something that will give that result which this people desire—relief from oppression; if it be that it must be forced upon us, right or wrong, I don't stand by my gun. On the contrary, I will turn my back and leave it in the ditch. Now, sir, I want this thing—whatever it may be—perfect, so that it will operate. It is not a perfect thing now, and no man of intelligence, let him be a friend to this measure or an enemy, could conscientiously say that this is a perfect measure. Every friend of the measure ought to be willing to see it improved. Why not, as reasonable men, reason together, and ascertain whether we can improve it or not? Whether we can make it more perfect? Now, this is imperfect, because it will not work out. I have here an amendment, which I will allude to briefly, which I think will improve it. It says:

"Said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad or other transportation companies, and publish the same from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records, and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have process of the Courts; to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their decisions and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts."

Now comes the penal clause: "Said Commissioners shall prescribe a uniform system of accounts to be kept by all such corporations and companies, and they shall keep their accounts according to such system. Any railroad corporation or transportation company which shall fail, or refuse to conform to such rates as shall be established by such Commissioners, or shall charge rates in excess thereof, or shall fail to keep their accounts in accordance with the system prescribed by the Commission, shall be fined," etc.

How are you to fine them, and how are you to enforce the rates of fares and freight. This does not give them power to do it. It says they may punish and fine. You must go to the Legislature and get laws passed by which you can get them indicted. Some of these things sound very well, but they are utterly useless and worthless without the necessary machinery. I have not time now to explain it fully, so I will send up my substitute and have the Secretary read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out amendment of committee and insert the following:

'SEC. 22. The State shall be divided into three districts as nearly equal in population as practicable, in each of which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the regular gubernatorial elections, whose salary shall be fixed by law, and whose term of office shall be four years. Said Commissioners shall be qualified electors of this State and of the district from which they are elected, and shall not be interested in any railroad corporation, or other transportation company, as stockholder, creditor, agent, attorney, or employé, and the act of a majority of said Commissioners shall be deemed the act of said Commission. Said Commissioners shall have free passage on all railroads, and they shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad or other transportation companies, and by common carriers on railroads, and publish the same from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records, and papers of all such common carriers, railroad and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have process of the Courts; to hear and determine complaints by and against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their rates of charges as established, and their decisions, and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts. Said Commissioners shall prescribe a uniform system of accounts to be kept by all such corporations and companies, and they shall keep their accounts according to such system. Any railroad corporation or transportation company which shall fail or refuse to conform to such rates as shall be established by such Commissioners, or shall charge rates in excess thereof or shall fail to keep their accounts in accordance with the system prescribed by the Commission, shall be fined not exceeding twenty thousand dollars for each offense, and every officer, agent, or employé of any such corporation or company, who shall demand or receive rates in excess thereof, or who shall in any manner violate the provisions of this section, shall be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the County Jail not exceeding one year. In all controversies, civil or criminal, the rates of fares and freights established by said Commission shall be deemed conclusively just and reasonable. Any party aggrieved may have a right of action against such corporation, company, or carrier for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, and in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge, or jury, recover exemplary damages. Said Commission shall report to the Governor, annually, their proceedings, and such other facts as may be deemed important. Nothing in this section shall prevent individuals from otherwise maintaining actions against any of such companies or carriers. The Legislature may, in addition to any penalties herein prescribed, enforce this article by forfeiture of franchise and charter, or otherwise, and may confer such further powers on the Commissioners as shall be necessary to enable them to perform their duties. The Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, to remove any one or more of said Commissioners from office, for dereliction of duty, or corruption, or incompetency; and whenever from any cause a vacancy in office shall occur in said Commission, the Governor shall fill the same by the appointment of a qualified person thereto, who shall hold office for the unexpired term."

MR. TINNIN. I am satisfied there is merit in the proposition submitted by the gentleman, and it should receive due and careful consideration. I move, therefore, that section twenty-two be temporarily passed, and that this be printed in the Journal and made the special order for to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock.

MR. BROWN. I second the motion.

MR. SCHELL. I move it be printed in the Journal.

MR. HALE. I have examined the substitute, and I believe it will meet with the approval of the Convention. I hope it may be adopted. I hope, however, that it will be printed in the Journal, so that members can see what it is. I have an amendment, also, which I wish to have printed in the Journal, and to-morrow morning the Convention will be able to judge of this matter.

THE PRESIDENT. Your amendment is not in order.

MR. HALE. I only ask leave to have it printed in the Journal.

MR. AYERS. I move we pass section twenty-two.

MR. HALE. Is it in order to ask to have it printed?

THE PRESIDENT. Not at present. If there is no objection these amendments will be ordered printed in the Journal.

The following is the proposed amendment of Mr. Hale, ordered printed in the Journal.

"Amend section twenty-two, as reported from the Committee of the Whole, by striking out all after the word 'Commission,' where it occurs in ninth and tenth lines, down to and including the word 'Courts,' where it occurs in twentieth line, and substitute the following: 'Said Commissioners shall have free passage on all railroads, and they shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates and charges for the transportation of passengers and freights by all railroads or other transportation companies and carriers on railroads, and publish the same, from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records, and papers of such carriers and railroad and other transportation companies; to hear and determine complaints by and against such carriers, railroad, and other transportation companies; to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and correct abuses, and, through the medium of the Courts, enforce their orders and decisions, including the said rates of charges as established by them, and shall, therefor, have process of the Courts.'"

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I move we do now adjourn.

Carried, and at four o'clock and thirty minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at half-past nine o'clock.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for one day was granted to Mr. Dudley, of Solano; for three days, to Mr. Walker, of Marin; for four days, to Mr. Herrington.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

AMENDING RULE FORTY-THREE.

MR. DAVIS. Mr. President: I gave notice that to-day I would move to amend Rule Forty-three, by striking out the word "ten" and inserting the word "five." I now make that motion because I believe members can explain their views in five minutes. The arguments are generally the same as they were in Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not prevail. I oppose it because it is cutting off debate, and it will be one of the means of defeating this Constitution. No man can make an intelligent argument in five minutes on any subject. When I have anything to say, I say it as quickly as possible, but I don't believe in cutting off debate. It is in the interest of the adoption of this Constitution, not to adopt this amendment. Five minutes is not time enough. There are two great points to come before this Convention, and if they are not carried in the interest of the people, the Constitution will be beaten in San Francisco.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I regret very much to have to differ with the gentleman from Nevada, but I believe it is unwise to restrict debate to a less period than ten minutes. We are here under peculiar circumstances. In matters of legislation every delegate knows, and particularly those who have been members of the Legislature, that the latter part of the sessions vicious legislation is very apt to be passed, and a great many errors and mistakes creep in. But in matters of ordinary legislation, there are checks and balances that you do not have in a Constitutional Convention. If the Assembly has hastily passed a bill the Senate can defeat it. If the Senate acts hastily, the Assembly can review it, and if both Houses act hastily, there is the executive veto. Here we have no coördinate branch, and for that very reason we should be very careful what we do. It is almost impossible, in a body like this to avoid mistakes, the best we can do. I know there are delegates who feel that they ought to be at home, but it behooves to guard against mistakes and hasty action now more than at any time since the Convention met.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: I must differ with my colleague. I do not believe ten minutes to be time enough, much less five. Hence I hope the amendment will not be passed.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I am under the impression that it would be wrong for this amendment to pass. There are some men who will not speak more than five minutes, but there are grave questions yet before this body, and it is important that they should be well understood and acted upon advisedly. I think it would be decidedly wrong to adopt this amendment at this time.

The motion to amend the rule was lost.

PETITIONS.

Messrs. Larue, Morse, and Burt presented petitions, requesting the exemption of certain property, used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSION.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Placer, Judge Hale, to section twenty-two.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: There is one provision in that amendment which I cannot vote for, and that is the provision which gives the company the right to sue these Commissioners.

MR. HAGER. That word is not in my amendment. It was put in at the suggestion of some one at the last moment. I will allow it to be stricken out.

MR. WILSON, of First District. If the gentleman put it in at the suggestion of somebody, why does he strike it out?

MR. HAGER. I put it in there because I thought the railroad companies should have a hearing before the Commissioners if they did anything that they consider wrong. But some think that it goes too far. If it goes to the extent of allowing them to be sued, it does go too far. It was put in at the last moment.

SPEECH OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I would like to inquire upon what legal principle, or upon what theory of right this Convention assumes to compel the transportation companies to carry anybody free over their road. I want to know if there is any principle through which it could be done, except upon the naked principle of the usurpation of absolute power. Now, sir, it could only be done upon the theory that these transportation companies, at some time or another, had entered into a contract to carry somebody which would include these Commissioners. Unless that has been done, you have no more power to order them to do so than you have to order them to carry this Convention, or to carry all the officers of this State, or to carry all the red-headed men in this State, or all the women in this State.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Is it not in both the Acts creating the two former Commissions?

MR. McFARLAND. I don't know, sir. If it is, it has no business there. Now, sir, I have examined the statute to some extent, though not fully, and the only place I can find anything wherein the railroad company has agreed to anything of this kind is in a statute passed April fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four. There is a little bit of history connected with it, too. That was at the time when certain States of this Union were in open rebellion; and after reciting these facts the Act goes on to provide: first, for the issuance of bonds by the State, or to secure the interest on bonds for the company; second, to levy taxes for that purpose. And section four provides the conditions of this grant: that it is made upon the express conditions and considerations that the said Central Pacific Railroad Company shall at all times convey troops over their said road, etc. Now, that is the only law I can find on the subject. Now, you propose to say, by this Constitution, that this company shall carry certain parties free. Where is the power? Where is the right? You have just as much right to say that every hotel in this State shall feed these Commissioners free of charge. You have just as much right to say that the clothing merchant shall clothe them free; that their whisky and cigars shall be furnished free. There is no principle in law by which you can say that common carriers shall carry them free, unless they have agreed to do it. The utmost extent to which the doctrine in the Elevator cases goes, is that parties doing certain kinds of business may be regulated. It says that they may charge only so much for storing wheat in their private warehouses, but it nowhere says that they shall store wheat for nothing. The extent of that doctrine is that you may say how much a man may charge, but it does not go to the extent of saying that they shall do certain things without remuneration. Now, what right have you to say that the transportation companies of this State shall carry these three men all over the State free any more than anybody else. It is not upon the theory that the railroad belongs to the State. Nobody claims that. The State has admitted otherwise. The railroads belong to the companies who own them; who own the land and the right of way. Who owns the locomotives? Not you, sir. Do they belong to this Convention, or to the State? Is it private property, or is it public property? It is private property, and you have said so. Now, you propose to say to the men owning this property that they shall do business on it for nothing. I say you have no such power. You have as much right to say that my friend Dr. Caples shall furnish bread to these men free of cost.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I cannot agree with the views of the gentleman from Sacramento. It occurs to me that the Elevator case goes upon the police power of the State. Now, we propose to look after these transportation companies under the police power, and to carry out that power, it necessarily carries with it all the incidents. One of these incidents is the supervision of travel upon these roads, to see the manner in which they conduct business, and what is necessary to be done by these Commissioners. Whenever a power is granted, every incident connected with that power is also granted to make it effectual. It is the police power, the sovereign power, and all the incidents go with that police power. Therefore, I maintain that this police power, being one of the requisites for this supervision of these companies, every incident connected with that power is also granted. These Commissioners have not only the right to look out for them, to see that their rates of freights and fares are just and right, but to use all the necessary means for the purpose of acquiring the information and data upon which to fix the rates of freights and fares. That is my proposition. Aside from that there is a constitutional provision reserving the power to alter or abolish these charters. I consider, under that reserved power, irrespective of any particular contract, we have the right to have these Commissioners to travel upon these roads. And, sir, that is the law at present. That is the law made and passed by the last Legislature. If that law be unconstitutional, why has not an effort been made to present a case to test it? I contend, that under the police power and the reserved power of the State, we have a right to provide that these Commissioners shall ride free over every railroad in California. There is one question I would like to ask the gentleman from San Francisco. He says that these Railroad Commissioners shall have process of the Courts. I would like to know what Courts? Under this Constitution, we have established a number of Courts. We have established Superior Courts and inferior Courts. That language is not sufficiently plain. Though I shall support the section as it stands, yet at the same time I think it is ambiguous. It appears to me we had better designate the Courts.

MR. HAGER. That is not my amendment; that is in the original section. I merely made two amendments, and copied the remainder of the section.

MR. JOHNSON. These inferior Courts will be also Constitutional Courts. It may be argued that these Commissioners would have a right to process from those Courts. The language ought to be plainer in that respect.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I rise, sir, to place myself on record. I have a substitute I want to offer for the whole report.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

Digitized by Google

MR. DOWLING. I do not care what any man in this House thinks about the motives which actuate me in offering the amendment which I shall offer, or in offering my humble protest against this Railroad Commission scheme. I believe a great many are supporting this scheme in good faith, because they cannot get any relief from the Legislature. The Legislature has confessed itself unable to do anything. It has admitted that it is helpless in the matter, and we now put the whole power in the hands of a Commission—in the hands of three men elected from the districts, which is, in my opinion, a very dangerous precedent. Now, sir, I have received a letter from a gentleman in San Francisco, in which he says: "The creation of a Railroad Commission is, in my opinion, clearly a fraud upon the people. Government in civilized countries is divided into three distinct legislative branches, working harmoniously together in coöperation, and yet in separate lines. This Commission will find these three great branches of government placed into their hands. They make laws, execute their own laws, and determine and judge of their own laws. It is an absurdity. The principle is wrong."

MR. HARRISON. Who wrote that letter?

MR. DOWLING. That is none of your business. I don't want to surrender the power that belongs to the people into the hands of any man or set of men, unless the people have the power to drag them out of it. Adams never advocated a Commission. Commissioners, as a general thing, are nothing but papsuckers upon the community. They are salaried officers. If you place this power in the hands of these men what is to prevent them, after being elected, from snapping their fingers at the people? You have no control over them. I want to place myself upon the record as unalterably opposed to this thing, on principle.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I call for a division of the question on the proposition of Judge Hager. He has offered something like ten amendments to the section reported by the Committee of the Whole; some of them, I think, destructive of the principles aimed at by the section. I have no objections at all to providing that they shall travel free upon railroads. In my opinion it was provided for in the section itself, because it is a necessary incident to the powers given them. They are to examine roads and supervise roads, and I fail to see how they can do it unless they travel upon them. The power to examine the books of a corporation implies the power to get them. The power to examine roads and bridges embraces the power to get there. But I have no objection to saying directly that they shall travel free. I do object to this provision inserting common carriers. Now, is it actually and seriously proposed to put all the common carriers in this State under regulation and supervision—every little scow, every little ship and boat—do you propose to subject them to this provision? We want to encounter no such opposition as this will encounter. As to this amendment to insert the words, "rates of charges established," I have no objection to that. But there is no necessity for it, because the very power to correct abuses confers also the power to see that their rates of charges are obeyed. Any refusal to obey these rates is an abuse at once. Still, I have no objections to it. It may be it will assist, but it is superfluous. The next amendment is, that the party aggrieved may have a right of action against the corporation for damages, etc. That might do in the Code. The whole matter is covered by a provision in the report of the committee, that nothing in this section contained shall be held to deprive any party of his right of action. Now, if I understand the matter, there were two methods open to a party aggrieved—the same methods as are open to a party assaulted—a civil action and a criminal action. There may be an abuse that he knows of—an abuse which affects him personally, and also affects the whole community. Of course he should also have a civil right, and the provision in the section is just as effectual as that proposed by the gentleman. The next amendment is, that he proposes to include "forfeiture of franchise." The committee had it "forfeiture of their charter." I think the forfeiture of franchise would cover the whole business, without saying anything about the charter. I do not believe it is of vital importance to the efficiency of the Commission, anyway.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I rise, not for the purpose of debating this question, because I am satisfied that this Convention will adopt, in substance, either the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager, or the report of the Committee of the Whole, and I think the Convention is not in a temper to listen to any argument; but I avail myself of the privilege of speaking upon this subject rather to explain and remove a misapprehension, and I say, as other gentlemen have said, I am in favor of a Commission, and always have been in favor of a Commission. I have gone farther in discussing the principle of the thing than most of the gentlemen upon this floor, and I have been in favor of a Commission to correct abuses. The question, however, with what power shall these Commissioners be clothed? I am in favor of clothing them with all the power that the Massachusetts Commission have; with all the powers that the Wisconsin Commission have, which has been so successful, as shown by the letter which the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Howard, had the Clerk read at the desk the other day. That was a Commission created, not by the Constitution, but by the Legislature; however, I am in favor of a Constitutional Commission, but the power in the Constitution should, in my judgment, be limited to the same powers that are given the Massachusetts Commission and the Wisconsin Commission; beyond that I would simply say, "and such other and further powers as the Legislature from time to time may choose to give them." I believe that is the best form of Commission to get at present.

Now, to leave it all to the Legislature is to make the Legislature regulate freights and fares, and, as has been shown upon this floor, the Legislature is not adequate to the task. The Legislature should say what powers these Commissioners shall have, and the Commissioners should exercise those powers. That is the best system. But I do not believe this Convention will adopt it. I think they will adopt that which is not so good as those of Wisconsin and Massachusetts, not so good as that which I have suggested. But I have a right to state here, and I state them freely, my own views on the subject. And now as the discussion upon this whole thing is practically ended, I will simply say this: Heretofore I have relied purely, in the discussion of questions, upon moral reasoning and common sense, as far as I am capable of seeing it, and have accorded honesty of purpose and right motives to every gentleman upon this floor. Certain members of this Convention, however, have not been willing to concede the same to others, and they have undertaken to attribute improper motives to the views which other gentlemen have advanced. I take this occasion to say that there is no gentleman on this floor, I care not who he may be, who is more free from corporation influence than I myself am. I do not care ten cents for the political views or public views of any corporation in this State, and no corporation in this State can influence me the weight of a hair in my public position. That I am employed by corporations in my professional capacity is true. That I am employed in the same capacity against them is true. I have won any number of suits against them, and every corporation, and every man who knows me knows this: that in my professional career my clients are dictated to by me. They never tell me what to do. I tell them, and when they do not obey my orders I cease to be their attorney. As far as my public employment is concerned, and as far as politics are concerned, they have no influence with me, more than the idle wind. No man ever attempted to influence me in the slightest degree, and no man ever will who knows me, and I spurn and scorn the insinuations. I am induced to say this, because somebody who does not know me may think that some one can hold a whip over me as they are holding it over themselves. But those who know me know that I have advocated, and will advocate, upon the floor of this Convention, such measures as I believe to be right, and that I never fail, never shirk, to announce my honest convictions, be the consequences what they may. [Applause.]

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: At a very early day I took occasion in this Convention to express my views upon this subject. If I could have my way, I would strike out this Commissioner business and leave the matter to the Legislature. But I am satisfied that this Convention intends to have Commissioners, and I am satisfied that the Constitution will be adopted by the people. Therefore I do not think anything is to be made by making a fight against the Commission. I don't know anything that can be better. If any one can suggest it, I will support it. It does seem to me that we are wasting time in this discussion, and that we ought to be able to come to an agreement. Of the amendments suggested here, it is merely the difference between tweedledee and tweedledum. I hope we will now come to a vote.

SPEECH OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: The amendments of Judge Hager are so numerous, that we will have to compare the substitute with the original section in order to find out what the amendments are. Most all the amendments proposed by the gentleman are verbal ones, altering one word or another in the original section. The three material amendments are: That the Commissioners shall have free passage upon all railroads. That is the first one. As far as I am concerned I am in favor of that. I think it is a just provision and ought to be adopted. His second amendment is to add the words: "and by common carriers upon railroads." For the life of me I cannot see the necessity for such an amendment. That it will ever do any harm is doubtful, though it is possible it may. I do not see any necessity for it, because the section refers to railroad and other transportation companies. I know the reason why he puts it in there, but I do not see any necessity for it. The other amendment, and the only one I look upon as really important is, that providing that they shall hear and determine complaints by and against railroads. I hope that will not be adopted. I think the railroads ought to go into the Courts of the country if they have any rights to vindicate. The object is here to establish an easy mode of redress for the people, that they may go and make their complaints, and have their grievances redressed, without much expense for attorneys and witnesses. That is the object, and one of the main objects in placing this matter of freights and fares in the hands of these Commissioners. I think if you are going to put that in, it would be better to leave this section out. I hope that part of it will not be adopted.

MR. HAGER. I ask to have the words stricken out. I had understood that there was no objection to them.

MR. ESTEE. That will help it. Now in regard to this section reported by the Committee of the Whole. The section has some things in it which I do not concur in. I do not believe it was wise to put in the penalties. I do not believe it is wise, for fear it may be held to be a limitation upon the Legislature in future in fixing and imposing other penalties. But it was adopted by the Committee of the Whole, after a thorough and careful examination, and I deem it my duty to obey the mandates of this committee; hence, I shall support the section. It represents the average judgment of this Convention, and as Chairman of the Committee on Corporations, it is my duty to fall into line and obey the mandates of the Convention. Now, we have a few merely verbal amendments. We have the word "otherwise" put in; we have the word "charter" put in; we have the word "aggrieved" put in, and I cannot see any necessity for changing the verbiage. I know the gentleman intends to improve the section, and it may be possible that he does improve it, but for one, I fail to perceive it, except in the solitary instance of granting free passage to the Commissioners. Therefore, I prefer the section reported by the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I hope, after the unprecedented long discussion had in this Convention in regard to this matter, that the section will be adopted as it came from the Committee of the Whole. I will take occasion to say here, that section twenty-two, as reported by the Committee on Corporations, in my judgment, is not perfect, and it would not be wise for this Convention to seek to adopt it. The history of this section is well known. It is well known by every member of this Convention that the Committee on Corporations reported a section upon the subject; that it came into this body, acting as a Committee of the Whole, and was there thoroughly discussed. It was finally sent back to the committee, with instructions to amend it, and the result was this section twenty-two. After that, we had a discussion of about four weeks on this whole article, and I think, about ten days' discussion upon this particular section. I believe it embraces the average judgment of this Convention, and while I would prefer the section as reported by the committee, I am willing to take this section.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out amendment of committee and insert the following: 'SEC. 22. The State shall be divided into three districts as nearly equal in population as practicable, in each of which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the regular gubernatorial elections, whose salary shall be fixed by law, and whose term of office shall be four years. Said Commissioners shall be qualified electors of this State and of the district from which they are elected, and shall not be interested in any railroad corporation, or other transportation company, as stockholder, creditor, agent, attorney, or employé, and the act of a majority of said Commissioners shall be deemed the act of said Commission. Said Commissioners shall have free passage on all railroads, and they shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad or other transportation companies, and by common carriers on railroads, and publish the same from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records, and papers of all such common carriers, railroad, and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have process of the Courts; to hear and determine complaints by and against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their rates of charges as established, and their decisions, and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts. Said Commissioners shall prescribe a uniform system of accounts to be kept by all such corporations and companies, and they shall keep their accounts according to such system. Any railroad corporation or transportation company which shall fail or refuse to conform to such rates as shall be established by such Commissioners, or shall charge rates in excess thereof, or shall fail to keep their accounts in accordance with the system prescribed by the Commission, shall be fined not exceeding twenty thousand dollars for each offense, and every officer, agent, or employé of any such corporation or company, who shall demand or receive rates in excess thereof, or who shall in any manner violate the provisions of this section, shall be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars or be imprisoned in the County Jail not exceeding one year. In all controversies, civil or criminal, the rates of fares and freights established by said Commission shall be deemed conclusively just and reasonable. Any party aggrieved may have a right of action against such corporation, company, or carrier, for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, and in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge or jury, recover exemplary damages. Said Commission shall report to the Governor, annually, their proceedings, and such other facts as may be deemed important. Nothing in this section shall prevent individuals from otherwise maintaining actions against any of such companies or carriers. The Legislature may, in addition to any penalties herein prescribed, enforce this article by forfeiture of franchise and charter, or otherwise, and may confer such further powers on the Commissioners as shall be necessary to enable them to perform their duties. The Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, to remove any one or more of said Commissioners from office, for dereliction of duty, or corruption, or incompetency; and whenever from any cause a vacancy in office shall occur in said Commission, the Governor shall fill the same by the appointment of a qualified person thereto, who shall hold office for the unexpired term.'"

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Grace, Condon, Larkin, Barbour, and Joyce.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. West, Tully, Larkin, and Howard, of Los Angeles.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put.

Lost—ayes 51, noes 57; and the Convention refused to order the main question.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"After the word 'have,' in line ten, insert 'free passes on all railroads, and they shall have;' and in line fifteen, before the word 'Courts,' insert 'Superior;' and in line twenty, before the word 'Courts,' insert 'Superior.'"

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I offer that because I think it is in general harmony with the sentiment of the Convention. I think it is entirely proper that it should be inserted. I have bettered the language of Judge Hager's amendment in that respect. The only other amendment is that the process shall be from the Superior Court.

MR. CAMPBELL. I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. There is an amendment to the amendment now pending. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson.

Lost.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'incompetency,' in line forty-six."

MR. GREGG. The provision in regard to filling vacancies is not necessary.

The amendment was lost.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I now offer my amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out 'process of the Courts,' in line fifteen, and insert in lieu thereof, 'have power to issue subpœnas and all other necessary process.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment.

Adopted—ayes, 57; noes, 42.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add, in line twenty-six, after the word 'Commission,' the following: 'or shall fail to run a train daily on each line, or branch, or section, now in operation.'"

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I do not see the use of these Commissioners, unless we force the railroad company to run their trains. Now, if we are going to do anything, let us do it, or else not undertake it. Suppose the rates established do not suit the companies. They may say: there is the road, run it; we will not run our cars on it. What are the farmers going to do with their crops? Are they going to eat them? If you want to make this thing effective you must adopt this amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"After the word 'have,' in line ten, insert 'free passage on all railroads, and they shall have.'"

MR. SCHELL. I rise to a point of order. That has been voted down twice.

THE PRESIDENT. That amendment was voted upon five minutes ago. The question is on the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Tully, Keyes, Grace, Lampson, and West.

The roll was called, and the section adopted by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section twenty-one, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 21. The State shall be divided into three railroad districts, as nearly equal in population as practicable, from each of which one of the three Railroad Commissioners shall be elected."

The report of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section twenty-five as amended by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 25. Every railroad corporation and other incorporate company or association existing under the laws of this State, or doing business therein, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall accept the provisions of this article in good faith before being entitled to claim or have the benefit of any future legislation thereunder."

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I move to strike out section twenty-five. It is entirely superfluous and useless in my judgment. I think it ought to require no argument. It is of no more use than a fifth wheel to a wagon.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I offer an amendment to the section.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: This section was added to the report of the committee upon the motion of Mr. Herrington. Mr. Herrington being called home on account of imperative business, he stated to me that he desired to have the section amended, and the amendment which I have sent to the desk is the amendment which Mr. Herrington would offer to the section. Section twenty-five, as found in this report, is found in every new Constitution. An examination of the Constitutions framed and adopted during the last ten years will show that this provision is found in them. It is unnecessary for me to take up the time of this Convention in arguing this matter. I cannot see why it should be stricken out. I challenge any man in this Convention to show me why it should be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I hope the section will be stricken out. It is mischievous. Under the Constitution and laws, and especially under the Act under which these companies were organized, we have the power to make them obey the law. If we put this in it may interfere with our right to make them obey the law. Therefore, I hope it will be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I hope the section will be stricken out. It is a monstrous absurdity. What is it? It declares that incorporated companies shall submit to the law. Why should we ask that they submit to the law? Is it not sufficient that we make the law and proclaim the law? Why, it is the most extraordinary provision ever heard of in a legislative body, to say that certain parties shall submit to the law before they can claim the benefits of the law. The law-making power lays down the law, and it does not ask whether the subjects will accept it or not—they must accept it and obey it. There is a very dangerous implication in this provision, outside of the monstrous absurdity of the thing. I hope it will be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: At the time this section was before the Committee of the Whole, I had the honor to present my views upon it. As the committee acted in opposition to the views I presented, I suppose I had something to do with the passage of this section. [Laughter.] I am very glad to see that upon sober thought the Convention is getting around in the right direction. Now, this provision was taken from the Constitution of Pennsylvania. At that time it was necessary in that Constitution, because some of the old corporations had special charters, and they were beyond the power of the Constitution in some respects. This, then, was put in as a penalty, to compel them to come in. They might have stood out, and I presume many of them did, but they could then claim none of the benefits of the Act. But it is utterly impracticable and useless in California. I said so before the Committee of the Whole. It is an absurdity. It implies that the corporations are beyond the control of the State here. In the Committee of the Whole I urged these plain objections, and I believe it passed nearly unanimously. [Laughter.]

The section was stricken out.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section nineteen by adding, in line four, after the word 'officer,' the following, 'other than Railroad Commissioner,' so as to read: 'SEC. 19. No railroad or other transportation company shall grant free passes, or passes or tickets at a discount, to any person holding any office of honor, trust, or profit in this State; and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket, by a member of the Legislature, or any public officer, other than Railroad Commissioner, shall work a forfeiture of his office.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Adopted.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment to section eighteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section eighteen by striking out the word 'or,' in the line after the word 'company,' and insert the word 'nor' in lieu thereof; and by adding at the end of the section the following, viz., 'except such interest in the business transportation as lawfully flows from the ownership of stock therein.'"

Adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. I move to amend the subhead between sections sixteen and seventeen.

THE PRESIDENT. That is no part of the section. It is not in order.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. HOLMES. Mr. President: I have voted against the previous question every time, because I wanted the House to have a fair chance. I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. McComas, Larue, Larkin, and Dean.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put.

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the article be engrossed and read a second time.

Carried; and the article ordered engrossed and read a second time.

RELATIVE TO CHINESE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the article upon Chinese, as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are, or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair, or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary.

"SEC. —. No corporation now existing or hereafter formed under the laws of this State, shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, employ, directly or indirectly, in any capacity, any Chinese or Mongolian. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this provision.

"SEC. 3. No Chinese shall be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work, except in punishment for crimes.

"SEC. 6. No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to catch fish in any waters under the jurisdiction of this State; nor to purchase, lease, own, or hold any real property in this State, and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real property to any such alien shall be void.

"SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. Asiatic coolieism, being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State, and all contracts for coolie labor are null and void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or their location within prescribed portions of those limits; and it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I move to strike out the article on Chinese.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out the article.

SPEECH OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I oppose this article, and I hope every section of it will be stricken out. Such savage monstrosity has never before been penned by man. Is it for Christian men, in this enlightened age, and only for California, to commit this unnatural act of attempting the destruction, by starvation or otherwise, of over one hundred thousand men? Is there anything to be conceived more horrible or more savage? Sir, this question cannot be settled in this way. It must be done by calm, intelligent, and statesmanlike argument; and this political cry of both parties to catch the floating vote, is too well understood at the East. You will find, sir, that intelligence and justice only control our governmental policy. Sir, since my last remarks on this subject I see no new light thrown on this question during the long, threatening, acrimonious, and boisterous debate in the Committee of the Whole, to cause me to alter my mind, or take back one single word uttered at that time.

I hope now, sir, there is a better feeling among its members, and that reason has now enthroned herself in our midst, and will control our actions. Let us now reflect, and use our better judgment and purer reasons, before we pass this terrible article. Such a barbarous, inhuman, or unnatural proposition has never been conceived or entered the brain of either Pagan or Christian man since the foundation of the world. Talk of the Draconian laws written in blood! Where is one ever written or proclaimed by man that equals this in barbarism and inhumanity? You can trace down the stream of time through all savage life, with its wars, its cruelties, and its slavery, and fail to find its equal or parallel for injustice, treachery, or ingratitude. These men, after being invited to our shores, after building our railroads, clearing up our farms, reclaiming over one million acres of our swamp and overflowed land, planting our vineyards and our orchards, reaping the crops of the small and the needy farmers, gathering our fruits and berries, digging and sacking our potatoes, supplying our markets with the smaller kinds of fish from the sea, manufacturing our woolen and other goods, cleaning up the tailings of our hydraulic mines, scraping the bedrock of our exhausted mining claims, and relieving most of the householders in this State of the household drudgery which would be imposed upon our wives and daughters, thus contributing to our happiness and true prosperity. Sir, after all this, which has added many millions annually to the State and nation's wealth, you would commit treason against our Government by putting this unjust and inhuman article in our organic law. I beg of gentlemen on this floor to pause, to consider well, and not be carried away through blind prejudice, through political ambition, or through race hatred; but act like civilized, just, and Christian men; not to do an act that would shock all humane men throughout the world, both Christian and Pagan. Sir, this is what I plead for, and will ever plead for; and will sympathize with the weak and downtrodden of the world, and hope to ever remain on the side of humanity and justice as long as life shall last. I may well say that

"Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn."

Sir, I have been the object of attack, both public and private, for uttering my honest convictions on this grave and momentous question. Life has been threatened; lies and slanders have been circulated. But they emanate from sources too low, too filthy, too cowardly, for me to notice. I will now say that no threats, no fears, no intimidation, no coercion, shall ever deter me for a moment from defending the right or doing my conscientious duty. I have also received letters of approval and support from persons residing in this State, and in our national Capital, entire strangers to me, to whom I return my sincere and heartfelt thanks. How different it is with members of this Convention, many of whom, and the ablest on this floor, I have known for a quarter of a century. I am no stranger here, or to the material interests of this State, after a residence of thirty years in it. I have no sacrifice, either human or Divine, moral or political, to throw before this Juggernaut or to appease the anger of Moloch, and am sorry to see so many of this Convention standing indifferently by, while others are trying to destroy the prosperity of our State and Nation—totally destroying our great producing and manufacturing interests of this State—by silently encouraging this insane crusade against Chinese labor; for over one hundred thousand men would follow their expulsion. Do they conceive the enormity of this loss to the State? Don't they know that the loss of this vast army of labor would bankrupt and overwhelm all the manufacturers and most of the producers of this State? Deprive us of them, sir, and you will have no more ships to load from our bays, no more fruit to adorn our tables, no more wool or woolen goods to warm our bodies, no more wine to cheer our lives or sustain our bodily infirmities. All will return again to its primitive condition—a state worse than was France after the edict of Nantes, or of Spain after the expulsion of the Moors. All, I say, will again be swallowed up in this maelstrom of blind rage and fury. It is complained that the Chinese are penurious in their diet, and that they live on nothing but rice. The truth is, however, that they live here at a greater cost, and have a greater variety of food in their ordinary repast, than do most of their Caucasian enemies, and I dare say much better than they enjoyed in their native country. Of pork, poultry, fish, and vegetables they use large quantities, and good, for which they pay high prices; also, large quantities of American manufactured goods, in the way of clothing, boots, shoes, and hats. And the general condition of health among them is far better in the country than among their Caucasian enemies; seldom a day's work is lost on account of sickness. The care of their person and health is almost marvelous. Every night, after their work is done, and frequently before they eat their meal, each and all go through their ablutions from head to foot, and on Sundays their bathing and washing occupy nearly half the day. What a lesson! What an example to their boasting Caucasian persecutors! It would be well for them and the country if they would copy or practice some of their heathen rites—such as cleanliness, economy, and industry. I am surprised at the indifference of the farmers in this Convention. Is it through fear of the torch that is daily threatened us; or are they making a record, as they think, for political preferences, by keeping silent? I am told that many of them agree with me. If so, why not speak? In my former remarks on this subject, I called upon them to express their views on this all-important question to the producers of this State. But one of them differed with me—Mr. White, of Santa Cruz. All the rest, I take it by their silence on the subject, concur in my views. If not, they can now place themselves, as the politicians call it, on record. I should also except the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster. In his fierce denunciation of the Chinese, I asked him whether Italians and others did not compete with them? He answered: "The Italians compete with them only because they have been brought up from childhood to labor and economy." What a concession! Economy and labor! Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel. Mr. Reynolds, of San Francisco, the ablest St. Paul of their tribe of persecutors, differs from all the rest in his persecution of them. He says he does so on account of their intelligence, industry, and thrift; not on account of their ignorance and filth. I think, sir, I see a ray of light beaming through the dark minds of these benighted persecutors, and hope, like their great leader, they will become converted and sin no more in this way. General Colby, of Butte County, one of the most noted farmers and legislators of this State, in a letter of January fourteenth, to the San Francisco Patron—I suppose the organ of the Grangers—says: "Having asked my views on the incendiary agitation going on in San Francisco, ostensibly against the Chinese, but in fact aimed at all the material interests of the Pacific coast, I have only to say that the character of its leaders gives it but little weight or consideration with the thinking or conservative men or the people of the country. The leaders, or most of them, are of foreign element, ignorant of the practical working of our Government, and now, to say the least, they should be the last to attempt a raid against any nationality. In fact, for doing the same thing in the land of their nativity they would be branded as outlaws, and subject to banishment and hard labor for life." Now, sir, what do the Grangers—who have been foremost, I may say, in their fierce denunciations against the Chinese—say to this, and how many thousands of our producers of this State say the same? I think all. I will not go into the report of Senator Morton, as all the country has read and knows it. A few words about this fierce cry, that sounds like the last wail of demagogues, that the country is overrun by the "heathen Chinee," and our white labor is driven from all employment, or to starvation, and from the country. There is not a man on this floor but knows this is not so. He further knows that it is only the cry in connection with "the Chinese must go," uttered and continually repeated, day by day, by a few insane foreign and alien leaders of a party in San Francisco, who are deceiving their followers, and will cause want and distress in their wake. All such upheavals and excitements are but of short life and barren of good results, and soon to be forgotten. Now, a few questions to be answered by him who answers me: Who are they who desecrate the Sabbath? Who form our rioters and hoodlums? Who fill our alms-houses? Who are plotting to overthrow our common schools? Who stuff our ballot boxes? Who are conspiring to overthrow and destroy our Government, and to utterly stamp out liberty, that despotism over conscience, mind, and muscle, may rise upon the ruins? Who constitute the Molly Maguires? Who burn our railroad depots? Who threaten the lives of our best citizens? Who are plotting to despoil our wealthy men? Who claim two thirds of our public offices? Not Chinamen. Then who are they? You may search history through all time, and examine the nations of the East through their rise and fall, and you will find China where it now is and has been for over five thousand years. Yet you will fail to find an instance where she has overrun or crowded out a single nation, however near——

[At this point in the speaker's remarks, time was called and the gavel fell.]

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I hope the gentleman will be allowed to proceed. He is the pluckiest man in the Convention. I give him my ten minutes.

MR. STUART. Thank you, General. As I was saying, on the contrary, her laborers, traders, and merchants have been encouraged to settle in all the Dutch and Spanish Philippine Islands, as well as in the English possessions of India and the French in Cambodia, and many of them are to-day their merchant princes and bankers in many of these possessions. Sir, when I was a candidate for a seat in this honorable body, the issue was directly made against me because I employed Chinese labor. I had not only to overcome this, but all the lies my enemies could invent on this subject. They charged that I had said a Chinaman was better than an Irishman or a Dutchman. I said no such thing; but did say that they had as much right here as either and should be protected the same; and I say so still. And, sir, there is another member of this Convention (the able gentleman from Marin), a delegate at large, who was also defamed throughout the State with similar charges, or worse; which he can refute or remain silent as he has been on this subject. Then talk about the unanimous wish of this State, and this Convention in your resolutions and memorials, when two members on this floor were elected, not only on the issue of Chinese labor, but in the face of all the lies that preceded and accompanied that bitter canvass. Give to the children of these people (and some of them native born) the privilege of our common schools in return for the school taxes they pay; cease persecuting them by personal assault, to which the law is blind; stop this disgraceful special legislation against them; stop this relentless, heartless, and inhuman persecution of foreigners against them, and then, and only then, will we do our duty. What right has the State to exact of these men poll and other school taxes, and then legislate against them, prohibiting their children the privilege of her common schools? Why pass and continue to pass arbitrary and oppressive laws against them? Why does the State fail to protect them from murder, arson, and outrage? I charge the city of San Francisco with cowardice in not protecting them in the exercise of their rights of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," which all men are guaranteed under our flag; while they have collected millions of dollars in taxes, licenses, and otherwise, yet they furnish them no protection in return. They pass cruel ordinances against them; they harass and annoy them through every device the law can invent, and why are similar outrages heaped upon them in nearly every county, town, village or hamlet in this State? Tell me; tell me; oh, tell me, why they are not protected like others in their honest toil? Or is this to be the final sum of all villainy? In case the outrages on these people do not cease in this State, and it refuses longer to protect them, then I call upon our Government to give them the ballot, that they may protect themselves. If it does not, then I demand the repeal of all naturalization laws, and to modify all immigration laws, with other nations, under the treaty making power.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I regret that the gentleman did not make that eloquent appeal prior to the adoption of this article by the Committee of the Whole. I regret that I must differ with my friend from Sonoma. It is a question between people of our own race, who build homes and build up the county, and the heathen who band together like brutes, and I must choose the former.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section one. "Strike out the word 'other,' in line ten, and insert the word 'other' between the words 'or' and 'regulations,' in line eleven."

MR. WINANS. There is an error in the language here, and I will use my influence, in the interest of education, to have it corrected. [Laughter.]

MR. MURPHY. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Reddy, Waters, Dunlap, and Ayers.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost, on division, by a vote of 46 ayes to 46 noes.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line five, before the word 'contagious,' the word 'incurable.'"

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. WATERS. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Murphy, Reddy, Barbour, and Weller.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the main question ordered by a vote of 54 ayes to 44 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kern.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole on section one, which the Secretary read:

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such other police laws or regulations as it may deem necessary."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

CORPORATIONS EMPLOYING CHINESE.

"SEC. 2. No corporation now existing, or hereafter formed, under the laws of this State, shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, employ, directly or indirectly, in any capacity, any Chinese or Mongolian. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this provision."

Adopted.

CHINESE ON PUBLIC WORKS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. No Chinese shall be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work, except in punishment for crimes."

Adopted.

PROHIBITING IMMIGRATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. All further immigration to this State of Chinese, and all other persons ineligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, is hereby prohibited. The Legislature shall provide for the enforcement of this section by appropriate legislation."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out the section.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Freud, Joyce, Wellin, and Farrell.

The roll was called, and the report of the Committee of the Whole concurred in by the following vote:

ALIENS CATCHING FISH.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. No alien ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to catch fish in any waters under the jurisdiction of this State; nor to purchase, lease, own, or hold any real property in this State, and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real property to any such alien shall be void."

Concurred in.

ASIATIC COOLIEISM.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 7. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. Asiatic coolieism being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State, and all contracts for coolie labor are null and void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or their location within prescribed portions of those limits; and it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation."

Adopted.

PUBLIC OFFICERS AND CHINESE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section eight, which was stricken out.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. Public officers within this State are forbidden to employ Chinese in any capacity whatever. Violation of this provision shall be ground for removal from office; and no person shall be eligible to any office in this State, who, at the time of election, and for three months before, employed Chinese."

DENYING THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section nine, which was stricken out.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. The exercise of the right of suffrage shall be denied to any person employing Chinese in this State, and it shall be a sufficient challenge that the person offering to vote is employing Chinese, or has employed them within three months next preceding the election."

Upon the question of concurring in the recommendation of the committee, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Rolfe, Joyce, Smith of San Francisco, Bell, and Harrison.

Garvey,	Morse,	Wyatt—72.

MR. TINNIN. This Convention has been in session over four months, and has never yet done any business on Saturday afternoon, and I have no hope that it will. I therefore move we adjourn.

Carried.

And at twelve o'clock and fifty minutes the Convention stood adjourned until Monday morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Monday, February 3d, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M. In the absence of the President, and President pro tem., on motion of Mr. Inman, Mr. Murphy was called to the chair.

The roll was called, and members found in attendance as follows:

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for one day was granted to Messrs. Winans, Shoemaker, and Smith of Santa Clara.

Two days leave of absence was granted Mr. Harvey.

Three days leave of absence was granted Mr. Rolfe.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITIONS.

Messrs. Biggs, Garvey, Burt, Larue, and McComas presented petitions requesting the exemption of certain property, used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

COMMUNICATION.

The Chair presented the following communication:

SAN FRANCISCO, January —, 1879.

To the Honorable Members of the Constitutional Convention, Sacramento:

GENTLEMEN; Why could not a provision be made whereby mining men would be debarred from working hydraulic claims one year out of two, or two out of three, thereby giving the Sacramento River a chance to lower its bed gradually?

I have the pleasure to be yours, very respectfully,

M. DENICKE.

MR. GRACE. I move that it be laid on the table.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move that it be laid under the table.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

MR. SHURTLEFF presented the following amendment, which was ordered to lay on the table and be printed in the Journal:

"Amend section twenty-seven by striking out all after the words 'and county,' in line five, and insert the following: 'unless such county or city and county to be divided shall contain a population greater than the number required to form one or more Congressional Districts. Any county or city and county containing a population greater than the number required for one Congressional District shall be formed into one or more Congressional Districts, according to the population thereof, and any residue, after forming such district or districts, shall be attached, by compact adjoining Legislative Districts, to a contiguous county or counties and form a Congressional District.'"

GENERAL FILE—MILITIA.

THE CHAIR. The Convention will take up the general order, which is the article on militia. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall from time to time direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor. The Governor shall have power to call forth the militia to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections, and repel invasions."

MR. MOFFAT. Mr. President: I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Except in case of war or insurrection, the amount appropriated for the support of the militia of the State shall not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars annually. The salary of the Adjutant-General shall be two thousand dollars per year."

MR. MOFFAT. Mr. President: I think that is all that is necessary for the benefit of the State—all that is required. I believe that amendment will give enough, and fix the militia just where it ought to be in this State, and if it is adopted it will prohibit all this lobbying here in the Legislature to get local measures through to support the militia of this State. Last year it cost about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to support the militia of this State. I do not see any necessity of it. I do not see any benefit. I do not see why we should support anything of the kind. If we will adopt the amendment it will set the matter at rest entirely.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope that this Convention will not adopt any such limitation as is proposed in the amendment. The militia of this State is its reserved police power, and it is the cheapest police reserve that the State can have. At present, as I understand it, it only costs the State about fifteen dollars per man per year, while each policeman costs an average of over two hundred dollars. Now, the fact that we have this great reserve power in the shape of a police, which we can call out in case of an emergency, is an advantage to the State economically, which we should not overlook. This State at present is sparsely populated to what it will be in the future. At present the expense of the militia is not extraordinary, and if we take the present needs of the militia and make a limitation upon it for the future, we shall do a very unwise thing. The Legislature will constantly have control of this department of the government, and I have no doubt that if it is necessary to reduce it from its present extent of expenditure, that the Legislature will do so. But I certainly think we should make a mistake if in this Constitution we rigidly enforce a limit, and a low limit at that; one that is taken from the present expenditure so as to govern the future. I hope that gentleman will pause, and not place an amendment of this character in the Constitution.

MR. ANDREWS. I rise to inquire whether this is offered as an amendment to be added to the amendment as adopted by the Committee of the Whole?

MR. MOFFAT. As a substitute for the whole article.

THE CHAIR. It is not in proper language to be a substitute.

MR. ANDREWS. I would suggest to the gentleman that he offer that as an amendment to be added to the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. MOFFAT. I accept that.

MR. ANDREWS. In that shape, I hope that the amendment will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: When this subject was before the Committee of the Whole, the committee—very wisely, as I think—determined to adhere to the old Constitution in this particular; not to change the phraseology at all, but to leave the whole subject of the militia entirely at the discretion of the Legislature. We cannot, of course, see very far into the future. We cannot, with certainty, tell what the needs of this State will be at any particular time ahead. We ought not to hamper the Legislature too much. We have, to be sure, sought to bind it down closely in regard to matters where it was apprehended that large moneyed influence and power might be brought to bear, and we have in that class of cases, in my judgment, wisely imposed restrictions upon the legislative power. But so far as this matter of militia is concerned, it is a matter not open to any such objection, and besides we cannot tell what amounts may be proper from time to time. It may be proper, in the judgment of the Legislature, to restrict the appropriations for military purposes to a very small amount or to increase them, according to the condition of things at the time when the Legislature is in session. There may be, for instance, grave reasons to apprehend difficulties of any kind which may require larger appropriations than the amount here specified; on the other hand, it may be wholly unnecessary to appropriate any such amount. I do not think that in this matter we ought to limit the Legislature. I think we ought to adhere to the rule laid down in the old Constitution, leaving it absolutely discretionary with the Legislature to regulate the operations of this department of the government. This amendment was offered on a previous occasion. It was thoroughly discussed. The Convention was then full, and in full Convention a vote was taken upon it and it was determined, by a very decided majority, to adhere to the old Constitution. Now, this morning there is a very small number of members present, and if we reverse the action of the Committee of the Whole the probabilities are that the same question will be brought up again. It undoubtedly will. I see that a large number of the members of the Committee on Military Affairs are absent to-day. I hope that the Convention, being anxious to dispose of its work, will end, so far as may be, discussion upon these subjects which have already been fully discussed in Committee of the Whole. I again express the hope that the Convention will adhere to its previous action.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I was on this committee. The whole matter was quite extensively discussed, and I am under the impression that almost every member of that committee was well satisfied—perhaps there might have been one exception—with what passed in Committee of the Whole. Now, it appears to me that the old Constitution upon this subject is better than anything that we might get up at this time. It leaves the matter in the hands of the Legislature, so that they can suit the exigencies of the times. Anything that restricts them might be a great injury in the future. This matter was taken into consideration and discussed to a considerable length in Committee of the Whole. The members of this House must recollect it, and although it might look very reasonable to restrict the Legislature as to the amount of money that should be appropriated, yet there might be a time when it would prove a serious injury. We all know this. This was taken into full consideration at the time, and it was then voted to leave the Legislature entirely free. I am in hopes that what has been presented by the Committee of the Whole will be adopted here.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: If there is any article that needs a restriction under a constitutional provision it is this article. We have seen the appropriations increased annually for the last two years. The Legislature has appropriated over two hundred and two thousand dollars to this arm of the public service. Now, the gentleman tells us that exigencies may arise, and that a larger amount would be absolutely necessary. That is provided for by the amendment of the gentleman from San Mateo, and I for one believe that the restraining arm of the Constitution should be placed upon that arm of the public service.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: As I have the honor to be a high private in the State militia, I do not know but that it is my duty to say something in defense of the great cause of the State militia. The question is raised, whether a State militia is of any use? A State militia, always well kept and well prepared for offense or defense whenever an emergency may arise, is something like the whip which mothers keep on the high back shelf; it may be necessary to apply it, and it is a very good thing to scare with, and an occasional allusion to it sometimes has a good effect. We who make a Constitution to-day, cannot know the circumstances which may arise in the next hundred years. Perhaps we had better look more carefully in the future, to the men who shall decide what moneys shall be appropriated, than to put into the Constitution such a limitation as may be very injurious to the prosperity and interests of the State at some future time. Twenty-five thousand dollars is not much to serve a State militia with. We have to have places for the companies to meet and drill. Whenever they drill they must wear their United States uniform; if that is so, the State must furnish them, and there is no telling how soon we may need them, and it will be rather too late to make preparations when an insurrection actually takes place, or when a war has actually begun. In time of peace let us be prepared for war.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President and gentlemen: The gentleman says there is no telling how soon we may need them. Well, perhaps, there is not. Probably if President Hayes comes to California we will need them to turn out and escort him. If General Grant should come we might need them to turn out and escort him; but I feel positive that if danger, a riot or an insurrection, comes, although we may need them we shall not find them. Now, my friends, we understand in San Francisco what these fuss and feather soldiers mean. We know what these Sunday parade men mean. If we review the history of this country since eighteen hundred and seventy-six it will be seen that in eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, during the riots that occurred in the Eastern States—at Pittsburgh, at Baltimore, at the various points on the Pennsylvania Central, and various points on the Baltimore and Ohio—that wherever the militia was called out they were prostrate and helpless. They were paralyzed, and the Governors of these several States were obliged to call upon the United States to furnish troops in order to put down the riots and insurrection every time. That wherever the militia appeared upon the scene the consequence was bloodshed and the destruction of property, and the ignominious route and flight of the Sunday soldiers. If the militia had never been thrown into the City of Pittsburgh from Philadelphia the property of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company would stand intact to-day, and over nine hundred railway cars and over one hundred locomotives would not have been destroyed. Just so it was in the City of Baltimore. There was no destruction of property, there was no destruction of life in that city until the Sunday soldiers were called out, and until some member of that body, trembling with fear, fired his musket into the crowd and killed a woman, and then the slaughter and the destruction of property commenced. We do not want these soldiers. If they desire to parade on Sunday, if they desire to march through the streets with their feathers and their plumes they can do so like other independent organizations. We have independent organizations to-day in San Francisco numbering just as large a number of men as the regular militia organization in San Francisco. If anything should occur in this State, the call is for the loyal men of the country; it is for a posse comitatus. The Sheriff can call out the men at any time. The men of California have always been ready to respond to the call of law and order. The men that do respond—the solid men that carry everything before them—are not the men that parade in these holiday clothes, with all this fuss and feathers. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from San Mateo will prevail. I hope that we will build up a bulwark that will prevent the public funds of this State being diverted in this way to a thing that serves no purpose whatever. The people are able to take care of themselves. There is no analogy between the civil police of the State and this military. We have got to have policemen. This militia is in no sense the police of the State, and never will be. I hope that we will save the State this useless expense.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: It seems to me that if this is to be added to the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, that it is not properly worded. Now, a word in regard to the expense. It is said that the expense of our militia is something enormous. I find by the report of the Adjutant-General for the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth fiscal years, that the total expense for the two years was seventy-one thousand and twenty-two dollars and five cents, or thirty-five thousand five hundred and nineteen dollars for each year. In the thirtieth and thirty-first fiscal years the expense was ninety thousand five hundred and twenty-eight dollars, or forty-five thousand two hundred and sixty-four dollars each year. It seems to me that with these figures before us it is not apparent that the expenses of the militia is something that may not be borne by this State. It is claimed that the militia cannot be depended upon in cases of emergency; that whenever these great waves of excitement roll over the community, or any portion of it, that it would seem that there was no intention of any harm upon the part of the rioters until they see the militia turn out, and that is like a red flag in a bull fight, and it sets them wild. Now, I want to call attention to the fact that circumstances have arisen of late years which has made it a necessity that there should be some power that could be called upon. It seems to me that it is unwise to leave this matter so that it cannot be made flexible. It is not only in times of war that these expenses need to be incurred, but the Legislature only meets once in two years. Suppose they are limited to an expense of twenty-five thousand dollars a year, and the Legislature meets and provides for that? There is no opportunity, except by an extra session of the Legislature, to provide for any emergency.. They are limited to twenty-five thousand dollars a year without knowing what may happen or what is before us. We have placed an iron rule about this that we cannot go beyond. I think it is unwise. I know that in many cases, if there was an efficient militia that could be utilized at once, it would be a great benefit. There are portions of this State where it is a necessity that troops of some kind should be at hand, where they can be called upon. As I said in a discussion in the Committee of the Whole, in my own county, whenever the United States troops are withdrawn from there, in almost every instance it has been found necessary to organize the militia and take it out, because the absence of the troops encourages these borderers that are down there upon the line ready to come in at any time whenever they think it is safe. In almost every instance companies have been called out, and it has not been all boy's play, neither. We had not been able to get along with fuss and feather soldiers on that southern line. Sir, I think it is safe to leave this as it is.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I am in favor of this amendment. Now, it occurs to me, sir, that the opponents of this amendment reason from a sophistic basis, or rather predicate their arguments upon a false basis. The arguments are on the basis, that in case of a war, or insurrection, or rebel invasion, that it is necessary. Now, I call the attention of the Convention, that the amendment itself uses the words, "except in cases of war or insurrection." These gentlemen are somewhat inconsistent. After voting for the salary of the Governor of this State to be reduced to five thousand dollars, and the salary of members of the Legislature to five dollars a day, it is not consistent in them to support a measure that will require from fifty thousand dollars to one hundred thousand dollars a year to keep up the militia. There is no consistency in this. I hope that the gentlemen will consider the position that they have occupied heretofore in regard to other financial matters of this State. I think this amendment is right and proper. Twenty-five thousand dollars a year is ample. It is a greater amount than two thirds of the States require.

MR. BLACKMER. If the gentleman refers to me in speaking of reducing the salary of the Governor, I wish to say that I did not vote for five thousand dollars.

MR. AYERS. Nor I.

MR. TINNIN. Some of the gentlemen who have spoken on this floor I know did vote that way.

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: The amendment is not as I would like it. We are giving them too much. I would like to reduce it to ten thousand dollars. I tell you that this militia is just as useless as five wheels to a wagon. There is no need of it. It is all fuss and feathers, and Sunday soldiers, and is no good. It is just a Sunday show—a dazzling fraud. It is kept up to make a show when some big man comes here like the Kanaka king. They spend their money in these idle shows.

MR. AYERS. Does the State pay for these shows?

MR. GRACE. I do not say who pays for them. It is this kind of men that go in for spending money.

MR. AYERS. They spend their own money.

MR. GRACE. I want to say that I am doing this for a record. I want it to go on the record as being opposed to it. It is useless. They spend the money for nothing. They are of no use. They never did any good. Now, sir, if it comes to war, if there is anything to do we are all soldiers. If there is anything up in the country, every man, when it comes to danger—that is, a true American—will rush to the front. The man that don't do it has no right to live in the country. They will all do it. One thing that the militia done that is to their credit, was that they smashed the riot on Sutter Creek. I am in favor of giving them less. I do not believe in doing this for the purpose of seeing a few high-toned gentlemen wearing fine clothes and feathers.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: Inasmuch as gentlemen are only using arguments that have already been used three or four times, I move the previous question.

Messrs. Tully, White, Hunter, and also Dean, demanded the previous question.

Upon ordering the main question, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Vacquerel, West, Evey, Condon, and Cross.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to order the main question put, by the following vote:

AYES.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Mateo.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I think this Convention perhaps had better go a little slow. I think there has been plenty of money misappropriated to the militia of the State, but I think we had better leave this power to the Legislature. I have been in favor of leaving something to the Legislature. They will be better qualified to know what appropriations to make than we are. I do feel a little proud of our militia, and I do not think if it is necessary to do a little fighting they will run away. I think they have been an advantage to this State in keeping law and order. I believe that it is our duty to leave these matters to the Legislature. I shall vote against the amendment.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Moffat, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, O'Sullivan, Filcher, Moffat, and Joyce.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Harrison,	Nason,

THE CHAIR. The question is on concurring in the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

THE CHAIR. The next question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, to strike out section two. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall, from time to time, direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE CHAIR. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, to strike out section three. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. No general officer shall be removed from office except by the Senate, on the recommendation of the Governor, stating the grounds on which removal is recommended, or by a decision of a Court-martial in accordance with military custom. No officer of the militia shall ever be removed from office for political reasons."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE CHAIR. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, to strike out section four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia of the State. He shall have power to call them forth to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections and repel invasions."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE CHAIR. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, to strike out section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. The officers, musicians, and members of the State militia, who comply with all military duties as provided by law, shall be entitled to the following privileges and exemptions, viz.: Exemption from payment of poll tax, road tax, and head tax of every description; exemption from jury duty, and exemption from serving on any posse comitatus. All officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates, who have faithfully served in the military service of the State for seven consecutive years, and received the certificate of the Adjutant-General certifying the same, shall thereafter be exempted from further military or jury service, except in time of war."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE CHAIR. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. Every officer or member of the State militia, wounded or disabled in the service of the State, shall have reasonable expenses paid him; and the widows and children of members killed in the service of the State shall be provided for by the Legislature."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

MR. MANSFIELD. I offer a new section to this article.

THE NATION'S FLAG.

THE SECRETARY read:

"All military organizations provided for by this Constitution or any law of this State shall, while under arms, either for ceremony or duty, carry no device, banner, or flag of any State or nation except that of the United States, or of the State of California."

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I hope, sir, that that amendment will be adopted by this Convention. I have no objection whatever to gentlemen who are American citizens of foreign birth representing their love of home by carrying the flags of their nation upon private civic occasions. I appreciate the love which every man has for the country in which he was born. It is a sentiment second only to our love for the mothers that bore us. But it seems to me that gentlemen of foreign birth should not desire to carry the flag of a foreign nation in the organized military department of this State. It would be a strange spectacle to see the organized military power of the State of California, paid out of its public treasury, carrying so many flags that a stranger could not tell to what country they belonged. Now, it seems to me that the organized militia of the State should carry the flag of this country, and no other. I do not see why it should be asked that foreign flags should wave over our military organizations. I do hope that this amendment will be adopted.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: As the section stands amended I shall vote aye, because I understand from the reading of the section that it relates merely to those military companies organized under the laws of the State—that is to say, regular militia organizations—and it does not refer to independent companies.

MR. AYERS. I would ask the gentleman if there is not a provision similar to that in the code now?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes. I do not understand that it refers to independent organizations; if I did understand that it referred to independent military or civic organizations, I certainly should never vote for it.

MR. MCCONNELL. I understand that you want another military power besides the regular force organized by law.

MR. BEERSTECHER. If I am in an independent organization, I am going to carry just what flag I desire. I shall carry the flag of the United States, and any other banner in connection with that. I desire to think that every citizen in the State has a right to carry any other device, but always carrying the flag of the United States.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: I view the matter differently from what the gentleman who preceded me does. I believe that every military company in this State is organized militia. I consider, whether independent or otherwise, they are organized militia, consequently I cannot vote for it.

MR. CONDON. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment from the fact that the amendment that was previously voted down was voted down because it was claimed by the members of this Convention that that was a matter to be left to the Legislature. Now, as has been asserted on this floor, the statute provides fully for that now, and I think it is safe to trust the Legislature with that matter, consequently I hope that the amendment will be voted down, and that the article, as amended now, will stand, and be adopted by the Convention.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will prevail. I am a foreign born citizen myself, but when I have sworn allegiance to a country I mean what I have sworn; I do not mean to swear one thing and do exactly the contrary. I do not see the use of leaving that to the Legislature, because, so far we have not been willing to trust the Legislature in anything, and while we do not want to trust it in one thing I do not see why we should trust it in anything. If there are no decent men in your Legislature, we do not want to leave anything to them. Let us do everything, so that the men who follow us will have nothing to do. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

MR. INMAN. The gentleman has about made my speech. It is very astonishing how the opinions of these gentlemen fluctuate in regard to the Legislature. One day they cannot trust it to do anything, and the next day it is competent to do everything. I hope that gentlemen who belong to independent military companies will be allowed to carry no other flag or device than that of this country. Gentlemen talk about their patriotism, and yet they refuse to march under the American flag. I do not like such patriotism. I do not like such love of country. If a man is an American citizen he cannot object to the American flag. I hope that this amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles will be adopted unanimously.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will be adopted just as the gentleman from Los Angeles has proposed it. I believe that when a company is organized at the expense of the State that it is entirely improper to carry any other flag, and it appears to me that it is perfectly proper to carry the United States flag and nothing else by these companies organized and paid by the State. Of course companies outside of that are not really recognized as belonging to the State militia, and they can wear any uniform they like. They are merely at play, like children, and they can do just exactly as they like. But when they are organized in the State militia they have no business carrying any other flag, and I trust the amendment will be adopted.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I have an amendment that I would like to offer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add after the word 'State,' in second line, 'and receiving State support.'"

MR. BEERSTECHER. I ask the gentleman to accept that amendment.

MR. MANSFIELD. No sir.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have a right to speak to my amendment. The additional section, as offered by General Mansfield, reads as follows:

"All military organizations provided for by this Constitution, or any law of this State, shall, while under arms, either for ceremony or duty, carry no device, banner, or flag of State or nation, except that of the United States or of the State of California."

My amendment will make it read in this way:

"All military organizations provided for under this Constitution, or any law of this State, and receiving State support, shall, while under arms, either for ceremony or duty, carry no device, banner, or flag of any State or nation, except that of the United States or the State of California."

Now, gentlemen, I ask you in justice. in the name of reason, why should we put into this Constitution, that if a body of men associate themselves, use their own money, procure guns, procure arms, if you please, form themselves into a cavalry or artillery company, for display, they shall not be allowed to carry the flag of any other country, providing they also carry the flag of the United States? What is the objection to it? They are just as good citizens of the United States. They are an independent organization. There may be force, and there is force in the argument, that if they appear in parade or otherwise, as State troops, as a portion of the armament of the State or the United States, that they should carry nothing but the flag of the United States, and no other device. But where they are an independent organization, composed of an aggregation of men, why should they not be allowed to carry other devices and other banners? No one can stop an individual; no one can prevent me from marching down Kearny street and carrying the flag of any nation, or any device. What is the difference if a half dozen or ninety-nine other men happen to walk down that street with me? Why should we say that then I should not be allowed to carry any other flag than that of the United States?

MR. MANSFIELD. Could you march down Kearny Street as a representative of the United States Government and carry any other flag?

MR. BLACKMER. I would like to ask the gentleman whether he considers that an organization of that kind is provided for in this Constitution?

MR. BEERSTECHER. It may be. It may include every manner of military organization, whether under the State or private. As the gentleman from Los Angeles says, if I march through the street as the representative of this State and the United States, then I ought certainly to carry the colors of this State and the colors of the United States and no other colors. But, if I am independent—if I belong to an independent organization—there is no justice in saying that I should carry nothing but the colors of the United States. I believe in the United States and its flag, which I revere and honor. It is the one flag I would fight for; it is the only colors I would fight for, but at the same time I do not desire to say that other flags shall not be carried by other independent organizations.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to ask the gentleman if the flag of the United States is the only flag he would fight for, why does he trouble himself so about other flags?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I will answer that question. Because I believe, sir, that the citizens of this country, sir, should have liberty in this matter as well as in other matters. If you desire to be narrow-minded, exclusive, and bigoted, then vote to bind down these men to carry only one color and one flag.

MR. SCHELL. I would ask the gentleman if he believes that any set of men ought to have the right to organize an independent organization in this State which shall not be subject to constitutional and statutory law, and carry such flag and device as they please, irrespective of such law.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Certainly not. Every citizen of the State is subject to the laws of the State. As you well know, as a lawyer, every citizen of this State is subject to be called upon by the Sheriff in a posse comitatus.

MR. SCHELL. I do not know as they carry any flag, even the Stars and Stripes.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Haven't you known blood shed right in the streets by factions that have disagreed in the old countries, carrying different flags? Now, we want to prevent that.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes, I have—the Orangemen and Catholics. You might as well flaunt a red flag in the face of a mad bull.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. If they want to vent their patriotism for their own flags, let them go back to their own country. I don't propose to allow them to march in our streets and fight their old country troubles out.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That has nothing to do with the right to carry it.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I am a little sorry to hear these gentlemen talk so violently, and get their passions worked up to such a point over this little matter. To me this is a very plain matter. The provisions of the Code distinctly define what colors shall be carried by the militia. I do not know what the gentlemen want any more than that. Those who are willing to shoulder arms for the country have not complained about this, and I think it is very well as it is. I am a little surprised to see the storm here, as though this was a wild secession movement; as though the foreign element were going to run off with the country. Why don't the gentleman tell us of some hardship upon the people? It has been going on for a hundred years. The people from the European countries have been proud to carry their national flag upon national celebrations, and on excursions, at funerals, and on various occasions, while not directly under the command of the national forces. I ask where any hardship has ever resulted from it?

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. You have known blood to be shed?

MR. WELLIN. I have never known it. I have lived here since I was sixteen years of age. I have lived in the City of New York, and many of the large cities in the Western and Southern States, and I have never seen a blow struck nor a high word about the carrying of these flags on celebration days or upon excursions—never in my life. If these gentlemen say that injury has come by the carrying of these flags let them name the time and the place. I remember well when I saw many of these foreign flags marching down the streets of New York City in the year eighteen hundred and sixty one. I have no flag of any of these countries. The American flag is good enough for me. It is good enough for anybody, but I maintain that if a company organizes and keeps itself independent, if they wish to go upon a celebration or picnic and carry the starry banner upon their right and some other flag or device upon their left, I fail to see where the injury is going to come in. No one has ever objected to it. These flags have been carried by these foreign companies, and the privilege has never been abused; therefore I do not see why this cry should be raised against it. It is a very trifling matter, and I doubt the sincerity and the good, sound judgment of any man who stands upon this floor and who talks against us because we love to honor our native land. I fail to see why we can be looked upon with suspicion. I fail to see the ground of the argument. I call upon those who oppose it to tell me where the privilege has ever been abused, or where the American flag has ever been slighted, or where these men have ever failed to defend the American flag when the occasion offered.

MR. MANSFIELD. What became of the American flag at the time of the riots in New York City in eighteen hundred and sixty-three?

MR. WELLIN. I remember well that many of those very people who defended the flag in putting down that riot, were men of foreign birth. It is folly to raise this question unless you can show that there has been some positive injury resulting from the carrying of these flags. This is no argument against it. Some men have dragged the flag of the United States in the dirt and they were not foreigners either. I have known men in the Southern States to drag it in the dirt and they were not foreigners. I appeal to the whole history of the country to show that no injury has ever resulted from the carrying of these flags.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Where you came from do they allow it?

MR. WELLIN. That is the reason I left it. That is why we fight for this country, because it grants us these privileges. But if our liberty is to be taken away what will we have left? Very little more than we had in the land we have abandoned.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: If the Convention concludes to meddle with this matter at all, I hope they will adopt the amendment proposed by my colleague, Mr. Beerstecher. The theory upon which the State could control the matter at all would be that the State has contributed to the support of these organizations. If the intent is to regulate the sort of banners which private organizations shall carry, we ought, to be consistent, to make it apply to civic as well as military processions, because on the theory of gentlemen here the excitement and hostilities of race, etc., it would be as proper to restrict the carrying of religious banners, to restrict the carrying of political banners, to restrict the carrying of every kind of motto or device which may excite riots or disturbances of the peace. But the State undoubtedly can control and declare what kind of banners shall be carried by organizations which it supports, and the qualification is proper.

Now it seems to me that this is an attempt to excite feeling and put men on the record, as they call it, as to loyalty. I have no desire and I have no purpose at all to belittle or underate the flag of my country. I have never been so low down, in all my vagabond career—although I have felt even as though I did not want to see the face of man—that when I saw that flag waving in the air I did not feel a new throb of the heart. I love it! I recognize, also, as a justifiable emotion that our adopted fellow citizens may, compatibly with their duties as citizens of this Republic, still have some lingering affection for the country of their birth; and that it may still, consistently with their duties as American citizens, rouse in their hearts some of the same emotion occasionally to see the flag of their own country. Now we are threatened with no danger to our institutions from anything of that kind. I maintain that it is not the place for this in the Constitution, and we should not come down and meddle with all these matters. Let the militia, supported by the State, carry the flag of the United States and I am willing to vote for that. Let it carry the flag of California, and I am willing to vote for that. Further than that I do not believe we should meddle with the matter.

REMARKS OF MR. HARRISON.

MR. HARRISON. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment and I hope it will be voted down. If it goes into the Constitution it will never be enforced in San Francisco, for this reason: The man that enforced it, he would never run for a public office there. I belong to a private company. We have equipped ourselves at our own expense. We have never carried anything but the American flag, but if we felt like carrying any other flag I do not see why we should be prevented. I consider that I am as good a citizen as any of these gentlemen. I came from a despotic country, sir, and I never want to see the flag of my country flying in this country. It is not at the head of any military company, and I never want to see it here. I never want to import any of the despotic ideas of that country into this. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. WICKES.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: I think, sir, with Mr. Wellin, that there is a needless ferment made over this matter; I do not see why the matter should have been brought up. I yield to none in my devotion to the flag of my country. When it was carried forward during the late war, I looked for victory to crown it, and I prayed for victory to crown it. I remember, sir, when I was a boy of sixteen, when I stood upon the wharf at Aspinwall, hearing around me nothing but a strange gibberish, feeling like a stranger in a strange land, I remember that I looked out upon the broad ocean and I saw the sails of a vessel in the distance, rising upon the arc of the horizon. It rose up until the hull of a vessel was conspicuous; it came on like a thing of life and beauty, all its lines glittering in the sunlight. Up to its gaff rose a ball of bunting, hesitated in the air a moment, then unfolded itself in the breeze; it was the banner of my country. Forth from the guns flashed the fire, and they roared in thunder tones a salutation to that flag. Then, I have great reason to cherish my country's flag, for that episode in my vagabond life made an impression upon me which can never be effaced. But I also remember that the brave Sixty-ninth New York, at the battle of Bull Run, carried the harp and sunburst flag with the American banner, and it did not detract from their valor nor the devotion with which they fought on that bloody day, for they left two thirds of their number upon that sanguine field. Therefore I say that I see no reason for the section, and I shall vote against it.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: It occurs to me that this is a rather strange line of debate. I followed my friend, Beerstecher, in Committee of the Whole, and voted against the resolution prohibiting the carrying of these little flags and emblems of citizens who were born in different countries. It seems that he has changed front this morning, but that is no reason why I should do so. I do not propose to follow him in his summersaults. I do not see what harm, or why any American citizen can be opposed to any regiment, whether it is under the control and support of the State, or whether it is a private company, or any man, carrying along with the American flag the banner of some country in which perhaps he was born. He simply says to the American people: I was born and raised an Irishman, or a German, and I have forsaken that country, and come here and sworn my allegiance, and I am proud of the fact. I think, sir, that there were instances in the late war where the flags of different countries and the American flag were carried together. I do not remember any instance where any man objected to that condition of things; I do not remember any place in the history of the late civil war, where the green flag, or the German flag, was combined with the American flag, where any soldier, or any citizen, or anybody said: Take down that foreign flag before you go into battle. I think that the principle that would exclude, and that would prevent, and prohibit any man from manifesting his love for his mother country, is narrow and bigoted. That is my feeling about that. Show me a man that does not love his native land and country where he was born, and I will show you a man that will not make a good American citizen. He may hate the tyranny of the institutions of the country from which me emigrated, but that he can fail to have a kindly feeling for the land in which he was born I do not believe. Now I am not afraid of the record in this case. I am perfectly willing to go on it as voting against all these amendments; perfectly willing to let any military company, or any regiment, if they so desire, combine with the American flag the flag of their native country.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I desire to say something on this subject, as a naturalized citizen. I have been in the United States for forty years; came here as a boy. I left my native land, and I consider myself as good an American citizen as any gentleman on this floor. I love the American flag as much as any gentleman here. I have fought under that flag, and am ready to fight under it again, when called upon, or when necessary. But I cannot see any great harm in foreign born citizens carrying the emblems of their native lands. Love of native land is a sacred sentiment. I despise a man that does not love his native land. So does every true man. This sentiment has hitherto been respected by the American people. Our government, in the late civil war, did not forbid naturalized citizens, when formed into distinctive regiments, from carrying the flags emblematic of their nativity. Irish and German regiments were welcomed into our army, and were not denied the privilege of carrying these emblems of their native land. This proposition is narrow, and smacks of Knownothingism, and nothing else. That is what it is. I am inclined to favor Mr. Beerstecher's amendment; but if it is rejected, then I shall vote against the whole section proposed by the gentleman from Los Angeles.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: "Long may it wave o'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave!" I move the previous question.

Messrs. Lampson, Wilson, of Tehama, Condon, and Cowden, also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Beerstecher, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, Grace, Bell, Condon, and Gorman.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

THE CHAIR. The question is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I send up a proposition that I would like to have printed and considered.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION —. The rates or compensation to be collected by any person, company, or corporation in this State, for the use of water supplied to any county, city and county, or city or town, or the inhabitants thereof, shall be fixed annually by the Board of Supervisors, or city and county, or City or Town Council, or other governing body of such county, or city and county, or city or town, by ordinance or otherwise, in the manner that other ordinances or legislative acts or resolutions are passed by such body, and shall continue in force for one year and no longer. Such ordinances or resolutions shall be passed in the month of February of each year, and take effect on the first day of July thereafter. Any Board or body failing to pass the necessary ordinances or resolutions fixing water rates, when necessary, within such time, shall be subject to peremptory process, to compel action at the suit of any party interested, and shall be liable to such further processes and penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. Any person, company, or corporation, collecting water rates in any county, city and county, or city or town in this State, otherwise than as so established, shall forfeit the franchises and waterworks of such person, company, or corporation, to the county or city, city and county, or city or town where the same are collected, for the public use."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move that it be printed.

So ordered.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE CHAIR. The next measure on the file is the article on Legislative department. The Secretary will read the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read all of the amendments, and then the amendment to section two, as follows:

SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

"SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in January next ensuing the election of its members, at twelve o'clock M., unless the Governor shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No pay shall be allowed to members for a longer time than sixty days, except the first session called after the adoption of this Constitution, which may be allowed pay for one hundred days. And no bill shall be introduced, in either House, during the last ten days of the session, without the consent of two thirds of the members of said House.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out 'sixty,' in line five, and insert 'eighty;' and add after 'hundred,' in line seven, the words 'and twenty.'"

MR. BEERSTECHER. I second the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. MR. President: If this Constitution is adopted, I believe there will be so much work for the Legislature to do that it will be impossible to do it, in my opinion, in less than one hundred and twenty days, and I think we ought to allow at least that time. I believe that the first session ought to be at least one hundred and twenty days, although it is possible that one hundred days might do. This is more necessary owing to the fact that it is provided here that no bill shall be introduced, during the last ten days of the session, without the consent of two thirds. Hasty legislation has been the cause of a great many bad laws on the statute books, and in order to prevent that, we ought to give them a reasonable time; I therefore think that this is indispensable.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will not prevail. Now, sir, we have, by the limitations with regard to special legislation, cut off at least two thirds of the work of the Legislature. I believe that those gentlemen who have been members of the Legislature will bear me out in that assertion. If it may be presumed that the special and local laws passed by the ordinary Legislature consume time in proportion to the number of bills, then, sir, the session of the ordinary Legislature, under this Constitution, would not be over thirty days. I think that sixty days will be ample when we take into consideration that their deliberation will be confined almost entirely to general laws, when we once get in running order under this Constitution. I do not know but that one hundred and twenty days might be wise for the first session, or a longer time than we have provided; and yet we have provided in the schedule for annual sessions for the first two years. I think that two sessions coming so close together will obviate the necessity of an unusually long session immediately after the adoption of the Constitution. This matter was thoroughly considered by the Committee of the Whole; it was well considered in the Committee on Legislative Department, and I believe the conclusion arrived at was a wise one. Some concession was made—some additional time was added in Committee of the Whole to the time reported by the Committee on Legislative Department—and it was thought that ample time had been added, and I believe it has. I hope no further concessions in this direction will be made. Take, for instance, the experience of other States. There are very few of them, the sessions of whose Legislatures continue as long as we have provided for. In many of the older States—to be sure, they have annual sessions—they last but from twenty to thirty days on an average. I believe, especially as there will be but very little for the Legislature to do, that sixty days will be ample.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will not prevail. All that we have done in this section is simply to limit the pay for a certain length of time. If the public interests should require a few days longer, of course the members can give it. We know that we will take out this local legislation, and four fifths of the legislation has been upon local matters. This is about the only thing in all our work in which we have at all looked to the side of economy. In everything else it will be found that we have gone into extravagance. We have added to the expense of the State very largely in many things now unnecessary to enumerate. This is the only place where we have shown a disposition to economize. All these changes that are talked about will be only a matter of a few simple changes in the Code. We have a code of laws sufficient for this State; in fact, so many laws have been the curse of the State, just as it was the curse of this Convention, to allow people to introduce amendments here by the bushel. Let us get through with our work and go home, and not continue introducing and discussing amendments which have already been acted upon.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: If it be the intention of this Convention to adopt section twenty-five, as reported by Committee of the Whole, and I take it for granted that that is the intention of the Convention, I believe that gentlemen on this floor, as well as the people of the State of California, are in earnest in favor of curing this evil of special legislation. I believe the country is in earnest, and I believe that this Convention is in earnest in curing that great radical evil. If so, and we are prepared to adopt section twenty-five, cutting off all special legislation, the time agreed upon in Committee of the Whole, sixty days, except for the first session, which is allowed one hundred days, is amply sufficient. This subject was thoroughly discussed in Committee of the Whole in all its bearings, and section two, as reported by that committee, is the result of a thorough discussion and deliberation on the whole question, in connection with our probable and intended action in regard to cutting off special legislation, and I submit that the time is amply sufficient.

The records of former Legislatures show that more than two thirds of all the time consumed has been consumed in special legislation. Now if we cut that off, sixty days is enough, and more than enough. While it may not be of general interest to this Convention, I will say that in the Legislative Committee it was earnestly urged by some there that forty days would be amply sufficient, and that the committee in fixing upon sixty days considered that they were allowing not only enough, but more than enough time; that was the deliberate conviction of every member of that committe. That sixty days was enough it was agreed upon heartily, and the Committee of the Whole concurred, except in the matter of the first session, which was extended from eighty to one hundred days. I believe, notwithstanding that I agreed to eighty days in the committee, that the amendment made in the Committee of the Whole was a wise one; because, in the first session there will necessarily be a large amount of work to do that will not be necessary in subsequent sessions. Therefore I am glad that the amendment was made in the Committee of the Whole. I believe it was a wise amendment, and I hope that this Convention will stand by the report of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. ANDREWS. I would like to inquire whether the question is susceptible of division.

THE CHAIR. The Chair thinks it is divisible.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: The first question will be on striking out "sixty" and inserting "eighty," and then on striking out "one hundred" and inserting "one hundred and twenty." I think that sixty days is sufficient after the first session, but I do not believe that one hundred days is sufficient for the first session after the adoption of this Constitution.

MR. FILCHER. I will remind the gentleman that we have cut out the usual holiday recess.

MR. ANDREWS. I am aware of that, but if the gentleman will look at the work that will have to be done at the first session of the Legislature under this Constitution, he will see that it will have to be a thousand per cent. better working body than this Convention has been in order to accomplish it. I am in hopes that, the question being divided, the motion to strike out "sixty" and insert "eighty" will be voted down, and the motion striking out "one hundred" and inserting "one hundred and twenty" will be sustained.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I offered an amendment to this section in Committee of the Whole, that provided for the payment of five hundred dollars to each member of the Legislature for the session. This section, under the limit, will amount to four hundred and eighty dollars after the first session. I cannot see the necessity for more than eighty days for the first session. Under the amendments I proposed there would be no limit to the number of days, and I think the pay sufficient for any Legislature. I think the changes more imaginary than real. We have a Code, and there will be very few Acts necessary to change. We will hold a session of the Legislature, if the Constitution is adopted, in January next. We will hold another session of the Legislature one year after that time, so if there are any mistakes they will be easily remedied at the next session of the Legislature. I hope that this Convention will stand by the report of the Committee of the Whole, which was duly considered—more thoroughly considered than any other report of this Convention.

MR. ANDREWS. Do you take into consideration the changes necessary to be made in relation to county organizations? Changes will have to be made in regard to the organizations of county governments. There will have to be a uniformity in the system.

MR. LARKIN. That will be a general law. One bill will cover that. As Mr. Filcher, of Placer, said two thirds, and even three fourths, of the bills submitted are local and special Acts. Under this Constitution none but general laws will be considered by the Legislature. Probably forty or fifty general laws will be passed by the Legislature, and there will be ample time in the eighty days to pass what laws are necessary after the adoption of the Constitution, and to do all of the business that may arise from the change in the Constitution. Another thing that will expedite business under this Constitution: Heretofore they met in December and adjourned for the holidays, so that they did not get down to work until about the tenth of January. Under this Constitution the Legislature will meet the second Monday in January, and they can at once proceed to business. There will be no excuse for delay. They will proceed at once to work. I hope the Convention will stand by the report of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I would ask gentlemen to remember one thing. Our Legislature meets annually for two sessions, and we have done away with all our local and special legislation; consequently this is ample time, and I am very much in hopes that the report of the Committee of the Whole will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I have no particular interest in this matter of short or long sessions of the Legislature, any further than this: At the time when the Committee of the Whole fixed the period which the first session of the Legislature might sit and draw pay, we did not understand what amount of work was going to be laid out for the first session of the Legislature. Now, sir, we all fully realize the inconveniences which have been thrown about this body by reason of the Legislature making a limit upon our time; and, sir, some future Legislature may realize the inconvenience of not having sufficient time to perform their work. Let us see what this first session of the Legislature, limited to one hundred days, has to do. We have provided first for a Railroad Commission—for a bare skeleton—that there shall be a Railroad Commission. We have said that the Legislature shall make the laws which shall make that Commission effective. Now, sir, I pretend to say that after we have taken a week, or two weeks and more, making the bare skeleton of a Commission, that the Legislature which is to provide all the details of the work of this Commission, will require a much longer time. We have put into the Constitution a provision that the Legislature may deal with the Stock Boards of San Francisco, and it took us some time to discuss and adopt a proper measure. How long will it take the Legislature to provide the details of that regulation? We have passed an article on city, county, and township organization, by which we have barely sketched a plan for city and county governments. This will be but a trifle as compared with the details of the system. The sections we have adopted in this Constitution are in no sense effective until the Legislature shall have made them so by legislation; and, sir, it is more difficult to work out the details than it is to make the general provision. It will require more time, too. I hope, sir, that gentlemen will be elected to the first Legislature who have been elected to this Constitutional Convention, but we have no certainty that anything of the kind will happen. For my own part, I am satisfied that we make this Constitution in vain, unless we provide a reasonable time for the first session of the Legislature to prepare and make the details by which these various provisions are to be carried out. Take, for instance, the matter of the State Board of Equalization. The Legislature must provide all the details of the manner in which it shall work. What will be the time required to have that bill introduced, examined by a committee, and passed through two houses, with the chances of its being amended and sent back from house to house with amendments to be acted upon? What amount of time will it take to perfect a bill by which this State Board of Equalization is to become effective, as compared with the time it took to provide that there should be a State Board of Equalization, when we acted on the subject of taxation? We have made most radical changes in regard to the matter. We had to provide that the Legislature should make laws to put this system into force, and it will take a good deal of time to do it, if it be done well. Then, sir, the whole machinery of the Courts has to be changed. Instead of District Courts and County Courts, with certain classes of officers, we have provided the Superior Court. The whole system is changed. We have provided that there shall be one Superior Court in every county, but we could not provide the machinery by which these Courts are to work. It would be impossible. The Legislature has got to make the laws which set these Courts in motion. We must be reasonable in these matters. Let us remember, that if we make a mistake in this matter, by which we cripple the whole effect of the changes we have attempted wisely to make, that we will be held responsible for that, too. I do not believe in giving the Legislature any time to waste; but I believe, from what I have seen in this Convention, that one hundred days will not be sufficient to enable the first session of the Legislature to make these provisions which we are adopting effective; therefore, I shall vote in favor of extending the time of the first session to one hundred and twenty days.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I concur entirely in what has been said by the gentleman from Nevada; but I go farther. I do not believe that we ought to limit the time during which the members of the Legislature, at the first session, shall be paid at all. They have a vast amount of work before them; we have provided that the mode of legislation shall be slower than it is at present. We have provided for the reading of each bill in full on three separate days, for one thing. Then we have the vast work of this Railroad Commission. We have an entirely new system of legislation to make in regard to municipal corporations. We have the judicial system to provide for, and the State Board of Equalization, and all of these matters require a great deal of care, a great deal of time, a great deal of thought and preparation. There will be lengthy bills before that Legislature which will have to undergo a great deal of discussion and amendment. Now, it was supposed, when this Convention met, that its whole work would be closed in one hundred days. We are now on the one hundred and twenty-ninth day, and we still have considerable work before us. This body, I think, has worked earnestly, faithfully, and rapidly; but the details of legislation necessarily occupy much more space and time than the formation of an organic law. It will be absolutely necessary, at the first session of the Legislature, to pass laws embodying vast amounts of detail, and for a great variety of purposes. You take this single article on legislation, and you will find that they have a great deal to provide for under it. We have provided that the ayes and noes shall be called on the passage of every bill—a thing that was never known before in this State—and the ayes and noes will be called on a great many different propositions. I submit that we had better not undertake to limit the Legislature at all at its first session. I do not think that we shall find that it will delay its session unnecessarily; that it will occupy more time than will really be required by the business of this State, and in setting into operation a great deal of new machinery which is as yet thoroughly untried, and which will take a great deal of care, a great deal of time, and a great deal of deliberation. I should prefer greatly that no limit should be interposed in regard to the time that it should sit, or the time during which the services of its members should be paid for.

REMARKS OF MR. WEBSTER.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: Under section two, as reported by Committee on Legislative Department, the Legislature was allowed eighty days for the first session, and sixty days for each session thereafter. That report was brought in here, and this single section was discussed for several days, there being a doubt in the minds of many members whether eighty days would be sufficient or not, that time was extended to one hundred days, which was conceded to be ample, at that time, for all the purposes of legislation. Now, sir, I have not been able to see any reason or hear any reason adduced why this time should be extended. Under the plan which is adopted in a subsequent section, there will have to be a Legislature called next Winter, and one the following Winter, and if anything is overlooked of importance the following Legislature will have the power and ample opportunity to correct it. Now, sir, if they were absolutely prohibited from sitting longer than one hundred days there would be a serious objection, because there might be legislation absolutely necessary after the expiration of the one hundred days; but, sir, they can extend their session until their legislation is perfected—to one hundred and twenty days if necessary. It is true they are not allowed pay for more than one hundred days. It is said that it would injure legislation very much if their pay was not extended during the whole length of time. I believe that although one hundred days was the limit for which members of this Convention should receive pay, the average attendance since the expiration of the one hundred days has been as good as it was before. I hold that any Legislature that comes here, and a little additional time is required after the time for which they are allowed pay, they will continue their work. They will continue, it is true, no longer than is absolutely necessary to complete the work, and it occurs to me that since all special legislation is cut off that sixty days for a session is ample. It will be remembered that in Pennsylvania, under the old Constitution, that the proceedings of the Legislature in eighteen hundred and seventy-three covered about one thousand two hundred pages. In eighteen hundred and seventy-five, after the adoption of the new Constitution, the Legislature being confined to general laws, their whole work was contained in seventy-five pages. Now, sir, I think that we considered this matter very fully, and it is doubtful expediency to change it.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: Notwithstanding the remarks by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster, I hope that this Convention will exercise a greater liberality, and a more careful foresight in regard to the interests of the succeeding legislature, than was exercised by the Legislature which authorized the calling of this Convention. It seems to me that we have seen and have felt in an impressive manner, the evils arising from that method of prescribing to another body the length of time in which they shall perform their duties. It is necessarily an approximation to the time justly and properly required. Now, sir, it is proposed that in case the Legislature called to put in operation the machinery of the Constitution proposed by this Convention, should find, that having done their duty to the best of their ability during one hundred days that the work was not two thirds done, that they should do as the members of this Convention have done, and hold on twenty or thirty days longer. It is true they may do it, but is it just to ask them to do it. It is true that this Convention has had quite as full a house since the one hundred days, for which the members were entitled to pay, have expired. But why have they done it? Have they done it because they thought it was just that they should be retained here at their own expense, or have they done it because being here, their personal honor bound them to remain? I insist that it was the latter, and the latter alone; and I have no doubt that if these members, at the time of their election, or at the time their names were offered to the public, had know that the duties devolved upon them would have occupied one hundred and thirty or one hundred and forty days, and that they would have to bear their own expenses while sacrificing their private business, that two thirds of the members of this Convention would have refused to come under such circumstances. I think they would have said, there is no justice in it. It is not right. It is no more right with the members of this Convention, and no less right with members of the Legislature. It is not proposed that the Supreme Court shall receive so much per day for one hundred days, and nothing for a recess, or if they do not perform their duties in that time. I think that the work of the first Legislature after the adoption of this Constitution, will be so great that we should be very careful not to restrict them to an inefficient time, that we had better err a day or two on the wrong side. I therefore ask simply, in behalf of that Legislature, what it would be almost the unanimous voice of this Convention to ask for itself, if it had only foreseen the necessity of the case.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

LEGISLATIVE SESSIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment to insert "sixty" instead of "eighty."

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon striking out "one hundred days' and inserting "one hundred and twenty."

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, Heiskell, McComas, Larkin, and White.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'during the last ten days of the,' and insert 'after the expiration of ninety days from the commencement of the first session, and of fifty days after the commencement of each succeeding.'"

MR. LAINE. I desire to call attention to the fact that no member of the Legislature could ever tell when the last ten days would be, because there is no limitation to the session.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: This is made necessary by the change in the wording of the section, made by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: There might be a difficulty about this. If the Legislature should see fit to adjourn ten days before the time fixed in the Constitution, then bills might be introduced up to the very last day of the session as they have been.

MR. SWING. I know of no way of judging the future except by the past, and judging in that way we may feel certain that the Legislature will always sit to the end of the time allotted to them, so there is really nothing in this objection.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 57 ayes to 30 noes.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out of line three the words 'at twelve o'clock meridian,' and insert the same in line two next after the word 'commence.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. That merely changes the phraseology.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Division was called for, the Convention divided, and the vote stood, ayes 40, noes 33—no quorum voting. The question was put again and the amendment adopted by a vote of ayes 44, noes 33.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: While the Convention is in a humor to make these little corrections, I move to strike out the word "and," in the seventh line.

Lost.

The section, as amended, was adopted.

MEMBERS—HOW CHOSEN.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. The members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature, and their term of office shall be two years."

The section was adopted.

SENATORS—HOW CHOSEN.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly, and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State three years, and of the district for which he shall be chosen one year next before his election."

Adopted.

APPORTIONMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section five as amended.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts, as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators from the odd number districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senate, after the first election, shall be chosen every two years."

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section five: 'Provided, that no apportionment shall ever be made in this State whereby any one county or city and county shall have more than one third of the members of the Senate and Assembly.'"

MR. KELLEY. That amendment speaks for itself.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: We discussed that matter thoroughly in Committee of the Whole, and at that time the same amendment, or one like it, was voted down. At that time it was demonstrated that San Francisco pays one third of the taxes of this State. We then concluded that representation should be based upon population. Now, whether you base it on population or property values, there ought to be no restrictions on San Francisco or any other municipality. It is unjust, and I protest on behalf of my constituents in San Francisco. It is not right to have one ratio for San Francisco and another ratio for other places.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: This will give San Francisco a larger representation than she has now. Without looking into it, I am informed that she has one fourth now. Now, there may be such a condition of things as would deny to the interior of the State any representation at all. With a State so large as this, and the members of the Assembly so united, you will fix it so that you give to the central portions of the State all the representation, and deny representation to the interior. And that is the condition of things which this amendment seeks to prevent. Even in counties like the one I represent, there will not be one representative to the county. I don't see any objection to this proposition. I should prefer that the Assembly should be increased rather than to pass such an amendment as this. Gentlemen forget that the great territorial extent of this State makes it necessary to increase the members of the Assembly in order to give full representation. The outside portions of the State are not so directly represented, because their population is not so much concentrated. Now, it is much better that you give equal representation to the interior than to San Francisco or Sacramento, for the reason that it is not so easy for the members living in the interior to understand what public opinion is. Six members from San Francisco can represent that city as well as twenty. But take one man from a county like Tulare, and he still might not be able to represent that county. He has got to understand the various interests which he is to represent. I should prefer to see the Assembly increased rather than to pass such an amendment as this. But from the temper of the Convention, it does not seem likely that we will get this increase. Therefore, I am in favor of this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: It may be, sir, that the rural population may be more reliable than the city. It may be that it would be flattering to the vanity of the country members to have a larger representation. It may be that territory ought to be represented. It may be that wealth ought to be represented. But our whole elective system is based upon a different theory. Do we propose to revolutionize the very principles of republican government by establishing representation upon wealth and territory, or upon considerations of expediency? Certainly this would be a wild innovation to attempt here, however desirable or flattering it may be to the vanity of gentlemen upon this floor who come from the rural districts.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The amendment offered by the gentleman is of no practical utility. I suppose there is no one here who believes that the City of San Francisco ever will have more than one third of the population of the State. But the principle involved is nonsense. That is all you can say. That amendment simply proposes, in a certain event, to disfranchise certain citizens settled in certain portions of the State. That is about what it amounts to. It absolutely disfranchises them on account of the particular spot in which they happen to reside. It violates the very first principle of representative government, and American citizens ought not to need to be convinced of it.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: The question involved in this amendment is, whether or not we will adopt a representative government. We violate the very first principles by declaring that in case any county shall be entitled, under the rule, to more than one third of the representation of the State, it shall not have it. I certainly do not see the force of any argument why we should adopt any such proposition as that. But, on the contrary, there are many reasons why it should not be adopted. We all know what it means. It means the City and County of San Francisco. During the last year the City and County of San Francisco paid one hundred and sixty-four thousand nine hundred and eighty-four dollars towards the support of the common schools of this State in excess of what she drew from the School Fund. We have attempted to adopt a representative government, and yet these gentlemen come here and talk about the immense space over which their counties are spread, and the great scope of country (covered with sage brush, the only inhabitants being horned toads and jack-rabbits,) and gravely propose to have representation in proportion to their territory. If we are going to base representation upon such things, that is all right; but if we are going to base it upon population it is not all right, and we have no use for this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I am surprised at the position assumed by the gentleman from Yolo. I object to this, because it is in open violation of the principles of representative government. It is not fair. It is not in accordance with the theory upon which this government is founded—not in accordance with the great principles of equality. Why, if we are to be governed by space, some of the poorest counties in the State might have as many representatives upon this floor as San Francisco.

MR. SMITH. Don't you think you could represent the interests of San Francisco, or the interests of Sacramento?

MR. WELLIN. If I could I would be a great deal smarter than I think I am. I think population is the best basis of representation, and not space.

MR. TINNIN. Your party cry is that the "Chinese must go." Now, there are four or five representatives of the Chinese population in San Francisco. What do you propose to do with them?

MR. WELLIN. You count them in the interior, as we do in San Francisco, and it makes no difference in the result. We, to-day, pay nearly half the taxes of this State, and we have nothing like that proportion of representation. We are satisfied. We don't ask anything special, but we do object to such a provision as this. There is already great inequality, and we do not want to make things any more unequal.

REMARKS OF MR. HITCHCOCK.

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I think this proposition is right, and ought to be adopted. Even if the City of San Francisco is allowed one third of the representation, we can then barely protect ourselves. I think it is nothing more than right that this amendment should be adopted. It does seem to me that she is claiming here that the people outside of San Francisco don't know the wants of San Francisco. That being the fact, how can San Francisco know the wants of the interior. It is a bad rule that won't work both ways.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I think this amendment is a violation of the principles upon which government rests. It is an invitation to San Francisco not to prosper. You might as well put that city under the kind of government that the Southern States were under not long ago. You go upon the principle, I suppose, that population constitutes the basis of representation—at all events, population or taxation. And taking either theory, or both, this amendment is wrong. It is one that should not be entertained for a moment. It will go very far to put San Francisco out of sight.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I trust this amendment will be voted down, as remarked by General Howard. It certainly violates all principles of representative government. If San Francisco has the population she ought to be entitled to representation. I should dislike very much to see my own county come under this rule, for I look forward to the day when Milpitas will be a port of entry, and one of the grandest cities in this State. Now, according to these gentlemen, there are only two places in this State, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The San Francisco delegation say that the delegation from that city in the Legislature, were a set of thieves and robbers, stealing the city blind, if it had not been for the interior members. And yet they propose to increase the San Francisco delegation. It is a strange proposition, and I would like to have some gentleman explain it. They throw themselves upon us for protection ——

MR. CAPLES. Which side of this question are you on, anyway? [Laughter.]

MR. TULLY. I am for San Francisco having her representation according to population.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. How can you have a port of entry at Milpitas without any salt water?

MR. TULLY. We propose to make it. [Laughter.]

MR. BARBOUR. You won't have any trouble about population, if you will just get Lux & Miller to break up their landed estates and give people a chance.

MR. TULLY. The trouble with the gentleman is he has no such clients, and never will have. That class of clients never resort to that class of lawyers. [Laughter.]

MR. BARBOUR. They employ a big firm in the city, and have small country lawyers to do their work in the country. [Laughter.]

MR. TULLY. I hope San Francisco will be allowed her representation notwithstanding what I have said.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not be adopted, because it will simply tend to disfigure the Constitution. It will be a violation of principle, without any practical result flowing from that violation. I live in a little city across the Bay, which is increasing faster in population than San Francisco is; she is building more houses in the course of the year than San Francisco. Now, when you take the increase of these neighboring cities, you will find that it is utterly impossible for San Francisco ever to reach the supremacy which they claim here. Look at New York and Brooklyn. When I left the City of Brooklyn it had a population of eighty thousand, and New York had a population of between four hundred thousand and five hundred thousand. To-day, while New York has nine hundred, Brooklyn has six hundred thousand.

MR. TULLY. Permit me. Do you think the increase was on account of your leaving?

MR. CAMPBELL. Not at all, sir. If I had remained the increase might have been a little greater. [Laughter.] The growth of the interior and these small towns and the neighboring cities will always keep pace with San Francisco, and such a provision as this will never be of any use, while it will be a blot on our Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I shall not detain this Convention long, but it does appear to me, sir, that if we have a right in this Constitution to take away any part of the representation of any part of the country, we have a right to take it all away. It is a violation of the principle. I have been astonished that the matter should be discussed as much as it has. Population should form the basis of representation. If they are deprived of that, they are deprived of representation. I am in hopes the amendment will be voted down.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'provided,' in line two, and insert as follows: 'Except that the persons who were elected to the office of State Senator at the general election in the year A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, shall hold said office until the expiration of the term for which they were elected.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: Legislating men out of office without any cause, who have been elected by the people, is wrong in principle. It ought not to be done except in a case of necessity. It has been done heretofore by the Legislature of this State, and it has been looked upon by all parties as wrong. Now there is no necessity for legislating twenty Senators out of office, elected by the people a year ago. By adopting the amendment which I have sent up no further amendment will be necessary, because this provides that the present apportionment shall stand till the Legislature changes it. There is no reason, no excuse whatever why these Senators who have been elected by the people should be legislated out of office. It is wrong in principle, and the only benefit is to create a few more offices to be filled at the next election.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: If the Convention starts in on this plan we will be detained weeks, and perhaps months, legislating gentlemen into office. Now, if this Constitution is adopted, it is the evident intention of this body that there shall be an entire new deal—that there shall be a general election. If we start in on the proposition to legislate a few men into office, we will never get away.

MR. ANDREWS. I think I see a difficulty here in this thing. There are now but twenty-eight Senatorial districts in the State; consequently section five would have to be adjusted to reconcile it with the condition of Senatorial districts now existing. I will ask the gentleman whether his amendment will cover that point?

MR. MCFARLAND. I think it will, because section six provides that the apportionment shall remain as it now stands. The only thing to be done would be next Fall to elect twenty Senators under the present apportionment, and allow the twenty to remain in office till their term expires.

MR. ANDREWS. I think your amendment will obviate the difficulty. If we do not adopt that I would like for some gentleman to suggest something to do it.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not be adopted. If there is any one thing this Convention is expected to do more than another, it is to turn out all these officers now in place. The last Legislature was the most unpopular body that ever assembled.

MR. HILBORN. Except this Convention.

MR. WHITE. No, sir. I hope this tinkering work will be given up; that we will let the people elect such a Senate as they want.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in line two, the word 'eighty,' and insert in the same place the word 'ninety.'"

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I do not think this matter is fully comprehended, from the fact that we have had heretofore eighty members of the Assembly. These eighty members were considered necessary at that time to the wants of the State. Previous to that the counties were thinly populated; now they are being thickly settled, and their interests are growing larger and more diversified. Take the two Counties of Tulare and Kern. It is three hundred miles across them. We have in the County of Kern large mining interests in one part of the county, and in another part large farming interests. In one portion of the county the farming interest is entirely dependent upon irrigation; in another portion it depends upon rain, and as it is now, there is but one representative for the Counties of Tulare and Kern. I say that one representative cannot fairly represent the interests of those two counties. It seems to me absolutely necessary.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: The gentleman from Kern seems still to be afflicted with the idea that miles and territory should form the basis of representation. Now, if my memory serves me right, this Convention negatived a proposition of that kind. Yet he appears to be filled with the idea that miles and territory should form the basis of representation. This whole subject had a thorough discussion in the Committee of the Whole, and had a large share of discussion in the Legislative Committee. The sentiment of that committee, as well as of this Convention was in favor of curtailing rather than increasing the representation. It may be desirable for the gentleman from Kern, and other gentlemen, to make places for themselves or somebody else, but the taxpayers of this State have some right. This attempt to increase the representation after the Committee of the Whole have decided upon it, is certainly in bad taste. I have no doubt the sentiment of this Convention is in favor of standing by the conclusion arrived at by the Committee of the Whole. As to the amendment of the gentleman from Kern, I submit that it is not worth a second thought.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Legislative districts. Each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the Legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district. Until such adjustment shall be made, the apportionment now provided by law shall continue in force."

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. President: I offer the following amendment:

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section six—insert after the word 'force,' in line twenty, 'excepting that, in the meantime, Los Angeles County shall be entitled to two Senators instead of one, and three Assemblymen instead of two.'"

SPEECH OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I wish to say that under the present apportionment of this State there is an act of the greatest injustice being done to Los Angeles County; that her representation is inadequate, and does not compare with that of any other county in the State. In order to show how unjustly our county is treated in this matter, I will say that Los Angeles, according to the Presidential vote of eighteen hundred and seventy-six, has one representative to every two thousand two hundred and nineteen votes; San Francisco, one for every one thousand three hundred and sixty-six votes; Santa Clara, one for every one thousand two hundred and eighty votes; Nevada and Sierra, one for every one thousand and fifty-one votes; Amador, one for every eight hundred and twenty-nine votes. Now, sir, I sought in the Committee of the Whole to have this entire apportionment revised. I spent a good deal of time in trying to adjust it fairly as between all the counties, and I presented an amendment here which was referred to the Legislative Committee. What has become of that amendment I do not know. It has not been reported back to this Convention, nor do I know where it is now.

MR. CAMPBELL. Alameda County had nearly nine thousand votes.

MR. AYERS. Yes; that is one of the counties which is treated unjustly. She has eight thousand two hundred and eighty-nine votes, and only two Senators and three Representatives; while Humboldt, with two thousand four hundred and eighty-seven votes, has one Senator, and two Representatives, or as much representation as the County of Los Angeles, with her six thousand votes. Tulare has three thousand six hundred and forty-seven votes, and she has as much representation as Los Angeles. Nevada and Sierra, five thousand six hundred and thirty-one votes—one less than the County of Los Angeles—has two Senators and four Assemblymen. Santa Clara with a less vote than we have, has two Senators and three Assemblymen.

MR. TULLY. We are a better people.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. They don't show it by their delegation. [Laughter.]

MR. WEST. Mr. President: This is a very serious matter. Under the section adopted by the Committee of the Whole we shall have to remain with this inadequate representation until about the year eighteen hundred and eighty-four. It cannot be rectified before that time.

MR. LARKIN. Eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

MR. WEST. The census will be taken in eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and then the Legislature, which meets in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, will apportion the State, and the Legislature elected in eighteen hundred and eighty-four will be elected under the new apportionment. Now, sir, it is not right for this Convention to leave us with this inadequate representation for that length of time, when we have a chance to correct it now.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I believe it will be in order to recommit this section. It will all need revision. It is very unjust, and I move to refer it to the Committee on Legislative Department.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I am surprised that the gentleman should propose such a remedy for this evil, which is admitted to be an evil. We admit the proposition, but it must be apparent to gentlemen that to open the question of apportionment at this time is to create confusion worse confounded. How long will it be before other gentlemen will come forward and say: "my county is not represented?" And they will be telling the truth, because the present apportionment is based upon the census taken nine years ago. Within that nine years many changes have occurred in population. Hence the inequalities of which gentlemen complain. In one year more we will have another census, and then an apportionment will be made in a short time afterwards. If we attempt to correct one of these inequalities, the result will be that we will have to reapportion the State here and now. That is the only remedy. I do not propose to apply a special remedy to one county and leave all the others out. If the gentlemen of the Convention propose to remedy this evil now, there is but one way to do it, and that is to refer the whole matter back to the committee, with instructions to reapportion the State.

MR. AYERS. I am perfectly willing to do that.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: This matter cannot be corrected at this time. It is too late to pursue this matter. There are, no doubt, many inequalities, but they are not the result of any action here; they are the result of natural events. Changes in population make inequalities. We had better allow the matter to remain as it is.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: There are many reasons why this matter should be carefully considered and examined on this occasion. We will be deprived of our just apportionment for two sessions of the Legislature before this matter can be regulated. Now it will be understood by the members of this Convention that the next two sessions of the Legislature will be very important ones, in which the policy and laws of the State are to be changed. If the Constitution is not adopted this matter will be of no importance. But I believe the Constitution will be adopted, and the entire policy of the State changed. And each county in the State ought to be properly, and justly, and honestly represented. It is a matter of the greatest importance to the people of this State, and especially to the southern portion of the State. I hope the Convention will give it proper consideration.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: There are some remarkable incongruities in the section as it now stands. The report of the Committee on Legislative Department provided for thirty Senatorial districts. We changed the number of districts to forty, and were compelled to throw out the division of the State which they had made. Section five provides as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts, as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators from the odd number districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senate, after the first election, shall be chosen every two years."

Now the present number of districts is twenty-eight. The half of twenty-eight is fourteen. Then only fourteen Senators from the odd numbered districts will go out of office at the end of two years, and by that means we will have some Senators holding for six years. There is a marked inconsistency in the two sections. Now, there has been a great change in the status of population in this State. Some places have increased while others have decreased. Now, sir, to harmonize these difficulties in Convention would be an utter impossibility. We might as well try to district the State in Convention as to say that Los Angeles shall have one more, or Monterey, or some other county one more. Now, sir, I understand that a motion to commit to a committee is always in order and takes precedence to the motion now before the house. I therefore move that section six be recommitted to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to report a division of the State with forty Legislative districts, to be divided as nearly according to population as possible.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: I think the gentleman from Nevada is entirely mistaken in his reading of the section. It provides that they shall be elected as now provided by law. There is no difficulty about it. The gentleman is mistaken. I hope there will be no attempt made to redistrict the State by this Convention. If we do it will take three or four weeks. The Legislature can redistrict the State more correctly when they have before them the new census. We have nothing to go upon except the votes cast at the last Presidential election. If we undertake it we will get into a war that will last for weeks.

MR. HOWARD. I call for my motion.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard, to recommit sections five and six to the Committee on Legislative Department to reapportion the State into forty Senatorial districts.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard, of Los Angeles, Ayers, West, Huestis, and Blackmer.

The roll was called, and the motion lost by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Mansfield.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of section six.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I am opposed to these amendments to recommit. Our present Constitution provides that the State census shall be the basis of apportionment. The Legislature has violated that provision by failing to provide an enumeration, but there is no reason why the State should continue to violate the Constitution of the State. It is unjust to base the apportionment upon the Federal census, because that census is conducted in such a manner as to be practically no census at all in the thinly settled portions of the State. In the sparsely settled portions of the State it never can be full and complete. That portion of the State where I live has always been treated unjustly in the matter of representation, and I hope these abuses will not be allowed to continue.

MR. MCFARLAND. If you don't like the country districts you can go to San Francisco.

MR. ANDREWS. I do like the country districts, and there is no good reason why they should be treated unjustly.

MR. CAPLES. Are you in favor of providing for a State census?

MR. ANDREWS. Yes, sir.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I think the gentleman is mistaken about the effect of this. It does not require that the apportionment shall be absolutely upon the Federal census, it simply requires it to be based on the enumeration; but it does require it to be as nearly equal in population as possible. But the Legislature is not bound by the Federal census, it simply takes it as an estimate; so it did before. The requirement here is, that the Legislature shall do it as nearly according to population as possible. I do not think there is any objection to that. You may resort to the vote if you choose.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I am opposed to this section as it now stands. It provides for dividing the State into forty Senatorial districts, from which there shall be elected one Senator and two Assemblymen each, consequently the entire Senatorial district must elect two Assemblymen, and whatever territory the district may be composed of, the full territory must vote for the Assemblymen. Now, sir, I do not think that is a proper representation of the people in the Legislature; I think counties that are, by population, entitled to one Assemblyman, should be entitled to elect that Assemblyman from their own limits and by their own votes. Take the fifth Senatorial district, which is composed of the Counties of Merced, Mariposa, and Stanislaus; at the present time, these three counties are divided into two Assembly districts, composed in this way: Mariposa and Merced form one Assembly district, and Stanislaus one district. I know the people of my county do not desire to elect an Assemblyman in connection with another county; I presume that other counties are in the same fix. I think the State should be divided into Assembly districts the same as heretofore. I propose to offer an amendment to that effect.

"Insert, after the word 'forty,' in line two, the words 'Senatorial and eighty Assembly.' Also strike out the word 'legislative,' and insert 'Senatorial and Assembly.' Insert after the word 'each,' in line four, the word 'Senatorial,' and strike out from same line the words 'two members of the Assembly,' and insert 'each Assembly district shall choose one member of Assembly.' Also insert after the word 'the,' in line five, the word 'Senatorial,' and after the word 'order,' in line six, insert the words 'and the Assembly districts shall be numbered from one to eighty, in the same order.'"

I am sorry the Convention did not see fit to recommit this matter to the committee. I do not know that the amendment which I have offered will fully express my idea. I have offered it as being the best I was able to prepare. If it is adopted it will read in this way:

"SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial and eighty Assembly districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Senatorial and Assembly districts. Each Senatorial district shall choose one Senator, and each Assembly district shall choose one member of the Assembly. The Senatorial districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, and the Assembly district shall be numbered from one to eighty in the same order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the Legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district. Until such adjustment shall be made, the apportionment now provided by law shall continue in force."

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: The gentlemen seem to be proceeding upon the hypothesis that exact and methodical justice can be done to everybody and every section. Now, I ask the gentlemen to stop and reflect a moment. Is it possible to arrive at an apportionment that will deal out methodical justice to everybody and every section. It becomes absolutely necessary to put two counties together, unless we increase the Assembly to one hundred members. It is out of the question. There are evils connected with this matter, but it is an utter impossibility to remedy all of them here. The question is here, shall we go into another apportionment? Now, I see no possible means of making an apportionment that will be satisfactory to all.

MR. TINNIN. I am satisfied that this section is imperfect, and will create a great deal of confusion. I move that it be temporarily passed.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I have observed these inconsistencies between the two sections for some time, and it is impossible for us to rectify the matter here in the confusion of this body. The trouble has already been pointed out. The idea of the Committee of the Whole was this: that the State should be divided into forty districts. But they also provided that the present apportionment should last till that was done. As we have got into this confusion about it, I hope the motion last made will prevail.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I ask the gentleman, under the present apportionment, are there not forty-two Senators and eighty-one Representatives?

MR. LAINE. No, sir; forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I hope the motion to pass the section will prevail. The more it is examined into the worse it appears. It is an outrage to compel two counties to join in electing two Assemblymen, instead of allowing each county to choose its own.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on temporarily passing section six.

Carried, and the section temporarily passed.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twelve.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 12. When vacancies occur in either House, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

NOTICE.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I wish to send up a notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, February fourth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, move to reconsider the vote by which section five was adopted."

ADJOURNMENTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section fourteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. Neither House shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting. Nor shall the members of either House draw pay for any recess or adjournment for a longer time than three days."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

READING AND PASSAGE OF BILLS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of Committee of the Whole to section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. No law shall be passed except by bill. Nor shall any bill be put upon its final passage until the same, with the amendments thereto, shall have been printed for the use of the members; nor shall any bill become a law unless the same be read on three several days in each House, unless, in case of urgency, two thirds of the House where such bill may be depending shall, by a vote of yeas and nays, deem it expedient to dispense with this rule. Any bill may originate in either House, but may be amended or rejected by the other; and on the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length, and the vote shall be by yeas and nays upon each bill separately, and shall be entered on the Journal; and no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each House."

MR. FILCHER. I move to amend line six, by striking out the word "rule," and inserting the word "provision."

Adopted.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I suggest the word "pending," in line five, instead of "depending."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

BILLS—HOW APPROVED OR VETOED.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section sixteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both Houses, by yeas and nays, two thirds of the members elected to each House voting therefor, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law, unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted), shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the House in which the bill originated a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor."

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I move to amend by striking out, in the sixteenth line, the words, "the same," and inserting "such objections."

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

WHO ARE ELIGIBLE TO OFFICE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 21. No person who shall be convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of any State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State, and the Legislature shall provide by law for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony."

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I move to amend.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in line one, the words 'who shall be.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

ELEEMOSYNARY INSTITUTIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution, not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State; provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances; such aid to be granted by a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of such respective institutions; provided further, that the State shall have, at any time, the right to inquire into the management of such institutions. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move to strike out all after the word "State," in line seven.

MR. AYERS. I hope the amendment will not prevail. There was a prolonged struggle over this matter in the Committee of the Whole, and I do not believe the Convention is ready to go back on its action on that occasion.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Reynolds, Reddy, Gorman, Condon, and Smith, of San Francisco.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I move to strike out all after the word "Controller," to and including the word "State," in line seven, so as to read:

"SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances; such aid to be granted by a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of such respective institutions; provided further, that the State shall have, at any time, the right to inquire into the management of such institutions. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature."

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: This amendment of mine strikes out that provision prohibiting the appropriation of money for the support of these various charitable institutions. We have two classes of charitable institutions in this State which have heretofore received State aid. First, are the asylums proper, for orphans, and those other institutions which receive afflicted people of all kinds besides orphans. There is a large class of very deserving institutions in this State, which are taking care of the afflicted, who would otherwise have to be supported entirely by the State. Take, for instance, the Howard Benevolent Society of this city. It is more than a local institution, it is more than a State institution, it is a national institution. I remember here last Winter there was a flood, and people were driven from their homes; they came into this city, glad to escape with their lives. Men, women, and children were calling for help. The Howard Society supported them for weeks and months; they did all they could, but finally there came a time when private benevolence was unable to support them. They came to the Legislature and said: "We are able to take care of the poor of Sacramento, but these are not our poor; they are people from Yolo, and Colusa, and adjoining counties, and it is not right that the whole burden of their support should fall upon us. We come here to ask the Legislature to make an appropriation for the support of these people." And we gave them five thousand dollars. Is there a person of sound mind anywhere, who would not have voted for it? I believe that it is unwise to place a restriction in this Constitution that will prevent the Legislature doing that sort of thing. Now, we never have had epidemics, but suppose next year a thing should occur in this State which has occurred in the cities of the South, what condition would we be in? Now, I have before me the report of the Committee on State Hospitals, of the last Legislature. In giving an account of the Howard Benevolent Society, they show that private benevolence gave five times as much as the Legislature to the support of this institution, and there are many other institutions in this State of a similar character. I will inform the farmers of this body that this will shut off all such thing as State appropriations to their District Agricultural Societies. I don't believe that is wise. I hope, for these reasons, that the motion will prevail.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: If it were not unparliamentary, I would denominate this as a scheme to lay open the treasury of this State. Now, sir, I desire to call the attention of this body to the fact that the passage of this amendment will open the door of the State treasury to everything to step in and help themselves. It will open the doors to every corporation in this State, to railroads, to wagon roads, in fact to every scheme that can be hatched and brought forward to rob the treasury and the people. If this body desires to prevent that sort of thing, then by all means vote down this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I agree fully with the gentleman from Trinity. I think it would be opening the doors of the State treasury to all sorts of schemes. Gentlemen speak of the plague-stricken cities of the South. There is less danger from plagues than there is from having our State treasury bankrupt, and the funds abstracted and given away to private institutions. I hope this provision will be allowed to remain. It is the only guard there is to the State treasury.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: While not agreeing with Mr. Stuart on the Chinese question, I do agree with him in this matter. It is to-day, by reason of having no provision of this kind in the Constitution, that the State is paying out one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year interest upon the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. And where is the benefit? Where is the benefit, I ask of gentlemen? We have been fighting this matter here for almost six weeks, in order to reduce the railroad corporations to the control of the State.

MR. HILBORN. I will accept any amendment that will include only charitable institutions.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That is too thin. We have given the Legislature full power to make donations to charitable institutions, and I think it is time to stop. I am astonished at the argument made in regard to the flood. People, when they are driven out by flood, generally go where it is higher, and not where they expect to be driven out again. I think it is about time to stop. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not prevail. It is merely taking out of this report, as it comes from the Committee of the Whole, one of the best sections in it in the direction of retrenchment. Now, we all know, who are familiar with the doings of the Legislature in regard to appropriations, that many of these donations are crowded in by those who have means.

MR. HILBORN. Is it not a fact that we have a provision allowing the Governor to veto single items in the appropriation bills.

MR. BLACKMER. The difficulty may disappear to some extent. Let us look for a moment and see what the gentleman proposes to strike out:

"And no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution, not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State."

Now, if that provision is allowed to remain you will find that it will stop some of the leaks that have been complained of. Leave it out and it will open the door to all the leeching which we have tried to stop. We do not need to have half an eye to understand what all this means; what the under current of all this is. Now, at the last session of the Legislature, they appropriated money for all the asylums not included in this prohibition, at the rate of one hundred dollars each per annum for whole orphans, and seventy-five dollars each per annum for half orphans and abandoned children. Then they went beyond that and appropiated money to the San Francisco Magdelen Asylum; Old Woman's Home, on Rincon Hill; Little Sisters' Infant Shelter; Sisters of Mercy Hospital, Los Angeles; the Howard Benevolent Association, Sacramento; San José Ladies Benevolent Association; the Ladies' Benevolent Association at Placerville; Protestant Episcopal Church Home; St. Luke's Hospital; Scandinavian Ladies' Home; Ladies' Relief Association, Sacramento; Vallejo Benevolent Society; San Diego Benevolent Society; Pacific Dispensary, for women and children, San Francisco; Grass Valley Ladies' Relief Society; Napa Benevolent Society; Youths' Directory, San Francisco, and a number of others. Now, sir, it is time some of these were cut off, and I sincerely hope the amendment may not prevail.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I do not propose to argue this question, but simply to say, that I hope the amendment will be voted down.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I hope the motion to strike out will prevail. I wish to inform the gentleman from San Francisco that for a distance of over one hundred and fifty miles this was the only spot that was dry, and the people from the surrounding counties were brought here for assistance. I am in favor of assisting in cases of that kind. I wish to leave the Legislature with discretion to make appropriations in cases of that kind.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I hope the motion will prevail. We can never tell how soon our State may be afflicted with epidemics. It may be that in less than a year we shall be afflicted with the plague. It would not surprise me at all. We cannot tell when contingencies may arise that will require legislative aid, and I am opposed to a provision in the Constitution which will prevent the Legislature from exercising a wise discretion in these matters.

MR. CAPLES. Was it legislative aid that provided for the wants of the cities of the South when they were stricken with pestilence?

MR. HOWARD. There was no Legislature in session, else there would have been legislative aid, because the whole country was willing to protect them, and did. Now, I have been reading all the reports that I can find upon this subject—English and American—and they all come to this conclusion, that in the matter of the support of the poor, the indigent, the sick and afflicted, there are two modes of relief. One is the poor-rate, by which the sufferers are supported at a public institution called a poorhouse. The other is what is termed outdoor relief, in which, by the aid of certain societies, small sums are distributed from time to time. In the winter time they are aided to the extent of supplying their personal wants. Now, sir, my opinion is that these societies are most efficient in giving aid. They can ascertain, better than the public authorities can, what parties are entitled to aid, and to what amount. They inquire with greater intelligence, and they know with more accuracy. We have a relief society in Los Angeles, and I believe that the funds are always wisely used. I believe the funds will be applied more discreetly than they would if you have a public poorhouse and county hospitals. Besides, why should we take this power from the Legislature? Why cut off all power of relief, where relief may be absolutely necessary? I think we can leave this matter to the Legislature with perfect safety.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I shall have to put myself upon the re-cord in this matter. [Laughter.] I hope the motion to strike out will prevail. It is a very strange proposition that gentlemen should be willing to say that the Legislature of this State shall not, under any circumstances, be allowed to appropriate money to the poor and suffering people who may be in need of aid. It is a strange proposition to me. I am willing to trust the Legislature to that extent. I hope that it will never be said of the State of California, that any charitable institution ever applied to the Legislature for relief in vain.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: This is an attempt to strike out of this section the only really beneficial feature there is in it. Now, sir, strike that out, and you transform the State treasury into a sort of political grab-bag. That is what it has been. I ask you, can the Legislature intelligently appropriate money for these local institutions, which ought to be under the control of the counties, and under the immediate direction of the local authorities? No, we should not appropriate money except where the men who pay the money can see what it is appropriated for. Now, I claim that all these institutions for the poor should be supported by the counties, where they are under the immediate supervision and inspection of the people who contribute to them. We are not opposed to public funds being contributed for charitable purposes, but we claim that the distribution of the funds should be made by those who are competent to do it. We are opposed to making the State treasury common plunder.

MR. HILBORN. Can you point me to a single instance where money appropriated for these purposes has been misapplied.

MR. WEST. I can answer the gentleman by defying him to show that the moneys have not been. I do assert that the money has been appropriated to objects entirely out of the jurisdiction of the State, and not under its control. I might include every one of these appropriations. I hope this Convention will vote down the motion.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: In the Committee on Legislative Department they labored with great pains to erect around the State treasury secure fortifications. Perhaps it is defective. Perhaps they did a foolish thing. At all events, one wing of our works has given way. The poor orphan was made the weapon with which to batter down the wall. We surrendered and voted with the poor orphan this time, because we saw that resistance was useless. Great is Humbug, and the orphan is his prophet. The artillery was very heavy, and we are subjugated. Now, the gentleman from Solano assails us on the other side with ladies' benevolent societies, and I desire to say to him that the artillery is not so heavy as the poor orphan. It is too light; it won't win. We propose to defend our works from that side, and the artillery is too light to make a breach. We warn them that pop-guns will have no effect. The question here is whether the doors of the State treasury are to be thrown wide open as they have been in the past. If they open to the poor orphan, I am satisfied, as far as I am concerned. I have surrendered. But I do not propose to surrender to these corporations and societies. Not much. I propose to defend the works. Charity covers a multitude of sins, no doubt, and I desire to say in this connection that charity begins at home, and if there is any class of people in the State of California who are really objects of charity, they are the taxpayers.

MR. WATERS. I move the Convention do now adjourn.

Lost.

MR. HARRISON. I don't desire to make any argument upon this thing. I wish to protect the treasury of the State which the committee has attempted. I don't wish to make any war; but, sir, an attempt has been made to strike away from here one of the most deserving charities. I wish to say in regard to the orphans ——

MR. OHLEYER. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is arguing in regard to the orphans.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will confine himself to the question.

MR. FILCHER. How can he confine himself to the question when his speech was written last night, before he knew what question was coming up?

MR. HARRISON. Mr. President:—[Stamping, applause, and cries of "question," "question," and great confusion.]

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: I move we do now adjourn.

Carried, and at five o'clock the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTIETH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Tuesday, February 4th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for two days was granted Mr. Hale.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITIONS.

Messrs. Beerstecher, Tully, McCoy, Barbour, Wellin, and Harrison presented petitions requesting the exemption of certain property used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on Legislative Department.

MR. TINNIN. I gave notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which section five was adopted. I desire to call up that motion now. Section five was evidently adopted by this body under a misapprehension. There are difficulties to overcome which the old section will not cover, and last night I drew up the following substitute which I desire to offer for section five if this motion to reconsider prevails:

"The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts numbered as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators elected in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two, from the odd numbered districts, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senators shall be elected every two years; provided, that all the Senators elected at the first election under this Constitution shall hold office for the term of three years."

Now, Mr. President, it is evidently the intention of this body to change the time of elections so that they will come regularly with the congressional and Presidential elections. We find it necessary to make the first Senators elected hold office for the term of three years, which will bring the time up to eighteen hundred and eighty-two, by which time there will have been an apportionment made, and the terms of the elections will, after that time, become regular. Then the Senators can be divided so that one half will go out every two years. We find that this is the only manner in which we can relieve ourselves of this difficulty. I move now to reconsider the vote by which section five was adopted.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope this motion to reconsider will prevail, because it is the only way, in my judgment, out of the difficulty. It is suggested by some that it would be better to have the Senators divide themselves, and go out of office, one half at the end of one year and the others at the end of three years; but it does not reach the trouble, because, by the reapportionment under the new census the districts, as they now exist, will be entirely blotted out, and new districts will be formed, and the Senators elected will not be from the districts as they will stand after the apportionment. So that it seems that the only way to cover this difficulty is to elect the Senators for a term of three years. Before their term will have expired the new apportionment will be made according to the new census and new districts formed, and then it will be a very easy matter to determine that those from the odd numbered districts will go out at the end of two years and the rest at the end of four years.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

The motion prevailed.

MR. TINNIN. I now offer this substitute.

APPORTIONMENT.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts, numbered as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators elected in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two, from the odd numbered districts, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senators shall be elected every two years; provided, that all the Senators elected at the first election under this Constitution shall hold office for the term of three years."

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: I think that prohibits the Legislature of this State making an apportionment of this State until eighteen hundred and eighty-two. I do not think it is right. If the apportionment is unequal and unjust now, it should not be left so until eighteen hundred and eighty-two.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: It is utterly impossible for an apportionment to be made before that time. The United States census will be taken in eighteen hundred and eighty.

MR. GREGG. I think they can make a better apportionment than we have, at the next session of the Legislature—a very much better one than we have now. You can base it upon fair estimates made. It is well known to members in this body that in many localities there are two Senators and four Assemblymen to four thousand or six thousand votes, while in others of eight thousand or ten thousand there is only one Senator and two Assemblymen.

MR. TINNIN. The apportionment is required to be made upon the United States census.

MR. GREGG. It is only directory and not mandatory.

MR. TINNIN. The gentleman is mistaken about that.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I think both of the gentlemen are mistaken in relation to the time the apportionment will be made. Under the plan adopted, or about to be adopted, there would be a Legislature in eighteen hundred and eighty; there would also be a Legislature that would convene in eighteen hundred and eighty-one. That Legislature that will convene in eighteen hundred and eighty-one will have the official census upon which it may base the apportionment. It is contemplated in this that the apportionment will be made by the Legislature of eighteen hundred and eighty-one; am I not correct?

MR. TINNIN. You could not get an election until eighteen hundred and eighty-two.

MR. ANDREWS. Certainly not; but then they will have the official census, and it would be the first apportionment made under the new Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr President: We have got into a very serious snarl here, and it seems to me that the easiest way to get out of it would be to return to the original report of the committee; we can settle this matter right in Convention by doing so, otherwise we have got to refer this back to the Committee of the Whole, and we have got to have a new apportionment. I do not believe that the representatives of this State, from the disfranchised counties, will be satisfied to go on for six years more with the apportionment which now prevails. I am willing, for one, and I think there are many gentlemen on this floor representing counties that are now inadequtely represented, who are willing to take the report of the Committee on Legislative Department as it was reported and adopted. It will give us at least fair representation and that is what is not proposed to be given by the amendment before us.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. I do not see how we can go back to that report, unless it shall be changed as to the number of Senators and Assemblymen. The districting of the State, in that report, is upon the basis of thirty Senators and sixty Assemblymen, while the Convention has determined to have forty and eighty; consequently it is impossible to take the report of the committee. It is a very tedious task to undertake to go through and make forty and eighty districts instead of thirty and sixty districts. As for waiting for six years, the first election that would take place under the new apportionment would be in eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and that cannot be over three years at the outside, and then there would be an election under the new apportionment. I do not see how we can arrive at it in any shorter time than that. The Legislature of eighteen hundred and eighty-one at the least would redistrict and reapportion the State. I do not see any other way to get out of this difficulty. It is impossible to arrive at a numerically correct apportionment in this Convention, for the simple reason that we have no satisfactory data upon which to base an apportionment. We have only to wait until eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and we can elect under the new apportionment.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I am decidedly in favor of going back to the report of the original committee. That report is perfect in all its parts, and all we have to do is to refuse to concur in the amendments made in the Committee of the Whole. Five or six sections embody the whole plan. I am satisfied that it would be cheaper for the State to have thirty and sixty, instead of forty and eighty. Such a large body of men will not do the work so well. This Convention is an illustration of that fact. In my county we have two Senators and three representatives. I am satisfied that we would have one Senator and two representatives. We would be more careful in the selection of these men. As it is now, we get one or two good men and throw in the rest for filling. When we have a few, we know that we must send the men who are best qualified for the work in hand. I hope the Convention will go back to the original plan. Then there is a fair apportionment and everything that works harmoniously and well. But with this plan we have got to patch out and amend it, and it is next to impossible to perfect it.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: When it is in order I propose to offer as a substitute for this section, section five of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department, if the motion of the gentleman from Trinity shall be voted down. I entirely concur with the views expressed by the gentleman from Los Angeles, and by the gentleman from Santa Clara, that this whole difficulty has originated in departing from the report of the Committee on Legislative Department in this respect. I hope, sir, that we will vote down the proposition of the gentleman from Trinity, and return to section five, of the article reported by the Committee on Legislative Department, which reads as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of thirty members, and the Assembly of sixty members, to be elected by districts, as hereinafter provided. The seats of the fifteen Senators from the odd number districts, chosen at the first election under this Constitution, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senate, after the first election, shall be chosen every two years."

The gentleman from San Diego is in error in saying that the Convention has agreed to any other principle. That is the very point we are now considering. The Committee of the Whole saw proper to strike out thirty and insert forty, and that is the very thing that we propose now to correct. If we do make this correction, then section six of the article, as reported by the Committee on Legislative Department, making the apportionment, can be amended if objectionable, and the whole system will be harmonious. Then we will have an apportionment at this time, instead of three, four, five, or six years hence, as may happen under certain contingencies. It is assumed here that the time is too precious. I say, that on the basis I refer to, it could be changed by referring it to a committee that would report back to-morrow morning a proper apportionment of the State. There has been some objection to the apportionment of the committee. Those gentlemen who complain that it is not just can appear before the committee.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: In the shape in which sections five and six now are everybody can see that there is a very plain and decided conflict, which this amendment of the gentleman from Trinity, Mr. Tinnin, seeks to obviate, by a very reasonable amendment. Now, sir, it seems to me that there cannot be anything very dangerous in allowing the holdover Senators, who have already been elected for four years, to finish out their terms, and section five can be easily so amended as to have these holdover Senators finish out their terms, and still perfectly harmonize with section six. Now, sir, I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Trinity, if it is the best we can get, and I am inclined to think that it is the best we can get. I shall therefore vote for it, but if it is lost, I shall offer an amendment, the effect of which shall be to keep in office the present holdover Senators for the remainder of their terms, and to elect simply one half of the State Senators at the first election under the new Constitution. I am not one of those who are in favor of tipping all the offices in the State upside down. I see no reason why the Senators who have been elected by the people of this State should not be allowed to serve out their whole term. I believe they are good and respectable men.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: If we go back again to the report of the Committee on Legislative Department I am afraid we shall occupy at least a week here on this question of apportionment. I think we had better stand by the action of the Committee of the Whole and continue the present apportionment until we have the census of eighteen hundred and eighty. I think it is decidedly bad policy for us here now at this late stage in our proceedings to go back and enter into an interminable wrangle over that question. Immediately after the census of eighteen hundred and eighty the Legislature will meet in eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and a new apportionment can be made.

MR. AYERS. The census will be taken in eighteen hundred and eighty, and the Legislature may meet early in eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and the census will not be published until about eighteen hundred and eighty-two.

MR. VAN DYKE. There is no difficulty in the world in getting the population statistics. The reason that the publication is delayed is the various other statistics.

MR. AYERS. Are you familiar with that kind of business?

MR. VAN DYKE. Yes, sir. There is a great deal of red tape about the various other statistics. But there is no difficulty in getting the population statistics to base their action upon.

MR. MCCALLUM. What provision has been adopted for the meeting of the Legislature in eighteen hundred and eighty-one? How much time do you think it will take to correct blunders in Committee of the Whole, more than would be required to apportion the State?

MR. VAN DYKE. I have this to say, that so far as Alameda County is concerned of course that report would be slightly better for us than the present; but does not the gentleman know that other counties will want to have their representation adjusted, and that we will be at least a week here before we can get through with that apportionment. That is based entirely upon election returns, and we have already had in Committee of the Whole a sufficient demonstration that other counties are not satisfied with that apportionment, and the result is that this county and that county will wish to have their apportionment raised, and we shall occupy a week's time.

MR. MCCALLUM. At what time under the Tinnin amendment would the apportionment be made?

MR. VAN DYKE. In eighteen hundred and eighty-one. We have got to resort to this in order to change our elections from the odd to the even years. That is the scheme as I understand it. I do not see any objection to having all the Senators elected for three years. Then the classification can be made upon the basis of the census of eighteen hundred and eighty. This gives us the present apportionment until we have the proper basis for another apportionment; that is, the United States census. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that, under section six, as adopted in Committee of the Whole, it provides that the apportionment shall be based upon the Federal census of eighteen hundred and eighty and every ten years thereafter.

MR. TINNIN. There will be an amendment offered to section six that will correct any difficulty.

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I hope that the Convention will not go back of the report of the Committee of the Whole. There were objections enough to that. I am in favor of holding on to the proposition for forty Senators and eighty Assemblymen. So far as a reapportionment is concerned, I think it is impracticable. If we undertake to do that we find ourselves at this late day putting out upon a very stormy sea. The inequalities always obtain in a new State, and it is not customary to reapportion for these inequalities. In the Northwestern States these grievances have been felt, but every Legislature does not redistrict the State. We must stand these inequalities until another census is taken. My friend, Judge Crouch, represents Napa. He stands here ready, I suppose, as soon as the representation of Alameda and Los Angeles is increased, to ask another representative for Napa. Napa would be allowed another representative on the same basis. I hope that we will not start out on any such wild scheme as that. I am decidedly in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Trinity.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: If I have an opportunity, I will offer a substitute which will cure the whole thing. I will offer it if this amendment is voted down.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Trinity, Mr. Tinnin.

Upon the adoption of which the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Tinnin, Wyatt, Brown, and Condon.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section six, proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Legislative districts. Each district shall choose one Senator and two members of the Assembly. The districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the Legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district. Until such adjustment shall be made, the apportionment now provided by law shall continue in force."

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to that amendment proposed by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell.

ASSEMBLY DISTRICTS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'forty,' in line two, the words 'Senatorial and and eighty Assembly.' Also, strike out the word 'Legislative,' and insert 'Senatorial and Assembly.' Insert after the word 'each,' in line four, the word 'Senatorial,' and strike out from same line the words 'two members of the Assembly,' and insert 'each Assembly district shall choose one member of Assembly.' Also, insert after the word 'the,' in line five, the word 'Senatorial,' and after the word 'order,' in line six, insert the words 'and the Assembly districts shall be numbered from one to eighty in the same order.'"

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: If that amendment be adopted it will read like this: "For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial and eighty Assembly districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Senatorial and Assembly districts. Each Senatorial district shall choose one Senator, and each Assembly district shall choose one member of Assembly. The Senatorial districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, and the Assembly districts shall be numbered from one to eighty, in the same order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof." That is as far as the amendment affects it. Now, if the amendment of the Committee of the Whole should be adopted, then where Senatorial districts are composed of more than one county, the Assemblymen must necessarily be elected by a joint ticket from all the counties comprised in the Senatorial district, and hence it will deprive some counties of a direct representation. I know that in my section it will not be satisfactory at all to the people as it is. I will give an illustration of how it would work. The fifth Senatorial district, in which I reside, is composed of the counties of Mariposa, Merced, and Stanislaus. Stanislaus now has one Assemblyman, and the counties of Merced and Mariposa are an Assembly district, and elect one member of the Assembly. Now, sir, under this section we must elect by joint ticket from the three counties two Assemblymen. That we object to. The county in which I reside is entitled to an Assemblyman, and we desire to elect our own Assemblyman. It might follow that the counties of Mariposa and Merced may furnish the Senator and the two Assemblymen, and thus the county of Stanislaus would be wholly unrepresented in the Legislature. Now, I say that a system having a possible result of that kind is not a proper one to be pursued in my judgment.

MR. MCCALLUM. How about a county that elects more than one Assemblyman?

MR. SCHELL. That would be a matter for the Legislature to adjust, under this provision. Perhaps it would be better to provide that no county should be divided into Assembly districts; allowing each county, if entitled to more than one Assemblyman, to elect by general ticket of that county. But what I do object to is, that one county shall be joined with another county in the election of Assemblymen where a county is entitled to an Assemblyman by itself. I say that this section six, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, would work an injustice, and it is not a fair and proper representation in the legislative body of this State. Now, if there is any objection to dividing a State into eighty Assembly districts, numbering them from one to eighty, that part of it may be altered, but this part of it I think the Convention ought to insist upon: that counties that are entitled to an Assemblyman should be entitled to elect that Assemblyman without joining to other counties for that purpose.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: This would result in cutting up the State into a great number of small districts. It is quite impossible to divide the State into this number of districts. The committee found it a difficult matter to divide the State into thirty districts. It would be more difficult to divide it into forty. To divide it into eighty would be quite impossible. The best plan to adopt is the one that will be as near just as possible, but it is impossible to have districts composed of contiguous territory without dividing counties and joining parts of counties into districts. We declare in this section that, "in the formation of said districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district." There was some objections that had to be overcome. Some gentlemen representing some of the counties desired that there should be a county representation; that no basis of representation in the Assembly should be adopted that would not give each county one representative. Well, we disposed of the representative character of the apportionment. Then that difficulty had to be looked out for, and finally it was resolved, both by the Legislative Committee and the Committee of the Whole, to resort to this districting the State into forty districts, and to elect representatives from the same districts. I do not see how that scheme can be bettered. It is said that two counties will be joined to elect a Senator and two representatives, and there will be a difficulty as to who shall have one, or two, or all of these representatives. Well, if the people cannot settle that among themselves, who can? Certainly not this Convention, unless the State be divided into these infinitessimal districts to the number of eighty. If you undertake to do that you will have to join parts of counties with other counties. It cannot otherwise be done, and then the same difficulty will arise whether the county or the part of the county shall have the representative. The same difficulty will have to be settled by the people as if this was adopted. I have no pet scheme or ideas concerning this matter, except to adopt the plan that will be as nearly uniform as possible, and work as little hardship and as little difficulty.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President. I see the objection which the gentleman from Stanislaus, Judge Schell, wishes to obviate, and I think it can be reached by an amendment like this. Instead of having the State cut up into Assembly districts, we could put in after the word "Assembly," in the fifth line, this: "provided that where a Senatorial district shall be composed of two or more counties, the members of Assembly for the said Senatorial district may be separately elected." I think that would reach the same end, and would obviate the necessity of dividing the whole State into eighty Assembly districts, and numbering them consecutively. Now in San Francisco, Santa Clara, Alameda, and the large counties it would be very objectionable to divide them into Assembly districts.

MR. HEISKELL. I would sugggest that these words be put in after the word Assembly: "provided that where a county is entitled to one or more Assemblymen, they shall be elected by the county at large," that would obviate the difficulty.

MR. VAN DYKE. That is the proposition that I suggest. That is, where a Senatorial district is composed of two or more counties, the Assemblymen from that district are to be elected separately.

MR. HEISKELL. There was an objection raised that perhaps it would cut up the counties into Assembly districts. This would provide for that.

MR. VAN DYKE. That would result in the same practice that we have now, which is, I believe, very satisfactory. That is, if it is composed of two counties nearly equal in population, each one elects an Assemblyman. I understand Judge Schell to be in favor of that practice as it at present exists, and I understand his amendment is addressed to that end. But I object to his amendment to the extent that it divides the whole State into Assembly districts. That is where a county is sufficiently large to have one or more Senatorial districts, it is unnecessary to divide it into Assembly districts. I am in favor of giving each of the counties a chance to be represented in the Assembly, separately.

Digitized by Google

I think some such proviso as this would cover the whole thing, and allow the whole State to be represented as at present.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I do not see that the gentleman from Alameda has presented any objection to Judge Schell's amendment. There is no objection to the numbering of them, and the only objection that I see which has any weight is that it may necessitate the cutting up of the larger counties into Senatorial districts. If Judge Schell would accept this amendment I think it would obviate that difficulty: "provided that where a county is entitled to one or more Assemblymen they shall be elected by the county at large."

MR. SCHELL. I have no objection to that.

MR. WYATT. I object to that.

MR. JOHNSON. I would suggest to the gentleman whether or not it would not be better, instead of making the number of Assembly districts arbitrarily eighty, to let them be numbered from one upward, as the Legislature may direct, leaving the numbering entirely with the Legislature?

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Stanislaus to Judge Schell's amendment will not be accepted, and will not prevail. I am in favor of the amendment as offered by Judge Schell: that the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial and eighty Representative districts. In Committee of the Whole I proposed that each county should have at least one representative in the Legislature of this State, and I was met by the objection then that we were not representing territory, but population; that the counties were not entitled to representatives until they had enough people; that whenever you could find enough people they were entitled to a representative. I am, therefore, in favor of carrying out this proposition of the Committee of the Whole: that where a population is entitled to a representative they shall have it, wherever you find them, whether they constitute two counties or the twentieth part of one county. I am in favor of it for the further reason that it gives a better minority representation than any other character of representation except providing for a minority representation. I am entirely opposed to leaving it to the Legislature to say that one third of the members coming to this house of representatives, from the City of San Francisco, shall come entirely from the dominant party of the City of San Francisco; and we know that is exactly what they do say and what they will say. I am, therefore, in favor of cutting up the territory of the State into such districts as the population of the State entitles them to representation, and electing Senators and Assemblymen from them. Then it is that we will have represented on this floor every shade of opinion, every great interest, every character of thought. Every community will have a representative and a voice upon this floor. I hope that the amendment of Judge Schell will be sustained by this Convention, and be incorporated as one of the foundation stones of the work of this Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The proposition to select members of the Assembly from separate districts and Senators from Senatorial districts is not a new matter. It is a matter that has been discussed in every apportionment. It is the true policy. No man should be allowed to vote for more than one Senator. No community should select one third or one quarter of a Legislature under the control of one party. If so you might as well place your Legislature under the control of that interest that nominates the ticket. Take San Francisco itself. Divide San Francisco as it would be compelled to divide itself and there will be no trouble. This policy will give each party a portion of the local government, and a representation in the State Legislature. You have declared that you will not allow counties to be represented here without having sufficient population to be represented. Two of these constitute a Senatorial district, and in that way Conventions are manipulated and your Legislature controlled. This is the only true plan. My objection to the section as it stands is based upon the ground taken by the gentleman from Monterey. I would now oppose any measure that did not provide that the Legislature, upon each census being taken, should redistrict the State according to population. Alameda is divided now into five or six Supervisor districts. You have divisions in San Francisco, and if you select from these divisions you will have the right men. Bring your government home to the people—the nearer the better.

MR. REYNOLDS. I want to ask the gentleman how he will divide San Francisco into these small districts?

MR. LARKIN. I would divide it as it is divided for Supervisor districts.

MR. REYNOLDS. Then you would fall into the same difficulty.

MR. LARKIN. We have provided for a Legislature for general purposes and not for local matters. These matters are all delegated to the counties. Now, we want to send men to the Legislature that will represent the interests of the State. The true interest of every county is to have it divided into districts. There is no trouble about it. The nearer you can bring your representatives to the people the more responsibility they feel. Bring it down so that the people will know their representatives; so that they will select men that will truly represent their interests.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I move to refer section six to the Committee on Legislative Department, with instructions to reconstruct the same so as to conform to the action of the Convention.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: I agree with Mr. Larkin for once, that no man should vote for more than one Assemblyman, and the only thing now to determine is whether one Assemblyman shall be voted for by one voter, or more, at one time? If it is desirable to elect two Assemblymen in one district, and one voter vote for both, let us say so; if it is not, let us adopt the amendment of Mr. Schell. I am in favor of the amendment of Mr. Schell. Let one voter only vote for one Assemblyman. You can divide San Francisco by wards, and counties by townships, just as well as you can divide the State by Senatorial districts. Another method would be to throw the legislative power into the hands of parties by massing the votes upon two or three Senators; that is an unfair representation. I hope the amendment of Mr. Schell will be adopted as offered. Divide the State into eighty Assembly and forty Senatorial districts; that is the only fair method.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that the motion of the gentleman from Mendocino is not in order, because if it is carried it will take the whole report back with it.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I desire to speak a word in favor of the amendment of Judge Schell. In my district there are three Assemmen and one Senator. Suppose we are reduced to two Assemblymen, they might both come from one county, and the district is about two hundred miles long. Two of the Assemblymen might come from one end of the district. There is no difficulty in dividing the State into Assembly districts. They can be divided by townships and precincts, and then they represent a minority as well as the majority upon this floor. I think it will work well for the whole State; I hope, therefore, that Judge Schell's amendment, pure and simple, will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 64 ayes to 24 noes.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out the words 'But in making such adjustment, no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move to strike out these words, because, in forming the population of a district, every inhabitant is counted; and that is not only the case in this State, but it is the case in every State in the Union. This matter was argued at some length in Committee of the Whole, and arguments at that time were brought to bear which were unanswered, and are unanswerable. Representation is based upon population, and that population is not simply composed of the voting inhabitants of a district. It is not confined to the voting inhabitants of the district, but it is based upon the actual residents; that is to say, the inhabitants of the district. Now, this section, as it now reads, will prevent the counting of the Chinese inhabitants; but at the same time, in the City of San Francisco, where we have a Chinese population of about thirty thousand, we are obliged to supervise them with our police force. We are obliged to have sanitary measures to guard against disease and pestilence. We are obliged to take care of them in sickness, and to guard them in health. The taxpayers of San Francisco are obliged to maintain them as a part and parcel of the inhabitants of that city. It is an injustice to say that these people, whom the taxpayers are obliged to pay their money for, and who are an integral part of that municipality, shall not be counted as inhabitants thereof. They are inhabitants. It cannot be denied but what they are inhabitants of San Francisco, as the white men are, and in forming a basis for representation in the Legislature of this State, they should be counted, after the adoption of this Constitution, just as they are counted to-day. Of course, we expect to get rid of them. We expect to drive them out. We expect the day will come when there will be no Chinamen in San Francisco. We look forward with hope to that day. But just so long as the Chinese are there, and that city is obliged to take care of them, just that long ought they to be counted in making up the basis of representation. They are counted to-day. They always have been counted, not only in San Francisco, but in the counties and the outside municipalities in this State. I protest, on behalf of San Francisco, against cutting off the basis of representation of from twenty-five thousand to thirty thousand inhabitants of that city who are just as much inhabitants to-day as any white man there. It is unjust. It ought not to be incorporated into the Constitution. It is cutting off the representation of San Francisco, to which she is justly and equitably entitled.

MR. LARKIN. If this population is entitled to representation they ought to have their own representatives, and Colonel Bee would be entitled to come here and represent them.

MR. BEERSTECHER. If you are talking for buncombe, it will do very well; but you know very well that the Chinese form a part of the basis of representation all over this State.

MR. LARKIN. I do not generally talk for buncombe.

MR. DOWLING. How long do you expect to keep the Chinese in San Francisco?

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am certainly in favor of this proposition. If there is a population among us that we do not believe are capable of self-government, that will not assimilate with us, that the whole people of the State and of the United States are seeking to turn back from us, we certainly do not want them represented in our legislative halls, either directly or indirectly, either by their chosen representatives, or by the people who would seek to represent them. The Indians that roam in the mountains have as much right to representation. Consistency demands of us, and demands of the gentleman from San Francisco that we shall base representation upon citizenship, and those eligible to become citizens. I cannot conceive how any man who is opposed to the Chinese settling in this State should argue that the communities where they reside shall be represented on account of their residence. It is inconsistent. For my part I shall as readily vote for this proposition as any proposition in this Constitution.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask the gentleman if he does not know that San Francisco will lose several Senators and a large number of Assemblymen?

Digitized by Google

MR. LARKIN. Who would they represent? They would represent a cancer in your midst. Sacramento may lose, but they do not want to be represented by a cancer. They want to be represented by men eligible to become citizens.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I call for the ayes and noes.

MR. BIGGS. Yes, give us the ayes and noes. We want to know who wants Chinese representation.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Wyatt, Larkin, Gorman, O'Sullivan, and Lindow.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

Hitchcock,

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment:

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the words 'until such,' and insert 'districting herein provided for shall be made, Senators and Assemblymen shall be elected by the districts, and according to the apportionment now provided for by law.'"

Adopted.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six by striking out all after the word 'district,' in line eleven, to and including the word 'districts,' in line fourteen, and inserting as follows: 'The enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be taken under the direction of the Legislature in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five, and at the end of every ten years thereafter, and shall serve as the basis of representation in both houses of the Legislature; provided, that the census that may be taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, shall serve as such basis of representation until the year eighteen hundred and eighty-five.'"

MR. TINNIN. I second the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I would call the attention of the Convention to the fact that under section six, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, the apportionment will be made upon the Federal census, the Federal enumeration of the inhabitants of this State. I call the attention of the Convention to the injustice which that would impose upon the thinly settled sections and the mountainous portions of the State. This amendment that I offer would make the section now as our present Constitution is, and would provide that the apportionment should be made upon an enumeration to be made by the State. As I have said before, the compensation allowed by the Federal Government for taking the census is not sufficient to justify any one in taking the census in the mountainous parts of the State, and it will consequently leave those parts of the State as they now are, unfairly represented. I do hope that the Convention will adopt this amendment and leave the Constitution, in that respect, as the Constitution now is.

MR. WHITE. I hope that that amendment will not be adopted for the simple reason that it would cost the State about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars every few years. It appears to me that when we have the United States census to go by every ten years it is enough.

MR. ANDREWS. I desire to ask you if you think that the question of cost ought to be taken into consideration when we are considering a question of a fair and equal representation?

MR. WHITE. I contend that we can have a fair and equal representation without it, and that we ought to take cost into consideration in everything we do here, and that the people will not be satisfied if we do not. I have invariably voted for everything that cuts down expenditure, and I mean to do so still. I think this would be the most wanton waste of money that could be made. I trust that it will be promptly voted down. I know that when the Federal census has been taken in my county it has been taken with the utmost care every time. I do not know whether the men were paid high enough for it or not. But they took it well.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: The gentleman who offers this amendment is correct in saying that it is a part of the Constitution. I may also add that although it has been in the Constitution twenty-nine years, and although mandatory in its provisions, it has never been complied with. It is one of those cases where, by common consent, the Legislature has been excused from complying with a mandatory provision of the Constitution. If we insert it now, I have no doubt but what the future course will be the same as the past, and we will thereby have at least one precedent of ignoring mandatory provisions of the Constitution. It would be a dead letter if adopted. It would involve, I think, a greater expense than that mentioned by the gentleman. I think a quarter of a million each time, and I have no doubt that the United States census would be taken just as well as it would be done by State officers.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: the gentleman from Alameda is slightly mistaken in fact. In eighteen hundred and sixty-three the Legislature did act upon this provision of the Constitution and passed a bill requiring a census to be taken. If you will recollect the language of the old Constitution is that the enumeration of inhabitants is to be taken under the direction of the Legislature. That bill Governor Low pocketed, contrary to the constitutional provision, and without any authority whatever. But he assigned as a reason for it the expense of taking it. The State has acquiesced in that and there has been no fault found. I for one believe that the census taken every ten years by the United States Government is as likely to represent the State correctly as one taken each intermediate five years. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Shasta, Mr. Andrews.

The amendment was rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole as amended.

The amendment as amended was concurred in.

NOTICE.

MR. KELLY. I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, February fifth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, move for a reconsideration of the vote by which section six was adopted.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I withdraw the amendment I offered to section twenty-two yesterday, and send up a substitute for it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert, after the word 'institution,' in sixth line, the words, 'except such corporations and associations as shall be created for purely charitable purposes.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: The proposition offered yesterday was to strike out all of this part of the section which restricted the Legislature in granting appropriations for corporations for charitable purposes. Some members of the Convention feared that it would open the doors for grants to other corporations, other than charitable corporations. Such was not my purpose, and no gentleman of the Convention would be more averse to such a result than I. This will restrict appropriations to institutions established purely for charitable purposes, and I cannot see any earthly objection to it. I believe it is one of the duties of the State to assist these charitable institutions. Gentlemen on this floor have greatly exaggerated the amount of money which is appropriated annually for those purposes. It is true that the list of institutions receiving that aid is large. I think there are about thirty of them, and the aggregate amount for the present fiscal year is less than twenty-thousand dollars for all. I do not believe that there is a like sum of money appropriated by the State that does as much good. What are these institutions? They are not steals. They are all benevolent institutions, that are conducted by good men. I will read a little from the report of the Senate Committee of last Winter. We must assume that it is correct. I wish to impress further upon the minds of the members of this Convention that this committee was hostile to appropriations, and these statements were wrung from them. I read from volume four of the Appendix, page twenty-three, as to the Old Women's Home:

"This institution is situated on Rincon Hill, in San Francisco, and is under the charge and care of the Sisters of Charity. There are now in the Home eighty-four old ladies, ranging from seventy years upwards, who are sick, crippled, helpless, and destitute of means. They are tenderly cared for by the good Sisters of Charity, and their apartments are neatly kept and look very cheerful, considering the bad ventilation of the building. Some of them were received with a little money, while the majority were received without any money at all. Any one of them are at liberty to leave the Home whenever they so desire. The Sisters of Charity in charge, and various physicians who attend the old ladies when they are sick, give their services gratuitously. And any old lady who applies for admission is received, whether she has money or not. A bequest of some five thousand dollars was left this Home, which sum went towards erecting the new building and furnishing it. The Home also assists in procuring employment for the younger class of females. The objects of the Old Ladies' Home are commendable."

Digitized by Google

MR. TINNIN. Did not the Assembly Committee report some of these institutions unworthy?

MR. HILBORN. This did the same thing; but the Assembly Committee reported that most of them were worthy.

MR. BARBOUR. Aged and indigent persons are already provided for.

MR. HILBORN. The Prison Commission does not fall within that: "The objects of the Commission are, to assist discharged prisoners from our prisons, and amelioration of the condition of prisoners, etc. These objects of the Commission are in their character very good and deserve special mention. To carry out its objects the agent devotes his entire time to the duties required of him. He receives a list of all prisoners to be discharged during the succeeding month from the State Prison, and endeavors to see and converse with each one before his release, and acquaints himself with the character, and disposition, and necessities of each one, and gives them information, and bring them in communication with their friends, furnish them with clothes, sufficient money to live from day to day for a while after their release, and assists them in procuring employment, etc. He also attends to the wants of many of the prisoners, such as collecting money for them and attending to errands for them."

MR. LARKIN. Cannot that be attended to under the general provision for the State Prison?

Mr. HILBORN. No, sir. I refer to the Magdalen Society.

MR. TINNIN. Was it not demonstrated by the investigation that only about two thirds of the money got to the prisons?

MR. HILBORN. No, sir. This report does not show that. The report shows that a good deal was contributed besides what the State paid. Now, then, as to the Magdalen Society: "This is a society under the charge and care of the Sisters of Charity, and the Magdalen Asylum is situated at South San Francisco. There are about two hundred female inmates in this institution, and its objects are to reclaim wayward and vicious girls, who are committed there both by their parents, or the Police Judge of San Francisco. These girls are all kept at work in making linen wear and buckskin gloves, and in that manner help to earn money for the institution; and the City and County of San Francisco pays fifteen dollars per month to the society for each one of the inmates confined there by order of the Police Judge, of which there are now about eighty such inmates; therefore, taking these things into consideration, and the fact of the society being a local one, we recommend that any further appropriation be discontinued."

They must be supplied by private charity if these State appropriations are withdrawn. Now, this proposition to withdraw State aid is merely a proposition to protect the niggardly wretch who will give nothing and throw the whole burden upon the charitably inclined. I am opposed to it. There are some people who will never give a dollar for alms or for charity unless the Tax Collector goes for them. These are the people I am after. I believe there should be appropriations for agricultural societies, but if the farmers are not willing to protect themselves I see no reason why I should insist on protecting them.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: The gentleman from Solano says that there are some people who are never willing to give any money towards these charitable institutions. In answer to the gentleman, I would say that there are some people who are too willing to give the State's money to any and everything. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. President, I favored the section which authorizes the Legislature to make donations to orphan asylums. The section seems to me sufficiently broad: "provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances; such aid to be granted by a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of such respective institutions." I was in favor of that, and I am in favor of that now. But the amendment offered by the gentleman yesterday was so broad as to include railroad companies. The gentleman has seen fit, by the pressure brought to bear upon him, to withdraw that amendment and substitute another one. But he leaves in the State Agricultural Society——

MR. HILBORN. No, I don't.

MR. BEERSTECHER. The gentleman showed me an amendment before the opening of the session to-day, and at that time there was a clause concerning Agricultural Societies; since that time he has also stricken that out. Now, I call attention to the very report that the gentleman was reading from, only not at the same pages. I call attention to the fourth page of that report.

"This is the first time, since the State began making appropriations for charitable institutions, that any committee of the Legislature has visited them with a view to ascertaining their exact condition. The method of tacking on to the general appropriation bill this society and that association, is familiar to legislators. The Legislature has for years been making appropriations without any knowledge of the institutions they proposed to make beneficiaries. Relief societies have been hastily formed, a Board of Trustees called together, and an organization formed, for the purpose of obtaining a share of the money which was being scattered broadcast. The people of one city or county, seeing themselves taxed to support a relief society in another county, felt as though they had an equal right to subsidy, and according to all rules of equity, probably have. And this is one of the tendencies of appropriating money, raised by taxing the property of the entire State, to the use and benefit of a particular city, town, or county. If the citizens of Placer County have no relief societies, they may well object to being taxed for the support of two societies in an adjoining county. While recognizing the enterprise, unselfishness, and charity of the ladies who have charge of these institutions, and who devote their time without pay, to the work of doing good, your committee must protest, that in principle, this is all wrong, and that the State has no right to spend the people's money in any such manner. These local societies are doing a great good, but they should be supported by the people of the locality where the charity is dispensed, and not out of the State treasury. If it goes on as it has in the past, every city, town, and hamlet in the State may come to the Legislature, present their certificates of incorporation, and with just as much justice, claim their equal proportions of subsidy."

Again, on page nine of the report, speaking of what was called "The Little Sisters' Infant Shelter," the committee says:

"This asylum the committee found, after an arduous search at number five hundred and twelve Minna Street, San Francisco. It is a two-story frame dwelling house, in a locality wholly unsuited for children. The objects of the proprietress, Mrs. Jane Temple, are these: There is one large room up-stairs, fitted up with cradles, chairs, and toys, where children are taken in and cared for during the day—not at night—while the mothers go out to day's work. There are, on an average, about fifteen children, whose mothers are charged from ten cents to twenty-five cents a day for their keeping. How and by what means such an institution, with not even the guise of charity, run wholly as a private concern, ever came to be made a recipient of State alms, it is difficult to see. The annual appropriation has been one thousand dollars. Counting a maximum of fifteen children (whose mothers are compelled to pay for their keeping), that would make a per capita cost of sixty-six dollars for feeding these infants on gruel ten months out of the twenty-four. Your committee recommend that the 'Little Sisters' Infant Shelter' be stricken from the roll of State charities."

And yet this institution received from one to two thousand dollars per year aid from the State. If I had time I could multiply instances in this report. Another institution that received six hundred and twenty-two dollars and ninety-seven cents:

"After a long search your committee succeeded in tracing up and finding this so-called 'Orphan Asylum.' It is a small house owned by a woman by the name of Mrs. C. Graves, who has been conducting the house as an orphan asylum, renting out the upper story, and keeping the children down stairs in an atmosphere not at all conducive to health. There are at this time about fourteen children under her charge, some of whom pay eight dollars a month for their keeping, and others five dollars. It is not worth while to enter into a description of the premises, any more than to show with how little intelligence the Legislature has been dispensing charity. Such institutions as this are not established, in our opinion, for the purpose of dispensing charity to the orphans, but, under the cloak of charity, to provide a home and a living for some individual. The amount of money that this institution has been receiving from the State annually, is six hundred and twenty-two dollars and ninety-seven cents. There are no Trustees connected with the institution, no one who is responsible; in fact, it is not to be classed either as an orphan asylum or a place of charity. There are no books kept—not a scratch of writing to show anything about its transactions."

This was another one that was in San Francisco. Now, although I am in favor of allowing the Legislature to donate to orphan asylums, I protest against the doors of the treasury being opened and allowing such institutions to come in here. As this report says when the Legislature is about to go into session these societies are formed for the express purpose of going before the Legislature and petitioning them to donate moneys. Where there are regular established asylums for the care of orphans, and the poor and indigent, they are provided for. I protest in the name of the taxpayers of the State against the doors of the treasury being thrown open to such institutions as I have referred to. The gentleman has been obliged to recede from one position to another until he has got to this, and I hope it will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I have only this to say in respect to this matter, that if there is to be any appropriations made for the purposes of charity, those purposes ought to be defined. I think that the sentiment ought to commend itself to this Convention, that whenever there is an appropriation to be made for any purpose whatever, or for a charitable purpose, that it should be defined in this Constitution so that we may know the extent of the charity that is to be dispensed. Now, sir, if there is no positive definition, if this matter is left ad libitum to the Legislature, then you might as well take away the keys from the public treasury of this State. This same Legislature that has been derided, this same Legislature that has been attacked on all sides in this hall, are to be accorded the privilege of unlocking the doors of the public treasury and appropriating this money just as they please, and then they call it law, they call that an appropriation made by law. I am not in favor of any such thing as that. I am in favor of this. I believe that the objects of charity specified in this section are proper objects. I do not believe that I am called here for the purpose of opposing anything like appropriating for a specific charitable object which is defined in the Constitution. Now, we have some basis to go upon there. The fact that the State has not erected buildings in which to care for orphans, half orphans, and abandoned children, for the aged and indigent, does not relieve the State from the obligation of ministering to their relief. The obligation arises not from the existence of State institutions, but from that humane principle which God has implanted in every bosom, and which responds when properly appealed to. This is the superstructure, sir, upon which these institutions have been erected, and this is the principle which should actuate us in having these appropriations made. But, sir, let the charitable object be defined constitutionally, so that we may know what it is, and not leave it to the Legislature to do anything else. I am not willing to have any indefinite charity administered by the Legislature.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: It strikes me, sir, that if we desire to place as great a curse as possible upon the people of this State we should adopt a Constitution after this manner. It simply means throwing open the doors of the treasury of the State for designing persons to carry off money in the name of charity. It is not charity for five or six individuals to get together and rob the public treasury and distribute the money. It has not the semblance or garb of charity. Under that name they come here to the Legislature, with every sort of appliance, seeking to draw money from the public funds. The Legislature has no time to go to the various parts of the State, from San Diego to Siskiyou, to find out how these institutions are managed. Government was never organized to administer charities. Government is organized to protect life, liberty, and property. We are not here to legislate for these things, but to provide a government to protect life, liberty, and property. The Supreme Court of the United States, in a decision rendered not long since, held that the Legislature did not hold the public purse for any such purpose; that governments were not organized to dispense charities; that if you could not levy a tax upon the citizen directly to run one of these institutions, you have no right to steal the public money from the treasury when there and devote it to it.

MR. HILBORN. How about the Insane Asylum?

MR. LAINE. That is a government institution. It is taking care of those that may destroy the lives and property of the people of the State.

MR. HILBORN. The Deaf and Dumb and Blind Asylum?

MR. LAINE. They are also provided for in order that they shall not become paupers upon the State, and to give them a means of livelihood. But that is a State institution. The Supreme Court declared the law unconstitutional and void upon the ground that it robbed the very foundation principles of the government. So it was in the Supreme Court of the State of Massachusetts in a case there in which the Legislature of Massachusetts undertook to put money into the pockets of those who had been injured by the great fire. The Supreme Court pronounced the law null and void, and held that the Legislature did not hold the public purse for any such purpose. If there is anything more than another that will weigh down and destroy this Constitution this will be that thing. I call for the ayes and noes on this amendment.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. McComas, Smith, of Santa Clara, Tully, and Hilborn.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert, after the word 'institutions,' in line thirteen, 'provided, that the Legislature shall have power to grant aid to the State Agricultural Society, for the purpose of fostering the agricultural resources of the State.'"

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: This is a matter in which the Legislature has always heretofore exercised its discretion for the purpose of giving aid to this society. It is really a State institution, in one sense of the word. It is supported by gentlemen all over the State, and it seems to me that the Legislature might at least have the power to grant aid, if it saw fit. I do not know who are the natural guardians of the public treasury, except it be the legislators who are sent here for the people. Without aid from the State this society would probably be compelled to discontinue its existence. I doubt whether it could support itself. It affords inducements to gentlemen from all parts of the State; it affords means of intercommunication between farmers and stockraisers; and it is to a great extent a State institution. I think the Legislature ought to have the power, if it saw fit, to grant it State aid.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Larue.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert, after the word 'institutions,' in line fourteen, the words, 'receiving State aid.'"

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The only object of that amendment is not to put every orphan asylum under any inquisitorial visitation of the State. Of course that is the intent of the Committee of the Whole, that those receiving State aid should be under such visitation.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will not prevail. I say that the State has a right to go and inquire into every institution there is in the State, whether they get aid or not. The State has a right to see how the business is carried on all over the State, not only in State institutions, but any other. I hope the amendment will not be adopted.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will be made. It will then require, that those institutions receiving State aid shall be open to State investigation in regard to the management of the appropriation that is received.

MR. LAINE. Before the vote is taken I desire to call attention to one thing. It may be that we may get into a trap in this. Mr. Barbour's idea is perhaps correct. But it says "such institutions," and I think that is sufficient. I am inclined to think that the amendment may go farther than he intends.

The amendment was rejected.

SUPPORT OF ORPHANS.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section twenty-two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'and proportioned to the number of,' in line twelve, and insert, 'not exceeding fifty dollars per capita of the.'"

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: It seems to me that it is desirable since we have adopted this plan of providing for the orphans, that is by donations or appropriations to private institutions, that we should fix some absolute limit beyond which the Legislature shall not go; for the reason, that without such limit past experience has proven that the amount will depend, not so much upon the needs, as upon the strength of the lobby that is brought to bear in favor of such appropriations. Such has been the experience of the past, and we, the American people, are a very apt people to learn. We improve in trickery as well as in knowledge and in virtue. It seems to me that we want to cut off that pernicious lobby, that here is a very good opportunity to make one step in that direction. These appropriations were commenced upon the basis of twenty dollars or twenty-five dollars per capita, they have gone up steadily and uniformly until it has reached one hundred dollars per capita now. Where will it go in the future? No man can answer except to say, that it will depend upon the strength of the lobby how high the appropriation will go. Is it desirable to leave the door open in this manner to the plundering of the public treasury?

MR. MURPHY. Can you support, and clothe, and educate a child for fifty dollars a year?

MR. CAPLES. Whether fifty dollars will support it or not, is not the question. The question is how much the State will contribute from the public treasury for this purpose. These institutions have, in former times, supported these orphans with a donation of twenty or twenty-five dollars per capita. It is supposed that the remaining portion was supplied by private charity. So that whether fifty dollars will or will not support these orphans is not the question. We proposed, in the Legislative Committee and in the Committee of the Whole, to provide for these orphans by institutions under the exclusive control of the State. That policy was voted down and beaten in the Committee of the Whole, and the Committee of the Whole determined to continue this practice of providing for them in private institutions, and making appropriations not absolutely wholly sufficient for their support. We adopted the principle that the State should contribute a part—should contribute something—and right there is where the amendment comes in. I propose to establish a maximum beyond which the Legislature shall not go. While fifty dollars may not be sufficient, it may, and while fifty dollars may not be more than enough, yet it may really be more than enough. I do not pretend to be posted in regard to the actual probable cost of previding for these children. But I am prepared to say this, that if it does cost one hundred dollars per capita to provide for children, there are ten thousand children in the State who are supported for a sum less than half of that. I maintain that one hundred dollars is more than is needed, and is more than the actual cost. I make the assertion, not so much upon actual mathematical data, as upon my judgment and experience of the case. To my certain knowledge hundreds and thousands of women are supporting children on an income that does not amount to one half of one hundred dollars per capita for the members of the family. If this thing is done all over the country, why can't it be done in these institutions? But it is not so much the amount, as to have some actual limit upon which the lobby influence can dip into the State Treasury. Without a maximum limit I see no reason why, in the future, the sum should not be raised to two hundred, three hundred, or five hundred dollars. Now, admitting the principle to be correct, that the State should contribute to the support of its orphans—and we have established that principle—is it not wise to establish a principle that will prevent corruption and lobbying, and the dishonest practices that have prevailed here before in our legislative halls? It seems to me that the proposition is too plain for discussion. It ought to be admitted as a truism that needs no elucidation and no discussion.

REMARKS OF MR. GORMAN.

MR. GORMAN. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will not prevail. The gentleman wishes to give every orphan fifty dollars a year to support them. Now, educating the children of this State costs the State about eighty-three dollars a year per capita. But these orphans are educated and clothed, have the best nurses to attend them and take care of them, and he wishes to give fifty dollars to take care of these children. The buildings are furnished free, and these orphans are cared for and educated at seventeen dollars above the cost of merely educating a child in the common schools of the State. Now, sir, we may look at the charitable institutions throughout the United States, and we will find instead of costing fifty dollars a year for orphans it will cost in some States as high as two hundred and fifty dollars a year, where the State takes care of them—from thirty-six dollars to two hundred and fifty dollars a year in those institutions in different States—and he wishes to limit it to fifty dollars. Where does the rest of this money come from? It comes from the charitable people, who will give rather than see these little ones suffer. In San Francisco a gentleman died lately and left fifty thousand dollars to these institutions. Every year, at New Year and Christmas, you see gentlemen in this State giving five hundred dollars and two hundred and fifty dollars to assist these asylums. They give that money to support them, because the State does not support them. Now, sir, I should hope that this Convention would certainly vote this measure down. They are better taken care of than the State could possibly do it. There are ladies there who devote half of their time to taking care of these orphans. The Good Templars, the Odd Fellows, and many other societies are taking care of children in this State. It is for the love of taking care of these poor little children. It is that motherly love that will take care of them and bring them up morally, and it is a great thing to state that there has never been one of these children out of the institutions found in the State Prison at San Quentin.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento will prevail. Every gentleman present who has any acquaintance with legislative matters, knows how these appropriations can be made indiscriminately and without limit. These appropriations are made for different objects, located in different parts of the State, represented by different individual members of the Legislature, and their issues are universally pooled. They are put into an omnibus bill, and it is an understanding that you vote for mine and I will vote for your little steal—I cannot call it by any other name. It increases, it produces and builds up that regular system of logrolling and legislative jobbery that has been the bane of our legislative system. It is keeping in perpetuity an abuse for which, in part, this Constitutional Convention was called—to abolish the lobby; to abolish these individual and private interests coming in here with their lobbyists and electioneering for their proportion.

I believe that the animus of this whole thing is to build up an opposition system of schools against the common schools of the State, and it has been argued on this floor that we should appropriate a sufficient amount to educate them. I claim that the public school system has got to be extended so as to include this. I believe that the State would have been better pleased with a plan separating these children entirely from the religious denominations of the State, and putting them under county control.

REMARKS OF MR. STEDMAN.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I need not say to this Convention that I hope this amendment will not be adopted, for my sentiments on this question are well known to every gentleman upon this floor. I believe in the present system because it is the best and most economical one. The Convention has given it the stamp of its approval by an overwhelming majority. The amendment proposes to prevent the Legislature from granting more than fifty dollars a year—one dollar per week—to feed, clothe, and care for the poor orphan. I repudiate the idea that the people of this State desire us to limit the Legislature to this scanty appropriation. I know the Convention will not adopt this mean, contemptible proposition. The gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. West, says this is an insidious attack on the public schools. Sir, I deny that the advocates of this section are enemies of the free schools. As for myself, I shall resist to the last extremity anything that will impair our educational system. As an American I am proud of our public school system—a system which is as dear to every American as the stars upon our flag.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: We are very particular here about not taxing growing crops. I think we might tax growing crops a little for the benefit of the orphans. I believe it would be ridiculous to declare that these children are the wards of the State, and should be supported by the State, and then say: provided, that they do not eat only so much. That they must have just so many clothes, and no more. If we intend to support the orphans of this State because they are the wards of the State, and because as a question of public policy they ought to be supported by the State, then let us leave the question as to the expense to the legislative department of this government, which must make the necessary appropriation when the time comes.

MR. FILCHER. The committee originally proposed that they were the wards of the State, and that the State should support them; but, under the plan adopted, we do not propose to support them entirely.

MR. ESTEE. We are to support them entirely, if need be. I am in favor of supporting them entirely, if necessary, and I am in favor of leaving the question of expense to the legislative department of this Government, when the time comes for making these appropriations; and if fifty dollars be not enough to clothe and feed these poor orphans who have no one to clothe and feed and educate them, I am in favor of giving them seventy-five dollars, or one hundred dollars. Any other rule would be extraordinary. The idea of saying, in a Constitution, that we will support the orphans of the State if it can be done for fifty dollars a year.

MR. CAPLES. Some years back, when the first appropriations were made upon the basis of twenty-five dollars, were the children confined to twenty-five dollars during that time.

MR. ESTEE. I do not know. My theory is, and I believe the theory of the Convention is, that whenever it shall appear that there are any orphans in this State who are not properly cared for by their guardians or friends, that the State shall step in and exercise its guardianship over these orphans, take care of them, and pay for their food, clothing, and education.

MR. CAPLES. According to your argument the State should have exclusive control over the institution.

MR. ESTEE. No, sir; I have learned from some experience that the best governed public institutions in this State—if you can call them public institutions—are some of the orphan asylums, conducted and controlled by private parties, who devote their time to educating and to caring for these poor waifs, and who receive no compensation from the State; whose only ambition is to teach them in the way they should go. For one, I would spurn the idea that they should be bound to live on fifty dollars a year. Better, far better, that this Convention should economize elsewhere, in some other way; some people better pay taxes to the full value of their property; we had better limit other expenses, than to say that these children shall be cared for if they do not cost but fifty dollars apiece a year. I cannot find language to express my utter contempt, and yet speak respectfully of any such proposition. I think it is contrary to every principle of common charity, and a decent regard to the rights of government. It is the right of the people to assist those under their control that are incapable of caring for themselves. If they go one way, they grow up to be criminals; if they go the other, the State secures them for good citizens, and they will become useful members of society. I do not say that it will cost more than fifty dollars a year. Fifty dollars may, in most instances, be enough; in others, one hundred dollars may not be enough. My idea is that that is a question of legislative discretion, and I would leave that much to the future Legislatures of this State.

MR. CAPLES. Is it your theory then that, if the State, in her liberality, contributes anything towards the support of a private institution of charity, that it should contribute the whole amount necessary to carry on that institution without any other source of supply or aid?

MR. ESTEE. That is a very long question. My theory is that whenever a State finds an orphan without any friends or means of support, that the State ought to educate and feed and clothe that orphan until it is old enough to take care of itself.

MR. WEST. Isn't that the wish of those who are in favor of this amendment?

MR. ESTEE. Some of them. So far as I am concerned, if I can find a dozen honest, honorable men in this State, I care not what creed nor where their institutions are, if they are willing to assume that great responsibility, I shall be very glad, for one, to have them do it, and if they are unable to care for these children by their own private donations, the State ought to come in and assist them. But whether fifty dollars is enough for the State to appropriate, is a question for the Legislature. I believe that the Legislature have thrown away but very little money, and none for orphans. That is my experience, and I believe it is the experience of those who have been here before.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock, P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

ELEEMOSYNARY INSTITUTIONS—CONTINUED.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Caples.

Lost.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment.

Holmes,

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert next after word 'institutions,' in line fourteen, the following words: 'provided further, that whenever any county or city and county, city or town, shall provide for the support of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, such county, city and county, city or town, shall be entitled to receive the same pro rata appropriation as may be granted to such institutions under church or other control.'"

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: If it is desirous that communities should look out for the welfare of the orphans, I suppose the counties and towns of this State who are directly interested in their care should have the same opportunity to take care of them. I hope gentlemen will give this amendment due consideration.

MR. MURPHY. Are they not provided for now under the law? Don't they get the same pro rata?

MR. TINNIN. No, sir. There is nothing of that kind in the law, and the gentleman knows it very well too.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I don't think it is the object of the mover that it should be ——

MR. TINNIN. I object to that manner of argument. The gentleman has no right to impugn my motives.

MR. BIGGS. It is well known that this proposition was made here at an early day in the Committee of the Whole. I tell the gentleman this, that if he has a private asylum in Trinity County, he can receive the same aid as any other institution in the State. You have the same right in Trinity County that they have in Sacramento. I don't intend to impugn his motives, but it has been thrown in for the purpose of defeating this section. I don't say that the gentleman has done that, but it has been done time and again.

MR. WEST. When?

MR. BIGGS. You yourself had the honor to introduce an amendment to that effect.

MR. WEST. I had the honor to introduce an amendment permitting counties and cities to provide for their own orphans. That amendment only lacked two votes in the Committee of the Whole.

MR. BIGGS. That is what I said. We had similar amendments put in here. The gentlemen sent them up and they were defeated by a very small vote. I hope this Convention will stand to their guns and adopt this section just as it is. It is good enough. I don't propose to discuss this question any longer. I have discussed it before the Committee of the Whole, and now I hope the Convention will stand by their guns.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I do not consider the amendment as at all necessary, and, therefore, I shall vote against it. I think a correct reading and interpretation of section twenty-two gives the Legislature full power to grant aid to any city, or town, or township, or other subdivision of the State that can maintain any of these institutions for orphans, indigent people, and aged people.

MR. TINNIN. Show me any part of this section where anything of the kind is authorized.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Again, the amendment is not in the right place. There ought to be a change in county and township organization perhaps, but not at this time. I call attention more particularly to the section. It says:

"SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriation made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State; provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, half orphans or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances; such aid to be granted by a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of such respective institutions; provided further, that the State shall have at any time the right to inquire into the management of such institutions. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature."

That is, that notwithstanding this prohibition, the Legislature shall have power to aid these institutions conducted for the purpose of taking care of the orphans. Now, it does not say private institutions. It does not say what kind or character, but it says the Legislature shall have power to grant aid to these institutions. Now, my interpretation of that is that it makes no difference whether these are private institutions or whether they are instituted by the county or municipality. If the object is to give counties and cities the power to establish these institutions, then the amendment should be made to the article referring to cities, counties, and towns, and not here.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: The objections made by the gentleman from San Francisco I do not think well made. This amendment ought to be adopted. It provides that this aid may go to the counties, where there are no private institutions of the kind. We have no institution of that character in the county where I live, yet our county has to take care of the orphans. They have to take care of them. You are taxing our county to keep up these institutions in other counties, which saves to those counties the expense of taking care of their own orphans, while our county receives none of the benefits. We have to pay our portion of this State tax, which goes to the support of these institutions, and then we have to take care of our own orphans. The gentleman from Butte is wrong about anything in connection with this matter having been voted down. That amendment in the Committee of the Whole provided that the counties should take care of the orphans and half orphans within their limits, and then that the counties shall receive the pro rata for taking care of orphans within their limits. The gentleman from Butte says we must stand by our guns. I hope the gentleman will stand by his guns.

MR. BIGGS. Yes, sir; I will.

MR. ANDREWS. You have been talking about the poor orphans. That has been your proposition throughout, and now I ask you to stand by your guns.

MR. BIGGS. Haven't the counties the power to create orphan asylums, the same as anybody else?

MR. ANDREWS. Suppose they have not the ability to do so, and still have to take care of the orphans as they do now, sometimes by the Board of Supervisors, and sometimes by families. I ask the gentleman to stand by his guns and take care of the poor orphans. That is what I propose to do. I propose to treat all the orphans alike. If you are going to depart from the line in behalf of the orphans, follow the line out to its legitimate conclusion, and take care of them all over the State. I say it is no more than justice that this amendment should be adopted.

MR. REDDY. Are not these institutions open to the orphans of your county the same as any other county?

MR. ANDREWS. No, sir; they are not.

MR. REDDY. They certainly are.

MR. ANDREWS. Why not adopt this amendment?

MR. REDDY. You say you are taxed twice. Now are not the people of your county entitled to the same benefits precisely as the people of any other county?

MR. ANDREWS. No, sir.

MR. REDDY. State wherein you are denied a single privilege.

MR. ANDREWS. Because we have no institution of that kind in our county. Why should we not have our orphans taken care of in our own county?

MR. REDDY. I simply want to know if you have been denied any privileges?

MR. ANDREWS. Yes, sir; because we have orphans in our own county which we have to take care of.

MR. REDDY. The only difficulty is the bringing of these orphans from such a distance?

MR. ANDREWS. They might not be received when they got there. If the counties can take care of them why should they not receive their pro rata for doing so?

SPEECH OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I do not know whether it makes any very great difference whether we adopt this amendment or not, but I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Trinity to one thing: that there seems to be a disposition here to prevent the Convention from doing what they intended to do, by throwing every obstacle in the way. Now, they ask this amendment. Perhaps the gentleman thinks he will do something very fine for his county, but we can stand it if he can, because it will permit our industrial school, which is now run at the expense of the City of San Francisco, to come under this amendment and receive State aid, and it will save us a large sum of money every year. We have never asked anything of the State, and never intended to, but under this amendment we will draw our share of the money. If you are prepared for that, why go ahead. The almshouse is another institution carried on at the expense of the City of San Francisco. We will also apply for State aid for that institution, and run it at the expense of the State. If the gentleman wants that kind of economy we can stand it as long as he can. What will the people of your county say to you when you go home? I tried to ask the gentleman from Los Angeles a question, and that was whether he could point to a single instance of fraud in these appropriations. He took particular pains not to answer the question, and of course let it go. I know that certain members of the Legislature, who are opposed to these donations, have tacked on appropriations for institutions that never ought to have been made, in order to break down the bill, and which the friends of the bill never wanted to make. I wonder if the gentleman from Trinity, in his legislative experience, knows anything about these odious appropriations being tacked on in order to break down the whole bill. Perhaps he has learned his lesson there, as he is an old legislator.

MR. TINNIN. I know many institutions of that kind, and I have always voted against these appropriations, and always expect to.

MR. WELLIN. Did you ever tack on odious amendments for the purpose of breaking down the bill?

MR. TINNIN. Sometimes that will show the inconsistency of a measure when nothing else will.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I am in favor of the pending amendment on the ground of justice and fair dealing. There is no good reason why these so-called orphan asylums should draw State aid for the purpose of paying for taking care of orphans and indigent persons, while the counties that perform the same services for their orphans and indigent sick, draw no pay from the State. No man can give a reason, and no man will try to give a reason why orphans taken care of by the counties, or cities, or townships, either in institutions or by private families, few or many, should not be entitled to draw from the State treasury the same rate per capita as is drawn by the so-called orphan asylums. Why not? Gentlemen say if they will build an institution for the support of orphans, they can, under this section, draw pay. But there are counties in this State that have, perhaps, but two or three, or a half a dozen orphans. Then, in order to be entitled to State aid they must build an institution. Away with such business; away with such argument. If a family of children are left orphans, the Supervisors see to it that they are taken care of in some family, where there is no institution, where they have not enough orphans to build an institution. Why should not they be entitled to the same rate of one hundred dollars per head? San Francisco, notwithstanding her boasted institutions with big names, is obliged to take care of her own orphans. Why should San Francisco not be able to draw her pro rata from the State? There is the Almshouse, built for six hundred people, the aged and indigent, and why should the State not give to that county the money towards their support. I hope the amendment will pass. It is true it will be a loss to some of these gentlemen who are seeking to make political capital out of the poor orphan. It is true there will be a loss to some candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. But don't take me in if you please. I am in favor of this for another reason, and why? Because this is an appropriation for sectarian schools in disguise. We are seeking to make political capital out of—great God—the poor orphan. Why talk about the railroads and Leland Stanford? We have never seen a lobby in this House until the poor orphan comes up. It means, sir, nothing in the world but sectarian schools and church schools in disguise. Now, sir, if it does not mean that I call upon you to pass this amendment. If it is not so, then adopt this amendment and give it contradiction.

REMARKS OF MR. MURPHY.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I am opposed to the adoption of this amendment upon the ground that under the law at the present time, because any county in the State can receive pay from the State for taking care of orphans if they do so. Every whole orphan can draw one hundred dollars per annum, and every half orphan or abandoned child can draw seventy-five dollars; provided, that no asylum with less than twenty inmates shall be entitled to State aid. That is the only restriction there is in the law at the present time.

MR. TINNIN. That is the old law, and we propose to change the law.

MR. MURPHY. I don't propose to change the law.

MR. REYNOLDS. Each institution is to have twenty inmates.

MR. MURPHY. In the notice presented by the gentleman from San Francisco, there would be applications for fifty thousand orphans. Every family in which the father or mother happened to be dead would apply for aid.

MR. REYNOLDS. And why should they not have it?

MR. MURPHY. Now, sir, in the first place, I contend that the people do not ask for this change. I visited my county Christmas, and I found the people, one and all, opposed to it, and obeying the wishes of my people, I am bound to vote against that amendment, or any amendment that will interfere with or deprive the orphans of their just proportion of State money. The gentleman has gone to a considerable length in declaring that this is a measure in behalf of sectarian schools. I repudiate the idea. I scorn the idea of raising the cry of sectarian schools upon the floor of this House. I am an American, myself, in every sense of the word—born and raised here. I have as much reverence and regard for the public school system as any gentleman upon this floor. I would never vote for anything that would tear down the palladium of American liberty—the public school system—but this matter has nothing to do with religion whatever. It is not a question of religion. The so-called orphan asylums, said the gentleman, using that sneering expression towards the noble women who have devoted their lives to the care of the poor and the afflicted, when they meet a poor orphan on the street, do they ask the religion of the parents? No, they ask it if it is hungry, and care for it, and clothe it, and feed it. If they did differently, I would cast my vote against making these appropriations, but I know the contrary to be the fact. How can we be making political capital by standing up here and pleading for these poor orphans? They have no influential friends. I think it is the other side who are trying to make political capital. Such an assertion as that is false. We are voting here for what we believe to be right, and such a charge as that is false in every particular, and no man possessing the feelings of a gentleman, no man with any regard for principle and truth, would utter such words.

REMARKS OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: The gentleman from Del Norte says the orphans have no friends. Then would it not be popular to oppose them, and the demagogues would be likely to be on the other side. The gentleman speaks of an institution known as the Almshouse. Now, the gentleman has been long enough in the State of California, and around the City of San Francisco, to know that at the last session of the Legislature a corrupt lobby saved the Superintendent of that institution.

MR. REYNOLDS. It was the Democratic party who wanted to get it into politics.

MR. JOYCE. I do not know anything about the politics. I know there was such a thing. Now, sir, he has been talking economy upon a great many occasions. But this is not economy. Does he want every widow and every man in this State whose wife is dead to make application to the State treasury for assistance. Why all our widows would become managers of orphan asylums. It would be impossible. And that the Legislature could tend to all their wants in sixty days is preposterous, inconsistent. I am well pleased that this is the last chance for the Almshouse. Make the most of it for this is the last chance. It is the last place for a man to go.

SPEECH OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I took no part in this discussion in the Committee of the Whole, nor do I intend to discuss it now, but merely to state the question as I understand it. The Legislative Committee saw proper to recommend this section. In the Committee of the Whole, by a very large majority that section was amended. The argument which seemed to prevail and have the weight was this: that inasmuch as the State had no institution in which to care for those who are properly wards of the State, and as it was shown that they could be supported by private charity more economically than they could be supported by the State, this amendment was adopted. I believe that those were the controlling reasons. As to the motives of the gentlemen voting with the majority I have nothing to say, except this: that whatever may have been the motives of a few, I am satisfied the motives of the great majority were honest and sincere. Legislatures have been known in times past as "the Legislature of a thousand privileged questions," and "the Legislature of a thousand drinks" I hope this Convention may not be known as the Convention of a thousand discourtesies.

MR. VAN DYKE. It is more apt to be known as the Convention of a thousand speeches. [Laughter.]

MR. MCCALLUM. Now, if these are the wards of the State, they ought to be suppported by the State, and not by the counties. If the County of Alameda, or any other county, chooses to establish an orphan asylum, there is no good reason why that asylum should not receive the same aid as any private institution. Is not that just? Is it not in complete harmony with the action of the Committee of the Whole? There was one point made here, and that was whether the counties would not have that privilege under the section as it now stands by a fair construction of the language. There is one objection I see to the language. It says the Legislature shall have power to grant aid to such institutions. Now, the aid is granted to the society, or association, and not to the institution. Suppose you simply strike out the word "to," and insert the word "for," would it not cover the whole matter.

SPEECH OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: I would like to know the true inwardness of this amendment. I would like to hear some reason why this amendment should be adopted. Is it economy? Will the gentleman answer that question?

MR. TINNIN. It is economy; and it is a right of the counties to take care of their own orphans.

MR. REDDY. Economy to whom?

MR. TINNIN. To the people of these counties.

MR. REDDY. It would not save a dollar to the State. The only reason that can be assigned for it is on the ground of speculation, it cannot be on the ground of economy. You can only place it upon one ground, and that is, that the Board of Supervisors may have a chance to speculate at the expense of the poor orphan. Has the gentleman got the welfare of the orphan in his mind when he offers this amendment, or has he only a blind prejudice against religion?

MR. TINNIN. In answer I will say that I have no prejudice against religion. It is a matter that bothers me very little.

MR. REDDY. I prefer to judge the gentleman by his acts. If he can assign any other reason then I may stand corrected. I defy him to put it upon any other reasonable ground than the one I have named. Now is it for the welfare of the orphans to turn them over to the Supervisors in order that they may speculate in their wants?

MR. TINNIN. Why would it not be as proper to turn them over to the Board of Supervisors, who are their neighbors and friends, as to send them to remote parts of the State and turn them over to strangers?

MR. REDDY. They are unfit persons to do this kind of work. Look at this. It is not in the interests of the morals of the children to have them turned over to county institutions managed by politicians. Why should we seek to take these children away from these institutions where they have always been well taken care of? There is no complaint upon that ground. Then why should we take them away? Nor should we attempt to starve out these institutions, by attempting to make them live on fifty dollars a year? When you cannot get these little fellows out of these institutions any other way, then you propose to starve them out. Now the gentleman wants to allow the Board of Supervisors to speculate upon the wants of these little ones, and divide them around, so that these hard-hearted persons may make something out of them, and bring them up without moral or religious training. There is no economy in it. There is no reason why the section as it comes from the Committee of the Whole should not be adopted. Allow me to say further to the gentleman from San Francisco, who gets up here and spits out his venom against religious institutions——

MR. REYNOLDS. I deny it.

MR. REDDY. I expected you would. Of course not every man charged is guilty, but we judge a man by his acts.

MR. REYNOLDS. It is easy to make such a charge, but I deny it.

MR. REDDY. I knew you would deny it when it was brought home to you in this shape. I expected you to deny it out of your own mouth. When you have nothing to say, sit down. That is a rule of Court. I am not surprised at all to see the gentleman differ with our Savior. I am not surprised to hear sneers coming from where they have against our religious institutions; not at all. I expected him to differ with the God that made him. The great groundwork of religion is charity, and those who cannot comprehend religion we may expect to hear them sneer.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Waters, Tinnin, Joyce, Reynolds, and Condon.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the end of the section, 'all orphans that are supported at the expense of the State, or receive State aid, shall be educated at the public schools.'"

MR. HITCHCOCK. I offer this in the interest of economy. If these children are cared for by the State they ought to be educated in the public schools of the State.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope that amendment will be adopted. We are told that the orphans are the wards of the State. If that is so they ought to be educated in the public schools of the State. The idea that these orphan asylums are sectarian schools is repudiated here. It is denied with great emphasis. If that be true, why then there can be no objection in the world to having them educated in the public schools. I am sure that no gentlemen can object to the State furnishing this tuition free of charge. They are not schools, they are orphan asylums. They are not church schools; they are not sectarian schools, not a bit of it; we deny it. They are asylums where these poor orphans are cared for and clothed and fed. How are these waifs and wards of the State going to be educated? They must not be allowed to grow up in ignorance. Certainly gentlemen do not mean that. Then we must provide for their education, and how else will you do it than by such an amendment as this?

MR. WATERS. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Larkin, Van Voorhies, West, and Gregg.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I want to call attention to one or two things, and then allow the Convention to decide for themselves. In the first place these orphan asylums are all located at distant points. Even in San Francisco the orphan asylums are way out on the edge of the Mission, and there is no school house within two or three miles. Now, you propose to say that they shall go to the public schools, when there is no public school for them to go to. You will have to build a large building alongside for a school house. Is that in the interest of economy? I am surprised at the style of political economy offered by these wise gentlemen. They will go to the expense of building a school house alongside of every orphan asylum, and yet they say they are in favor of economy. Whoever heard of any such economy before? When you come to call upon the taxpayers for the funds to build these school houses you will find whether you are sustained or not. Gentlemen, you are carrying your opposition too far. You will not be sustained by the sentiment of the people.

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment last offered, because it is just and proper, eminently proper. It is American, and it is in the interest of good government. I am in favor of it as a politician, because, by and by, when I come to run for office, I expect to catch a few American votes. They will be more numerous after awhile. So far as causing any expense, I suppose the Trustees or the School Superintendent can designate the teachers in the asylums, and things will go on as usual. If they are educated under the American system, by American teachers, there is no objection to donating money to their support; it is eminently right and proper, and I desire to have the roll called on the proposition.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I am in favor of this amendment. There is no reason why teachers cannot be designated to teach in the asylums without incurring any increased expenses. Let them use the common school text books, and be taught by the common school system.

SPEECH OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I give notice that I will offer the following amendment to the amendment: "If the parents or guardians so elect, and then without expense to the State." I think the parents and guardians should have something to say about this matter of education.

MR. HITCHCOCK. They do not have parents and guardians.

MR. HOWARD. I am speaking of the children of these asylums. They may have guardians even if their parents are dead. I do not see why the State should force a certain kind of education upon them. I see the last regulation in some of the English institutions is one by which the scholars, at certain hours of the day which do not interfere with their school duties, are to be given such religious instruction as the parents may designate. That system has proven entirely satisfactory, both to Protestants and Catholics. Religions may not be taught in the public schools, because men of all religions and no religions are taxed for their support; but this is no reason why, out of school hours, there might not be a system of religion taught in these institutions which would be agreeable to the parents and guardians; therefore it is that I think all the scholars of these institutions should not be compelled to go to the public schools. They ought to be allowed to be taught in the asylums as the parents and guardians may prefer, and without expense to the State. Any other system is the grossest tyranny.

MR. CAPLES. I understand if these children are thrown upon the State, the State becomes their guardian.

MR. HOWARD. No, sir; not absolutely. The State may assume the position, but the State is not the guardian. The guardian is one appointed by the Court. If they have neither legal guardian nor parent, then the Directors of the institution stand in the place of the guardian, and they will have a right to designate the system. I deny that it is the function of government to say, that a child shall be sent to a school where no religion is taught.

REMARKS OF MR. HILBORN.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin. I think I am in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles. I am opposed to the original motion, because I believe it is impracticable, and it certainly would add greatly to the expense of our common school system. Now, the first thing you would have to do would be to go to work and build school houses alongside of these orphan asylums. The Good Templars' Home for Orphans is about a mile and a half from any public school. I suppose public school teachers might be assigned rooms for their use. Now the State gives twenty-nine dollars to each child of proper age for its education, whether the parents are wealthy or not. Everybody receives it except the children of these orphan asylums. Now, if you put these children under the common school system, you add twenty-nine dollars to the expense of maintaining each of those orphans.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. They are enumerated now.

MR. HILBORN. My opinion is that they are not enumerated for school purposes.

MR. HITCHCOCK. Do you consider that it will injure the orphans to have them educated in the public schools.

MR. HILBORN. I wish every orphan in the State, if it were practicable, could be educated in the common schools. I was educated there myself, and have my children there, but I believe it is not practicable.

SPEECH OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: The charge has been made of those who have opposed giving State aid to private church institutions that propose to maintain orphans, that those persons were destitute of human feelings, and that they were opposed to the proper care of these little waifs; that they were in favor of throwing them out upon a cold and cruel world. That they were not in favor of taking care of them properly. Now, these charges I deny in toto. I suppose there is but one opinion in this Convention, so far as taking care of these children is concerned. The point of difference between gentlemen is the proper mode by which these waifs shall be taken care of. We are told by those who are in favor of caring for them in these institutions, that they are the wards of the State. If they are the wards of the State, where in the name of common sense should they be educated but in the public schools of the State. I hold that it is the paramount duty of this State to provide means to educate her children as Americans, imbue their minds with American doctrines and principles, and educate them under the common school system. Now, we do not claim the right to interfere with any one's religious belief. But we deny the right of these religious schools to come to the State and ask State aid to maintain their schools. The State has a right to educate its own wards, and stamp the spirit of American institutions upon the minds of its own children. Now, if gentlemen entertain such a love and devotion for the public school system they have a chance to manifest it right here by their votes.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I am in favor of the section as it comes from the Committee of the Whole. I believe it is the best that can be done. It is the best scheme that can be devised by this Convention. It meets the views of a majority of the members of this Convention, and I am satisfied it will meet the views of a majority of the people of this State. At first I thought it would be better to build a State institution, but when I came to think the matter over and count the cost, I find that it would be impracticable. Now, we are making this appropriation to orphans, regardless of religious sect or denomination. They will all get an equal amount. I cannot see where this matter of sectarian teaching has crept into this discussion. I am sorry to see these matters brought up here. I am sorry to hear these appeals to the worst prejudices of the human nature. Now, why should we say to these people that they shall only teach certain kinds of religion. The Catholics do not tell you that in your institutions only the Catholic religion shall be taught. Everybody has a right to raise children in whatever faith they may think proper, and children have a right to be educated according to the wishes of parents or guardians. I am in favor of the public school system; but when you undertake with an iron hand, to cram it down the throats of the people, you are injuring your cause. It would be a load upon this Constitution, which it cannot possibly carry and live. Now, I think we had better go right back and adopt the section reported by the Committee of the Whole and stop.

REMARKS OF MR. MURPHY.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: It seems to me there is a great deal of ingenuity displayed by gentlemen on the other side. They propose amendment after amendment, which seem to strike at the very heart of the section as proposed by the Committee of the Whole. Now, sir, the framers of the old Constitution did not deem it necessary to interfere with this matter, and we have been working under that instrument for thirty years. Our public school system has been nourished. We have encouraged it by every Legislature that has ever convened. We have here, by the adopting of the article on education, pronounced emphatically in favor of the public school system. I refer these gentlemen to sections four, five, and six of that report, which are as follows:

"SEC. 4. The proceeds of all lands that have been or may be granted by the United States to this State for the support of common schools which may be, or may have been, sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted, or may have been granted, by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State.

"SEC. 5. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools by which a free school shall be kept up and supported in each district at least six months in every year, after the first year in which a school has been established.

"SEC. 6. The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority; but the entire revenue derived from the State School Fund, and the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools."

Now, this is really a question of the support of orphans, and ought to have nothing to do with schools at all. It is a question of the support and maintenance of a lot of little children who are not able to support themselves. This amendment could only emanate from one source, and that source the fertile brain of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds. In fact I may state that he drew up this amendment. He reminds me of the schoolmaster that Goldsmith tells about:

"And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
That one small head could carry all he knew."

MR. LEWIS. Mr. President: It seems to me that the education of these orphans should be under the control of the State, inasmuch as the State supports them. I cannot for the life of me see where the tyranny comes in. I think there is a great deal more cry made about it than there is occasion for. I think we ought to adopt this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I am glad to see that the cat is out of the bag. Mr. Reynolds says there is sectarianism in the whole question, and I have no doubt he meant it. Now, sir, gentlemen come here on this floor and preach economy. We talk about education. But whenever we come to these institutions there is no more said about economy. We economize in the education of our children, but when it comes to these institutions, we have no more thought about economy. Now, we are told that it is the duty of the State to support these orphans. When we propose to support them in any other way except through certain institutions, we are met by the objection that we must not interfere. The State is expected to support them on the ground that they are the wards of the State, but when we talk about the State having something to say about the education of her children, we are told that the State has nothing to do with the matter. The State must pay, but the State must have no voice in the education of these children. I say that these children ought to be educated in the common schools in order to make thorough American citizens out of them, who will know the rights and duties of American citizens, and if they are educated in sectarian schools they will know everything else but their duties as citizens. [Applause.]

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope this matter will be allowed to go to a vote very soon. I am satisfied with this section as it is. There is nothing in the amendment proposed. If adopted it would accomplish nothing. As I understand it the common schools are open to these orphans as well as to all others. This whole matter is in the hands of the Legislature. The Legislature can make these appropriations or not, as they see fit; there is no compulsion about it. If these orphans are not being properly educated in these institutions, it is perfectly competent for the Legislature to make other provisions for them. I am perfectly satisfied with this section as it is.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: If this State had a compulsory school law, and every child in the State was compelled to attend school, I should vote for the amendment. Now, the original section reported by the committee, prohibited the granting of aid to these charities. But I found a strong tendency in this body to change that and grant them aid. It came to a vote and this provision was inserted. Now, if such an amendment as this is adopted it will certainly tend to break down religious charities. I believe in the public schools; I believe in compulsory education; I believe every child should be educated. But I cannot see why we should interfere with the religious belief of the parent or the child. I shall vote against the amendment. If the children were not being educated at all in these institutions, I would say, compel them to go to the public schools. I hope these amendments will be voted down. You are making a war that is entirely unnecessary.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: The gentleman from Del Norte referred to the article on education, to show that this body is sound on the public school question. Now, sir, the public school system of the State of California, as I understand it, is one which aims to reach every child in the commonwealth. We are all taxed alike to support it, and it is supposed to belong to all the children in the State. Now, sir, I wish to read a section from the article on education.

"SEC. 8. No public money shall ever be appropriated for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, or any school not under the exclusive control of the officers of the public schools; nor shall any sectarian or denominational doctrine be taught, or instruction thereon be permitted, directly or indirectly, in any of the common schools of this State."

Now, we have made that declaration, and the vote here will show whether we mean it or not. I hope we do mean it, and I shall vote for the amendment. It is a just amendment, and one which will benefit, not alone the children, but the asylums; it will give them a general State character, as much as if they were supported exclusively by the State. It will bring them out from under sectarian influences, and that is one of the great aims of government. I shall oppose every proposition which proposes to mix up, in any way, the officers of this State with religious institutions. That is the reason I supported section twenty-two, because I thought it would cut some of the leaks so long complained of. The Committee of the Whole saw fit to open the door, to a certain extent, which we had closed. Now that these institutions are to receive State aid still, I want them brought under the control of the State as far as possible.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I regret that so much time has been spent on section twenty-two. I would not now speak upon this amendment, but I deem it necessary to state some of the reasons why I cannot vote in favor of the amendment. I do not desire to be placed upon record as voting against any amendment that contemplates the education of the youth of our land in the public schools. I am in favor of the common schools first, last, and all the time. But this amendment is most extraordinary. It is a good compulsory school law to be inserted in the Constitution of a very one-sided character. This Constitution does not say that all children are to be educated in the common schools of this State. It does not pretend to say that all children must go to the public schools. Now, compulsory school laws have existed for a number of years in Europe, and they never pretend to say that children must attend any particular school. They only provide that children between certain ages shall attend school. Some of the States in this country have adopted a similar provision. They have provided that all children shall attend school three months every year in some, and six months in others. But no State in this Union has ever attempted to declare that they shall attend any particular school. Now, do gentlemen desire to say that all the children of this State shall even attend the public schools? Now, you are proposing to say that these waifs, these orphans and foundlings, shall attend a particular school and none other. I say it is unjust. Of course every sensible man knows that most of these institutions are under the control of one or the other of the churches. But it is not sectarianism because they are conducted by members of a church. It includes all the churches. Even the infidel, who does not believe in a God, may build an orphan asylum and reap the benefits of this provision. There can be no sectarianism in it, because it includes all churches and all sects. I am not afraid to have the youth of the land brought up under these religious influences, because when they grow old they will think for themselves and form their own conclusions.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Hitchcock.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. West, Reynolds, Lewis, Lampson, and Hitchcock.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

EXCUSED—Mr. Hall—1.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add next after the word 'institutions,' in line thirteen, as follows: 'provided further, that such aid shall not be granted, nor shall any statute for such purpose be continued in force beyond the year A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty-six.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: It is hardly necessary for me to state my reasons for offering this amendment. It is not because I am opposed to the appropriation of any money from the State treasury to any institution whatever, which is not wholly under State control. I am opposed to it because there is no safety in it. Whenever you depart from the true course, then you are in danger. I am not offering this because I am opposed to any sectarian institution of any kind whatever. But, sir, it is because I believe, in truth and in fact, what gentlemen on the other side pretend to believe, that the orphans of the State are the wards of the State, and ought to be by the State supported and educated. I believe, in truth and in fact, cloak it as you will, design it as you may, that this means State support to sectarian institutions and sectarian schools, and gentlemen here know it very well. That is what the proposition is, pure and simple. It has been attempted time out of mind to choke down our throats the false declaration, that we wish to turn the poor orphan out into the streets, to be uncared for. It is untrue. We desire no such thing. [Confusion, noise, stamping of feet, and cries of question.] Go on with your Sandlot stamping, and Sandlot tactics. [Laughter.] If you have no more sense than to stamp in this hall, stamp away. If you have no respect for a legislative body, go ahead.

MR. REDDY. If you allude to me, I wish to say that I have not stamped, nor do I intend to.

MR. REYNOLDS. I did not allude to you.

MR. REDDY. You looked right straight at me.

MR. REYNOLDS. Now, sir, it is no doubt true that these institutions take very good care of the orphans. We are told that the State cannot take care of them because she is not prepared, and therefore the only thing to do is to aid these societies in caring for them. Now, we propose, by this amendment, to put an end to this in the near future, and to put it far enough off so that the State can make the necessary provisions. I believe that orphans ought to be provided for in the counties where they belong; that they ought to be raised in the neighborhood where they are born. The people there will take care of them, and bring them up, and they will get into the world at the age of majority in a condition and with an education and experience which will fit them to commence life's battles, much more so than those who are brought up in these institutions. It may be that the little girls will not wear the regulation apron. It may be that the little boys will not wear the regulation breeches, with the regulation stripe down the sides. It may be that they will not be taught quite so many regulation prayers. But, sir, they will learn something of the ways of the world. They will be among friends. They will be in the neighborhood where their parents resided, and there will be places found there for them, and they will not be turned out of these institutions in the great cities to go and hunt clerkships. They will be fitted for the active duties of life, because they have been brought up out of doors instead of in a hot house. There is no mistake about it, that the orphan that is raised in the community where it was born, stands a better chance in the world than if it was taken away and put in an asylum. I think this amendment is wise and just and ought to be adopted.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I think we have debated this matter sufficiently, and I now call for the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Brown, Tully, Wyatt, and White.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I am opposed to the gentleman from San Francisco. I think we had better let eighteen hundred and eighty-six take care of itself. The men of that day will probably be as well qualified as we are to deal with this question. Now, sir, I am surprised at the temper exhibited here. I have always spoken in favor of the public schools. [Cries of question.] I have very little respect for the man who calls for question, while another is speaking. Now, the gentleman from Sacramento remarked, soto voce, that he did not want Democracy taught in the public schools. Neither do I, sir. And I do not want taught, what I know has been taught, the higher law. Sectarian doctrines have been taught in the public schools, and are yet in some localities. Those who have read the school books prepared by Mr. Swett, know that what I say is true. He taught over and over again the falsehood of his history that Jefferson Davis made his escape in woman's clothes. I am in favor of the public schools, and I want them conducted in a legitimate manner. Now, sir, the real question here is this, and it has been ignored all the time, and that is: Shall our churches be permitted to take care of these orphans for the State, assisted to some extent by the State? Is it economy to allow them to be taken care of in that way? I say it is. The churches furnish a large portion of the money, and it is much cheaper for the State than any other system that can be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

Lost.

MR. MCCONNELL. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding the following at the end of section, 'provided, that no greater sum than sixty-five dollars shall ever be donated by the State to any one orphan or person per annum.'"

MR. MCCONNELL. Mr. President: I do not propose to occupy the time in making remarks. I merely call for the ayes and noes upon this amendment.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. West, Evey, Huestis, and Stuart.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: Let us help the helpless. This amendment is confined to a class of persons who are not able to help themselves, and it ought to be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 23. The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a compensation, per diem and mileage, to be fixed by law, and paid out of the public treasury; such per diem shall not exceed eight dollars per day, and such mileage shall not exceed ten cents per mile. No increase in compensation or mileage shall take effect during the term for which the members of either House shall have been elected, and the pay of no attaché shall be increased after he is elected or appointed."

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert the word 'six,' in place of the word 'eight,' in the third line."

MR. FILCHER. I simply submit this proposition, and call for the ayes and noes upon it.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. West, Evey, Howard, Larkin, and White.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE JOURNAL.

MR. HUESTIS. I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.
So ordered.

PETITIONS.

Messrs. Caples, Townsend, and Hall presented petitions, requesting the exemption of certain property, used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.
Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

THE PRESIDENT. Section twenty-three is before the Convention.
MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.
THE SECRETARY read:
"Insert between the words 'mile' and 'no,' in line four, 'and for contingent expenses not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each session.'"
THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster.

REMARKS OF MR. WEBSTER.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: The amount heretofore has varied from twenty-five dollars to one hundred dollars for each member, and it is certainly necessary to have some restriction in regard to that matter. I find that the Sergeant-at-Arms' expenses at the last session were about six hundred and forty dollars. Of course it is difficult to determine what the proper expense of that office is, therefore I have left that out. As far as members are concerned, I think twenty-five dollars is ample. That is more than has been drawn by the members of this Convention in a session of one hundred and thirty days, while the Legislature only sits sixty days.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCONNELL.

MR. MCCONNELL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be adopted. It will be remembered that the present salaries were fixed a quarter of a century ago, when the purchasing power of money was not half what it is to-day. Then masons got ten dollars a day. Now they get from three to five. Unskilled workmen got from three to five dollars a day. Now they get from one to two dollars. Unskilled workmen got from fifty dollars to one hundred dollars a month. Now they get from twenty dollars to thirty dollars. Board was then from twelve dollars to thirty dollars a week. Now it is five dollars. Every kind of produce has fallen. We should realize that the flush days of 'forty-nine are past. The sooner we realize that fact the better for us. Let us shape our actions accordingly. Now, Kentucky pays only three dollars a day——
THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will confine himself to the question.
MR. MCCONNELL. I was simply going to show what other States pay. I find the average about three dollars and fifty cents, and that includes the great States of Illinois, Michigan, New York, Kansas, and Tennessee.
THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment in relation to contingent expenses. The gentleman will confine himself to that.
MR. MCCONNELL. I understood it included both. I hope the amendment will be adopted. I think that amount is amply sufficient. If that is the ruling of the Chair I have nothing more to say upon the subject.
MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I think the amendment is a very proper one. Twenty-five dollars to each member for a session of sixty days is plenty.
MR. BIGGS. I move to amend by inserting fifteen dollars.
THE PRESIDENT. Not in order. The question is upon the amendment.
Division was called for, and the amendment was adopted, by a vote of 73 ayes to 22 noes.
MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.
THE SECRETARY read:
"Strike out the words 'per day,' at the end of the third line."
MR. HUESTIS. It is intended to avoid the tautology of the section.
THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis.
Adopted.
MR. SMITH, of Santa Clara. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.
THE SECRETARY read:
"Strike out 'eight,' in the third line, and insert 'seven.'"
The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Freud, Tuttle, Harrison, and Huestis.
The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to call attention to a mistake in the Journal. I find an amendment credited to me that ought to be credited to Mr. Larue.

THE PRESIDENT. The mistake will be corrected. The question is on concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-three, as amended.

Concurred in.

TITLES TO BILLS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 24. Every Act shall embrace but one subject, and matter properly connected therewith, which subject shall be expressed in its title. But if any subject shall be embraced in an Act which shall not be expressed in its title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in its title. No law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised or section amended shall be reënacted, and published at length as revised or amended; and all laws of the State of California, and all official writings, and the executive, legislative, and judicial proceedings shall be conducted, preserved, and published in no other than the English language."

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'proceedings,' in line eight, 'excepting in the Courts of Justices of the Peace.'"

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: The object of this amendment is to permit Justices' Courts, in some of the townships in the southern portion of this State, where the population is almost entirely composed of native Californians, to preserve their proceedings in the Spanish language. It will enable those Justices where the parties are all Spanish to have the proceedings conducted in that language. It can do no possible harm, and generally they will be conducted in the English language.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

Lost.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title.'"

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I believe the whole Act ought to be void if any person attempts to cover up anything that is not expressed.

MR. LAINE. I hope the amendment will prevail. It will stop this logrolling.

MR. SCHELL. Is an amendment to the amendment in order?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Lost—ayes 23.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'and matter properly connected therewith.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: This subject was debated in Committee of the Whole, but perhaps the question is not fully understood. I have examined these other Constitutions and find they do not contain these words. I believe the language is wrong, and should not be in there. Of course it is understood that this section is aimed at the practice of smuggling and logrolling bills through. Now, the Convention will notice in other Constitutions, where this language is made use of, will find that they do not vitiate the whole bill. So much of the bill as is expressed in the title can be retained, and the other rendered void. That is sufficient protection without the insertion of these words. It opens the door to fraud and misconstruction, as to what is matter properly connected therewith. After you assert a principle, then you open the door to construe that principle away.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. I think this language—"and matter properly connected therewith"—ought to remain in the section. If it is stricken out it will produce a great deal of trouble and uncertainty. It is very hard for a jurist of the most profound character even, to undertake to say how the whole subject of an Act shall be put into the title. It is an exceedingly difficult matter, and the question will constantly rise as to what Acts of the Legislature might be declared unconstitutional. Important Acts relating to public matters might be declared unconstitutional simply because of some technical defect in the title. Now what can be the objection to having these words in here? Why not have matter properly connected therewith in the bill? They belong there. In a former debate, reference was made to the provision of a bill for building a bridge across a stream. Now why not provide for keeping the river clean above and below the dam? And there are many questions of that kind where nice questions may arise. The object of this whole provision is merely this, that you shall not get up a false title which will deceive the members of the Legislature at the time of the passage of the Act; that they shall not be deluded by the title; that it shall not speak of one subject matter in the title and treat of another in the Act. That is the whole object of the provision. Now if you confine it to the subject, and matter properly connected therewith, that will be sufficient to guard against all abuses. I think it is fair and just, and I know it will avoid a great deal of legislation and trouble. The reason why the Supreme Court held that this clause in the old Constitution was directory and not mandatory, was that more than three fourths of the Acts of the Legislature of the State would have been unconstitutional. It became a matter of necessity to hold that it was merely directory. The statute book would have been torn all to pieces. I think this provision ought to stand just as it is.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: There is another very strong practical reason in favor of the position assumed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, and that is that the Act is always passed first, and then the title is acted upon, and very often amended. Gentlemen can see upon a moment's reflection how easily an error might be made in adopting the title.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I am in favor of striking that out, and also the next clause of the section. I agree with the gentleman who just spoke. The last question is: Shall the title stand as the title of the bill? The bill has been amended, and passed absolutely. Perhaps the bill has been increased, and the last question is on the approval of the title. The object of putting the true object of the bill into the title is to prevent the danger of passing a bill without understanding what it is. The title, therefore, being the last thing fixed, furnishes no indication of the character of the bill. The title may be one thing and the bill another. After the bill is passed there is very little attention paid to the title. In the first place, the evil which existed under the old system, which this provision aims at, does not exist to such an extent now, because every bill must be read in full, and printed with all the amendments.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

Adopted.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words after 'title,' in line two, up to and including 'title,' in line five."

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I am satisfied that these words ought to be stricken out. I believe it is apparent to every one that it is impossible to express the actual objects of a bill in its title. It never has been done, and I do not believe it ever can be done. There would be a very embarrassing question to determine, and that is, whether Acts of the Legislature are constitutional or not. That question would be constantly coming up, and there is no possible good to be accomplished by it.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to call attention to one feature of this section that ought to go out. Suppose a bill is pending, and some man is disposed to get through something that is bad. He succeeds in tacking that on to the bill. And when the bill is passed, he succeeds in getting the title amended so as to include only the bad part. The result will be that the good part of the bill will be declared void, while the bad part will remain valid.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: The provision now sought to be stricken out is a provision that is found in most all of the recent Constitutions, and it seems to me it is necessary here, if we intend to make this Constitution consistent. In the first place, this section says every Act shall embrace but one subject, and matter properly connected therewith, which shall be expressed in the title. Do we mean anything by that? I say that there is an expression of public policy elsewhere that ought to find expression here. It is a policy which prevents the insertion in bills of matter foreign thereto. Let us adopt the section as it stands, and say that any Act of the Legislature which is contrary to the spirit of this section shall be null and void.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I had prepared an amendment before this amendment was offered, to reinsert the provision of the present Constitution, but I find that the amendment of Mr. Schell substantially reinserts it. I am satisfied, so far as the question of title is concerned, that the argument is all in favor of the amendment proposed, so as not to give so much consequence to the title, because that is the last thing done in the passage of the Act. But there are other words here that we ought to strike out. If we do not strike them out we will reach some evils that are not dreamed of now, and that is where it says that the Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as is not expressed in the title. That is to say, the Act must stand, except as to that part not expressed in the title, thereby changing the rule of the Courts in the construction of statutes, because the rule is, that if any portion of an Act is unconstitutional, and the rest of the Act can stand disconnected, it shall stand; if not, then the whole Act falls.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: Whenever a bill passes the Legislature the first question will be: what part of it is expressed in the title, and what is not expressed? There would be a question that would have to be determined. What part of the law is void and what part is valid. One Court decides one way and another Court decides another way. And when it goes to the Supreme Court they will decide one way, and when a new Court comes on the bench they may decide another way. I am opposed to it. It is not in Constitutions, as a general thing, and wherever it has been placed in Constitutions it is an exception to the general rule. I would prefer the Constitution as it was. It is dangerous to make this change.

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell.

Division was called for, and the amendment rejected by a vote of 37 ayes to 51 noes.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'all,' in line seven, and insert: 'Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title, and no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised or section amended shall be reënacted, and published at length as revised or amended.'"

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I merely call the attention of the Convention to the fact that this is substantially the Constitution as it is, and section twenty-four, as reported by the Legislative Committee. If this amendment should be adopted the Constitution will remain precisely as it is now upon this subject, upon which there has been so much litigation. I propose to leave it precisely as it is in the present Constitution. I think it is the only safe thing to do.

MR. TINNIN. I think this amendment is a very proper one. It is precisely the old Constitution, upon which the Courts have passed, and there will be no trouble.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I desire to restate my objection, made in Committee of the Whole, to the clause providing that the title shall specify the objects of the bill. I undertake to say that it will give rise to more litigation than any other clause in the Constitution. Under the old Constitution the Supreme Court could never get along without declaring that this provision was simply directory. Now, we have a provision that this Constitution shall be prohibitory and mandatory; and then, if we insert this clause, half the laws in the books will be unconstitutional. I am opposed to the whole thing, and I hope it will all be stricken out. It will give rise to litigation upon every bill that passes the Legislature.

MR. VAN DYKE. The difficulty lies in the adoption of the amendment striking out the words, "and matter properly connected therewith;" and I intend at the proper time to give notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which that amendment was adopted. I think it was one of the most necessary clauses in the whole section.

MR. LAINE. I think it would not be a bad thing if a large part of the laws were declared unconstitutional. I hope the amendment will be adopted. This is to prevent things being smuggled into a bill which are not expressed in the title. It would work no injury should the Supreme Court declare all such laws unconstitutional.

MR. SCHELL. I shall vote for the amendment because it restores the language of the old Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I would be in favor of the old Constitution were it not for the fact that we have already adopted a provision declaring that the provisions of this Constitution are mandatory. Such a provision, if it is inserted in this Constitution will be mandatory. It seems to me that the words that were stricken out were improperly stricken out. We need it all here. We must have it, or else change what we have here. To say that it is mandatory, that every Act shall embrace but one subject, and that to be expressed in the title, is to say, that many of the Acts passed by the Legislature will be unconstitutional. And even if not so held, in the end, there will be litigation over every Act, whether it be unconstitutional or not. I am opposed to making any such mandatory provision. It would be better to leave it as it has been. It oftentimes happens that a large proportion of legislators, and especially those of the lower House, are men who are not skilled in the drafting of laws. There ought to be no such serious difficulty thrown in their way.

MR. ANDREWS. I hope the amendment will be adopted. It will be a guard against hasty and improper legislation.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment striking out, in section twenty-four, legislative department, the words, "and matter properly connected therewith," was adopted.

SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 25. The Legislature shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say:

"First—Regulating the jurisdiction and duties of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges, and of Constables.

"Second—For the punishment of crimes and misdemeanors.

"Third—Regulating the practice of Courts of justice.

"Fourth—Providing for changing the venue in civil or criminal cases.

"Fifth—Granting divorces.

"Sixth—Changing the names of persons or places.

"Seventh—Authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, maintaining, or vacating roads, highways, streets, alleys, town plats, parks, cemeteries, graveyards, or public grounds not owned by the State.

"Eighth—Summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries, and providing for their compensation.

"Ninth—Regulating county and township business, or the election of county and township officers.

"Tenth—For the assessment or collection of taxes.

"Eleventh—Providing for conducting elections, or designating the places of voting, except on the organization of new counties.

"Twelfth—Affecting estates of deceased persons, minors, or other persons under legal disabilities.

"Thirteenth—Extending the time for the collection of taxes.

"Fourteenth—Giving effect to invalid deeds, wills, or other instruments.

"Fifteenth—Refunding money paid into the State Treasury.

"Sixteenth—Releasing or extinguishing, in whole or in part, the indebtedness, liability, or obligation of any corporation or person to this State, or to any municipal corporation therein.

"Seventeenth—Declaring any person of age, or authorizing any minor to sell, lease, or encumber his or her property.

"Eighteenth—Legalizing, except as against the State, the unauthorized or invalid act of any officer.

"Nineteenth—Granting to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive right, privilege, or immunity.

"Twentieth—Exempting property from taxation.

"Twenty-first—Changing county seats.

"Twenty-second—Restoring to citizenship persons convicted of infamous crimes.

"Twenty-third—Regulating the rate of interest on money.

"Twenty-fourth—Authorizing the creation, extension, or impairing of liens.

"Twenty-fifth—Chartering or licensing ferries, bridges, or roads.

"Twenty-sixth—Remitting fines, penalties, or forfeitures.

"Twenty-seventh—Providing for the management of common schools.

"Twenty-eighth—Creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, cities and counties, townships, election or school districts.

"Twenty-ninth—Affecting the fees or salary of any officer.

"Thirtieth—Changing the law of descent or succession.

"Thirty-first—Authorizing the adoption or legitimation of children.

"Thirty-second—For limitation of civil or criminal actions.

"Thirty-third—In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable."

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I offer the following amendment:

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend subdivision twenty-one, section twenty-five, by inserting before the word 'changing,' the words 'locating or,' so as to read: 'Twenty-first—Locating or changing county seats.'"

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I think there ought to be a prohibition against locating as well as changing county seats. The Legislature ought not to locate county seats. That matter ought to be left to the people themselves.

Digitized by Google

MR. HEISKELL. That provision does not provide that the Legislature shall fix county seats, but merely that they shall pass general laws for that purpose.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell.

Lost.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to subdivision eight, of section twenty-five, the following, 'except in cities of over thirty thousand inhabitants.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Subdivision eight provides that the Legislature shall pass no law for summoning and impaneling grand and petit juries, and providing for their compensation. I propose to add an exception which will cover San Francisco. Under the old system, the general system that prevailed throughout the State, it was impossible to get proper juries in the city of San Francisco, and they never did have until the Legislature passed a special law making special provision for that city. When the Supervisors had the control of summoning juries, the result was that they were composed of the most worthless instead of the best men; men who hung around for no other purpose than to get the per diem. It was almost impossible to get business men, educated men, and men of integrity upon juries. The Legislature was brought to see the difficulty, and they changed the law so that the juries in that city are summoned in a different way.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I don't see any necessity for such an amendment. The Legislature can, by a general law, provide different modes of summoning jurors for different cities, according to population. There is no necessity for making this exception at all.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I brought this matter up at the solicitation of Judge Campbell, who was solicited by members of the bar.

MR. VAN DYKE. I understand that; nevertheless it is unnecessary. I cannot see why it would not be proper for the Legislature to pass a general law applicable to cities having thirty thousand inhabitants and over. That would answer the purpose just as well as to have the exception here.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I do not think the amendment is necessary at all, and if my associate will think of it, he will come to the same conclusion. We legislate, by general laws, for all the counties in the State; we also legislate, by general law, for all the cities in the State, and a provision may be made for San Francisco, by general law for consolidated city and county governments; so I think the amendment is unnecessary.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher.

Lost.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend seventh subdivision, of section twenty-five, by striking out the words 'roads, highways,' in line eleven."

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I wish to say that I think it is impossible to adopt a general road law for this State. It has been tried over and over again. It was tried in the codes. We found it practically impossible, for the reason that counties are so differently situated. They are operating local road laws. We have had a great deal of difficulty in our county, and we have a good system of road laws.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

Lost.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I move to strike out subdivision twenty-eight. I make this motion because I am satisfied it will not work.

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: It seems to me that section ought to be stricken out. In some counties the Auditor and Recorder are combined; in some counties the Treasurer is made Collector; in others the Sheriff is made Tax Collector; in some counties the County Clerk is Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, as well as of the Court. Now, in Sacramento, you might want the Sheriff to perform no other duties, while in the adjoining county he might as well collect the taxes also. There should be power in the Legislature to arrange these matters; to impose other duties where they can be imposed, and combine two or more offices, where it can be done as well as not. If this is adopted, they will have no such powers. The section ought to be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope this part of the section will not be stricken out. I consider it one of the reforms necessary to be inserted here. It does appear to me that gentlemen have forgotten the article on city, county, and township organization, in which we provide for all these things. The counties in this respect can be classified by general law. A certain provision can be made to apply to a certain class of counties. There is no trouble about it in the world. Such a law would be uniform in its operation. There is no necessity for striking this out.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I am satisfied that this clause is too radical and too sweeping. In our crusade against the legislative power we have gone too far. We are inaugurating a system that is entirely new, and although some of these clauses are copied from the Constitution of Pennsylvania, yet I contend that they are so recent that we have no satisfactory knowledge of their workings. There the Legislature has been so entirely shorn of all its power, that it is almost a useless organization—a defunct branch of the government. While it is desirable that we should adopt some system to prevent these abuses, we should leave something under its control. It is time we should pause and reflect upon what we are doing, in making each county to establish its own government. We are going too far. I think this proposition is wrong and vicious, and should not be accepted.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I trust there will be no going back upon this system to cut off special legislation. There is nothing in the whole State that is more demanded than that. There is no difficulty about this; none at all. Uniform laws can be made for all the counties, according to their needs. It has worked well in other States, and it will in this.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I don't propose to speak upon this. There is no occasion for striking this out.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope the motion to strike out will not prevail.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to strike out.

Division was called, and the motion lost, by a vote of 44 ayes to 55 noes.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line forty-six, of section twenty-five, subdivision twenty-eight, add the following at the end of the paragraph: 'or directing the payment of money from out of the treasury, or by any officer of, or creating any liability against a county, city, town, or any public or municipal corporation, without its consent.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: This is an amendment that was reported by the Committee on City, County, and Township Organization, and it is a very necessary amendment. It was regarded as a necessary amendment by that committee, but when the section was under consideration a motion was made to strike it out, and it went by the board. I now move to insert it here, as it is a very proper prohibition.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds.

Lost.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I move to strike out the thirty-third subdivision.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: We have already provided thirty-three instances where special laws shall not be passed. Now, this last clause says that there shall be no special legislation where a general law can be made applicable. It must be apparent that there is no necessity for that clause, and if there is, any one must see that it will give rise to an immense amount of litigation. Whenever a law is passed by the Legislature, somebody will take it to the Supreme Court to see whether it is special or general. It is entirely unnecessary and mischievous. We do not want to provide for any more constitutional law questions than is absolutely necessary. The Courts will have enough to do anyway.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I agree with the gentleman, that this is a vicious amendment, and I can see no good purpose that it can subserve. It will always raise the question in the Courts whether a law could not have been made general. I think it ought to be stricken out.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: It is rather remarkable that these distinguished lawyers should raise an objection to this section, that it will tend to encourage their business. That section is the most important section of this whole provision. It is the true principle of government, that whenever a general law can be made applicable, a special law shall not be passed.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: The Legislative Committee went through all the Constitutions, and from those Constitutions they have specified thirty-two different cases in which there shall not be special legislation, and then we adopted a general clause to cover everything which might not have occurred to the committee. It was proposed, at first, that the Legislature should not pass special laws in any case, but that would not bear discussion. That was too radical, so we adopted this section.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I think this clause ought to be amended to read like this: "All other cases which the Committee on Legislative Department may have forgotten." I would vote for that amendment; but, as I do not expect to have a chance to offer it, I shall vote to strike out this clause.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I suppose gentlemen hardly understand the effect of striking this out. It would authorize special legislation in all other cases except these mentioned. That is the effect of it. The Court would be bound to construe it that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of all others.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: It seems to me this might be stricken out. We have proceeded here, in thirty-two subdivisions, to limit the power of the Legislature. In doing this we have not only availed ourselves of our own experience, but the experience of other States, in selecting subjects upon which we have prohibited special or local legislation. It seems to me that clause is objectionable upon the ground suggested by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, that it will be the cause of litigation as to what is and what is not special legislation. We have covered all the cases that our own experience, and the experience of other States can suggest, and it seems to me we might as well strike it out.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out.

Division was called, and the motion was lost by a vote of 42 ayes to 56 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried.

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section twenty-eight. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 28. The Legislature shall pass laws for the regulation and limitation of the charges for services performed and commodities furnished by corporations, and where laws shall provide for the selection of any person or officer to regulate and limit such rates, no such person or officer shall be selected by any corporation, and no person shall be selected who is an officer or stockholder in any corporation."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section twenty-nine, stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 29. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liabilities of the corporators and other means as may be prescribed by law. The property of corporations now existing, or hereafter created, shall forever be subject to taxation, the same as the property of individuals, and the franchises of such corporations shall be assessed at their actual cash value, and taxed accordingly."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section thirty, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 30. The term corporations, as used in this article, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships. And all corporations shall have the right to sue and shall be subject to be sued in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section thirty-one, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 31. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but associations may be formed under general laws for the deposit of gold and silver and other lawful money of the United States; but no such associations shall make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, check, ticket, certificate, promissory note, or other paper, or the paper of any bank to circulate as money."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section thirty-two, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 32. The Legislature of this State shall prohibit by law any person or persons, association, company, or corporation from exercising the privileges of banking or creating paper to circulate as money."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section thirty-three, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 33. Each stockholder of a corporation or joint-stock association shall be individually and personally liable for his proportion of all its debts and liabilities contracted or incurred while he was a stockholder, and the trustees or director of such corporation or association, and each of them, shall be responsible, individually, for the misappropriation by the officers thereof of the funds or deposits of such corporation or association."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section thirty-four, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 34. It shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide, by general laws, for the organization of city, town, and county governments, and for assessing and collecting taxes for the support of the same; provided, that no city, city and county, town, or county shall ever incur a debt which, together with existing indebtedness, shall exceed two per cent. of the assessed value of the property therein. Such value shall be ascertained from the assessment roll for State and county purposes made immediately previous to incurring such indebtedness; provided, however, that a city, city and county, town, or county may borrow money under and in accordance with the following conditions and limitations in addition to any other conditions and limitations contained in the Constitution, namely: The debt must be for some single work or object only, and must be authorized by a resolution passed by a vote of three fourths of all the members elected to the Board of Supervisors, Common Council, or local Legislature. Such resolution shall also distinctly specify the single work or object for which the debt is to be created, and the amount of the debt authorized, and shall contain provisions for a sinking fund to meet the same at maturity, and requiring at least ten per cent. of the principal to be annually raised by taxation and paid into the sinking fund. Such resolution shall not take effect until it shall be ratified at an election held in said city, city and county, county, or town, at which no other matter is voted upon, and which shall be held within thirty days after the passage of said order or resolution. The Legislature shall make such laws as may be necessary to provide for holding such election and ascertaining the result thereof."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section forty, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 40. The Legislature shall not ratify any amendment to the Constitution of the United States which may be proposed by Congress, except such as shall have been proposed and published at least thirty days next preceding the general election for members of the Legislature ratifying such amendment."

Concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read section forty-one, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 41. In case of a contested election in either branch of the Legislature, only the claimant decided entitled to the seat shall receive from the State per diem compensation, or mileage."

THE SECRETARY read section forty-two, which was stricken out by the Committee of the Whole.

"SEC. 42. In order that no inconvenience may result to the public service from the taking effect of this Constitution, no officer shall be suspended or superseded thereby until the election and qualification of the several officers provided for in this Constitution."

REGULATING CHARGES OF CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the new section reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION —. The Legislature shall pass laws for the regulation and limitation of the charges for services performed and commodities furnished by telegraph, gas, and water corporations, and the charges by corporations or individuals for storage, wharfage, and water, in which there is a public use, and where laws shall provide for the selection of any person or officer to regulate and limit such rates, no such person or officer shall be selected by any corporation or individual interested in the business to be regulated, and no person shall be selected who is an officer or stockholder in any such corporation."

LEGISLATIVE AID.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section thirty-seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section — 'provided, that nothing in this section shall prevent the Legislature granting aid pursuant to section twenty-two of this article.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: Section thirty-seven reads as follows:

"SEC. 37. Neither the Legislature, nor any county, city and county, township, school district, or other municipal corporation, shall ever make an appropriation, or pay from any public fund whatever, or grant anything to or in aid of any religious sect, church, creed, or sectarian purpose, or help to support or sustain any school, college, university, hospital, or other institution controlled by any religious creed, church, or sectarian denomination whatever; nor shall any grant or donation of personal property or real estate ever be made by the State, or any city, city and county, town, or other municipal corporation for any religious creed, church, or sectarian purpose whatever."

We want this amendment in order to avoid the possibility of a construction by the Supreme Court, that these sections may conflict with each other. I don't want to take any chances. If we propose to do a thing let us do it thoroughly or not do it at all.

MR. LARKIN. That does not cover the whole question.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have read the matter over, probably, more times than the gentleman has. There may be a chance that the Supreme Court may decide adversely to section twenty-two and in favor of section thirty-seven. There is a possibility of doubt arising in the matter, and in order that there may not be any doubt I offer this amendment. It confers no additional power. I consider it necessary, and it has been considered necessary by a number of gentlemen versed in the law.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I am in favor of this amendment, because I think it is no more than right. The majority of this Convention have expressed themselves in favor of the Legislature having this power. Now, I propose to make it effective as far as my vote is concerned. I think there has been sufficient discussion upon this point, and I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Evey, West, Huestis, and Estee.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I don't see any need in the world for this amendment. We have not authorized by section twenty-two, the Legislature to appropriate money to any religious creed, or church, or sectarian purpose, and I am astonished that the gentleman should assume that we have by offering such an amendment as this. [Laughter.]

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not pass. It looks to me like a trick. Section twenty-two provides, that notwithstanding anything contained in that or any other section, the Legislature shall have such power. This is only buncombe, and it is in bad taste to make buncombe here. It is discreditable to the intelligence of this body to reassert such a plain assertion.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: As I understand it, section twenty-two, as it now stands, is the deliberate judgment of this Convention. They have adopted it. Now, if section thirty-seven is in conflict with it, it ought to be made consistent with it. It ought to be altered so as to be made to conform to section twenty-two. It will do no harm to insert this amendment. My own judgment as a lawyer is, that section twenty-two and section thirty-seven, as they now stand, are in conflict with each other, and it would require a very close construction by the Courts, and some torture and Judge-made law, to get out of section thirty-seven any authority to make these appropriations. The Court may very well say, that while section twenty-two allows aid to be granted to private institutions which are supporting and maintaining orphans, section thirty-seven prohibits the granting of aid to any such institutions which are under the control of any church or sectarian denomination. This would exclude the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, the Protestant Orphan asylums, and the Catholic asylums, because they happen to be under the control of churches. Therefore, the only orphan asylums that could receive aid would be those under the control of irreligious people and infidels. If they are under the control of the church they would be cut off.

Digitized by Google

MR. LAINE. Didn't you draft that amendment to section twenty-two?

MR. WILSON. Yes, sir.

MR. LAINE. Why did you put that proviso in, "notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section?"

MR. WILSON. Because I saw a determination on the part of some gentlemen to cut off these children, and to pursue each section of this article to the end, with the same hostility. That is the reason. There have been three distinct assaults made. Therefore I prefer, as far as I am concerned, to repel them with three distinct matters of defense. It will cut these asylums off, because it is well known that all of them, or nearly all, are under the management of some religious sect.

MR. FILCHER. Section twenty-two says: notwithstanding anything contained in section thirty-seven——

MR. WILSON. No man who is a friend to these institutions, and really wants to see them aided by the State, will object to this amendment.

MR. STUART. I ask the gentleman if this will not open the treasury for others?

MR. WILSON. Not at all, sir. It does not extend any further than section twenty-two. That is the extent of the amendment. I am just as much opposed as any gentleman upon this floor to any union of church and State. But I do not look upon this as State aid to a church. It is for the orphans. It is aid granted to these unfortunate children. And because they happen to be under the care of good, pious people, I do not see that it is any reason why they should be cut off. These children cannot control their own destinies. Every child is born under some religious faith—Catholic, Protestant, or Hebrew. They cannot help being orphans; they cannot help themselves. Why should they be cut off and disowned by the State, because they happen to be in charge of good, pious people, who are devoting their lives in caring for the poor and lowly. Gentlemen who are in favor of granting this aid should vote for this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I am not a very religious man, sir, not generally considered so, but I have some heart left, perhaps as much as some who make loud professions. I am not inclined, because a man is a Hebrew, or a Catholic, or anything else, to content myself with passing by on the other side when I see him lying by the wayside. The Good Book says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me." Now, sir, I think it quite necessary that this section should conform precisely to the one we have adopted. Section twenty-two does not contain any such language as was attributed to it by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher. There is no such language contained in it; at least there is not in my copy. Now, sir, this money is given and paid over to these institutions, not for the support of schools or churches, but for a certain given purpose. But it is given to the institutions, and notwithstanding the purpose for which it is given, would be forbidden by this section if it is allowed to stand without amendment, because it is in direct conflict with section twenty-two, therefore this amendment must be made. In regard to the merits of this question I say it is far cheaper and much better to have these orphans taken care of in this way than it would be to have them all in one institution, under the charge of State officers. I believe that moral training is as necessary to a child, in order to make a good citizen out of him, as food and clothes, I care not what creed they belong to. I pay some taxes myself, and I pay no money into the State treasury with more alacrity than I do the money for this purpose. Of all the money I pay towards the support of the various departments of government, there is not a single dollar I pay with so much pleasure as the mite I contribute to these poor unfortunate waifs. Whatever other sins I have committed in my life, I do not intend that this one shall be laid at my door. They are thrown out upon the world, and he is less than a man who will refuse them aid. I submit that it is the highest statesmanship to provide for these children. I hope this Convention will put the stamp of their approval upon this thing, and that the Legislature will carry out the objects of these provisions. [Applause.]

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I have but a word to say. I think, sir, if there is anything that the people of this State are more unanimous upon than any other, it is that there shall be no subsidies granted, in any form or shape, to any private corporation, church, or otherwise. And this is nothing more nor less than a perpetual subsidy. You will find that in every party platform.

MR. HILBORN. Allow me a question: What party has a plank in its platform prohibiting the granting of aid to orphans?

MR. ANDREWS. That is where the gentlemen are not logical. Every party has a plank in its platform that any subsidy to any private corporation or individual is a departure from the sound principles of government.

MR. REDDY. Do you call it a subsidy to a corporation to appropriate money to support the helpless orphans of the State, and clothe, feed, and educate them?

MR. ANDREWS. Call it subsidy, or whatever you please, it is an appropriation of money out of the State treasury for purposes other than the legitimate purposes of government.

REMARKS OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: [Cries of "Question!" "Question!"] I think I am entitled to be heard. The gentleman talks about subsidies. Is it a subsidy for the State to pay for taking care of these orphans? Does not the State save money by letting out the contract to certain parties to take care of these orphans? That is not a subsidy; that is simply paying for value received. There is no question of subsidy about it. The gentlemen have got clear away from the question. Now, there is nothing in this section which prohibits the appropriation of money for the support of orphans in charge of non-religious people. Those having a religious code of morals would be debarred from having charge of orphans, the very ones, it seems to me, who ought to have charge of them. The result is that these non-sectarian gentlemen would have made a deliberate attack upon all religions. You do not deny a man the right of being a juror, or a witness, or anything else, on account of his religious belief, but you do deny him the right of taking care of these orphans on account of his religion. The man who has control of them must not have any religion at all. Now, why should you make this attack upon religious persons? Why deny them this right? The result is simply this, that these gentlemen demand that before any man or any association of persons can have charge of orphans, they must renounce God and His religion. Is it not an attack on religious associations? It seems to me that it is a direct, deliberate attack. The fact that a man has a religious belief ought not to exclude a man from making a contract with the State for the support of these orphans, and accepting pay therefor.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I fully agree with the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, and the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter, that these sections are in direct conflict with each other, and ought to be harmonized. If this conflict does not in the end defeat the benevolent purposes of this Convention, it will at least be the cause of endless litigation, which will cost more for lawyers' fees than the amount of the appropriation. The Convention should either do what is necessary to be done to secure the benefits of the former section, or go back and undo its former action. It has been said of Bob Ingersoll that he was one of those unfortunate orators who had a falling out with God Almighty. We have a great many of that kind of orators here.

MR. TULLY. I trust the friends of the orphans will not forget that the ones who are opposing this amendment to-day are the very ones who endeavored to defeat section twenty-two yesterday. I hope they will all be put on record.

MR. FILCHER. That is an unfair charge, to insinuate that those who disagree with you are unfriendly to the orphans. I am as friendly to the orphans, and will go as far as any man to support them. But I disagree with you as to the precise mode of doing it.

MR. TULLY. I vote against the proposition to drag these little children out of comfortable homes and scattering them abroad in the world. Let the gentlemen vote as they please, and go squarely upon the record.

Upon the amendment of Mr. Beerstecher, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, Brown, Tully, Doyle, and O'Sullivan.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section thirty-eight, to be added to the section.

Digitized by Google

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add at end of section—'provided, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the granting of aid to private institutions such as are referred to in section twenty-two of this article.'"

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: I offer this because section thirty-eight is in conflict with section twenty-two, and I want to make them harmonious.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: These gentlemen are very anxious to get this well hedged in. I do not see why they should not be satisfied with section twenty-two. Now, if these gentlemen had been willing to deal justly and fairly with the whole State, those who opposed this thing would have ceased their opposition. Now, the Convention has come to a definite determination, and that determination I accept in good faith, that the State will permit the appropriation of money for the support of orphans, half orphans, abandoned children, and the indigent sick, those who may be regarded as the wards of the State, allowing them to be maintained, supported, and educated in private institutions as contra-distinguished from State institutions. For one, I accept the result. I accept it as the judgment of this Convention. I am satisfied and anxious to see this Constitution adopted, this provision notwithstanding. But in order to work fairly, this provision ought to extend to all the orphans and half orphans in the State. I know of remote counties in this State where this class of persons can be found, and there is no way open to them by which they can have entrance into these institutions, for the endowment of which we are now providing. If this scheme had been extended to these remote counties, so that their orphans could reap the benefit of it, I would have made no opposition to it. It is not true that we are opposed in any sense to the support of these orphans by the State, if it can be done in such a way as to be fair and just to all persons, whether they come from San Francisco or Siskiyou.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

NOTICE.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to give notice of an amendment to a rule.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I give notice that I will, to-morrow, move to amend Rule Thirty-five, by adding thereto as follows: 'But when an article of the Constitution is being considered in Convention, the main question shall only apply to the section then under consideration, and to amendments to such section.'"

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT—STATE AID.

THE PRESIDENT. The pending amendment is the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to make no argument upon this matter, for I presume it is generally understood. I desire to warn the Convention, however, that it is a general subsidy power; that there is no aid to a railroad or anything else that cannot be granted under that amendment.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I do not know just what the purpose of this amendment is, but it accomplishes much more than it appears to accomplish. I call the attention of the Convention to the peculiar wording of this amendment, in the connection in which it is used. The latter part of section thirty-eight provides that the State "shall not have power to authorize the State, or any political subdivision thereof, to subscribe for stock, or to become a stockholder in any corporation whatever." Now, this amendment proposes that the State may become a stockholder in this class of corporations. We do not wish to do that. Let us hold to just what we have done in section twenty-two. I suggest that the error is in the wording of this amendment. Now, sir, I am in favor of allowing these institutions to have State aid. I have so voted from first to last. I am not in favor of putting into this section a provision that will allow the State to subscribe to the capital stock of any corporation. The gentleman who introduced the amendment stated to me that if it was open to this objection he would amend it so that it should correspond with section twenty-two.

MR. BEERSTECHER. As the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, reads, if I interpret it correctly, I must say that I cannot vote for it.

MR. WILSON, of First District. If you will move as an amendment your amendment to that section, I will accept it. I did not have that amendment with me, and I desired to get the floor, and so I presented this. If you will present your amendment as an amendment to mine, I will accept it.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Then I will move this amendment:

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add, after the word 'whatever,' in line ten, 'provided, that nothing in this section shall prevent the Legislature granting aid pursuant to section twenty-two of this article.'"

MR. WILSON. I accept the amendment.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 53 ayes to 39 noes.

APPROPRIATION BILLS.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to offer a section to be added to the article on legislative department.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. No bill making an appropriation of money, except the general appropriation bill, shall contain more than one item of appropriation, and that for one single and certain purpose, to be therein expressed."

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: The object of that section is to prevent this infamous practice of logrolling which has been carried on in this State in its past history. I think it is only fair that every measure should stand upon its own merits. I received this a short time ago from a Senator of this State, now deceased—Senator Angney. I take pleasure in offering that in the name of the deceased Senator.

The section was adopted.

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section twenty-seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the words 'and county,' in line five, and insert the following: 'unless such county, or city and county, to be divided, shall contain a population greater than the number required to form one Congressional district. Any county, or city and county, containing a population greater than the number required for one Congressional district shall be formed into one or more Congressional districts, according to the population thereof, and any residue, after forming such district or districts, shall be attached, by compact adjoining Assembly districts, to a contiguous county or counties, and form a Congressional district. In dividing a county, or city and county, into Congressional districts, no Assembly district shall be divided so as to form a part of more than one Congressional district, and every such Congressional district shall be composed of compact contiguous Assembly districts.'"

REMARKS OF MR. SHURTLEFF.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: Every member will see that as the section now stands there is liable to be a large fraction, perhaps some sixty or seventy thousand people that would inevitably be disfranchised in dividing a large county, or city and county. That evil will be liable to increase hereafter. Under the operations of the Federal Constitution in seventeen hundred and eighty-nine, it was required that each Representative in Congress should represent a population not less than thirty thousand. After the census of seventeen hundred and ninety Congress made an apportionment, and provided that each Representative in Congress should represent thirty-three thousand inhabitants. After the census of eighteen hundred the same basis was adhered to. In eighteen hundred and ten it required thirty-five thousand. In eighteen hundred and twenty it required forty thousand. In eighteen hundred and thirty it required forty-seven thousand two hundred. In eighteen hundred and forty it required seventy thousand. In eighteen hundred and fifty it required ninety-three thousand four hundred and twenty-three. In eighteen hundred and sixty it required one hundred and twenty-seven thousand three hundred and eighty-one. In eighteen hundred and seventy, the basis at present, it is one hundred and thirty-one thousand four hundred and twenty-five. This number will increase, inevitably, and the larger the Congressional district the greater the grievance. It is very likely that by the next apportionment the number required will be somewhere near one hundred and fifty thousand. Consequently, unless we provide something like this, you are liable to have seventy-five thousand inhabitants in San Francisco disfranchised. One half of the older States that have large cities divide their cities upon this principle. The City of New York has heretofore done so. I think the City of Boston has for the last forty years had one district that extended out into a part of Middlesex County. It is very likely that from the members of the present House of Representatives, two hundred and ninety-three, the number will not be increased, while the total population will be increased in the country. Inasmuch as the House is getting to be a very numerous body, almost three hundred, it is probable that the districts will be made larger, and the only remedy is to provide in this Constitution that they can extend out to contiguous territory and form a Congressional district from the adjacent fraction that may be remaining.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I have been struggling to get the floor to present an amendment upon this very same question. It is possible that the proposition of the gentleman covers the ground, but it is so long that it is hard to understand it. My impression was that the difficulty might be obviated by making an exception, such as I have provided for, to go in at the same place, that is, in cases where one county, or city and county, has more population than the ratio required for one Congressman. I see the same objection the gentleman mentions, and that San Francisco might have enough population for one Congressman and three quarters enough for another, and would lose the latter entirely, because under this section it could not run out and take in enough of the adjacent territory to make a district. I like the section as it stands, and I like the principle of it. It is aimed at the system of gerrymandering the State. I think my amendment is better and only reaches to that kind of an exception where one city, or one city and county has more than the necessary population. In that case they can attach contiguous counties. I would like to have my amendment read, because I think that it would be understood more readily than the other.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-seven by inserting after the word 'county,' second occurring in line five, the following: 'Except in cases where one county, or city and county, has more population than the ratio required for more than one Congressman.'"

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: Unless the amendment offered by the gentleman from Napa, or the one introduced by Mr. Barbour, or some amendment of that kind be adopted, it would be very easy for California to lose a member of Congress, and yet have a proper number of inhabitants to entitle her to an additional member. We will take San Francisco. San Francisco might be entitled to one member and three quarters of another one, by population. Alameda and Santa Clara might have enough population for one and one quarter of another, and yet the whole three counties, under this section, could not have three Congressmen, and a population not sufficient for one Congressman would be disfranchised.

MR. LAINE. Suppose San Francisco has a fraction over enough, and Alameda has a light fraction more than enough, then you would have to divide Alameda too.

MR. ESTEE. It is better to divide a county than to lose a representative. It is a very easy matter to divide a State so that the people will be represented in Congress.

Mr. McCALLUM. It is a mistake to suppose, that because the State does not district the State properly, that therefore it would lose a Congressman.

MR. ESTEE. If you put into this Constitution that the State shall only be districted in a certain way, it will.

MR. McCALLUM. If we are entitled to six Congressmen we will get them. This does not affect the representation of the State.

MR. ESTEE. It affects it in this way: If the Constitution provides that the State shall be districted in a certain way, and that results in losing a population sufficient to give us one representative, as I have pointed out, the State would thereby lose a representative.

MR. MILLER. If we had population enough for one Congressman outside of these districts and parts of counties, we could elect one from the State at large.

MR. ESTEE. You could if the law prescribed it. It would not be fair for the people of the whole State to select a member of Congress who belonged to a particular locality.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. I say that the representation of the State will be affected in no degree whatever. The State will be entitled to just so many Congressmen as the apportionment shall provide. It would make no difference so far as that representation is concerned, whether they are properly or improperly distributed in the State. I do not know how the precedence may be in some of the States referred to, except as stated by the gentleman from Napa. I believe, however, that the general course is to make the division by counties, as is contemplated by section twenty-seven of the article on legislative department. This point was not discussed, I believe, in the Legislative Committee, but I do not think that there is any sufficient reason given here for the change which is proposed. There would be no disfranchisement as has been assumed. The City of San Francisco, I suppose, would be entitled to two Congressmen. If the City of San Francisco should have fifty thousand additional population, that fifty thousand, it is true, would not be represented, but to say that the city would therefore be disfranchied would not be correct. The State would have the same representation. I confess that I have no idea how it might work to allow San Francisco to run over, and take additional territory in Santa Clara, San Mateo, or Alameda. But at any rate, there seems to be some question whether it would work well or not, and I submit that the precedents are generally the other way. This might be remedied by simply providing for the election of some of the Congressmen at large, as is done in a number of the States.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I totally disagree with the gentleman from Alameda.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman has already spoken to his amendment.

MR. SHURTLEFF. I desire, however, to state, in the first place, that I drew this amendment in such a way that in drawing from the counties to make up a Congressional district, that we should take contiguous territory, and also that the districts in the State should be left in compact form, and divided by Assembly districts, and also that no Assembly district should be divided so that a part of one Assembly district should be in one Congressional district, and another in another district. I regard it as very important, that the section should be carefully drafted, because there has been great abuses in dividing the State into Congressional districts. So far as San Francisco not being disfranchised is concerned, I totally disagree with the gentleman from Alameda. If seventy thousand people there have no chance to vote for Congressmen, they are disfranchised, and it does not make it any better for them because the balance of the State get that fraction.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 57 ayes to 54 noes.

The amendment, as amended, was adopted.

LOBBYING.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Any person who seeks to influence the vote of a member of the Legislature, by bribery, promise of reward, intimidation, or any other dishonest means, shall be guilty of lobbying, which is hereby declared a felony, and it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide, by law, for the punishment of this crime. Any member of the Legislature, proven to have been influenced in his vote or action upon any matter pending before the Legislature, by any reward, or promise of future reward, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, in addition to such punishment as may be provided by law, shall be disfranchised and forever disqualified from holding any office of public trust. Any Act passed by the Legislature, the passage of which can be proved to have been influenced by personal solicitation of members, or on the part of any person or persons interested in the same, shall be void."

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: My purpose is to provide for the prevention and punishment of lobbying which has assumed dangerous proportions of late years, and which gentlemen must admit requires a remedy. It is scarcely necessary for me to particularize regarding the doings of the lobby around our legislative halls for years past. They are notorious and known to all. Wretches who ought to be in State Prison hover around the Legislature from the beginning to end of the legislative session seeking to influence votes for sinister purposes; following this occupation as a profession, and making it a profitable one. Gentlemen who have represented San Francisco have told me that they could not secure a renomination because they had refused to vote on important measures at the dictation of Brady and Mannix, Higgins, and Gannon, the railroad lobbyists, and other corruptionists. It is a fact beyond question, that the lobbyists have more influence in the halls of our Legislature than honest members of either house. This corruption of the law making power is an evil of the most serious character, and I presume that no gentleman will deny that it demands curative measures. Lobbying is a dirty infamous business, a crime of the most flagrant character, I care not who engages in it, or what their character or calling. I think we should in this Constitution adopt some measure for its prevention and punishment. If my proposition is not acceptable, or is unsuited to meet the case, I trust some gentleman will offer an amendment calculated to provide the necessary reform, for the suppression of the lobby and the punishment of the criminal element engaged in this infamous business.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add the following—'and any candidate for any office, either legislative or otherwise, who shall solicit the vote of any delegate to any political Convention for a nomination in any political party, shall be forever disqualified from holding any office of profit and trust.'"

Messrs. Inman, Wyatt, Schomp, Boucher, and Van Dyke demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention, on a division, by a vote of 53 ayes to 34 noes.

Upon the amendment of Mr. Murphy, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Freud, Grace, Barbour, Gorman, and Swenson.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan. The Secretary will call the roll:

THE SECRETARY commenced to call the roll.

MR. LAINE. I ask for a division of the question.

MR. WILSON, of San Francisco. I would like to have it divided if possible.

THE PRESIDENT. Call the roll.

[Cries of "divide the question!"]

THE CHAIR. The gentlemen will be seated.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. [When Mr. Stedman's name was called.] I call for Mr. Stedman to vote.

MR. ESTEE. Change my vote from aye to no on the last clause of the section.

MR. VAN DYKE. You ought to have seen that before.

MR. ESTEE. What is the matter with you?

MR. VAN DYKE. I am disgusted.

MR. STEDMAN. I desire to change my vote to no.

THE PRESIDENT. You did not vote at all.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I ask Mr. Tinnin to vote.

[Cries of "call the absentees!"]

The roll-call was continued amid great confusion, and the President announced that the amendment was adopted by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this report be engrossed and ordered to a second reading?

Upon the question of ordering the article engrossed for a second reading, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Grace, Glascock, Lampson, Tully, and Keyes.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that if the Convention refuses to order a second reading, it is a rejection of the whole article.

The roll was called, and the article ordered engrossed by the following vote:

NOTICES.

MR. WICKES. I hereby give notice that on to-morrow, February sixth, I will move a reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment of Mr. O'Sullivan to section relative to lobbying, and consequently the vote by which the whole article was ordered engrossed.

MR. WHITE. I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote on the amendment, this day offered by Mr. McCallum, to section twenty-four of the article on legislative department.

MR. SCHELL. I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-four was adopted. Also, to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to strike out from said amended section the following: "But if any subject shall be embraced in an Act which shall not be expressed in its title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title."

FUTURE AMENDMENTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business on the calendar is the report of the Committee on Future Amendments. The Committee of the Whole offer no amendments to the report. The Secretary will read the article.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this Constitution may be proposed in the Senate or Assembly, and if two thirds of all the members elected to each of the two houses shall vote in favor thereof, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered in their Journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon; and it shall be the duty of said Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner and at such time as may be deemed expedient. Such amendment or amendments shall be published in full in each county in the State wherein a newspaper is published for at least three months next preceding the election at which they are submitted. Should more than one amendment be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished, by numbers or otherwise, that they can be voted on separately. If the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments, or any of them, by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the Legislature voting therefor, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of this Constitution.

"SEC. 2. Whenever two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall think it necessary to revise this Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote at the next general election for or against a Convention for that purpose, and if a majority of the electors voting at said election, on the proposition for a Convention, shall vote in favor thereof, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide by law for calling the same. Said Convention shall consist of a number of delegates not to exceed that of both branches of the Legislature, which shall be chosen in the same manner, and have the same qualifications, as members of the Legislature. The delegates so elected shall meet within three months after their election, at such place as the Legislature may direct. The Constitution that may be agreed upon by such Convention shall be submitted to the people at a special election to be provided for by law, for their ratification or rejection, in such manner as the Convention may determine. The returns of such election shall, in such manner as the Convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the returns so certified to him; and it shall be the duty of the Executive to declare by his proclamation, such Constitution as may have been ratified by a majority of all the votes cast at such special election, to be the Constitution of the State of California."

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section one by striking out the words 'two thirds,' in line two, and insert 'a majority,' and strike out the words 'of the two houses,' in line three, and insert the word 'house.'"

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: One of the great difficulties of the old Constitution was the inconvenient and troublesome mode of amendment. By the old Constitution one Legislature had to propose and another indorse, and then it had to go to the people. Now, it strikes me that a majority of all the members is sufficient to recommend a section to the consideration of the people. The second amendment in regard to the third line is a mere verbal amendment.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: The committee that proposed this took in consideration the fact that the present Constitution provided that an amendment must be proposed in one Legislature, and then, if adopted, it must then be entered upon the Journal, and be presented to the next Legislature, and they must also vote in favor of it before it could be submitted to the people. That could be done by a majority of the members of the Legislature. But they were obliged to pass it through two sessions before the people could act upon it. The committee did not think it wise to compel the Legislature to submit it to a succeeding Legislature, but thought it better to refer it directly to the people. But, taking into consideration that change, they thought it but just that it it should take a two-third vote of the Legislature to propose an amendment. I see no reason to change my opinion from what it was in the committee. I think it is wise to compel two thirds of the Legislature to propose an amendment, if it is to go direct to the people; otherwise, we might have a majority of the Legislature at every session proposing amendments to the Constitution, and have them continually before us. My judgment is that it will be better to let that part stand as it is—require two thirds to propose it—and then let them refer it directly to the people. The other amendment I see no objection to.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I would like to have a division of the question. I am in favor of one and against the other. The first amendment proposed, I think, is injudicious. The Legislature, by a majority vote, may very frequently submit propositions to the people under a temporary impulse; but if it requires a two-third vote, there will be more deliberation and care. Under the old Constitution it requires two successive Legislatures to propose an amendment to the people. Now, in lieu of that, one Legislature can do it, and I think a two-third vote should be required. The second amendment I am in favor of. If we can have a division of the question, I will vote against the first and for the second.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara. I am opposed to amendments to the Constitution being made easy, and that is the proposition, as I understand it. When it comes to a matter of changing the fundamental law I think we should be somewhat conservative, and I, for one, am opposed to this system of making amendments to the Constitution easy. It seems to me that no amendment should be made until such time as two thirds of the members of each house shall say that there is sufficient cause to submit a proposition of change to the people.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I am also opposed to this amendment, on the same ground as the gentleman who last spoke. It would make the Constitution a foot-ball, to be kicked between the two parties. If one party changed it the next party that come in would do the same. I think some little check ought to be left on the power to change, and it will be a great deal simpler now than it was before, because it will only require one Legislature to submit it, and the people can adopt or reject it. I hope the committee's report will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In section one strike out from the word 'expedient,' in line seven, to the word 'should,' in line ten.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: That proposes to strike out the portion of the section which requires that the amendments shall be published in full in each county in the State wherein a newspaper is published, for at least three months next preceding the election at which they are to be submitted. Now, preceding that, it says that "it shall be the duty of said Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner and at such time as may be deemed expedient." It seems to me, Mr. President, that with that requirement to publish them for three months in every county in the State—we have fifty-two counties now—it would be difficult to prove that that part of the Constitution had been complied with. If it should be omitted for a portion of a week, in any one of the fifty-two counties, it might vitiate the whole amendment, although adopted by the people by a large majority. I think it is dangerous to put such an inflexible requirement in the Constitution as a condition precedent to the adoption of an amendment. I think the other clause is amply sufficient—that it shall be submitted in such manner and at such time as may be deemed expedient. That requirement which I move to strike out is not in the old Constitution. It has been put in there by the committee, and I think it is a great mistake.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President. I do not think that it is advisable to strike that out. The clause which provides that it shall be submitted to the people in such a manner and at such time as may be deemed expedient, has nothing to do with the publication of it. The publication of it has nothing to do with submitting it to the people for their approval or rejection. It is not an untried thing. It is found in other Constitutions. I am not sure whether it is in the Constitution of Missouri or not, or the Constitution of Pennsylvania, [laughter,] but I think it is a very necessary and essential thing, that when these amendments are proposed they shall be published so that the people may know what they are, and understand them. If the Convention thinks that three months is not the proper time, let it be amended in that particular, but do not let us strike out this idea that it must be published in every county in the State. It is the foundation of the new government, that the people shall know what they are voting upon. There is no other way but by publication, and I hope that this amendment will not prevail.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda will prevail, or something equivalent to it. The proposition now places the matter in too uncertain a condition, as to whether the requirements of the law could be complied with, or would be complied with. It would also put the fate of an amendment into the hands of any newspaper published in this State, in any county where there was but one newspaper. I hope therefore that the amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was adopted on a division, by a vote of 47 ayes to 35 noes.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'time,' in line seven, the words, 'and after such publication.'"

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: The last amendment having been adopted striking out the clause which provided that an amendment should be published, there should be some provision for giving notice, and I have offered that, so that the Legislature itself will provide how the publication shall be made. It could provide for giving notice the same as it did for calling this Convention. I think some provision of that kind should be in.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope, now that the other sentence has been stricken out, that this will be adopted to provide that the Legislature must publish it in some way, and to leave it to the Legislature to say what that publication shall be.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I voted to strike out this portion which has just been stricken out. Now, that that has been stricken out I hope that this amendment offered by the gentleman from Butte will be adopted. I had an amendment something similar to it, and I am in favor of having some kind of publication.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two, lines seven and eight, by striking out the words, 'of both branches of the Legislature, which,' and insert the following words: 'of the State Senate who.'"

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: The object of that amendment is to curtail the great number that is to assemble here for the purpose of making Constitutions. Now, the members of this body have had some experience of the result of having such a great body of men. Before another Constitution is required in this State it is evident that the members of the Senate and House will have materially increased from the present number. They might perhaps attain the number of three hundred or four hundred. Such a body would be totally unwieldy. If we had had that law in force at this time the Constitution we are making would have been finished months ago.

MR. CROSS. There cannot be more than one hundred and twenty members as it is.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will not prevail. It is true that large bodies are unwieldy and move slowly, but they move surely and justly, and they are representative in their character. They take in and represent all the diversified interests of the State, and every measure is thoroughly and exhaustively discussed before it is acted upon. I hope never to see in this State a small oligarchy of forty men sitting in council for the purpose of giving to the State its organic law.

MR. TINNIN. Was not the Constitution that we are living under now made by a smaller number than that? However, I ask leave to change my amendment by striking out the word "Senate," and inserting the word "Assembly."

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the gentleman will be permitted to qualify his amendment.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: The old Constitution under which we are living provided that a Constitutional Convention should not consist of a number of members less than that of both branches of the Legislature. That compelled the Legislature to provide for at least one hundred and twenty, and they saw fit to increase that to one hundred and fifty-two. Now, sir, the committee took this matter into consideration, that a large body was unwieldy, but they did not think it best to put an iron rule upon the Legislature, that they must provide so many whether they wished to or not, and yet they desired to have the number large enough, so that it would insure a fair representation—so that it would represent every varied interest of the whole State. They thought they had arrived at that by providing that it should not exceed that of both branches of the Legislature. Now, it will be competent for the Legislature to say, if they wish, that it shall not consist of more than forty members, or eighty members, or that it may be as large as both branches of the Legislature, but they cannot exceed that. I think it is better to fix a maximum rather than a minimum. It leaves the Legislature an opportunity to increase to one hundred and twenty, but it can not go beyond that. I think it is not wise to reduce it to so small a number even as the members of the Assembly. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am in favor of this amendment. For four months I have attended the sessions of this body, and saw the workings of it. I am satisfied that the interests of the State, and of the whole people of the State, demand a number not to exceed eighty. Had there been eighty members selected to this Convention, they would have completed their work before this and been home. That is a sufficient number to submit it to the people. There are persons that are disposed to take up all the work of the last four months and do it over again. Some members saw fit to absent themselves when matters were up in Committee of the Whole, and now ask leave to review everything that comes up. I believe that members of the Constitutional Convention should finish their work in a reasonable time.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will not be adopted, because I think of all conventions or assemblages that can be got together, it is more necessary that the people should be represented in the Constitutional Convention than in any other. I am aware that there has been a great deal of slow work here in consequence of a large body, but I do not think it will result badly. We have got the views of the whole State thoroughly, and we will probably give a Constitution that will be adopted by the whole State in consequence. Now, it will be a long time before there is another Convention called, because we have provided a very easy mode of amending the Constitution. I do not think a Convention will be necessary for years and years; but if it is necessary, and the people wish to call it, they should be represented from one end of the State to the other, and that cannot be done by a small body. I hope that the amendment will not be adopted, and that we will not lose our time discussing on this floor such amendments as I consider that.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Trinity, Mr. Tinnin.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In section two, strike out, in line five, the words, 'on the proposition for a Convention.'"

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: The Committee on Future Amendments have made several good changes, I think, from the present Constitution, but this is one proposed innovation which I think is not a good one. Our present Constitution requires that there shall be a majority of all the votes cast at the election. The Committee has inserted the words which I propose to strike out. If the section should be adopted, as reported by the Committee, a majority of the votes upon the proposition or measure will determine. They provide that the vote shall be taken at the general election, which I think, is very proper. Now, if there should be one hundred and fifty thousand votes cast at that election, as might be the case, and but twenty thousand votes cast upon this proposition, ten thousand and one votes would carry the proposition for a Constitutional Convention. We know how little attention is given to these questions. The probability is, that at the last election, thousands of votes were cast upon it from the circumstance that the tickets were printed either one way or the other. Now, sir, it is provided that the Legislature shall vote but once upon this question. I think the committee has made a good change in providing that there should be a two-third vote, but when it comes to the question whether the people shall call a convention or not, I see no other proper course except that which we have had heretofore, requiring a majority of all the votes cast. When a Constitutional Convention is called, it should be called under such circumstances as to clearly indicate that a majority of the people voting at the election are in favor of it.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: It is undoubtedly true that a great many people did not vote one way or the other upon the question of calling this Convention, but if they are to understand, by the terms of the Constitution, that their vote is to determine upon this one proposition, they will be very likely to look out for it. I believe that if they are to call a Constitutional Convention, they ought to vote fair and square upon that proposition, and the votes cast for and against it, should determine whether a Constitutional Convention should be called or not. I hope the amendment will be rejected.

The amendment was rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The next measure on the file is the article on revenue and taxation.

THE SECRETARY read all the amendments offered by the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment to section one, as follows:

"SECTION 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State."

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. Taxation shall be uniform throughout the State."

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: The word "equal" has made a great deal of difficulty in our taxation in this State. Now, it is well known that the decision in the case of the People vs. Hibernia Bank goes upon the ground of the impossibility of Assessors assessing credits on an equal basis. That is the basis upon which that decision is rendered, and the word "equal," in the thirteenth section, in the eleventh article of the present Constitution, has made all this trouble about the taxation of credits and mortgages. Now, sir, if we eliminate that word, why then we escape from all that difficulty; whereas, if we retain it, and if we tax credits, as has been shown manifestly to be the sense of this Convention, the Supreme Court may say hereafter that these Assessors cannot assess these credits on an equal basis, and then we will be just where we started from. Now it is a very easy matter to escape all this difficulty by eliminating that word "equal." The only requisite in taxation is that it shall be uniform. It is so laid down in our textbooks. It must operate uniformly upon persons and subjects, and therefore there is no impropriety in putting that word in the Constitution; but when you add the additional word "equal" to it, then you put in an element of difficulty. Then it is for the Supreme Court to say, as they have said heretofore, whether or not these credits can be taxed on an equal basis; whether they can be assessed equally. Now, in a great many Constitutions there is nothing said about equality or uniformity, and the whole thing is left to the Legislature, but still the Legislature, in enacting these tax laws, always enacts them upon this basis, that the taxes shall be uniform. It is a fundamental requirement. No precedent can be shown where any taxation that is not uniform has been upheld. But this word "equal" has made the difficulty, as I said before. It has been a direful spring of woes unnumbered, and the people of this State, from one end of it to the other, have spoken out in favor of the taxation of credits. Now if we propose to tax credits, and it has been shown by a very large majority that that is the sense of the Convention, I say that that word "equal" should be eliminated, so as not to make an element of discord hereafter in construing this Constitution. If the word "equal" had not been in there, the decision in the case of the people against the Hibernia Bank would never have been made as it was. Now, by perpetuating that word we will run the gauntlet of incurring the same kind of a decision.

MR. CAPLES. I desire to ask if in the gentleman's opinion the word "uniform" is not subject to the same objection as the word "equal?"

MR. JOHNSON. No, sir; I think not.

MR. CAPLES. Define the two.

MR. JOHNSON. The idea of uniformity is that it shall be uniform as far as that class of subjects is concerned. There are different methods of taxation. For instance, you tax credits in one way, while you tax land and personal property in another. Of course there will always be an effort to approach equality. The basis of taxation is the protection that the taxpayer derives from government, and there is no reason in the world for putting in this word "equal." Of course the tax that a man pays for the protection he derives should be based upon the value of his property as near as can be done. But if you put in an ironclad word of this kind, then it has got to be construed just as you put it into the Constitution.

MR. CAPLES. Strike both out.

MR. JOHNSON. I do not think it would be advisable to do that. I think there should be a limit imposed upon the Legislature that the basis should be uniform. We do not want one man taxed different from another man. We do not want one subject taxed different from another subject of the same kind. But let the tax be uniform. There never was any difficulty about the word "uniform," but the whole difficulty has arisen out of the word "equal." I think, therefore, that this word should be eliminated. In noticing the Constitution of Pennsylvania I think you will find this section which the Committee on Taxation reported for the adoption of this Constitution:

"All taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws."

Now, the very able Chairman of that committee is not here, but he is a man about as well posted in Courts as any gentleman on this floor, and he knew the difficulty that this word "equal" had made, and he left it out as a good lawyer should have left it out.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. The Chairman of the committee, the first move he made, was to move to insert the language of the old Constitution.

MR. JOHNSON. Then there must have been some very sensible men on that committee besides the Chairman.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Do you take back what you said about the Chairman of the committee?

MR. JOHNSON. If the Chairman of the committee was here I might be disposed to do so, but in his absence I will not retract. I insist that there can be no difficulty in using the word "uniform." Cite me to any precedent where this word "uniform" has made trouble. But if it has made no trouble then it must commend itself to our judgment, because our laws, especially our tax laws, should be uniform throughout the length and breadth of the State. It has made no trouble, but the word "equal" has made the trouble.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: As I understand it, the Supreme Court has virtually decided that these are convertible terms, and that they have a similar signification each to the other. Such a change as would be wrought, in the opinion of the honorable member from Sonoma, would not, in my judgment, result from striking out the word "equal." But there would result another of our departures from the language of the existing Constitution. For thirty years we have lived under the influence of that provision which contains both of these amendments in conjunction, and a Supreme Court has interpreted their meaning fully. That meaning would not be altered by the verbal change suggested. I believe, therefore, in the propriety of keeping the language of the Constitution as it is. It is in no sense in conflict with the other provisions adopted by this Convention in Committee of the Whole in reference to the entire department of taxation. This Convention will prove a curse to this State if we do not confine ourselves to proper action. If we run into wild and latitudinarian principles, we shall not stop until we reach the very verge of anarchy and discord. Is there nothing substantial? Will we stand by nothing that is in the old and time honored Constitution? Will we trample it into the dust, or scatter it into the air, or will we preserve at least some fragments of its present entity? Those who think with me will stand by the old Constitution wherever change is not absolutely required.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I would like to support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sonoma, but I think it might be made broader, and strike out section one. There is no harm in the idea of uniform taxation, but it is already provided for. It is provided for in the bill of rights, which declares that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation. A law levying a tax is a general law. Now, sir, there never has been, there is not, and there never will be equal taxation. For us to assert in the Constitution that there shall be, is to assert a falsehood and a physical impossibility. To insert it in the Constitution is to give scope for ten thousand quibbles. Every time the citizen pays his taxes he feels that he is unequally taxed; and taxation really, sir, is not based upon the principle, strictly speaking, of equality of taxation at all, under any form of government that has ever been set up among men, or that has ever been conceived of among men.

MR. JOHNSON. You say there is a provision requiring a uniformity.

Digitized by Google

Is there any objection to repeating it except the mere matter of repetition?

MR. BARBOUR. No; further than that I do not want to give a chance for construction. I have said that there is no such thing as equal taxation under any form of government that ever could be conceived of by man. The idea of taxation is governed by considerations of public policy as well as for the purpose of raising revenue. No government on earth pays taxes that does not pay taxes with a view to public policy. The taxation of the Federal Government, its tariff, are assured by the advocates of it to be as much for protection as for revenue. So it will be said of all sorts of taxes upon business which is not exactly legitimate, or ought not to be declared to be legitimate business, or which it is the policy of the State to discourage—taxes upon dance houses, taxes upon certain kinds of shows, are levied with a view not only of the raising of revenue but of discouraging the business. The same is true with almost all sorts of license taxes. Hardly any of them can be said to be equal taxation. Gentlemen will find, if they have ever investigated the subject of litigation upon the subject of taxation and assessments, that this very word "equal" taxation has invariably come up as a subject of judicial construction. It is eternally raised as an objection to the tax, and that is the reason why all of the modern Constitutions have left the word out. In the whole of the thirty-eight States of the Union but thirteen of the States retain the words "equal taxation," and not one single one of them is of recent date, plainly showing that the members of these Conventions understood the difficulty into which they would plunge by attempting to do an impossibility, and throw wide open the doors for litigation and for construction upon the use of that word.

Now, sir, we ought not, here in this Constitution, to tie the hands of the Legislature. In the future it may be necessary, by the use of the taxing power—that great attribute of the sovereignty of the State—in consideration of public policy, to levy a certain kind of a tax. Now, in the future an income tax might be necessary to be levied; but an income tax is not equal taxation. The Government of the United States never established the income tax upon other grounds than, first, because it fell upon those that were most able to bear the burden of taxation, and because the policy of the Government was to put a tax upon articles of luxury. Grading taxation according to the amount of income is not equal taxation. So with regard to the consideration of the limitation of land monopoly. We do not know—the gentlemen who are figuring now in this Convention to insert in the Constitution any provisions whatever for the limitation of land owning—but that in the future events may so shape themselves that legislative action is absolutely necessary; and at that time it may be determined, too, that a graded tax upon lands may be thought to be the best method of reaching the evil of land monopoly. I call the attention (I have no time to go fully into the consideration of this subject), of the members of the Convention to the fact that there is scarcely a section in the balance of the article that is not liable to the same objection: that it is not equal taxation; that quibbles can be made upon every single section that they do provide for unequal taxation; and therefore, to retain the language in there, in a certain sense, is stultifying themselves, as well as opening the door to boundless litigation and trouble in regard to the construction of the word.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: When this question was up before the Committee of the Whole we discussed it for days. I think a most elaborate discussion took place upon this amendment as now read at the Clerk's desk, namely, that taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. That is the language of the old Constitution.

MR. MORELAND. I do not think we discussed this section more than half an hour. The gentleman was not here.

MR. ESTEE. I was here. I took part in the discussion. But if I was not here I do not see that it makes any point. Perhaps the gentleman from Sonoma will explain what effect it would have upon this section. Now, we have agreed upon this section in Committee of the Whole. We propose again in Convention to reform that section after this lengthy debate. My first impression is that there ought to be an end to these propositions, unless there is some new reason given for changing it. The old argument is being presented just as it was before, and I have been unable to see thus far in the discussion of the most of these subjects that emanated from the Committee of the Whole, or amendment proposed, any great improvement made in the Convention upon what was done in the Committee of the Whole. Therefore, I am in favor, unless there is a more marked objection, a more potent objection, to the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole, I am in favor of adopting the work of that committee, and not commencing again in the Convention to rehash the report of that committee. We will not improve it.

But I have another objection. I think taxation should be equal and uniform, and it matters not whether the statutes or the Constitution of any particular State requires taxation to be equal and uniform. It is the universal rule, so far as I have been able to observe in looking at the Constitutions of the different States, that taxation shall be equal and uniform. That is, that property shall be taxed alike everywhere, where it can be found.

MR. BARBOUR. What modern Constitution has that?

MR. ESTEE. Pennsylvania, Missouri, Illinois——

MR. BARBOUR. Neither one.

MR. ESTEE. Pennsylvania says that the same class of subjects shall be taxed equally. There they tax all horses alike. That is the way they do. They tax all cattle alike. They say that horses of the same kind are worth fifty dollars apiece, and every horse is worth fifty dollars. But I apprehend that the people of California do not want to adopt that rule. But the main proposition is that taxation shall be equal and uniform. That is, in my judgment, the only rational rule, that every man's dollar shall be taxed just alike. When you deviate from that rule you are drifting upon an unknown sea. You have no light by which you can be guided; you have no safe rule by which you can be guided; and therefore I believe that the section should remain as it is. And, although the gentleman from San Francisco has well said that you cannot find any instance where taxation is in all cases equal and uniform, yet you cannot find any instance where the people have declared that taxation shall be unequal. The intention everywhere is that taxation shall be equal, and if there is a failure in that regard it is a failure of the officer or of the law. It is certainly right. It commends itself to the most rational consideration of every decent man. It is the only rule by which we can safely be guided, that every dollar shall be taxed alike; and when, as I said before, you undertake to adopt any other rule, in my judgment you are adopting a very unsafe one. I do not think you can find an instance where it is laid down as a proposition of organic law, in any Constitution, that taxation shall be unequal; or that it shall not be equal. The object is that it shall be equal, and if there is a failure it is a failure either of the officers doing their duty, or it is a failure in the law.

I hope, therefore, that we will go on with this article and adopt it as reported by the Committee of the Whole. I agree, to a very large extent, with what the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Winans, has said. I believe it is safe to leave something of the old Constitution, and especially upon this question of taxation. The Courts, for thirty years, have been giving interpretation to the old Constitution. The bar and the bench and the people are familiar with the decisions of the Courts upon these questions. Let us not adopt new language where the old language will answer the purpose, and we will save the people a vast deal in the way of litigation. Let us adopt the old Constitution whenever and wherever it meets the interests of the people, and I think we will accomplish far more than we will by merely changing the verbiage so that new interpretations must be given to this Constitution. As regards this amendment, "equal" and "uniform" are synonomous terms, and declared so by the Supreme Court of this State, for the purposes of taxation.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I withdraw my amendment, and move to strike out section one.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: The gentleman from Sonoma has withdrawn his amendment, and I desire to offer one. This question that has just now been discussed here, it is true, was discussed for a very few minutes only in Committee of the Whole. I know that the action of the Chairman of the committee took me by surprise, and I supposed that if there was any single section in that article that the Chairman would stand by, it was the first section; yet the first motion he made was to strike that section out, and this one was passed with very little consideration. Now, gentlemen have portrayed faithfully the difficulties that have arisen under this language of the old Constitution—"equal and uniform." To declare that taxation shall be equal, is to declare that something shall be that never was and never will be. I have an amendment here which I would like to offer, and if an opportunity shall present itself, I shall hand this in:

"All property shall be taxed in proportion to its value, which value shall be ascertained as provided by law."

MR. JOHNSON. That is substantially in section two. It is only reaffirming what is in the subsequent section.

MR. DUDLEY. Well, I hope very strongly that section two will be remodeled. I do not know what there was in the article spoken of, that general laws should have a uniform bearing. It may preclude the necessity of this first section. Whether it would or not, I am not prepared to say; but I am prepared to say this, whilst I am up: that it is impossible ever to know the practical result of any new system of taxation until it has been tried; and if so, and you mark out any system and encase it in an iron casket—if I may be allowed to use the expression—there is a bare possibility that it may prove to be very radically defective in the course of time.

MR. BIGGS. Are you opposed to taxation being equal and uniform?

MR. DUDLEY. I do not consider the gentleman's question pertinent at all. I am in favor of equal taxation; but I am not in favor of declaring that taxation shall be equal, because it never has been and never will be. It should be left to the Legislature to find out the nearest system that is possible, without being restrained by the Constitution. The Legislature should have the privilege of saying that A, B, and C shall be assessed upon the value of their property, and if the rule will not apply to another business, or other people, they should have the privilege of designating some other rule. The Constitution should not stand in the way of it. Now, there is no system in the world under which so many powers are wanted as this.

MR. BELCHER. I would ask the gentleman if the difficulty has not been that the Constitution provided for the election of Assessors——

MR. DUDLEY. I do not understand that the decision in the Hibernia Bank case grew out of the fact that the Assessors were elected at all. I understand that they decided that taxation as prescribed by law was not equal, therefore it was unconstitutional and void. Now, the people, generally, all over California, have favored some change in that; and the gentleman himself, when the matter was under consideration in Committee of the Whole, admitted that the present system of taxation at the best was not equal and just, and that there ought to be some change somewhere. Now, I contend that the proper change to make is to put just as little into this article upon this matter as possible, and I would adopt this first section as I have read it, and would modify section two so as to provide that school property, etc., should be exempt from taxation, and I would leave that last section as adopted by the Committee of the Whole, and stop there; and then the whole thing would be in the hands of the Legislature, and if one system did not work equally and justly they can try another. It will be in the hands of the people, and the people will get justice and they will get equality. I would amend section two so as simply to provide for the exemption of school property, State property, etc., and there I would leave it.

MR. JOHNSON. I move to strike out section one as amended.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I send up my amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all of section one and insert the following: 'All property shall be taxed in proportion to its value, which value shall be ascertained as provided by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I was not present in the Committee of the Whole when this article was considered here before, and I do not know what range the debates took at that time, but the section as it stood reads: "Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State." Now, to say that taxes shall be equal, what would we naturally understand by that? What is referred to? It refers either to individuals, or it refers to property, or to both. Now; which? The report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation says:

"SEC. 2. All taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws."

Now that defines it. The report of the committee has sense in it. We understand what it means. If land is the subject it must be uniform as to land. If it is cattle, it must be uniform as to that. And any other property that you may name, when it comes to that subject of taxation it must be uniform. But if you say it must be equal and uniform as to all property, you must tax all property alike. You would crush some enterprises out of existence, because it would be onerous. You may tax some justly and some unjustly, and you will have no rule by which you can grade the taxation of the State so as to develop the natural resources of the country; and there is no State in the world that prospers to-day that undertakes to tax property and everything alike, because it crushes the manufactories out of existence. There is not a prosperous country to-day on the face of the earth but what discriminates in favor of that species of property which tends to the development of the natural resources of the country. Now, the most prosperous State to-day in manufactures is Pennsylvania—so far ahead of New York that New York cannot compete. Pennsylvania has this section which was presented by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. She raises her revenue upon the revenues and incomes of corporations, etc., and does not tax manufactures. Take Belgium, England, France—take any country that has manufacturing interests—they never tax manufactures, because if they did they could not compete with other nations of the world. These things are to be considered when you talk about equality and uniformity of taxation. If it is equal upon all property it is not a judicious system. But the old Constitution does not say that. It says that taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State, without regard to anything. The committee says it shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects. Now in that case you might discriminate. Suppose that some capitalists should engage in a commercial enterprise and put on a line of steamers to trade with South America, or anything of that kind. You may say, give it a subsidy. The Government has given subsidies to our steamers. Why give a subsidy? Because they cannot compete with other nations. A subsidy was granted to a line of steamers between New York and Liverpool, because they could not compete with foreign nations. The subsidy was withdrawn and the steamers were withdrawn. Now equal taxation upon everything would destroy such an enterprise. If we leave this section as reported by the committee, we could tax uniformly upon the same class of subjects. I am in favor of striking the whole thing out and letting the section stand as originally reported by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Do you declare for protection?

MR. HAGER. I am in favor of levying the taxation of our own State for the protection of our industries.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I am a little astonished at the argument of the gentleman from San Francisco. I think he is decidedly undemocratic, and he has gone over to the side of protection. Now, sir, what is the true rule of taxation? What was the true rule as demonstrated by Robert J. Walker? It was the ad valorem rule, and that is the rule of the gentleman from Solano, and the one I hope will prevail. It provides that all property shall be taxed in proportion to its value, which value shall be ascertained as provided by law, and the very moment you depart from that rule you get into confusion worse confounded. It is precisely the rule in this State under the present Constitution. Is there a single writer upon political economy to be found who does not assert the principle that property should be taxed in proportion to its value for the support of Government? That is the rule. Now, sir, the gentleman says that he would not tax a line of steamers that was subsidized. Well, sir, if a line of steamers subsidized by the Government cannot afford to pay taxes, we had better let them slide. They do not deserve to exist; they ought not to live. And you might just as well say, that because the railroads in this country have been subsidized by the Federal Government, that they ought not to be taxed.

MR. HAGER. I did not say that a line of steamers that was subsidized ought not to be taxed. I said that if they were not able to exist at all without a subsidy, why should we further burthen them down with taxation, if they had no subsidy at all?

MR. HOWARD. If they cannot exist without a subsidy, the sooner they go out of existence the better for them and for the country, especially if they have been subsidized to bring Chinamen here. I do not see any objection to this amendment of the gentleman from Solano. I do not see any other practical rule of taxation which we can adopt without getting into inextricable confusion.

MR. JOHNSON. Section two, as adopted by the Committee of the Whole, contains the same rule, does it not?

MR. HOWARD. As I understand it, we are now on section one. Section two may contain this proposition, but you clog it with this assertion in section one, that "taxation shall be equal and uniform."

MR. HAGER. I am in favor of concurring with the report of the committee.

MR. HOWARD. The report of the committee is pretty near as bad, that all taxation shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects. That is not quite so bad. That is much better than that adopted by the Committee of the Whole, but that is not as good as the amendment of the gentleman from Solano. It is not as clear in presenting a rule which is practical as the amendment of the gentleman from Solano; therefore I hope that his substitute will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: On this matter we had considerable discussion in the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, and I agree with the gentleman from Solano in the propriety of adopting this rule as expressed in his amendment, that all property shall be taxed in proportion to its value. When you get to that you get to the true rule of taxation, and all other provisions in respect to equality and uniformity of taxation become entirely unnecessary. If you tax all property according to its value, the taxes will of necessity then be equal and uniform, as far as it is possible to be equal and uniform. The simple assertion of that principle, or that rule of taxation, is, in my judgment, sufficient, without either of these expressions contained in section one.

MR. JOHNSON. If that same expression is in section two, already adopted by the Committee of the Whole, is there any necessity for section one?

MR. MILLER. I do not think there is. In section two this very rule is very clearly expressed. It goes on to speak of moneys, credits, etc., "and all other property, real and personal, according to its true value in money, except as hereafter provided." I do not know what the provisions are. That seems to me quite sufficient upon this subject, and I would leave these questions as to what is property, or what property consists of, to the interpretation of the Courts. I do not believe in fiat property any more than fiat money. I believe that in the formation of an organic law we should use such language as will be understood by the people. We use the term property. Everybody knows what that means. If we want to create fiat property, we can leave that to the Legislature. But the better way would be to leave to the Courts to declare what things are property. The value of property depends, in a great measure, on the uses to which it can be put. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager, wishes to introduce the protective system, as of manufactures; that is, he would attempt to fix some arbitrary standard or rule in cases of some classes of property. If a man started a manufactory to make shoes, according to his views that property ought not to be taxed. But if we leave it to be taxed according to its value, then in ascertaining that value the income that may be derived from it may be taken into consideration in establishing the value. Take the property in a city. The value often is determined by the amount of rent that can be obtained from it. In the city of London all taxation is based upon rental value. In the country a piece of land is worth what can be made out of it. These things are all taken into consideration by the officers who have the power and whose duty it is to fix values. If they are intelligent they take into consideration the uses to which property can be put, and the amount of income that can be derived from it, in establishing its value. I do not care to say anything more upon this subject, but I concur with the gentlemen who are in favor of striking out this first section.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President. I regret that the Chairman of the committee himself is absent; but as one of the committee, I think it advisable to say something on this section. It seems to be forgotten that property is not the only subject of taxation in this State. Licenses are issued to trades, and industries are taxed in this State. How are you going to tax them, with a declaration that taxation shall be equal and uniform? They are left entirely out. The last part of section two provides for the taxation of property, and there is nothing said anywhere about the rule applied to these other articles, and there arises a necessity for the use of these words "equal and uniform."

MR. JOHNSON. Has not the Legislature the power to pass laws to tax property uniformly?

MR. SHAFTER. I have no doubt of it, but we have the right to direct them. They have the right, likewise, to fix licenses for the carrying on of certain trades or departments of industry, but they are not property, real or personal. How are you going to have them taxed equally and uniformly? But the Constitution should declare equality and uniformity, so that the Legislature would approach it as nearly as possible, otherwise you may have any inequality that the Legislature may see fit to establish. They may make them as unequal as they please. Mr. Barbour says that by and by it will be necessary for the Legislature to tax land just as they please, to have a graduated system of taxation—that is, a man's rate of taxation may be increased as his possession increases. The desire is to leave that power to the Legislature, so that it will have it to exercise in the future. Those of you that like it can adopt it. I do not. The local Assessors have assessed property as they pleased, and there has been no authority to equalize it. There has been all the trouble. The Legislature has laid down a rule which is unequal, and the Supreme Court has saved the people. Now, it is proposed that the Legislature should be allowed free scope to do what they please, though the Legislature has been found to pass improper and unjust legislation. It strikes me that is a very strong reason for retaining it, and making it operative too. It is said that it cannot be uniform. The amendment to section two proposes that property shall be taxed according to its true value in money. How are you going to find its true value in money? The Assessor has got to say what the value of it is, and he has got to assess it according to its true value in money. Is there not the same difficulty as is involved in the word "equality?" I insist that the word "equal" is not out of place in a system of taxation. If property is all assessed at its value it is equal. I think it is wiser to retain this system. It applies not only to property, but to these other matters which are not property. This assessment of the Assessor involves the same question for him to settle as it does to settle what is equal between man and man. They are identical, and to be consistent you ought to strike out the provision that the Assessors should assess property according to its value, and leave them unlimited discretion; and leave the Legislature unlimited power to do just as it pleases. Conceal it as you may, it is the intention of some gentlemen to secure that result, and leave it to the Legislature to assess some people out of existence.

MR. HOWARD. Is it not the best way to avoid that injustice, to assess property according to its value?

MR. SHAFTER. Of course, I want both provisions to stand. I want equality and uniformity to stand, and likewise the other provision. It is a mere change of phraseology. I hope that the Convention will stick to the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope that the Convention will refuse to concur in the action of the Committee of the Whole. I believe that is the only manner in which the matter can be reached. I believe that the Chair holds that a motion to strike out would not be in order. I am not in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Solano. I think that section two is all sufficient in relation to that matter. In relation to what took place in Committee of the Whole, I was sitting here all the time, and my recollection is, that this section was debated but a very short time in relation to the words "equal and uniform." The gentleman from Alameda, Judge Campbell, raised the question that the decision of the Hibernia Bank case was founded upon the words "equal and uniform." I do not know but what it was denied by the Chairman of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, that that decision was based upon the words "equal and uniform." At any rate, some discussion took place between the gentleman from Alameda and the gentleman from Sacramento, in relation to the decision in that case, but the main discussion in relation to this matter was on section two. In the discussion of section two, it was brought forward here that section one, as adopted, was inconsistent with section two, as adopted by Committee of the Whole. Then it was that the question in relation to the words "equal and uniform," was fully discussed, and then it was that the gentleman from Sacramento, the Chairman of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, insisted that section two, as finally adopted by the Committee of the Whole, was inconsistent with the words "equal and uniform," and opposed the adoption of section two, as the committee did adopt it, upon the ground that it was inconsistent with the words "equal and uniform;" therefore I consider, Mr. President, that section one is unnecessary, and that it is fully covered by other sections. We have certainly seen that one of the most mischievous decisions in relation to taxation, was based upon the words "equal and uniform." I am in hopes, therefore, that the Convention will refuse to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Solano, and will refuse to concur in the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole. That is the motion as I understand it.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: Section one was adopted in Committee of the Whole after very considerable discussion, and after several amendments had been proposed to it. The proposition now is, in spite of that discussion, to either strike out that section, and introduce some other in place of it, or, perhaps, to adopt the section as reported by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. Now, in regard to the general proposition contained in section one, as taken from the old Constitution, that taxation shall be equal and uniform, I have heard no objection, save merely that it is an aspiration for something which, from the imperfection of human judgment, cannot be reached. But taxation ought to be equal; it ought to be uniform. There ought to be an arbitrary power upon the subject. The power of taxation, as has been well said by the judiciary of the United States, involves the power to destroy. The power of indiscriminate taxation—the power to impose a taxation which is not equal, and which is not uniform—involves the power to lay the hand of destruction upon one class of subjects in preference to another. But there is now pending an amendment which proposes to introduce in place of these words, other words from the old Constitution, in substance as follows: "All property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law." Now, in relation to that amendment, I have to say that it is bringing into section one those matters which are considered in section two of the report, and which ought to be left for consideration in that section two. In the next place, it is introducing in the new Constitution, without limitation, these very identical words which have been construed by the Supreme Court, and given a meaning which a majority of this body does not desire them to retain. The difficulty that has been complained of does not arise from the provision that taxation shall be equal and uniform, but from the judicial definition given to the word property, in which the Supreme Court held that that word property did not involve choses in action. Therefore, the adoption of that amendment involves two things which this Convention does not desire: First, the adoption, without any other definition of the word property, which will be construed as adopted with the same definition which the Supreme Court has given it, and which would exclude all choses in action, and next, it would include within the word property the growing crops, which the Committee of the Whole did not desire taxed; therefore this amendment ought not to be adopted. If we bring a portion of section two back here and put it into section one it involves a necessary reconstruction of both sections one and two.

NOTICES.

MR. BROWN. I hereby give notice that on to-morrow I will move to reconsider the vote whereby section twenty-seven, of the report of the Committee of the Whole on legislative department, was adopted.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I give notice that on to-morrow I will move to reconsider the vote adopting article four, relative to legislative department.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I move we adjourn.

Carried, and at five o'clock and ten minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

REPORTS.

MR. AYERS, from the Committee on Reporting and Printing, reported correctly engrossed: Amendment No. 402—Preamble and Bill of Rights; Amendment No. 468—Executive Department; Amendment No. 445—Pardoning Power.

PETITIONS.

MR. MOFFAT presented a petition asking for the exemption from taxation of property used exclusively for educational, charitable, and church purposes.

Laid on the table, to be taken up with the article on revenue and taxation.

MR. WATERS presented a petition from eighty citizens of San Bernardino, praying for the same.

MR. REYNOLDS. I ask to have the petition, presented by the gentleman from San Bernardino, read.

THE SECRETARY read the petition down to the names, and then hesitated, as they were mostly Spanish names, difficult to pronounce.

MR. REYNOLDS. Read the names.

[Cries of "Read!" "Read!"]

MR. MANSFIELD. I did not understand the name of that cañon these people reside in.

MR. WATERS. Now, this is no laughing matter. [Laughter.] I know every man whose name is appended to that petition. They are electors of that county, and have been for the last twenty years and more. They settled there in eighteen hundred and forty-two. That is all I have got to say on the subject.

MR. REYNOLDS. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I meant no disrespect to his constituents when I asked that the petition be read; and now, if the Clerk is unable to read the names, I suppose that the gentleman himself can read them, and I respectfully ask that the names of the petitioners be read. I understand that he is acquainted with the handwriting of most of them, and with their names, no doubt.

MR. WATERS. I will read them, if it is desired by the Convention.

MR. AYERS. They are just as good names as if they were all "Smith."

MR. BARRY. I move that the reading of the names be dispensed with.

THE PRESIDENT. The petition will lie on the table under the rule.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I wish to send up a petition, and make two or three remarks in connection therewith. I have to say that it is a petition signed by eighty citizens of Nevada County, asking for the exemption of church property from taxation. I know all of the signatures and all of the men, except one or two. They are all taxpayers, and some of them heavy taxpayers. About two thirds of them are directly interested in the welfare of churches, and represent the various denominations. They represent the Catholic, and they represent the Methodist church; they represent the Congregational church; they represent the Episcopalian church; and they represent the Jewish denomination or creed of religion. There have been so many aspersions cast upon these different petitions, that I feel like saying that the signatures upon this one, from first to last, are genuine.

MR. HILBORN. I understand these petitioners are interested. We last night resolved that no persons interested——

MR. CROSS. I object to such interruptions. The right of petition belongs to everybody.

MR. GORMAN. Suppose they are Spaniards who cannot write English?

MR. CROSS. Every citizen is entitled to respect. I wish to say that about three fourths of the persons whose names appear on this petition are not interested nor connected with any church or religious society whatever. Now, sir, I may not in all respects agree with the men who present this petition, but I deem it my duty to these men to see that they have a fair representation. It is signed by eighty citizens and taxpayers, and they have a right to send in their petitions.

THE PRESIDENT. The petition will lie on the table.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I present a petition from twenty-nine residents of Trinity County, asking for the exemption of church property from taxation.

THE PRESIDENT. It will lie on the table.

MR. KEYES. I present a petition to the same effect.

THE PRESIDENT. The same order.

RESOLUTION.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revision and Adjustment shall be composed of fifteen members, and that the President is directed to fill all vacancies.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The Committee on Revision and Adjustment now consists of nine members, and a majority of the members are present now for the first time for a number of days. It is very essential to the work of the Convention that that committee be composed of a sufficient number of men familiar with the work of the Convention, in order to revise and adjust the whole work of this Convention. I ask the adoption of this resolution in the interest of the Convention. I do not desire to be on the committee, but to see such gentlemen appointed as are proper men to go on and do the work of that committee. I hope the resolution will be adopted, and I believe it is important.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over one day under the rule.

MR. LARKIN. I ask unanimous consent that it be adopted this morning.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the resolution will be taken up by the unanimous consent of the Convention. The Chair hears no objection. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

AMENDMENT TO RULE.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: Pursuant to notice I send up a motion.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I move to amend Rule Thirty-five by adding thereto as follows: 'But when an article of the Constitution is being considered in Convention, the main question shall only apply to the section then under consideration and the amendments to such section.'"

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I gave notice of that on yesterday. I am sure, if the Convention has given attention to this matter and know what particular matter is to be voted upon, it will be unwholly unnecessary to enter into any discussion. We have been compelled here again and again to hear one section discussed and considered at a much greater length than desired, and could not call the previous question because it would reach the whole article. I propose to take a vote upon it without discussion. I believe the Convention is prepared to adopt it.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will not be adopted, and for this reason: Now, this is the final action of this body upon all the articles before it. If that rule is adopted, the first gentlemen who get in a couple of amendments, and their friends, will have the power to preclude any other amendment offered. That was done a number of times in Committee of the Whole. I know there were gentlemen here who desired to offer amendments of considerable importance who were cut off by the previous question. For instance, when the second section of the article at present under consideration is taken up, there will be a half dozen gentlemen up here with amendments. The first two that are recognized will shut off other amendments, and the balance of the Convention will be compelled to vote down amendments that do not suit them, and if the previous question is ordered it will be impossible to get amendments before this body which would be satisfactory.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I sincerely trust that the amendment moved by the gentleman from Alameda will be adopted. I have not been one who has desired to cut off debate generally upon pending propositions, but the debate which has taken place here since these articles were taken up in Convention, has convinced me that very little good can result from a renewed discussion of the propositions that are raised upon the articles or sections as proposed here. The argument, especially on yesterday, convinced me that it is but a rehash of the same arguments which were presented to this Convention sitting as the Committee of the Whole, and for one I am tired of it.

MR. McFARLAND. Does it apply to the section, or to the amendments alone? If it goes to the section I am opposed to it.

MR. SCHELL. I do not care which it is. I propose to vote for the amendment any way, and for the simple reason, that unless we adopt this rule we will never get through business here. I do not wish to sit here and hear members make the same identical arguments that they made in Committee of the Whole.

MR. GRACE. I desire to amend the amendment by saying, that it shall only apply to the amendments, and not the section.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I wish to correct my amendment by adding the two words, "then pending."

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: There is one thing about this previous question. I was out of in Committee of the Whole, and I do not think it was right. Every man ought to be allowed to speak to his amendment five minutes.

MR. AYERS. I want to go home.

["Leave." "Leave."]

MR. AYERS. I think that is all the speech that is required to recommend the adoption of the amendment to the rule.

MR. MILLS. Mr. President: I am not in favor of this amendment, for it is certain that many gentlemen sitting in the front part of the house can be seen and heard upon every occasion. They undoubtedly have debated this as much as they desire. Other gentlemen sitting far back cannot be heard, and they may not be seen—at all events they have not been seen in this Convention. Now, if the object is to shut off debate, if it was applied to those gentlemen who are so much in favor of it, and who have done all the talking, I would be in favor of it; but as to others I am not. It is impossible for us in this portion of the house to be heard at all. The Chair recognizes those who are in the more favored portions of the hall, and can be more readily recognized. We have not been heard at all on this floor, hence I am opposed to it.

MR. TINNIN. I would propose to add to the amendment: "and other amendments may be offered to the section." I think that would cure the evil.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the section as modified.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I move to amend Rule Thirty-five by adding thereto as follows: 'but when an article of the Constitution is being considered in Convention, the main question shall only apply to the section then under consideration and the amendments to such section then pending.'"

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 83 ayes to 33 noes.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: Pursuant to notice given by Mr. Wickes, I move to reconsider the vote by which the section introduced by Mr. O'Sullivan was adopted, and the article on Legislative department was ordered to a second reading.

MR. GRACE. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman did not vote in the affirmative. He rose and had his vote changed from aye to no.

MR. ESTEE. I understand that. The notice was given by Mr. Wickes.

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. I understand the gentleman to be making the motion on behalf of Mr. Wickes.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I only wish to say this, that I make this motion with a view only of perfecting the section. The last part of the section says: "Any Act passed by the Legislature, the passage of which can be proved to have been influenced by personal solicitation of members, or on the part of any person or persons interested in the same, shall be void." If that remain, there would be no such thing as an Act of the Legislature that would be permanent law to the State. It would be impossible, from the fact that if a large number of people were interested in destroying law, the only thing they would have to do would be to get some person by whom they could prove that some vote had been obtained for the Act by personal solicitation. I think it would be contrary to every principle of public policy and every principle of wise legislation to put such a clause as that in the Constitution. I therefore hope that it will be reconsidered for that purpose only.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I hope that the section will not be reconsidered at present, but when it comes up for a second reading I am ready and willing to propose an amendment to that last sentence of the section which seems objectionable to some gentlemen here. I shall move an amendment at the second reading, to strike out the words "influenced by personal solicitation," and to substitute "procured by bribery and corruption." I think that would be acceptable. I will move that at the second reading, and I do not see the necessity of reconsidering the matter now.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope the motion to reconsider will not prevail, for this reason: that whatever is required to be done can be done on its second reading. Now the section as it stands is imperfect. There is no doubt about that. It is necessary that it should be more complete if we attempt any thing of the kind. For instance, I should like a provision inserted right there that in criminal prosecutions under the section the party may be compelled to testify. Therefore I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

MR. HOWARD. Let us have the ayes and noes on that. This section as it stands now is a reproach to this body.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Brown, Dudley of Solano, Smith of San Francisco, and White.

The roll was called, and the motion to lay on the table lost by the following vote:

Howard, of Los Angeles,

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the motion made by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, to reconsider the vote by which the Convention ordered the article on legislative department read a second time.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I do not desire to detain this Convention. I am thoroughly in favor of restricting lobbying in the halls of our Legislature, but I voted against this proposition yesterday, because it contained these words, "influenced by personal solicitation." I merely rose to explain my vote on that occasion. It was not a vote against lobbying, but if it is so reconstructed, and Mr. O'Sullivan offers the amendment which he proposes to, then I will be happy to give him my support.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to say this, merely as a personal matter, because it is unnecessary to discuss this matter. It is evident that the Convention made a mistake yesterday. In the confusion I did not understand the language of this section, and voted for it under a misapprehension. Not only the clause which has been pointed out, but the whole section—if it is proposed to legislate upon the subject at all—ought to be reconstructed. I believe, that if it stands, without being reconstructed, it will be a reproach to the intelligence of the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I hope that the motion to reconsider will not prevail. If I may be allowed to use an historic expression, I would say to the majority here, "Stand to your guns!" I did not happen to be here yesterday, but I believe a large majority of the Convention voted for this section. Now, sir, it would seem to me that it would look like boy's play to reconsider it to-day. Let it soak a little while any way. Lay it away on the table, or somewhere, for a week or two, and then we can quietly take it up and it won't be noticed so much, but if we go and reconsider right the next day, it seems to me that it would bring us into ridicule with the people. I hope that it won't be passed on to-day. There is another reason why I am opposed to reconsidering it. Now, sir, we have been legislating here in favor of nearly every other class of the community but one; we have done something for nearly everybody except one large and respectable class of intelligent gentlemen in this State—I speak of the fraternity of lawyers. This is almost the only thing that seems to have been passed in their interest, and for that reason, it ought to be allowed to stand. Now, it seems to me that the pith of the whole matter is right here. What difference does it make to a man who gets a bad law passed through the Legislature in his interest, that somebody else is convicted of felony and sent to the penitentiary? He has got his money, he receives all the benefits, and some poor devil who has been solicited or been approached, goes to the penitentiary. Now, the way is to reach the man who is getting the benefit, and the only way to do that is to declare the legislation void, and then the man don't get the benefit of the fraudulent legislation. For all these reasons, I hope that the motion to reconsider will not prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: Now, I must say that I differ with the gentleman, upon the very ground of his own reasoning. It appears to me that if any body of men become convinced of having done wrong they should correct the same immediately, and not let the matter lay in soak for a few days, or a month or two. The sooner such a correction is made the better. It is an excellent thing to say, "Stand by your guns!" I have heard that saying attributed to several men. It is excellent in its force, but if you have your gun directed in the wrong way it is not necessary that you should stand by it. [Laughter.] That is the trouble with the gentleman from Sacramento. I believe it is evident to the members of this Convention that there has been a mistake committed, and I am under the impression the sooner such a mistake is rectified the better. If I wished something to stigmatize this body I would say, perpetrate the error; perpetrate something that is wrong, something that is inconsistent. But if I wished this body to stand fair in this community, and its great work to be appreciated and indorsed by the people of this State, I would say, make changes immediately where an error has occurred.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: My friend from Sacramento is rather facetious in his remarks. We have not done much for the lawyers. I believe there are sixty-two candidates for judicial positions, and we have not provided quite enough to go round. Now, the reason this motion should prevail is this: A majority of this report is in accordance with the sentiments of a majority of this body, but the last sentence of this section is not. To have stricken that out was impossible at the time of the vote. If that section had been in force for the last twenty-five years some lawyers would have been where they deserve to be now, in the penitentiary. The part I am opposed to is the last clause of the section. That proposition is wrong, because it would affect innocent parties. I refer to the records of the Legislature of this State to prove that there are certain attorneys—not the better class of attorneys, but there are men claiming to be attorneys, that have come here—that have been the tools of private interests to advocate their measures; and you will find that the subsidies of this State, that the one hundred and five thousand dollars a year we are paying to the Central Pacific Railroad, was introduced by a man who has been a Supreme Judge, and to-day is receiving a reward as the attorney of the corporations.

MR. TOWNSEND. Can you name him?

MR. LARKIN. It is not necessary. You know him. I do not say that they are any better or any worse than other men, but they come here as attorneys for private interests, and they should not be recognized as pure because they belong to an honorable profession. Lawyers ought to be as ready to cast them out, and not stand by them, as any one. I say, the first provision of that section is right. I do not care whether it be a lawyer or a farmer, the man who is guilty of that offense ought to be denounced by the people of this State; and the quicker the lawyers denounce that class of lawyers, the better for them. I hope this will be reconsidered, and that we will strike out the last clause.

Messrs. Huestis, West, Inman, Hitchcock, and Ohleyer demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The motion to reconsider prevailed.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I move to strike out the entire section.

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is not in order. The latter cannot be got at without moving to reconsider the vote by which the section was adopted.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr President: I move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention adopted the section proposed by Mr. O'Sullivan.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I presume this Convention had better understand first whether they can amend that or not. When this question was voted upon, it was voted upon under the previous question, and it carried the whole article. We changed the rule this morning, and the change of the rule does not affect what has already been done by this Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The previous question exhausted itself on the engrossment. There is no previous question on now.

MR. HERRINGTON. Very well; then I am in favor of a reconsideration.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I was not in the Convention when it voted upon this section, but had I been here, I should certainly have voted for it. I hope that the vote by which it was adopted will not be reconsidered. I hope it will be continued as a part of the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: The trouble is this, that every thing of that kind, except the last clause, which everybody conceives to be a wrong, is already provided for by the law of the State. It is in the Codes now, and if the gentleman will permit me I will read the section:

"Every person who gives or offers a bribe to any officer or member of any legislative caucus, political convention, committee, primary election, or political gathering of any kind, held for the purpose of nominating candidates for offices of honor, trust, or profit, in this State, with intent to influence the person to whom such bribe is given or offered to be more favorable to one candidate than another, and every person, member of either of the bodies in this section mentioned, who receives or offers to receive any such bribe, is punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison not less than one or more than fourteen years.

"Every member of the Legislature convicted of any crime defined in this chapter, in addition to the punishment prescribed, forfeits his office, and is forever disqualified from holding any office in this State."

The whole thing is fully provided for in the statute now—more fully, a great deal, than in this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I have remarked that I was not in the Convention when this section was presented. Now, sir, after having read the section, and more maturely considered it, I am still more convinced that this Convention should retain this section in the Constitution. The law, as passed by the Legislature, has been a dead letter. It has permitted lobbying to continue here in the Legislature of this State; lobbying, too, in the most disgraceful sense—in a criminal sense. Lobbying has been carried on in this Convention to a degree that is very disreputable, to say the least. Every gentleman knows that while most of his constituents are at home attending to their respective business, some gentleman, with some particular interest, can come here, and, by a certain influence which perhaps is not on its face of that criminal character which would indict him before a Court, control and affect the judgment of the members of a Convention or of the Legislature. I am in favor of making this criminal in our organic law. I am in favor of stamping upon it the brand of infamy in our organic law. I am in favor of saying to those barnacles of legislation that they should keep without the bar and without the hall; and whatever influence they wish to bring to bear upon the Legislature, let them do it by the right of petition, which is open to all alike. The petitions being published in the papers, become public, and all may become acquainted with the things that may be brought before the members of the Legislature to influence their votes. Now, I am in favor of the section just as it was adopted. I am not in favor of taking from it or adding to it. I think we should leave well enough alone. I do not believe that the last clause is improper, or would lead to any misunderstandings. I hope that it will be left just where it is.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: My colleague certainly does not understand the effect of this latter clause. Suppose his constituents sent up here a petition for a particular Act of the Legislature, and that Act was passed. Under this clause it would be void, because it had been solicited by a petition. Now, he certainly does not propose to maintain that kind of law. Nothing could be a greater stultification, or a greater piece of stupidity. I am in favor of this section when the latter clause is stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: The only objection to the first portion of the section is that it is code law. It is the law of the land to-day, and if it were not, any Legislature would enact a similar law. But the last clause of the section reads as follows: "Any Act passed by the Legislature, the passage of which can be proved to have been influenced by personal solicitation of members, or on the part of any person or persons interested in the same, shall be void." That clause, Mr. President, if included in the fundamental law of the State, or even the passage of it here yesterday, subjects this Convention to the ridicule and contempt of every man of intelligence—no, I would say of every school boy on the American continent. Can it be a fact that I must, on every occasion, differ with my friend and colleague, Judge McFarland? He seems to think that this is in the interest of lawyers, or against the lawyers. It seems to me that the only effect it would have is to abolish all law, because it would be utterly impossible for any law to stand the tests of the Courts under this provision. Every measure pending before the Legislature has friends and foes. They come here, gentlemen who are interested on either side of a question, and consult with their representatives, which it is their right to do; but this clause of the section would exclude them from doing so. The gentleman from Los Angeles has aptly said, it would cut off the right of petition. No gentleman would be permitted to come to Sacramento and consult with his representative in regard to the expediency or desirability of a measure under consideration. A representative would be practically isolated and cut off from his constituency. They would be deprived of the right of consultation with him, and they would be left utterly without the means of instructing their representative in their desires in regard to a measure pending. Surely, Mr. President, no gentleman can, or probably does, desire such a state of things as that.

MR. WEST. It does not mean petition at all, it says by personal solicitation.

MR. CAPLES. I myself have often come here to consult with our delegation in regard to the advisability of pending measures, certainly not corruptly. In some instances I believed that the pending measure was injurious to the public good, and I felt it to be my duty as a citizen, having an interest in common with others, to oppose it, and I used all the argument that I could bring to bear; sometimes against a proposition, sometimes in favor of it. Was I committing a crime? If I was, surely I must be very ignorant of right and wrong. I thought I was performing a duty that I owed to myself and to the public. I was using my best judgment, not for any personal ends, but for the public good. Was it right? Let the gentleman from Los Angeles, or anybody else, say that I did a wrong in using what influence I might happen to have in favor of what I believed to be for the public good. I am amazed, Mr. President, utterly amazed, that any man, old or young, great or small, wise or ignorant, should be in favor of a proposition so utterly at war with the very principle upon which our government is founded, which is the principle of representation, the principle that the people have a right to petition, to remonstrate, to instruct, and to advise with their representatives.

MR. LARKIN. Are you in favor of the first two sentences?

MR. CAPLES. I am in favor of them, but there is no need of them. They are in the Codes. I only object to the last.

MR. TINNIN. Cannot the Legislature at any time repeal the statute?

MR. CAPLES. Certainly; but the presumption is that the Legislature never would repeal a law of that kind. I have no conception of such degradation in the Legislature that would repeal a law that was inflicting a righteous penalty. California has never been cursed with such a Legislature, and never will be, whether there be a constitutional provision in regard to it or not.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I am in favor of reconsidering the vote by which the section which I proposed was adopted, and if the Convention votes to reconsider, I shall then move to amend by striking out all after the word "trust," in the eighth line, as printed in the Journal. Now, in reply to the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, and I believe Dr. Caples also said so, that the statutes of California already provided for this matter. I do not think they do provide for the first clause: "Any person who seeks to influence the vote of a member of the Legislature by bribery, promise of reward, intimidation, or any other dishonest means, shall be guilty of lobbying, which is hereby declared a felony." I do not think that is in the statutes. What I aim at, Mr. President, is to put down this infernal lobbying. It has been introduced here, even on the floor of this Convention, and I think we ought to punish it as a felony.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope the motion to reconsider will pass, and that we will strike off that portion which Mr. O'Sullivan proposes. I shall vote for the section then. I hope the Convention will reconsider.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: This question seems to be misunderstood by gentlemen who are anxious to have the matter left to the Legislature to provide for. The statutes are aimed at the offense of bribery, and among all the offenses comprehended in that term is lobbying. But these statutes are a dead letter, and always will be, unless you first open the door to prove the offense, which can only be done in the Constitution. Now, the section is imperfect. The section is no improvement on the Penal Code as it stands. Of course the latter part of the section after the word "trust," which provides for invalidating a law because some influence may have been exercised, ought to be dropped out. But the section ought to contain a proviso that in all these criminal prosecutions the witness shall be compelled to testify, and shall not withhold the testimony on the ground that it criminates himself. Compel him to do so—with a further proviso that it shall not be used afterwards in a judicial proceeding—and authorize him to be punished for contempt if he refuses, as in other cases. Take a case right here. Suppose the Fireman's Association of San Francisco raise a fund to influence legislation referring to the fire ordinances of that city. It may be a corrupt fund raised and put in the hands of some man for that purpose. I would take that man and put him on the stand and make him testify what he did with that money, and if he did not do it I would put him in jail for contempt of Court. That is what I would do. Of course, as the bill of rights now stands, you could not do it, because it provides that you cannot make a man testify against himself. I want to offer an amendment which is almost identical with a proviso in the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which is that any person may be compelled to testify in any lawful investigation or judicial proceeding against any person who may be charged with having committed the offense of bribery, or corrupt solicitation, and shall not be permitted to withhold his testimony upon the ground that it may criminate himself, or subject him to public infamy; and that such testimony shall not afterwards be used against him. Therefore, I hope the motion to reconsider will prevail, so that it can be made of some use.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope the motion to reconsider will prevail, and without consuming any time I will send up an amendment which I propose, for the information of the Convention, to show the necessity of reconsidering the vote, and that I may offer this amendment to perfect the section. I will read the amendment I propose to add to the section as it now stands:

"Any section of this Constitution, or any provision of any section thereof, of which it can be proved that any vote was cast in the affirmative by any member of this Convention who was influenced by or solicited by any person or persons, whether interested in the passage of said section or provision or not, shall be void, notwithstanding any vote of adoption of the whole Constitution by the people; and this provision shall be binding upon all Courts and in all judicial proceedings in this State."

I do not know but it will conflict with section twenty-two, but if it does you will fix it so that it won't. We are making dives at the Legislature on all hands, and assuming a great deal of virtue to ourselves. I suppose that no doubt we are the anointed of the Lord, and I have discovered by a brief career that holiness is given always to the anointed. Now we are seeking to strike at the lobby in the Legislature, and propose to squelch it; to fine members who are accused of bribery and send them to the penitentiary, and then hang them without benefit of clergy. Now if we are going to cinch the Legislature in this way, let us provide for cinching ourselves, so that we can go before the people with clean hands. When the article on corporations was up we had a lobby here, and there was great indignation about that lobby and great fear that the Convention was influenced, and that the rights of the people would be invaded thereby. Now, sir, let us strike at the other lobby. Of course there will be no lobby on the church question. I do not suppose there will be any lobby for the purpose of getting any church exemptions here, or anything of that sort. But then I want to put this provision into the Constitution to show that there was none. [Laughter.] I want the people to understand that this was a pure body; that there was no influence brought to bear upon any member; that no member was solicited to vote for any provision for endowing the sectarian schools, or anything of that sort; nor any exemption of churches from taxation; nor for exempting railroads from taxation. Why, suppose that a provision should slip in here in favor of the railroads, and it should be charged that it was done by influence. Why, we cannot afford to go before the people with this Constitution and with the provision of the gentleman from San Francisco in it against the Legislature, and not adopt this which will apply to ourselves. We must do it in order to be consistent.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I presented four or five petitions here the other day to exempt certain classes of property. They were accompanied by a letter from a Methodist minister, calling my attention to them, and asking me to give him my aid. He had the right to send the petition, but under this section, if he writes a letter to a member he must be sent to the State Prison, because it is personal solicitation. Now, what are you going to do with the section? How is it going to be proved? To whom is it going to be proved? What is the kind of testimony? Why an Act of the Legislature or the Code must prescribe the means? If it is determined that there has been personal solicitation in the passage of a law, then it is no law at all, although it has gone through all the forms and been signed by the Governor. But the Supreme Court have held that you cannot go behind that. You will have to go to work and establish a new rule. Cannot any gentleman see at once that it is impossible. These crimes ought to be prevented, it is true, but the Code already provides for it. This latter part of the section is certainly senseless, and none of it is as good as the law at present.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I apprehend there is not much controversy about the propriety of reconsidering this proposition, but I have been somewhat astonished at the position taken by my friend from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, and I thought that he had received absolution for his sins yesterday. The indications were yesterday morning that he was confessing in the lobby. I am told that after he had gone on about an hour making his statement, that the good father said to him in all kindness: "My son, it is unnecessary for you to proceed further; you can never get there. The church can never take you in."

MR. REYNOLDS. I had not money enough.

MR. TULLY. I have no doubt but what it would be a good thing for you.

MR. REYNOLDS. I could not pay cash, and he would not take scrip. I could have got there easy enough if I could have paid scrip.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: We have never had a fair vote upon this proposition. The reason why we have not had a fair vote is that this section involves two distinct propositions. One is that bribery and intimidation shall be punished, and the other is, that a law, the passage of which has been improperly influenced, shall be void. These are two distinct propositions. Many members of this ouse hdesired to call for a division of the question before the vote. It was a proposition clearly divisible, as it contained two distinct propositions. The vote was 60 ayes to 58 noes. I was one of those who did not vote at all. There was one proposition which I favored, and one which I did not. I, with four others, stood upon the floor and demanded a division of the question. Now, a rule of the house provides that a question shall be divided at the request of any member. The Chair probably misunderstood the proposition, and supposing that a division of the house was called rapped us to our seats. When again we tried to demand a division of the quest.on no such division was allowed.

I wish to say that the former part of the section I am decidedly in favor of. That part of the section does not say that a man may not give information, it says that a person who seeks to influence the vote of a member of the Legislature by bribery, promise of reward, intimidation, or any other dishonest means, shall be subject to punishment. Now, sir, if that is not a wholesome provision I do not know what is. It goes on to say that any man who is corrupted by any such means shall be ineligible to any office thereafter. Now, sir, the gentleman from Alameda says that our Penal Code provides for all these matters. Granted. But the gentleman must know that the next session of the Legislature may repeal that law. I say that it is a proper provision for the Constitution, for the reason that it provides the means by which a person may be disfranchised—the means by which a person may be disqualified from holding a legislative office; it is therefore a proper provision for the Constitution, and should not be left to the Legislature to determine. As to the latter clause, I am in favor of it, with some slight amendment. Mr. O'Sullivan's is an amendment which is a very reasonable one. I am not in favor of it in the condition in which it now is. I hope we shall have a chance to put ourselves fairly and squarely upon this question, in its proper shape.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Van Voorhies, Ohleyer, Doyle, and Andrews.

The main question was ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

The motion prevailed.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I ask leave to amend the section by striking out all after the word "trust," in the eighth line. That will strike out the words, "Any Act passed by the Legislature, the passage of which can be proved to have been influenced by personal solicitation of members, or on the part of any person or persons interested in the same, shall be void."

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objections the gentleman will have leave. The Secretary will read the section as it stands now.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Any person who seeks to influence the vote of a member of the Legislature, by bribery, promise of reward, intimidation, or any other dishonest means, shall be guilty of lobbying, which is hereby declared a felony, and it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide by law for the punishment of this crime. Any member of the Legislature, proven to have been influenced in his vote or action upon any matter pending before the Legislature, by any reward, or promise of future reward, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, in addition to such punishment as may be provided by law, shall be disfranchised, and forever disqualified from holding any office of public trust."

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: The substance of the section, as drawn up by me, I took from a series of propositions made in the last Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania, by the Honorable Jere Black, one of the most eminent of living American statesmen, a gentleman, I believe, who is respected by all who know his reputation. I have not given his exact words, but as I found it as published in the Bulletin, some months ago, and they probably did not give the exact words. The objectionable clause which I have now stricken out was part of Mr. Black's proposition, so that I got it from an eminent source. The substance of the section has been adopted in the Pennsylvania Constitution. And I believe lobbying is punishable as a crime in the State of Georgia, and in other States. What I am at is to make lobbying, bribery, and corruption, which is notorious in the halls of legislation, punishable as a crime. I have seen it, myself, for I was here all last Winter, working in the State Printing Office, and I had leisure during the day to come here and attend the sessions, and I saw the most infamous, low-browed wretches, ignorant as hogs, or dogs, who ought to be in State Prison, making thousands of dollars by selling the votes of members that they never spoke to; and if men did not vote to suit them, why, they could not get a vote in the future from the conventions controlled by these wretches. I hope the section, as I now propose to amend it, will receive the indorsement of the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: All that I have to say to this portion of the section is simply this: that it is already provided for by law in as ample a manner, and probably in a more full manner than this section provides. Now, this section attaches no penalty, but the law as it stands does. The section we have proposed to insert in the Constitution is infinitely more weak than the section as it stands in the statute. This imposes no penalty, and the law does. In other respects they are identical. But, says the gentleman from Nevada, the Legislature may repeal that law, and therefore we must put it in the Constitution. So, sir, the Legislature may repeal the law against murder, or arson, or robbery, and it is just as likely to do so as it is to repeal these sections of the Code which punish the offense of bribery. I would like to know what member of the Legislature would rise in his seat and offer to strike from the Penal Code the enactments which punish bribery? Why, he would be just as likely to offer to strike from the Penal Code the provisions which punish murder, or any other offense. But this would be a different law, if the suggestion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, was carried out, by attaching to it an amendment providing that all the parties should be witnesses, and that their testimony may be taken, notwithstanding they may be guilty parties, but shall not be used against those who give it. That would have some vital force and effect. That is not now in the statute, and with that amendment, I would cheerfully vote for the section.

Digitized by Google

MR. BARBOUR. As soon as I get an opportunity I will offer that amendment.

MR. CAMPBELL. But as it stands now it is not half as good as the statute.

MR. MURPHY. I move the previous question.

MR. LARKIN. The gentleman desires to offer a further amendment.

MR. MURPHY. I withdraw.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I send up my amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section the following: 'Any person may be compelled to testify in any lawful investigation or judicial proceeding against any person who may be charged with having committed the offense of bribery or corrupt solicitation, or with having been influenced in his vote or action as a member of the Legislature by reward, or promise of future reward, and shall not be permitted to withhold his testimony upon the ground that it may criminate himself, or subject him to public infamy; but such testimony shall not afterwards be used against him in any judicial proceeding, except for perjury in giving such testimony.'"

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer that amendment, and the reason and necessity for it must be so apparent that I will only say a word or two. Bribery and corruption or corrupt solicitation is never proven, and the reason is plain that it must be proven out of the mouths of those who have been themselves connected in some way with it. They can decline to answer, on the ground that it would criminate themselves. Now, the present bill of rights prevents the use of that testimony, and a statute containing that proviso, in the absence of the constitutional provision that they shall be brought up and used as witnesses, and that their testimony should not be used against them, might be claimed to be void, because in conflict with the bill of rights. But if we insert in the Constitution a proviso that the testimony of these accomplices shall be used, and that they shall not be allowed to withhold it, we might, at least once in awhile, convict a guilty party, and nothing else will.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Any section of this Constitution, or any provision of any section thereof, of which it can be proved that any vote was cast in the affirmative by any member of this Convention who was influenced by or solicited by any person or persons, whether interested in the passage of said section or provision or not, shall be void, notwithstanding any vote of adoption of the whole Constitution by the people; and this provision shall be binding upon all Courts and in all judicial proceedings in this State."

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order.

MR. LARUE. Is the motion to strike out the section in order?

THE PRESIDENT. The question comes to a direct vote on the section.

REMARKS OF MR. MILLS.

MR. MILLS. Mr. President: I would like to know why the word "intimidation" is used. Now, sir, we are well aware that in respect to the organization of parties in this State a powerful influence is exercised. This might apply to party pressure. We, ourselves, know that there has been an influence at work here during the time we have been in session. There is a Democratic party, the Republican party, and the Workingmen's party. They hold clubs, and the person that undertakes to go contrary to the direction of the club will be intimidated. He may be turned out of that club, sir, and the worst kind of intimidation would be brought to bear upon him, and the members of that club would be guilty of felony under this provision. We have seen the practical application of the rule here. Now, sir, it looks to me as if this proposition presented in this body by these gentlemen was calculated to be a direct slur upon themselves. How does it stand here? Gentlemen that belong to a particular club turned out a member because he did not vote as they directed. Are those persons guilty of a felony? Under the provisions of this section it seems to me that a jury would convict them, and necessarily they would go to the penitentiary.

MR. BARBOUR. Has anybody intimidated you?

MR. MILLS. No; but the gentleman on my left has been intimidated, or an attempt was made to intimidate him. I understand this proposition as well, perhaps, as the gentleman who just spoke to me. I hold that the provision in the statute is better than this section, and much more clear. It cannot have a judicial interpretation. Who will undertake to interpret the word intimidation? Who will be controlled by it? It is got up here for buncombe, more than anything else. It seems to me that it is unnecessary to place this provision in the Constitution.

MR. REYNOLDS. I beg to state that there is no buncombe in that amendment of mine.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I do not thoroughly understand the meaning of this section, although I understand the meaning of the amendment offered by Mr. Reynolds, of San Francisco, and I believe there was a good deal in it. I think the first sentence of this section is wrong. I am as much opposed to lobbying and corrupting Legislatures as anybody. In the commencement of the session I offered an article something similar to this, and it was intended to cover the same idea, although expressed in different words. Now, if the first part of the section ending at the word "crime" is stricken out, I will vote for it, and that will cover the whole ground. Therefore I will offer an amendment, if it is in order.

MR. WALKER. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Messrs. Ayers, West, White, and O'Sullivan also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the section as amended, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Barbour, Condon, Joyce, Doyle, and White.

The roll was called, and the section was adopted by the following vote:

LOTTERIES.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment as a substitute for section twenty-six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 26. No lottery nor any gift enterprise, nor any scheme in the nature of such, shall be permitted in this State; nor shall the sale of lottery tickets, gift enterprise tickets, or tickets in any scheme of the nature of a lottery or gift enterprise, be permitted in this State. Nor shall any stock board, or stock exchange, or other association, or stock market for the buying or selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations, be permitted to exist or to transact such business in this State. All contracts for the sale of shares of the capital stock of any corporation or association on margin, or to be delivered at a future day, shall be void. All contracts made in violation of, or evasive of the foregoing provisions, shall be void. It is hereby made the duty of the Legislature to enforce this section by appropriate legislation."

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: The previous question cut me off from an opportunity to offer this substitute yesterday, and now that the article is before the Convention I offer a substitute for the section. When in Committee of the Whole this section was under consideration, the committee became excited with debate and in one of those freaks of fancy—one of those peculiar moods—got in the habit of voting down every amendment, and this amendment went by the board without, as I believe, due consideration. I find no fault, but only take this opportunity to have it considered. I will not insult the intelligence of this Convention by attempting to prove or show that the stock-gambling business as conducted by these stock boards in San Francisco is a curse to the State, and is one of the worst diseases of the social system and the body politic that exists.

MR. HALE. Will you point out the difference between the section as adopted by the Convention and that amendment?

MR. REYNOLDS. I will. The difference is that the section passed by the Committee of the Whole provides that the Legislature shall pass laws to regulate or prohibit the buying and selling of the shares of the capital stock of corporations in any stock board. I undertake to say that that will not reach the difficulty, and in that respect I am confirmed by the opinion of all of the best men in San Francisco who have paid any attention to the subject. I was saying that I will not argue that question at all. I will not consume time on that point. That it is an evil that ought to be extirpated there is no doubt. That will be conceded. It has been conceded by nearly every gentleman with whom I have spoken on the subject in this Convention. The amendment I offer is a positive prohibition of the stock board, placing it upon the same footing as lotteries. I outlaw them both by the same provision. That it ought to be done there is not a reasonable doubt. For the purpose of illustrating that position better than I can by any words that I can say, I will ask the Secretary to read a paragraph from an editorial article printed in the San Francisco Chronicle, of January tenth, upon this subject. The subject treated of is the section adopted by the Committee of the Whole, and upon that question, under the heading, "Cut out the cancer," the article discourses as follows:

THE SECRETARY read:

"We have heretofore commented favorably upon this section as much better than nothing, and we are still decidedly of that opinion. The more we reflect on the subject, however, the more we are convinced of the necessity for something stronger. The stock operations carried on at the boards in this city have become so utterly bad that it is doubtful if they can be even partially cured by regulation, and we know by experience how potent in the legislative halls is the power of the stock manipulators. In Nevada they carried through the Legislature a measure in their favor, though all the members had been elected upon a pledge entirely in opposition to it. At the last session of our Legislature they defeated, with coin, a popular bill to regulate the buying and selling of stocks.

"The fact that the mines most in need of regulations as to reports, etc., are outside of the State and difficult to reach, is another important consideration. In any view it is better and easier to prohibit a recognized and unnecessary evil than to attempt the regulation of it. The mining stock boards stand in this latter position. They are not at all necessary to the mines. They add nothing to the bullion product; on the contrary, they foster the habit of pure stock gambling, with all its attendant and incalculable evil consequences. It will be difficult, if not impossible, to confine the boards to their legitimate functions as mediums of exchange. In the hands of men ambitious only for wealth, with little regard for the means by which they get it, the devices for evading a statutory regulation will be many and hard to circumvent. Hence, the shortest and surest remedy for the manifold evils of the system will be to prohibit it altogether. That this can be done, we know by what has been done in preventing lotteries. As to the policy of doing it, we think there is hardly any necessity for argument. It is sufficient to point to the condition of our people to-day—thousands and tens of thousands of whom have been wrecked in fortune, and too many started upon a career of crime."

MR. REYNOLDS. In the same connection I ask the Secretary to read one more paragraph from the same paper, of January fifteenth, on the same subject, and I ask the respectful attention of the Convention to the opinions expressed.

THE SECRETARY read:

"ABOLISHING THE STOCK BOARDS.

"Within a few weeks the Constitutional Convention will finish its work and adjourn. As the end of its session approaches, the prospect of framing a document which will be acceptable to the people, improves. Many proposed changes in our system of taxation, relative to the judiciary, and other matters, are highly important and are greatly needed. None, however, are of more consequence than the proposed inhibition of the mining stock business. We desire to again call the attention of the Convention to this subject, and to urge the adoption of a more stringent remedy than the one already indorsed. Nothing short of a positive prohibition of the whole stock exchange system will fully remedy the evil. We suggest as a substitute for the clause heretofore adopted, something like the following: 'All contracts for the purchase and sale of the shares of the capital stock of a corporation in any stock board, stock exchange, or other association for the buying and selling of stocks, shall be null and void, as against public policy, and such stock boards shall be suppressed as a public nuisance.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I cause these extracts to be read with a view of showing the drift of public opinion on this subject, not for the purpose of convincing this Convention that the stock business ought to be rooted out, but only to show that public opinion is setting in the direction of the extirpation of the whole business, on the ground of public policy, precisely as we prohibit gambling, precisely as we prohibit lotteries. I have taken much pains to ascertain the effect that such a provision would have upon the question of the adoption of this Constitution, in the vote of the people of San Francisco. I wrote to numbers of persons, among them Mr. Kearney, to ascertain his views in regard to the matter, and whether it would be in order to extirpate the business, and he has answered in the affirmative.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time is up.

Messrs. Huestis, West, Van Voorhies, Pulliam, and Van Dyke demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention, on a division, by a vote of 50 ayes to 41 noes.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Reynolds, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Farrell, Huestis, Smith of San Francisco, Bell, and Dowling.

ON RECONSIDERATION.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: Yesterday I gave notice that I would to-day move to reconsider the vote by which section twenty-seven of the report of the Committee on Legislative Department was adopted by this body. It is with regard to dividing the Congressional districts of this State. I do not propose to make a speech at all upon the subject, but I am satisfied that the amendment of the gentleman from Napa, Mr. Shurtleff, was not properly understood ——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is mistaken. No such notice was given.

MR. BROWN. It is published here in the Journal.

THE PRESIDENT. The notice was to reconsider the vote by which the section was adopted. No such vote has ever been taken. You should have given notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was adopted.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I wish to call up the reconsideration of section twenty-four. I gave notice yesterday. I have nothing further to say.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's motion would be out of order.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. White gave notice. It will be found on page seven of the Journal.

THE PRESIDENT. The notice should have been given to reconsider the vote by which the Convention adopted the amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole as amended. There is no such notice given, and, therefore, the motion is not in order. You cannot get to your amendment without reconsidering that vote.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer an additional section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION —. No money shall be appropriated for the payment of any religious services in institutions controlled by the State, or in either House of the Legislature."

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: In this great American Republic since its foundation it has been established as supreme law that there is a total separation between Church and State; that we shall have no religion, no State church; but a clear recognition of the fact that every man has a right to worship God as he pleases. As American citizens we glory in this firm establishment of religious freedom and the rights of conscience, and with the light of history before us we have good reason to rejoice that the founders of the Republic had the good judgment to declare man's right to religious as well as civil freedom. Religious fanaticism and sectarian bigotry have cost the shedding of rivers of blood among our ancestors in Europe, and we ought to thank God that we are rid of the curse of these crimes against humanity. The theory of our Government plainly implies that there is an absolute separation of Church and State. Our fundamental law declares so in substance, yet, Mr. President, instances are not wanting going to show that we do not strictly carry it out. The employment of chaplains, I care not to which sect they belong, is a clear violation of that separation of Church and State which the fathers established as the corner-stone of American liberty. The citizens of the United States are not only cosmopolite in character, as regards race, but are also men of diverse religious beliefs, and it is a well known fact that the majority of the American people are not attached to any church. Hence it is perfectly proper that the Government should say to all ministers of religion: "Stay where you belong, attend to your churches; the State will take care of itself without your influence or interference." This thing had better be stopped, and the time to stop it has now come, and by so doing we can save good preachers from becoming bad politicians.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: After the amendment of the gentleman is seconded and voted down, I have an amendment to offer before this article is ordered engrossed.

MR. REED. Mr. President: I wish to make a suggestion to the gentleman that he might attach to his amendment, so as to make it a felony for any one to read the Lord's Prayer within three miles of any public institution in this State.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. O'Sullivan, Beerstecher, Lindow, Freud, and Brown.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section thirty-eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In lines eight and nine, strike out 'grant' and insert 'gift.'"

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: The word "grant" signifies convey or conveyance, and that would prohibit the State from conveying anything for a valuable consideration.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I move that the article be engrossed and read a second time, and on that I move the previous question.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The same gentleman cannot make a motion, and at the same time move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. VAN DYKE. I withdraw my motion for the purpose of allowing the gentleman from Napa to introduce his amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman cannot do it without consent.

Messrs. Larkin, Freeman, Dunlap, and Condon also demanded the previous question.

The Convention refused to order the previous question, on a division, by a vote of 48 ayes to 59 noes.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-seven by adding the following at the end of the section: 'Any county or city and county containing a population greater than the number required for one Congressional district, shall be formed into one or more Congressional districts, according to the population thereof; and any residue, after forming such district or districts, shall be attached by compact adjoining Assembly districts, to a contiguous county or counties, and form a Congressional district. In dividing a county or city and county into Congressional districts, no Assembly district shall be divided so as to form a part of more than one Congressional district, and every such Congressional district shall be composed of compact contiguous Assembly districts.'"

MR. LARKIN. That proposition was voted down yesterday.

MR. SHURTLEFF. It is not the same amendment. It is a part of that amendment, but it is not the entire amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is substantially the same amendment. The question is upon ordering this article to be engrossed and read a second time.

Carried.

NOTICE.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that on to-morrow, February seventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, I will move to amend Rule Twenty-four of the Standing Rules of this body, by striking out the word "five," in line two, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "fifteen."

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume the consideration of the article on revenue and taxation. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Dudley.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Solano.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I wish to call attention to the fact that if this section is adopted, this substitute, it will conflict with section two, which says, that certain classes of property shall be taxed according to its true value in money. I desire the Convention to understand that they are inconsistent.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: The amendment of the gentleman from Solano will not better the section any. The same thing will be found at the end of the section reported by the committee, unless he moves to strike out the whole section. As it stands there are other portions of this article which require that certain kinds of property shall be taxed according to its true value in money any way. If it be in order I will propose to amend the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order at present.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Stuart, Wyatt, West, and Webster.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Dudley.

Division was called for, and the amendment was lost by a vote of 43 ayes to 62 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Smith of San Francisco, Pulliam, Schomp, and Hitchcock.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

TAXATION OF PROPERTY.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, or unsecured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real and personal, according to its true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property, and credits not so secured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real, personal, or mixed, according to their true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize a deduction of debts due to bona fide residents of this State from credits, except in the case of debts or credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the substitute of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson.

SPEECH OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I gave notice, after the adoption of section five, that I would make a slight change in the phraseology of section two, so as to agree with our action in adopting section five. I assume that it is the sense of this Convention that solvent credits and mortgages shall be taxed. That is my position, and I believe it is the position of a majority of this Convention. Section two was adopted by a vote of something like seventy-five to twenty-five. There had been a long discussion on this subject, and there was a great difference of sentiment in reference to the matter, but after the subject had been thoroughly discussed—almost exhausted—it was finally voted upon, and section two adopted; therefore I assume that it is in accord with the sentiment of this Convention. The only change made is a slight change in the phraseology, so as to accord with section five. But if this Convention refuses to tax mortgages and solvent credits, then we have got to go through this whole work of taxation again. We will have to commence de novo and adopt some kind of a system of taxation. Section two and section five are not entirely in accord. Of course every one knows that a mortgage is not an interest in real estate, in this State, it is simply a security; but the committee here, in the exercise of a wise judgment, have said, that as far as taxation is concerned, a mortgage shall be an interest in the real estate. Then there is another interest, the interest which is held by the owner of the land; there are two interests then represented in section five, the interest of the mortgagor, and the interest of the mortgagee; those two interests constitute the land. Now, sir, I say that the mortgage security, and the interest which the owner of the land has, outside and above the mortgage, constitute the land. Now, how is this tax apportioned? Why, in this way: We say the mortgagor shall pay taxes on his interest, and the mortgagee shall pay taxes on his interest; it is then apportioned between them upon the principle of equity and equality, and I say there is no section here which will commend itself more to this Convention than section five; it is based upon justice and equity. A man, when he gives a mortgage on his land, does not wish to pay taxes on the entire land, but only on the land less the mortgage, and that is exactly what we have provided for in section five. Now, sir, heretofore it has been the land only that has been taxed, but under this scheme, we tax the interest of the mortgagor and the interest of the mortgagee, and the two interests constitute the entire property. Now, sir, I say, as far as secured debits are concerned, this matter is settled by section five, upon the principle of equity and justice.

So far I have been talking only about secured credits, and I will leave that subject. Unsecured credits have no element of real estate about them. They do not constitute a lien upon land. They are not recorded in the Recorder's office. They do not give notice to subsequent purchasers. But, inasmuch as they are representatives of value, we say that they ought to be taxed. But it will be urged that there ought to be a deduction from these unsecured credits. Now, sir, we are trying to get at this equitably. We have left the secured credits, having adjusted them on an equitable basis; and now we come to the unsecured credits, and we want to know upon what basis we can apportion them. I say, that one intangible thing should be set off against another intangible thing; that an intangible indebtedness should be set off against intangible credits. We have given the Legislature power to authorize these deductions when the debts are due bona fide residents of this State. The Legislature is authorized to deduct those intangible debts from intangible credits, and the Constitution has even thrown a check around that, by declaring that these debts must be due bona fide residents of this State; wherefore, without this, parties might set up that they were owing parties outside of the State, and the thing could never be found out. By permitting these deductions to be made only where debts are due residents of this State, I say we have thrown around it a safeguard that ought to commend itself to your approval. Now, some gentlemen may say that it does not go far enough. Now, we must realize this thing: that if we cannot obtain exactly what we want, it is the part of wise statesmanship to approximate it as nearly as we can; and, therefore, I argue that we ought to sustain this provision, because it is an elastic power given to the Legislature. Circumstances may arise hereafter which would justify deductions; therefore, our representatives may be instructed to do so. I think it is sufficiently iron-bound without making it more so. Upon the other hand, there are gentlemen who are not in favor of making deductions. These antagonisms must be reconciled the best way we can. I maintain that this provision ought to commend itself to the judgment of this Convention. It will be seen that in section two we speak of credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, or other obligation affecting property. In section two we are talking about credits so secured; in section five we are talking of the security.

[At this point in the speaker's remarks the gavel fell.]

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Is a substitute in order?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir.

MR. KELLEY. Is an amendment to the amendment in order?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir.

SPEECH OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I have not been able, from hearing the amendment read, clearly to understand the change which it makes to section two as amended by the Committee of the Whole. I take it for granted, however, that its purpose is only to mature the section reported by the Committee of the Whole. Now, sir, I trust that neither this amendment nor section two itself, will be adopted, and I take issue with the gentleman from Sonoma upon the proposition which he has very clearly stated, that section two, formulated by the Committee of the Whole, as amended by him, is in harmony with section five, as adopted by the Committee of the Whole. If it is, the argument is good; otherwise, it falls to the ground. If this amendment should be voted down, and the Convention should refuse to concur in the section, I propose to offer a substitute to section two, which has been known to the Convention as the Boggs amendment. I propose to do that, sir, for the purpose of solving the whole scheme of taxation upon property—tangible and intangible—upon the basis of the principle enunciated in section five. The principle is this: it deals with the contract, or it deals with the debt intended to be secured by the contract. And in order to show that this interpretation is correct, I call the attention of the Convention to the terms of section five. True, it says that a "mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation by which a debt is secured, shall, for the purpose of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an interest in the property affected thereby," yet it deals with the credit secured by the contract or mortgage, for it proceeds to enact that in the distribution between the contracting parties each shall be assessed separately; that is, the land and the debt secured by mortgage or deed of trust, shall be assessed to their respective owners, and they shall be taxed upon it. It means this: If A loans B five thousand dollars on B's land worth ten thousand dollars, that for the purpose of taxation, there shall be assessed to A as the loaner or creditor a sum equal to the amount of his debt secured by the mortgage, or five thousand dollars; and there shall be assessed to B, as the owner of the land, the residue of the value of the land—five thousand dollars. The land represents the aggregate value, and it is distributed between the parties. As Mr. Johnson says, every lawyer knows that a mortgage is not an interest in the land in a legal sense. It is here, however, declared to be such for the purposes of taxation, and only for the purposes of taxation, not modifying the general rule of law in other respects. This tax may be paid by either of the parties. If it is paid by the mortgagor, it shall be deemed an investment by him in the land in a sum equal to the tax so paid. If upon the other hand it is paid by the owner of the land it shall be deemed a payment on the debt. That is the principle of section five. Now, what distinction can the gentleman or anybody else draw between that and an unsecured debt. The only difference in the world is the degree of security, and the procedure by which its payment is enforced. In all other respects they stand upon the same plane, both in law and in equity. Now, sir, one more point. What is the principle upon which section five proceeds? Why this distribution? Because in all cases the property of the debtor represents in itself the value and the amount of the debt. The debtor's property represents the debt he owes the creditor, and it is by reason of the fact that he has been required to pay the taxes upon that which in fact he does not own that this complaint has gone up all over the State from the debtor class. Now, the Boggs amendment deals with all these debts alike. It proceeds in all cases upon the assumption that the debtor's property represents the amount of the debt he owes. If he pays the taxes, he is allowed a rebate when he comes to pay up his debt. It is plain, simple, and efficient, and the rule applies to all solvent debts, whether secured or not. It brings them all under this rule, and distributes the burden of taxation between the parties according to the interest which they have.

SPEECH OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: When this matter was up before the Committee of the Whole, I endeavored, unsuccessfully, for several days, to introduce an amendment which might be supported by those who believed we should tax the real and not the ideal. I was not successful, and I suppose, under the system here, I will not have the opportunity. I believe that we should tax things, and not mere agreement about things. I believe in taxing what is material, what occupies space, what may be perceived, what we can touch and feel and taste and smell. I believe, sir, that no gentleman here will say that if a man of responsibility, upon sufficient security, agrees and contracts to deliver to another a thousand bushels of wheat within a year, that contract should be taxed in the hands of either party. But, sir, if he agrees to give him a thousand dollars in a year, that must be taxed. Now, where is the difference? I say there is none in the world. The one is not property; it is not a thing; it is not tangible; you cannot put your hand upon it; it does not add to the wealth of the country. It exists merely in the contemplation of the mind, and why should the promise to pay one thousand dollars be taxed any more than the promise to deliver one thousand bushels of wheat?- Now, if I have an opportunity, I shall offer this amendment:

Digitized by Google

"All property, except private property exempt from taxation under the laws of the United States, public property of the United States, of this State, or any municipality thereof, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained by law; provided, that growing crops, debts, or credits, and choses in action, whether or not secured by mortgage or other liens, shall not be considered property for purposes of taxation."

Now, there has been a great deal of nice reasoning about what is property. I suppose it would not be improper to say that a debt, in one sense, is property. But my amendment says that a mere debt, or contract, or chose in action, is not property for the purpose of taxation. I do not believe it is for the best interests of this county to enforce this rule in relation to debts and credits, and other intangible property. You cannot do it uniformly. It opens the door for perjury and frauds. You never can have anything like uniformity, and such a system of taxation will not redound to the interests of the country. What do laboring men want? Why, employment. What makes employment? Enterprise. What makes enterprise? Money. The law that will make money plenty, and encourage its coming, will subserve the best interests of all classes.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: If this Convention, instead of trying to adopt a scheme by which these credits could be taxed, had sought to make out a plan how not to do it, I think they would have accomplished their object. I have studied this proposition ever since it was adopted in Committee of the Whole.

MR. JOHNSON. Are you in favor of taxing credits or not?

MR. DUDLEY. Yes, sir.

MR. JOHNSON. Except by an income tax.

MR. DUDLEY. I should prefer that. I undertake to say here, without fear of contradiction, that there is no possibility of any middle ground between the system which taxes credits without rebate, and that system which wipes them out entirely. Now, sir, section two starts out with the proposition that these credits shall be taxed. And then it says the Legislature may provide that they may be wiped off the assessment roll by indebtedness owing by the parties to whom these credits are due. Now, every gentleman here understands how easily these debts may be manufactured. It is a relief to the wealthy, but not to the poor man, because he is generally in debt, with no debts owing to him. Section five provides that, not only may the amount of these credits be deducted from the value of the debts due the party, but that they may be taken from the assessed value of actual property; and after this Convention provides such a scheme as that in regard to secured indebtedness, you cannot possibly convene any Legislature in this State that would not avail themselves of the privilege granted here, and extend the provision to unsecured indebtedness. There is no reason for this distinction between the two—none whatever. Now, I am satisfied, from the temper of this body, that the Convention is not going to adopt what I consider the most practical plan of assessing these credits, provided they are to be taxed at all. They are not going to do it. The discussion here on section five has shown that very plainly. But this proposition effectually closes the door to getting any more revenue than we are now getting. It cannot decrease the rate; it cannot increase the assessment roll. It cannot decrease the burden of the taxpayers. And the very first time a man is assessed who has his estate mortgaged, he will curse the Convention that adopted this system. The result will be an increased burden upon owners of land throughout the State. Land to-day is assessed for as much as any other property in the State, and yet, in many portions of the State it is not assessed any higher than the mortgage value; and when the Assessor comes around, and finds there is nothing to be taxed beyond the amount of the mortgage, he will insist upon putting up the valuation. Land heretofore assessed at thirty dollars an acre, will be assessed at fifty and sixty dollars an acre. The mortgage creditor will compel the borrower to pay the tax on the mortgage, and the only result of this whole scheme will be to put up the valuation on landed property, while all other property will remain the same. By this means you effectually close the door so that the Legislature can never get at anything, under the last section of this article. It is a burdensome system, and one that will be unsatisfactory to the people. It is a delusion and a snare. I hope that section two will be stricken out, and that some gentleman will offer a substitute.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I believe, as the gentleman who has just taken his seat believes, that all property should be taxed. The time of this Convention is limited, and it is no time to open up a general discussion upon the subject of taxation. I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson, will prevail. In order that we may more clearly understand wherein his amendment will harmonize the section with section five, I ask the gentleman to explain wherein it will harmonize them.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I can explain that. Section five is in respect to an interest in property, where that interest is manifested by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation. It all affects property. The only change affected by this amendment is simply to state that in unambiguous language. In order to make it accord with section five, we have inserted in section two the words, "credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property." In the clause in respect to deductions, the same language is used.

MR. WEST. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

SPEECH OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not pass this Convention without being remodeled. The main object of taxation is for the support of the government of the State. It is for the payment of the expenses of the State government, in order that each individual may be protected in his person and property. The manner in which this amendment is brought in is intended to throw a cloud upon the subject-matter. Now, sir, we as countrymen do not ask the adoption of this. When we buy a piece of property——

MR. WHITE. Who are you speaking of when you say we of the country.

MR. WELLER. No reference to you, sir. [Laughter.] I refer to those who live in the country. The question is this: They come out in the first place and say that all the obligations which they hold against the country people, and all the demands they hold against them in the shape of notes or mortgages, are mere moonshine. They are not tangible. They are not property. Now, what is the result going to be if section five is adopted? Why those of us who are a little short, and have had to borrow money, will get a short notice from the bank, informing us that our note is due, and must be paid at once. There is where the moonshine of the thing will come in. I look upon this section five as merely a mask to cover up the very injustice that has been practiced heretofore. Now, I am opposed to the idea of deductions. That is where the moonshine comes in. The men who hold these mortgages should be taxed separately and independently of the land. They are protected by the Government, their property is protected, and they should be compelled to bear their portion of the burden.

This great question of taxation has been written about, and talked about, and thought about; Commissioners have been appointed to investigate it, and to find out the best mode of raising funds for the support of Government, and yet the conclusions they have arrived at have not been equal nor just in any respect whatever. They have not yet found the philosopher's stone. We cannot undertake to regulate people's business. We cannot regulate the indebtedness which exists between individuals. We don't propose to inquire into men's private business affairs. We propose to tax everything that a person has; every thing that he can call his own; all his means. When I buy a piece of land, and the seller chooses to accommodate me by taking only a portion of the purchase price, I do it with my eyes open to the fact that I will have to pay taxes on the land. When a man comes into your town to buy property, he will be very apt to inquire what the tax is upon property before he invests his money. He knows what he will have to pay, and let him regulate his private business accordingly. Equal taxation has never been arrived at by any Government in the world, and probably never will; but we should get as near to perfection as possible. Now, there is nothing in this article. It will lead to complications and litigation, and the result of litigation is never in favor of the lower and industrial classes, because they always pay their taxes. It will not benefit them. On the contrary, their burdens will be increased by these provisions. There can be no other result. There is no usury law, and the lender, if he is compelled to pay this tax, will simply add it on in the shape of interest. So that clause is a blind; it is nothing but moonshine. The only true rule is this: tax every interest in the State; tax every person for what he has, and what he calls his own.

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: If we are wrong about the theory of taxation, as laid down in section two and section five, we desire to be set right, because we are anxious to have all property taxed. There is no desire to exempt any class of property or any class of indebtedness. Now, the amendment of Judge Johnson, as I understand it—and I will say that I may be mistaken—but I am obliged to take an opposite view from that maintained by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Weller. The change which that amendment contemplates in nowise affects real, personal, or mixed property—in nowise. It allows no deduction on the value of real, personal, or mixed property; no deduction from the value of tangible property as regards taxation. The amendment reads as follows:

"SEC. 2. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property, and credits not so secured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real, personal, or mixed, according to their true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize a deduction of debts due to bona fide residents of this State from credits, except in the case of debts or credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

The original section reads as follows:

"SEC. 2. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, or unsecured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real and personal, according to its true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

The object is simply this: to tax credits, not to tax the property. It does not affect tangible property, whether real or personal. It proposes to allow parties to deduct debts from credits, and that is the law to-day, as I understand it. Now the gentleman from Santa Clara has spoken mostly in regard to section five. I know that the argument has been that the borrower, or in other words the farmer, will be obliged to pay the tax in any event. That the borrower must pay the tax. That is the cry. Well, now, let us see what effect section five will have. If the deduction contemplated in section five is not allowed, and the theory of Mr. Weller and those who hold with him is correct, then if a certain parcel of land is worth ten thousand dollars, and that parcel of land be assessed for ten thousand dollars, and there be a mortgage of five thousand dollars on that land, then, if there be no deduction allowed from the assessed valuation of that land, the borrower in that case is obliged to pay the tax upon the mortgage, for five thousand dollars, and upon the whole property, worth ten thousand dollars. Thus he pays taxes upon fifteen thousand dollars. That is the legitimate consequence of the argument of the gentleman. If no deduction be allowed he pays taxes upon the assessed valuation and upon the mortgage, making a total of fifteen thousand dollars.

MR. WELLER. Is not the rate of taxation lessened accordingly?

MR. BEERSTECHER. No, sir. On the other hand, if we adopt section five, as the section stands, the man owning the property worth ten thousand dollars has a right to deduct the mortgage—five thousand dollars—and he pays taxes for only five thousand dollars. So that if he should be compelled to pay the tax upon the mortgage also, as the gentleman claims is inevitable, even then he would only be paying taxes on the full value of the land, or ten thousand dollars. I am unable to draw any other conclusion from it. I am unable to see why the farmer, by the express provisions of section five, is not benefited to the extent of five thousand dollars. On the other hand it provides for the taxation of mortgages. It gives preference in favor of the man owning the land, and he has a claim as against the demand of the person owning the mortgage. Now, the object of Mr. Johnson is to harmonize section two and section five. It does not allow deductions upon any property of any character other than as provided in section five.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I was not fortunate enough to be here before. But I wish to say a few words in regard to what I consider to be the correct principles of taxation. The mind in this entire discussion has been directed to property rather than to individuals, thereby misleading. We tax individuals and not property. What is a tax? It is the tribute required of the citizen for the support of the Government. Property is simply used to measure the amount that is contributed. I care nothing about property, but leave that out of the question. The question is, how much protection has A received? How much should he pay? Now, sir, this section as it reads is a delusion and a snare. The amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma is the only one that meets my view. We are here trying to legislate for the debtors. That is none of our business. It is mere political buncombe to legislate in a way that will encourage indebtedness. All this property should pay. This system of deductions is a delusion. Let them all pay. Therefore, I am in favor of the Moreland amendment. It is the only correct principle by which we can work this matter out. If you adopt this proposed section when you go back home you will be laughed at.

SPEECH OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I agree fully with the gentleman that taxes ought to be levied on the people, but not in any other sense than upon what he is worth. Upon that he ought to be taxed, and not one cent more. That is the principle of taxation. Now, sir, if I had a farm worth ten thousand dollars, and have borrowed five thousand dollars on it, am I worth ten thousand dollars? Don't I owe five thousand dollars? But I am taxed ten thousand dollars, and according to Mr. Weller I am taxed fifteen thousand dollars. And then the rich man will come up and swear that he has one hundred thousand dollars, and perhaps a great deal more. Why not tax him also? Why not tax him? Why tax me because I am in debt? How any honest man can come here and propose to tax a poor man for what he does not own is more than I can see. You propose to tax the rich man only on the property he has in hand. It is all very fine to argue for those who are above all these things. They never owe a dollar, and never know what it is to pay a double tax. They never know what it is to pay to the very utmost on their land. I tell you, sir, I have paid on my land one third of every dollar I made out of it. Then after a man has paid on every bit of land he has, then some of you propose to tax him on what he owes. I trust and hope that the heart of this Convention is different. I trust and hope that we will stand by the men who are struggling to keep up, the farmers and business men who are struggling to live. I hope we will not compel them to be taxed in that way. I cannot understand how a man with feeling, and heart, and honesty can entertain such a proposition. I trust that the amendment of Mr. Johnson will prevail. I am in favor of taxing everything, but I am not in favor of crushing the struggling classes, and driving them off the farm, and sending them to the City of San Francisco to starve and go hungry as they were last Winter in the very heart of that city. I was there last Winter and saw a number of ladies and men handing money and food out. It was a sorry sight for the State of California that fourteen thousand white citizens should be there starving. I tell you, sir, that this must be stopped. I hope this amendment and section five will be adopted, for nothing else will satisfy the people of the State of California. The people have demanded this and nothing else will do.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I have, before, denounced this proposition as a delusion and a snare. I rise now merely to enter my protest against this folly which is included in these two sections—it is too plain to waste time in talking about it. The general expression, upon all sides, is the same. These gentleman are trying to arrive at the same result by different roads. The gentleman from Santa Cruz says he is in favor of taxing a man for everything he has, and no more. No man can tell whether he is going to be taxed on less or more than he is worth, under these two sections. You cannot amend them so that they can be understood. The gentleman from Sonoma, when he offered the amendment, said he would have to explain it by another section. He has explained it, and I undertake to say that it will take ten years of decisions in the Supreme Court to explain the explanation, and then you will not know what the law means, only by what the Supreme Court says about it. The Supreme Court will have to construct a revenue Act out of these two sections, and I can see no earthly reason for adopting such complicated and rambling sections as these, in order to arrive at the simple proposition, that each citizen should contribute a certain portion of his property to the support of government. Now, sir, I undertake to say, and they may charge me with what they please, I say that the subject of taxation is not an intricate, difficult, high-heeled thing, that no man can understand. The time was, when the king wanted rations for his household or his army, he rode forth among his subjects and told them he wanted some provisions, and they sent it to him. We have not much improved upon that system. Now, when the State wants part of the citizens' property, for the purpose of paying the expenses of government, she sends her Assessors forth to find what they have in their hands, and to take a portion thereof, and that is all there is to it. We only get into difficulty when we undertake to pry into private transactions, and keep a book account between every debtor and creditor in the State. Now, let us vote down these two propositions. Let us establish a plain, simple plan of assessing taxes, by assessing every dollar we find in a man's hands—land, goods, and money—and there stop.

A VOICE. And mortgages.

MR. REYNOLDS. And mortgages, the gentleman says. There you have departed again. There you are at sea again. The gentleman says, and mortgages. Well, suppose we do tax mortgages? First, we tax the land, next, the mortgage. Well, this is done under the Boggs amendment, by allowing the debtor to deduct the amount of tax he has paid. By this system you accomplish exactly the same result, and keep the whole business off the Assessors' books. You have none of the expense which will be the result of this system, and the whole thing will be kept off the Assessors' books. I hope we will assess property wherever we find it, and not make any deductions. If I get an opportunity I shall offer a substitute, to that effect, that no deductions shall be allowed on the books of the Assessor. Let that be an arrangement between the parties by law, but not cumber the books with it.

SPEECH OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: The section under consideration, as it now stands, strikes me as being, even with the proposed amendment, a little more muddy than it was in its original shape. Section one of the original report prescribes that taxation shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects; and section two reads as follows:

"Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property, and credits not so secured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other properties, real, personal, and mixed, according to their true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may provide for a deduction of debts due to bona fide residents of this State, from credits, except in the case of debts or credits secured by mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation affecting property. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

Now, suppose the Legislature does not pass any laws taxing certain classes of subjects. Does this Convention wish to leave the whole question of taxation, or the taxation of any particular class of subjects, to the discretion of future Legislatures? If you say, as this article now reads, that taxation shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and then say in the next section that the Legislature shall pass laws taxing certain properties, the Legislature could, under the Constitution, regulate the taxation of any specific property by classifying it, and thus tax one class of property disproportionate to others. This Constitution ought to prescribe that all property should be taxed equally and uniformly. This article will provide that property shall be taxed uniformly upon the same classes; hence the Legislature is not obliged to tax all property in the State under this article, because there is no provision in the Constitution anywhere which says that taxation shall be uniform. There is no provision which says taxation shall be equal. True, section one prescribes that taxation shall be uniform upon the same classes of subjects. Therefore, if the Legislature shall pass laws declaring that certain classes of property shall not be taxed, where is the remedy? Because the Constitution nowhere prescribes that taxation shall be equal and uniform. I earnestly recommend this subject to the careful consideration of the Convention.

I wish to say to the gentleman from Sonoma, Judge Johnson, that he will find this question of trying to remodel this section a very grave one. He comes before us with an amendment to section two, which none of us have read, upon a question of the most vital importance to the State, and yet the amendment has not even been printed, so that we could examine it. I think it is impossible to give it a fair examination in this way, without any opportunity of reading it. We are asked to adopt it without that careful examination which is needed. I don't know but what it is an improvement upon the old one. I presume it must be, but it ought to be examined more critically. I do not object to the Johnson amendment as far as relates to solvent debts. I do not believe that paper is money. I do not think a promise to pay is property in itself; but as it does represent value, and as the amount and value of the property it represents can be deducted from the value of land, I do not object to it. But I do most earnestly object to the provision of this article, that taxation shall be uniform on certain classes of property. We are putting it in the power of the Legislature to say that A shall pay taxes on a certain class of property, and B shall pay a different tax on a different class of property. It will prepare the way for the Legislature to say that certain classes of property shall not be taxed at all, if they choose to. And that is just what this Convention does not want to do. Therefore I hope this section will be amended or defeated.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: The point made by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, seems to be that under this section the Legislature will have power to exempt certain property from taxation, because the first section there says taxation shall be equal upon certain classes of subjects. I think if you give it a fair construction, the language will not bear any such interpretation, and will give the Legislature no such power. The section says: "Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, contract, or other obligation affecting property, and credits not so secured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real, personal, or mixed, according to their true value in money." Now, if laws shall be passed taxing all other property, real, personal, or mixed, according to its true value in money, how can the Legislature escape taxing all other property? It seems to me it is plain as language can make it.

MR. ESTEE. It is because this section prescribes that laws shall be passed that I object. We ought to say here that all property shall be taxed. This says the Legislature shall pass laws; but they may refuse to pass laws; they may say that taxes shall be uniform in certain classes of subjects, and they may except certain classes of subjects from taxation.

MR. MILLER. You cannot establish any system of taxation except by Act of the Legislature. The Constitution does not establish a system of taxation. This objection is a mere quibble on words. If we say that the Legislature shall pass laws taxing all property, it is equivalent to saying that all property shall be taxed. I will not presume that the Legislature is going to refuse to obey the Constitution. It is the very last thing the Legislature would do. Every member of the Legislature takes an oath to obey and support the Constitution, and if they are commanded to pass certain laws, it is presumed that they will do it.

Now, in regard to the first section, that taxation shall be uniform upon the same classes of subjects, I think that is correct. That is copied from the Constitution of Pennsylvania, and it means precisely the same thing as saying that taxation shall be equal and uniform upon the same classes of subjects, because our Supreme Court has decided that these words are synonymous. There is one thing I would like to be informed about, however, and that is what the gentleman means by "investments in bonds."

MR. JOHNSON. Investments in any kind of bonds except United States bonds. The laws of the United States govern that matter, and it is not necessary to mention them.

MR. MILLER. That is money that is paid for bonds. Why not tax the bonds.

MR. JOHNSON. This is a strong term and covers all kinds of bonds. We want to tax only the investments in bonds, and we do not want to include Federal bonds.

MR. MILLER. If there is anything in this section to put it in the power of the Legislature to make any exemptions, I should certainly be opposed to it. But I cannot understand it in that way—I think it is equivalent to saying that all property shall be taxed.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: Since the second section of this article has been stricken out, it seems to me to be absolutely necessary that we should reject the so-called Johnson amendment and return to the old section two, for the purpose of incorporating in this Constitution an express provision that all property shall be taxed. If there is anything that the people of this State hold dear, I had supposed it was that taxation should be equal, and that it should be uniform; that it should rest upon all property. But as this article stands now, we have first the general declaration that taxation shall be uniform upon the same classes of subjects only, thus leaving the Legislature at liberty to cast this burden wholly upon personal property, or wholly upon real estate, or upon any one kind of property they may choose. In regard to the so-called protection afforded by section two, it is manifestly a delusion. It says the Legislature shall pass laws, and gentlemen speak of that as though it were an assurance that they will do so. Now in the present Constitution, which was adopted thirty years ago, there is a provision that the Legislature shall establish a system of county and town governments. We all know that this provision has been a dead letter, for the reason that it was not supplemented by any action of the Legislature. The provision of the old Constitution was that all property should be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained by law. Under that provision it was, in numerous cases, held to be beyond the power of the Legislature to pass any Act exempting from taxation any species of property. That was decided in the case of the People vs. McCreary, in the thirty-fourth California, when an attempt was made to exempt credits. Also, a decision in the thirty-fifth California, to the same effect. But if this section were passed as it stands now, there would be nothing in the Constitution which would prevent the Legislature from exempting certain classes of property from taxation. I think, therefore, that the Convention should not concur in the action of the Committee of the Whole in adopting that section.

REMARKS OF MR. MORELAND.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I am sorry that I cannot support the proposition introduced by my colleague, Mr. Johnson. I think it is open to the objection urged by several gentlemen, in relation to the power of the Legislature to exempt certain classes of property. In addition to the case cited by the gentleman from Sacramento, I will say that there is a provision in the present Constitution requiring a census to be taken every ten years, but it is a well known fact that the Legislature has always disregarded this provision, and the census has never been taken; now, why may they not disregard this section also? Now, sir, I return to my first love in this Convention. I have the section here which I first introduced in this Convention, polished up and amended, so as to meet the objections that were urged against it, and I do not think the objections which have been urged against this section introduced by my colleague, can be urged against this. I will read it:

"SEC. 2. All property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. For the purposes of taxation, investments in bonds, franchises, solvent credits, secured or unsecured, and everything of value capable of transfer or ownership, shall be considered property. Growing crops, property belonging to the United States or to this State, or any political subdivision thereof, shall be exempt from taxation."

There is a declaration that all property in this State shall be taxed. Then I go further and define what property is, and this, it seems to me, is almost absolutely necessary. We must have a definition of property in this Constitution. I call the attention of the Convention to the fact, that none of the amendments which have been introduced here, none of the sections which have been adopted, define what property is; and that is the very thing which we ought to incorporate in this Constitution. We want to amend and overrule the decision of the Supreme Court. Here is a sentence that includes all property: "For the purposes of taxation, investments in bonds, franchises, solvent credits, secured or unsecured, and everything of value capable of transfer or ownership, shall be considered property." There is a definition of property which includes everything which has value. There are three distinct principles in this proposition: First, it declares that all property shall be taxed; second, it defines what property is; third, provides for the exemption of certain classes of property. It seems to me that is about all we need. There is too much in this article entirely. We do not need more than two or three sections.

MR. JOHNSON. Do you propose to tax mortgages?

MR. MORELAND. Yes, sir.

MR. JOHNSON. Do you propose to tax land also?

MR. MORELAND. Yes, sir. I do not think your proposition will meet the requirements of the times. I believe that all property should be taxed, and in order to get at it, I propose to offer this amendment.

MR. JOHNSON. Suppose there is a mortgage on a man's land, you propose to tax the land and the mortgage too. And then suppose there is a stipulation in the mortgage, that the borrower shall pay the tax on the mortgage, he would be taxed for a great deal more than he is worth.

MR. MORELAND. I propose to insert a section which says that no such stipulation shall be made.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: Any proposition connected with this subject ought to be clear. Sections two and five are not clear. There are not two men to-day upon the floor of this Convention that will agree unanimously upon any provision contained in these two sections. The section in relation to revenue should be so clear and unambiguous that no man can fail to understand what it means. Now, I am in favor of the Boggs proposition, offered by Judge Hale, of Placer. I am in favor of that, because it compels every man to pay taxes on what he is worth, and not a cent more. This proposition of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson, is full of danger. If we cannot agree definitely upon what property should be taxed we had better leave it to the Legislature than to leave it in doubt here. We have not been able, as yet, to agree upon anything intelligent, or anything clear. Now, let us adopt either the Moreland proposition or the Boggs proposition. I have always believed that the revenue of the State should be collected from the wealth of the State, not from those men who are so unfortunate as to be in debt. To illustrate: if a man has a house worth ten thousand dollars and has it mortgaged for five thousand dollars, under this provision he not only has to pay taxes on the ten thousand dollars, but the chances are he will have to pay the tax on the mortgage in some shape or another—thus making him pay taxes on fifteen thousand dollars when he is only worth five thousand dollars.

MR. WHITE. Would not that be the case under the Moreland amendment?

MR. LARKIN. To a certain extent. The Legislature would have power to do that. But it is a clear proposition. But with the other proposition we are left in doubt. Either tax him one way or the other. Let the Convention decide one way or the other. If we cannot decide, let us leave it to the Legislature with the simple declaration that all property shall be taxed. I shall support the Boggs proposition. Failing in that, I shall be in favor of a declaration that all property shall be taxed, and defining what property is, and leaving the rest to the Legislature.

REMARKS OF MR. HITCHCOCK.

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I cannot support the proposition of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson. It does not do justice, it seems to me. Let me state a case. Suppose I have ten thousand dollars' worth of real property, and have it mortgaged for say five thousand dollars. That makes fifteen thousand dollars' worth of property in my possession. Now, there is no less property there because it is given as security. If I borrow five thousand dollars without giving security, I have fifteen thousand dollars beyond a doubt. But if I tack a mortgage on to the note, then according to this theory I have only ten thousand dollars. Now, I am in favor of taxing the five thousand dollars, even if it is secured by mortgage, because I think there is just as much property as there was before it was given as security. Therefore, I am in favor of the Moreland proposition. I am in favor of taxing everything that has value, in the hands of the party who holds it.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I hope these various amendments will have the effect of bringing us out of the muddy waters where we can see clearer, and that when all this fallacy is exploded, we will go back to the old system, and say, as we ought to say, that taxation shall be equal and uniform. It is useless to consume time in discussing these propositions. But there is a proposition here to tax Government bonds. The last amendment proposed taxes the interest on these bonds. That can no more be done than you can tax the bonds themselves. You may as well tax one as the other. It is an attempt to evade the law of Congress, which exempts this kind of property from taxation. You cannot tax these bonds, nor can you tax the proceeds of these bonds.

MR. JOHNSON. I ask you whether, under the laws of the United States, we can tax these bonds?

MR. SHAFTER. No, sir.

MR. JOHNSON. Have we not a provision here that the Federal Constitution is the supreme law of the land?

MR. SHAFTER. Yes, sir; and it is folly to dispute it. Now, they propose to put it in here, because they say it can do no harm, as the statutes of Congress will override it. That is the very reason I say that a man of common sense would want to keep it out, and not stick it in there for the purpose of giving offense to the Government of the United States. You may put it in there if you choose to, but I take occasion here to enter my protest against this barefaced attempt to deny the authority of the United States in exempting these bonds from taxation. I have seen too much of this sort of thing, and the gentleman from Los Angeles may call it Black Republican doctrine if he chooses.

Now, sir, this attempt to tax mortgages is a delusion and a snare. If you do tax mortgages the first thing the creditor will do will be to have it fixed in a contract that the borrower shall pay the tax. The only possible good that it will ever do will be to make money lenders take a more active interest in the affairs of State, in order to keep taxes low. This whole scheme, in my opinion, will prove a delusion and a snare.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I desire to send up a notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in section one of amendment number five hundred and ten, as recommended by the Committee of the Whole."

MR. O'DONNELL. Mr. President: It is impossible for me to vote for this section number two. I do not think there are many lawyers on this floor who understand the proposition. I believe that taxes should be equal and uniform in this State, and that all property should be taxed according to its actual value, providing that no tax shall be levied upon growing crops. All taxes should be equal and uniform.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Johnson.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Johnson, Hale, Biggs, Kelley, and West.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law, except growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county, or municipal corporation within this State."

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: That is the section of the old Constitution, with one exception. I believe it is better than any scheme which we will be able to devise here.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: If there was anything which induced the calling of this Convention, it was to amend the laws in regard to the taxation of property, and particularly that mortgages should be taxed. Now, this amendment proposes that we shall go back to the old system, under which mortgages are not taxed. If we do this, the Constitution will never be ratified, and we might as well adjourn and go home.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I move we adjourn.

Carried.

And at four o'clock and fifty minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

RECONSIDERATION—TAXATION.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I gave notice yesterday that I would move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section one of the article on revenue and taxation. I now make that motion. This question of revenue and taxation is one of the most important questions that have come before this Convention, and if we cannot get what we want we must take the next best thing. We find that nearly every gentleman has an opinion of his own in regard to it, and I am in hopes that there will be no objection to reconsidering this so that we can be more enlightened.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section one of the article on revenue and taxation.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: There are some reasons which I wish to present to this Convention why this should be reconsidered, and I will not take up the time of the Convention but a few moments. I shall only call the attention of the Convention to the syllabuses of some of the decisions of the Supreme Court of this State relating to this subject. In the twelfth California it is held that the only limitation upon the taxing power of the Legislature is the provision for equality and uniformity. That was the only limitation, and as it is well understood that the Constitution is only a limitation of power, the Supreme Court held that these two words were the only limiting words in the Constitution, and, therefore, they sustained the assessments referred to in the decision. The second section leaves the whole question of taxation to the discretion of the Legislature. It merely says that the Legislature shall do so and so, but does not compel them to do it. The whole question of sovereignty, the right of taxation, is left entirely with the Legislature, and because we say that we shall levy this tax it is not binding upon them. There is no power behind them that can make them do it. You mandamus them. They represent a branch of the government. They have the exclusive control of this subject. Again in the thirty-fourth of California, in the People v. McCreery, page four hundred and thirty-two, the Court held:

"The power of the Legislature over the whole subject of taxation, including the property to be charged, the amount of the tax, the mode of levying, assessing, and collecting it, etc., is as ample as over any other matter that is a proper subject of legislative action. The provisions of section thirteen, article eleven, of the Constitution, are limitations, and not grants of power; but as limitations, are, according to their terms, mandatory upon the Legislature."

In the same decision they say:

"Under the provisions of section thirteen, article eleven, of the Constitution, to wit: 'Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State,' and 'all property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law;' held, first, that by the words 'all property in this State,' is meant all private property, or all property other than that belonging to the United States, or this State, or that which is public property; second, that the words 'taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State,' relate to taxation of property, and that the Legislature has no power to exempt any private property in this State from taxation."

That is what I took occasion to say to this Convention yesterday. You leave these words out, and the Legislature would have the power to exempt any property in this State from taxation that they desire to. The only means of meeting that question fairly and squarely, is to put these limiting words in, namely, that taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. I appeal to this Convention not to adopt any new terms, unless these new terms are to be very beneficial to the people of the State, and unless these new terms will remedy some evil. I commend to this Convention the adoption of the old words, those that we have received an interpretation of, and the meaning of which is familiar to every lawyer in the State. Adopt section one as reported by the Committee of the Whole, and then you can adopt section two and section five, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, or any other section you wish with safety; because, upon the question of uniformity and equality rests the whole limitation to the power of taxation. Don't we want taxation to be equal and uniform throughout the State? Don't we want every piece of property taxed, and that it shall be taxed alike? Do you want to place yourself in a position where your neighbor will be taxed in one manner and you in another? Don't you want these limitations upon the taxing power of the State? I commend this to your judgment, and I hope that the Convention will reconsider the vote by which we refused to concur in the amendment to section one as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. ANDREWS. I desire to ask the gentleman if he does not consider the words equal and uniform inconsistent with the taxation of solvent debts?

MR. ESTEE. Not a bit of it. The decision in the case of the People vs. The Hibernia Bank does not rest upon that proposition at all, as the gentleman knows.

MR. ANDREWS. I know that it has been claimed upon this floor that it does.

MR. VAN DYKE. I will call the attention of the gentleman to two decisions directly on that point, that solvent debts could be included as property: The People v. Eddy, 43 Cal.; Savings and Loan Society v. Austin, 46 Cal.

MR. ESTEE. I can see that this Convention is in favor of taxing solvent debts. I am willing it should be done, but I claim that this is limitation upon the taxing power. I concede the taxation of solvent debts to this Convention.

MR. ANDREWS. A concession that does not come from his heart. Not one single gentleman who is advocating the striking out of these words will get up here and say that it comes from his heart; that he believes in the taxation of solvent debts and of mortgages.

MR. ESTEE. I want to know what that has got to do with the proposition to reconsider this vote?

MR. ANDREWS. You say that you can see that this Convention is in favor of the taxation of solvent debts. We wish that this system of taxation shall be a system built up by its friends—not friends from necessity, but friends because they believe that it is right. If I understand the Hibernia Bank decision, it is inconsistent with the taxation of solvent debts, and I believe that is what was claimed by the gentleman from Sacramento, the Chairman of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. This question stands here now between those who are in favor of the taxation of solvent debts and those who are opposed to it. Those who are in favor of the taxation of solvent debts should refuse to reconsider, and I hope that this Convention will refuse to reconsider.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: On yesterday we struck out section one, which provided that taxation should be equal and uniform throughout the State. By so doing we virtually declared that we did not desire that taxation should be equal or uniform. The result of our action was that we reinstated section one as reported by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, that all taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects. Then, sir, it follows that while on the one hand we ignore the principle of equality at large, on the other hand we accept it to the extent that it is to apply to the same class of subjects. Now, sir, if that proposition is sustained there is no possibility of telling at this moment to what extent of mischief it may run. Suppose that there are twenty thousand pianos in this State, no two of them are of equal value—one may be worth ten dollars and another one thousand dollars. Yet every piano must be assessed at the same figure. Take cattle and horses. A race horse worth twenty thousand dollars must be assessed the same as a cart horse worth one hundred dollars. Where is this to end? It runs through the entire range of personal property in every department. This principle cannot be sustained. If it be claimed that you can classify the subjects, it will not work. In the case of horses, you cannot classify them as workhorses and as thoroughbreds. Why, sir, take thoroughbreds, there is the utmost diversity of value among them. You must tax them according to their intrinsic value, and in every degree in which you depart from that principle you depart from anything like consistency or the attainment of equality and right. This thing is thoroughly noxious and corrupt. The people will reject and repudiate it; or if they adopt it, they will curse the hour when we imposed it upon them. I say it is in the course of right enactment for us to reconsider and adopt what we yesterday rejected after having spent a week in its adoption. We build up a fabric with painful care, and we destroy it in an hour. What is to be the result when we reach the final adoption of the Constitution here in reference to its stability, to its intrinsic merit, if we change every day and every hour? What faith can we ourselves have in the work we present to the people? Let us go back to what the committee adopted, or rather, let us go farther, and adopt the amendment offered by the honorable member from San Francisco to the second section, which is in the language of the present Constitution. When that comes up I shall ask the opportunity of saying something on that subject. In the meantime let us revoke the imperfect and improper action of yesterday.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I consider it of little consequence whether this motion is reconsidered or not. I do not believe that there is any use for section one any way in this article in the form in which it is, and those gentlemen who desire this reconsideration can vote for the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco here, and then they have got equality and uniformity just exactly in the language in which they want it. This Convention has not been brought to a vote upon this first section, and when it is it can be stricken out, and it need not stand as any bugbear in the mind of any man here. Now, as to the effect of these words uniformity and equality, I understand that if a proposition is adopted here saying that all property shall be taxed in proportion to its value, that that as effectually proclaims uniformity and equality as the expression that taxation shall be equal and uniform. Now, it was denied that the Hibernia Bank case turned upon that language. I am not a lawyer, and it may seem wrong that I should question the assertion, for a moment, of a lawyer upon that matter, but if I can read, the decision of that Court was, that choses in action are not property in the sense in which that word is used in article eleven, section thirteen. Now, why? For the reason that such property is not capable of being rated equally and uniformly with other property, as prescribed in the section; that was the reason upon which the decision was rendered. The gentleman has quoted from the decisions of the Supreme Court here this morning, from away back, several years, up to the present time. Now, I am not a lawyer, and have not read the decision of the Court, but I have heard it stated by eminent gentlemen on this floor, that the Courts have opposed the taxation of these credits. That is what they have done, and they are just as likely to do again. The trouble with the Constitution is this: the Constitution says it shall be equal; there is a chance right there for any shrewd attorney to raise a question, when any man who wants to get rid of paying his taxes employs him. He immediately tries to ascertain that there has been some inequality somewhere, and upon that technical term he seeks to get out of paying his tax.

MR. WINANS. Does he not get an idea that a wrong is inflicted upon him where none exists, from a suspicious agriculturist, before he goes to the shrewd attorney?

MR. DUDLEY. The gentleman seems to intimate that I belong to a suspicious class of agriculturists. It is quite possible that I do. I certainly belong to the agricultural part of the community of this State, and I belong to a class of people who have in the past paid their taxes. They have seen gentlemen wearing silk hats, and broadcloth clothes, and driving carriages, that utterly shirk taxation. They have sought by various means to get that class of individuals to contribute something towards the support of the Government, but under the rulings of the Courts, under our present Constitution, they have successfully evaded the payment of any share of the expenses of this Government. The gentleman may feel sensitive, and he may tremble to think that it is barely possible that this Convention of suspicious agriculturists and communists, as they have been termed, may succeed in getting something out of them. I hope that we will succeed in getting something out of them. I do not know as it makes any difference about this reconsideration, because the proposition submitted by the gentleman from San Francisco is here pending, and those who favor reconsideration can simply vote aye upon his proposition.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will not recede from the decision which they took yesterday, and follow the dictates of the Record-Union. I hope that this reconsideration will not be had. It prevents the people of this State from putting one hundred million dollars under taxation that now escape it. That is just what it amounts to. That is just what these words are aimed at. I see it, sir; I know the object of it, sir. The gentleman from San Francisco expressed it when he answered the question of the gentleman from Shasta. He is not in favor of it, but says he will concede it. They want to put words in your Constitution by which they can walk into the Supreme Court and defeat it. It brings here just what you are trying to get rid of—Judge-made law on the subject of taxation. Armsfull of decisions can be made up on this very language, defeating all endeavors on the part of the people to bring to their public duty those who are escaping from them. I will not reargue this proposition. When you have said that all property shall be taxed, you have said enough. But I would like to know how it happens that the twenty odd States of this Union where they have worked at this question of taxation so long, have left these words out. How is it that we just now happen to be communists, because, forsooth, we follow only the footsteps of older States, if not older men, who have wisely left these words out of their Constitutions? Now, sir, I hope that the motion to reconsider will not prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I will say, so far as I am concerned, that in moving the amendment which I did last night, I was not governed by any desire to avoid taxation of mortgages and solvent debts. I have here, prepared by the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Mansfield, a proviso to the section which I moved last night, in these words: "Provided, that mortgages and solvent debts shall be considered property for the purposes of taxation." Now, when the proper time comes, I propose to add that to the section which I offered last night as a substitute, and there is no need of the first section at all. If we adopt the language of this second section, as offered by myself, that taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State, it can be put into one section. I make this explanation to show that there is no intention upon my part to avoid the taxation of mortgages and solvent debts.

MR. HERRINGTON. Do you make any distinction between solvent debts and mortgages? Do not solvent debts include mortgages?

MR. MILLER. It is only to make it explicit and clear. Section five can be amended so as to give a rebate against solvent debts the same as mortgages.

MR. WINANS. When you say solvent debts shall be taxed, do you mean without making a deduction?

MR. MILLER. I say that section five can be so amended as to give a rebate in cases of other solvent debts.

MR. WINANS. I do not think there is an objection to that on the part of any member of the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I hope this motion to reconsider will not prevail. It seems to me that it would be taking a step backward in this matter. Now, sir, this matter was fully argued, and I undertake to say that the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, is mistaken about the decision in the Hibernia Bank case. That the whole decision is based upon the question of equality and uniformity is too plain for argument. They say:

"That causes of action are dependent on too many contingencies to be capable of appraisement which shall accord with any rule of equality or uniformity of value, is too plain for argument."

That is what they say. They say further:

"The Constitution provides that no property, as property, shall be taxed except such as is capable of a valuation by the Assessors, which shall be ratably equal and uniform with that affixed to all other property."

Why, sir, they were discussing the constitutional principle. That whole argument is based upon the provision of section thirteen, of article eleven. Some dictum creeps in. It is understood that the Supreme Court has decided that it is not property with reference to the provision in the Constitution which they were discussing. We have got to take the whole decision in order to interpret and consider it fairly. We have got to see the basis upon which they act. They start out with an interpretation of that constitutional provision, and their whole argument is based upon it. Now, as far as taxing credits is concerned I read an argument by the President of this Convention, in the case of the Savings and Loan Society v. Austin, 46 Cal., wherein he cites that in twenty-seven States of the Union credits are taxed. Now, where does this opposition come from? Ask any member here whether he is in favor of taxing credits and mortgages, and if he is against it you can see very soon where he stands. That is the test to apply to them. No person who has come here in pursuance of the verdict of the people that these solvent debts or credits shall be taxed, will insist that these words "equal and uniform" shall be in. They have made the trouble heretofore, and they will make the trouble hereafter if we retain them. The Supreme Court will still construe that word "equal," and they will say that the local Assessors cannot secure equality in these cases. That is what they will say. This same trouble will be precipitated upon us again unless we eliminate these words, and leave the section to direct that property shall be taxed according to its true value in money. That is all we want, and I do hope that this motion to reconsider will not prevail. I know it is insisted in the Record-Union that these words "equal and uniform" should be in. I know that men whose sympathies are with capital would like to have these words in, but I maintain that it is the verdict of the people of this State that these mortgages and solvent credits shall be taxed, and that we should not precipitate ourselves into the difficulty in which we found ourselves when the decision in the case of the People v. The Hibernia Bank was made.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope the motion to reconsider will not prevail. These words that it is proposed to reinsert by a reconsideration in this case, have been a very Pandora's box of evil upon the subject of taxation in this State to the poor men of the State. It has been the very thing that has exempted the millions of concentrated capital in the hands of the capitalists of this State from taxation, and leaving it to fall upon the poor farms and the poor implements and the poor stock of the farmers of this State. In every case wherever there was any plea by which to get around and to favor taxation as against the poor, there it is that this equality and uniformity has been invoked upon all occasions. And at last, as it would be seemingly too absurd to say that a man worth a million of dollars, having it invested in the best security in the world, having it secured upon real estate, having it so fixed that no contingency can deprive him of his wealth, having it placed in that position that the whole government and the people thereof are pledged for its payment, and then to decide that this was not property, it was too bold, and the Supreme Court could not do it, and they dodged behind equality and uniformity and let out taxation upon the subject of solvent debts. I do hope that this Convention will not go back to that. Now to reconsider and to put those words in, and put them in the shape of the case of the Hibernia Bank, is for the people of the State of California to vote that that decision is correct; that capital must not be taxed; that the poor men must be laborers; that the poor men must be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the capital of this State for the balance of their lives, uncomplaining and without the right of complaining, having themselves had an opportunity to vote upon it. I am not here for the purpose of even authorizing them to have a vote upon it. They have sent me here for the purpose of seeing that that was not the law any longer, but that mortgages should be taxed because they were property. I am here for that purpose. I am here to say that your solvent debt, secured by mortgage, is property and to tax it; not to take all the man's land that it is secured by, but to tax the mortgage and tax the solvent debt; to tax it as property, to tax it as you would a horse or a cow, and go on and not ask about anything in connection with it; but tax it as property alone; not undertake to settle all the difficulties between neighbors all over the State with reference to property. It is said you cannot do it—that you cannot tax the rich man. Well, if you could not they would not be here whining the way they are at a law that don't affect them. A law that don't amount to a hill of beans they pay no attention to. The laws that are mere sop they do not fight. They can be taxed. It is said that they will increase the interest that much. Do you understand that money is loaned on the principle of an eleemosynary institution? Now, if any delegate in this Convention is that soft he ought to poultice his head with milk and mush, rest one night and get up the next morning and go home to his constituents and resign his position, for he is unworthy to represent anybody, even himself. Talk about not being able to tax them! Didn't you tax them? Didn't they then fight the Legislature to get out of it, and could not do it? Didn't they then take after the Supreme Court, and dog it from term to term, until they got it reversed by a decision of the Supreme Court?

That is the position we are in. And now we want to restore it back to the sovereignty of the legislative power so that the legislative power shall be able to say what shall and what shall not be taxed, if necessary. If you must have a sovereignty in the government, that sovereignty should be the legislative power and not the judicial power. I want the subject of taxation to rest with the Legislature. They are the party to exercise that right. They are the men to say what is property and what is not property. The idea of a Supreme Court letting out all that vast concentrated capital of a mighty State upon the idea that it is not property. And then if that will not do, if it is too absurd, to say that it cannot be taxed under a uniform rule and then let it out. I want the Legislature to have power so that if it cannot hit it one end it can the other, and if it cannot attack at either end it can in the middle.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I do not see how in the world the question whether solvent debts should be taxed has anything to do with the question as to whether or not taxation shall be equal and uniform. If this Convention desires to tax debts, they can easily say so. The question is whether debts on certain terms are property for purposes of taxation. Now the Supreme Court has said that they are not. It is the intention of this Convention to put into this Constitution that debts are property, and that will end that fight. Therefore that question is not involved at all in the broader question whether or not taxation shall be equal and uniform. Now, sir, it seems to me that one of the objects of the Constitution is to limit the power of the Legislature in a few particulars in which it ought to be limited. I am not in favor of limiting the power of the Legislature to any very great extent, but there are two things that are necessary in order to protect private rights; one is that all general laws shall be uniform in their operation, and the other is that taxation shall be equal and uniform. Without these two safeguards there is no protection whatever for individual rights. The Legislature, sir, without these two propositions, may go to work and pass an oppressive law that affects one class, and consequently the theory of our government is that legislation shall operate upon the people as a whole, and if the Legislature does anything wrong or passes any oppressive measure, it must be felt by the whole community—that they shall not have power as the government did in England at one time, to take up a man without any form of law, and put him into the tower. We want such a limitation of the power of the Legislature so that if it does any wrong that wrong shall fall upon all alike, and then all will see that it is rectified. But we do not want to give the Legislature the power through this sovereign right of taxation to put an outrage upon you and I, and half a dozen others, and let the balance of the State go free. That has been the theory of the Constitution, that taxation must be equal and uniform. If it is not so the Legislature may throw all the taxation upon land, or upon the farming interest, or upon some other class of property. They may pass laws which are onerous to one class of people and which do not affect the other at all. The very theory of taxation is that it must embrace all, that all property must be taxed and that taxation upon all property must be equal and uniform. Now, when you come to the question as to whether solvent debts and growing crops shall be taxed, the question is, shall they be considered property? I do not believe that growing crops should be considered property, neither do I believe that a solvent debt is property for the purpose of taxation. If this Convention believe that a promise is property, they can say so and that gets rid of that trouble. But the principle underlying all is the proposition that these laws of the Legislature must be general; whether they are good or bad, they must affect all; that the Legislature cannot pick out one man or one class and throw all the burdens upon him or upon that class, but it must affect all. When you strike out that from the Constitution you strike out the greatest safeguard to private rights that there is under the American system of government. I hope that the Convention will reconsider this matter and put into the Constitution the general principle that taxation must be equal and uniform, and then they can determine whether they are going to declare that debts are property or not.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I do not see the use of consuming the time of this Convention on this motion. It strikes me the proper place to debate this question is on the proposition of General Miller. I therefore move the previous question.

Messrs. Tinnin, Freud, Brown, and Moreland also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the motion to reconsider, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Estee, White, Grace, Joyce, and Doyle.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to reconsider by the following vote:

SECTION TWO.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I ask leave to add a proviso to the amendment I offered last night, which reads as follows: "Provided, that mortgages and solvent debts shall be considered property for the purpose of taxation."

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the gentleman will be permitted to modify his amendment. The Secretary will read the amendment as modified.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All property in this State shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law, except growing crops and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State; provided, that mortgages and solvent debts shall be considered property for the purposes of taxation."

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I object to the latter part of that amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The objection comes too late.

MR. MCFARLAND. It puts in there two entirely distinct propositions.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. This amendment contains two independent propositions, one of which the Convention has just rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. BARBOUR. I call for a division of the question.

THE PRESIDENT. It cannot be divided.

MR. MORELAND. Is a motion to strike out any part of the amendment in order?

Digitized by Google

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir; there is an amendment to an amendment already.

MR. MORELAND. I want to strike out the first sentence. If I can do that I would support it.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I would like to ask the honorable member from San Francisco who offers this amendment if he will not accept an addition thereto, in these words: "Deducting therefrom debts due to bona fide residents of this State."

MR. MILLER. I have no objection to it.

MR. HITCHCOCK. I object.

MR. STEDMAN. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. It cannot be accepted if there is an objection made to it.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope that this will not be adopted. I think the Convention has, by a refusal to reconsider the vote taken yesterday, passed upon that question of equal and uniform, as presented in this amendment. It sounds well, but in the first place no one will contend that taxes are equal, no matter how much we may strive for it. As to their being uniform, they cannot be uniform, because that means "one in form," and we have at present provided for more than one form of taxation. We have provided that there may be an ad valorem tax, and we have provided that there may be an income tax if the Legislature so provides. We have already the poll taxes, and they are not one in form and cannot be, and what is the use of saying so? It is just as well to say that all property in the State shall be taxed at its full value in money, or in proportion to its value, and that will come as near uniformity and equality as can be. The whole question turns upon the taxation of credits. That is the point of resistance in this whole struggle, and the majority of this Convention, I think, have determined that they should be taxed. The only question, then, is, how shall they be taxed? We are attempting to tax them as we tax all other property, and we find ahead of us all kinds of difficulties in arriving at that taxation. Now, sir, I know that it is a dangerous piece of business in this Convention to bring in another amendment. I think the amendment man has been heard from as much, perhaps, as the members of this Convention are willing to listen to; but there is another way in which we might possibly arrive at the taxation of these credits, if this Convention should see fit to adopt it. Whether it is the correct theory or not, I am not able to determine, but I believe that it is in some degree a solution of the difficulty. Now, sir, there is no difficulty in regard to the tangible, visible property. It can be found; it can be taxed in proportion to its value. Now, then, if we can put that in one class and tax it in that way, and then take these other evidences of indebtedness—which are really property, because they have a value, and that value can be used for all purposes that any other value can almost—if we can find a way to tax these, not being one in form with the other subjects of taxation, we shall reach them and tax them. By so doing we shall increase the assessment roll and decrease the rate per cent. upon the visible, tangible property. Then, it seems to me, we have accomplished something.

Now, sir, we have provided, in the very last section of this article, that the Legislature may impose an income tax, and I think it just. I think it is the only way in which we can reach a large amount of property that ought to pay taxes. Now, sir, at the risk of falling into bad odor in this Convention, I will venture to read a substitute for section two, which I shall offer if an opportunity comes—which I hope it will—and I believe this is a proposition that has not yet been presented in this form:

"All property in this State, excepting credits, whether secured or unsecured, growing crops, property belonging to the United States, or this State, or any county or municipal corporation within this State, and property exempt from taxation under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The Legislature shall provide for a tax on incomes derived from all interest bearing credits, and may, in its discretion, provide for an income tax to be assessed to, and collected from, persons, corporations, joint stock associations, or companies resident or doing business in this State, in such cases and amounts and in such manner as shall be prescribed."

Now, sir, it seems to me that in that way we shall get a tax upon property in this State. Then the Legislature can provide for any tax that will reach the corporations, joint stock associations, or any companies that are doing business in this State, whether they are residents or not. It seems to me that by this means we shall arrive at one very excellent conclusion, and that is, that having taxed all the tangible property in this State, we then tax the income upon these interest bearing credits, and by that means reduce the rate per cent. upon a tangible property that has heretofore been paying all the taxes. I hope to have an opportunity to offer this, and I hope that this Convention will give it such consideration as the lateness of the hour in which it is proposed will permit.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I propose to say a word, but I am too hoarse to talk. I trust that the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco will prevail. It is substantially the present Constitution, with such amendments as the exigencies of the case now require. Nor do I think it open to the objection of the gentleman from San Diego, that it prescribes an absolute uniform rule; certainly not, according to his definition. I do not think he can find any schoolma'am in San Diego who will agree with him in that definition. We had no trouble with taxes in this State until the Supreme Court made its somersault in the case of the Hibernia Bank, which is about as huge a specimen of judicial ground and lofty tumbling as the whole judicial records of the world can produce. Until that time the rate of taxation was perfectly easy. Everything was taxed; all credits were taxed. Until that remarkable decision was ushered into our law books we had no difficulty. Now, this amendment restores the old law, with the declaration that taxes shall not only be uniform, but that mortgages and solvent debts shall be taxed. I presume we are most of us in favor of that proposition; at least I am, and I understand that the majority of this Convention is.

MR. GRACE. Do you think we could enforce an income tax under that?

MR. HOWARD. Yes; the eighteenth section fixes that. The Supreme Court has settled the most of the propositions in relation to our tax system, outside of the principle that credits are not property for the purposes of taxation; therefore there is a propriety in adhering to the old rule, with a provison added that credits are property and shall be taxed. Now, there is no doubt of the power of the Legislature to tax credits. I shall read from Cooley on Taxation:

"It has never been held incompetent, under this provision, to tax, as personal property, contracts for the payment of money, or which have a money value, and the right to do so may be assumed."

I am sorry that my friend, Judge McFarland, has overruled Judge Cooley on this point.

MR. MCFARLAND. I never said that the Legislature had not the power. They have the power to tax anything, unless limited by the Constitution.

MR. WYATT. What power has the Legislature now to tax debts or credits, under the decision in the Hibernia Bank case?

MR. HOWARD. None, unless that decision was overruled. But I doubt whether there would ever be found another Supreme Court in the universe that would make that decision. I read also, for the benefit of the gentleman from Marin, from the twenty-first Vermont, in the case of Catlin v. Hull:

"Debts due from solvent debtors, upon promissory notes, are personal estate, within the statutes of this State.

"In construing statutes, the rule is to ascertain the intent of the Legislature, which is to be gathered from the language used, taken in connection with the subject-matter and having reference to all that is said upon the subject.

"One of the objects which the Legislature intended to effect by the statutes of October thirtieth, eighteen hundred and forty-four (Acts of eighteen hundred and forty-four, page eight), was to make all property within this State subject to taxation here, even though it belonged to persons residing out of the State, and the property is actually managed here by some person other than the real owner. And the terms 'held in trust,' as used in that statute, were intended to include all property which is situated permanently here, under the control, management, and direction of any person, for the use and benefit of the owner."

That is almost precisely the statute which was claimed to be unconstitutional in the case of the Hibernia Bank:

"Each sovereign State has the power to tax all persons or property within its jurisdiction."

Mr. Cooley also states the principle to be in relation to exemptions, that prima facie the property is taxable. He says that is the rule, and that property excepted must be excepted in terms and expressly, and the exception is strictly construed and does not extend beyond the express language used. That is the rule, and settled by all the cases. Now, the gentleman says we have no right to tax United States bonds. Nobody has proposed here to tax United States bonds. The report does not propose to tax United States bonds. It does not propose to tax anything which the law exempts; and if the Act of Congress exempts the bonds, the bonds are, of course, exempt. But it does not except the income upon the bonds, and under the eighteenth section the Legislature would have the right to impose an income tax, because an income tax goes to everything, from whatever source the income is derived. And I am fully borne out by cases which I might easily refer to. Therefore I am content that that should be left to the Legislature.

MR. CASSERLY. The bond is the principal, and it cannot be taxed; nor can the interest on that bond be taxed.

MR. HOWARD. Yes. That is precisely the language of this case to which Judge Cooley refers. The income is not excepted in terms, and the income may be taxed; but that is a question that will arise only when the Legislature imposes a tax.

MR. CASSERLY. It occurred to me that the main thing, the bond being privilegd, that the dividends of the bond were privileged also.

MR. HOWARD. I disagree with that idea. The income is not exempted unless the Act of Congress expressly stated that the income should not be taxed.

MR. CASSERLY. My object was to ascertain your idea because we do not wish to entangle ourselves in a controversy about the United States bonds.

MR. HOWARD. Not at all. We do not propose to tax any thing that the Act of Congress exempts. As to the propriety of taxing credits I do not propose to detain the Convention with any comment. I shall ask the Secretary to read two or three paragraphs of Professor Walker in his learned book on the "Science of Wealth," commencing on page three hundred and thirty-seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

TAXATION OF CREDITS.

"It has sometimes been maintained that credits ought not to be taxed, but all assessments made upon values, or property, personal and real. Taxes, it has been argued, ought not to be laid upon persons, but upon that out of which they can alone be paid; viz., property. But credits are taxed as well as values. A holds a farm worth ten thousand dollars mortgaged to B for five thousand dollars. A pays taxes upon the whole valuation, and B upon five thousand dollars, as money at interest. A, it is said, is doubly taxed. This is a practical question, that has puzzled legislators in every age and country. Let us therefore carefully examine it. Suppose A and B aforesaid form an entire community, and that the whole tax of one hundred and fifty dollars is imposed on property. The whole valuation will then be ten thousand dollars (A's farm), and the rate one and a half per cent, which A pays, and B goes untaxed. We will now change the principle, and have both property and credits taxed. The valuation will then be A's farm, ten thousand dollars, and B's money at interest, five thousand dollars; total, fifteen thousand dollars, and with the same amount to be assessed (one hundred and fifty dollars), the rate will be one per cent, of which A pays one hundred, and B fifty dollars. So, then, we discover that A is not doubly taxed, as assumed, but at the worst pays only twenty-five dollars, or one third more than his share. Such must, in principle, be the result of this kind of taxation, taking a whole community together. All the amount taxed upon credit is so much relief to taxation upon property. This seems to be clear; and the justice of the thing is established by the fact that A bought his farm knowing that it would be subject to a full taxation, and bought it cheaper, as we have shown in another place, on that account. B on the other hand, accepted his mortgage on the same ground, knowing it would be subject to tax on the common valuation. Is either party then wronged?

Digitized by Google

"But perhaps another reason may be given why A should pay taxes upon the whole value of his farm; viz., that, having the usufruct of the whole, he is entitled to all the profits on the farm. 'But he don't own the whole of the farm.' True, that is his misfortune; if he did, he would obtain a larger amount of net profits; but his obligation to pay tax on the whole is not impaired, because he has the use of a part of B's capital. As the owner of the farm, A has a chance for all the profits that can made from the whole; while, by the taxation of B on the mortgage, the farmer saves a part of what he would otherwise pay in taxes. One pays taxes for the profits of business; the other, for the income on his capital.

"In this case we find another very clear illustration of the correctness of the income tax policy. If there were no other tax than upon income, the matter would stand thus:

A's income from his farm	$900 00
He deducts the interest he pays B	300 00
A pays tax on his net income of	$600 00
B's income is taxed upon	300 00
Total income to be taxed	$900 00

"Amount to be raised, one hundred and fifty dollars. Of this, A will pay one hundred dollars and B fifty; and there would be no question as to the justice of the system by which both were thus taxed. If A's income should be more or less than nine hundred dollars, he would pay more or less; and B must pay less or more accordingly.

"In the absence of the income tax principle, what can be more equitable and just than the practice of taxing both mortgagor and mortgagee? If the former were allowed to deduct from his inventory the amount he owed the latter, it would often happen that the mortgagee, not living in the same town or State, so much property would escape taxation altogether. This, in some communities, especially our western States, would be a great evil. That much hardship may often result from taxing credits as well as property is undoubtedly true; but that only affords additional evidence that the income tax principle is the only correct one. Next to this would be the levying of all taxes upon property exclusively; and if adopted at the very commencement of a social organization, as at the landing of the Plymouth in sixteen hundred and twenty, it would secure a just taxation, because all property would be created, held, and transferred under that well known condition."

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I wish to read a few lines from Judge Cooley on Taxation, page one hundred and forty-six:

"The intention to exempt must in any case be expressed in clear and unambiguous terms; taxation is the rule, exemption the exception. All exemptions are to be strictly construed. They embrace only that which is within their terms."

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: This morning when I took occasion to move to reconsider the vote by which this Convention refused to adopt the report of the Committee of the Whole as to section one, I stated the reasons very briefly why I was in favor of some provision in this Constitution prescribing that taxation should be equal and uniform. I thought then, and I still think, that that is the only true rule. I believed then, and I still believe, that we were traveling without light upon an unknown sea, without a guide, unless we adopt some such rule. I am therefore for the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Miller. I took occasion to say further, that the decisions of the Supreme Court had been uniform upon that question; that we knew what those decisions were, and that any other rule would be dangerous to adopt. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, undertook to impugn my motives and the motives of others, and said we must be the instruments of corporations or were guided by the Record-Union. I am sorry for that man who never sees anything but wickedness in others and purity in himself. I am sorry for that creature who can only look upon the dark side of everything, and sees only crime in others and only virtue and honor and glory in his own case. I want to know what we have in the distinguished reputation of the gentleman from San Francisco, tracing it back for thirty years, that shows that he occupies a more favorable position before the people of this State than other members of this Convention who have been known for that period here in public life. Every question ought to rest upon the same proposition of right, and because the distinguished gentleman from San Francisco may be purer and better and abler than some other member, it does not follow that what he offers is better or worse, or that this or the other principle ought to be defeated. I have heard enough of this impugning members' motives without any cause—saying that this gentleman and that gentleman is the tool of wealth, or of the corporations, without reason and without cause. Such things are unusual in any legislative body, and are unheard of among gentlemen in bodies of this character. For one, I denounce it as wrong and contrary to every principle of legislative courtesy and the amenities of social life. [Applause.]

Now, sir, one word to the question. In Cooley on Taxation, page one hundred and thirty, we find the following:

"To tax all loans of money would be equal, and would enable all to adjust their rates of interest accordingly; but to tax all except those made by A, B, and C, or all but those of the inhabitants of a single city, would be unequal, and would create an invidious and unjust distinction in favor of the excepted persons, which would give them the advantage of higher net rates. The one would be taxation; the other would be lawless exaction."

That was my point. I claim that under the proposition of uniformity and equality you can tax mortgages and you can tax credits, if you tax all mortgages and all credits alike, and every man's mortgages and every man's credits alike; and without those words you have no safe rule by which you can be guided. While I cannot say that the amendment presented by the gentleman from San Francisco is the best that could be presented for our consideration, yet I confess that I favor it, because it has that declaration of uniformity and equality in it. If that is in the interest of corporate wealth I do not know it. Why, gentlemen, wealth will take care of itself. It is the man of small means, who works every day for his money, and who does not have his whole time to think upon these questions, that needs protection. This is not in the interest of wealth. It places everybody equal before the law, and then the rich and the poor will have an equal strife. The great trouble with any taxation of wealth or money is that it hides itself. It never hides when we say taxation shall be equal and uniform. It is inequality and a want of uniformity that will allow it to hide.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. If these words are necessary why were they not put in the Constitution of the United States?

MR. ESTEE. I never knew that the Constitution of the United States prescribed any rule of taxation for States. It is true, that they have a right to prescribe a rule of taxation. They recently adopted an income tax, and a very important tax, too. It was unpopular for two reasons: First, it induced persons to lie about their income, because they did not wish their business exposed.

MR. TINNIN. Was it not unpopular because it reached the rich?

MR. ESTEE. Very possibly it might have been unpopular for that reason in part. But it was not on the ground of uniformity. No income tax can be uniform, and you cannot find an argument all through the books of the most experienced and the ablest financiers to show that taxation should not be uniform and equal. It is the very fundamental principle of governments that are organized under written Constitutions. Any other rule necessarily leads to ruin, and it is to avoid that that we should place it in this Constitution. It is true, only sixteen Constitutions of the United States have put in equal and uniform, but the others have such a system of taxation as prescribes what property shall be taxed, and how it shall be taxed so as to result in uniformity and equality. I have taken up more of the time of the Convention than I intended. But I look upon this question as the gravest that can come before us, and I hope it will be treated with the calmness and care that such a question ought to be treated.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I beg to answer the question put by the gentleman from San Francisco, as to why these words are not in the Constitution of the United States. They are, in effect. When taxation is directed by the United States Government upon the States, it is apportioned in proportion to the number of their Representatives in the lower House, and that is the equality which that instrument secures. In the time of the late rebellion there was two hundred and eighty thousand dollars assessed upon this State, and it was collected by the State in the ordinary way and paid over to the United States Government. The States took care of the method of collecting this taxation, and the General Government assessed how much each State was to pay, and this was settled by the number of their Representatives. The delegate from Los Angeles appeals to this decision in Vermont. It is of the character of most of the decisions in these States in those days. Debts are held to be property. The same question has come up over and over again in all the States of the Union, and it has almost always been held, down to this decision of this State, that these debts were property. In this case of the Hibernia Bank, this Supreme Court overruled all these decisions. They overruled the whole line of decisions in this State. Now this case is greatly misunderstood and perverted in the minds of many gentlemen here. The trouble did not arise on the ground of the word "equal" in the Constitution, but it was upon the ground that solvent debts and mortgages were not property within the terms of the Constitution. "All property shall be taxed in proportion to its value," is the language of the old Constitution. The question was whether solvent debts and mortgages are property within the meaning of that clause of the Constitution. That is the point upon which the case was decided. Chief Justice Wallace says:

"The question in hand is whether 'credits' are 'property' in the sense in which the latter word is employed in the thirteenth section of the eleventh article of the Constitution, which requires all 'property' to be taxed in proportion to its value."

Judge McKinstry states the question in the same form, and reasons it out in the same form. Again he says:

"It is property in possession on enjoyment, and not merely in right, which must ultimately pay every tax.

"The Legislature may declare that a cause of action shall be taxed, but a cause of action cannot pay the tax; and this because it has, and can have, no value independent of the tangible wealth out of which it may be satisfied.

Digitized by Google

"In a certain sense a promissory note or any credit is property. Whether 'solvent,' as the term is ordinarily employed, or not, it may be assigned for value; it would be difficult, however, to explain why a note discounted at twenty per cent. would be less appropriately called 'property' than one sold at par. In any case, a credit has no value other than it has required by reason of the probability that the property, having present actual value, upon which a tax is levied and collected, will be applied to the satisfaction of the claim it represents. He who has the property in possession must be taxed on its value, and the value once taxed cannot be retaxed without a violation of the constitutional provision that each value shall be taxed proportionately to the sum of all of the values." Again:

"Such is the uncertainty of human language that it is absolutely necessary to consider the context in order to determine the sense in which a particular word is employed if it can ever be employed in more than one."

Now, this Constitution that we are trying to make, after declaring that taxation shall be equal and uniform, goes on and declares in the context that these things shall be deemed property—that they are property within the meaning of this Constitution for the purposes of taxation. It was the omission of this provision that left the Court at liberty to hold that they were not property within the terms of the Constitution. Here you declare they shall be. They say: We are to be controlled by the context. They say we are to be controlled by the language of the instrument. But the Constitution failed to contain the language that these two things shall be taxed as property. If that were in there this decision never could have been made in the world, and it was the absence of this provision that led to that decision. Now, we propose to put it in our present Constitution. Personal considerations have nothing at all to do with it. If I am in favor of taxing mortgages and solvent debts, I do not know whether it is of any consequence. I drew the very section that you approve of here in this report taxing mortgages, and I suppose I may reasonably claim to be in favor of it. I have expressed doubts as to the possibility of carrying it out. I see some difficulties in the way of it. Perhaps the proposition of the gentleman from San Diego taxing incomes would be a very good way of reaching mortgages and solvent debts, but the trouble is that it is not practicable. You cannot get them in. How do you know how much the State has? How do you know what the aggregate of incomes is? How much is going to be assessed to incomes? Does anybody know? When the tax levy for two years is to be made you do not know anything about how much is needed. You have got to adopt something that is practical. We shall never come to a conclusion if we keep on in this way. Here is the proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco, that taxes shall be equal and uniform. There has been no difficulty about this, except where there has been an attempt to violate that principle. When that is done, declare that solvent debts are property, and attach to it this plan of the committee, and I do not see why you cannot get through with this business very briefly and satisfactorily.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I always listen with a great deal of pleasure to the gentleman from Marin, and would just as soon hear him speak as to take down the "Merry Wives of Windsor" and read them, but I do not agree with him. I want to consider this proposition. All of the difficulty, as has been clearly shown in respect to the taxation of mortgages and solvent credits in this State, has arisen under the decision in this case of the Hibernia Bank. As long as that decision remains, we want that provision out of the Constitution of this State. What the people expect of us is to tax a man for what he is worth. I have no doubt that a good many men on this floor have told their constituents that they wanted to tax men for what they were worth. These secured credits are apportioned equally, so far as taxation is concerned, in section five. Now, instead of adopting the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, if something like this is adopted I say that it will entirely accord with what the Committee has done:

"All property shall be taxed according to its true value in money. Property shall include credits, franchises, investments of money in bonds; also everything known as property under the laws of this State. Debts due bona fide residents of this State shall be deductible from credits not secured by real or personal property. Growing crops, property exempt from taxation by the laws of the United States, property belonging to the United States, this State, or any political subdivision of this State, shall be exempt from taxation, and no other property shall be exempt."

Now, this says that all property shall be taxed, and it defines the property. It defines the exemptions and that no other property shall be exempt. Now, by adopting something like this we would get out of this trouble, and this section would be entirely in harmony with section five. I maintain that the proper method of taxation is what has already been substantially adopted by the committee. I desire, at the proper time, to submit this amendment, and I hope that this amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention: I am greatly in hopes that this amendment, proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, will be voted down. The proposition of equality and uniformity was presented to the Supreme Court of this State about as early as the fifth or sixth California Report, in which they decided that uniform meant affecting persons and property alike. Subsequently, when they come to apply it to the question of taxation and to the question of what constituted property in this State, it had no application at all to certain classes of property which might be sold under execution, or might be given in payment of a just debt. The consequence is that the terms equality and uniformity have no signification at all, or whatever signification it may suit the whims or caprice of any Supreme Judge, or any other judge, to give them. If we are to take the terms, equality and uniformity, as a basis of taxation, we shall have precisely the condition of things that we had prior to the decision made by the Supreme Court that I have referred to. With reference to the terms that are now proposed to be substituted, it gives us one single solitary rule by which the measure of the taxes upon property at least shall be determined, and that is its true value in money. No one can misunderstand or misapprehend the scope or extent or signification of the term. It means the true value of money in property. Adopt this as the standard, as the rule and guide for the valuation upon which taxation shall be levied, and there can be no room for construction; there can be no room for the Supreme Court to say that such an individual has been unequally taxed, or that such and such a law affects persons and property unequally, or that it does not affect persons and property alike. It is to avoid this thing of construction that is attempted by the provisions that it is now proposed to engraft upon the Constitution. Our instrument, as we have it now framed, declares that all laws of a general nature shall be uniform in their operation, and we have further provided that all laws with reference to taxation shall be general laws. Now, what more can you ask? It requires that all property shall be taxed in proportion to its value, and so far as a general law applicable to the State is concerned, it makes it uniform throughout the State. If you can obtain a better system than that I apprehend that you will have to go somewhere else to find it. There can be no better system conceived, and you avoid the difficulty in the decision of the Supreme Court with reference to the scope and effect of these very identical terms which you are seeking to engraft upon this Constitution.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I believe that the merits of this case have been fully developed by discussion, and that the members are now ready to vote upon the pending questions. I move the previous question.

Messrs. Howard of Los Angeles, Stedman, Lewis, and Smith of Santa Clara also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Miller, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Barbour, Joyce, Miller, and Howard of Los Angeles.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring in the amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole. The Secretary will read the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, or unsecured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real and personal, according to its true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

Upon concurring in the amendment of the committee, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, Gorman, Doyle, Tinnin, and Dudley of Solano.

The roll was called, and the Convention concurred by the following vote:

ASSESSMENT OF LAND.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one government section shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, by sections or fractional sections, in such manner as the Legislature may by law provide."

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I desire to make a few remarks with regard to this section before this Convention votes upon it, and in doing so I have no hesitation in saying that the proposition in this section is entirely impracticable, and in my judgment cannot be enforced if adopted. I believe that the action of this Convention has frequently been subjected to severe criticism on all hands, and, however, true or just that criticism has been it is not for me to say, but I undertake to say that if this Convention adopt this provision I am afraid that we will be subjected to ridicule if not contempt. Now, sir, the proposition as I understand it is to tax all tracts of land which exceed within their exterior limits six hundred and forty acres of land by Government sections, or fractional sections. Now, sir, I undertake to say that it cannot be done, unless this State goes to the expense of extending the United States surveys over all the agricultural lands of the State, or rather over all the lands now being owned by private parties in this State. And I go further than that, and say, that even then it is impracticable and it cannot be done. It is well known, I suppose, that in this State the best and fairest portions of it is included within Mexican or Spanish grants. What proportion of the agricultural lands are included in these tracts I will not undertake to say, but I believe it is safe to say that at least one half of the agricultural land is included within either Mexican or Spanish grants; and if you will examine the map of grants in the Surveyor-General's office you will find that in the year eighteen hundred sixty-six there were nearly five hundred millions of acres confirmed; and you will there see that they are in every conceivable shape and form. Now, how are you going to assess these vast agricultural lands in this State pursuant to section four? That section four is inflexible, and demands that the land shall be assessed according to the legal subdivisions of the United States, a proposition which I think I have shown cannot be done. Now, sir, in illustration of my argument I will state further, that in nearly every instance—I think it is safe to assume—these ranches have been divided and subdivided, and they have been so divided and subdivided according to the purchaser's wish, or according to the convenience of the purchaser, or the owner of the ranchos. I have had considerable experience in these matters and I know that they are irregularly divided. They have not been sold according to the legal subdivisions, or according to the United States survey. Where they have it has been the exception and not the rule. Now, if that be so I would like to have some gentleman of this Convention inform us how we are going to comply with the amendment to section four. I say that it is entirely impracticable and impossible.

MR. WYATT. It does not say United States survey; it says merely by sections.

MR. SCHELL. Will the gentleman inform me of any other kind of survey?

MR. WYATT. It says as the Legislature may direct.

MR. SCHELL. It says that they shall be assessed by sections or fractional sections.

MR. WYATT. As the Legislature may direct.

MR. SCHELL. Will the Legislature direct any other than the survey of the United States? I apprehend not. It is too clear for argument that the sections and fractional sections referred to can be none other than the sections of the Government of the United States. In illustration of my argument upon this point, I could refer to four, five, or six Mexican or Spanish grants in the county in which I live. I will take two on the west side of the San Joaquin river. They run along the west bank of the San Joaquin in a northwesterly direction. The one includes eleven leagues and, I believe, the other four leagues, and the average width is about four or five miles. These ranchos have been divided and subdivided, and have been sold to different individuals in tracts of from a few hundred to several thousand acres each, and in every instance they have been divided by a line drawn as nearly as may be at right angles with the general course of the river, consequently these division lines run diagonally across every section. Now how can the Assessor expect to assess these subdivisions of land pursuant to this section? I therefore propose to offer this amendment:

"Amend section four, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, so that it will read as follows:

"SEC. 4. Every tract of land, containing within its boundaries more than one Government section, shall, for the purposes of taxation, be assessed and valued, as far as practical, by sections or fractional sections, in such a manner as the Legislature may provide; provided, that lands included within the limits of Spanish or Mexican grants may be assessed in such tracts and in such manner as may be prescribed by law."

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: The gentleman may have a good deal more knowledge than I have upon this subject, but I say that there is no difficulty in it at all, and that any Surveyor who can run a straight line, by running a single line of the rancho, can take a rule upon the map and project every section. Mr. Edgerton said that he had consulted the Surveyor-General, and the Surveyor-General said to him that there was not a particle of difficulty in ascertaining the section by a rule and pencil. Now, sir, I do not propose, myself, to vote for any dodge upon the subject. No landholder can complain that his land is not assessed at a fair value, and no landholder can complain that the necessary means are not taken to ascertain what the value is.

MR. SCHELL. Take a Mexican rancho which contains seven leagues of land which has never been surveyed by the Government of the United States, how can you assess it by sections? The gentleman is stating a case that does not exist. I do not believe that there is a half-dozen ranchos in this State that have not been surveyed by the Government.

MR. SCHELL. I have been informed that such is not the case.

MR. HOWARD. Then the Surveyor-General of the State is mistaken. The place to go is to the Surveyor-General of the United States, he has the information. Now, we have heard a great deal here about land monopoly. The only way to cure that evil is to assess land at its true value, and that will knock these monopolies, and it is a course of legislation which no landowner can or will complain of; that is, he cannot complain with any justice; he will not complain unless he intends to evade his proper responsibility for his just proportion of the expenses of the Government. I say, sir, that this is one of the wisest and most salutary provisions in this article, and I trust that the Convention will adhere to it, and that they will not allow themselves to swerve from it by any small objection that may occur to the mind of any one about a little expense.

MR. LAINE. Is not the original section better than the committee's amendment?

MR. HOWARD. No, I think not. I prefer the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, as reaching the evil with more energy. It is absolutely necessary to the interests of this State. For it cannot be denied that the accumulation of large tracts of land by a few individuals is a great evil in this State. It cannot be denied that the only effectual way of reaching the evil is through taxation, of which no landowner can complain. Therefore it is that I am in favor of adhering to the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment offered by the gentleman from Stanislaus, Mr. Schell.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section four, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, so that it will read as follows: 'SEC. 4. Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one Government section, shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, as far as practicable, by sections, or fractional sections, in such manner as the Legislature may provide; provided, that lands included within the boundaries of Spanish or Mexican grants may be assessed in such tracts and in such manner as may be prescribed by law.'"

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I would ask the gentleman to accept this amendment, which I send up to be read for information, and I desire to speak to it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than six hundred and forty acres shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, in tracts not to exceed six hundred and forty acres, in such manner as the Legislature may by law provide."

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: That amendment tends to obviate the necessity of the word "section," which is used in the amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole. It does away with the word "section," and refers to tracts of land. That is to avoid the necessity of resurveying the lands to correspond with Government sections. It allows the Assessor to assess the lands without being governed by the Government survey, so that land of the same class and of the same quality, can be assessed alike, no matter in what shape or form it lies. It avoids the expense of resurveying the land. It may be done according to the surveys, or any other form the Assessor may determine. I think it is a correct proposition, and I think it avoids the objection to the present system.

REMARKS OF MR. GREGG.

MR. GREGG. Mr. President: I think the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole is a pernicious one, because it lays open every assessment of such lands to the charge of unconstitutionality. It is a difficulty that cannot be remedied by any law passed subsequent to such a clause. The lands from Lake County clear down to San Diego, are mostly covered by original grants. They have been segregated in small parcels by metes and bounds. If this section, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, is adopted, every assessment not made in accordance with it will be an unconstitutional one most certainly. These tracts of land lying in these counties do not follow the lines of sections. You may have one hundred and sixty acres of land in three quarter sections, and when you attempt to describe it you will have to describe it by metes and bounds. Now, sir, much of these lands are unsurveyed, and I think I am correctly informed upon that subject. The exterior boundaries are surveyed, it is true, but not the lands by sections. It will take three or four years before the lands could possibly be surveyed, and after you have got them surveyed it would be just as difficult to describe some of the tracts. I am told by the Surveyor of my County that it would cost one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars to survey the grants, for the purpose of assessment, within that county. In this haste you are running on to destruction. I am in favor of going as far as any man in the taxation of property, but this is not the way to reach this proposition. I think we should leave this to the Legislature, and not put it in the Constitution at all.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin. The term Government section has a technical meaning. It must be surveyed by authority of the Government. That is what it means and nothing else. That is the very fault of the original section, and of the amendment of the Committee of the Whole. It preserves that expression—Government sections. Applied to these Spanish grants it will be entirely impracticable. Now, as I understand it, the purpose is to arrive at a full valuation of the land. That I am in favor of decidedly. I think it is one of the evils that we have submitted to for a long period of years, that large tracts of land have, in a measure, escaped taxation by being assessed in bulk. The value has thereby been reduced below what it would be if the tracts were assessed in small subdivisions. I am heartily in favor of the purpose of the Convention and the Committee of the Whole to arrive at a just and full valuation of these large tracts of land, but I see the difficulty in the section as it stands, and I am decidedly in favor of the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from El Dorado. It leaves it to the Legislature, saying that they shall be assessed in tracts of not to exceed six hundred and forty acres.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: It seems to me that the only way to be safe is to amend this section so as to apply this rule to the lands which have been surveyed now, and the Legislature or Counties hereafter would, as they saw fit, extend the surveys when they found it necessary. It seems to me, that at present, all you can say is, that where lands are surveyed, or where they may be unsurveyed, hereafter this rule shall apply, and they shall be assessed separately. Now, if you allow this section to stand as it is, in the first place, there will be a great deal of land escape taxation. That clause requires that it must be assessed by sections. The latter clause, saying in such a manner as the Legislature shall provide, does not affect it at all, because that only gives the Legislature the right to provide the manner in which the assessment, by sections, shall be made. How are you going to get at these large ranchos? They would not be surveyed, and you could not survey them except by sections, and by simply putting in the word "or" there it would amount to nothing at all; that would give the Legislature the right to assess them in any other way. The amendment of the gentleman from El Dorado goes farther, it says that all land shall be assessed in tracts not to exceed six hundred and forty acres. How are you going to survey six hundred and forty acres?

MR. LARKIN. There are private surveys.

MR. MCFARLAND. It has been stated that these lands have never been surveyed at all. If you are going to assess by subdivisions, let it be by Government sections. Between the two, you had better keep the word section there, but it seems to me that it would be better to apply the rule simply to those lands that have been surveyed or that shall be surveyed; that makes it mandatory upon the Legislature and would give them the power to extend the surveys.

MR. HOWARD. I shall vote for the amendment of the gentleman from El Dorado. I think it covers the whole difficulty and meets it fully.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: A great many locations are made on unsurveyed lands. I do not see how, under this section, these lands could be assessed at all. According to my view the section as it stands is imperfect. It will not allow taxation to be placed upon all of the lands of this State. If these Spanish grants or ranchos are unsurveyed and not sectionized, of course they cannot be taxed. The amendment of the gentleman from Stanislaus, somewhat modified, would effect the purpose. If, after the word "section," we let it read, "as established by Government survey; if not so surveyed then in such manner as the Legislature may by law provide," would cover the point.

MR. HOWARD. If you amend merely by putting in the word "or," don't you subject the taxation on land to any other rule the Legislature may adopt?

MR. HAGER. I do not use the word "or." I say that it shall be assessed by Government sections, if surveyed; if not, then in such manner as the Legislature may provide. That is to cover the cases omitted in the section as it now stands.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: The only difficulty now is, that the Assessors have to equalize on too large a scale. Some land is good and some is bad, and they go upon their judgment and take the aggregate value of the whole. Perhaps if their attention was directed to a small tract of land they would do better. Now, to sectionize these lands by the State, I do not believe can be done for a million of dollars. I do not believe that in the counties where my lands are it can be done for one hundred thousand dollars. There are no sections there. The township lines are all there is to go by, and I do not believe it can be done for one hundred thousand dollars. It would beggar the State to undertake to do it. The proposition of the gentleman from El Dorado seems to be very feasible. It is subject to some difficulties, but the Assessors could ascertain the amounts just as correctly, at any rate, as they do now. I prefer that proposition as best subserving the purpose. The one proposed by the Committee of the Whole is utterly impracticable. It is absolutely ruinous for the State to undertake it.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I wish to send up a notice.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice that, on to-morrow, I will move to reconsider the vote by which section two of the report of the Committee of the Whole on the article on revenue and taxation was adopted."

ASSESSING LAND IN SMALL TRACTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Stanislaus, Judge Schell, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one Government section shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, as far as practicable, by sections, or fractional sections, in such manner as the Legislature may provide; provided, that lands included within the boundaries of Spanish or Mexican grants may be assessed in such tracts and in such manner as may be prescribed by law."

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment will not be adopted in its present form. The term "section" is a technical term, and will apply to the sectionized sections as made under Government surveys. I think the other amendment is much better, where the term "six hundred and forty acres" is used.

The amendment was lost—ayes, 31.

MR. GORMAN. Mr. President: I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one Government section, and through which section lines have been or may be run, shall be assessed and valued, for the purpose of taxation, by sections or fractional sections; and all lands where the boundaries only are surveyed, shall be assessed and valued, for the purpose of taxation, in tracts of six hundred and forty acres, or as nearly equal to that amount as may be possible, and in such manner as the Legislature shall provide."

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I have the same objections that I had to the other, that the words Government survey are used. There would be the question to determine in the Courts, whether there was a Government survey. I deem it objectionable upon that ground. The reason I offered a substitute was to avoid that.

Digitized by Google

MR. GORMAN. There is not a word said about Government surveys. It only says land that has been surveyed.

SPEECH OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I hope this Convention will either adopt the amendment as reported by the Committee of the Whole, or adhere to the original section reported to this Convention by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. What is the use of a survey if it is not a final survey? What is the use of having a description of land placed upon the record for purposes of taxation that has no real official sanction? It is by reason of the unofficial character of surveys that your large assessments are defeated. This, and this alone, is what has cost so much in the loss of taxes. It has been in consequence of these defective descriptions of land. Suppose it does cost three million dollars to survey the lands in this State—for a final survey. You would actually save money by the experiment, because you lose a large amount annually in assessments. Our county expended, during the last two years, nearly thirty thousand dollars for the purpose of designating, by official surveys, the lands of that county. They have never lost any money by the expenditure. If you survey by six hundred and forty acre tracts, it is true you may give your official sanction to it, but when you come to have it surveyed by Government sections, what will be the result? It will amount to confusion worse confounded. It is useless to adopt any but the one single plan, and that is to follow the Government surveys. Gentlemen say they want to except out these large grants. Where is the Spanish grant that has been approved that has not been surveyed and the township lines run? There are none. All that is necessary is to project the section lines. The land is numbered in lots and parcels.

MR. AYERS. Do you mean to say that all the exterior lines have been run?

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, sir.

MR. AYERS. And sectionized?

MR. HERRINGTON. I did not say so.

MR. LARKIN. What proportion of the land in California has been surveyed by sections?

MR. HERRINGTON. Perhaps half of it.

MR. LARKIN. How are you going to compel the Government to survey the balance?

MR. HERRINGTON. I don't care whether the United States Government surveys it or not. They would not be Government sections necessarily. Suppose it is a United States survey that is wanted. When these section lines are projected upon Government lines, there is no material difference. But it is worse than folly to require them to survey these lands by any other than Government lines. It is worse than folly. Now it is true that the Surveyor may follow meridian lines, but it is equally true that in surveying, where there is nothing of this character required, where he is not required to follow Government lines, the lands will be cut up and subdivided, as they have been, and sold without reference to these lines at all. The lines may be designated by some natural object, such as a hill, or a creek. It may be designated either as hill land, as bottom land, or surveyed around as a wood land tract. There is no regularity about it. There would be nothing but confusion from the beginning to the end.

SPEECH OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: The gentleman is laboring under a very great mistake if he thinks that everybody can make a Government survey. In a case, Middleton v. Low, in the thirtieth California, there is a case where this is very clearly decided. It was decided there that no Government lines existed except those run by the Government. Our Supreme Court decided that no such sections existed, notwithstanding they were run by the County Surveyor, under authority of the State. They never did exist until the Government lines were run by the Government. They undertook to mandamus the Governor and compelled him to issue a patent for one of these sections; the Court refused to order him to do it; the Court held that no such section existed. Therefore, I say, that the only man who has authority to run these lines is the man who derives his authority from the United States. Any lines run by authority of this State, does not make, and cannot make a Government section. It is as much impossible for them to make a Government section, as it is for God Almighty to make a yearling calf in ten minutes. As far as any of these amendments are concerned, I would rather see the whole section stricken out. I have had some experience myself in defeating these taxes, and I know that the great difficulty that exists in enforcing the payment of taxes, is the numerous and complicated requirements of legislative enactments and constitutional enactments, requiring that certain things must be done. The more laws you have the more requirements there are for Assessors to comply with, the more danger there is that they will not be complied with. In every instance where they fail to comply with the law, the tax cannot be enforced. Now, you may amend so as to require that these large tracts of land shall be assessed in tracts not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, and still you will find ignorant and stupid Assessors, who will assess them the other way. They will get six hundred and forty-one acre tracts; they will get seven hundred acre tracts in a great many instances. In a great many cases they will fail to comply with the law. In a great many instances it will be impossible for them to comply with the law. In a great many cases in these large tracts of land no lines are run, and no monuments fixed by which they can be segregated into tracts. And as it takes time to survey so much land these large landholders will avail themselves of all these technicalities, and the result will be, and I warn you of it now, that they will escape taxation. For these reasons I think it advisable to strike the whole provision out.

SPEECH OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: Various propositions have been submitted to this Convention to discourage land monopoly. Among others are sections three and four of this article. Section four, as presented by the committee, as well as the substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole, have the same object in view. In my judgment, each of them fails to accomplish the great good which ought to be accomplished, in providing that large tracts of land exceeding six hundred and forty acres, should be assessed at the same rates as smaller tracts. In section three, provision was made that cultivated and uncultivated land of the same quality, and similarly situated, shall be assessed at the same value. The same idea is sought to be carried out here: that large tracts of land shall be assessed at the same rate as small tracts; and to accomplish that purpose, these different propositions have been presented. The one presented by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation involves the expenditure expended for the survey of these large tracts of land. That is a proposition which is wholly impracticable. Then another proposition was presented in Committee of the Whole—not yet presented here, because they had no reason to sustain it—that these parties shall be required themselves to have these surveys made. Ultimately the Committee of the Whole adopted this section as it now stands here. The plain construction of the language is, that the State must have this land surveyed, or it cannot be taxed at all; because it says that every tract of land containing in its boundaries more than one section shall be assessed, for the purposes of taxation, by sections and fractional sections, in such manner as the Legislature may provide; therefore, it cannot be assessed except by sections. They are not to be assessed at all until the Legislature goes to this vast expense, which, in some counties, will amount to more than one hundred thousand dollars to sectionize these grants for the purposes of taxation. Now, sir, it has been asserted here over and over again, that these Spanish grants have been sectionized, with scarcely an exception. The truth is, as any one can ascertain by going into the United States Surveyor's office, that the majority of them have not been sectionized. There is where the whole evil comes in. The proposition of the gentleman from El Dorado is the only proposition which is practicable in this connection. It reads as follows:

"Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than six hundred and forty acres, shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, in tracts not to exceed six hundred and forty acres, in such manner as the Legislature may by law provide."

It is said by some gentleman that these surveys can be made on paper. If that is the way they are to be made, intelligent Assessors can assess them without the aid of a Surveyor. If it is to be done on paper, no man is fit to be an Assessor who is not intelligent enough to make the survey. I don't see any use of the last clause, however—"in such manner as the Legislature may by law provide." We have already said, as to the manner by which it shall be assessed, that it shall be assessed in tracts of six hundred and forty acres or less. It is hard to say what this last language would apply to. The Constitution itself has provided the manner, so far as it is necessary to specify the manner. If not, the Legislature is required to carry out the provisions of this Constitution, and I don't see any necessity for using these words, because so far as that goes the purpose is accomplished without it. If the gentleman were present I would move to strike out the last words of the proposed amendment. I think it will accomplish the only thing that can be done in this matter. I think it is very desirable to do so. It ought to be in the Constitution. We will then have gone as far, perhaps, to discourage land monopoly as we can legitimately go. We will have provided that cultivated and uncultivated land, of the same quality and similarly situated, shall be assessed at the same value. The same thing ought to be stated in section three, that large tracts of land of the same value should be assessed at the same rate per acre as these smaller tracts.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: As far as the subdivision of land is concerned, it don't make much difference whether taxes are made by quarter sections or half sections. Now, sir, as far as I know, very few Spanish grants in this State have been sectionized. Land that has been taken up—Government land taken up—as you are all aware, has been taken up by the dummy system, and these dummies have sold their titles off to the large landholders. As the land question is under consideration I think we should give it all the consideration it needs. There is not another question to-day of more importance to the people. If we look over the State we will see, according to the report of the Surveyor-General for the year eighteen hundred and seventy-three, that there are one hundred and twenty-two landholders which own twenty thousand acres and upwards. There are sixty-seven which average seventy-three thousand acres, or one hundred and fourteen miles square; one hundred and fifty-eight own ten thousand acres each; Lux and Miller own two hundred and sixty-eight thousand acres. The only equitable way is to tax them in proportion to the productive capacity of the land. If they are taxed in that manner it don't make any difference whether they are taxed by quarter sections or half sections, or by large Spanish grants. I would like to call your attention to an amendment I shall introduce if opportunity offers. In the early part of the session I introduced a proposition to make land limitation practicable, and to restore to the State the land that has been stolen from it. It is almost absolutely necessary to have a resurvey of the State. Of course, it would involve considerable expense. There are a great many portions of the State that would not pay for surveying; besides, there are thousands of acres in the valleys, of good agricultural land; but it will not pay for surveying, because there is no irrigation on it. We shall never make land limitation possible until there is introduced a general system of irrigation; but in order to obviate the question as well as possible, I have an amendment when it is in order.

"Every tract of land held by any person, corporation, or association of persons, shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, in proportion to its productive capacity."

Digitized by Google

Now, again, in order to make these gentlemen pay their taxes we have to have a graded tax. We should have a graded taxation on all tracts over six hundred and forty acres; that is just and proper.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I rise to make an explanation of a matter here connected with this amendment. Before I left my county I was instructed that I should look after an amendment of this kind. We have a grant in our county which contains about nine thousand acres; there is a great deal of good land and there is also a great deal of very poor land. Now, a person going over the country would make up his mind that there is more bad land than good land, but go and investigate and you will find that a majority of it is very good land. Now, the same class of land in the range of mountains opposite is settled up by small farmers, who are assessed at an average of five dollars an acre, while this other is assessed at six bits and one dollar and a half per acre. Now, this is a very important matter. Now, there ought to be some way of providing for a subdivision of this land. Of course, I understand the difficulties in the way, where these grants have not been surveyed, but it seems to me that the amendment of Mr. Larkin would meet the matter; the others would destroy the possibility of collecting taxes.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. CROSS. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. White, West, Ayers, and Barry.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Gorman.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Lost, and the Convention refused to concur.

TAXATION OF MORTGAGES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to the Committee of the Whole, to section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. A mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation by which a debt is secured, shall, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an interest in the property affected thereby. Except as to railroad and other quasi public corporations, in case of debts so secured, the value of the property affected by such mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or obligation, less the value of such security, shall be assessed and taxed to the owner of the property, and the value of such security shall be assessed and taxed to the owner thereof, in the county, city, or district in which the property affected thereby is situate. The taxes so levied shall be a lien upon the property and security, and may be paid by either party to such security; if paid by the owner of the security, the tax so levied upon the property affected thereby shall become a part of the debt so secured; if the owner of the property shall pay the tax so levied on such security, it shall constitute a payment thereon, and to the extent of such payment a full discharge thereof; provided, that if any such security or indebtedness shall be paid by any such debtor or debtors, after assessment and before the tax levy, the amount of such levy may likewise be retained by such debtor or debtors, and shall be computed according to the tax levy for the preceding year."

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move to strike out all after the word "thereby," in line three.

SPEECH OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not prevail. It only remands the question back into the same condition which it has been in, and what will be the result. If a man owns a farm and there is a mortgage on that farm, he will not only pay the tax upon the farm, but the tax on the mortgage also. I don't think the people of this State are ready for such a proposition as that in the organic law. The section provides that a mortgage for the purposes of assessment and taxation, shall be considered as a portion of the property assessed. It is property, and the tax is placed upon it, where it belongs. It represents capital. Now, it is no answer to this proposition to say that these men will increase the rate of interest if they have to pay the tax. Let them do so; so they pay their taxes.

MR. TINNIN. What security have we that these people will pay their taxes under section five. We will simply leave them where we found them.

MR. AYERS. The law will require it.

MR. TINNIN. Such laws are never effective.

MR. AYERS. There has been a thorough discussion of this plan throughout the State, and I believe this plan is acceptable. I do not think that this Convention now ought to go back upon its action in that respect. It is a step forward at least. It is reaching a class that has never been reached before. It is placing them upon the tax roll. It is compelling them to take an interest in government. As it is now they do not care what becomes of the Government, or what rate of taxes men have to pay. They form an aristocracy of non-taxpayers.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The reason I make this motion to strike out is that the latter part of the section includes only details. The first provision of that section provides that mortgages, and deeds of trust, shall be considered an interest in property; that the party holding the mortgage shall be assessed for the amount of that mortgage, and pay taxes upon that amount, and the party in possession shall pay the balance whatever that shall be. Treat it as a lien upon the property to the amount of the mortgage or deed of trust. I think the gentleman makes a mistake when he says these parties will not be assessed. They will be assessed, and the party in possession will not be compelled to pay taxes upon property he does not own.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: If the gentleman from El Dorado wants to accomplish exactly what he says he does not want to accomplish, then let him strike out the latter part of this section, for that will do exactly what he says ought not to be done. One thing is certain, there is no double taxation in this. The man who holds the mortgage will pay taxes on that, and the man who holds the land will pay taxes on the remainder, so that the land pays taxes once and no more. There is no double taxation. There is no taxing the money and the land too. Now, the gentleman wants to strike out the rebate in favor of the mortgagor, leaving the mortgagee to pay on all the mortgage, and the mortgagor to pay on all the land. He wants to strike out the exemption, which will accomplish exactly the reverse of what he pretends to want to accomplish. As a matter of fact, when the lender is taxed on his money he will charge it up to the borrower, and he will have it to pay anyway, either directly or in the way of increased interest. Now, in the name of reason, what is the use of making the debtor pay taxes on the whole of the land and then on the mortgage too? Do you not skin the debtor? That is all there is of it, that is the whole purpose. Now, as to railroad corporations, their debts are all outside of the State, their bonds are held in Europe. You cannot tax them, for they are held abroad. As to their land, if they own land in this State they will have to pay taxes on it. Now, a part of the section which the gentleman moves to strike out contains a clause that either party may pay the taxes. That is right. The mortgagor may, in order to save his land from being sold for taxes, have to pay the tax on the mortgage; if so, he has a right to charge it up against the debt. Again, it may become necessary for the man who holds the mortgage to pay the tax on the land in order to save his security, and in such case he may add the amount to his debt. That is right and proper; and yet the gentleman moves to strike it all out. I hope the motion will not prevail, sir.

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I cannot see what the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, is driving at. If he claims to be a representative of the farming interest, he is certainly not fairly representing that interest now. If he be a fair representative of that interest, he will sustain the provision as it now stands, and not try to strike out all the safeguards in it. If men have money to loan, they are going to loan it with reference to the interest they receive. I can see no difference whether a man pays the taxes on his farm entire, or whether he pays part and the mortgagee part, to be charged back to him in the shape of interest; but if the latter part of this section is stricken out, the farmer will have to pay the whole of the tax on his farm, and the tax on the mortgage too. He will have no rebate. If he has a farm worth ten thousand dollars, and there is a mortgage on it for five thousand dollars, he must pay taxes on ten thousand dollars—the value of the farm—without any rebate, and then, either directly or indirectly, pay the tax on the five thousand dollar mortgage, making in all fifteen thousand dollars, when in fact he is only worth five thousand dollars. I prefer to take the section as it is, or else strike the whole article out, and leave it as it has been in the past.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: Section two provides that laws shall be passed taxing all moneys secured by mortgage, etc. It taxes all credits secured by mortgage. The mortgagee is, therefore, by the express provision of this section, required to pay taxes upon the credit. Now, when section five provides that the mortgage shall, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, constitute an interest in the property affected thereby, it is entirely nugatory. The mortgagee pays his tax upon the credit, and whether the mortgage is treated as an interest or not is entirely immaterial. The land must respond to the tax, and the entire land must pay the tax, and the entire tax upon the land falls upon the mortgagor. He pays taxes upon the whole land, whether the mortgage is an interest or not, and the mortgagee pays taxes upon the credit secured by the mortgage, and that constitutes double taxation, and nothing else. We argued this question to exhaustion in Committee of the Whole. We endeavored to point out the monstrous injustice of taxing the same property twice. We seemed to have reached the judgment and sentiment of this Convention, that such a principle was wholly wrong, and in conformity with that decision, we adopted the section as it now stands. We are now again called upon, through the thin disguise of amendment, to revoke that decision, and establish in its stead the monstrous principle of double taxation—a principle repudiated everywhere by the whole world, by every true and honest man. The gentleman who makes this motion to strike out, avows the intention of reaching the very object which this section as it stands accomplishes. Why does he want to strike it out, and leave cloudy what is now made clear? What is the object of this thing? Is he in favor of double taxation? for that is exactly what his motion calls for. Now, sir, the vote on this motion will decide whether this Convention is in favor of double taxation or not. That is the question now before this body.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. MURPHY. I think the majority of the Convention are in favor of concurring with the Committee of the Whole, and I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Huestis, O'Donnell, Dunlap, and Freeman.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the Convention refused to order the main question, by a vote of 44 ayes to 58 noes.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope, sir, that the Larkin amendment will be rejected, because it will destroy the section. I think of all the sections adopted on the tax question this has been received with the most favor throughout the country. I know I get papers from my district, and the people say if the Convention does as well, or half as well, on other points we will adopt the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: The gentleman has spoken for Santa Cruz, I will speak for Sonoma. I have been there and interviewed many citizens in respect to section five, and they are in favor of the section. I believe they will heartily concur in this principle. There is no need of argument. That section should commend itself to the hearts of the people of this State. It is the only equitable system that we have had. It divides the taxes between the owner of the land and the man who holds the mortgage, and that is the reason I favor it. Any proposition that will tax a man for what he is worth and there stop, it seems to me should meet with indorsement from every man who loves justice. The other system compels the owner of the land in effect to pay a double tax. It is unavoidable. He has got to pay the tax upon his land and then upon the mortgage. This section is clearly and carefully drawn, and I hope the Convention will stand by its work. If you adopt the motion of the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, you are voting fairly and squarely for double taxation, and that is not what the people of this State want.

SPEECH OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I heartily concur with the sentiment expressed in regard to double taxation. The law never did, and does not now, make double taxation upon anybody. Double taxation is the act of a party who compels the borrower to pay the tax on the loan. It never was the law that did it. The whole argument proceeds upon the theory that the law makes double taxation. If I rent a house for one hundred dollars a year, with a provision that I shall pay the taxes, I am not compelled to do it by the law. I might say, if there was no tax on real estate, I would only have to pay one hundred dollars, and, therefore, real estate should not be taxed. But the owner can make me pay his terms in one case as well as the other, if my necessities are such that I must accept his terms. Now, sir, I confess I have been disposed to favor this new theory, which I believe I may say has no precedent in any State, of making a mortgage an interest in the land, and requiring that the party holding the land shall only pay so much as is left after deducting the mortgage.

MR. WHITE. You are mistaken.

MR. McCALLUM. The only question with me is as to how it will work. In regard to the clause in this section, in relation to the railroad corporations, that should certainly be stricken out. There ought to be no such exemptions. The theory upon which it is based is entirely wrong. The argument that all these railroad bonds are held outside of this State, is not true; and I think, sir, that the motion of the gentleman to strike out all after the word "thereby" should prevail, otherwise this is the grossest injustice.

MR. WHITE. Will the gentleman allow me to refer to the States of Kentucky, Minnesota, Nebraska, Michigan, Virginia, South Carolina, Massachusetts, Kansas, New York, and Illinois.

MR. HERRINGTON. If we strike out the words "except as to railroads and other quasi-corporations," that is all that is wanted.

MR. McCALLUM. I think the suggestion made by Mr. Herrington will accomplish the point which I make. But, as it stands, I shall vote for the amendment of Mr. Larkin. I am satisfied the section, in its present shape, will do a great deal more harm than good.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. KLEINE. There is about eighteen gentlemen here who keep the floor all the time, talking, talking, and don't give anybody else a chance. It seems to me they have talked about enough, and I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Stedman, McConnell, Huestis, Waters, and Gregg.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the Convention ordered the main question by a vote of 52 ayes to 39 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin.

NOTICES.

MR. HITCHCOCK. I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in the substitute of Mr. Johnson, for section two of the article on revenue and taxation, reported to the Convention by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. LARUE. I give notice that I will, to-morrow, move to amend Rule Thirty-five, as follows: "That the main question shall only apply to the amendment to such section or substitute as may be under consideration."

TAXING CORPORATIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section seven. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 7. No corporation, except for benevolent, religious, scientific, or educational purposes shall be hereafter formed under the laws of this State unless the persons named as corporators shall, at or before filing the articles of incorporation, pay into the State treasury one hundred dollars for the first fifty thousand dollars or less of capital stock, and a further sum of twenty dollars for every additional ten thousand dollars of such stock; and no such corporation shall hereafter increase its capital stock without first paying into the State treasury twenty dollars for every ten thousand dollars of increase."

Digitized by Google

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. That was stricken out, because in the report of the Committee on Corporations there is a similar provision.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: This is the section that proposes to levy a tax for the privilege of mining in this State. So far as the mining interests are concerned they are not able to bear this burden. This is a most extraordinary proposition. Now, I do not propose, as far as my influence can go, that we shall make them pay a tax for the privilege of mining. I do not propose to make them pay one hundred dollars for the privilege of engaging in mining. They are taxed enough already. The Convention has stricken out the license tax for merchants, and why continue it against the mining interests of the State.

MR. TERRY. This simply extends to those corporations who incorporate without a cent of capital, but with millions on paper; for the purpose of swindling people.

MR. TINNIN. As far as the swindling corporations are concerned, they will simply go over to Nevada to incorporate.

MR. TERRY. Let them go there. The habit has been to sink a hole in the ground, and call it a mine, and then incorporate for five or ten million dollars, and then to put their stock upon the market for the purpose of swindling the people. If they are required to pay into the State treasury a per cent. of their pretended capital stock, they won't be so anxious to have such an immense amount. But if a mining company has fifty thousand dollars worth of property, it can very well afford to pay to the State the sum of one hundred dollars for the privilege of carrying on the business without personal responsibility. I hope the Convention will not concur.

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: If that were the object to be attained, and this section would accomplish the object, I should be in favor of it.

MR. TERRY. Wouldn't it?

MR. MILLER. The corporations of which so much complaint is made, are corporations organized for mining in Nevada, and they come here to San Francisco and incorporate for five or ten millions of dollars. The evil is in selling these worthless shares to the people of California. That is where the evil comes in. The incorporation does not harm any one; it is the flooding the country with these worthless shares. If this section is passed they will simply go over to Nevada to incorporate, and sell their shares in San Francisco just the same. Take the Yellow Jacket Mining Company; it is incorporated under the laws of Nevada, and the shares are sold here just the same as the shares of companies incorporated under our laws. This section cannot reach the evil, but it will prevent the formation of companies for the development of our own mines. That is why I object to it.

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: Evidently one or two able gentlemen here do not understand the effect which the adoption of this provision would have upon the mining interests of this State, or else the intent is to destroy it. Now, sir, I know something about the mining business of this State. A careful examination has been made by the people of my county, and we have ascertained that of the ten principal mining companies of Nevada County, which now yield nearly two million dollars a year, only one of the ten would have been organized had a provision of this kind been in force at the time. Now, sir, gentlemen who know anything about this business, know this, that the mining operations of this State, so far as they have been carried on successfully for a number of years, have been carried on—mainly carried on—by corporations. The people of the immediate locality take some of the stock at low prices, and thereby furnish the means to erect machinery and do the prospecting which is necessary in order to ascertain whether it will be a valuable mine or not. The gentleman who is talking about an incorporated hole in the ground does not understand what he is talking. Only one mining company which operates in this State, has ever put its stock on the stock boards of this State, and that mine has yielded between two and three million dollars in bullion.

MR. TERRY. Does the gentleman know of any mine worth fifty thousand dollars that would not pay one hundred dollars?

MR. CROSS. In order to ascertain whether there is any mine at all or not, requires a large expenditure. In early days a man could take a pick and shovel and ascertain whether there was any gold or not. But now it requires the expenditure of large sums of money. I refer the gentleman to the Idaho mine, in Nevada County, which has paid one hundred and seventeen dividends of from five dollars to seven dollars and fifty cents each per share on the capital stock; and the prospecting of that mine required the expenditure of a large sum of money, and at the time if such a provision as this had been on the books, it would not have been undertaken. I could cite the gentleman to a number of cases. It comes right down to this, as I understand it: if you want to cripple legitimate mining enterprise in this State, adopt this section. Whatever reaches the mining interest reaches every other interest in the State.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: This Convention appears to have applied the principles of Artemus Ward. He was willing to sacrifice all his wife's relatives on the altar of his country. Each industry represented here is perfectly willing to sacrifice every other industry. That was the case with the corporations, and it is the case now with the miners. This proposition appears to me to be correct, and I will say to Mr. Tinnin, that as the miners on this floor were so willing to take the representation away from San Francisco, I shall vote to sustain this proposition.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: Whenever the interest of mining is mentioned I feel very warmly in favor of coming to their support, because I have followed the business of mining. But, sir, I believe this proposition is right. It is a license for carrying on business in a corporate form, in order that the State may receive enough to pay for taking care of their papers, which now she does not receive. I think this would have a good effect. A company that is going to do a bona fide business will not object to paying this small amount, and it will have the effect to bring down these companies to something like the actual corporate stock. These figures are much less than the State of Pennsylvania requires. For two hundred thousand dollars and less, they require a tax of two hundred dollars, and not exceeding four hundred thousand dollars, four hundred dollars tax.

MR. McCOY. Have they any gold mines in Pennsylvania?

MR. BARBOUR. They have some coal mines there. I don't know but a good coal mine is as good a thing as a gold mine. I say it is a fair tax. If these companies cannot pay into the State treasury the sum of one hundred dollars, let them be denied the privilege of incorporating.

SPEECH OF MR. KLEINE.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. President: I am utterly opposed to interfering with the mining interests of this country. Now, I am astonished at one gentleman on my left side, who said that a certain company sunk a hole in the ground, and then sold shares of stock. Perhaps I can instruct the gentleman a little. Now listen, gentlemen. I, myself, lived in a mining country for eleven years. I lived on the Comstock, and I remember the time when they sunk a little hole in the ground, and the stock was selling for four bits a share. They sunk a hole in the ground, just as the gentleman says. What was the consequence of these holes? What was the result? When they sunk that little hole down one thousand feet they struck ore which yielded the shareholders fifty millions of dollars. I have no doubt the gentleman on my left side would be very glad if he bought into that little hole. [Laughter and applause.] I have no doubt any one here would be glad to purchase in that little hole. [Laughter.] I know that silver mining cannot be carried on in Nevada, without corporations. The man who tells me that these mines can be carried on without corporations, that man don't know anything about it. These miners sometimes spend millions in sinking a shaft to find out whether there is any ore or not. These gentlemen would mighty quick buy stock in one of these little holes, if they knew it would pan out rich. [Laughter.] But they are mad when they buy stock and lose. When they purchase stock, they intend to get the best of these men if they can.

MR. TERRY. I never buy or sell.

MR. KLEINE. I have no doubt you would have been very glad to purchase one hundred shares in that little hole in Consolidated Virginia in sixty-nine and seventy. [Laughter and applause.] I remember when that stock sold at fifty cents a share. They made fun of it. I was one of them. I didn't know anything about it like the gentlemen here. Now, I hope this Convention will not interfere with the mining interest. I hope not. I shall oppose it. I am no gambler. I never gamble. I don't believe in it, but I believe in prospecting a country where we know there is gold and silver. You must remember the mines of Nevada are not like they are here, that you can dig down three or four feet. The mines of Virginia City run over ten thousand men, who support their wives and children in sinking these little holes. [Uproarious laughter.] There are thousands and thousands employed in San Francisco making machinery for these little holes. The man who tries to cripple the mining interest, tries to cripple the State of California.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I am in favor of taxing all corporations, not the mining corporations only. None of these companies ought to object to paying one hundred dollars into the State treasury. It costs money to keep all the papers of these corporations, and I hope the section will remain.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I am in hopes this Convention will concur in the action of the Committee of the Whole in striking out this section. It is true that we have tolerated a great many abuses from the manner in which stocks have been floated upon the people of California; but it is not true that this section provides a remedy for these evils. Let the gentlemen present a remedy and we will sustain it. Let them give us some chance by which we can save the people. We look over these corporations, and we find nearly all this worthless stock brought from the State of Nevada, and Arizona, and Utah. You may pass this law, and they will still continue to flood the market with the stock, and this section will afford no security against it whatever. All they have to do is to incorporate in the State of Nevada, and open a branch office in San Francisco, and float their stock upon the market just the same. The people want some restriction that will hit where it is intended. We don't want to place ourselves in a position where we will be laughed at. These bogus companies don't care a straw whether you pass this section or not, for they can easily get around it. I can see no use in the section.

SPEECH OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: This matter was fully discussed when it was up before, and I do not intend to occupy much time again. It seems strange that an industry like the mining industry in this State, should be put upon the defensive, in a body possessed of the intelligence of this body. It seems very strange that there should be an attempt made here to cripple that industry. I should think the gentleman from San Joaquin, who represents a farming community, would be content to see the farmers made a privileged class, above all others, so that they can produce millions and millions of dollars' worth of wheat every year, ship it, receive the money for it, and not pay a dollar's tax on it. Now, is it a wise policy that seeks to discourage men from investing their money in enterprises that develop the resources of the State? Is it right, or fair, or just, or politic, to put a tax upon them which will prevent them from investing their money in these enterprises? Do these gentlemen ever take into consideration the immense amount of money invested in mining? Do they ever take into consideration the fact of the immense amount of money which goes into the hands of the laboring men of this State? It all goes back to the people. Do the gentlemen understand that this money that is collected in San Francisco goes right to the mountains, and is there paid out to the laboring men at a rate which no other industry in this State can or will afford to pay? Do these gentlemen understand that this industry employs thousands and thousands of men, from whom you never hear any complaint in regard to wages? I think an industry of that kind ought to be fostered and protected, rather than to be made the object of an attack of this kind. If the gentleman from San Joaquin understands corporations in California, he must know this, that it is necessary to have a large capital stock, for the shares are distributed around and used to develop the mine. The gentleman seems to think that people are deceived by reason of there being such a large amount of capital stock named in the articles of incorporation. Was any man, who is not a lunatic, ever deceived in any such manner? He buys a piece of paper marked one hundred dollars, for twenty-five cents; now, is any sane man ever deceived into the belief that the piece of paper is worth one hundred dollars because it is marked one hundred dollars? There is no harm in it, no fraud in it. The corporation names a certain sum as a limit in raising money to develop the mine, and no one is deceived by it. Now, a few men own a mine, and they want to form a corporation and convey title to the corporation. It will cost them, by this section, ten thousand dollars to change from a deed to stock certificates. No man is going to pay any such sum as that. They will go off over to Nevada and incorporate there, where they do not have to pay a cent. Now, I hope the good sense of this Convention will assert itself, and that the action of the Committee of the Whole will be concurred in.

Digitized by Google

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

NOTICE.

MR. LARUE. I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote whereby section five of the report of the Committee of the Whole on revenue and taxation was concurred in by the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

Lost.

LICENSE TAXES.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section eight. The Secretary will read:

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. No license tax shall be imposed by this State, or any municipality thereof, upon any trade, calling, occupation, or business, except the manufacture and sale of wine, spirituous and malt liquors, shows, theaters, menageries, sleight of hand performances, exhibitions for profit, and such other business and occupations of like character as the Legislature may judge the public peace or good order may require to be under special State or municipal control. But the Legislature may by law impose any license, or other tax, on persons or corporations owning or using franchises or corporate privileges.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I am opposed to the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole. There does not seem to be any good reason why every business that is run upon a legitimate scale, every business that is a necessity to the community, should be added to in the way of a license tax in order that parties may be enabled to carry on business in the community where they are required. Now, it is true that it has been customary heretofore in this State to levy a license tax upon all classes of business. It has never operated equally; it never can operate equally. There is no business whose regular receipts remain the same from month to month, or quarter to quarter, or from year to year, so that any reasonable calculation can be made of the profits to be derived. It is equally uncertain with reference to merchandising as it is with other callings. There is no more sense or reason in licensing mercantile business than there is in licensing the legal profession. It is a tax that is added to the commodities sold, and it is paid by the consumer in all cases. It is therefore an unequal burden that is directly assessed and taxed to the articles when they are sold, and the consumer, by his necessities, is compelled to pay it. I commend these considerations to your careful reflection, and I do earnestly and seriously believe that they will commend themselves to your judgment. There can be no escape from the conclusion that it is a compulsory tax levied upon the consumer. It is a question that should not need any argument. The poor bear these burdens and the rich escape. Thus the tax is heaped upon that portion of the community least able to stand it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the action of the Committee of the Whole.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Keyes, Joyce, O'Donnell, Moreland, and Doyle.

The roll was called, and the recommendation was concurred in by the following vote:

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITIONS.

THE PRESIDENT and Mr. McNutt presented petitions, requesting the exemption of certain property, used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

RESOLUTIONS—TAXATION.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, This Convention appears to be somewhat disorganized on the tax question, and in order to arrive at the true basis for the action of this Convention, I move the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Convention that we are in favor of taxing all property, including mortgages and evidences of debt.

Resolved, That we are opposed to making deductions or rebate in any form whatever.

MR. TINNIN. I second the resolutions.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: There seems to be a large minority, at least, in this Convention that is not satisfied with the action of yesterday. The consequence was that they have given notice of a reconsideration of the matter, and it will probably come up this morning. I introduce this resolution to ascertain the views of the Convention on these two questions: First, is it the sense of this Convention that mortgages and evidences of indebtedness should be taxed; and, second, are we in favor of rebates or reductions. It seems to me that if we could get a vote upon these two questions separately, that it will decide the thing without any further argument. It would be a very easy matter to fix up the details. I would therefore like to have the sense of this Convention upon these two propositions.

MR. ROLFE. Do you mean evidences of debt, or solvent debts?

MR. KELLEY. Solvent debts.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. One thing may be assumed to be the sense of this Convention, that the longer we debate it the less sense we shall get; therefore I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Tinnin, Kelly, Hall, White, and Smith of Santa Clara.

The roll was called, and the motion lost by the following vote:

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I am perfectly willing that the sense of the Convention should be taken, although it has already been taken. It is thought by a good many that it would relieve this question of a great deal of difficulty if they could ascertain the sense of the Convention directly as to the rebate. The Convention has already adopted section five by a very large majority. This is the second time that section five has been adopted. We have also adopted section two twice; and I think that the sense of the Convention has already been thoroughly decided that they are in favor of the rebate. Therefore, I call for a division of the question. I ask that the vote be taken on each proposition contained in the resolution separately.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope that this resolution will not pass. We have spent day after day in discussing these questions, and I cannot see the use of getting any further general expression of opinion. It is certainly time to vote upon measures, and not upon abstract propositions. I hope, therefore, that this resolution will not prevail.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I hope that this resolution will prevail.

MR. WHITE. Which part of it?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I expect to see the resolution divided. It is, in fact, two resolutions; and the motive in offering these two resolutions which are opposed to each other, is for the purpose of getting an expression from this body, as to whether debts should be deducted or not. That seems to be the bone of contention between the gentlemen upon this floor in relation to taxation. It is not so much the propositions that have been offered here, because part of them have met the approval of gentlemen upon this floor; but the same gentlemen that would have approved the propositions voted against them, because they either did not allow the deduction of debts from credits, or because they did allow the deductions of debts from credits. Now, the only thing this Convention is divided upon is whether there should be a deduction or not. That is the point of divergence—deduction or no deduction—and we might just as well settle the matter by voting for the resolution allowing the deduction, or for a resolution allowing no deduction. Then we know the sense of the body upon that vital question.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I would ask the gentleman whether this Convention has not twice voted aye on the proposition of rebates in adopting section five.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Well, sir, they probably have in section five, but I would say——

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Suppose we have this abstract resolution, and then go on a practical measure, does this abstract vote bind us at all?

MR. BEERSTECHER. No, sir.

MR. HOWARD. What is the use of voting on it then?

MR. BEERSTECHER. It would not bind us any more than a man's promise, unless he desired to keep it. We have voted on section five, but there we have only voted in relation to mortgages. Now the proposition is not only as regards mortgages, but as regards solvent debts—unsecured credits. The gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Howard, says that it would not bind us; but it would certainly indicate how this Convention stands upon the question of deduction of debts from credits.

MR. HOWARD. How can that be when we have changed four or five times.

MR. BEERSTECHER. A number of gentlemen that have been unable to agree, are desirous of having this resolution carried, because it will determine their votes. They have said that it will determine their votes, and believing them to be gentlemen of veracity, I believe that it will determine their votes. I hope that one or the other of the resolutions will prevail.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: If there is any subject more than another that has been worn out in debate in this Convention, I think it is this question of taxation. We have debated the question, and all kinds of subjects surrounding it. We have discussed the firing upon Fort Sumpter, the problem of infallibility, the problem of transubstantiation, of religious worship, and talismanic influence. I think we have gone far enough, and I move the previous question.

MR. JOHNSON. I call for a division of the question.

THE PRESIDENT. It cannot be divided. The second resolution would have no meaning whatever, standing by itself.

MR. GRACE. Then it is impossible to get an expression of opinion.

Messrs. Grace, Condon, Huestis, and Freeman also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the resolutions, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Kelley, Doyle, Condon, and O'Donnell.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to adopt the resolutions by the following vote:

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: In accordance with notice, I move to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment to section two, as adopted in Committee of the Whole, was concurred in by the Convention on yesterday.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

REMARKS OF MR. MORELAND.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: This section was concurred in yesterday by the Convention while we were operating under the previous question. It was done, not because a majority of this Convention, as I think, were in favor of this section, but because they thought it better than the original section proposed by the Committee on Revenue and Taxation. I voted for it, but at the same time I am not satisfied with it as it stands. It does leave the power with the Legislature to pass laws concerning taxation, and it seems to me to leave the power with the Legislature to exempt any property that they may see fit. It does not define property, either, according to what I think the definition ought to be. I have heretofore opposed the deduction of debts from credits, and quite a number of gentlemen have concurred with me in that position. We have made a consistent fight on it, but I see that it is the sense of this Convention that deductions shall be made. I shall, therefore, favor a section which will include that principle, and which I think is much better than section two as it now stands. Here is a section which has been gotten up by Mr. Johnson, and which defines what property is, and for the information of the Convention I will read it: "All property shall be taxed according to its true value in money." There is a declaration that all property shall be taxed according to its true value in money. Then follows a definition of what property is: "Property shall include credits, franchises, investments of money in bonds; also everything known as property under the laws of this State. Debts due bona fide residents of this State shall be deductible from credits not secured by real or personal property. Growing crops, property exempt from taxation by the laws of the United States, property belonging to the United States, this State, or any political subdivision of this State, shall be exempt from taxation, and no other property shall be exempt."

It seems to me that that section is not liable to any misconstruction. It seems to me that it is plain. It embodies the views that I have heretofore expressed upon this subject, except this matter of deduction, and as it is the sense of this Convention that deduction shall be made, I propose to support this section as the best one that has been offered, provided the motion to reconsider is carried.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: The amendment we have adopted embraces all property of every class and description. It requires it to be taxed, and therefore prevents any exemption. If we reconsider the next morning everything we have done the day before, we may make up our minds to sit here until next snow time. Therefore I move to lay this motion on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Hale, Blackmer, Beerstecher, Burt, and Wilson of Tehama.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to lay on the table by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the motion to reconsider.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I hope this motion to reconsider will prevail, not for the purpose of adopting what is known as the Johnson amendment, either in its old form, or in its present. For one I shall vote to reconsider this, because I believe, not only, that we should tax solvent debts and retain the principle of rebate, but we should do it by one uniform rule. I am satified, sir, that the principle contained in what is known as the Boggs amendment is sound in principle, simple in its operation, and will be satisfactory to the people of this State. If I can get an opportunity to offer that for the consideration of the Convention, I shall certainly do so. Whether I will be able to do so or not depends upon circumstances. Now, I hope this motion to reconsider will prevail, and if it should prevail it will practically dispose of the question in both sections two and five.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I am doubtful if any better proposition can be adopted than the one already adopted. There is only one other better that can be adopted with any degree of propriety, and that is the theory of taxing incomes. The very moment that you recede from the proposition of rebate, which is involved in the section already adopted, there is but one other course left that will bring equality and that is to tax the income on loaned money, and to tax it so that it will be at least equal to the tax on the money itself. I am for retaining the section as it now stands, although the other is the next best proposition that the Convention can fall upon.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I move that the motion to reconsider be made a special order for Tuesday next, at ten o'clock. I make this motion in good faith, and for this reason: I look around here and see the number of absent members. Now, supposing that we reconsider this motion and proceed to discuss the proposition over again, the probability is that when the matter comes up finally the Convention will change the whole thing. That is the only object I have in making the motion.

MR. LAMPSON. Would it not be better to put it two o'clock.

MR. SCHELL. I have no objection to that. But I think it had better remain at Tuesday at ten o'clock.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: A great deal of time has been spent over this question of taxation. I have taken very little part in it because I was not here during the discussion of it in Committee of the Whole. Now, I think this Convention has settled down to the two questions that may be formulated in a proposition that will meet the approval of all. As for myself I am in favor of taxing all kinds of property, real estate, personal estate, money in possession, money loaned, and everything capable of being reduced to money. Everything that may be designated property I am in favor of taxing, and requiring that it should bear its equal portion of taxation. These are the views I entertain, and that we can get at them in that way. All property——

THE PRESIDENT. The merits of the question are not open for debate.

MR. HAGER. I will suggest that instead of making this a special order it would be better to appoint a special committee to formulate these two propositions, and bring it before the Convention at some other day. I believe that the Chair, understanding as he does, the different views, could appoint a committee of about seven to formulate the proposition, and bring it before the Convention. In all probability that would harmonize the whole thing.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I hope that this proposition will be voted down, and that the motion to reconsider will prevail. I am opposed to the motion to make it a special order. It is taking unnecessary time. We have this matter before us now, and we might as well adjust it. We are in better condition to adjust it now than we will be hereafter.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I trust that the suggestion of Judge Hager will be adopted. I do not see any such evidences of harmony upon this section as my friend from Sonoma does. I am in favor of taxing mortgages, but I am not in favor of taxing them without the rebate. There have been fifty propositions which, as I think, do not differ one from the other at all. The formulation of them has been the trouble. In some respects there has been a fundamental difference in the substance of these propositions. Now, I believe that three or four men can formulate a proposition which a majority of the Convention will adopt.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. I hope the suggestion of Judge Hager will be adopted. It seems to me to be the only path out of the present difficulty.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I seconded the motion to have this made the special order for the reason that it is a question which demands, and it has had, a full house. That full house has determined, by a considerable majority, to formulate this proposition in a certain way. Now, when this house is very much reduced, it is proposed by these gentlemen, who have from day to day urged their views and failed to have them adopted, to take this matter up. Now, sir, as this has been considered a most important proposition, I hope that it will come up for consideration at a time when we can reasonably expect to have a good and liberal attendance. As to the proposition to have a committee of seven to formulate the report, I say that the Committee of the Whole has formulated a report and the Convention has acted upon it, and adopted it with very little change. The result of the committee will be confusion worse confounded. The action of the Committee of the Whole has been commented on by the press and is satisfactory to the people so far as I have been able to ascertain. Let us not tinker it.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I entirely agree with the views expressed by the honorable member from Nevada. To refer to a committee would imply that we are of one mind, when we are very well aware that we are not. It is entirely appropriate that we should postpone the consideration of this motion until there is a full house. Those who are absent are not absent from choice. They are entitled to have a hearing on this question. They looked upon the thing as settled, and are now away, and in justice to them and in justice to the propriety of having this subject considered, if it is considered again, before a full house, I am entirely in favor of the motion to postpone.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I entirely disagree with the gentleman. This notice was given yesterday, when there was a full house, and if these members are absent it is their own fault. We cannot afford to postpone matters here simply for the convenience of members who choose to absent themselves. I hope that this motion to postpone till next Tuesday will not prevail, and that we will proceed to act upon this matter now.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am opposed to postponing this question. I am in favor of at once proceeding to vote upon propositions that are now in the hands of gentlemen upon this floor. This house clearly voted this morning that they were in favor of the general scheme adopted in Committee of the Whole; but the exact form we are not in favor of. We ought to dispose of this article so that we can proceed to other matters. This matter has been sufficiently discussed. All that I desire to see done is that the different propositions shall be read from the desk, and each one have an opportunity to vote upon them. The Convention is agreed upon one proposition or the other.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope we shall proceed immediately to the consideration of the questions before us. The gentlemen who are absent are entitled to no regard so far as the duties of the Convention are concerned. Those members who are present have a duty to perform, and I hope we shall go on and do it.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope we will proceed at once with this report, and carry it through. Remanding the question over to next Tuesday will carry the whole report with it.

THE PRESIDENT. This is a mere postponement of the motion to reconsider.

MR. AYERS. Well, I think we are as ready to vote now as at any time. Those who are not here were advised by notice that a motion to reconsider would be made to-day. I am satisfied with the sections as they stand. There is nothing wrong in them that I can see, and I think they meet the judgment of a majority of the Convention.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment to the motion. I move to amend by substituting as follows: "Resolved, That section two be referred to a special Committee of seven, to be appointed by the President, with instructions to report next Monday, and that their report be made a special order for Tuesday next at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M."

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is not in order. The question is on the motion to make this motion to reconsider the special order for Tuesday next.

The motion was lost on a division, by a vote of 40 ayes to 49 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in the report of the Committee of the Whole.

Upon the motion to reconsider, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Biggs, Johnson, Barry, Cross, and Winans.

The roll was called, and the motion to reconsider prevailed by the following vote:

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. It does seem to me that the measure as it now stands——

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The motion to reconsider was a motion to reconsider a vote by which section two was adopted. At the time when section two was adopted, as appears on page two of the Journal of yesterday, we were acting under the previous question. My impression is that the Chair has ruled upon this point before, to the effect that no discussion is in order on the reconsideration of a section adopted under the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The previous question was exhausted on that vote.

MR. SMITH. Mr. President: So far I have refrained from exhausting any time in expressing my views upon this question. As every member will be called upon to cast his vote upon this question, I wish to arrive at a better understanding upon this subject than I now have. It seems to me that it is a matter of great doubt whether mortgages can be taxed under this system as it stands.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The point of order is that we have got no order.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman from Kern will proceed.

MR. SMITH. Mr. President: It seems to me that this is a very weighty matter, and I think it should be left to the Legislature. The only objection I have to either of these propositions, the section as adopted and the amendment now proposed, is that it makes certain restrictions in the matter of deduction. I say that at one time the deduction might be considered well, and at another time it would not be well, and I therefore say that it should be left to the Legislature. Now, upon general principles, in an old settled community, where business is well settled in old channels, I should be opposed to the taxation of mortgages. Upon the general principle it is a false theory. But I see that there may be a necessity for taxing mortgages. Now, this section is passed upon the theory and in accordance with section five. I have studied section five very carefully, and it seems to me that if that section means anything, it means exemption of mortgages from taxation. It absolutely prohibits the taxation of money represented by mortgages. You tax the land simply, and you do not get at the money represented by mortgages. Now, sir, so far as I am personally concerned I do not care whether section five is adopted or not, but I come here pledged on the subject of taxing mortgages, and I could not vote for that section because I could not conscientiously vote for it under my pledges.

MR. WHITE. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is discussing section five.

MR. SMITH. Section two and section five go together, and the two sections are necessarily connected. I am forced to discuss section five in connection with section two. I hope the gentleman will allow me to express my views without unnecessary interruption. You could not assess the money represented by mortgage, because it has already been exempted. You have already assessed it by assessing the mortgage, and by making that mortgage an interest in the land, you have simply made the man who loaned the money pay a certain proportion of the tax on the land, and you have exempted the money from taxation. The idea of taxing mortgages, it seems to me, is because they have a degree of tangibility. Other credits have been exempt because you could not get at them; but mortgages are of record; they have a degree of tangibility, and by that means you have a way of getting at that money that you would not otherwise have. Now, you admit that you have got to go somewhere else to get it, by making it an interest in the land. I say that section is a fraud. There is no necessity for these first words of section five. They are unnecessary, and they are mischievous.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President and Gentlemen: The proposition offered by Mr. Johnson as an amendment, or rather as a substitute for section two, is the result of deliberate care, study, and reflection, and in saying that I am in favor myself of the adoption of the substitute, I will call attention to one reason why I am in favor of it. Section one, as adopted by the Convention, provides: "All taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws."

Now, taxation shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, but a certain class of subjects may be entirely exempt from taxation under section one, unless there is some other proviso to be found in the article that prevents the exemption of any character of property. Section one says that taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects. That would allow the Legislature to positively exempt a certain class of subjects, or, in other words, a certain class of taxable property. Section two, as adopted yesterday, provides: "Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation," but it applies no limitation upon the powers of limitation to exempt any other class of subjects. I call your attention, gentlemen, to the fact that if my theory is correct, and I believe I am, though I may be wrong about it, taking the first section to which I have referred, which says all taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects; and taking the second section, which enumerates what shall be exempt, but does not say that the Legislature shall exempt nothing but what is enumerated. It will allow the Legislature, and will give the Legislature full power to exempt any particular class of subjects. The question, therefore, is whether it is desirable, whether we will, by our votes, confer upon the Legislature the power of doing what we, ourselves, would not do. Whether we will say that all property in this State, unless it belonged to the State or some political subdivision of the State, or unless it belonged to the United States or be exempt according to the laws of the United States, shall be exempt from taxation, and that no other character of property shall be exempt. I am in favor of that proposition; I am in favor of exempting nothing, no class nor character of property, unless it belonged to the State or to the United States, or unless the laws of the United States, by express provisions, provide for the exemption.

MR. CROSS. Does not section two, as we have adopted it, provide that all property shall be taxed except so and so?

MR. BEERSTECHER. No.

MR. CROSS. Read the first part of it and see.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It says: "Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage or trust-deed, or unsecured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real and personal, according to its true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize, except in case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State."

MR. CROSS. How does that give a chance for exempting property?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I think there is a chance to exempt property. I have every reason to believe that the construction would be in favor of exempting other property. The section as presented by the gentleman from Sonoma, has a clear and positive definition upon the subject. It says: "All property shall be taxed to its true value in money. Property shall include credits, franchises, investments of money in bonds, and also everything known as property under the laws of this State. Debts due from bona fide residents of this State shall be reduceable from credits not secured by real or personal property. Growing crops, property exempt from taxation by the laws of the United States, this State, or any political subdivision of this State, shall be exempt from taxation, and no other property shall be exempt."

Credits, of course, include mortgages. Now, Mr. President, it may be urged upon this floor that the adoption of this section would prevent a rebate in the matter of mortgages, but if that should be urged, I respectfully call the attention of the gentleman upon this floor to section five. Section five relates entirely to mortgages, and settles the matter as regards rebates in reference to mortgages. The section, as presented by Judge Johnson, is clear, terse, positive, and definite. It says, that everything shall be taxed except what is enumerated, and that nothing else shall be exempted from taxation.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I think the majority of this Convention has long since made up its mind upon this question, and all that we want is to hear a thing read to know whether we want it or whether we do not want it. We hear an amendment read and we understand it. Now, feeling that way, I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Stuart, Hunter, O'Donnell, and Biggs.

The Convention refused to order the main question, on a division, by a vote of 39 ayes to 40 noes.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move that section two be referred to a special committee of nine, to be appointed by the Chair, with instructions to report to this Convention an amended section, and that the same be made the special order for Tuesday, at two o'clock P. M.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will have to make it refer the entire report. He cannot refer one of these sections.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I do not desire to make but a few remarks upon this subject at this time, but there are two propositions that are far superior to this one that has just been read. They have been read to the Convention but have not been acted upon, because of the fact that gentlemen have succeeded in getting in other propositions. I refer first to the one which has been called the Boggs proposition, and the other is the one read yesterday by Mr. Blackmer. Mr. Blackmer's proposition I believe is the best, but either one is vastly superior to the one now before the Convention. I hope that the Convention will vote down this and permit either one or the other of these propositions to be considered.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: This is as perfect an amendment as we can possibly get here. This amendment relieves the section from the objections urged against it on yesterday. It says in plain terms, not that the Legislature shall pass laws, etc., but that all property shall be taxed. There is a vast difference between saying that all property shall be taxed, and saying that the Legislature shall pass laws to tax property. When we were providing for the right of trial by jury, we did not say that the Legislature shall pass laws to provide for trials by jury. When we were desirous of saying that persons who were charged with crimes should be bailable, we did not say that the Legislature should pass laws to that effect. We said that all persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, not that the Legislature should pass laws allowing them to be bailable. If section two had been permitted to stand as it was adopted by the Committee of the Whole, there would have been at the next session of the Legislature the most formidable lobby that was ever assembled here. Every interest would have been combined that desired to prevent the passage of these laws. But as the proposition is now formulated, I think it is as perfect as it can be made. The language is broad: "Property shall include credits, franchises, investments of money in bonds; also everything known as property under the laws of this State." I cannot see any objection to those terms. The striking out of the word money would do no harm, but would do no good. The only difficulty that we have been laboring under is, upon the declaration of the Supreme Court, that choses in action were not property. That is the difficulty. The remedy applied here is certainly sufficiently broad to reach and remove that objection and place the question where it ought to be.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The first proposition in the amendment under consideration is well enough of itself: "All property shall be taxed according to its true value in money;" but as to the definition, in the next subdivision, it says: "Also everything known as property under the laws of this State." Now, the Supreme Court decides that mortgages are not property, and that would be the interpretation as the law stands now.

MR. JOHNSON. It says that property shall include credits. It is credits that the Supreme Court has decided is not property, and the word credit is inserted there and also all property known under the laws of the State; so that it includes everything.

MR. LARKIN. There are three distinct classes of property mentioned, and aside from that you must go to the statutes of the State to find out the definition of what is property. I think it is preposterous to put a thing of that kind into the Constitution. This section should be self-explaining. There should be a clear definition of property without referring to what is declared to be property under the laws of this State, or under the laws of any other State.

Another proposition here that I object to: "Debts due bona fide residents of this State shall be deductible from credits not secured by real or personal property." That proposition, in my mind, is objectionable. That proposition was voted down this morning on the resolution of Mr.

Digitized by Google

Kelley, from Yolo, by a vote from two to one. To my mind it is clear that the only proposition that we ought to adopt is a proposition which has not been allowed to come before the Convention, and that is the Boggs proposition. I shall vote against this, and vote for that whenever I get a chance.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I think, sir, of all the propositions that have been presented this is perhaps the most faulty, and I will try to explain. In the first place, it undertakes to say that all property shall be taxed according to its true value in money, and then it says: "Property shall include credits, franchise, investments of money in bonds; also everything known as property under the laws of this State." I presume that where it undertakes to describe what property is in terms, it may be said it excludes all other. Now the original section two said: "All property, including franchises, capital stock of corporations, or joint stock associations, and solvent debts." Why the capital stock of corporations and joint stock associations is left out I am unable to determine. I applied to the gentleman and he says it is in section seventeen, but I turn to section seventeen and that is stricken out. I turn to section sixteen and that has the word franchise without the capital stock of corporations. So that the capital stock of corporations is substantially excluded. Now it says "everything known as property under the laws of this State." Now what is known as property under the laws of this State? Who will undertake to say what is known as property under the laws of this State? If by the laws of this State property is defined, why by the laws of this State that definition may be changed and there is a door open to exempt anything from taxation that the Legislature may declare is not property within the meaning of the law. Why should not the Legislature pass a law to say that property of corporations shall not be deemed property under the laws? Why can they say that lands shall not be deemed property; that cattle, sheep, horses, and everything within the range of the jurisdiction protected by the sovereignty of the State of California is exempt from taxation because they declare that it is not property within the meaning of these sections. Now, sir, if you pass this section in the form it is, you take away the possibility of exempting every piece of property in the State from taxation.

Now, in regard to the other matter—about this offsetting of debts and credits. Never was a greater fallacy promulgated than that of offsetting against property that ought to be taxable some imaginary thing in the shape of a debt. It is well known that money lenders manage to prove that they owe more money than they own. Take the case of the late Mr. Reese. He was never taxed, because he always owed really more than he owned. What is to prevent any man giving his note for twenty thousand dollars; borrowing the money, if you choose; keeping that money for three days, until the Assessor passes, and then taking up his note? There is offsetting credits and debts, and it is the most perfect machinery for a man to avoid taxation. I am in favor of taxing real estate, personal estate, money, and everything that a man is worth. Why not go at it in some direct mode, without this circumlocution, without ambiguous terms that no two men agree upon the interpretation of. Why, sir, I have been here sitting and listening to the debates on this matter, and I have been desirous of seeing some few rays of common sense thrown into this Convention, that some intelligent purpose may come out that we may give to the people of this State as a rule and guide. Why not go at it direct, and tax property, real estate, money in hand, money that may be reduced to possession, and everything that a man is worth, and when you have got all the property in the State taxed, what more can you tax? If the law is so fixed on a certain day, the Assessor goes to a man and says: "Mr. A, how much real estate have you?" Puts it down. "How much personal property have you?" Puts it down. "How much money have you?" Puts it down. "How much money have you loaned out." Puts it down. "Do you swear solemnly that is all the property you possess?" He swears. If he swears falsely, confiscate his property to the extent of twenty-five or fifty per cent., or indict him for perjury. That is a direct mode of taxing property; taxing substance, not shadows; taxing realty, instead of something intangible. According to my notion it would be the most direct mode of getting at it. On the debtor and credit system you allow a man to escape taxation. I am opposed to it.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: It is well known to every gentleman that from eighteen hundred and fifty-one up to the decision of the Supreme Court, with the exception of two years we acted upon the principle of rebate. There was no complaint about taxes at all until the decision of the Supreme Court. Other States have operated under it, and we have operated under it in this State, and there was no ground for complaint. If the gentleman would read the whole report of the Committee of the Whole on revenue and taxation, he would find that in the twelfth section it is required that the assessment shall be made of the property owned by each person at twelve o'clock meridian of the first Monday in March, in each year. It would do a man no good to borrow money for three days, as Judge Hager says. He would have the money and be taxed on it, or else he would not have the debt to offset. The money power is very much opposed to this thing of taxing mortgages and solvent debts, and if you do, they wish to place it upon the farmer. I trust in Almighty God that this Convention will not stultify itself and go back on what it has done. We have time and time and again said that there should be a rebate, and I hope that we will stick to it and not stultify ourselves by going back on it.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I looked upon this proposition with some suspicion in the outset, because it was not as thoroughly examined as the other proposition was. I have taken the pains to examine this proposition very critically and carefully, and after a careful consideration and comparison with the statute as it now stands, I am satisfied that it is as clean cut a proposition upon the ideas that this Convention have adopted, as it is possible to conceive or arrive at. Now, what is property under the laws of this State? I call your attention to the definition as given in the Political Code: "The word 'property,' includes both real and personal property. The words 'real property' are coextensive with lands, tenements, hereditaments. The words 'personal property' include money, goods, chattels, things in action, and evidences of debts." How much broader do you want it. There is nothing left out. It covers the whole ground.

MR. CROSS. Why is it, then, that when our present Constitution declares that all property shall be taxed, that all these different classes of property escape taxation?

MR. HERRINGTON. Because it had a meaning in the Constitution which it did not have in the statute. What the Supreme Court decided was property under the Constitution was not what was property under the Act of the Legislature for the purposes therein contemplated; yet for the purposes contemplated by the statute, it might be just as much property as anything in the world, although it might not be included in the constitutional definition of property. But here we propose to make what is now understood in the statute to be property, property under this Constitution, and by so doing we include everything.

REMARKS OF MR. TERRY.

MR. TERRY. Mr. President: I am opposed to this amendment, for several reasons. One is, that I do not think the definition of "property" sufficiently comprehensive or sufficiently explicit. I do not think that it is safe to put in a definition that compels a party to go somewhere else to find out what is meant by it. It is better to give a full definition in the section itself, and that can be done in very few words. It has been done in some of the propositions which have been formulated as substitutes for this section two. I have one here which was formulated by the gentleman from Santa Clara, and which, to my mind, contains a much better definition than that offered by the gentleman from Sonoma, and for that reason I prefer it. I shall offer it if I get an opportunity. It is as follows:

"All property in the State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word "property," as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed."

Now, there is a perfect, comprehensive, unmistakable definition of the term "property," as used here; broad enough to include all kinds and classes of property, and not subject to construction at all. I propose to add to that:

"Provided, that growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation within in this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

While I am willing to permit the Legislature, if they choose, to allow rebate in favor of those who owe debts to citizens of this State, I am opposed to putting that into the Constitution. I am opposed to the principle of rebate. I do not think the Assessors should strike a balance sheet for the people of the State. Very few people who are in the habit of keeping accounts, know how much they owe. It is impossible to detect falsehood in those cases. It offers too much temptation for a man to offset against his credits, imaginary debts, or debts which are founded upon no consideration, or could not be enforced anywhere. But if it is the sense of this Convention that that rebate should be made, I submit to it, but I insist that the present substitute offered for section two is not sufficiently explicit in its definition, and therefore I hope it will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will not be adopted. I am opposed to the principle of rebate, and vote against it on account of rebate. I believe that the mortgages should be taxed, and I believe that all evidences of indebtedness should be taxed, and that is the opinion of a majority of this Convention. The only difference with us is as to how the evidences of indebtedness should be taxed. We have been struggling here, all the time, to find out some method by which we could tax these credits and have it equitable between the two parties, easy of adjustment, without any circumlocution office through which we must go to arrive at it, and we have not found the key to that yet. We shall wander in this maze of difficulties as long as we attempt to make any kind of settlement between these parties, in the Constitution, in regard to these evidences of indebtedness. Now, sir, the proposition to tax all property according to its true value in money, has been determined upon by a vote of this Convention. The proposition that these evidences of indebtedness shall be taxed, has been passed upon by a large majority of this Convention, and there is no possibility of going behind it. Now, sir, if we attempt to tax them as property we have got to determine their value as credits, and there will come the difficulty. If we attempt to make a reduction we have got to make it so that the land shall be taxed at its true value in money, or else do a gross injustice to the man who holds the lien, because the credit must be taxed upon its full value in money. Now, sir, there is an injustice to the man who holds the indebtedness because he must pay his tax upon the full amount, while the man whose land is taxed could put in one half or three quarters of its value; that is the condition of things we can never get behind. The landed property of this State never will be taxed at its full value. Secondly, we can never get equality under this system in that direction. Now, sir, the solution of the question is, to tax all visible, tangible property according to its value, to be ascertained by law, and then to provide some other system by which to tax these evidences of indebtedness, and there is no way to reach them except we do it by an income tax. Now, gentlemen, many oppose that proposition, and it may be a bugbear to them, but they will have to come to it before we approach anything like equality in our taxation. It is said that it is odious, that it cannot be got at, that property will hide; but, sir, it does that to-day. Now, sir, we can say that the income derived from these credits shall be taxed, and in my judgment, there is no other way to get anything like equality. Thereby we will increase the amount of property on the assessment roll, and by that means, reduce the rate per cent. upon the property that has borne the taxation until it is almost run into the ground. I hope there will be an opportunity to present a proposition of that kind, and if this amendment is voted down, I propose to offer a proposition such as I read here yesterday, and which is in the Record-Union this morning. I do not suppose the Convention will take it, because it is an income tax, but when you have tried everything else you must come to it at last.

Digitized by Google

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope this amendment as now before the Convention will be adopted, and that we will cease all this dissension. We have gone over it over and over again. There are other points that I would like, but I have no hope of seeing them carried. I hope that we will at once take a vote upon it.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I hope, sir, that this amendment will be voted down. I have examined it with some care, and I find, with due respect to the gentleman who offered it, that it is a kind of rehash of all that has been before the Convention, good, bad, and indifferent, the bad and indifferent predominating. In other words, it is meaningless in many things—that is, in my opinion. Now, I came here for the purpose, and stated it early in this Convention, of taxing all the property in the State, and defining what property was; that notes and bonds, and evidences of indebtedness, should be taxed without any rebate. I have supported that measure because I think it is right; because I think public opinion demands it; but, at the same time, if we cannot get that I am willing to take the next best thing that we can get. I am willing to define property and leave it to the Legislature to make such exemptions as they may think fit. I understand that an amendment to that effect will be offered, provided that this is voted down. I hope that this Convention will vote this down.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move that section two be refered to a special committee of nine, to be appointed by the Chair, with instructions to report to this Convention on Monday, and that the same be made a special order for Tuesday, at two P. M.; and that the Convention do now proceed to the consideration of the report of the Committee of the Whole on suffrage. According to the ruling of the Chair, to adopt this motion would carry the whole report, therefore I insert the provision that the Convention now proceed to consider the report of the Committee on Suffrage.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has decided that motion to be out of order. The gentleman can only move to refer the whole report.

MR. REYNOLDS. Then I move to refer the whole report.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sonoma.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Wyatt, Johnson, Brown, West, and Huestis.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended by the Convention.

Adopted.

LICENSES.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in the striking out of section eight of the article on revenue. Section eight, as originally reported by the committee, reads as follows:

"SEC. 8. No license tax shall be imposed by this State, or any municipality thereof, upon any trade, calling, occupation, or business, except the manufacture and sale of wine, spirituous or malt liquors, shows, theaters, menageries, sleight of hand performances, exhibitions for profit, and such other business and occupations of like character as the Legislature may judge the public peace or good order may require to be under special State or municipal control. But the Legislature may, by law, impose any license, or other tax, on persons or corporations owning or using franchises or corporate privileges."

Now, sir, that section was rejected by the Committee of the Whole, and it was improperly rejected, because you cannot apply a license tax without discrimination; you cannot apply it so as to fairly tax those who are sought to be taxed; you cannot apply it so as to prevent injustice by way of too great a taxation in some cases, and too little taxation in others. What is worse still, it never reaches the person sought to be taxed, but the taxation falls upon the consumer. I insist upon it, that the principle is wrong, and I hope, therefore, that the Convention will reconsider its action of yesterday, and pass the section as reported by the committee.

MR. ROLFE. Would it not be wrong, also, to license the manufacture and sale of wine?

MR. WINANS. Yes, sir.

MR. ROLFE. Well, this permits that.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I am opposed to the reconsideration of this section. It is stricken out and left to the Legislature. It has been twice stricken out; first, by the Committee of the Whole, and then by the Convention. I do not see why we should interfere with the local laws in the municipalities, when they will have to legislate for themselves. I do not see where the gentleman sees anything in that that is bad, onerous, or wrong. It leaves enough to be taxed. Everything is subject to the Legislature. They have an inalienable right to raise revenue from any taxation not prohibited by the Constitution. I hope it will remain as it is. I move that the motion be laid on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Winans, Biggs, Brown, Freud, and Hager.

The roll was called, and the motion to lay on the table prevailed by the following vote:

THE JOURNAL.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the reading of the Journal will be dispensed with, and the same approved.

TAXATION—POLL TAX.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on taxation. The question is on concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, striking out section nine. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. The Legislature shall provide for the levy and collection of an annual poll tax of not less than two dollars, for school purposes, on every male inhabitant of this State over twenty-one and under sixty years of age, except paupers, idiots, insane persons, and Indians not taxed. Said tax shall be paid into the State School Fund."

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I am opposed to concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out this section. My chief objection arises from the fact that the poll tax is about the only mode of taxation that we have that will reach the Chinamen. It is well known that they have little property—very little, indeed—and that they almost entirely escape taxation, while they impose upon the Government of the State a very large burden in the way of criminal prosecutions. Now, if it really be the desire of the gentlemen on this floor to get rid of the Chinamen, I am utterly unable to see why in the world they should object to a poll tax, as it is the only mode by which they can be reached. I know that it is argued that a poll tax is wrong in principle because it imposes, as they say, a tax upon the privilege of living—a tax upon the productive energy and industry of the country. But, as in other cases, so in this, there are always two sides to the question. Now, if it be true as I assume, that persons and things receive protection from the Government, it must be true that for that protection there is something due the Government. Persons, as well as property and things, are protected, and why? Speaking, now, from general principles of equity, and right, and justice—why should not a person pay the Government, or if not the Government, at least pay something for the protection that he receives? Every gentleman, and particularly those of the legal profession, are aware that a person receives an amount of protection altogether disproportionate to the amount of revenue that is derived from poll taxes. In fact, the poll tax is little more than an assertion of the principle that Government is entitled to an equivalent for the protection that it affords. The amount is trifling; it is very small. I believe, applying it practically in California, we find that in reaching the Chinamen it reaches a source of revenue that can be reached in no other way. I hope that this Convention will refuse to concur in striking out that section. It is right in principle; it is right in practice. It has worked well in California. It has been a rule of law since, I believe, the organization of the Government. We have heard no complaint against it, and it does seem to me that any man who has patriotism enough to deserve the protecting care of the Government, should be willing to contribute a small mite of two dollars for that protection. There are men who spend their money as fast as they earn it, and when they are disabled by sickness or age, they throw themselves upon the public and must be provided for by the taxpayer. Now, is it not right, is it not equitable, is it not just, that they should contribute this small mite of two dollars to provide for themselves in the future? It does seem to me that gentlemen on the other side of the house, who are so anxious to get rid of the Chinamen, would hesitate before they would take away from the State its only mode of reaching them.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: The argument of the gentleman is, perhaps, hardly fair, when it seems to assume that the passage of this section is necessary to enable the State to levy poll taxes. No such necessity exists. No provision similar to this has been in the last Constitution, and I believe we have had poll tax upon poll tax. Now, the question whether there should or should not be a poll tax, is a question upon which people differ. It seems to me that this is a safe question to leave to the legislative discretion, to be exercised when the Legislature pleases, and to be dispensed with when the Legislature pleases. I shall therefore vote against the proposition, and in favor of the report of the Committee of the Whole, leaving the whole question to the Legislature, where it may be safely left, and where I think it properly belongs.

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I am in favor of retaining the section. I am in favor of it, however, on different grounds from the Doctor from Sacramento. I want it to be so arranged in our Constitution, if we have got to legislate for them, that all white men shall produce a poll tax receipt before they vote. If that is added, then I will be perfectly satisfied. The side of the house that I belong to pay their road and poll taxes. What the country wants is to have those that vote pay, and not those that don't vote. I am willing to leave it with the Legislature, but if you want it in the Constitution I think it should be a little stronger.

REMARKS OF MR. LAMPSON.

MR. LAMPSON. Mr. President: It seems to me that if there is any section that should appear in the Constitution, this is one of them. It reaches a class of people that are willing to assist in the education of our children; and not only that, but it reaches another class—it reaches the class of people who never would be willing and who never do pay a cent of taxation, and during our whole session here we have taken a course that is entirely in favor of such assistance. And while we look at it in this light, I would defy any gentleman of this Convention to point out a single objection to placing this as a provision in the Constitution. By this section these people are compelled to pay into the treasury of the county the sum of two dollars, which is appropriated for an object that every one of us in this Convention most heartily indorse, that of education. To be sure, the Legislature may continue to pass laws and make it compulsory upon these people to do it; but what objection is there to placing it as an abiding principle in the Constitution? It places in our treasury an amount that does a great deal toward educating the poor. Not that any of us care anything particular about paying this small sum, but every individual throwing in two dollars tells a great deal at the end of the year in supporting and educating the poor.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I shall vote to concur with the Committee of the Whole in striking out that section. I am totally opposed to a poll tax, and at the proper time I shall propose a section, that there shall be no poll tax. A poll tax is a tax on human existence, and nothing else. Poor men pay taxes enough now. They are indirectly taxed for everything they eat. I say that property should pay the tax to support Government. Property receives all the protection of Government. Human life receives nothing, or very little protection. All the police power of the State is paid to secure the protection of property. This poll tax business is a relic of kingly tyranny and barbarism, and nothing else. It has not existed for four hundred years in England—since the rebellion of Watt Tyler. They had to abolish it. There is no poll tax in England to-day. I know that there is in the Constitutions of several States of the Union a distinct declaration that there shall be no poll tax. We consider ourselves in California as far advanced in civilization as any country in the world. Why should we not do away with this business of taxing a man's life and existence?

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: It seems to me that some of the gentlemen are laboring under a mistake. If we desired that no poll tax should be levied hereafter, it would be important that we should make that a declaration in the Constitution; but if we desire that there may be a poll tax levied, it is certainly better to leave it as it has been, to the Legislature of the State. They argue this proposition as though if we should refuse to retain it there would be no poll tax; and yet, sir, to-day, I believe every gentleman in this Convention has, within the last year, if he is a good taxpayer, paid at least two dollars for school and hospital poll tax. The only difference here, is increasing slightly the amount we now pay as a school poll tax. I pay every year six dollars poll tax. I think that is enough. If it is not, the public sentiment will, as it has always done, regulate these matters, and the Legislature, in accordance, can change it. If it is too much, the Legislature can still change it; and it can regulate this matter as the public may require or desire. There is where this power ought to be placed. There are some things that ought to be flexible to a certain extent, and, in my judgment, this is one of them.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will not stultify itself by adopting this section. Now the Convention has declared a principle of taxation which is that all property shall be taxed, and has adopted the ad valorem principle. You have said that by adopting sections one and two. Now, sir, a departure of this kind would be an absurdity on the face of it. You propose to tax a person's head. It is not according to the value of it; it is not according to what is in it, nor according to what is on it; but simply because he has got a head you want to impose a tax upon it. You tried here to have license taxes imposed, on the ground of public policy. The Convention rejected it, and so you will find with every attempt to depart from the principle you have adopted. The gentlemen talk about a man paying this tax on account of a protection. That is all right, but the error of the gentleman from Sacramento is that he takes too narrow a view of the subject. He concludes that the man who takes the coin up to the Collector's office is the only man that pays any tax. The great producing class may pay all the taxes and not one single one of them go near the Collector's office. I have contended that there is no such thing as equal taxation, but I have never denied that we ought to aspire to equal taxation. The poll tax is the most unjust and thieving tax that ever was imposed. I speak, sir, from experience, and I believe that we ought to put into this Constitution a prohibition against the Legislature imposing any such tax.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I do not propose to take up the time of this Convention in discussing this question. We discussed enough in Committee of the Whole. I must say that I am surprised at gentlemen taking the position that Colonel O'Sullivan does. Every American citizen that has not got patriotism enough about him to pay the paltry sum of two dollars poll tax for the education of the children in the public schools, does not deserve the name of an American citizen. I appeal to the gentleman from San Francisco, if you want to reach the Chinamen that you have been making war on, to adopt this section. We propose to levy a tax for school purposes to reach these Mongolian Chinamen.

MR. BARBOUR. We expect to get them out of here.

MR. BIGGS. I expect that you won't get them out soon if you exempt them from this tax. I want to put it in the Constitution so that every man in the country will pay two dollars to the support of the schools. I do not want any more poll taxes. I am able to show that the State would receive into the general school fund two hundred thousand dollars from the Chinamen alone. I make my living by the sweat of my brow. I toil in the warm sun. My men, forty or fifty of them, never objected to paying their poll tax, and it would be a pleasure now to them to pay a poll tax and let it go into the general school fund.

MR. STUART. Are you in favor of voters showing their tax receipt before they vote?

MR. BIGGS. I allow every American citizen the right to vote, and I am opposed to Chinamen voting. I want to tax them out of the country, damn 'em; and the sooner we turn them out the better. [Laughter.]

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope that the Convention will not concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole. We have gone on and stated that all property shall be taxed. We have defined what property is. Then we have provided for an exemption, and in the last section of this article we have provided for an income tax. Now, sir, it may be the construction put upon this, striking out that section, that having enumerated all these kinds of property that shall be taxed and made the exemption, and having an income tax, that it was the intention of this Convention to take off the poll tax. Now, sir, in the old Constitution there was no description of property at all. I contend that if we wish to leave it to the Legislature that we should at least say in this article that the Legislature should have the power to levy this poll tax, so that we may be sure that they have the power. Otherwise, having said that all property should be taxed, define what property is made the exemptions, and then provide for an income tax, the construction may be that we cannot put on poll tax.

REMARKS OF MR. LINDOW.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. President: I am opposed to a poll tax, but not for the reason that I have to pay it myself, but I have only to reply to the remarks that Dr. Caples made here. He says, that was the direct way to catch the Chinamen. That is only going to throw a blind over people's eyes. That is not a direct tax. They had a law that the poll tax had to be paid when the personal property tax was paid. Well they got to work and went to the newspapers and proceeded to change the laws. This catching the Chinamen with these poll taxes is only a fraud, and nothing else. There is not one tenth of the poll taxes paid, and then what is collected goes into the Tax Collector's pocket. I know that in the third ward fifty thousand dollars worth of tax receipts could not be found. They had the Tax Collector arrested, and then it could not be found. It is a fraud on the taxpayers. A man gets into a situation and a poll tax collector comes in and makes him pay when the man has not earned a cent at all. I think it is cruel to go and make a direct tax upon a man's head. A man keeps a little bit of a place or a store, and he has got to pay the tax.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am opposed to this provision, and the effect of it. At the present time, in many of the counties, there are poll taxes levied. In the County of El Dorado there are three taxes—one dollar and fifty cents hospital tax, three dollars road tax, and two dollars school tax. I believe that it should be left where it is now. I believe that in the management of county affairs, that the Board of Supervisors of the county should have the right to levy the tax for themselves.

MR. BIGGS. This is a State poll tax.

MR. LARKIN. It amounts to very little what form you get the tax in if the county supports itself. I think it should not be in the Constitution. The section, as it now stands, would be construed to limit the Legislature to a poll tax not to exceed two dollars.

MR. MORELAND. Not less.

MR. LARKIN. Not less than two dollars, but it would indicate that that would be the sum. I am in favor of striking out the section and leaving it to the Legislature.

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. President. I hope that the provision will not be stricken out. The amount of the School Fund raised last year was two hundred and forty-four thousand dollars. A large portion of this fund will be paid by Chinamen and others who will otherwise go scot free. I hope the provision will be retained.

Messrs. Moreland, Stuart, Lampson, Wyatt, and Wilson of Tehama demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon concurring in the report of the committee, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Barbour, Swenson, Lindow, Wyatt, and Lampson.

The roll was called, and the recommendation of the committee concurred in by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section eleven, reported by the Committee of the Whole.

TAXES AND INSTALLMENTS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 11. The Legislature shall have the power to provide by law for the payment of all taxes on real property by installments."

MR. AYERS. I move to strike out "have the power to."

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: The amendment proposed is simply the addition that is made to section eleven.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: There is perhaps no necessity of going into the merits of this section. It was fully discussed at the time, but by, I think the inadvertence of Mr. Winans, of San Francisco, the words "have the power to" was placed in that section, and the amendment vitiates the whole section. It is the sense of this Convention, as I understood the debate, to authorize in a mandatory form the Legislature to frame a law by which taxes shall be collected in installments, in terms of one, three, or six months, instead of as at present. By inserting the words, "have the power to," we have opened the door here which will prevent the passage of such a law. It is well known that in nearly all of the counties of this State, outside of San Francisco, perhaps the public funds are deposited in private banks, and there is not a county in this State, as far as I know, that receives any advantage from these banks, but the people's money is used by private institutions for usurious purposes. This is the case in nearly every county in the State. The people go to the bank where the public funds are deposited, and they borrow their own money at a usurious rate of interest. Now, there is a great deal of money in these private institutions, and they cling to it with great tenacity, and if we do not make this provision in this section mandatory upon the Legislature, they will bring influence enough into this hall every time that such a measure is proposed to defeat it. I do not propose myself to leave this open to any such interference with legislation. I hope the Convention will see the propriety of striking out these words and making the section mandatory upon the Legislature.

MR. LARKIN. If the Convention refuses to concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole that accomplishes the result you desire.

MR. AYERS. I move then to now concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: The revenue laws of this State, or, in fact, of any government, are the most intricate subjects that we have to deal with, and when we begin to tamper with them we are liable to inextricable confusion. I think the proposition that is advanced here will lead to that result. It is vicious, and would so complicate the revenue laws of this State, that there will never be any system in the collection of taxes. Now, the gentleman in his argument has taken the position that the money of the people is used for private purposes. Now, would his proposition improve that thing. The gentleman knows that the taxes of this State are paid at the last moment that they are due. They are generally paid the last week in December. Now, if this system is adopted it will require more frequent settlements with the treasury of the State; it will cost that much more money. It would result in confusion, and would be of no benefit to the communities, or to the people of the State. The whole subject should be stricken out and left as it is at present.

REMARKS OF MR. LARUE.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I hope that the original section, as reported by the committee, will be adopted. I am surprised at the stand Mr. Tinnin takes. I know that it would be a great benefit to the people of the State to pay in installments. There is paid now into the State treasury about three millions of dollars. That must lie in the State treasury to be paid out by monthly installments during the coming year. We have in the county treasury about five million dollars; that is there locked up, or deposited in banks, to be loaned out to the people. Under the present system we take twelve million dollars out of circulation at one time. If the taxes were paid in quarterly, nine million dollars of that would be left in circulation, and the money market would not be so stringent.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will not concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole. It would simply leave the matter as it now is, optional with the Legislature. I believe the old Constitution had no provision declaring that the Legislature should fix it this way or that way. But the eleventh section, as made by the committee, provides that the Legislature shall provide for a system of payment by installments of the taxes on real property. It would retain in circulation at least a million of dollars that is now locked up. The average, perhaps, would be about one million dollars all the time. I would say, that in the State of Pennsylvania this system has been at work and worked well. I believe that the Western States will adopt the system of payment by installments, and I hope that the Convention will not concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, and that we will adopt the original section.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I hope that this experiment will not be forced upon the people of this State. It may be very well to pass the section as the Committee of the Whole has it, as it is a matter for legislative action, but not compel them to adopt it. I believe the whole system is wrong. I believe that it would keep the tax collector perpetually in the field. I believe it would require a second publication of the delinquent list. There will be an increased number of settlements, and consequently, an increased expense. It separates the collection of the real from the personal property tax, and I believe it would throw the whole matter into inextricable confusion.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will refuse to concur in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole. In regard to the inconvenience of paying on a very small amount, there is no such thing in it, because it refers only to the tax upon real property. It is true that it makes a distinction between the tax upon personal or real property, but that is done by the statutes to-day. The statute provides that the taxes upon personal property are due at the time of assessment, and for the simple reason that we have a very large amount of property that is floating here, there, and everywhere, and the Legislature have thought it necessary to make this distinction. Not so with realty. It is a fixture and it cannot escape taxation. Hence, it is provided that the taxes upon realty shall be due at a given time, which is subsequent to the time of assessment about six or eight months. A moment's reflection will show every gentleman the necessity for that discrimination as against personal property where no realty is assessed with it.

Now, in regard to the objection made by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Freeman, I really am unable to see anything in it. He says there will be inextricable confusion. Now, I take it, that under this provision the Legislature would provide for two installments, and the only difference would be, that the County Treasurers would have to make settlement once in six months, instead of once in twelve months. There may be some little inconvenience and some little additional cost in the aggregate to the county treasuries, and possibly to the State treasury, but certainly it would be very small, very trifling. It seems to me that when we come to weigh its disadvantages against the great disadvantage of locking up in the safes of the county treasuries of the State twelve or fifteen millions at one particular time, there is no comparison. It creates a stringency of the money market that is felt by every man, woman, and child in the State to a greater or less extent. The mere loss of the interest is, perhaps, the smallest item of disadvantage. The great item is in creating an arbitrary stringency of the money market. While it may not distress the money lender and the rich man, yet it does distress those who are in stringent circumstances. When a great evil like this can be remedied so easily, I cannot see why we should not apply that remedy now and here.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: Gentlemen who are arguing in favor of this proposition seem to lose sight entirely of the practical working of the tax system. This is an experiment, and there are some gentlemen who wish to experiment upon everything in this Constitution. To my mind, it is the most ridiculous proposition in the world. Can't you now pay your taxes from the first of March until the next January? You can pay them any time during ten months in the year.

MR. BIGGS. You say you could pay during ten months in a year?

MR. LARKIN. Yes, sir.

MR. BIGGS. No, sir.

MR. LARKIN. The Treasurer will take your money. You can pass a law that will allow you to do it if you want to. But there should be a final settlement at the end of the year, and not have taxes run along from year to year. The whole effect of this would simply be to give a system of credits. You propose to run them over from year to year without any settlement. The taxes will always be in confusion. There is no necessity of any provision of this kind in this Constitution. The Legislature has the power to determine when taxes shall be paid, and they have the power to provide that they may be paid in installments. I am in favor of settling every year, and having every officer settle up before he quits the office. This system will create confusion, and I look upon it as the worst proposition in connection with the revenue that has ever been offered in this State.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I agree with the gentleman from El Dorado in thinking that this is an experiment which we ought not to try in the Constitution. I do not say but what it would be advisable to make provision for paying taxes by installments. If it can be made to operate it would be advisable, I admit, but the Legislature already has ample power to try that experiment without passing this section, or by passing it as recommended by the Committee of the Whole. That says that the Legislature shall have power. Well, they have power without that. But if this Convention does any thing in the matter, I hope it will concur in the action of the Committee of the Whole, because that leaves it right where it is now. Now I will tell you why I am opposed to putting so much in a Constitution that is mandatory. If under any circumstances the letter of the Constitution is not strictly complied with, the tax cannot be enforced. Now, as the section stood, as recommended by the Committee on Taxation, it is mandatory, saying that the Legislature shall provide for the payment of taxes by installments. Now suppose, that notwithstanding that the Legislature should not make that provision, I take it upon myself to say that if the Legislature through neglect, or purposely, or for any other reason, should neglect to make that provision that taxes should be paid by installments, that not one cent of taxes on real property could be collected. Gentlemen may say, that if we make it their duty and say that they shall provide, that the Legislature will do it. That does not necessarily follow. How many provisions are there in the present Constitution which are mandatory, and still the Legislature has not complied with them; not many perhaps, but there are some. For instance, our present Constitution requires that the Legislature shall provide for a system of township governments. Everybody knows that the Legislature never has complied with that provision of the Constitution. In that case no great evil has resulted, because the constitutional provision is nugatory without legislative enactment. We had to get along with county governments instead of township governments; but suppose the Legislature fails to provide for the payment of taxes by installments, then this becomes nugatory. The result will be that the tax would not be levied in accordance with the Constitution, and could not be collected. Everybody knows that if the Constitution requires that such and such a thing shall be done, if it is not done the taxpayer is not bound to pay the tax. I shall vote to stand by the report of the Committee of the Whole, because that leaves it just where it is now, and the Legislature will have the power to do it.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I do not think that much argument is necessary to expose the fallacy contained in this section, and I rise, not for the purpose of discussing it particularly, but merely to make one point. Before I make that point, I desire to say that I have no particular objection to the passage of the section, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, but I do not see that even that is necessary. I look upon the State Constitution as being a mere limitation upon the power of the Legislature. If there is no limitation upon that power, the Legislature has a right to pass any law upon this subject that they may see fit. But I am directly opposed to trying the experiment in the Constitution, or rather, making it mandatory upon the Legislature to pass such a provision. Now, I am satisfied that hardly any of the taxpayers of the State, because most of them are small taxpayers, would be willing to pay their taxes in that way. If there were no penalty attached, they would let the first installment go unpaid; then you would have to provide for the enforcement of the collection of the tax. Now, if you provide for the enforcement of the collection of the tax by selling the property, if the taxes are left unpaid, how are you going to collect the second installment after you have already sold the land for the first installment?

MR. AYERS. Would not a motive be found in placing an interest upon the tax, after it had run over? This is the way it is done in Europe. There is an inducement to the taxpayer to pay his tax when the installment is due.

MR. SCHELL. That would be an inducement for men who had the money ready to pay it, but I undertake to say that not many of them would be likely to pay it. Many of them would have to go and borrow the money and pay interest on it. I know now, that many men allow their taxes to become delinquent in order to use the money longer. I cannot see even where it would benefit the large taxpayers, because the money is as good to them in their hands as in the treasury of the State.

MR. LARUE. Would it not be a great advantage to the people of the State to have this money in circulation, instead of its being locked up in the treasury?

MR. SCHELL. I do not see how it could be. If you pay by installments, you will pay every six months.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I shall vote in favor of the amendment to the section because, of course, I do not want the original section to stand. It seems to me that this is a matter of detail, and we ought not to meddle with it at all. The subject of the collection of taxes is a matter of bookkeeping, with all manner of details, which we cannot regulate in this Constitution. It is a mistake to make it imperative upon the Legislature to collect the taxes by installments. It would confuse the whole business, and there would be no remedy at all in case it was found not to work well. It seems to me, sir, that in the mere matter of keeping the books, alone, a very serious objection would rise in regard to this attempt to regulate this collection of taxes in this way. It would increase the expense of collection about fifty per cent. in my opinion, and it is a discrimination that would be unjust. Now, the only argument in favor of having any provision upon the subject would be this: Without any expression in the Constitution that the Legislature might do this, the objection would be made that it was a discrimination in favor of one class of taxpayers, giving them time, while another class was denied the privilege; but if the Constitution authorized it I suppose objection could not be well made against the tax. Therefore I am going to vote in favor of the amendment.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I had no idea that this would cause any discussion, when gentlemen know that there are from fifteen to twenty millions of dollars locked up in this State. I undertake to say that half of the taxpayers are paying interest on that money to-day. Well, sir, this is the way—one gentleman told me that he had inquired into one small bank, and he knew of one little bank that had loaned out over sixty thousand dollars to people to pay taxes with. My county to-day has borrowed over one hundred thousand dollars to pay the taxes this year. Is it right that this money should be locked up in the State and county treasuries, doing nobody any good, when the taxpayers are borrowing this money and paying a big rate of interest? There are millions of dollars in the State Treasury that will lay there until the first of next January. It is no experiment at all, and the Legislature has never given any relief to the taxpayers.

MR. LARKIN. It would not require any settlement, or else you would have to publish the delinquent list each time an installment was due.

MR. BIGGS. No, sir. Make the delinquent list the last time. I know this will work well. It is simple.

MR. SCHELL. Would it not increase the cost of collecting the revenue of the State?

MR. BIGGS. Not one single mill. We have salaried officers, and they will make the assessment and collection just the same as now. It is not a fact that it will cost more.

MR. TINNIN. Are not the Treasurers paid for each settlement they make with the State Treasury?

MR. BIGGS. We will only let them be paid for one, and keep this money in circulation. Do not rob the taxpayers of this State. They are taxed enough now. I would have the taxes become delinquent at the last installment.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: My first impression was that this would not be a good provision in the Constitution. Upon further consideration, however, and from the experience of the southern portion of this State, so far as I know, I have come to the conclusion that it would be a good and safe provision in the Constitution, making it mandatory upon the Legislature. Now, there are two great causes why taxation is a great burden. One is, that men have to pay all at the same time. Now, it is generally known that at the time taxes become due, there is a stringency in the money market. Every man has to come forward with his taxes at that time, or they become delinquent, and he has to pay more. It is harder for him to pay all the money at once. The last Legislature, or the Legislature before that, I forget which, extended the time of payment in some of the southern counties. If that had not been done it would have been a very heavy burden, and most disastrous to the southern portion of the State. The extension of the time two or three months made it so easy upon them that it is almost paid up. I do not see any difficulty in collecting the taxes by installments. The Legislature can provide just as well for two payments, or for three payments, as they can for one. It is not necessary to have separate assessments. Why not pay in as it is wanted? that would save the issuance of scrip at the same time. I shall vote against concurring in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hold a letter in my hand, written by a gentleman who once held the highest office in the gift of the people of this State, and whose official memory is sweet in the minds of the taxpayers of this State. He refers somewhat to this subject. He draws the harrowing picture of the condition of our people, just after the tax gatherer has gathered in the year's installment of taxes, and he compares it somewhat to the exactions of Germany upon France in its indemnity fund. He says: "Business is ruined and a real panic created. If there be any time yet to remedy the matter, see if you cannot have the taxes paid quarterly; monthly would be better." Then he goes on to picture the distress which has been caused by the late collection of large sums of money which are to be locked up in the treasuries for months and months, instead of being kept in circulation.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I believe that we have discussed this matter until most of the members have made up their minds, and I believe that further discussion would be a waste of time. I move the previous question.

Messrs. Huestis, Nason, Evey, and West, demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon concurring in the amendment of the committee, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Biggs, Ayers, West, Evey, and Nason.

The roll was called, and the amendment was concurred in by the following vote:

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order. The next question before the Convention is on concurring in the action of the Committee of the Whole, in striking out section thirteen. The Secretary will read the section.

ASSESSORS AND COLLECTORS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 13. Assessors and Collectors of State, county, city and county, town, or district taxes, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, city and county, town, or district in which the property taxed for State, county, city and county, town, or district purposes, is situated; provided, that vacancies may be filled by appointment, according to general laws."

The action of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

LIMITATION OF TAX.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the action of the Committee of the Whole, in striking out section fourteen. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. The State tax on property, exclusive of such tax as may be necessary to pay the existing State debt, shall not exceed forty cents on each one hundred dollars for any one year."

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: We discussed that thing in the committee, and we believed there should be some limit, or else the State would be getting in debt, and the money would be injudiciously expended and squandered. I think it is well to reinsert that section. Now, gentlemen, there is no limit, and there ought to be some limit on the amount of tax.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope, also, that the section will be retained, and that the State annually, except for payment upon the public debt, will not be authorized to lay a greater per centum than forty per centum on the property for State purposes. It is amply sufficient to leave all necessary and reasonable stealings, in my judgment; and whatever is reasonable upon that subject ought to satisfy. I am, therefore, in hopes that section fourteen will be retained, and that the limitation of forty cents on the one hundred dollars will stand.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that that section will be retained. It ought to be thirty cents. It will leave an ample revenue for the State under the present system of taxation. There is no way of making the State economical except you limit her power to collect taxes. It is all folly to say that we are obliged to run the State for less than it can be run. As long as there is money in the treasury it will be appropriated all the time and spent; as long as the treasury is full, men come to the Legislature with bills in their pockets to get through, and they argue that they need not tax the people any more, because there is plenty of money in the treasury. We have always had the treasury overflowing; unnecessarily so.

MR. SCHELL. Will the gentleman be kind enough to put it fifteen cents, instead of forty?

MR. WHITE. I would say thirty.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Have you ever computed how much forty cents on the hundred dollars would make?

MR. WHITE. I have spoken to those who understand State affairs, and they have told me that forty cents was plenty.

MR. AYERS. Would that be sufficient in case of war, or some extraordinary occasion.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I believe that when this matter was before the Committee of the Whole, it was then shown that a limit of forty per cent., as the State stands now, was really more than was necessary—much more than was necessary; but at the same time, Mr. President, I myself am not in favor of the section as reported. It may be entirely too much, it may be double as much, it may be three times more than is necessary, and it may perhaps be not enough. It seems to me that in either case it is unnecessary. It is useless, and we ought not to place a section of this character in here. We have no reliable data to go by, we have no correct figures to go by, and to go upon conjectures and upon surmises, and upon what somebody else thinks, I do not think it right.

Digitized by Google

MR. WHITE. I was told by the best authority that they had made examination, and they were perfectly satisfied that that was the outside limit that was necessary.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am sorry to disagree with my friend from Santa Cruz, but at the same time what some one else thought is not evidence before this Convention. We have had too much of that character of statements here, and have been asked to go by them. The idea that Tom Jones said, that he thought Dick Brown told him, that he thought his friend said, that this might be enough. Now, if that is evidence for this Convention to go by, why then of course they must go by it, but it seems to me that it is wholly uncertain. This is either too much or too little. There is no evidence before this Convention to show that forty cents on the hundred is just the exact amount. For my part I do not see any reason for limiting it. The argument used by the gentleman from Santa Cruz is, that the treasury is so plethoric that men come here and urge appropriations on that ground. If that is the trouble, the proper course is to limit the appropriations, to prevent the Legislature from diverting the public moneys; and we have done that as much as possible. We have laid an embargo upon them. We have said: You shall not do this, and you shall not do that with the public funds—and that is the way to prevent misappropriations. I do not see any reason why we should adopt this clause here, that either amounts to nothing at all, or will be a positive injury.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I am in favor of concurring in the recommendation of the committee, and for this simple reason: It seems to me useless to put this iron-bound provision in when it does not provide for any emergency that may in the future arise. If it is adopted, it makes no difference what may come up in the State, what necessity may exist for the levying of a larger tax than is provided for here, it cannot be done. We are attempting to curb at the wrong end by doing this. We have already in our legislative article provided that they shall not do this, and they shall not do that, as has been stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, and that is a constitutional limit in the right direction; but having said that, it is folly to put this in here that will prevent any levy of a tax to a larger amount than this, no matter what emergency may arise. Consequently I hope that we shall concur in the recommendation of the committee to strike this out.

SPEECH OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: This is one of those plausible propositions which generally come forward without much investigation as to the fact. The first question would naturally arise: What percentage is necessary to conduct a good government? This is the essential fact to be considered in this connection. At the present time the levy for State purposes is fifty-five cents on the one hundred dollars, of which forty-eight and nine tenths cents are for ordinary purposes, outside of the taxation necessary to pay on the State debt. Therefore, this limitation fixed in this section is eight and nine tenths less than the rate at the present time. That fact was stated when this question was before the Committee of the Whole, and perhaps had some influence with the Committee of the Whole in striking out the section. I have endeavored during my political life—I might say, so far as I have had occasion to vote at the polls, or elsewhere—to vote constantly and uniformly against all measures which looked like extravagance; but I never before knew that the manner of reducing expenses was to resolve that you would not pay if you did incur them. This is substantially as if the head of a family should say: "I will not incur any greater expense than one thousand dollars a year, and to be right sure about it, if I do, I won't pay it any how." The point is to not incur the expense. The gentleman stated here a few moments ago, as was said in Committee of the Whole, the point is not to make the appropriations. But if the appropriations are made, and they are legal, they must be paid this year, or if not, remain a debt to be paid at a future year; and under the eighth article of the Constitution of this State, the result would be in such cases that you incur a public debt, which must be submitted to a vote of the people, at great expense, in order to pay this indebtedness, which by your Constitution you say shall not be paid otherwise. Now, sir, that seems to me to be grossly inconsistent. It is striking at the wrong place. I am aware, sir, that some of my own constituents, for whose opinions I have very high respect, are in favor of this limitation, or of a limitation; not in favor of this, I presume, because when the current expenses of the State run to nearly nine cents on the hundred dollars over this constitutional limit proposed, I do not suppose any reasonable man would say that that ought to be the limit.

MR. AYERS. Does not that include the interest tax on the bonds? This is exclusive of that.

MR. MCCALLUM. Certainly it is. This is what I took into consideration. But taking that out, it leaves forty-eight and nine tenths cents still for the ordinary purposes of Government. I ascertained that from the State Controller's office on the former discussion of this question.

MR. BIGGS. Are you aware that the other States have adopted the limitation?

MR. MCCALLUM. I am aware that they have adopted this in some of the other States. I say that it is a popular idea upon its face. I say that this seemed to me to be plausible and reasonable. I most heartily concur and cooperate with all efforts here upon all these questions, tending to reduce the expenses so that forty cents on the one hundred dollars shall not be required. I do not believe that it ought to require over thirty cents. Great emergencies may arise, it is true, in which a larger sum might be required, and gentlemen who are talking about economizing in this matter by resolving that they won't pay if they do incur, it seems to me had better, instead of proposing new offices, and great numbers of them, say here, we will not incur these additional expenses. For instance, on the judicial article, not increase the expense of our judicial system fifty thousand or one hundred thousand dollars, unless it is absolutely necessary to do so. In another section, which we will reach in a few minutes, we require that there shall be two members of the Board of Equalization for every Congressional district of the State, when one half the number would be enough. We are making some new offices necessarily, but let us not make any more new offices than are necessary, and when we do make them, let us not incur any unnecessary expense in paying for such offices. Now, this is my general idea about this. I do not think it would be at all proper to fix such a limitation as this, which would undoubtedly have the effect which I spoke of in certain cases. It would run up a State debt which would have to be submitted to the people under the eighth article. It would be a system of going in debt. Instead of that there is a better system for States as well as individuals, and that is to pay as you go.

REMARKS OF MR. MORELAND.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: This limitation upon the power to levy a rate is no new thing. It has been put in many of the more modern Constitutions. I hold in my hand the late Constitution of the State of Missouri. Section eight, of article ten, of that Constitution, says:

"The State tax on property, exclusive of the tax necessary to pay the bonded debt of the State, shall not exceed twenty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation; and whenever the taxable property of the State shall amount to nine hundred million dollars, the rate shall not exceed fifteen cents."

Now, sir, we fix the amount at double that which is fixed in the Constitution of Missouri, and we ought to be able to run this State on double the amount that they run the expenses of the State of Missouri upon. At forty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation, provided there are six hundred million taxable property in this State, it would raise the amount of two million four hundred thousand dollars; and provided there are eight hundred million dollars taxable property, it would raise three million two hundred thousand dollars. By the system of taxation we have devised, we hope to bring in between two and three million dollars of taxable property that has heretofore escaped taxation. Therefore, if this stands at forty cents, we would raise more than is now raised for the expenses of the State government. Now, sir, we have curtailed expenses considerable, or we propose to. In the first place, we propose to do away with judicial elections, which have heretofore cost about fifty thousand dollars at each election. We propose to hold elections every two years. Heretofore we have held three elections every four years. We propose to lessen the expenses of the Legislative Department of the Government to about one half, almost, of what it has been heretofore. We also propose to lessen the salaries of the State officers in this State, which will be quite a saving; and as the amount of taxable property is increasing in the State, and as we think we can bring into the assessment roll a great deal of property which has heretofore escaped taxation, I think that this sum of forty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation is amply sufficient to meet all the expenses of the State. I hope that we will not concur in the report of the Committee of the Whole, but that this section will stand as originally reported.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will not concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole. I believe in placing a limit such as is placed there as an admonition to the Legislature. I believe that the rule has been heretofore that the Legislature has encroached on the treasury to the full extent that it had power. We have been lavish in our expenditures. We have been lavish in our appropriations. I think it is well to stop the leak in both ways: to stop large appropriations, and then to limit the tax by a constitutional provision. I think it is a wholesome provision.

MR. ROLFE. What would you do in case of great emergencies, such as war, insurrection, rebellion, or some great public calamity?

MR. AYERS. I would vote to issue bonds. This is exclusive of debt.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will not concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole. Now, on general principles Legislatures and commonwealths are very much like men and boys. We spend money just in proportion as we have money to spend. If our pockets are full as we go out into the world, we spend money lavishly. If money is scarce we are more careful in regard to wasting and spending that money. Now we all know, at least every gentleman of this Convention who has had any experience in the Legislature, that there are a thousand and one claims that will come up for appropriation, and the plea will be: "Why, there is plenty of money in the treasury; the treasury is overflowing; we might just as well increase this appropriation for this, that and the other thing." When the Board of Equalization fixes the amount they fix it in proportion to the amount of expenditures made by the last general Assembly. They will spend it all, however much may be furnished. They will go to the extent of the amount in the treasury by their appropriations, leaving nothing to contingencies, and these contingencies are depending very much upon the amount in the treasury. Therefore, I do think that we should place this limit upon the amount of the assessment in this State. I hope that the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole will not be concurred in.

REMARKS OF MR. TOWNSEND.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I hope that this Convention will concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole in striking this out. I do not believe that there is any gentleman on this floor who can say how much it is going to cost to run the Government of this State; nor do I believe that this Convention should adopt an inflexible rule by which the Legislature would be tied up, for we do not know what circumstances may arise. Now, for one, I am in favor of running this State Government upon as economical a plan as possible, and I cannot see where this Convention has adopted any measures by which the expenses would be reduced; and it evidently has cost more to run the Government heretofore than we propose to admit. Then we are all well aware that there are many circumstances, perhaps, that no doubt will arise, wherein the State may be called upon to engage in a very laudable enterprise. There are millions of acres of land in this State that could be made productive, which is now lying idle and worthless, that would support millions of population and enhance the taxable property in this State millions and millions of dollars, which the State could make so by proper action.

MR. BIGGS. You propose to tax the State for private individuals?

MR. TOWNSEND. No, sir. But there are thousands and millions of acres of land in this State that are now desert lands, that the State could make productive at some future time, and add millions of dollars to the taxable property of the State. The time may come when the State may want to do that, and I do not propose to vote for an inflexible rule, saying that the State shall not levy more than a certain amount. I believe in leaving it in the proper place—in the Legislature.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I hope this section will be stricken out. I am in favor of economy as much as anybody in this Convention, but the idea of such economy as this. I do not believe in it. I see an inclination on the part of this body to do away with the Legislature altogether. If we have lost confidence in the Legislature, which is the representative body of the people, then republican government is a failure, and you might as well throw up the sponge. I believe that the Legislature in the future will be just as honest as we are now, and, as to laying down an inflexible rule of this kind, we will be the laughing stock of the country. Now, Mr. President, if we go in for economy at all, let us put in ten or twelve cents and make a complete job of it. If forty cents on the one hundred dollars for one part of the State is sufficient to pay the taxes, it does not follow that it is sufficient in another part. The Government of France last year paid out the enormous sum of twice the national debt they incurred during the Franco-Prussian war, and still that country is prosperous. But here in California we are going to abolish our Legislature as it were, and tie it down so that it cannot move. Now, Mr. President, I believe that we have gone far enough in this kind of economy, and, for gracious sakes, let us keep within the bounds of reason and common sense. There is no sense in this provision. Look at it! Here is Sacramento City in danger any year of being swamped. The Sacramento River, if we have an extraordinary freshet will overflow its banks, and probably destroy the whole valley and Sacramento City; and we propose to bind down the Legislature so that it can render no assistance. Great emergencies of different kinds may arise, and the Legislature is bound hand and foot. I think the Legislature is bound well enough already, and we had better give it a little room to move around. I hope this section will be stricken out, and I will vote for striking it out.

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: To adopt a section like this would seem to involve the idea that we believe that we possess the power to control the future; that we could see into the future and prevent any of these extraordinary emergencies which are likely, from day to day, to arise. I find that the expenses of the Government, at the present time, about four fifths of them, represent those permanent matters which we must provide for and take care of. In the schools, etc., and in the payment of the interest upon our indebtedness we consume four fifths of all the money, which is leaving only one fifth of what is now raised to carry on the ordinary expenses of Government, and yet it is proposed now to reduce, we will say from forty-eight to forty per cent., thus sweeping away nearly all of that one fifth which we now apply to ordinary expenses of Government. Besides that, who can say that our insane asylums may not be destroyed, and it be necessary to rebuild them; that our State Prison may not be destroyed and it be necessary to rebuild it; that there may not be a thousand things which will make it absolutely necessary that money should be raised?

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I have come to the conclusion that we do not need this section, and I am in favor of having it stricken out entirely. If we put this limit on it now, when this State advances, and the assessable property becomes more valuable, the tendency will be to cut down the price of labor. In twenty years from now, thirty per cent. on the one hundred dollars would, perhaps, be fair enough revenue, but if we put in this inflexible rule, it will be impossible for the Legislature to extend it under any circumstances. The Legislature comes right fresh from the people every two years, and they know what the interests of the State are better than we can tell ahead for all time to come. We do not need to say anything about it in the Constitution, and I hope that this Convention will vote down this section.

Upon concurring, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Brown, Freud, West, and Biggs.

The roll was called, and the recommendation of the committee concurred in by the following vote:

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole to section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. A State Board of Equalization, consisting of two members from each Congressional district in this State, shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, and every four years thereafter, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property of the several counties in the State for the purposes of State taxation; provided, that the Legislature shall have power to reduce the number to one from each Congressional district, when said districts shall have been increased in number. The Controller of State shall be ex officio a member of said Board. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties of the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization for their respective counties, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the county for the purpose of county taxation; provided, said State and County Boards of Equalization are hereby authorized and empowered, under such rules of notice as the County Boards may prescribe, as to the county assessments, and under such rules of notice as the State Board may prescribe as to the action of the State Board, to increase or lower the entire assessment roll, or any assessment contained therein, so as to equalize the assessment of the property contained in said assessment roll, and make the assessment conform to the true value in money of the property contained in said roll. The members of said Board, except the Controller of State, shall, at their first meeting after their election, so arrange, by lot, that one of their number from each Congressional district shall go out of office at the end of two years, and their successors shall be elected at the next general election thereafter to be holden by the qualified electors of each of said districts."

MR. McCOMAS. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section fifteen by striking out in lines four and five the words, 'and every four years thereafter,' and insert, 'whose term of office, after those first elected, shall be four years.'"

MR. McCOMAS. Mr. President: There is a clear conflict between the different portions of this section, and the reading of this provision as it stands makes the members of the State Board of Equalization to be elected upon the odd years, which is not the intention. This seems to me to be necessary to cover the whole ground.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I move to amend by striking out the word "two," in the first line, and inserting the word "one."

MR. FREUD. I second the amendment.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I cannot understand the object of bringing eight men here to do what four men can do just as well, with the Controller. It is paying four additional officers in the State, and it makes just so much more expense. Four men coming from the different districts of the State, together with the Controller, are amply sufficient to do the work that we have allotted to them by that section, and I trust that increase of office-holding and officers will not be persisted in. The other four are entirely useless, in my opinion, and they cannot be paid less than a couple of thousand dollars a year, according to the ideas of gentlemen here; and I do hope that my amendment will be adopted.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I concur most heartily with the remarks of the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, and I had a similar amendment prepared. I do not think his amendment is complete. If his amendment is adopted, it will be necessary to strike out the following words, beginning with the seventh line: "provided, that the Legislature shall have power to reduce the number to one from each Congressional district, when said districts shall have been increased in number." Also, strike out all after the word "roll," in the twentieth line.

MR. WHITE. I accept that amendment.

THE CHAIR. If there be no objection the gentleman from Santa Cruz will be allowed to accept the amendment. The Chair hears none.

MR. STEDMAN. Now, Mr. President, we have created a number of new offices, and I see no necessity, myself, for more than one member of this Board of Equalization from a district—four members from the four Congressional districts, and the Controller. In eighteen hundred and eighty-two we will have at least one more member of Congress, consequently we would have one more member of the Board of Equalization. I hope, sir, in the interest of reform, that this amendment of the gentleman's will be adopted.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President; I concur in the object of Mr. White's amendment, but it will be necessary also to strike the letter "s" from the word "members," in the first line. I would suggest that he accept that amendment.

MR. WHITE. I also accept that.

MR. HEISKELL. I also suggest that he strike out the word "of" in line six, and insert the word "in." It occurs to me that "the property of the several counties" simply means the property that is already exempt from taxation.

MR. WHITE. I accept that.

THE CHAIR. If the gentleman desires to withdraw his amendment for the purpose of revision it is all right, but he is tacking on too many amendments. It is impossible for the Secretary to keep track of them.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: When the matter of a State Board of Equalization was under consideration before the Committee of the Whole, the matter as regards the number of persons to compose that Board of Equalization, was thoroughly and exhaustively discussed. It was made apparent at that time to the members of the Committee of the Whole, that the interests of the several Congressional districts in this State, with the exception of the first Congressional district, composed of San Francisco alone, were so diversified and so different, and that the districts were so large, many of the counties forming the districts being as large as eastern States, that it would be better serving the ends of justice to have two members come from each Congressional district; that one man from a Congressional district would not serve the ends of justice as well as if we have two men from each Congressional district, and from different portions of the district. The size of the districts was under consideration at that time, and ought to be taken into consideration now. Districts which are five or six hundred miles in length, and two hundred miles in breadth—two men from such a district are not too much—and I hope that the Convention will adopt the report of the Committee of the Whole. I do not believe that it would be economy to strike out "two" and insert "one." I believe in economy just as much as the gentleman from Santa Cruz, just as much as any member upon this floor, but we may go too far in economy. We may go beyond the limit of economy; we may go to niggardliness. We may absolutely cut off what would carry out our intention and our purpose, which is the fair taxation of all real and personal property in this State. I hope that the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I agree with the last speaker, the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher. This section was well discussed in the Committee of the Whole. It was one of the most important sections in the whole report. It was stated, and well stated at the time, that our districts are composed of diversified interests. We have a great mining and a great agricultural interest. In some respects their interests are opposed to each other. This Board of Equalization should be composed of one miner and one agriculturist from one district. It is proper that we should have two to fairly represent both interests. I fully concur in all the remarks in favor of having two from each district. I think it is poor economy to strike out "two" and insert "one."

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: In the Committee of the Whole the proposition was presented that is now before the Convention, to strike out "two" and insert "one." It was in this condition then, not knowing what action would be taken afterwards; that if we made it one from each Congressional district there would be four, an even number. Afterwards, however, the Controller was added. So now, if we adopt this amendment, we will have one member of the State Board of Equalization from each Congressional district, which would be four, the Controller would be five, and there would be an odd number and no difficulty on that score. Now, sir, if there is one from each district, it is fair to assume that their compensation will not be fixed at less than three thousand dollars a year. That would be twelve thousand dollars for the four. If there was two from each district, there would then be twenty-four thousand dollars per year for the salaries of these officers; and, inasmuch as these are entirely new officers, all of them, we would, at one fell swoop, have saddled upon the State eight State officers, whose salaries would amount to twenty-four thousand dollars per annum at least; besides mileage, as the gentleman from El Dorado suggests. It would be adding fifty-six thousand dollars to the expenses of the State. A number of State officers have been added, and if the Constitution should be adopted, as I think and hope it may be, from present indications, we ought to remember that, while making some necessary increase, we ought not to unnecessarily increase these officers. This is just double the number that is necessary. Gentleman talk about these large districts. Why, if it is intended to proceed upon the idea that no man knows anything except what he can see around him in his own neighborhood, we had better elect a delegate from each county, and have fifty-two of them. Of course they would know better about the valuation of the property in their respective counties, so far as personal observation is concerned. All theories of State officers proceed upon the idea that they get their information from the various sources which now are almost unlimited; not necessarily from personal observation, but from general observation of the country, the whole country. As to such knowledge, the man who has made it a business, as some have, has a better judgment about those values than those persons who live in the immediate locality. It is their business to inform themselves; it is their duty to do so; and one member from each district would be enough to acquire this information. Now, sir, I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Cruz will prevail; but I believe he accepted an amendment at the close of the section which I would suggest had better be left off, as we are to be compelled to vote for a number of propositions, and we might agree to some of them and not to all. I understand that the gentleman has accepted an amendment to strike out the last clause, commencing after the word "roll," in line twenty. Will the Secretary read the amendment as it now stands?

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in the first line, the words 'two members,' and insert 'one member;' also, strike out the following: 'Provided, that the Legislature shall have power to reduce the number to one from each Congressional district, when said districts shall have been increased in number.' Also, strike out all after the word 'roll,' in the twentieth line."

MR. MCCALLUM. The gentleman mixes that last proposition up with it. If the gentleman will consent to strike that out——

MR. WHITE. Leave that clause out.

THE CHAIR. If there be no objection.

MR. STEDMAN. I object.

MR. MCCALLUM. In that case, can't we have a division of the question?

THE CHAIR. There can be no division of one single amendment.

MR. MCCALLUM. Then, in case of a desire to have a portion of it adopted and not the rest, are we not entitled to a vote on that proposition? It is a question as to who shall have their way about this thing.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Santa Cruz, after offering his amendment, accepted certain other amendments, and no objections were made, and the amendment now stands as though the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White, had originally offered one complete amendment. There is objection now to a part of this amendment being withdrawn, and the Chair rules, that there being an objection, the amendment must stand or fall all together.

MR. MCCALLUM. I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will state that there are now pending two amendments, and a third amendment cannot be allowed.

MR. MCCALLUM. I have heard that stated in general terms, and I would like to know from the Chair what is to be understood by that. I have always understood that amendments may be amended. Now, if it is meant by the Chair, that when an amendment is offered that no amendment can be offered to that amendment, why, it is to overrule the whole principle of parliamentary law. I admit that I cannot offer another amendment, but I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE CHAIR. I will state the understanding of the Chair upon it, and I shall try as nearly as possible to conform to the ruling of the President. The original section fifteen of the article on revenue and taxation is the proposition to which an amendment—simply an amendment—is recommended by the Committee of the Whole, to which amendment the gentleman from Santa Cruz has offered an amendment, which stands as an amendment to the amendment. Now, then, to entertain a third amendment during the pendency of these two amendments would be to entertain an amendment to an amendment to an amendment, which is further than any parliamentary law is ever allowed to go.

MR. MCCALLUM. Then the proposition of the Committee of the Whole is in itself an amendment.

THE CHAIR. Yes; it is the first amendment.

MR. MCCALLUM. I only wanted to get the ruling of the Chair, because when the first one came up the gentleman who occupied the chair ruled that the report of the committee was the proposition to be voted on. Judge Belcher, the President pro tem., as soon as he got a chance, overruled the decision of the other delegate, and said that the Convention had nothing whatever to do with that. The simple question before the Convention was, what the Committee of the Whole proposed. The President has ruled the same as the present occupant of the chair. I do not know that there is anything so objectionable in that part of the amendment but that I can vote for it in order to secure the other part. I have only to say that my judgment about this matter of economy is to reach it right in this place, and stop all unnecessary expense.

MR. STEDMAN. I desire to ask the gentleman if he is in favor of one or two members from each district?

MR. MCCALLUM. Only one.

MR. STEDMAN. Then I withdraw the objection.

MR. BLACKMER. I renew the objection.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White. Those in favor of——

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I wish to say——

MR. CROSS. I object, sir, to this way of doing business. One side of this house has had the entire discussion. We gentlemen have waited for a chance and the Chair, looking directly at us, refuses to recognize us and calls for a vote. I object to this way of doing business. I enter my protest here against this way of doing business. We are here in a deliberative body——

THE CHAIR. If the gentleman will suspend one moment, I wish to state that after the question had been announced the Chair heard the gentleman from Butte, Mr. Biggs, address the Chair. The Chair at once recognized Mr. Biggs. Now if there is anything wrong about recognizing Mr. Biggs, I fail to see it. The gentleman from Butte, Mr. Biggs, has the floor.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I am glad to see the gentleman take an interest in this matter. This proposition was formulated in committee with much care. We discussed it in Committee of the Whole at great length, and agreed to adopt that recommendation. I would just state that it is a matter that I take no particular interest in. The only reason why we recommended two from each Congressional district was this simple fact that has been stated by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart. It is well known that the interests of every district, except the first, are very much diversified. Very few agriculturists know the value of the mines or the mining interest, and the miner knows but little of the value of agricultural land. We believed it better to have two from each district. Judge Belcher spent months in preparing this section, and this thing was discussed, pro and con, in the Committee of the Whole. I do not propose to take up the time of the Convention now, only to state why it was adopted in Committee of the Whole. San Francisco is a district where the interests are alike, and any one who knows the value of real estate there, can represent them, but we don't consider it proper or right to discriminate, therefore we believe that it would be to the interest of the State to have two from each Congressional district, one from the mining portion and one from the agricultural portion. I am here to represent the people of this State for their best interests. I do not think it is wise to be penny wise and pound foolish, and if we can receive more revenue by having two from each Congressional district, I think it is right. It has been recommended and adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

MR. TOWNSEND. Are you going for more revenue?

MR. BIGGS. Because it will be better equalized. Does the gentleman suppose that a farmer knows what the mines are worth, or that a miner knows what the agricultural land is worth?

MR. TOWNSEND. Do you propose to say, in this law, that there shall be one from the agricultural and one from the mining districts?

MR. BIGGS. Yes. I think there should be one from each, and I want to reach all these large land monopolies. I want to see the land taxed at its full valuation, and that is the only way to reach it, by having a competent Board of Equalization. Tax it at its full value, large estates as well as small.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., Mr. Waters in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

IN RELATION TO UNIVERSITY LANDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I ask unanimous leave to offer a resolution, that it may be laid upon the table and printed, to be made the special order for to-morrow morning.

THE CHAIR. If there is no objection the Secretary will read the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

MEMORIAL TO CONGRESS IN RELATION TO UNIVERSITY LANDS.

WHEREAS, A certain bill is now pending before Congress, purporting to grant forty-five thousand acres of land to the University of California, in excess of the one hundred and fifty thousand acres granted to endow a College of Agriculture; and, whereas, the Regents, members of this Convention, assert that the Regents have asked for the passage of no such bill, and that it is neither directly nor indirectly in the interest of the University: and, whereas, grants of land, made in the manner proposed by said bill, only afford land monopolists opportunities to rob the public domain of lands which ought to be granted only to actual settlers, and in limited quantities; therefore,

Resolved, By this Constitutional Convention of the State of California, now in session, that Congress be, and is hereby respectfully, but earnestly, memorialized to refuse to pass said bill, to the end that whatever remains of the public domain may be retained for the use of those who will settle upon and improve it.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed, and a copy, signed by the President and Secretary, be sent without delay to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

MR. STUART. I object to that.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I will merely remark that in offering these resolutions now, I do so that they may be printed in the Journal to-morrow morning, that the members may see them and have an opportunity to ascertain exactly what they are. I do not notice any of the Regents here, and I do not wish to call the resolution up until they are here.

MR. STUART. I object to the resolutions because they are not germane to the question we are discussing, and because they are not connected with the Constitution. I move to lay the resolutions on the table.

MR. REYNOLDS. I had not yielded the floor for any motion. I move that the rules be suspended, and that the resolutions be made the special order for Wednesday.

THE CHAIR. The two motions cannot go together. The question is on suspending the rules to allow the gentleman to introduce the resolutions.

The vote was taken, but there being no quorum voting, the question was stated again.

MR. DOWLING. I cannot see how there can be any objections, because two of the Board of Regents have testified to a knowledge of these frauds.

THE CHAIR. The question is upon suspending the rules.

Upon the question of suspending the rules, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Stedman, Wyatt, Vacquerel, Stuart, and Blackmer.

The roll was called, and the rules were suspended by the following vote:

AYES.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. VACQUEREL. I give notice that on Tuesday, February eleventh, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in the action of the Committee of the Whole, by striking out section nine of the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

REPORT.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I ask leave to make a report from the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your Committee on Reporting and Printing report amendment number four hundred and eighty-five—Militia; amendment number four hundred and fifty-four—Chinese; and amendment number four hundred and forty-four—Corporations other than Municipal, as being correctly engrossed.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I gave notice on Friday that I would move to amend Rule Thirty-five. I would like to know the condition of it, whether it can be acted on or not. I made a motion to take it up, but a motion to adjourn cut it off.

THE CHAIR. It must have gone into unfinished business.

MR. LARUE. I move that it be taken up.

THE CHAIR. It will require a suspension of the rules.

MR. LARUE. I move that it be passed until to-morrow morning.

MR. LARKIN. I think the motion is out of order.

THE CHAIR. The Chair will so decide.

STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The question before the Convention is the amendment to the amendment to section fifteen, which was offered by the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White.

SPEECH OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will not prevail for the reason that I believe it will have this effect—that the centers of population will alone be represented on the State Board while the interior portions of the State will be unrepresented. Men will be very likely to be selected upon the State Board who are not familiar with the interests and wants of the interior counties. They will know nothing whatever about the value of the mining property of my district. I would like to know what a farmer or business man here can know about the mining interest, or the relative value of the mining Counties of Siskiyou, Sierra, and Nevada, all of which are in the third district, which extends from one portion of the State to the other. If only one man is elected from each district, I hold, sir, that these interests will be unrepresented. For instance, in the third district, comprising such agricultural Counties as Humboldt, Marin, and Sonoma, the representative would be likely to be a farmer, in order to represent the farming interest, and the mining interest would be unrepresented. I hold that they would be apt to disregard the interest of the mining districts in that respect. If we have only one, there is no doubt but he will be selected from the populous centers, and the outside interests will go unrepresented.

Now, sir, on the part of the mining districts, I protest against any such action as this; and I say that the action of the Committee of the

Digitized by Google

Whole in providing for two members from each district was just and right; that in that case, the interests of each district in the State were fully considered, and not only will the districts be fully represented, but the interests of the whole people of the State will be represented. And I believe it is the duty of true statesmen, in a republican form of Government, to see that the interests of the entire people should be represented, and not the interests of a special or exclusive class. As I said, if you say that one man shall be elected from each district, it will not be a representative Board in any sense of the word, for the State Convention will select men from the populous centers. Now, I say, that is wrong. It is unjust to the interests of these communities. As one representing a mining constituency, I protest against it. I believe, sir, that when the miners come to read the Constitution, if we adopt this amendment—and they will certainly read it—they will not vote for it. They will not vote upon it by what any newspaper may say, or by what any man may say, but by what they read themselves. They will look over your entire work; and if it does not meet their approval, as I am satisfied it will not, I think, sir, that they will certainly vote against it. I do not offer this in any manner to bulldose the Convention, or the gentleman from Sacramento, who is now upon the floor to ask me a question; but I do say, sir, that it is right that two men shall be selected from each district, so that when the nominating conventions come to meet they will select one man to represent the farming interests, and another from a different portion of the district to represent the mining interests. Each will select a representative of his class. Of course, in doing this, the interests of the whole people will be subserved. Mining and farming are two of the most important interests in this State, and I say that the agricultural interest should be considered as well as the mining interest. The people will see that men representing these two great interests are selected, in order to carry out the will of the people, and what the people believe to be right.

In regard to the question of expense that some gentlemen have spoken about, there is nothing in it. I, myself, am in favor of economy. I believe the government of the State should be conducted upon an economical basis, in the interest of good government. But I do not think, sir, that this amendment if adopted will be against economy, but it will be in the interest of economy and good government. If these men are elected, their salaries will most likely not be three thousand dollars a year; but the Legislature will be very likely to provide that they shall simply get a per diem for the time they are at work. They are not likely to get more than eight hundred dollars, or one thousand dollars for each year for the duties they will be called upon to perform. They will not receive a set salary, but they will be paid for the time which they actually work in performing the duties of the office, and that will require but a few weeks, or months during each year. I hold that the good these men will be able to do, in regard to a fair and just revenue, will more than repay the outlay, if you give us a Board of Equalization composed of eight members. I hold further (and I see that Dr. Caples is on his feet) that if two men are selected from each district, that it will be a more representative Board, that they are not so likely to be governed by improper motives, such as might be used by a less number. For these reasons, and for other reasons which I might mention, but which time will not permit, I hope that the section formulated by the Standing Committee, and agreed to by them, will be adopted, and that we will not again stultify ourselves by rejecting it.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. The question before the Convention, as I understand it, is on the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Cruz, to strike out two members and insert one member from each district. Is that the question?

THE PRESIDENT. The question before the Convention is the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I believe, sir, that in the Committee of the Whole, I offered this same amendment. It was discussed there, and voted down. My reasons at the time were, that it was a proper act in the interest of economy; that was the principal consideration with me during the time, but since then, the more I reflect upon it the more I am satisfied that we should not have a bulky or cumbersome Board, and that three men will be more apt to make a correct and proper equalization of the property of the State, than eight or twenty men. The more you increase the number the greater will be the conflict of opinion. Gentlemen are arguing here as if these members of the State Board were to act from their own personal knowledge concerning assessments; that they are to review and reform the assessments of the counties from their own personal knowledge of the value of the property assessed. Well, sir, if that argument is good for anything, it would be that they should have some superior knowledge to the Assessors and Boards of Equalization; in other words, some knowledge which would enable them instantly to detect errors, because it is scarcely to be presumed that they can descend down into a minute examination of the entire assessments throughout the counties. You say we want two men from each district, so as to represent the two great interests of farming and mining. It does not follow, by any means that the conventions will make their selections with a view to that, but implies that there are only two interests to be looked after. Now, you have the agricultural interest in this State, and the mining interest, and you have the commercial interest, and who can say that any one of these is of more importance than the other? If you are going to represent them, why not say that there shall be a delegate for each; why not say so in so many words? I say the arguments of the gentleman proves too much. If it is a good argument that these two interests should be represented, it is good logic that other interests should be represented.

Now, sir, we have provided for a Board of five, which is capable of expansion, of course, according to the expansion of the State. It will increase in time to six or seven men. Now, sir, if I understand the purposes and objects of a State Board of Equalization, you are apt to get just as good services in a Board of five as in a Board of ten members. I know not the cost of this thing, but it will amount to considerable—perhaps ten thousand or twelve thousand dollars annually. I am unable to perceive where there will be any more good accomplished by doubling this sum. In these bodies, whose duties are such as the Board of Equalization, the more you increase them, the greater will be the confusion. We have found an illustration of that fact right here in this Convention. You have the same thing wherever you increase the number. I maintain that the knowledge which is necessary to perform the duties of a Board of Supervisors is sufficient for a State Board of Equalization, and I say that five men are better than ten or twenty men. In multiplicity of counsel there is confusion.

SPEECH OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I hope to say a word, now that everybody else has got through. The gentleman from Sierra, Mr. Barry, notwithstanding his long winded speech, didn't hurt anything very bad. His argument proves too much, or it proves nothing. I would like to know if he has any reason for saying that the mining interest will be ignored. He assumes that if we have only one member from each district the mining interest will be entirely ignored, and not represented at all on the State Board. Now, I can conceive of no data upon which he predicates such a conclusion. Now, I desire that the best men shall be elected to office. If the agricultural counties can furnish the best men, let them be elected; but I protest against the wanton assumption that these counties will necessarily do that. The mining counties have produced some good material, and they are just as likely to secure the offices as are the agricultural counties. His remarks prove too much, or nothing. He assumes that certain interests must be neglected, or will not be fairly represented. This is not sufficient reason, for, as Mr. Barbour says, there are agricultural, commercial, mining, and various other interests, and if the argument of the gentleman is good for anything it amounts to this, that every single interest in the State should be represented on that Board. Again he has attempted to show that no one single citizen of the district could fairly represent all the interests of so much territory. If we agree to that proposition what do we arrive at? We arrive at the conclusion that we must have a very large Board. Eight is not enough; we must have one from each county in order to represent the territory. Two from each district will not be sufficient. Now, I protest against this kind of argument. Even if there was anything in it, there is too much against it. It is not practicable. Each Commissioner will cost the State of California not less than five thousand dollars per annum—three thousand dollars for salaries, and two thousand dollars for traveling expenses. It is proposed to have four men. I assume that there will be one from each district, besides the Controller, who will make five. I assume that five will be better than fifty. Besides, it is impracticable. It would entail a very heavy expense upon the State to have so numerous a Board. I desire to remind the gentleman of the absolute necessity of considering economy while we are creating new offices. Let us create no more than are absolutely necessary to carry out the reforms that are demanded. In this case I submit to the common sense of every gentleman that a Board of five men are as competent as a Board of one hundred men, and it will cost the State twenty thousand dollars more under the plan, as reported by the committee, than it will cost under the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Cruz. That is not a great amount for the people of California, but it is a part of the system, and the difference between the two systems—an extravagant system and an economical system—is of the utmost importance to the people of this State. If we should frame an instrument upon the same principle, with the same disregard for economy that is shown in this report, our Constitution would be rejected by the people, because if there is one thing above all others that the people demand, it is economy in the administration of government. Who denies it? Has it not been asserted by every gentleman on this floor? Is it not the universal cry that the government of California is carried on too liberal, and too extravagant, with not one regard to the interests of the taxpayers that the changed condition of things demands. I submit that it is evident enough, and every gentleman knows it. Now, why should we tax an additional twenty thousand dollars upon the taxpayers. I protest against it. There is no necessity for it.

MR. BIGGS. How do you make it out as costing twenty thousand dollars more?

MR. CAPLES. Three thousand dollars salary and two thousand dollars traveling expenses. I make a rough estimate, it may be a little more and it may be a little less. Now, I would like to know what is the matter with my friend from Butte, Mr. Biggs. But a little while ago he gained the reputation of being the bull dog of the treasury. [Laughter.] I mean watch dog, and now he comes and demands that we shall have a commission of nine men, where five men would be amply sufficient. What is the matter? I desire to know if the gentle- is tired of the appellation of watch dog of the treasury? I desire to know if the gentleman desires to exchange that title for the title of a a pair of skeleton keys? Well, if the gentleman desires to exchange titles, I have no objections, but I warn the gentleman, if he pursues this course, whether he desires the change or not, his name will be changed to a pair of skeleton keys.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I did not desire to speak upon this matter, I shall have to ask, however, to say a few words. I favor the idea of two members from each Congressional district. Now, sir, the State contains four Congressional districts, one of them consisting of the City and County of San Francisco. The territory of the State is practically divided into but three Congressional districts; that would give a representation upon this Board for each sixty thousand square miles about. If I understand the objects of the State Board, it is to equalize assessments so as to make them correspond with the value of the property assessed. Now, sir, I assert that no man of limited capacity, no man of ordinary capacity, none of that class of men who get office, would be able to know the value of all the property embraced in sixty thousand square miles. Now, sir, it is urged, in behalf of economy, that four members on this Board will be as good as eight; that it will be an economical measure. Now, sir, the more these members know of the property to be equalized, the less time they will have to expend in the business of equalizing. And if, in this second district, we have two members of the State Board, one from each portion of the district, I say the work will be done quickly and better than it could be done when there is only one man representing the district. The idea that it will cost five thousand dollars for each member is an unreasonable estimate; they will not have to set more than sixty or ninety days—we know that by the length of time that will expire between the local assessments and the time of the tax levy. During that time they ought to be paid a reasonable per diem, I should say from one thousand dollars to one thousand eight hundred dollars each, and if the Board consists of eight, that will not be any great item of expense.

But I would call your attention to another matter, and that is, that under another section of this report it will be the duty of this Board to place a value upon all the railroad property in this State. And, sir, I believe it will be safer to lodge this power in the hands of eight men than in the hands of four men. Some attempt has been made to draw a line between the agricultural and mining interests; I deprecate that attempt. I believe that each interest needs to be encouraged and maintained; that the one will do all it can to foster the other. And, sir, it is a fact that each Congressional district, except the first, is composed of mining territory and farming territory. I believe, as a rule, that the class of men who would be fitted to equalize the assessments of values upon agricultural lands, would be very poorly qualified to equalize the value of mining lands. Upon the other hand, I believe that the class of men who are familiar with the mining interests of this State, are not qualified to judge of the value of agricultural lands for the purpose of assessment. Now, sir, this cry of economy is a good cry. I believe in it, but there is one thing better, and that is, efficiency of the public service. And for one, I am not willing to sacrifice the efficiency of this Board for the sake of economy, and the saving of a few dollars. When it is proposed to have one representative from each county, I say that is more than is necessary. Eight is not too large. I don't think eight will be too many. It was the sense of the Committee of the Whole that eight was about the right thing. I hope the Convention will abide by the report of the Committee of the Whole.

SPEECH OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be adopted. I do not hope so particularly in the interest of economy, but I hope it will be adopted because I believe it will make a far more efficient Board if there are only four or five than to have eight or nine, and I should think that would have suggested itself to the mind of the gentleman from Nevada. If there are eight, it will bring about a division of sentiment in the Board; there would be less concert of action and ideas; there would be more uncertainty of action. The gentleman from Sierra seemed to think that this would be a representative Board, but eight would not be sufficient to make it so. Neither would it be a representative Board unless the districts are subdivided, for even if there were eight, it would not be a representative Board. We are not to have a representative Board, any farther than to represent the State of California, and all parts of the State.

MR. BARRY. Don't you think that two from each district would make a more representative Board than one.

MR. ANDREWS. No, sir, I do not think it would be any better. It will be likely to bring about division and dissension. We want efficiency of action; we want concert of action and purpose. To make it really efficient, I would not have it consist of more than three. The object of that Board is to do equal and exact justice to the whole State, and to each and every part of the State; to represent every interest, every class, and every section, but not to represent one to the exclusion of any other. A small Board will be more efficient than a large Board. Of course, we do not contemplate a Board that shall act entirely upon their own knowledge, it must be upon knowledge acquired through research and investigation, and this can be better done by four than eight. I think this is one of the most important amendments yet presented, and I hope it will be adopted.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I believe that each member of this Convention understands this question, and I now move the previous question.

The motion was seconded by Messrs. Brown, Howard, Larkin, and Evey.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

The motion prevailed.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Cruz, Mr. White.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Huestis, Biggs, Blackmer, Stedman, and West.

THE SECRETARY called the roll, and the amendment was adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

PAIRED—Mr. Herrington, aye, with Mr. Beerstecher, no.

THE PRESIDENT. The next question is upon the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

Concurred in.

NOTICES.

MR. HALE. I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in the report of the Committee of the Whole, striking out section fourteen of the article relating to revenue and taxation.

MR. LARUE. I give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to amend Rule Thirty-five as follows: "That the main question shall only apply to the amendment to such section or such substitutes as may be then under consideration."

ASSESSING RAILROAD CORPORATIONS.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section sixteen, as reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. The franchise, roadway, road-bed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads in this State, operated in more than one county, shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization, at their actual value, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities and counties, cities, townships, and districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties; and all other property of railroads shall be assessed by the counties in which such property is situated."

MR. AYERS. I offer an amendment to section sixteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert before the word 'townships,' in line four, the word 'towns;' and insert after 'counties,' in line six, the additional words, 'cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts.'"

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

MR. ROLFE. I hope gentlemen will vote for that amendment. If they will examine it, they will find that it is necessary to perfect the meaning of the section. The section as it now stands leaves out the word "towns."

The amendment was adopted.

THE CHAIR. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

CAPITAL STOCK OF CORPORATIONS.

THE CHAIR. The next question is upon concurring with the Committee of the whole in striking out section seventeen. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The value of the capital stock of a corporation shall be assessed in the county in which its principal place of business is located, and separately from all other property belonging thereto; and such stock shall be assessed at its market value when the assessment is made. The real and other personal property of such corporation shall be assessed in the several counties respectively in which the same is situate. The value of such stock, over and above the aggregate value of such real and other personal property, according to such assessment, shall be taxed in the county in which the principal place of business of such corporation is located; and the value of such real and other personal property shall be taxed in the several counties respectively in which the same is situate. The shares of stock belonging to the stockholders in such corporation shall be exempt from taxation; provided, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to railroad corporations."

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I wish to say that I hope the Convention will refuse to strike out this section, as my colleague has an amendment which I think is an improvement. If it is in order I will offer it now as a substitute. I would like to have it read for information.

THE CHAIR. No substitute is in order now. The Secretary can read it for information.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The capital stock of all corporations and joint stock associations organized under the laws of this State, shall be assessed to such corporations and associations in the city, county, or city and county, town, township, or district in which their principal places of business are located, at its cash value; provided that the real and personal property owned or possessed by any such corporation or association shall be assessed and taxed in the several cities, counties, or cities and counties, towns, townships, or districts in which the same is situated. The excess in value only of the capital stock of such corporations or associations over the aggregate value of their real and personal property within this State, according to such assessment, shall be taxed, and shall be so taxed in the city, county, or city and county, town, township, or district in which the principal place of business of such corporation or association is located. For the purposes of taxation, the assessment list of the real and personal property of persons, corporations, and associations, owning and enjoying valuable franchises, shall include such franchises as forming a part of such property. The shares of stock belonging to the stockholders in such corporations or associations shall be exempt from taxation."

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I was not present when this section was stricken out. I do not know what reasons were given for striking it out. I know the object for which it was intended. To my mind it was a good object. Unless there are reasons that have not occurred to me, I hope the Convention will retain the section. It is well known that there are numerous corporations in this State that have capital stock and do a good business, which have very little property to assess; and in such cases it is very proper to assess the capital stock for what it is worth. But take the case of a bank that is solvent and doing business, to assess the capital stock, and then assess all the property on which the stock is based, would be equivalent to assessing the deed to a piece of real estate, and then assessing the real estate besides. The proposition adopted here last Saturday, as a substitute to section two, provides that the capital stock, among other things, shall be assessed. The article provides that everything else shall be assessed. Under that article I don't see any way of avoiding the assessment of the capital stock of corporations, and of the property represented by the stock. Certainly there is no gentleman here but what can see the injustice of it. I simply rise for the purpose of urging the Convention to consider this matter carefully before striking this out. There are very grave reasons why it ought to be retained, particularly so if the Convention is going to stand by its action on the other.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: Some of the reasons why it was stricken out were that it conflicted with the other section. It provides for assessing all the real and personal property of corporations at the place where the property is situated, in the county, city, or district. It provides for assessing its capital stock at the place of business. Now, I have an idea that when you have assessed all the real and personal property, you have got about all the property there is. The value of their property is indicated by the value of the capital stock. The capital stock has no value whatever aside from the real property. For illustration: In the mining counties all through this State are many companies doing business. Their offices and business are mostly in San Francisco. The Assessor of San Francisco could go into those offices and assess the capital stock at its market value. The property would be assessed in the county where it exists at its full value, as per their statements made. Now, there is a double assessment of that property. There is general confusion. The cash value of the stock indicates the value of the property of the corporation. To assess the capital stock and then assess the mine too would be double taxation. There is no necessity for it after you have assessed the real property of the corporation. There is no difference between that and the capital stock. The reason it was stricken out was to stop the confusion.

MR. AYERS. Would not this stock be assessed under the Terry amendment.

MR. LARKIN. If there is any value separate from the property. But there is no such value. There can be no value to the capital stock after you have assessed all the real and personal property.

MR. MCCONNELL. I don't think the gentleman ought to complain of double taxation. He voted for double taxation.

MR. LARKIN. I don't think I have any more than the gentleman from Sacramento. I voted for the Boggs proposition. I voted for the Terry amendment as a compromise. I think the section ought to be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I am in favor of striking this out, for several reasons. First, it provides that the capital stock shall be assessed in the county in which the principal place of business is. Now, the property of the corporation has to be protected in one county, and the tax has to be paid in another county. Take mining property. Take it in Nevada County. You have to go to some other place to collect the tax. The tax has to be paid in one place, while the expenses of Government are incurred in some other place where the property is situated. Next, I object to it for the very good reason that it makes double taxation. I don't know—I have heard so much about double taxation, I don't know but I could stand a little of it; but when it comes to treble taxation, that is piling it on too thick.

MR. HALE. I suggest the amendment offered by Mr. Burt.

MR. CROSS. Now, sir, I object to this; and the same objection will apply to the proposition of the gentleman from Placer: that it assesses the value of the capital stock over and above the value of the real and personal property elsewhere than where the property is situated. Now, you never can assess the excess in the value of the capital stock in the place where the principal place of business is, until you go to the county where the property is and find out how much that is assessed for. We have provided that the assessments shall be made out on a certain day all over the State. How are you going to make these two things come together? There are other absurdities just as glaring as this. Who is going to tell what is assessed in the other county. Then suppose the State Board changes the valuation of the real and personal property in some other county, what is going to happen? I suppose then the Assessor will have to do the work over again. We will have confusion worse confounded. After he has done all that, we come to something else. "The shares of stock belonging to the stockholders shall be exempt from taxation." Here is some more confusion. In section two we have provided that the stock shall be assessed. To whom? Why, to the men who own it. Now, we are going to assess the property; next, the capital stock of the corporation in the principal place of business, as in section two, providing that it shall be assessed. Now, in section sixteen we say it shall not be assessed. What does all this business mean? Then we come to another thing, providing that no railroad corporation shall be exempt. It is conflicting and unreasonable all the way through.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. The objections urged to this section in Committee of the Whole were those that have not yet been urged here. The objection urged then was to the first clause, that the value of the capital stock of a corporation should be assessed in the county in which its principal place of business is. It was argued there, with much apparent force and justice, that this would give to San Francisco the taxes on a great deal of property that ought to go to the interior counties. This was urged with great force, and I think with justice, too. The gentleman from Trinity in particular, alluded to the injustice and the result of this thing, and it was stricken out by almost unanimous consent. This section would, no doubt, conflict with sections two and five. I have not been able to see the proposed amendment, and therefore cannot tell what it is. But I can see that this section is unnecessary, and therefore I hope that the Convention will concur with the Committee of the Whole, and strike out the section.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I hope this motion will not prevail; not because I am in favor of the section as it is formulated, and if it was a question of its adoption or rejection, I should vote to strike it out; but I say, sir, that it covers a subject-matter that ought to be incorporated in this Constitution.

MR. CROSS. Would it not be better to strike it out and introduce Mr. Burt's proposition as a separate section, thereby not endangering this section by keeping it in?

MR. HALE. I have no objections to that. I would ask the Chair, if this Convention refuses to strike out this section, if a substitute will be in order?

THE CHAIR. Not until the whole report has been gone through with.

MR. HALE. Then I will concur in the proposition to strike out, as I am anxious to see the Burt proposition adopted.

THE CHAIR. The question is upon concurring with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

INCOME TAX.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section —, reported by the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read the following additional section, reported by the Committee of the Whole:

"SEC. —. Income taxes may be assessed to and collected from persons, corporations, joint stock associations, or companies resident or doing business in this State, or any one or more of them, in such cases and amounts, and in such manner as shall be prescribed by law."

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I hope that this section will be rejected. Now, consistency is said to be a jewel. We have adopted section two, and that section is mandatory on the Legislature. It says:

"Laws shall be passed taxing all moneys, credits secured by mortgage or trust-deed or unsecured, investments in bonds, franchises, and all other property, real and personal, according to its true value in money, except as hereafter provided; but the Legislature may authorize, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust-deed, a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State. Growing crops, and such property as may be used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation."

Now that language is very strong. It says that all property shall be taxed in proportion to its value. If that is so it is useless to give them power to pass an income tax law. Now, sir, we must either abandon section two or stand by it. There is no use whatever in making this double and treble taxation, and having all these provisions inconsistent with themselves. Now "stock" may include the capital stock of corporations, or it may include the shares of stockholders. Under this both would have to be taxed. We had better stand by the section which has been formulated with so much care. There are some few inconsistencies in sections two and five, but they can be remedied on second reading. I say an income tax is odious to the people of this State. It would be an experimental provision inserted in the Constitution. This section ought to be stricken out.

Digitized by Google

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I have an amendment to offer to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section, 'provided, that no tax shall be assessed upon incomes directly derived from property taxed.'"

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: This amendment is opposed to any double taxation. If this section should be adopted the result of it would be this: that if Mr. Dudley has a ranch of one thousand acres of land, the Assessor assesses it at its full cash value, and then when he goes to sell his wheat, or corn, or whatever he chooses to raise, and receives the pay therefor, he will be again assessed on his income, should the Legislature so decide. My idea is this: if a man has an income from property which is taxed, and he pays taxes on it, that should be sufficient. But there are many men like myself, who derive a liberal income from a business which does not require the expenditure of any capital. Physicians, lawyers, and other professional men, frequently have very liberal incomes, more so than those who have a large amount of property. They enjoy the benefits which Government confers without contributing anything to its support. It is right, and this class of men ought to be willing to stand in and pay a reasonable income tax. Therefore I offer this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I for one, hope that this section will be allowed to remain just as it is. I do not fear the danger cited by the last gentlemen, that the Legislature will pass a law taxing Mr. Dudley's farm, and then tax him for his income on that farm. I don't apprehend that the Legislature will ever do such an absurd thing as that. We must leave some discretion with the Legislature. Now, medical men, lawyers, and others, make as high as twenty-five thousand dollars a year, and the property, which is invested in the business, may not amount to two thousand dollars, and may not be assessed at one thousand dollars. The idea that such a man is only taxed fifteen or twenty dollars a year seems to me wrong, when he is making ten, fifteen, or twenty thousand dollars a year. The Legislature ought to have the privilege of stepping in and remedying the inequality. It is not mandatory, but gives them the power, if they choose to exercise it, where there is great inequality existing that cannot be remedied in any other way. Take insurance companies—the foreign companies, who have their agents here. But they have but little property here, probably consisting of nothing but office furniture, perhaps worth from twenty-five to one hundred dollars, at the principal city of the State. They may be assessed on that, pay an actual tax on that, and still the company may be making millions of dollars a year in the business of insuring. The profits are taken away out of the State by the home office in London or Liverpool, or some other place. They take the money which they make in this State out of the State, to some other State, or some other country. Now, I say, I am in favor of reaching those cases if we can. Take the Six Chinese Companies, of San Francisco. It is said that one of these companies consists of a President, Secretary, and cook. I don't suppose that their actual property amounts to one hundred and fifty dollars; at the same time the company, in the business of importing coolies into this country, may make one hundred thousand dollars a year, or five hundred thousand dollars, or five million dollars a year. I do not know that their incomes can be reached, but I say we should not deny the Legislature this power. I do not apprehend that the Legislature will ever be guilty of any such absurd thing as to tax a mining company, for instance, on its property, and then tax the income, or the amount of gold extracted. I have no fear of any such result. But if professional men, like Dr. O'Donnell and myself, are able to make ten thousand dollars a year without any capital invested, I say we ought to be made to contribute something proportionate to our income to the support of the Government.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Kern. Mr. President: It seems to me that the amendment takes out what little good there is in this section. As the gentleman from San Bernardino argued, there are foreign corporations and non-residents who have no property in this State, who derive a large income, which is carried out of the State. Now, if there is any good in a system of this kind, it seems to me applicable to cases of this kind. I am opposed to an income tax on general principles. I think it brings about more perjury than any system that can be established. I think a measure of this kind should be acted upon with great caution. I am opposed to the amendment of Mr. Cross, and I do not like the section. Unless it is amended I shall vote against it.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: This section, as adopted by the Committee of the Whole, authorizes the Legislature to do what?

"SEC. —. Income taxes may be assessed to and collected from persons, corporations, joint stock associations, or companies resident or doing business in this State, or any one or more of them, in such cases and amounts, and in such manner, as shall be prescribed by law."

An individual may pay taxes on all the property he has, and then the Legislature may, by virtue of this provision, compel him to pay an additional tax in the shape of an income tax. The gentleman from San Bernardino tells us that he has no fear that the Legislature will do anything of the kind. If he has no fear of anything of the kind, what reason can he have for opposing the amendment of Mr. Cross? I believe it will accomplish the object which the author intended to accomplish with this amendment. With that amendment I am in favor of it. It will reach those companies doing a large amount of business here who own no property. That is the gentleman's idea, and it is a good one. But I desire to qualify the power of the Legislature in the matter, so that they not only will not but cannot do wrong.

SPEECH OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that the section will not be stricken out; and I further hope that there will be no amendment to it. It reads exactly right. As I understand it, this section was drawn up and presented to the Committee of the Whole, and adopted by the Committee as a sort of safety valve upon our financial system, so that none of these rich men can find a loophole by which to escape their share of the public burden. And this is a safety valve in case the Supreme Court should make an iron-bound rule, as they have done before, which will allow certain men to escape taxation. I hope, therefore, that the safety valve will not be taken off, and that we may hold it and make it useful in compelling men to pay their taxes. There are certain companies and individuals who habitually avoid taxation. An income tax will reach them when nothing else will. I am in favor of having something ornamental as well as useful. I hope there will be no amendment on which to base any construction that may destroy the usefulness of the section. This section is like the Lord's Prayer, it covers the whole ground. It is perfect now.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I hope my friend from Nevada will not insist upon his amendment. I hope this section may not be stricken out. This is not the longest section in the Constitution, but it will be by no means the least significant. This section has been drawn with great care. There is not a word in it that does not mean something. The old Constitution provides only for a property tax. But experience has shown in this State, as it has in other States, that you cannot justly distribute the burdens of Government by a property tax alone. No two systems of taxation are exactly alike. For instance, in Pennsylvania, the tax is raised from corporations, and it is claimed that it can be distributed more equally by that means than by levying a general tax upon property. In some of the States the tax is laid on real estate alone. The tax should not rest wholly upon property. It is an unequal tax necessarily. It has been clearly pointed out by the gentleman from San Bernardino, that there are men in this State who habitually escape taxation, and who can well afford to contribute to the support of the Government. These men can only be reached by an income tax. I hope the section will be allowed to stand.

[Mr. Wyatt in the chair.]

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will indorse the action of the Committee of the Whole, and adopt this section. I believe it to be the best section in the entire lot. My friend from Sonoma says he sees double taxation in it. This section says that an income tax may be assessed, not that it shall be assessed. There is no double taxation unless the Legislature should see fit to make double taxation. If there had ever been an instance in the past where the Legislature ever attempted to levy an unjust tax, there might be some likelihood of it. Now, the fact is, this is the only safe clause whereby we will prevent double taxation, whereby the Legislature will be enabled to get taxes out of a certain class that have always escaped taxation. My friend from Nevada also sees double taxation. I have observed this, that the gentleman from Nevada is extremely jealous of the supposed interests of his constituents. That I like. He is always up and against any section that contains the word "stocks," unless it applies to railroad corporations only. He even went so far as to fancy that he saw double taxation in section seventeen. Now, perhaps the gentleman sees double. He generally stands square on his feet, but he sees strange sights. I object to the amendment offered by him, for the reason that this provision has to be construed; and if the Legislature should attempt to collect an income tax, the question as to whether the property from which that income was derived had been taxed before, would have to be settled on every case, by the Courts, and the result would be that the whole thing would be defeated through legal quibbles and technicalities. Take these foreign insurance companies, and I am not so sure that their tables and desks would not be construed as being the property from which their income was derived. The gentleman is very anxious for fear Mr. Dudley's farm will be doubly taxed. Well, sir, Mr. Dudley's farm, as well as every other farm in this State, has been doubly taxed for years; not only doubly taxed, but the income has been taxed besides, in the shape of a tax on growing crops; doubly taxed, by reason of the escape of so much other property from taxation. I have no fear whatever. Now, there is no objection to the principle of the amendment; the objection is, that it lays the section open to construction. The object of the provision has been clearly stated by others.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. JONES. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting next after the word 'taxes,' in line one, the words 'upon net incomes;' also, by striking out the words, 'or any one or more of them,' in line three."

[Mr. Waters in the chair.]

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: To my mind this section should receive careful attention. I am aware that this section does not meet the views of a great many, and I believe it can be made more perfect and more acceptable. It does seem to me wrong that the Legislature should have power to levy an income tax upon certain companies, or certain individuals, and leave out the rest. The Legislature might levy an income tax upon some companies and not upon others; upon some individuals and not upon others. If an income tax is imposed, it should be imposed uniformly upon all classes of persons, corporations, or associations. That was the only idea I had in that part of the amendment. When you say "any one or more of them," it seems to me this is the logical conclusion, that the Legislature may discriminate between persons as well as between corporations and associations. I think that would be unjust. Now, the next point of the amendment is to insert the words "net incomes." I believe it is perfectly right and proper for the State to levy a tax upon net incomes, or in other words, upon the profits of the business. There are many who now escape taxation who can more easily pay taxes than some who have a great deal of property. I would be very glad to have the privilege of paying a large tax upon a net income. Any man, or any corporation, receiving the protection and benefits which Government affords, ought to be made to pay a tax upon net incomes. I believe, when fully understood, that a tax upon net incomes would be popular in this State. I believe that the insertion of these words would materially improve the section. I believe it will remove some of the objections which have been urged here, and I think it will be more satisfactory to the people.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not prevail. The weight of authority is all in favor of a tax upon gross incomes rather than upon net incomes. Whenever you undertake to narrow it down to net incomes you open wide the door to fraud and perjury as to what the expenses are. They will reduce large gross incomes to very small incomes by piling up fictitious expenses. That was one of the most crying evils under our recent Federal income tax law. Nor is it necessary to say net incomes. Leave that to the Legislature. The other part of the amendment is even more objectionable, as it would destroy the very object of the section. The Legislature would then have no option but to levy an income upon all corporations, if any; upon all persons, if any, which is exactly the reverse of what we intend. I hope the amendment will not pass.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. KELLY. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Larkin, Tinnin, Shoemaker, and Biggs.

THE CHAIR. The question is: Shall the main question be now put? Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Mariposa, Mr. Jones.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

MR. MCCALLUM. Does the previous question go to the section?

THE CHAIR. Yes, sir.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Huestis, Shoemaker, Hunter, Lindow, and Tully.

The roll was called, and the amendment concurred in by the following vote:

AYES.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege in relation to a matter on the article on taxation. On yesterday morning the Sacramento Record-Union published, editorially, what purported to be an extract from the second section of the article on taxation, as adopted by this Convention, offered by Judge Terry. In the report taken by the short-hand reporter of that paper, the section is correctly reported. In the comments, editorially, it is misrepresented. The intelligence of every member of this Convention is impugned. Courtesy to the Convention would demand that our actions should be fairly, honestly, and intelligently criticised. The people of this State expect, through this prominent journal of Sacramento, to receive correct information as regards the proceedings of this Convention. Now, the section referred to, and which was introduced by Judge Terry, reads:

"SEC. 2. All property in the State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property,' as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed; provided, that growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation. The Legislature may provide, except in case of credits secured by mortgage or trust-deed, for a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State."

Now, in the editorial comments that paper has this:

"After a good deal of bickering, Terry offered what he facetiously called 'an amendment,' and, as by this time the whole subject had got beyond control, a majority voted for it, though without understanding it in the least. This amendment is a marvelous piece of work. It begins by making the concession that United States bonds shall not be taxed; a quite superfluous provision, since the Convention has no jurisdiction over them, one way or another. It then provides that 'all property shall be taxed in proportion to its nature.' What this means has not been explained, and we take leave to doubt whether any one in or out of the Convention can explain it. When a thing is taxed 'in proportion to its nature,' how is it taxed? The nature of a cow, for instance, is to be graminivorous, but how is the Assessor to tax a cow 'in proportion to' her disposition to eat grass? We shall have a singular system of taxation if this provision is adopted, and if any serious effort is made to carry it into effect."

I would say here, I deferred from referring to this yesterday, supposing that to-day they would correct it, as fairness, and honesty, and decency required they should do, but they have not done it; and now, in justice to this Convention, and the gentleman who offered it, I make these remarks so that it may go upon our proceedings, and the people of the State may know that we are misrepresented. This paper is taken more generally by the people of this State than any other paper in the State. As long as the Convention is running, and from the very beginning, its course has been one of misrepresentation, and falsifying, and casting ridicule upon the action of this Convention. Their reporters here, that are sitting at our desks, report us correctly, so far as I have seen; I have no fault to find with them, but this editor deliberately wrote that article, and has failed to retract.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: It will probably relieve the mind of the gentleman from El Dorado, to state, that, as I am informed, the word "nature," of which he so much complains, is the result of a typographical error that appeared in all of the San Francisco papers on Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning. By some freak of nature, [Laughter] the types made the report read "nature" in the place of "value." How it is that a printer will sometimes get a word misspelled, where it is impossible for any other man to mistake it, is one of those things that no fellow ever yet has found out, but such is the case. I am informed that the editorials in the Record-Union office are written up on Sunday, before their Saturday's report of the Convention, and they therefore did not have their own report, which was correct, to go by, but took their information from the San Francisco papers of Sunday morning. The gentleman, no doubt, is astonished that any editorial writer should fall into such an error, perhaps, but I think that the writer was justified, under the circumstances.

MR. TULLY. I rise to a point of order: That this discussion is out of order, and foreign to the subject.

MR. REYNOLDS. I think I have a right to explain.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman from San Francisco will proceed.

MR. REYNOLDS. I was trying to excuse the blunder on the part of the paper. I have no more to say.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: It seems then that all the malignity and the billingsgate that has been hurled at this Convention by the Record-Union, has to be blamed to the poor printers. [Laughter.] That infernal malignity which has been hurled at members of this Convention since the very first day that we assembled here, intimating that we are a set of numbskulls and fools, by the editor of that paper, an unnaturalized Englishman, is to be blamed to the poor printers. I say it is not so; the printers are more intelligent than the editors and proprietors of the newspapers. [Laughter.]

MR. FILCHER. I move a vote of thanks to the Record-Union; I think it is doing a great deal more good than harm by the course it is pursuing.

PETITIONS.

The President and Mr. Gorman presented petitions, requesting the exemption of certain property, used for charitable, educational, and church purposes, from taxation.

Laid on the table, to be considered with the article on revenue and taxation.

TAXATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on taxation. The question is on engrossing the article.

SUCCESSION TAX.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION —. The Legislature may impose a succession tax upon all legacies and distributive shares derived from the estates of deceased persons; provided, that except in the case of non-resident aliens, no child, brother, sister, father, mother, husband, or wife of any deceased person, shall pay such succession tax, unless the distributive share of such person amounts in the aggregate to more than five thousand dollars in value.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I have drafted that section from what is known as the proposed Laine Constitution. I think that a provision of that character ought to be placed in this Constitution. A succession tax is now in force in various countries of Europe, but I am not aware whether any of the States of the Union have yet adopted one. Such a tax has been very widely discussed in this State, and it has been very generally conceded that the tax would be a just and wise one. If we should give the Legislature the authority to impose such a tax it would increase the revenues of this State from that source, and it would relieve the burdens of taxation on other sources which are not so well able to bear it. A succession tax is one which is easily and cheerfully paid. I shall not trouble this Convention with much argument upon the subject, but I will merely submit the section for discussion.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope this amendment, with a slight amendment to it, will be adopted; that is, that the Legislature should have power to impose a graduated succession tax, depending upon the amount of the estate. Now, in the case of small estates, it is, perhaps, a hardship on the heirs, to impose anything like a heavy tax, but in the case of large estates, there can be no reason on earth why they should not contribute something towards the revenues of the State. Of course, a tax of this kind ought not to be imposed where it will prevent a man from leaving his family in such a position that they may have an opportunity to receive the benefits of education, or to receive, substantially, the fruits of the enterprise of the deceased, but in the case of large estates, while a great deal of revenue may be detained by the State, there is no hardship practiced upon anybody. This matter of the inheritance of property and of receiving the donation of property by will, is a mere matter of municipal and statutory regulation. There is no natural right which absolutely gives to any particular person, or class of persons, all the property of which a man dies possessed. The inheritance and the distribution of property, under the laws which govern inheritance, are matters entirely of statutory regulation, varying according to the policy of different States and different countries. For instance, the proportion of estate which goes to relatives in different degree, varies in different portions of the States and different countries. Now, in the case of large fortunes, I cannot see any reason why a man, after death, who has earned, for instance, a fortune of ten millions of dollars, should be permitted to distribute that entire property as he may wish, to any persons whatsoever. I cannot see any reason why a portion of that property should not be inherited by the State; why the State, which has protected him through life, should not, at his death, receive a portion of the property which he has earned. We cannot sit down here, in the Constitutional Convention, and provide the precise proportions, but suppose you begin with small tax on the estates amounting to ten thousand dollars—the inheritance amounting to that—you could go on until you reach the millions, increasing the percentage until you get it up to ten per cent. Now, take the cases that have happened within this State within the last year. No less than three men have died in this State within the last year whose aggregate property amounted to at least twenty-five million dollars. If we had had a tax of ten per cent. upon that property—a matter which I urged on several gentlemen last Winter, when the Legislature was in session—no human being would have been injured, no injustice would have been done to anybody, and the State would have derived two million five hundred thousand dollars from the estates of three men. The tendency of property under our system of corporations, and under our present system of speculation, is to be concentrated in a few hands. It is a great public evil, and one which ought to be reached by all means which will not do injustice to individuals, and I can conceive of no better means of doing justice to the State and at the same time to individuals, and securing a proper revenue to the Government, than to impose a graduated tax. It is one of the cases where I think we should depart from the strict rule of equal taxation—according to the amount of property, where the tax should be graded—and I suggest to the gentleman, if he would accept it, to allow the word "graduated" to be inserted there in its proper place, before "succession." It ought to be so. Suppose a man dies worth fifteen thousand dollars. He has a family of five children. In such a case as that, perhaps there ought to be no tax, where there are immediate descendants and where each child receives three thousand dollars in the ordinary course of distribution. That should be exempt. But, on the other hand, suppose that he leaves an estate of fifteen thousand dollars, and that he wills it to some relative or some friend; it ought to come within this principle of taxation, then.

Then again, where he leaves, for instance, the amount of ten thousand dollars, or fifteen thousand dollars to his widow, there should be, if any, but a small tax imposed upon that; but if he leaves a property worth a million there is no reason why the State should say by its laws that every dollar shall go, if he leaves no will, to his widow and children, and none to the State which has protected him, and where he has acquired that vast amount of property. Then if you make the tax graduated it falls with no severity upon anybody. Take the case of a late proprietor of a portion of the Central Pacific Railroad. Why should not the State receive a percentage upon that property? Take the case of the late Michael Reese, without wife or child, but with relatives residing outside of the State, many of them. Why should not this estate have paid a taxation? Why not the estate of Mr. O'Brien? There can be no reason, and on the other hand it would be a source of revenue which oppresses nobody. You are not depriving people of property which they have earned. The heirs do not earn the property, and the State has a right to make its own regulation upon the subject. The Legislature should be enabled to act without being trammeled, and should be enabled to graduate the tax according to the nature of the case in the amount of the property.

MR. BIGGS. You propose to tax a man's estate because he dies.

MR. CAMPBELL. No, sir. A man dies leaving a certain property, and it is entirely in the discretion of the State to say what disposition of that property shall be made after his death. The laws of no two States agree upon that subject. You are not taxing a man because he dies.

MR. BIGGS. You tax the property.

MR. CAMPBELL. You must provide by law for its distribution. You may call it taxation, or you may call it inheritance.

Digitized by Google

MR. BIGGS. You propose to tax the property when the man lives, and if he dies put another tax upon the same property the same year.

MR. CAMPBELL. When a man dies, of course, he owns the property no longer. The distribution of that property after his death is entirely a matter of State regulation, is it not? If there was no statute that the children should inherit it, his children would not inherit it; it would escheat to the State. The State was the original owner; and these persons derived their right to it simply from the statutes of the State, and from no other source.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time has expired.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would inquire if Mr. Campbell offered an amendment.

MR. CAMPBELL. Yes, sir.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I would state that a tax or a percentage of this character has been levied upon the estates of deceased persons in the State of Michigan for a number of years, and there is a certain per centage upon every thousand dollars over and above a certain amount, that is taken out of the estate as probate charges. The Court takes out a certain percentage, and every estate must go through the Probate Court. As has been said by Mr. Campbell, the right of taking the property of a deceased person flows entirely from the statutory law, from the statute of wills, from the statute of descents. There is no original right to take this property. For a long time the real estate held by a person upon his death escheated to the State, and by the State was given out to such persons as the crown saw fit to give it to. That is the law of Japan to-day. When a man dies his real estate escheats to the State. It was the law of England for years and years, and merely a constitutional law of England changed the rule and gave the right of inheritance. It is right that when parties take by descent, or through the medium of testamentary devise, that they should pay a reasonable percentage to the State; provided that the amount they take is over and above five thousand dollars. There is no injustice in it at all, and it has been adopted by at least one State in the Union.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: There is an amendment, I think, should be tacked on to this. We propose now to tax men in every conceivable way during their life. Now it is proposed to tax them for the privilege of dying, and I think you ought to add a tax for being born, and then you will have it.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I cannot permit this proposition to go unchallenged, and I must confess that I am greatly surprised that it should emanate from the source that it does. The question is brought up here, fair and square: Does the right to property exist only during the lifetime of the owner, and does the right to that property cease when he dies? I think, Mr. President, that the right to convey is as sacred as the right to hold, and the converse of that proposition is a new doctrine to me. Gentlemen refer to Japan and medieval Europe for an example in illustration of this species of confiscation. They may be correct, but I hold that the eternal principles of justice and right are contravened by this proposition. Is it the right of taxation? The gentleman says he would graduate it so that on large estates there may be a tax of ten per cent. levied. Now, it would be a very comfortable thing for the State, in the case of the death of a Mackay, a Fair, or O'Brien, to confiscate two or three or five hundred thousand dollars. Such a tax would defray all the expenses of the Government, and we would be free from the incubus of taxation. This would be very nice and comfortable, but would it be just? There is the proposition. Is it taxation? I deny it. It is confiscation—nothing more, nothing less—and I repudiate the right of the State to confiscate a man's property because he dies. I hold that he has the same right to convey it at his death that he has during his life. Now, gentlemen propose to punish a man for dying; take away the estate when he dies; say that when he dies he shall forfeit all right to the property, and that the State will take charge of it. We will give to your heirs what we choose to, and we will retain for ourselves what we choose to. I deny that there is any taxation in it, and there is no pretense of taxation. It must be done under the head of confiscation, or condemnation, for the crime of having died. This is the first time I ever heard it charged that it was a crime to die. Now, if the gentleman will put it upon the basis of taxation, and let it be equitable and uniform, then he might with some pretense claim that it was taxation; but he does not do that. He claims that it should be a graduated tax. That places it fairly and squarely upon the basis of confiscation. I appeal to the sense of justice and right of gentlemen on this floor to vote down this proposition, and show that they are governed by higher and nobler principles than to exempt themselves from the burdens of Government by condemning and confiscating the property of men who are so unfortunate as to die.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: On yesterday, the Convention adopted an additional section to this article, which, so far as the Constitution could, conferred upon the Legislature the authority to levy an income tax upon persons, corporations, joint-stock associations, or companies, or any one or more of them, in such amounts and in such manner as they should see fit. For my own part, I was unable to sustain that proposition, but it has been passed by the body. Now, it seems to me that that reaches any receipts, whether by descent, inheritance, or by profit in business, that any person in the State can have or acquire; and it looks to me as though this is straining rather to attempt to find something more in the nature of receipts which shall be taxed under another additional section. It appears to me clear that money received as a legacy would be an income to the person receiving it, for that year, and as to the graduation of the taxation upon it, let the last section of the article, as it now stands, to which I just referred, cover that. There is one remark which it seems to me may well be made here, and that is, that the scheme of the Constitution we are framing is, to a large extent, taking upon itself the character of a grant of power to the Legislature. In this article, nearly half a dozen instances of that kind occur, in which a provision is not made mandatory upon the Legislature, but is put in the form of a grant of power to the Legislature in face of the fact that it is clearly understood that no grant can be made; that without restriction or limitation, the Legislature will have full power. Now, this certainly is going to confuse the minds of the people in regard to the character of the Constitution and the theory upon which it is framed, and it seems to me that the provisions can only have the effect of a sort of suggestion to the Legislature, that perhaps they might as well think about it and see if they won't do so and so. If that be the only effect, I think we had far better keep them out. I think there is perhaps, more of them in this article than in most of the others which have passed through a second reading. Now, if it be desired that the Legislature shall be required to do such things as are included in this apparent permission, undoubtedly the phraseology ought to be changed, and it should be made mandatory, and if it be not desired; I do not see why we should cumber the instrument with a great variety of these grants, unless we mean to go on and specify every thing which we suppose that the Legislature shall have the right and authority to do. Unless we can assume that the Legislature shall have the right to do that which is not inhibited or limited, why then we have got to grant all the power that they are to exercise. I therefore make the point that all that is sought to be done by the proposed section, is already provided for, according to the interpretation of the Convention, and according to the proper interpretation of the words used in the section adopted yesterday.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I did not intend to say anything at all upon this matter, but after having read very carefully the two sections which are proposed, I will speak very briefly upon them. I understand that under this new system which we have now adopted, all provisions of the Constitution are to be mandatory, unless otherwise expressly provided. If I am correct in that, and there is one general sweeping clause, making everything mandatory, then this section, although it reads as though it were advisory, would be obligatory upon the Legislature, because it does not expressly say, in this connection, that it is not mandatory. I think, therefore, that all of these sections, that the Legislature may impose an income tax, that the Legislature may impose a succession tax, etc., become mandatory under that provision. That is my own conviction, and I suggest that to other gentlemen in construing these sections which are phrased in this way. Now, there are some States that are said to be good States to come from, but I do not think that this Constitution, with this section in, would be very good as a part of an immigration scheme. I do not think it will invite many immigrants to come into the State. I think there is a place to stop, although some gentlemen think there is no place to stop in this matter of taxation. I do not consider it at all necessary for this Convention to adopt every clause of a Constitution which is found to exist in other States. I would rather hear some gentleman say something upon the reason and the policy and good sense of the provision, than to say that it comes from other States. We do not know what may have induced the people of other States to pass upon them. Our situation is a little different from that of the people of Kalamazoo, in Michigan, and their habits and customs and usages may not be suitable for us. It may be first-rate for them, but I would rather hear something said as to why we should adopt it. Now let us see what this amounts to. The property of the man in life is taxed; during the year he dies. Now, is it to be taxed again? If he pays the tax once, or if his administrator pays it, which he will have to, that is one taxation upon his property. Now comes the tax upon the succession, which is the same property, because it passes to the heirs, devisees and legatees.

Now, gentlemen, let us not be carried away by any false notion about a few very rich people. This applies to the great mass of the people of the country, to the small and moderate estates of the working people, the mercantile people, merchants, professional men, and others, who have on the average but limited estates. Now, everybody knows that when a man dies he never is so rich as he is supposed to be by the people at large. You never know how poor a man is until he dies and his estate is wound up, and we know how far it falls short of what his estimated wealth was during his lifetime. When the head of a family dies, it is not only a misfortune in calamity to the family, because they lose that person who is dear to their affections; but, also, because it cuts off their supply. The income is stopped. If it comes from labor or from a profession, why it stops. The family have no means to go on, and the distress ensues immediately. Then you go through all the formality of winding up the estate. There is an immense shrinkage, and there is suffering in this family who have lost their head, arising from all this combination of circumstances. Now, it is proposed to add to the terrors of death this confiscation of a portion of the estate. It is opposed to my first ideas of justice and right, and although it prevails in Kalamazoo, in Michigan, my own sense of justice, my own reason induces me to vote against this tax upon succession. I believe that it would be mandatory, and the Legislature would be compelled, under this, to inflict this tax. It is double taxation. I do not care to go away back into an original theoretical discussion as to whether a man has a right to the property of his ancestry, or whether a man has a right to will a thing or not. It has become a part of the common law of the country that a man has a right to dispose of his property. Whether you call it a natural right or not, it is a right which the people recognize, that a man should have the right to dispose of that which he has, by the labor of a long life, acquired. That being the case, I think we had better stop, and not tax again the unfortunate people who lose the head of their family, and not add an additional terror by way of confiscation of a portion of the property.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The proposition which is contained in this section is attacked with the customary denunciation—that it is confiscation. When the estate falls from the hands of a dead man, and he is deprived of the ability and power to hold it by death, the reason why any one lays claims of right to the property is because the law grants it. A great reason exists in public policy for the adoption of this system, or for lodging the power in the Legislature to adopt it. I disagree altogether from the gentleman who spoke last, that the provisions of this Constitution, where they are expressly permissive, and only permissive, shall be construed to be mandatory. I am aware of the construction, as put upon the statute, where the use of the word "may" is construed to mean "must." That certainly cannot apply to the provisions of a Constitution where you have a provision that the provisions of the Constitution are mandatory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise, and then otherwise express it by making it permissive. I rose to speak upon this question to call the attention to the great question of public policy involved. It must be remembered in these United States that we have a larger equivalent in a certain extent to the operation of the laws of primogeniture—the accumulation in single hands of large estates. I remember of reading that Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, by means of the immense possessions left him, was actually driving under his control the whole transportation of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains. I say that to tax this does not destroy the power of the deceased to convey his property, and I am in favor of leaving these vast estates in the hands of the people acting through their Legislatures. I shall therefore vote for the proposition of the gentleman.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, Brown, White, Ayers, and Condon.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I desire to offer an additional clause to section two as it stands.

THE PRESIDENT. There is no amendment in order to section two.

MR. BURT. Mr. President: I desire to offer an additional section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The capital stock of all corporations and joint-stock associations organized under the laws of this State shall be assessed to such corporations and associations in the city, county, or city and county, town, township, or district in which their principal places of business are located, at its cash value; provided, that the real and personal property owned and possessed by any such corporation or association shall be assessed and taxed in the several cities, counties, or cities and counties, towns, townships, or districts in which the same is situated. The excess in value only of the capital stock of such corporations or associations over the aggregate value of their real and personal property within this State, according to such assessment, shall be taxed, and shall be so taxed in the city, county, or city and county, town, township, or district in which the principal place of business of such corporation or association is located. For the purposes of taxation, the assessment list of the real and personal property of persons, corporations, and associations, owning and enjoying valuable franchises, shall include such franchises as forming a part of such property. The shares of stock belonging to the stockholders in such corporations or associations shall be exempt from taxation."

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment is substantially the same as section seventeen. It is not in order.

GRADUATED LAND TAX.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer an additional section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The State Board of Equalization shall classify the lands of the State each second year, each class to have its specific valuation per acre, such valuation to be the basis of the assessment. The Legislature shall provide a system of graduated taxation on all lands."

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: A while ago, when I offered my proposition, fixing a limitation to ownership as a remedy for land monopoly, we were told by gentlemen that it would not do; that the monopolies could be reached through taxation. Well, now, I wish to test the sincerity of those gentlenen who appeared to be horrified at the bare suggestion of limitation. If they are sincere in their professions when they acknowledge the evil of land monopoly, and honestly believe that measures should be taken to relieve the State of this curse, and prevent it in the future in a legitimate, lawful manner, I challenge them to now prove their sincerity by expressly giving power to the Legislature to provide for a graduated tax on land, so that all large estates, and especially those of the land-grabbers may be reached. If a man holds one hundred thousand acres of land, as several land pirates in this State do, unimproved, and for the purpose of speculating on the necessities of poor settlers who come to California seeking to make homes here, it is just and proper that an extra tax should be levied on the excess of land which he holds to the injury of the State.

Mr. President, land monopoly is a monstrous wrong and outrage upon the majority of the people, so flagrant, so infernally infamous, devilish, and hoggish, that it sometimes seems strange to me that the disinterested multitude, who are robbed of their natural rights, do not rise up in their might and smash the infamy at one blow, as the people of France did at the close of the last century. Now, sir, I want to see whether the farmers and grangers of this Convention, who are not all monopolists, I believe, and who profess to be reformers on every other subject, and in favor of regulating and curbing various other monopolies, will prove their sincerity and honesty by providing, in a perfectly legal manner, for the abatement of land monopoly. I want to see whether a majority of this Convention are friendly to this odious system of monopoly of the soil for speculative purposes, or whether they are men whose sense of justice dictates that it shall be openly and honestly dealt with as justice demands. If the Convention refuses to do something tangible on the subject of land monopoly, to place something more than meaningless words in the Constitution, then I say we will have failed in fully performing our sworn duty to the people in the work of reform which called us together, and which would insure the ratification of the new Constitution. Gentlemen assert that we have already provided for reaching the land monopolist in sections three and four. I deny it. I cannot see it. The old Constitution says taxation shall be equal and uniform, and still we know it never has been so in this State. The land monopolist has always had his land assessed at a low figure, and it will be now as it has been in the past, unless you provide for a graduated tax on large land holdings in excess of a specified number of acres.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend, by inserting before 'land,' in line one, the words 'agricultural and grazing.'"

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: There are classes of land in this State which cannot be classified so as to be assessed and taxed by the acre; as, for instance, the mining lands of the State cannot be so classified, and the lands on which great cities are built, and yet this additional section, as proposed by the gentleman, which has some excellent features in it, provides that the State Board of Equalization shall classify all of these lands; when they are classified, they are to be assessed according to classification. It seems to me that this section, as proposed, has some good features in it, but that it would need some such modification.

MR. TOWNSEND. I would like to ask the gentleman why we should discriminate in favor of mining lands?

MR. CROSS. I am not in favor of discriminating in favor of mining lands. I mean to say that it would be impossible to classify mining lands so that they could be assessed by the acre.

MR. ROLFE. Why?

MR. CROSS. Because one hundred feet square of ground might be worth one hundred millions of dollars, while the same sized piece, directly opposite, might be worth nothing. There is no basis upon which you can classify mining ground.

MR. TOWNSEND. Is the gentleman not aware that there has been thousands of acres of mining grounds assessed? Where there is more than one acre there should be a graduated tax, and it should be confiscated.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Mr. President: I am utterly opposed to any more of these Troy Dye amendments. Some of us got our lands under the laws that exist. Now, these men that are grumbling about lands, if they will come and go with me, I will show them thousands and millions of land, way back on the frontiers, which they can take without trying to confiscate the lands of honest men. The most of us men got our land rightfully, and I am utterly opposed to any such measures as these men are going in for here. We went in with them to tax all of this property, in every shape and form, and now they want to confiscate it. I am actually afraid that, after a little, they will commence Troy Dye on us, and kill us for our land.

MR. TOWNSEND. I would like to amend that so that all property, of whatever kind, over fifty dollars in value, or twenty-five dollars, should have a graduated tax; that if a man has a second suit of clothes, it should be taxed extra. I am in favor of it, if I can get it extended to all property.

MR. TULLY. Let us have everything.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: This subject needs very little discussion. [Laughter.] The proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco is offered in good faith. I do not doubt that he means it; but it is an attempt to do by indirection that which he is satisfied we cannot do directly. The discussion here has satisfied him that we cannot say to a man: "You shall not have but so many acres." The decisions of the Courts, the rights of property, the authority of the United States, everything is in the way of that. But he now assumes that we can do by indirection—that is, by a graded tax, prevent a man from doing the same thing. Now, this is just as great a mistake as the other proposition, because if you could put a graded tax on, there is no limit to it. There is nothing in it. In regard to the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, I have this to say: that it is wholly and utterly impracticable, and cannot and would not reach the end he desires. He says that land shall be divided into agricultural and grazing land, apparently under the impression that this would facilitate an equitable and just assessment. Now let us see how this would work. Here within two or three miles of this city we have land that is worth and will sell for twenty-five dollars an acre. We call it agricultural land. I have land fifteen miles east that I would be glad to sell for fifteen dollars an acre, that is just as good, if not a little better. Now, according to the gentleman's amendment, these tracts of land being agricultural land would be assessed alike. The value of the land does not depend upon the fact of whether it is grazing or agricultural land. It depends far more upon its location than it does upon its quality, as every gentleman knows. Now, the end arrived at and desired by this proposition is, perhaps, a good one. I am in favor of it, if the gentlemen advocating it will confine themselves to law, and justice, and possibilities; but when they go off into these chimerical and Utopian ideas, I am against them. I am in favor of checking, by every lawful means, large landholders. I recognize the fact that it is against the public interest, and that the public interest would be promoted in a large measure by small land holdings; but in this, as in everything else, we are limited by possibilities; we are limited by the rules of law, and justice, and equity; and we cannot transcend those rules without impairing the very foundations of Government. We must confine ourselves to those broad, comprehensive principles that underlie all Government, and the very moment we depart from those principles we are at sea. We are without a Government that is worth the name of a Government when we do it. Any means that the gentleman can devise that will secure a just and equitable assessment of large land holdings in proportion to their value, I will assist; but the moment that he assumes to do what is unjust, what is unlawful, what is not within our province to do, then I am against him.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I do not think we want any of this section or the amendment either. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross, as I understand it, limits this graduated tax to agricultural and grazing lands. Now, I fail to know what is meant by the term graduated tax. But from what I have heard about it here, I understand that the tax upon the first thousand dollars is to be so much, on the next thousand dollars so much more, and so on until you take it all. That is what I understand by the graduated taxation that these gentlemen talk about. Now, if that is the case, why make a distinction between grazing and agricultural lands, and mineral lands, and lands with fine buildings upon them. It is just as easy to figure up the assessments on the one as the other. Now, one reason why I think we do not want this section is this, that it would limit the discretion of the County Assessors only to say in which class any particular class of land would fall. In other words, there would be a first class, a second class, and a third class of land. Say that the Board of Equalization divides the land of the State into three classes, according to quality. For instance, adobe land so much, sandy loam so much, etc., no matter where it may be. Consequently, first-class land in San Bernardino County, six hundred miles from market, would be assessed at the same rate as the orchard lands in Alameda County, close to the market. I do not think this Convention will vote for any such proposition. It is bald upon its face, and unjust and wrong.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

The amendment was rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan.

Upon the amendment of Mr. O'Sullivan, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. O'Sullivan, White, Gorman, Doyle, and Beerstecher.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: We have discussed the article on revenue and taxation until we have arrived, as near as we possibly can, at the common mind in this Convention, and I shall now move the previous question on the motion to engross and order to a second reading the article.

Seconded by Messrs. McComas, Hunter, Larkin, and Dunlap.

The main question was ordered.

The article was ordered engrossed and read a second time.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the report of the Committee of the Whole on the article on judiciary. The Secretary will read the amendments proposed by the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read all the amendment offered by the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment to section two, as follows:

THE SUPREME COURT.

"SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. The Court may sit in department and in bank, and shall always be open for the transaction of business. There shall be two departments, denominated, respectively, Department One and Department Two. The Chief Justice shall assign three of the Associate Justices to each department, and such assignment may be changed by him from time to time. The Associate Justices shall be competent to sit in either department, and may interchange with each other by agreement among themselves or as ordered by the Chief Justice. Each of the departments shall have the power to hear and determine causes and all questions arising therein, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained in relation to the Court in bank. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary to transact any business in either of the departments, except such as may be done at Chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment. The Chief Justice shall apportion the business to the departments, and may, in his discretion, order any cause pending before the Court to be heard and decided by the Court in bank. The order may be made before or after judgment pronounced by a department; but where a cause has been allotted to one of the departments, and a judgment pronounced thereon, the order must be made within thirty days after such judgment, and concurred in by two Associate Justices, and if so made it shall have the effect to vacate and set aside the judgment. If the order be not made within the time above limited, the judgment shall be final. No judgment by a department shall become final until the expiration of the period of thirty days aforesaid, unless approved by the Chief Justice, in writing, with the concurrence of two Associate Justices. The Chief Justice may convene the Court in bank at any time, and shall be the presiding Justice of the Court when so convened. The concurrence of four Justices present at the argument shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment in bank; but if four Justices, so present, do not concur in a judgment, then all the Justices qualified to sit in the cause shall hear the argument; but to render a judgment a concurrence of four Judges shall be necessary. In the determination of causes, all decisions of the Court in bank or in departments shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated. The Chief Justice may sit in either department, and shall preside when so sitting, but the Justices assigned to each department shall select one of their number as presiding Justice. In case of the absence of the Chief Justice from the place at which the Court is held, or his inability to act, the Associate Justices shall select one of their own number to perform the duties and exercise the power of the Chief Justice during such absence or inability to act."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I send up a substitute for section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. The Court may sit in bank and in departments, and shall be always open for business. The Court may proceed in departments whenever the condition of business may require it, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law. In the determination of causes, all decisions of the Court in bank or in departments shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated."

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I am bound to confess that I have not given the attention to this proposition which the apparent importance of it seems to require, not having been a member of the Judiciary Committee and relying very much on the judgment and experience of the members of that committee. But, sir, upon examination of the section proposed, I find that it launches us upon a new and an untried field, and we should proceed with extreme caution when we undertake to go into an experiment with the Supreme Court of adjudicature of the land, such as is proposed in this Convention. We have been constantly reminded of adhering as much as possible to the known landmarks, and I maintain that if there is any point, or any place or subject, where that advice should be observed carefully, it is in reference to the constitution of our Courts. I have said, sir, that the proposed section is, in some respects, an extraordinary proposition. It is a new departure entirely in the constitution of a Court from anything we have ever heard of before, in Europe or in this country. A double-headed Court is proposed to be created, and it is attempted in the section to regulate the details for the procedure of that Court. Now, sir, the first thing that strikes one is the apparent reasonableness of the proposition, that wherever the overcrowded condition of the calendar may require the Court can divide itself so as to hear all cases and to discharge the business. On the face of it I say that is what appears to be attempted by the Committee on Judiciary in bringing forward this proposition. An investigation, however, of these details will find that there are some monstrous powers proposed to be conferred, and some which to put here in the Constitution by an inflexible rule may work hardship upon the people and wrong upon litigants in the Supreme Court. I desire to call the attention of this Convention to two or three of these apparent monstrosities which appear upon the face and by reading between the lines of this two-headed Court. I desire right here to recall the fears of the friends of the railroad, when those who supported the proposition for a Railroad Commission were accused of getting up a monstrous despotism. Some of the gentlemen who were loudest in proclaiming their fears are now in favor of a proposition to confer powers never before heard of upon the presiding officer of a Court of justice; to put in his control, in point of fact, the decisions of the greatest questions. Absolute and arbitrary control lodged in the hands of one individual to control the administration of justice in this State. Now how do they provide that these departments shall be established? Do they leave it to the people, under the regulations of law? Do they leave it to the Court, under the rules that they prescribe? No, sir; but they lodge the power in the hands of the Chief Justice, absolutely and arbitrarily to establish two Courts out of the six Justices that are elected outside of him. Here is the language, beginning on line five:

"The Chief Justice shall assign three of the Associate Justices to each department, and such assignment may be changed by him from time to time."

Now, sir, he has also the control of the distribution of the cases conferred upon him. He may go through the calendar of the business before the Court, study up the principles involved in the cases, and knowing the opinion, feelings, and sentiments of the Judges, may constitute out of these six a Court of particular complexion, distribute the business into that Court, and control the decisions of the Court in bank by other privileges and powers that are conferred upon him, and which I will call attention to. This first proposition is monstrous, to confer upon him the absolute power to constitute a Court, and then, if that does not suit him, then to turn around and change it at any time by a reassignment of the Judges. But, not content with giving him that general power, not to create a permanent Court, but a mere temporary Court, entered up by a motion in the minutes of the Court, it is further provided that the Chief Justice may take one Judge out of one department and send him into another. On the face of it the proposition is monstrous. Now, commencing on line fourteen, look at this other power conferred:

"The Chief Justice shall apportion the business to the departments, and may, in his discretion, order any cause pending before the Court to be heard and decided by the Court in bank."

Now, sir, we lodge in him the discretion, after having given him the authority to constitute a Court of one of these departments according to his own will, to overthrow and overturn the decisions by simply ordering them to be transferred to be heard in bank. If a decision suits him he allows it to stand. If a decision is contrary to his own judgment or will, he immediately grants an appeal. That is all it amounts to. It grants to the Chief Justice the power to control the right of the citizen to appeal. It proposes another rule, and then three kinds of hearing. You may possibly go to a department and make your application for a rehearing; you may attain it, and the judgment may be affirmed. Then the presiding Judge, without hearing anything, and according to his own will, may order it to be brought up in bank, and heard there again the third time, giving him the control of a virtual appeal from the judgment of one tribunal to the judgment of another.

Now, again, an extraordinary power also conferred. The power is conferred upon the Chief Justice to take a case away from the Court in a department, either before or after judgment. Now, I maintain that the committee—not deliberately, not intentionally—have provided for a dead lock, and there is not a provision in there by which you can get out of that kind of a dead lock, because, in the first place, we have provided, that when they sit in departments, the unanimous decision of three Judges is necessary to pronounce the judgment; now, that judgment cannot be reviewed unless by the approval of the Chief Justice, calling it up to be heard in bank. He may do that, but suppose that the opinion of the Court stands two Judges one way and one Judge the other, you have not got a judgment. You have been heard in there and there is no proviso at all, unless the Chief Justice concludes to order it to be heard in bank, to get it out of that Court at all. Therefore I say that the Committee on Judiciary have made a positive provision by which a man can get into the Supreme Court of the State of California, and may stay there, without having his case determined at any time. It is a positive dead lock in that department; there is no method of getting out of there at all, unless all three of the Judges concur in pronouncing a judgment. Now, sir, another very extraordinary provision to which I desire to call the attention of the Convention—and the time does not allow me to elaborate—is this: That after a judgment has been pronounced in one of these departments, it requires the consent of the Chief Justice, and of two Associate Justices, to make that judgment a final judgment, and to stand as such, and requiring it to remain thirty days. Now, that does not require that the assent of the Chief Justice shall be in accordance with the judgment of the two Associates in that department, but it may be the judgment of the Chief Justice and two of the Associate Justices, members of another department, who have never heard the case. A monstrous proposition, sir. The general objection I make to the section is, that instead of accomplishing what ought to be intended—expedition in the transaction of business, and speedy judgments—I foresee, in the arrangement of this section, a positive means of spinning out the trial of cases and the rendition of judgment in the Supreme Court. Why, after you have obtained your judgment, here is a constitutional provision that it is to lie there for thirty days, not for a rehearing or any subsequent proceeding, but it is to stay in statu quo for thirty days, waiting the approval of the Chief Justice and two Associate Justices, and then all the subsequent proceedings may go on just as they always have done, spinning out the business of that Court infinitely more than now, when so much complaint is made of the laws' delay.

Now, the proposition I have offered there contains all that is good in the section, and leaves all these matters of procedure, all these matters of the regulation of the business of the Court, just where they were left in the old Constitution—to regulation by law, and to regulation by the officers of the Court itself. Is not that proper? Do you want to lodge such an extraordinary power in the hands of a Chief Justice whom you propose to elect for twelve years, and whom you cannot get rid of, except by the doubtful process of impeachment? This is altogether, sir, a monstrous proposition, and gentlemen have been here arguing day after day, and month after month, that we propose to strip the Legislature of all power by the various propositions which have gone through this Convention, and yet they have brought in a proposition here which ties the hands of the people in the control of their highest Court of judicature, and lodges it in the hands of one man who has been imposed upon them for twelve years, and no way to get rid of him. It is a complicated and cumbersome arrangement, which, if attempted at all, ought to be left in such a shape that if it is found to be working badly, the interposition of the law could be invoked to make it effectual for a good and useful purpose.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's ten minutes have expired. The question is on the amendment to the amendment. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. The Court may sit in bank and in departments, and shall be always open for business. The Court may proceed in departments whenever the condition of business may require it, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law. In the determination of causes, all decisions of the Court in bank or in departments shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated."

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: There seems to be no desire upon the part of the members of the Convention to discuss the views presented by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, but, as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, I will say something about this section, and remove what I conceive to be a misapprehension on the part of the gentleman as to the meaning of section two. The amendment as proposed by him is simply a very brief abstract of this section two, leaving out some of the machinery which the Committee on Judiciary deemed necessary in order to make this section fully practicable and useful. Now I do not see any ground for any denunciation of this section. I do not myself see any horror in it, or anything to alarm anybody, nor did the committee see anything of the kind in the section. My recollection is that the section passed the Judiciary Committee without any opposition, and certainly without any of the objections which are propounded by the gentleman. Under our system of practice here, ever since the Supreme Court was organized the remittitur has been withheld until the thirty days shall elapse. During that time either of the parties may petition for a rehearing, and that petition for rehearing is a part of the practice of that Court. The petition for rehearing is intended to call the attention of the Supreme Court to some omission, something overlooked, something which has occurred which justifies the rehearing of the argument of the case; so that when the judgment is pronounced one of the parties files that petition. The Court takes it up and if they are satisfied that the case justifies reargument they set it down for reargument, and the judgment is then vacated and the case goes on the calendar for a second argument.

MR. BARBOUR. I would ask the gentleman whether I am correct or not, that this petition for rehearing is not to be made until after the expiration of the thirty days? I understood that it could not be made until after thirty days.

MR. WILSON. Not at all. I am explaining what is the necessity of the term which is specified here. The gentleman made the objection that this is spinning out the time. I am explaining that in all cases the filing of a petition in the Supreme Court ties up the case, and it is always suspended until the Court acts upon it, and then the remittitur goes out. The object of this is to enable the Judges themselves to review the decision, hear objections to it, and grant any relief that may be necessary for a reargument of the case. The system it seems to me is a very admirable system, and I see no objections to it at all, or any thing but what commends itself to my judgment. The Court is to be composed of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. There is a provision for sitting in departments. Now, when you come to sit in departments, there must be some arrangement of these departments, some Judges assigned to one department and some to the other, either by the Legislature or by this Convention. Now, as this is part of the judicial system, a part of a system which should go into operation with the necessary machinery to work it, the Judiciary Committee deemed it very proper to enter into some details here. As a matter of course, on all this Constitution there has got to be more or less legislation. But the system here devised is a constitutional system. The Courts shall sit in two departments. Now it has a Chief Justice. That Chief Justice, as a matter of course, has the power that all Chief Justices have, more or less, in all the Courts. For instance, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States is the presiding Judge of that Court, and has the power to assign all cases, so that after cases are argued, he exercises that power in his discretion of saying to one of his associates that he assigns the case to him for the purpose of writing the opinion, and he is called upon to write the opinion. That is a very important power. He arranges the business of the Court in other respects. He arranges the calendar. What is the objection to that. There is no great tyrannical power to be exercised by him. He takes up his calendar and may find there are a number of cases that are alike. He sends them to one department. I have sometimes seen fifteen or twenty tax cases on one calendar. They ought all to go to one department. Suppose there are a series of criminal cases? They may be sent to one department because in studying that particular class they are more ready to proceed from one case to another of that kind. The Chief Justice assigns that business to the different departments. There should be no other motive on his part for doing anything other than that which would facilitate the business of the Court, unless he should have a wanton desire to be wicked, which would hardly be presumed in a person holding an office of that kind. There could be no sort of reason why he would not justly assign the departments and the cases to the departments. Now, cases are also to be heard in bank, because the two departments sitting separately might come in conflict. They might decide different ways on some question of law. Now, this clause allows that in such a case as that that the case could be heard in bank for the purpose of removing a conflict between the Judges.

Digitized by Google

MR. BARBOUR. Why do you provide a different rule in reference to the Superior Court of San Francisco?

MR. WILSON. The twelve Judges in San Francisco are to try all the cases of the Probate Court; the Criminal Court, civil cases; and the special cases all come before that Court for arrangement by the Judges. It is very proper that a nisi prius Court should have a different kind of arrangement, and one which would be entirely unsuitable for the Supreme Court. These details are merely intended to bring the machinery of the Court into practical operation, and this discretion of arranging a routine mode and management of trying the cases is, in my judgment, and in the judgment of the committee, very well placed in the Chief Justice. I am unable to see the force of the gentleman's argument, and he would simply turn over this matter to be provided for by the Legislature, while I think it is better provided for in this section than the Legislature could fix it.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I would like to suggest that the power as proposed to be fixed in the Chief Justice is not as stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. I understand that the power to order to be heard in bank by the Chief Justice is only limited to those cases prior to judgment in one of the departments. I think you will find that that is so. "The order may be made before or after judgment pronounced by a department; but where a cause has been allotted to one of the departments, and a judgment pronounced thereon, the order must be made within thirty days after such judgment, and concurred in by two Associate Justices, and if so made it shall have the effect to vacate and set aside the judgment." That does away with the objection raised by Mr. Barbour.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I wish to state an objection or two that I have to the section two, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, and a word or two why I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco. I am opposed to the order of the Courts sitting in bank, as laid down by the report of the committee, for the same reasons as stated by Mr. Barbour. I think that the rule should be that the Court should sit in bank. Now, I suppose that no advocate ever appeared in Court but would prefer to argue his case before a full bench, and therefore it seems to me that the Court should sit in bank as a rule, and only in departments when it becomes necessary, and that is why I prefer the reversal of the order as stated by the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. I am likewise opposed to this provision of the report of the committee, that there shall be two departments. I prefer the language of the amendment, the Court may sit in bank or in departments, and leave that to the Court when it may be necessary. I am opposed to the provisions in lines three, four, and five, that "there shall be two departments, denominated respectively Department One and Department Two." That requires the business to be done in departments, except in certain cases, when it is required to be done in bank. That objection seems to me to be overwhelming to the section as it now stands. I have another objection: "The Chief Justice shall assign three of the Associate Justices to each department, and such assignment may be changed by him from time to time." I am opposed to putting this power in the hands of the Chief Justice over the assignment of Justices in department, coupled with the assignment of causes, which occurs lower down in the section. I am opposed to putting that as an inflexible rule in the Constitution. It should not be there. Let that be subject to legislation that may be changed, or subject to rule of Court that may be adopted.

[Cries of "Louder."]

MR. REYNOLDS. Not to be heard is a misfortune that we labor under here most of the time. I admit that it requires the greatest force. This inflexible rule of placing the entire power of assigning Judges to departments, and of assigning business, placed by the Constitution in the Chief Justice, seems to me to be not exactly the thing to do. It never was done before, and this is one of the experiments we do not need to try. It is just as well to let the Legislature make the rule. Another objection is, that there is too much of it. There is infinitely too much detail in this section, as well as in one or two others in this report, and that is why I am in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Barbour. In declaring this principle, we should reverse the order so that the Court shall sit in bank, but may sit in departments, and the remainder should be left to legislation and to rules adopted in Court.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, because it changes the whole theory of the Court. The theory upon which the committee went was, that there should be two departments, with three Justices each, and a Court in bank, where cases might be reviewed in certain instances. "The Court may sit in bank and in departments." Well, now, under that provision, a case may be heard de novo in bank, without having been heard in department, which I think is overturning the whole theory, and is destroying, practically, the usefulness of the Court. It seems to me that it is a proposition not to be entertained. We have provided for two departments, because one Court has not time to hear and determine causes, and unless we adhere to that, we ought to strike out the Court in departments, and have merely one Court of appeal. Then, again, the amendment of the gentleman says: "The Court may proceed in departments, whenever the condition of business may require it, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law." That is leaving the Legislature the whole regulation of the business of the Appellate Court, in both departments, and in the Court in bank. I object to that for two reasons: First, that the Legislature is not competent—certainly not as competent as the Chief Justice—for the arrangement of the business of the Court. It seems to me that that must strike every one so perfectly obvious, that the Supreme Court knows more of the business of the Court, and is more competent to arrange it, than a Legislature possibly can be. I think the report of the committee ought to be adhered to; I think it is proper and right. Another objection to the amendment of the gentleman is, that it is deficient in detail, so utterly deficient that it has no life. There is no modus operandi to it, and you cannot get along with it.

MR. BARBOUR. Was there any in the old Constitution?

MR. HOWARD. We did not have two Supreme Courts in the old Constitution.

MR. BARBOUR. How did they get along?

MR. HOWARD. It was only one Court, and they got along under rules which they were enabled to frame for the regulation of the transaction of business in that Court. They got along easy enough, but if you leave the Legislature to fix the docket, to assign the cases and assign the Judges, which is the gentleman's proposition stripped of all verbiage, I think you would have a beautiful Supreme Court. I think, however, that what the gentleman said in the opening of his remarks, that he had not studied this matter a great deal, was correct. And there is the danger. When a committee has studied a thing for weeks and months and present here a report, persons who acknowledge that they have not studied it are permitted to rush in and overrule the committee by amendments which are ill advised, ill considered, and ill digested.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

Upon the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Barbour, Condon, Joyce, Swenson, and White.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'judgment,' in the twenty-second line, the words 'any three Justices may, either before or after judgment by a department, order a case to be heard in bank.'"

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I wish to state briefly that as the section is now formulated no case can be heard in bank except the Chief Justice consent to it. If the whole of the other Justices of the Supreme Court desire that a case be heard and decided in bank, still that cannot be done unless the Chief Justice consent that it be done. This amendment provides that three of the Justices of the Supreme Court may require a case to be heard in bank.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that in that respect it will be modified. The Chief Justice, under this section, has too much power. He is absolutely the Court. He can dictate the class of decision. There ought to be some power vested in the balance of the Justices by which some direction can be given to the business of the Court. I therefore hope that the amendment will be adopted.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

THE SUPREME COURT.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I do not see any objection to the amendment, but I would suggest that it be made four Justices instead of three. Four would be a majority of the Court, and it would read all right.

MR. CROSS. If there is no objection I will consent to the word being changed to four.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

JURISDICTION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; also, in cases of forcible entry and detainer, and in all such probate matters as may be provided by law; also, in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information in a Court of record on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any Superior Court in the State, or before any Judge thereof."

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'equity,' in line two, the words, 'except such as arise in Justices' Courts,' so as to read: 'SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity, except such as arise in Justices' Courts; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; also, in cases of forcible entry and detainer, and in all such probate matters as may be provided by law; also, in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information in a Court of record on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any Superior Court in the State, or before any Judge thereof.'"

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I wish to call the attention of this Convention to section eleven of this article: I will read it:

"SEC. 11. The Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in townships, incorporated cities and towns, or cities and counties, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of Justices of the Peace; provided such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record, except that said Justices shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Superior Courts in cases of forcible entry and detainer, where the rental value does not exceed twenty-five dollars per month, and where the whole amount of damages claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars, and in cases to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property when neither the amount of liens, nor the value of the property amounts to three hundred dollars."

Now, this amendment was added to section eleven, after section four had been passed by the Committee of the Whole. Now I take it for granted that it is not the intention of this Convention to allow any appeal in these small cases directly from the Justices' Courts to the Supreme Court, and if you will examine this closely I think that you will find that such will be the case unless we amend it. Now, if I should loan a man two dollars and fifty cents, and he should pawn his jackknife as security, I could enforce that lien in the Justice's Court, and appeal from there to the Supreme Court. I think in these small cases, by the time a person has got into the Superior Court on appeal that is about as far as they should go. I do not think that the Supreme Court ought to be encumbered with these small cases of forcibly entry and detainer which arise in Justices' Courts. I have no doubt that this amendment will readily commend itself to the judgment of the Convention. I would like to hear from the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee on that point, to see whether I have overlooked anything myself.

MR. WILSON, of First District. I presume that question too might be raised as the gentleman says. This section eleven was adopted as amended after section four had been passed by the Committee of the Whole. I doubt very much myself whether the Supreme Court would have a right to hear any case on appeal from the Justices' Court unless means were provided by the Legislature. Section four defines the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and it is not capable of entertaining such cases, unless the machinery be supplied by the Legislature, unless upon a writ of error. There is no objection to the amendment, however.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, as amended.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'cases,' in line seven, to the word 'on,' in line eight, and insert 'amounting to felony.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I do not propose to occupy much of the time of this Convention, but simply call attention to this matter. The Committee of the Whole added these words which I now propose to strike out. That gives the right of appeal in almost all classes of cases. Heretofore, when we had the County Courts, which were lower in grade than the Superior Courts, the limit as to appeal was felonies alone. Now, we raise the grade of these Courts which are to try misdemeanors, and thus change the law so as to give the right of appeal in all such cases. It will burden the Supreme Court with a great deal of this small business, which heretofore has never gone to the Supreme Court.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: It seems to me, that in the shape in which the committee have amended it, it is better, really, than it would be with the amendment proposed by my colleague. The Supreme Court would not be burdened, as the gentleman supposes, because this only gives appeals in the higher classes of misdemeanors. As the section was reported, it provided that there should be an appeal in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information in a Court of record, upon questions of law alone. That would cut out all appeals in that class of cases which are prosecuted on complaint in the criminal Courts; it would only admit of appeals in that class of cases in which the Grand Jury presented an indictment, or in which an information had been filed, so that the only cases in which there would be an appeal would be in the higher classes of misdemeanors, which require prosecution on indictment or information. Now, that amendment was adopted with reference to cases of libel, but there are other cases where the Courts have felt that there ought to be an appeal. Take the offense of obtaining property under false pretenses; there the penalty is very heavy, though it is only a misdemeanor. In that class of cases, important questions of law may arise, which ought to be the subject of discussion in the Supreme Court as well as in the other Courts.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

JURISDICTION OF THE SUPERIOR COURTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

Digitized by Google

"SEC. 5. The Superior Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars, and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, and cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; also, in actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; also, of all matters of probate, and also of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said Court shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in Justices' and other inferior Courts in their respective counties as may be prescribed by law. Said Courts shall be always open (legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted), and their process shall extend to all parts of the State. Said Courts and their Judges shall have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition. quo warranto, and habeas corpus, on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody, in their respective counties. Injunctions and writs of prohibition may be served on legal holidays and non-judicial days."

MR. CROUCH. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after 'State,' in line fifteen, the following: 'provided, that all actions for the recovery of the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real estate, shall be commenced in the county in which the real estate affected by such action or actions is situated.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: It will be observed by the language of the section that their process extends to all parts of the State. That is right; but without this amendment the result would be that an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage, or the enforcement of a lien upon real property, wherever it might be, might be brought in any county in the State. We know that a very large proportion of the real property is owned or controlled by the twenty thousand corporations of the State, and as nineteen thousand of them, probably, have their chief place of business in San Francisco, the business would all have to be done in the San Francisco Courts. Unless we adopt some such amendment as this, all the actions for the foreclosure of mortgages on real property throughout the State would be brought in San Francisco. It would abolish a well settled rule of law that all actions of this kind must be prosecuted in the county in which the property is situated.

MR. WILSON, of First District. How would that operate upon a mortgage or deed of trust upon land in different counties, all embraced in one instrument?

MR. HALE. In such cases as that the law has been that the suit could be instituted in any one of the counties in which the land was situated. This amendment could be made to conform to that.

MR. WILSON, of First District. As presented the amendment would create that difficulty. The statute itself will cover the ground.

MR. HALE. We have had four or five efforts to repeal that statute. Therefore, I hope the Constitution will settle the matter forever. I think it just and right that the amendment should be amended so that where real property under one mortgage lies in two or more counties, the suit may be brought in any one of them. That will make it conform with the theory of our law heretofore. If you commence suit in San Francisco to foreclose a mortgage, it necessitates having the parties go to that city from the interior. You may take most of the States in this Union, and the law is in accord with the amendment which I propose here.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I hope the amendment with the modification suggested, may be adopted. I think it will cure some grievances which have existed, and prevent those which are likely to exist. In fact, a new class of difficulties will arise in all likelihood under the offset system which we have adopted, founded upon the system of taxing the mortgage and the property too. There will always be the question of the apportionment of the taxes paid upon the mortgage during the life of the mortgage. This will give rise to a great many suits to determine these questions. That is a grievance which we have now nothing to do with. I merely mention this as one of the considerations. The amendment will only be according to that which has been the statute law heretofore. There may be only a question of a few dollars as to the tax paid, yet it would be no less burdensome to the party to have to repair to a Court several hundred miles away, simply to protect his own interest, when aside from that, he might as well let the matter go by default.

MR. HALE. I will amend the proposition, and ask the Secretary to read it as amended.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after 'State,' in line fifteen, the following—'provided, that all actions for the recovery of the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real estate, shall be commenced in the county in which the real estate, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions is situated.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of that amendment.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, as amended.

Concurred in.

ELECTION OF SUPERIOR JUDGES, FILLING VACANCIES, ETC.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. There shall be in each of the organized counties, or cities and counties, of the State, a Superior Court, for each of which at least one Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, or city and county, at the general State election; provided, that until otherwise ordered by the Legislature, only one Judge shall be elected for the Counties of Yuba and Sutter, and one for the Counties of El Dorado and Alpine; and, provided, that in the City and County of San Francisco there shall be elected twelve Judges of the Superior Court, any one or more of whom may hold Court. There may be as many sessions of said Court, at the same time, as there are Judges thereof. The said Judges shall choose from their own number a presiding Judge, who may be removed at their pleasure. He shall distribute the business of the Court among the Judges thereof, and prescribe the order of business. The judgments, orders, and proceedings of any session of the Superior Court, held by any one or more of the Judges of said Courts, respectively, shall be equally effectual as if all the Judges of said respective Courts presided at such session. In each of the Counties of Sacramento, Los Angeles, Sonoma, and Alameda, there shall be elected two such Judges. The term of office of Judges of the Superior Courts shall be six years, from and after the first Monday of January next succeeding their election; provided, that the twelve Judges of the Superior Court elected in the City and County of San Francisco at the first election held under this Constitution shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that four of them shall go out of office at the end of two years, and four of them shall go out of office at the end of four years, and four of them shall go out of office at the end of six years, and an entry of such classification shall be made in the minutes of the Court, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof filed in the office of the Secretary of State. The first election of Judges of the Superior Courts shall take place at the first general election held after the adoption and ratification of this Constitution. If a vacancy occur in the office of Judge of a Superior Court, the Governor shall appoint a person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a Judge to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the Judge so elected shall hold office for the remainder of the unexpired term."

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section six, 'at the first election under this Constitution, a separate ballot-box shall be provided for the reception of votes for Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts, and they shall be voted for upon ballots distinct from those used for the election of other officers.'"

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I offered a similar amendment before. Now, we all know that an attempt was made, under the old Constitution, to separate the judicial from the general elections, because it was deemed important to keep the judicial elections, as far as possible, removed from politics. That effort failed. It was found that where there was so small a number of officers to be elected, there did not seem to be the general interest felt. Then, again, the expenses of the election were greatly augmented. This provision will involve no additional expense except the furnishing of ballot-boxes. I hope the amendment may be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment. I believe one ballot-box is as much as one Board of Election can watch and watch well. I do not believe that these men who are running for Supreme Justices and Superior Judges should be so dignified that they will not associate with men who are running the Government. I think their names will not be contaminated by association with other men. We had an experiment, for a time, in removing the election of Judges from the contaminating influences of politics, and of all the humbugs we have ever tried that is the biggest. Now, in order to remove these gentlemen from the contaminating influences of politics, we are going to have separate ballot-boxes, whitewashed. I hope the Judges will be of a class that do not need whitewashing. It is ridiculous. We are liable to frauds, and liable to mistakes in using these ballot-boxes. They are liable to misuse. It is entirely unnecessary, and will answer no useful purpose.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I am opposed to this amendment. I would have no objection to it if it could be incorporated into the statute, under the Constitution; but certainly, as an iron-bound constitutional provision, it is an absurdity, and I shall oppose it.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: Our present statute, in regard to elections, requires two separate elections, one general election, and one about six weeks afterwards, to elect judicial officers. Now, we propose to change that, and say that there shall be but one election. I suppose the statute, on that head, would be annulled by the adoption of this Constitution, and there would be but one election. It says that this Constitution shall go into effect July fourth, but that portion with reference to the election of officers, must go into effect before that, necessarily; therefore the statutory provision would be repealed, and there would no difficulty at all.

[At this point, Mr. Brown, of Tulare, sneezed, whereat Mr. Rolfe said: Mr. President, I do not propose, as a member of this Convention, to be sneezed down. Applause and laughter.]

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: The chief objection to this is, that it would lead to confusion, trouble, and difficulty. I do not oppose it for the reasons given by Mr. Larkin, but because if you have two ballot boxes it will lead to confusion.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

Lost.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'and one for the Counties of El Dorado and Alpine.'"

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: In the Committee of the Whole I offered an amendment consolidating these two counties. I did it in the interest of economy. But as none of the other counties are willing to make the least sacrifice for the purpose of saving the treasury, it is not worth while for these counties to undergo the hardships and inconveniences alone. I therefore move this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of Fourth District. Mr. President: Since the Committee of the Whole adopted this amendment, consolidating the two counties, I have taken pains to examine with regard to this district, and I learn from gentlemen who reside there, that it is very impolitic to unite these two counties. They are so widely separated that in winter time it is impossible for the Judge to get from one county to the other. It would take, probably, during some seasons of the year, from eight to ten days to get from one county seat to the other, and in some seasons it would be an impossibility. These two counties should not be united at all, because there can be no matrimonial felicity between them—no harmony of action. Yuba and Sutter are differently situated, because it is only a few minutes walk from one county seat to the other.

The amendment was adopted on division—ayes 85.

MR. McCOMAS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after 'Sonoma,' in line sixteen, the words, 'Santa Clara.'"

MR. McCOMAS. Mr. President: I hardly think Santa Clara can be said to have full justice. We find, by a comparison, that Alameda County casting eight thousand three hundred and one votes, and has forty-one million dollars property, and Los Angeles casting six thousand six hundred and seventy-one votes, with fifteen million dollars, each have two Judges, while Santa Clara, with six thousand four hundred and two votes and twenty-eight million dollars property, has but one Judge. I do not believe it is possible for one Judge to transact the business there.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I trust the Convention will adopt this amendment, and give two Judges to Santa Clara County. As I said before, in the Committee of the Whole, the bar of that county want two Judges, and I think the people do also. I have a petition here from the bar.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. Laine states that one will do.

MR. TULLY. Mr. Laine is the only member of the bar who opposes this amendment. Judge Belden says that no one man can do the work. The delegation are solid for this except Mr. Laine, and I believe if he were here he would now be in favor of two Judges.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: This amendment is without any great consequence so far as the single county of Santa Clara is concerned. I think it may be just that Santa Clara should have another Judge, as the report comes from the Committee of the Whole, and it is, I believe, equally just that one additional Judge should be given to Sonoma County. Now, sir, I believe instead of increasing the Judges we should start in and reduce them. I am sorry the gentleman did not wait and see whether we are going to reduce. If we did, the argument would not be so strong as now. If we allow this entering wedge to be driven in we will have an increase of several Judges before we get through. I know the expenses of this system have been increased some fifty thousand dollars. I know gentlemen will say, why not strike off one from Alameda? That is entirely different. We have double the population of most any of these other counties, and more than double the property in some cases. We have there now one District Judge and one County Judge, making two. So with Los Angeles—they will have the same number which they have now—one County Judge and one District Judge. Sacramento is in the same shape as reported by the committee. In the Committee of the Whole Sonoma was added. Then came the argument that if Sonoma was added why not add Santa Clara. Of course, the argument is good. But the question with me is, why not strike out Sonoma instead of increasing the other counties to correspond? The question is, shall we strike out any of the Judges of San Francisco? Only last session the districts were increased by one, because the thirteenth district was a portion of the City of San Francisco. I had something to do with drafting the bill. Now we have increased the number from five Judges to twelve.

MR. WILSON, of First District. You are very much mistaken. We are taking the Probate Court and the Criminal Courts and adding them together in the shape of Superior Courts.

MR. McCALLUM. I object, unless the gentleman speaks to the point on which I am now speaking.

MR. WILSON. The difficulty is I am speaking too much to the point.

MR. McCALLUM. I am aware that you have five District Courts. You have the County Court, which would make six in all. I am aware that the argument of the gentleman is that there are some other Courts, three in number, which he claims are Courts of record, which would make nine altogether. Yet they report twelve Superior Court Judges, at a salary of five thousand dollars, or sixty thousand dollars a year for San Francisco alone. We are not here to legislate for localities, but for the whole State. Let us equalize this thing. Let us strike out two from San Francisco. Even then they will have one more than they have now. At the next session the Legislature may increase it if necessary.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Do you know how many cases there are on the calendar in San Francisco?

MR. McCALLUM. The gentleman is getting on another branch. I do not know.

MR. WILSON. Do you know what business there is in the Probate Court?

MR. McCALLUM. No, sir; I know there was no demand at the last session except what came incidentally from our county.

MR. WILSON. Don't you know that they created the Municipal Court of Appeals at the last session?

MR. McCALLUM. I am now assuming that we shall consider the whole three as Superior Courts, making ten in all.

MR. WILSON. Do you know whether ten are enough or not?

MR. McCALLUM. I believe that number is sufficient, under the circumstances stated. It is only a year until the Legislature meets, and then if the number is too small it can be increased.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I shall vote for this amendment. I shall also vote for two Judges for San Joaquin. They would have been put in by the Committee of the Whole if Mr. Laine and Judge Terry had not objected. From both those counties we have petitions asking for two Judges. I am opposed to this cheese-paring economy. Let us give what is necessary to do the business. It strikes me as an extraordinary proposition that we will not furnish a system that is adequate and just because it may cost a little more. There is nothing in the argument that the new system is going to cost more than the old. I venture the assertion that it will be cheaper.

MR. McCALLUM. Do you understand me as saying that I am in favor of reducing the present number of Judges?

MR. HOWARD. Yes, sir. I understood you were making some small cheese-paring somewhere.

MR. McCALLUM. I propose nothing of the kind.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am very much surprised at the position taken by the gentleman from Alameda, in endeavoring to state to this Convention how many Judges are necessary to do the business of San Francisco. We to-day in San Francisco have five District Courts. In addition, we have the Municipal Court of Appeals, the County Court, Probate Court, Municipal Criminal Court, and the City Criminal Court, making in all ten Courts, which Courts will all be wiped out and included in the Superior Courts, with twelve Judges. It is a fact known to every one, that it is impossible to bring a case to trial there under a year. It is desirable and absolutely necessary for the speedy execution of justice, that we should have two additional Judges.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I concur with the gentleman from Alameda. I can see in this movement a scramble for office. Now, sir, I did not come here for the purpose of legislating my friends into office. It would seem, from the disposition manifested here, that many gentlemen are desirous of creating as many offices as possible, for the purpose of getting every prominent lawyer in the State upon the judicial bench. Now it is certainly necessary that we should exercise some economy here. If we go on in this way every county in the State will ask for two Judges. I propose to stop right here.

MR. TULLY. Do you know anything about the business of Santa Clara County?

MR. TINNIN. No, sir; I don't pretend to know anything about it. I say it is the same thing over. Gentlemen want to create all the offices they can. I don't think it is necessary.

MR. TULLY. That is a singular proposition from a gentleman who does not know anything about the business of the county.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: The increase is all right. We have already provided in this section that Los Angeles shall have two Judges, and the population of Los Angeles, according to the last census, is fifteen thousand three hundred and four. We have provided that Sonoma shall have two Judges, and that county had, at the last census, nineteen thousand eight hundred and nineteen people, and now has about thirty-three thousand people. The County of Santa Clara, at the last census, had twenty-six thousand, and now has about thirty-six thousand. Los Angeles has now probably thirty-three thousand. Now, sir, if these counties are to have two Judges, I don't know any reason why Santa Clara, with a larger population, should not be accorded the same number. They have a large amount of business there, and they need two Judges.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: This question was raised before in Committee of the Whole; I offered an amendment, giving the county two Judges. It was opposed by Mr. Laine. At the same time members of the bar there assured me that they could not get along with one; that one Judge could not do the business. That was written to me. I had a letter from Mr. Delmas, and one from Mr. Belden, who said that two thirds of his time is taken up with Santa Clara County business. I only ask what is right in relation to that matter. We pay over one hundred thousand dollars into the State treasury every year, whereas Los Angeles and Sonoma pay a little over fifty thousand dollars.

MR. McCALLUM. I stated that Santa Clara County was clearly entitled to two Judges as the matter now stands. I propose to vote against it for the purpose of striking out the others.

MR. WELLER. That has nothing to do with it. We are entitled to it because we actually need it. There is no imagination about it. I do not ask it because I want to accumulate offices, but because it is absolutely necessary to a proper administration of justice. We demand it because it is our right.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: This will be a curious looking section when we get through with it. We started in on the theory that there should be one Judge in each Superior Court, with several provisos. Now the section is about half provisos. Then the salaries were to be five thousand dollars a year, payable out of the State Treasury, which makes a great deal of difference. Now it has come down to "you tickle me and I'll tickle you," between some of the counties. I don't know where it will stop. A great many of these places are mere sinecures, where there are not a dozen cases a year, perhaps, where the Judge has nothing to do but to go hunting and fishing. Now, sir, it seems to me that we ought to set the very lowest estimates, and allow the Legislature to increase them if necessary. To say that the Legislature may diminish them is to argue what will never be done. It won't do. I insist that the City of San Francisco can have its business done with ten Judges, and I know it. Some of these old fellows, as soon as Court adjourns, proceed to eat and drink. How few of them go home to work, as practicing lawyers do. Ten industrious, faithful Judges can attend to all the business. I am sure if the Judges will work as men ought to work who are paid well, there would be no trouble. When these old fellows get on the bench, one active, industrious man will do more than a dozen of them. They go on at ten o'clock, or half past ten o'clock in the morning, try a little case, or set it for some other day, and adjourn; then, if they feel like it, hold Court for a couple of hours in the afternoon, and adjourn. It is true that the five District Courts in San Francisco are two or three hundred cases behind. Some of these Courts, like the County Court, do almost nothing. Take the Probate Court, and the Judge transacts more business than three or four of the others. We propose to change the system so as to have one Court with several Judges. In that way the business will be divided between them, and will be kept up. I am a strenuous advocate of economy, and I call on the Convention now to stand by it.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I will vote for no increase in the number of officers, and on every occasion I shall vote to decrease them. I will rise in my seat and let my voice be heard againt any proposition to increase the expense of Government and pile up more offices to be filled and paid for by the already overburdened taxpayers of this State.

SPEECH OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: As to whether the County of Santa Clara has sufficient business to require two Judges, I have no personal knowledge. Having no personal knowledge, I necessarily go to the gentlemen who come from that county, and who are acquainted with the business. And it would be presumptuous for me to argue that they do not need two Judges, not knowing anything about it. They should be permitted to judge of that. They are gentlemen who are entitled to the respect and confidence of this Convention, and their word should be respected when they say that two Judges are absolutely necessary. We are justified in giving them two Judges upon the information we have. Now, so far as San Francisco is concerned, I beg leave to enter my protest against the clamor which is raised against them. So far as my own experience is concerned, and it is not small, I say here to this Convention, that there is no better class of men, no more industrious, upright, honest, efficient set of officers, than the Judges of San Francisco. It is a vile slander to say that these Judges are gluttons and drunkards; that when the session is over, they immediately go to eating and drinking. From my personal knowledge of them, I know them to be painstaking, industrious, and honest. I say that, because it is due from me to say it, occupying the position I do on this committee. It is vile slander to attack men who have for years done their duty honestly and well. It is this kind of clamor against public officers which causes good men to shrink from holding office in this State. That is the reason why our best men do not care to become candidates for office. It is a poor reward for a man, when he has faithfully performed his duty, to be met with such clamor and slander. I say those men have worked honestly and faithfully.

MR. BARBOUR. I had reference to Judges all over the State, and not to those of San Francisco in particular.

MR. WILSON. I happen to have a personal acquaintance with most of the Judges of this State. I am personally acquainted with Judge Sepulveda of Los Angeles, Judge Keyser of Yuba, and they are above reproach. Judge Belden, of Santa Clara, is an upright, faithful Judge. Take the body of Judges in this State, and they rank as high in honesty and ability as any Judges of any State in the Union. We ought to be thankful that we have got as good a set of men on the bench. As far as San Francisco is concerned, I know that the Judges there work more than eight hours a day. Besides all this, we must look at the effect of an efficient system upon the morals of the State. If the criminal knows that he will be taken up, indicted, and tried without delay, it will have a marked influence in restraining him from committing crime; but you let a case drag along for a year, as is often the case when the calendar is behind, the witnesses scatter away, and there is not much chance of punishment. Criminals know this, and are willing to take the chances. This new system will be worth ten times what it will cost, if it will provide that a man may be tried, and convicted or acquitted, immediately. It is the worst kind of economy to deny to any community, swift and speedy justice, because it costs a few dollars more. We must not forget that this State has grown, and will continue to grow, and that our system of jurisprudence must expand and increase with the growth of the State. I hope that this amendment may be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: This is but the beginning of a conflict that will wage for years in the Legislature, if the present system of paying the Judges out of the State treasury is not changed. Every delegate in the Legislature will try to have another Judge added for his county, or will try to have the grade and salary raised, and there will be no end to it. Whether there is a necessity for these extra Judges or not, I do not pretend to say. I presume these gentlemen are honest, but it only determines it between this and the time the Legislature meets. They will have power to determine then. I think we had better leave the matter to the Legislature.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. McComas.

Carried.

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add, in line sixteen, after 'Sacramento,' the words, 'San Joaquin.'"

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I have been requested to make a statement in regard to San Joaquin County. I am convinced from the knowledge I have, and statements I have heard, that no proper administration of justice can be had in the County of San Joaquin without there being two Superior Court Judges. I am satisfied that two Courts are necessary to do the business. There is about an average of one hundred and thirty cases on the District Court calendar for that county. There is an average of twenty to thirty indictments every term to be tried by the County Court. There is a large amount of probate business always on hand to be transacted. I have been informed by those who know, that it is utterly impossible for one Judge to transact the business of that county. I have further been informed that Court has been held there three hundred different days in the year, and I undertake to say that no Judge can properly perform the duties of that office under this state of facts. I do not believe that a Judge can properly perform the duties of his office and hold Court three hundred days out of the year. I do not believe that the Judge ought to be in Court more than half his time. He must examine the cases presented before him in his Chambers. In order to do that he must have more time than we have given him. San Joaquin County has about thirty-three thousand people—equal to Sonoma, Santa Clara, or Los Angeles, or very nearly so. The amount of taxable property is also more than in Los Angeles. It is set down for eighteen hundred and seventy-seven as being seventeen million three hundred and seventy-six thousand dollars. The same year Los Angeles was set down for fifteen million dollars; Sonoma for seventeen million dollars. It will thus be seen that San Joaquin is of as much importance as either of the other three counties which have been allowed an additional Judge. The entire bar, with one exception, are in favor of it.

REMARKS OF MR. HITCHCOCK.

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I am no lawyer, and have but a slight knowledge of the law. I offered that amendment after consulting with the District Judge and the County Judge, and a large portion of the bar of San Joaquin County. I find that they are all unanimous in the opinion that it is absolutely necessary to have two Judges. It was shown by Judge Hall, when this matter was up before, that it would be utterly impossible for one Judge to do the work. I do not expect to have any cases in Court. I never had but one in Court. But there are cases to be tried and we must have Judges to try them. We are perfectly willing to pay for own Judges if you will allow us the privilege.

REMARKS OF MR. HALL.

MR. HALL. Mr. President: When this matter was up before the Committee of the Whole it was fully discussed. I myself offered an amendment of this kind. I took occasion to submit to the committee the reasons why it should be adopted. Sonoma County has been awarded two Judges, and if the business and population of that county warrants it, certainly San Joaquin, for the same reasons, is entitled to two Judges. I called attention before to the statistics furnished by the County Clerk of that county, and it is not necessary to read them again. I am not able to make a comparison of calendars with the other counties that have claimed two Judges, but I am satisfied that such comparison, if made, would be favorable to San Joaquin. I know that it will be utterly impossible for one Judge to perform all the duties of the office in that county. I am aware that Judge Terry takes the opposite view, but he is alone in his position. I do not believe that any other delegate, be he lawyer or layman, will agree with him.

REMARKS OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: I did not intend to say anything, being as I did not belong to the bar. But I consider my vote tells as much on the treasury of this State as though I did. Now, take the average number of days in Court at two hundred. The average amount of hours five. That would make it five dollars per hour for these gentlemen to sit in Court. I believe they ought to perform eight hours work a day, the same as other employés of the State.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Shoemaker, Howard, Stedman, and Hitchcock.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Joaquin, Mr. Hitchcock.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Wyatt, Joyce, Tuttle, and Freeman.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

Concurred in.

CHANGE OF JUDGES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. A Judge of any Superior Court may hold a Superior Court in any county, at the request of a Judge of the Superior Court thereof; and upon the request of the Governor it shall be his duty so to do. But a cause in a Superior Court may be tried by a Judge pro tempore, who must be a member of the bar, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant or their attorneys of record, approved by the Court, and sworn to try the cause."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section eleven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 11. The Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in townships, incorporated cities and towns, or cities and counties, and shall fix by law the powers, duties, and responsibilities of Justices of the Peace; provided, such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record, except that said Justices shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Superior Courts in cases of forcible entry and detainer, where the rental value does not exceed twenty-five dollars per month, and where the whole amount of damages claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars, and in cases to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property when neither the amount of liens nor the value of the property amounts to three hundred dollars."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

OTHER JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section fourteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officers, and shall fix by law their duties and compensation, which compensation shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record in and for their respective counties, or cities and counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment, by the several Superior Courts, of one or more Commissioners in their respective counties, or cities and counties, with authority to perform Chamber business of the Judges of the Superior Courts, to take depositions, and perform such other business connected with the administration of justice as may be prescribed by law."

MR. HALE. Mr. President: Before that is passed I wish to make a suggestion. We propose to submit this Constitution to the people in May. We propose to hold an election in November, after the Constitution is adopted. Now, this section says the Legislature shall provide for the election of Clerks, etc. Now, this election must take place before the meeting of the Legislature, which is to provide for their election.

MR. WILSON, of First District. I take it for granted that the schedule will provide against that, so that the old officers shall hold until the Legislature meets.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: Section six, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, has been adopted. I am in favor of it, but my colleague, Mr. Ohleyer, is opposed to it. Therefore, in order to give him an opportunity to urge his objections to it, I send up the following notice:

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention agreed to and adopted section six, as amended."

SALARIES OF JUDGES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive from the State treasury, for their services, a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constitution, the annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be six thousand dollars each. Until otherwise changed by the Legislature, the Superior Court Judges shall receive an annual salary of thirty-five hundred dollars each, payable quarterly, except the Judges of the City and County of San Francisco, and the Counties of Alameda, San Joaquin, Los Angeles, Santa Clara, Sacramento, and Sonoma, which shall receive four thousand five hundred dollars each."

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line eleven, after 'Sacramento,' the word 'Nevada.'"

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: A few words will explain this matter. Nevada County, according to the last census, had nineteen thousand one hundred and thirty-four people, and according to the best information, in eighteen hundred and seventy-seven, she had twenty-three thousand people. Now, sir, our county is provided with but one Judge, while San Joaquin County, with a population of twenty-one thousand, at the last census—perhaps twenty-six thousand now—has two Judges. Santa Clara, with a population at the last census of twenty-six thousand, is entitled to two Judges. Sonoma, with a present population of thirty-three thousand, has two Judges, and all of these Judges are to receive a salary of four thousand five hundred dollars, while Nevada County, with a population almost as large, has but one Judge, with a salary of three thousand five hundred dollars. It is a notorious fact that there is more litigation in the mining than in the agricultural counties. The cost of living in the mining regions is much greater than in any other portion of the State. For these reasons it seems to me that Nevada County should at least be entitled to a Judge of the first class. Unless the salary is increased we shall not be able to get competent men for the position. The Judge there will have as much work to do as both the Judges of these other counties. I hope that these facts will be taken into consideration by the Convention, and that Nevada County will receive what she is justly entitled to.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I am at a loss to know how to vote upon this amendment. I do not see that there is any reason why Nevada should not have a Judge of the first class. But it ought not to stop there. Here we have proceeded to give two Judges to Alameda, Santa Clara, San Joaquin, Sonoma, Los Angeles, and Sacramento, and yet I hardly need to say that there will not be as much work upon each one of those Judges as will devolve upon the Judge of Nevada County. The railroad runs through these counties, and in addition to the regular business, there is the business incident upon the railroads running through there. The business will be just as laborious, and require just as much competency, as these counties that have been given two Judges, with one thousand dollars a year more salary. There is no reason why they should receive more salary. I think the classification wrong anyway. I think there ought to have been three classes. There should be a salary in these important counties that will demand first-class talent, and the Judges should receive as much as the Judges of Alameda or Sonoma. If the gentleman will modify his amendment so as to cover Placer County, I will vote for it.

MR. CROSS. Let each county go on its own hook.

MR. HALE. We cannot dispose of it in that way.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment. I have an amendment to offer. Insert after the word "treasury" the words, "sum of three thousand dollars." That, I think, is fair and proper. I shall offer it when I have a chance.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Sweasey, Tuttle, Heiskell, and Walker of Tuolumne.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen, by striking out all after the word 'elected,' in the fifth line, and inserting as follows: 'During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constitution, the annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be five thousand dollars each. The Superior Judges shall be divided into four classes. Those of the City and County of San Francisco, and of the Counties of Alameda, San Joaquin, Los Angeles, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Nevada, and Sonoma, shall constitute the first class, and shall receive an annual salary of four thousand dollars, payable quarterly; those of the Counties of Butte, El Dorado, Amador, Colusa, Contra Costa, Humboldt, Mendocino, Monterey, Napa, Placer, Santa Cruz, Solano, Tulare, Kern, Yolo, Yuba and Sutter jointly, San Bernardino, and San Diego, shall constitute the second class, and shall receive an annual salary of three thousand five hundred dollars each, payable quarterly; those of the Counties of Calaveras, Fresno, Lake, Marin, Merced, Plumas, San Benito, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Santa Barbara, Sierra, Shasta, Siskiyou, Stanislaus, Tehama, Tuolumne, and Ventura, shall constitute the third class, and receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars each, payable quarterly; and those of all other counties of the State, not above enumerated, shall constitute the fourth class, and shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars each, payable quarterly."

MR. WATERS. I raise the point of order that, by the last vote taken, we resolved that the Superior Judge of Nevada County should receive four thousand five hundred dollars a year, and now the gentleman proposes to cut it down to four thousand dollars.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

REMARKS OF MR. STEDMAN.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: By the report of the Committee of the Whole, as amended, the State will have sixty-seven Superior Judges. Twenty-five of them will receive a salary of four thousand five hundred dollars, and the balance three thousand five hundred dollars. Then the twelve Judges of San Francisco will receive a salary of six thousand dollars each. Then, sir, the total expense per annum involved in this system is three hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars. Now, the amendment I propose will decrease this amount forty-four thousand dollars a year, and upon that the members of this Convention will be called on to vote. I find, in looking over the Codes, that under the present system we have five Supreme Judges, at a salary of six thousand dollars—thirty thousand dollars. We have twenty-three District Judges, at a salary of six thousand dollars a year—one hundred and thirty-eight thousand dollars; making a total that is paid out of the State treasury of one hundred and sixty-eight thousand dollars. Now, then, the gentleman proposes to pay out three hundred and twenty-seven thousand dollars out of the State treasury against one hundred and sixty-eight thousand dollars, as at present—an increase of one hundred and fifty-nine thousand dollars. We find, also, in considering the salaries paid to the other Courts of the State, that the total expense involved in the present system is two hundred and forty-eight thousand and eight hundred dollars. Now, gentlemen desire to increase the cost seventy thousand two hundred dollars a year. I don't believe that it is necessary in order to secure a correct administration of justice. I don't believe this Convention was called for that purpose.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. SHOEMAKER. Mr. President: I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And, at four o'clock and fifty-five minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Wednesday, February 12th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Mr. Ayers, from Committee on Reporting and Printing, reported as correctly engrossed: Amendment five hundred and one, legislative department; amendment number five hundred and twenty-six, future amendments.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume the consideration of report of the Committee of the Whole, on the article on judicial department. The Secretary will read the amendment to section seventeen, proposed by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen by striking out all after the word 'elected' in the fifth line and inserting as follows: 'During the term of the first

REMARKS OF MR. HEISKELL.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: That amendment should not pass. It is so manifestly unjust, and so loosely thrown together anyway, that it should not be adopted. In classifying the various counties in the first class, to which they give a salary of four thousand dollars, are some counties that pay less revenue on the assessed value of their property than some four or five other counties which are in the second class and in the third class. Take the County of Kern. Their property is assessed at a little over five million dollars, while it is in the first class. There are the Counties of Placer, Merced, and Stanislaus, some of which have nearly as much, and others more property than the County of Kern, and they are put in the third class, with a salary of three thousand dollars. They all have a large voting population, and the treasury has a good fund contributed by the various counties of the State, and whilst I am not in favor of high salaries, I think the counties that pay the most taxes, when there is any portion of it to be returned in the way of salaries, should receive their just proportion. I hope that the amendment will not be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.
