MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I think we had better vote down this amendment, in the hope of settling the proposition which properly precedes it, and which, if once settled, I think we will have no further trouble about this matter of salaries of the Judges, or the number of the Judges. I presume, from what I have heard since the adjournment yesterday, that the Convention will solve this question in the only way it can be solved, and that will be by providing that the State shall pay a portion of these salaries, and the counties pay the balance. If that rule shall be established, and it shall be established equitably, there will be no further trouble or demand for higher salaries in some counties than provided in the article on the judiciary, and there will be no further trouble with reference to the number of Judges, because in such case it brings the matter directly home to the people themselves, and their representatives are to speak for them; and for my part, in that case, I should be disposed to let every delegation speak for itself, as to what they deemed proper salaries for their Judges. It has been suggested here that the counties should pay the Superior Judges. That has been voted down, and I am not one of those delegates who propose to occupy any time in discussing that which has passed and not likely to be changed. We may regard some things as settled. One is, that the Constitutional Convention will here fix the salaries, and the Legislature may hereafter reduce; at any rate, that it will be for the State, and not for the counties, to fix the salaries. It was shown here in figures in detail that this judicial system will require the payment, out of the State treasury, of the difference between about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and three hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, or an additional expenditure from the State treasury of one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars per annum. I venture to say, that if we adopt such a provision as that, we would either have to defeat the whole article, or the article would defeat the Constitution, in all probability. It would furnish the enemies of our work an argument which, before the people, would be unanswerable. I propose to offer an amendment to prevent the other idea. It was proposed that the State should pay two thousand dollars. I say that would be unjust to the large counties. I think the State should pay one half of the salary of each Superior Court Judge, and the county pay the other half; that will be just and equitable in every respect. These Superior Courts take the place of the County Courts and the District Courts. Heretofore the County Judges were paid by the counties and the District Judges were paid by the State. It carries out the same idea, that, as they take the place of both, the State and county should divide in paying the Judges substituted for both. Delegates will not ask too much where their own counties have to pay half of it. I respectfully submit to the Convention, that we had better vote down every proposition until we fix the theory upon which these salaries are to be paid.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I desire to offer a proposition in place of the one I offered last evening. I think it will be satisfactory to the Convention.

MR. MCCALLUM. Is the proposition withdrawn?

MR. STEDMAN. I think it would satisfy the gentleman on the floor——

MR. MCCALLUM. I suppose it is the same proposition that I have offered heretofore. It is a proposition that the State shall pay two thousand dollars.

MR. STEDMAN. No, sir; that is not it.

MR. MCCALLUM. Read it for information.

THE SECRETARY read:

"During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constitution, the annual salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court shall be six thousand dollars each. The Superior Judges shall be divided into three classes, thus: The counties containing thirty thousand inhabitants and upwards——"

MR. MCCALLUM (interrupting). That seems to be upon a different subject. That has no bearing on the fixing of salaries whatever. The question solely presented in the proposition I am arguing is, that we should fix how the salaries are to be paid, and if the gentleman will withdraw his amendment until we settle that proposition, then let the question of salaries come up.

MR. STEDMAN. If the gentleman would have listened to the proposition——

MR. MCCALLUM. It confounds one thing with the other, which ought not to be mixed up with it at all. Fix first how they shall be paid, and then we shall have no difficulty.

MR. STEDMAN. This provides that the State shall pay one half.

MR. MCCALLUM. This is my proposition: In line three strike out the words, "from the State treasury;" in line five, after the word "elected," insert, "the salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be paid by the State; one half of the salary of each of the Superior Court Judges shall be paid by the State; the other half thereof shall be paid by the county for which he is elected."

MR. STEDMAN. Would it be in order for me to change my amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. Objection has been made.

MR. TINNIN. I do not think any of the propositions are just what is wanted, and I propose, when an opportunity presents itself, to offer the following amendment: "Strike out all after the word 'each,' in the seventh line, and insert: 'Until otherwise changed by the Legislature, Judges of the Superior Courts shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars, payable quarterly, out of the State treasury. The Supervisors of any county may increase the salary of the Judges of the Superior Courts to an amount not exceeding six thousand dollars per annum, which increase shall be paid out of the county treasury.'" I think that would properly settle this question. I do not propose to interfere with the Judges of the Supreme Court. If an opportunity presents itself I desire to offer that amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: There is evidently a difficulty here in determining how much these Superior Court Judges shall be paid. Now, sir, the amendment before the house is wrong in several particulars. In my judgment four thousand dollars is not enough for a Judge. I believe that in many of the important counties of this State, where the Judges should be good lawyers and men of learning, they ought to receive more than four thousand dollars. I know that there are some counties that this amendment has placed in the second class that should be in the first class. For instance, in this first class you have Sonoma County, with two Judges, both receiving the highest salary provided for in this Constitution. Now, there are other counties here that have nearly as much population, nearly as much wealth, if not quite as much, placed in the second class. Take the County of Butte, for instance, with a population of twenty thousand and more, with an assessment roll of twelve million of dollars or more, in the second class; and yet Sonoma County with but little more than that has two Judges in the first class. This is wrong manifestly. I believe one Judge is sufficient for Butte County, though I attended a term of Court there last week and found nearly one hundred cases upon the calendar. One Judge can do the business; but one Judge must work well to do the business there. Whatever Judge there is there should be paid as much as any Judge in the State is paid in the Superior Court. Again, the two counties of Yuba and Sutter have been put together because one Judge may do the business, and for the purpose of allowing that one Judge to be paid as much as any Judge, and yet they are put in the second class. Colusa County is another county where a Judge must work hard, and which ought to be in the first class. I object to the amendment before this Convention, because it is radically wrong in many respects. How this is to be solved is the question. So far as I yet see the proposition suggested by Mr. Tinnin is the better one, that after receiving such an amount from the State treasury each Judge be paid a certain amount by the county. I should have preferred to have it two thousand five hundred dollars; but when each Judge is paid from the State treasury two thousand dollars the counties may pay as much more as they please, not exceeding six thousand dollars. This will solve the difficulty, and enable each county to pay the Judge such sum as they think its Judge ought to have. In the small counties very little more would be paid. Take Alpine or Modoc; they cannot afford to pay but little more if any, but the wealthier counties can pay, and ought to pay, as much as five thousand to their Judges. Now, I believe that this will solve the whole question. Take Santa Clara a large and wealthy county that wants two Judges. They get two thousand dollars apiece for them from the State. If they want to pay their Judges six thousand dollars they can do it. If they think their Judges can work for three thousand dollars let them work for that, but let them settle the question for themselves, and then there will be no cause for complaint. I have had considerable experience as a lawyer, and I believe that there are many counties in this State where the Judge may do the business of two counties. You cannot do this unless the Judge can pass readily from one to the other, but there is an intention here to increase the number of Judges, perhaps, from the fact that the State was supposed to be called upon to pay the whole bill. I am in favor of this last proposition, although I would have it changed to two thousand five hundred dollars. I am opposed to the one now before us, and I think the Convention ought to vote it down.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I am astonished that the gentleman from Yuba should go for paying Judges by the counties. I cannot conceive of any system better calculated to make a man both a knave and a slave. If you give him two thousand dollars out of the State treasury let that be the whole salary, but do not induce him to humble himself by begging a salary before the Supervisors of the county. Nothing could be worse; nothing could be more humiliating; nothing could be more corrupting or debasing. The Superior Judges are State officers as much as the Judges of the Supreme Court, and should be paid from the State treasury, and paid exclusively from the State treasury. I cannot conceive of anything possibly worse than to have a Judge with his hat in his hand, begging the Supervisors for an additional or increased salary. If you want to destroy the judicial system do that. Now, sir, there is but one method of disposing of this matter practically, in my opinion, and that is to adhere to the report of the Judiciary Committee, which is nearly seven thousand dollars less in expense than the report of the Committee of the Whole. Gentlemen talk about expense. The people of this country want an independent, honest judiciary, and are willing to pay what it costs. Before the assembling of this Convention I never heard a single voter complain of what the judiciary cost, or complain of the present salaries, which is all the committee provides for. They were anxious for more expeditious administration of justice; they were anxious to avoid the law's delay; they want to pass it in independence; but they never, to my knowledge, proposed any picayune idea as that justice was to be measured out as you sell beer at a saloon. It is a mistake, sir, and those who address themselves to this miserable economy, with the expectation of its being a matter of popularity, will find themselves mistaken. I know something of the people, and I know that they have sense enough to know that they want to have an honorable administration of justice, and that they are willing to pay for it. It is a mistake for any gentleman to suppose that he can recommend himself to popular favor by destroying the judiciary of his country; they will find themselves mistaken. The people want independence; they want honesty; they want capacity, and they are willing to pay what it costs. They are willing to give a fair day's wages for a fair day's work. That is the popular sentiment of this country; and those are mistaken who suppose anything else will go down with the people. If you debase your judiciary, take my word for it, this Constitution goes under. If you desire the Constitution to be adopted, this is the worst possible policy you could adopt.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: Probably the strongest argument in favor of fixing by law permanently in this Constitution the salary of Judges, is exemplified on this floor this morning. During the discussion on the reports on legislative department and matters of revenue, this Convention has been conspicuous by the absence of some of its most distinguished members, but when the question of the salary of the Judges comes up we find some distinguished members in their seats whose absence for the last thirty days has been conspicuous. I do not desire to reflect upon these gentlemen. I have seen a lobby about these legislative halls, and the most disgraceful lobby that ever assembled was when Judges came here to have their salaries raised, haunting members, following them to their rooms and begging an increase in their salaries. Now we should avoid this. We should establish some uniformity. This is the only gap that has been left in this Constitution so far that will allow a lobby. Now we should fix a uniform rate that the State shall pay to a Judge, and it is not proposed that any Judge shall walk into the Treasurer's office and receive his money, in many instances ten times what it is worth. It is paid by the taxpayers of the county where he lives. He receives a portion of his salary from the State. All the money that you can pile upon some men would not make them pure. There are men that millions would not make fit to sit upon the bench. I am willing to pay such a price as is right and just. I believe that at least in twenty of the counties of this State, if you will go and examine the records you will find that their County Courts have not set one hundred days in the year. One way to take this question out of the Legislature, and keep these men from hanging around here and disgracing their positions, is to provide that two thousand or two thousand five hundred dollars shall be paid by the State, and let the counties pay the balance. There are many counties in the State that the best talent in it is not worth two thousand dollars a year for any position, and we do not want carpet-baggers. We have got to take the material we have got to make Judges of. We do not propose to import them from San Francisco, Louisiana, or Maine. The people of California have never been niggardly in their salaries. There are two sides to this question, and the taxpayer has a right to say that the salary shall not be increased. One of the main ideas of changing the judicial system was to simplify it, to make it more economical, to have our Courts always in session, so that causes may be tried. You have provided for that, but you have provided for a system that will make lobbying and log-rolling. To avoid all this let us provide for the payment of a certain sum by the State, and leave the rest to the counties. This lobbying element must be wiped out in some form or it will disgrace the Constitutional Convention, and it will disgrace the judiciary of this State in the future.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope that the Convention will allow Mr. Stedman to present his substitute, as I believe that it embraces all that this Convention is seeking for. First, it provides that the Judges shall be classified by the population of the different counties; second, it provides for a division of the salaries between the county and the State, leaving it with the county to have whatever it pleases. It also provides for an increase of the salaries by the county, if the county desires it; therefore it leaves it more with the people than it has been heretofore in any proposition. I believe it has been the custom to allow other gentlemen to change, amend, and modify their own propositions; I hope that the Convention will allow Mr. Stedman to present his amended section, and then, if they do not desire it, they can as readily vote it down.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: In the first place, in regard to what the gentleman from Los Angeles has just said, as a criticism why the salary should not be paid in part by the State and in part by the counties, if he will reflect a moment he will see there is nothing in it, because the salaries cannot be increased or diminished after the election; therefore, a Judge will not go, with his hat in his hand, begging the Supervisors to increase his salary. If the Constitution is adopted as it reads, he will have no power to have his salary increased after his election.

MR. HOWARD. He cannot get any additional salary from the county unless the Supervisors of the county make the appropriation.

MR. HAGER. They will have to do it in advance. But when he goes before the people as a candidate for office, he knows exactly what his salary will be. He need not take the office if the compensation is not satisfactory.

MR. HOWARD. He takes the office with the expectation of getting more pay.

MR. HAGER. He cannot do it. Look at the County Judges now, they cannot do it, yet they receive their salary from the county.

MR. CROSS. Does not the Legislature fix the salary of the County Judges?

MR. HAGER. Yes, I believe it does. They may say it shall not exceed a certain amount, but that is immaterial. Now, I would suggest another proposition entirely. I would not undertake to classify counties by name, I would classify counties by population; and in all the Constitutions of the most modern dates, you will find that the Judges are classified according to the population, and not according to counties. For instance, there may be a Judge for every twenty thousand or thirty thousand inhabitants. Suppose one county contained thirty thousand, let them have a Judge.

MR. MCCALLUM. What census do you go upon, eighteen hundred and seventy?

MR. HAGER. I am not talking about details. We have decennial census—a United States census every ten years. I am not talking about how we shall arrange it in this Constitution for the first set of officers elected under it, but I am talking about the future. After the census of eighteen hundred and eighty, I would say that the Legislature should classify these counties according to population as ascertained, and that one Judge might be elected for every twenty thousand or thirty thousand inhabitants. Then you would have a rule that would work justly.

Now, why should not the compensation be divided between the State and the county, as it has been heretofore. The burden has always been upon the county to pay the County Judges, and the District Judges have been paid by the State, now the two are consolidated into one, and why should not the counties pay a portion of it. These salaries should be adequate, and it should be taken into consideration that the Judge is prohibited from doing any other business, following his profession, or otherwise. I do not know why a Judge in a small county should not be compensated in proportion to what he would obtain in a large county. The compensation should be proportionate to the services, and should be sufficient to support a man and his family according to what his necessities of life may require.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman.

MR. STEDMAN. I call for the ayes and noes.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I send up a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive from the State treasury, for their services, a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constitution, the annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be six thousand dollars each. The Superior Judges shall be divided into four classes: Those of the City and County of San Francisco, and of the Counties of Alameda, San Joaquin, Los Angeles, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Yuba and Sutter combined, and Sonoma, shall constitute the first class, and shall each receive, during the first term, an annual salary of five thousand dollars, payable quarterly; those of the Counties of Butte, El Dorado, Amador, Colusa, Contra Costa, Humboldt, Mendocino, Monterey, Napa, Nevada, Placer, Santa Cruz, Solano, Tulare, Yolo, Kern, and San Bernardino, shall constitute the second class, and shall receive, during the first term, an annual salary of four thousand dollars each, payable quarterly; those of the Counties of Calaveras, Fresno, Lake, Marin, Merced, Plumas, San Benito, San Diego, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Santa Barbara, Sierra, Shasta, Siskiyou, Stanislaus, Tehama, Tuolumne, and Ventura, shall constitute the third class, and receive during the first term, an annual salary of three thousand dollars each, payable quarterly; and those of all other counties of the State, not above enumerated, shall constitute the fourth class, and receive, during the first term, an annual salary of two thousand dollars each, payable quarterly. One half of the salaries of the Judges of the Superior Courts, shall be paid by the State, and the other half by the respective counties.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: It would be observed that this amendment follows the classification and adopts the salaries as provided for originally in the report of the Judiciary Committee, with the single exception that the Counties of Yuba and Sutter, which have since been placed together, and have one Judge combined, are placed in the first class, which would affect the report in the aggregate about two thousand dollars. Now, I do not believe that the people of this State will make any objection to a reasonable increase in the amount of money paid for the judicial department, for this reason: we all know that the present judicial department is entirely inadequate to the wants and requirements of the State. In the system we have adopted here, we have brought justice to the door of every man; we have provided each county with a Judge; we have provided for a Supreme Court, sitting in departments for the greater dispatch of business, and in point of fact, under the system as we have made it now, although nominally there will be an increase of expenses to some extent in the salaries of Judges, yet the saving in point of time, the saving to litigants, in not permitting their cases to drag along year after year, or month after month, will far more than compensate for the additional expense. So that the judicial system as now proposed, with that rate of salaries, will be infinitely cheaper to the people of the State than the present system. That classification, of course, is not perfect. It is really impossible to make it so. You can not make any classification, either based on population or anything else, which can do exact justice to every man in the State. All we can do is to do as we do in all other human affairs, approximate as nearly to the right as we can. Now that section, as originally proposed, was considered carefully in the Judiciary Committee. I changed it to meet what appears to be the sentiment of the Convention; that the payment of the salary should be divided between the State and the respective counties, so that so far as the State is concerned, there will be a decrease in the amount paid from the State treasury, but so far as the counties are concerned, there will necessarily be some increase. You cannot adopt a judicial system with sufficient working force to do the business of the State at the present cost of it in the amount of salaries paid to the Judges. You cannot adopt such a system and make it effectual. The best way to do is to adopt that system which will do speedy and exact justice; which will bring to the bench, so far as may be, men of character and position; which will retain good Judges and drive off bad ones. Such a judicial system is what the State wants. I think it is advisable to proceed with as much regard to economy as we can, still we must bear in mind that the administration of justice under the law is the highest and paramount consideration, and I hope that this amendment will meet with the favor of the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. EAGON.

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: So far as the amount of the salary is concerned, I would favor Judge Campbell's amendment, but as I had occasion to say in Committee of the Whole, when this question was up, I am opposed to putting any portion of this salary on the counties, for the reason I gave then. I believe it was so adopted and so understood by this body, that a great many of these counties are in debt and are not paying. I could name a number of them: Amador, Calaveras, Tuolumno, Alpine, and if I mistake not, El Dorado; these counties are largely in debt. The Judges would have to take their salary in scrip, and in some cases it would really amount to nothing if the county has to pay it. It seems to me that these are State Courts, and the State should pay for them. All of the State business is done in these Courts. I believe that the State should pay these salaries, and I concur with the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Howard, that we should not be niggardly in doing it. Nor do I believe that the people of this State require their Judges to act for salaries that are not commensurate with the services that they should render. In my own county, we have been particularly blessed with able, learned, honest, and efficient Judges; and my people, sir, I know would not, were they to take a vote to-day, lower the salary to less than five thousand dollars, which the District Judge gets to-day. In the matter of appeals alone we have saved the amount of this salary. There has not been one appeal from the County Court or one from the District Court. Now, do the people of that county wish to turn off such Judges as that and get cheap Judges? They would rather pay the present Judges ten thousand dollars than to do without their services. When we go into Court we know that we go before a Court that is learned and honest, and when we get a judgment the attorneys and their clients are all satisfied, and there is no necessity for any appeal. Now, sir, I hear gentlemen talk upon this floor, about decreasing the salaries of Judges, and making Judges go around begging of Supervisors. Let me say that no respectable Judge would do it, and these gentlemen I have alluded to I know would not take the office and ask for a part of their salary from the Board of Supervisors. I hope that the amendment of Judge Campbell will be adopted, modified in that way.

MR. TINNIN. Don't you know it is impossible for the Judge to go before the Board of Supervisors for an increase of his salary?

MR. EAGON. No bill can be paid by a Board of Supervisors unless there is a bill put in for it. The people do not want it, I know. I have had occasion, for the last three weeks, to be among the people of El Dorado and Calaveras counties, and I know that the sentiment is, that the salaries are low enough.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment of Judge Campbell will be voted down. It ranges entirely too high. It ranges higher than the people want. I know that so far as my district goes, that they are not willing to pay it; and that they are very jealous of these salaries, and that they want them reduced to a reasonable figure. I favor the amendment of Mr. Tinnin. It leaves the counties to say how much these Judges shall have, and at the same time provides that every county shall have two thousand dollars from the public treasury towards getting a good Judge. Whatever they find necessary after that they can add to it. But, at all events, I am opposed to the amendment before the Convention, because it takes the salary up too high. It will cost seventy thousand dollars a year higher than the old system. The people were under the idea that we would reduce the expense of the judiciary. We find that impossible, but we can get it somewhere where it will not be too extravagant.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope the amendment offered by Judge Campbell will be voted down. I do not agree that the salary of the Superior Judges, even in the first-class counties, must of necessity be five thousand dollars in order that good talent and capable men may be obtained. Neither do I believe that the people demand a salary of five thousand dollars, as has been advanced on this floor. I contend that the attorneys—and I speak with all due regard for them—are not the proper persons to judge in this matter. Nor are the people with whom they associate, and with whom they do business, the proper persons to judge. Those with whom a lawyer ordinarily is brought into contact are the speculating class; the reckless class; they are not the conservative class, and do not represent the conservative element, or population, of the State. They are men that are gamblers by profession. They transact business of chance, and they rush into Courts in order that their chance schemes may win. They are reckless in their judgment, and in their opinions of what is right and wrong. In fixing these salaries, we must take into consideration the interests of the taxpaying masses, who are peaceable citizens; who do not rush into the Courts; who have but little to do with this class of men on this floor, who pretend to judge the popular sentiment of an element that they are not brought into contact with. I believe that two thirds of the better class of citizens have nothing to do with the attorneys or with the Courts.

MR. EAGON. Are not lawyers, as a general thing, drawn more in association with every class than any other class of men?

MR. WEST. No, sir.

MR. EAGON. I think they are. That has been my experience.

MR. WEST. They are necessarily educated by the business with which they are brought in contact. When you talk about fourteen dollars a day, it may seem very small to an attorney, but it is very large for the business men of this country, and for the laboring men of this State. Now, I do think that we should have some regard for the bone and sinew of the State, the real good portion of the State, who pay the taxes, and the men who do business on the streets. Their interests should be consulted, and this matter of Courts should be made useful and practical, as well as ornamental; and we should not be expected to pay for a mere matter of ornament. I shall not vote even for the article if it contains a salary more than four thousand dollars for any class of counties; and I hope that if the professional portion of this Convention forces the issue upon it, the conservative part of this body will vote down the article, rather than pay five thousand dollars a year for the services of men who would be glad to get thirty-five hundred dollars.

MR. CROSS. Then why don't you propose that Los Angeles shall be placed in the third class, instead of in the first class?

MR. WEST. We propose that Los Angeles shall stand in her proper place, according to her population, and her wealth, and her interests, at least I do not ask that we must have two five thousand dollar Judges there. I do not believe that the people of Los Angeles desire any such thing. I have heard the matter discussed, even among lawyers in Los Angeles, and they remarked that thirty-five hundred dollars was more than the average good attorney of Los Angeles County could make; and I believe it.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: The scale of salaries reported by the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department, and in the substitute, is for seven of the District Judges a positive reduction of one thousand dollars per annum. At present seven of the District Judges receive from the State treasury six thousand dollars per annum. That is the same compensation as the Supreme Judges. Now, sir, the District Judges in the City and County of San Francisco—and I speak for Alameda County—are entitled, in justice, to as much compensation as the Supreme Judges. They work as many hours in the day, and as many days in the year, as the Supreme Court Judges, and they are, upon the average, of as high a class in capacity and in every other respect, and ought to be so. Now, sir, this Convention has set down the compensation for Supreme Judges at six thousand dollars per annum. It is little enough, unless you want to embark upon a scheme here of cheap justice, which I do not think the people of this State are now prepared to embark in. Mr. President, I have not yet heard of any petition being presented to this body in favor of a reduction of judicial salaries. I have not heard of any public meetings in the State on the subject. We do not intend to raise them. I have not heard of any reputable paper of the State that favors a reduction of judicial salaries. Now, sir, I ask, where do these great reformers get their authority from when they say that this Convention was called for the purpose of reducing judicial salaries? I deny it. I affirm that the people of this State are satisfied with the present compensation of their Judges. The compensation of the Supreme Court Judges has been six thousand dollars for fifteen years. Have we had any clamor about it? Have we had the Legislature besought to reduce the salaries? Not at all. On the contrary, we had the salaries in some districts raised from five thousand dollars to six thousand dollars in compliance with the demand of the people of the State through their representatives in the Legislature. I deny that the people of the State have called upon us to enter upon a crusade here against a judiciary in the matter of reducing judicial salaries. As I said before, the report of the Judiciary Committee reduces the compensation of several of these Judges from six thousand dollars to five thousand dollars, and now it is proposed to go further and reduce these first class counties to four thousand dollars, making a difference between the Supreme Court Judges, and the Superior Judges in these large counties of two thousand dollars. It would be entirely out of proportion to pay the Supreme Judges six thousand dollars, and the Superior Judges of these first class counties only four thousand dollars. I think the schedule reported by the Committee on Judiciary is the fairest and the best. The scheme here proposed consolidates the District Judges and the County Judges of the State. Heretofore the District Judges being State Judges were paid out of the State treasury, and the County Judges were paid by the several counties. I think it is highly appropriate that inasmuch as we have consolidated these two classes of Judges, the compensation should be divided between the State and the county in the proportion proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, that is, to have the State pay one half of the compensation and the counties the other half. That would be about fair, and it would be about in the proportion that it is now. It is generally admitted, Mr. President, that the scheme proposed is infinitely superior in every respect to the old judicial system. Every lawyer with whom I have conversed, and every Judge has conceded that the scheme proposed is infinitely better than the old judicial system, and will result in the expedition of business and in the speedy decision of cases brought before the Courts, which is the great matter that concerns the people. They want litigation expeditiously determined. Now, an ordinary case getting into the Courts of San Francisco or Alameda counties is frequently not reached on the calendar for two years. There is a cry for relief. It concerns the litigants, and they are the people. It is not the legal profession nor the Judges. The judicial system is one that concerns the people. It comes home to every man in the State, and an honest working judiciary is one of the greatest benefits to any land. I hope the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alameda will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. WICKES.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: We have come here with different habits, and every man seems obligated to do the best he can for his class. The grangers want growing crops exempt; the workingmen want the State Prison contracts done away with; the lawyers want extravagant salaries for the Judges; but it is self-evident to us all that the people want, if anything, a reduction in salaries. However, I believe that the temper of the Convention is such that a compromise should be received. I believe that Mr. Tinnin's amendment suggests such a compromise. It divides the responsibility of paying these Judges between the State and the counties. The State sets apart a certain fund for the purpose—two thousand dollars to each County Judge. Now, no County Judge in any county could receive less than two thousand dollars. Then the authorities of the county may superadd so much as they may think proper, according to the ability of their Judge and the services which he renders them. I think this is the best proposition. As to the classification scheme, I do not think that will work. I shall vote for Mr. Tinnin's amendment if it comes before the house.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: In many respects, I think the proposition offered by the gentleman from Alameda is the best and clearest that has yet come before the Convention; and yet, sir, it is deficient, or at least defective in the same particular that every proposition yet submitted before the Convention has been, and that is in this: that when more than one Judge is given to a county, they are entitled to receive the highest compensation allowed. I think that is wrong. For instance, the County of San Joaquin must have two Judges. Now, sir, while I admit that they may need two Judges, I do not believe that their work will be twice as heavy as the litigation of the County of Butte, for instance. Therefore, is there any good reason why, while having two Judges, they should also have a higher salary for these two Judges than is paid to a Judge in a county like Butte? I claim that the second Superior Judge in a county like Alameda will not have as much work to do as the Superior Judge of the County of Placer, and he should not receive any more salary. Is justice so much more dear in Alameda than in Placer, that the Judge should be paid a higher salary for a less amount of work? I say not. Placer County is set back in the second or third class, yet this one fact remains, that outside of some of the main centers of population there is not a county in the State that has as much and as provoking litigation as the County of Placer. I believe that four thousand dollars for a Superior Judge is all right. I think it is all they ought to receive, and if it can be shown why both the Judges in these double-headed Courts should have five thousand dollars, I would like to hear the reason for it. We are willing to give these counties all the Courts they need, but there is no good reason for also giving them an increased salary for their Judges, especially when the State is to pay a portion of it. Now, if you include these double-headed counties in the first class, also those in the second class in the first class, then put those in the third class in the second class, and those in the fourth class in the third class, you will have a proposition that I think will be satisfactory to the Convention, and I believe would be eminently satisfactory to the people. I hope that if this amendment should be voted down, that if I do not have an opportunity, some one else will look into the matter and offer a substitute to that effect, and that it will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I am sorry to see so much inconsistency in this Convention. Now, we have been preaching economy ever since the Convention commenced. When we were discussing the report of the Committee on Education, the salary of the Superintendent of Schools was too high and had to be reduced; when we reached the article on Legislative Department, we reduced the salary because it was too expensive to the people. Now we have reached the Judicial Department and it is said that we must not reduce the salaries. If that is consistent I fail to see it. If we must economize for the people I do not see why we should economize in the branches of legislation and education and raise the wages in the judiciary. Now, sir, I hope that the amendment will not prevail and I shall vote against it.

REMARKS OF MR. TOWNSEND.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I merely wish to say that I protest against this reducing the salaries of Judges, particularly when counties only have one Judge. The county I represent here comes in the second class and has but one Judge, and I am convinced that we could not get a competent man to serve for less than four thousand dollars. We have a large lumber interest in that county and much litigation, many cases involving a great many thousand dollars. We are fortunate enough to have some eminent men, honest, upright, and learned in their profession. But it would not justify them to abandon their practice in the Courts to occupy a position as Judge for less than four thousand dollars, if it would for that. I think it would be a piece of niggardly economy to attempt to reduce the salaries any lower. We would be compelled to take shyster lawyers for our Judges, and they would have to be imported from some other part of the State, for we have none there. I shall have to vote for Mr. Campbell's amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I would be in favor of the amendment of Judge Campbell in so far as it relates to salary, but I am opposed to it because it makes a Judge depend upon the Supervisors of the county for a portion of his salary.

MR. CAMPBELL. It provides that the county shall pay one half and fixes the salary.

MR. MCFARLAND. I am opposed to that then. I do not believe that a small county should be compelled to pay one half of the salary of the Judge. The Judge of the Court is a State officer. His Court is open to every person in the State, and there are a great many small counties; you will find that one half of the litigants in the Courts reside at other points in the State. You take the County of Mono, and I will venture to predict that in one half of the lawsuits that take place in the next five years, the clients upon one side or the other, and frequently both, live in San Francisco. It is not right to make the people of a small county pay half the salary of the Judge.

MR. CAMPBELL. Don't you pay the County Judge now?

MR. MCFARLAND. We are abandoning that system entirely. We are providing for one system of State Courts, of general jurisdiction, to extend all over the State. Of course it might do in San Francisco, or in Alameda, perhaps in the City of Sacramento, but I do not think it is fair or right to make these small counties pay for one half of the litigation that takes place there in the interest of a large county. If this amendment is voted down, I understand the proposition is going to be presented again, that the counties themselves shall determine the salary. Who determines then? The Board of Supervisors. Now, sir, from the expression of opinion that we have heard from a number of members on this floor, the very class of men who will be likely to be elected Supervisors of counties, we can see what the salaries of Judges is likely to amount to. The cry in the Board of Supervisors will be the same niggardly economy cry. The Board of Supervisors want to make a reputation, and their idea would be about the same as expressed by a number of gentlemen on this floor, that a Judge ought not to have more than fifteen hundred dollars, or two thousand dollars any way. Certainly it ought to be fixed either by the Convention or by the Legislature.

Digitized by Google

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I wish to inquire if an amendment to the amendment will be entertained?

THE PRESIDENT. There is an amendment to the amendment pending already.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I understand that that is the rule, and has been. I am not raising a question as to the correctness of that ruling, but I wish to point out its effect. It compels us to take a choice between evils. The general course of the Convention is this: Those gentlemen who can get the floor first present their amendments, until three or four have been presented and discussed at length, and the patience of the Convention is worn out, then the previous question is moved and no further amendment can be entertained, and you must take that or take nothing. I am not quite sure, but I suppose that if this amendment should be voted down, that the amendment that I propose to offer, and presented to my colleague, Judge Campbell, before he offered his, might possibly be in order, although the proposition now pending embraces the idea which I supposed was the foundation idea upon which we had to proceed. When we fix that we may then go on and fix the other matters, and not, as this proposition proposes, mix up matters disconnected with the main proposition, namely: how the Judges shall be paid. This Convention illustrates, certainly, upon this proposition, the truth of the schoolboy's copy-book maxim, that there are many men of many minds. Here are several dozen propositions, and yet some gentleman might move the previous question directly, and say that we shall not vote upon any other except those which happen to be presented first. I am placed in a position to have to oppose the amendment of my colleague, although it embraces the same idea that I submitted to him and submitted to the Convention, because he mixes up in that proposition the salaries of the Judges. If we provide, as I propose, that the counties shall pay one half, common courtesy requires that he and I shall allow the delegations from the different counties to say something about what that salary shall be. When, sir, this proposition was presented here, that the State should pay the entire salaries, then I and every one had a right to say how many Judges there should be, and what their salaries should be. Now, this is entirely different. If the last clause of this amendment is adopted, fairness, courtesy, and justice require that gentlemen should say what would be proper for their different counties, and their judgment about it should mainly be the rule to govern. It ought to be entirely disconnected. Let us vote upon one proposition at a time, and if we say that the county shall pay one half and the State shall pay the other half, then gentlemen will have two leading considerations in suggesting what shall be the salaries for their Judges respectively. One will be, as the State pays one half, not to fix it too low, for the State is doing liberally in this matter; the other consideration will be, that as their own constituents are to pay the balance, not to fix it too high. Their judgment will be an honest, intelligent, and impartial judgment, and they ought to be consulted. Now, Mr. Tinnin proposes that the Board of Supervisors shall fix the salaries at about two thousand dollars. That having been discussed in Committee of the Whole, and voted down by a large majority, that ought to be the end of the question. I have learned that you must submit to the views of the majority, and it seems to me useless to raise the question again, although I offered the idea in the first place. Now, although I think, in the main, the salaries, as suggested by my colleague, may be about right, I propose to vote against them with a view to offering an amendment, that the salaries shall be paid, one half by the counties and one half by the State; and after that is fixed, then vote on the question of salaries, and be governed in that mostly by the delegations from the different counties.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: It is very difficult, in any public matter, for any gentleman to get exactly what he wants. In all public matters we have got to compromise something, and find some common ground where opposing views can meet. Now, although the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell, does not, in all respects, agree with my judgment, it comes nearer to it than any other proposition which is before the Convention, and therefore I shall support it. Now, the original report of the Committee on Judiciary, on section seventeen, was not exactly what I wanted in respect to the question of salaries; I wanted them higher, still I had to agree to them, because it was the judgment of a majority of the committee. But gentlemen here have misrepresented the whole scope and meaning of section seventeen, to a great degree. Section seventeen fixes the salary in the Constitution only temporarily. That question was discussed in the Committee of the Whole, as to whether we should fix it at all in the Constitution. It was agreed that it was not a proper subject for a Constitution, it was a matter for legislation, but as the system was to go into effect, and the Judges would take their seats before the first Legislature could act, it was deemed well, for the first term, to fix it in the Constitution, thereafter leaving it for the Legislature. Now, this section seventeen must be discussed in that aspect of it, that it is a temporary expedient, and that hereafter, what we do here will not affect the salaries of Judges nor the classification. This classification is a temporary thing. Gentlemen are treating it here as if it was a permanent classification. The classification is subject to alteration by the Legislature at any time, and the salaries are subject to alteration at any time, provided that it shall not affect the salaries of any Judge during the term for which he is elected. For that reason it is not one of those permanent and enduring things which should occupy so very much of the time of the Convention. I am in favor of large salaries for the Judges, and I am in favor of it upon principles of public policy and public right. I am not in favor of it because of the advancement of any particular class or any particular people, but in the interest of the whole people. I have learned to-day, for the first time, that a man who is ignorant of Courts and the working of Courts, is better able to advise this Convention as to the policy of judicial proceedings than the man who is all the time connected with it. I have learned to-day, for the first time, that a lawyer is the least competent to explain the workings, the operation, and the machinery of the Courts.

MR. WEST. In regard to the salaries?

MR. WILSON. You recognize the picture! Now, I know myself that lawyers are brought more into contact with the great mass of the people—from the lowest class of the community, from the criminal who comes to him for a defense to the best and the richest whose interests are attacked. I know that a lawyer becomes conversant with the most confidential matters respecting the domestic relation and the private lives of the people of the State. Say what you please, when the poor man gets into trouble he comes to the lawyer and tells him that which he would not tell to a member of his own family, and I am proud to say that it is not once in ten thousand times that his confidence is betrayed. Now, take that class of men who are constantly in the Courts, constantly seeing the machinery and knowing the Judges; they always want a good Judge. The lawyer wants a good Judge. I do not care how able or powerful he is, he wants the best Judge. It may be supposed by some that an able lawyer would prefer to go before an incompetent Judge, but, on the contrary, I have never seen a lawyer who was not anxious to see the best, ablest, and most impartial Judge upon the bench. Now, there is not a fair, business view taken of these salaries. The Judge is supposed to be put down here upon the basis of ordinary occupation, when his occupation or position is entirely different from other occupations. In the first place the Judge cuts himself off from all other business. He cannot enter into the speculations and operations of other men. His office engrosses him, and the people do not like to see him engaging in other business. The best Judge is a Judge alone, and has no other business in the community. Consequently he is cut off from making money in any other branch of business. In the second place he is cut off from any other office during that term. He cannot even resign his office for the purpose of taking a position. He cannot run for any office. In that respect his position is peculiar, and different from others. He lays up no capital for the future—none whatever—in his judicial career. The lawyer who is gaining his cases and working on increases and builds up a patronage. His success in a case to-day brings clients to-morrow. If he gets some fame, some reputation, it brings money to his pocket; people say that he is active, energetic, and faithful, and therefore they go to him and his business is profitable. Not so with the Judge. The Judge on the bench may deliver the ablest decision of his whole career, or of the State; it may be a matter of which all his friends are proud, but it brings him not an additional dollar to-morrow. He has got nothing at all but the kindly approval of his fellow citizens—but not a dollar is ever added to his pocket—and at the end of his term he is turned out upon the world again to seek to make his living, not having added anything at all to his capacity, to his ability, or to his patronage. Therefore, he is not to be regarded in that narrow and close position that some gentlemen seek to regard him. Now, they say he may go and live meanly; he may go and live in a hash-house. Now, I would ask those gentlemen, what is the difference between the ordinary American laborer and the Chinese? The Chinese is opposed on the ground that he may monopolize the market because he lives meanly; because he lives upon cheap victuals; because hundreds of them crowd into a single building. The American workman is too proud to do any such thing as that. He has different modes of life, and different habits of life, and that which supports the Chinaman will not support him and his family. Now, I say there is something in the situation of a Judge which calls for a different mode of life. We do not like to see a Judge going along the street with a ragged coat. We expect to see him live in accordance with the position which he occupies. It is not a question as to how cheaply a man can live, but what is a fair, adequate compensation for a man of ability, learning, and high character. It is the highest kind of skilled labor which the people seek to employ in their behalf, and which they ask to be exercised in the purest, fairest, and most impartial manner. It is that kind of talent and that kind of ability which they are paying for, and it is the poorest kind of economy to pay that kind of men meanly. The people of the State of California, with their big, warm, generous hearts, are not mean and stingy, and do not ask to pay their officers an inadequate salary.

I say that this section here is a reduction of salaries instead of an increase of them. The salaries of the Judges of the first class have been six thousand dollars, and the Judiciary Committee reduced them to five thousand dollars. If it is reduced below that it is a mean and niggardly economy. As to the question of apportionment as between the State and county, I would say that it would cost the counties about what it costs now for the County Judges. As a whole, I approve of the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, because it comes nearer to my views than the other amendments which are proposed, and I hope it will be adopted by the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda. You create a State officer, and you propose to exempt localities, where there is aggregated the largest amount of capital and money, from the payment of the State officers. That is the proposition, stripped of all its verbiage. I think it is unfair. If you do that I would rather go back to the old system, of five Judges, and of District and County Judges. It is better than this half system. I am surprised that the Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary gives up any part of his report, for that is the meaning of it. He abandons the system which he has been attempting to have adopted, practically. Let us either adhere to it pure and simple, or abandon it altogether and go back to the old system. I will never vote for this thing, sir; and it would be a strong inducement for me to vote against the Constitution if it is engrafted in it. Now, sir, there is no objection to the report of the Committee on Judiciary. The salaries ought to be permanently held in the Constitution; and the Judges ought not at each election of the Legislature to be subjected to the corrupting influence of electioneering for an increase of salary. I would rather have a salary of four thousand dollars fixed permanently than this electioneering system for four thousand five hundred dollars, or five thousand dollars. Give us a system that will be pure; give us a system that will be independent; give us a system that will command talent and honesty, and I will vote for it, I do not care how high the salaries are. But I will never vote for this system of half county and half State; because it is vicious radically, and will prove demoralizing and corrupting to the whole judicial system.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I trust that this amendment will be voted down. I believe it has been asserted by several of the members that the Superior Judges are State officers, and that the salaries should be paid by the State, and I challenge any gentleman in this Convention to give any one reason why this should be taken from the State treasury to the counties. There is no reason or good sense in the proposition; and, as has been said by my friend, General Howard, in reference to the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, this is the first time I have seen him show any weakness in this Convention. He has backed right square down, and I am sorry to see it.

MR. WILSON. Et tu, Brute? [Laughter.]

MR. TULLY. What would be the effect of this? The Judges would be hobnobbing with the members of the Board of Supervisors, and the first thing you would hear would be the cry of Court-house rings. Now, I am in favor of paying high salaries to Judges—salaries which will bring the best talent in the State upon the bench—and the man who is not in favor of that does not know what he is talking about, the sage of Los Angeles, Mr. West, to the contrary notwithstanding. I believe I am as good a judge of a salary as my friend from Los Angeles; and I deny that the character of a lawyer is a gambling and chance-taking profession. I say, sir, that I know men who live who have clearer cut ideas and better notions of what is right than the legal fraternity. That cannot be denied. But while you can find men with clearer cut ideas, who know more and better what is correct and what is wrong, you cannot find a more liberal and generous hearted set of men; and I would just as soon go to them for charity as I would to the gentleman from Los Angeles, or the people he represents.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I do not say that I am opposed to a classification of the counties, but if there is any classification, I say there should be something like a fair classification; there should be no exceptions. Now, by this, I do not reason that there can be any classification which will make absolute equality or do absolute justice between the counties, but there should be a classification which would be absolutely fair. Of course there are no two counties in the State that are just alike, with just the same population, consequently we must put counties with different amounts of population in the same class; that would not be equal, still it would be fair. Now, all I demand is a fair classification. What is unfair, is to take one county, with a population of seven thousand, and put it in the second class, and take another county, with ten thousand or twelve thousand, and put it in the third class; it is neither equal nor fair, but it is done in this amendment, or substitute, offered by my neighbor from Alameda. It is done as between the two counties of San Diego and Kern. This is an instance that I had occasion to call to the attention of the Convention when in Committee of the Whole, and the Committee of the Whole rectified that mistake by placing San Diego in the same class with Kern. I say that they belong in the same class, or if there is any difference between them, then San Diego should be in the upper class. At the last general election, previous to the one for members to this Convention, the vote of Kern County was one thousand two hundred and fourteen, and of San Diego County, one thousand five hundred and five; three hundred more. Now, I know that the gentleman over there, from Kern, who is a delegate at large, representing the whole State, had the good fortune to be on the Committee on Judiciary, which made this apportionment. It is everything, you know, to have a friend at Court. I know that he claims that the property of Kern is more than San Diego. I will tell you one thing, this thing of the assessed valuation of property, is one of the most delusive things in the world. The assessed valuation is just what happens to be the will, or caprice, or judgment of the local Assessor. One year the assessment in this county, or any other county, may be very large, on account of having an Assessor who is inclined to put a large valuation upon the property. Now, I would vote against this proposition if it were for no other reason than that. I am elected here as a joint delegate of two counties, San Diego and San Bernardino, and I say that I do not believe that there is five hundred difference in the population of these two counties, and still one of these counties is put in the second class and the other in the third. I protest against that. I say both go in the same class, and Kern with them. You can put them in the second or third class, and I care not which, so long as they are where they belong, and not make an invidious distinction, or any distinction.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Are you acquainted with the amount of practice in Kern County—the amount of legal business there?

MR. ROLFE. I do not know anything about the practice of Kern County.

MR. SMITH. How do you know then, that it is less than San Diego?

MR. ROLFE. I believe I know as much of the practice of that county as the gentleman from Kern does. I believe I have just as much practice in that county as he has, and I never was interested in but two suits in that county in my life. Now, I will tell you a proposition which would suit me better, and I believe would solve this difficulty. Let this Convention state what the Judges of the different counties shall receive—their salary. Then say that two thousand dollars of that salary, or some fixed amount, be paid by the State to every county alike. Then let this Convention go on at present and make a temporary classification of the counties and say what the different salaries shall be; and then all above two thousand dollars, if that is the amount fixed on, must come out of the county treasury; but not refer it to the Supervisors. There are some counties in the State where the Judges ought not to receive more than two thousand dollars, as in Alpine, for instance. I admit that on a former occasion I opposed this system, and advocated the payment of these Judges by the State. I took the ground that they were State officers, and I say now that every individual in this State is interested more or less, or liable to be interested directly in every Judge in this State. But taking into consideration the difficulty of classifying these counties so as to give anything like satisfaction, I do believe, upon second thought, that the best plan to adopt would be to let the State pay two thousand dollars a year for each Judge in the State, and then let the Convention first, and afterwards the Legislature, say what the Superior Judges shall receive.

REMARKS OF MR. KLEINE.

MR. KLEINE. Mr. President: It is really amusing to me to hear the discussion of these legal gentlemen, of the lawyers. [Confusion.] Oh, I know them, sir, well; I know you, sir! and I hope you will keep quiet until I get through. I am a member of this Convention, and I claim protection from the President. I would like to be protected. Mr. President, I hope this amendment will be voted down, of Judge Campbell, to give Judges six thousand dollars a year. It is surprising, it is astonishing to me how these legal gentlemen are fighting for salaries for their colleagues, while they utterly despise and reject the poor working man. They have no word of sympathy for them; but when there is a chance for a fat salary, oh! how do they fight! How do they strive to get a fat salary. The gentleman on my left said his constituents instructed him that they were willing to pay high salaries to Judges. I deny that. My constituents and the constituents of my fellow delegates are not in favor of high salaries, and I don't believe his constituents are. We are living now in a time when the poor men are crushed down. There is just as good men work with their hands as these kid gloved gentlemen of the bar. There may be a poor lawyer, but you could not get a pure lawyer. I don't wish to hurt any one's feelings, but I tell you what you must do. I like to get a pure lawyer and I can have an independent fortune. I would send him to Barnum, and I know my fortune would be sure. I do not know how it is possible that a lawyer could be a pure man. Gentlemen, I am a plain man, I do not mince matters. Now, I say to every honest man in this Convention, vote down the high salaries of these officials. Perhaps some of you think I am excited. I speak from the bottom of my heart. Now, I say, Mr. President, six thousand dollars is too much for any man. These men have no sympathy with only one class. I hope that the time may come that working men, that the men that have to work, that they will take charge of all the offices, and then we will have a good time. [Laughter and applause.]

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I do not know what I can say to the last argument on this matter. It ought to be a warning to gentlemen of the legal profession not to defend themselves here, because they bring upon themselves such speeches as this. Now, sir, I for one am opposed to this amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, Judge Campbell. I think there is great doubt, for instance, about Los Angeles wanting two Judges. I think there is still more doubt about Sonoma wanting two Judges. Santa Clara has recently made up its mind that it wanted two. Some time ago Judge Temple told me he could do all the business of Sonoma County. I understand he has changed his views.

MR. MORELAND. He told me he could not.

MR. SHAFTER. He has a perfect right to change his ground, but he now takes care of the business of Sonoma, Marin, and Mendocino. He takes care of three counties now. He is to be reduced to Sonoma County and take care of the probate and county business. It is the same in Los Angeles. I do believe that one industrious man can do the whole business in that county. It seems to me that these counties are put in at ten thousand dollars apiece to make things get along smoothly. I prefer the plan of paying two thousand dollars a year from the State treasury, and letting the counties pay the balance. It is said that this is a State office. So it is, and the State pays a part of it, but almost all the business belongs to the county. Occasionally a case from abroad is sent there to be tried. What particular wrong is there in the county paying part of the expense? I shall vote against this amendment, and against every proposition to pay ten thousand dollars to these counties that I do not think need it.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I shall vote against the pending amendment in the main for the reasons that have been given by the gentleman from San Bernardino, and the gentleman from Marin, Mr. Shafter. I see the difficulty in our reaching a decision. The proposition of Judge Campbell covers first, a classification of the counties of the State, fixing for each class its Judges. Now, there are all sorts of opinions, and scarcely two gentlemen on this floor have the same opinion as to the details in this measure. For instance, it is said by one side that no one should receive a salary as high as five thousand dollars. Now, I differ with them on that. Then, again, others say that four thousand dollars is the right sum, and others claim that four thousand five hundred dollars is the proper sum. You will hardly find two gentlemen on the floor who agree. When we come to vote on this amendment, it covers the salary of every Superior Judge of the State, as well as of the Judges of the Supreme Court, and passes upon another question upon which we are as much divided as upon that. Here some gentlemen say that we should not have the salaries of these Judges paid except from the State treasury. Others claim that the salary, whatever it may be fixed at, should be divided equally between the State and the county. Others claim that the State should pay two thousand dollars for each Judge, and the counties make up the balance to a proper salary. I think that idea is correct. I think my friend from San Bernardino has hit the nail squarely on the head. We never shall agree upon this proposition so long as you are to pay these salaries all out of the State treasury; but if you provide that they shall receive from the State treasury two thousand dollars, then the thing is equalized, and then every member assumes a direct responsibility to his constituents in the matter of fixing the salaries. We will have no difficulty in fixing these salaries satisfactorily, if that proposition is adopted. I agree to the utmost with Judge Shafter in what he says in regard to those counties having two Judges. It is not a fair proposition. I think we will dispose of this matter quickly, if we can first settle this question as to how the Judges shall be paid. Why not take up the questions one at a time, and know what we are voting upon; then we shall come to a satisfactory conclusion.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I am opposed to all that has been proposed, and if something better is not proposed, I will be opposed to all that will be proposed. It is like a grab-bag; you run in your hand and pull out a county, and if it is a five thousand dollar county, that is all right. There is no system, and nothing to be governed by. It does seem to me that the salaries of this State ought to be regulated by a graduated system, and that they ought to be governed by population. If San Francisco, and some of the larger counties around San Francisco, are desirous of paying five thousand dollars, all right. I have no objection to it. Many of the counties are not able to pay five thousand dollars, and the Legislature ought not to be bothered all the time. The proposition of Judge Rolfe, that the State pay two thousand dollars, I think is a good one, with the further provision that the counties be graded into three grades, according to population. That will give something like permanence.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I am not any stickler for any particular system or arrangement of counties. I am not in favor of the present amendment, but I shall vote for it. The proposition passed by the Committee of the Whole did not suit me, but I voted for it. I say, that if we do not yield something of our opinions we will never get through with this. Now, the gentleman from San Bernardino said that it is impossible for us to get at a correct basis. We have found that out long ago; but the gentleman in admitting that fact has made an attack upon Kern County, or rather upon myself. Not only that, but he has made serious charges, I claim, upon the Judiciary Committee. Now, I would feel complimented in being credited with the power of influencing that committee in favor of Kern County, were it not that the charge is rather a dishonorable one, to say that that committee has been guilty of trading in this matter. As a member of that committee, I throw back the charge, and say that it is unmanly to bring personal matters into the contest upon this floor. So far as Kern County not being properly classified here, the matter was not brought up by myself so much as by the testimony of other gentlemen upon this floor, eminent members of the bar, who have gone to Kern County, and who have some knowledge of the business there. Now, I undertake to say that the legal business of Kern County is far above the average of other counties in this State; that it almost ranges with the second class counties of this State, such as Sacramento, Santa Clara, Sonoma, and Alameda. If there is a county that should have an able Judge, one of the first grade, it seems to me that it ought to be the County of Kern, and especially the first term, because there is not a single doubt but that there is an amount of business there at present that will continue for the first term of the Judge that will be elected at the next election. In regard to this matter of the counties paying, I wish to say one thing. If the counties are forced to pay an indefinite amount, if a certain amount is fixed for the State to pay and the balance left to the Board of Supervisors, I say that the Supervisors will be influenced in every county, or in many of the interior counties, by what is known as the "Court House rings," that exist in many of them. I know it to be the case in my county, and I know it has been the case that the Court House ring has controlled matters there for nine or ten years completely, you might say. It is the same in other counties. These things will continue to be; and whenever a Judge runs for the office, he will have to see the Supervisors, and it will be a part of his electioneering business to see that the Supervisors will fix up this matter properly. I say that it would be unwise to leave this matter to the counties.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

SPECIAL ORDER.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: The special order for two o'clock to-day is the resolution in relation to the University land grant. But, inasmuch as the Convention has been for twenty-four hours busy considering the article on judiciary, and more especially upon that part relating to salaries, and have not reached a conclusion yet, I have no wish to introduce the consideration of these resolutions now, and am perfectly willing that they shall go over until to-morrow morning, at half-past nine o'clock.

So ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell.

Lost.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'each,' in the seventh line, and insert, 'Judges of the Superior Courts shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars, payable at stated times, out of the State treasury. The Supervisors of any county may increase the salary of the Judges of the Superior Courts to an amount not exceeding five thousand dollars per annum, which increase shall be paid out of the county treasury.'"

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: The idea that a Judge shall be placed on a footing lower than that of a Constable or Justice of the Peace, is absurd. The State of California, through its legislative department provides what shall be paid County Clerks, what shall be paid Recorders, and all the other officers, but when it comes to the case of a Judge of a Court of general jurisdiction, he is put on a level lower than all; and whether he is to receive a reasonable compensation or not, is dependent upon the Board of Supervisors. Now, sir, I cannot see anything in this proposition to commend itself to any man, unless it be this: That some men are so anxious to have a reduction by this Constitution, and if they cannot get it anywhere else, they are willing to make a strike at the judiciary.

MR. TINNIN. Do you intend it in that way?

MR. CROSS. I intend it for any man who fills the bill. If the coat fits you, wear it; if not, don't put it on. The State law provides that a Constable shall receive so much salary for certain services, and when he has performed the services, all he has to do is to make out his bill, and present it to the Board, and the Board must pay it. But, sir, when the Judge comes to the office, he has not merely to make out his bill, but he must first come before the Board to see if they will allow him to present his bill. Now, sir, I do not know whether my experience with Boards of Supervisors has been that of others or not, but I am not favorably impressed with the probabilities that they will, as a rule, do what is right and proper in this matter. But I do know this, that any system that fixes the salaries of Judges at one third less than is paid to an ordinary good lawyer, will bring us Judges of very poor material, and we will then experience some of the results of this kind of economy, which proposes to fix salaries at such a rate that only the poorer class of lawyers can afford to accept the position; and, sir, when that class of men are made Judges of, we shall not only need a double-headed Supreme Court, but we shall need a Supreme Court with seven heads. Perhaps two thirds of all the cases tried will have to be appealed to the Supreme Court. Then, sir, gentlemen will begin to find that it is cheaper to employ a good Judge in the Superior Court, than it is to employ poor lawyers. The cost of one appeal amounts to more than the difference in the salary. I say let us come to a conclusion on this matter. I am in favor of economy, but let us use reasonable economy. An expensive coat is sometimes cheaper than a cheap coat, because it wears better and does better service. I do not believe we are doing our duty by leaving this matter to the Board of Supervisors. I believe this body is capable of determining what are reasonable salaries, and it is our duty to do it. I don't know of any constitutional or legislative body that has ever shirked a reasonable responsibility in this matter; and I hope this Convention will determine what shall be a reasonable compensation for our Judges, and not leave them to the Supervisors. I see another bad feature. We provide in this Constitution that the Judge shall have two thousand dollars a year. Now in many counties of this State there will not be a meeting of the Board of Supervisors between the time when the Constitution is adopted and the election. And yet we provide here that the salary of a Judge shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he shall have been elected. After a man has been elected you cannot make his salary more or less, and yet in many counties there will be no meeting of the Board of Supervisors between the date of the adoption of this Constitution and the election of the Judge. There are other reasons why this provision should not be adopted. One of them is that it will result in this, that the smaller counties will have the salaries of their Judges paid by the State in full, while the larges counties will only have a small portion of the salary paid by the State. There is Los Angeles County, which is so ably represented on this floor. They demanded two Judges at a high salary, but when it comes to paying half the salary out of their own treasury, they won't submit to it. They are not willing that their forty-seven million of inhabitants, with four hundred and seventy billions of property, shall pay any portion of the salaries of their Judges. [Laughter.]

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. MR. President: I did not intend to say anything upon this subject. I considered that the subject had been almost worn out; but after the extreme self-laudation and egotistic speech of the gentleman from Nevada, I deem it due to me. Now, sir, as far as this question is concerned, I hold that this amendment will cover this subject entirely. The gentleman avoids the question. He holds that Judges will have to get down on their knees before the Supervisors for their pay, which he knows is not so. The first part of this section distinctly says that no Judge's salary shall be raised or lowered after he is elected. Now, how can any gentleman reason that any Judge will apply to the Board of Supervisors to have his salary raised? Another point that the gentleman tries to make is that the Board might not meet. Now, the vote on this Constitution will occur about the first week in May. The election will not occur till September, and there is no Board of Supervisors in this State that will not meet within that time. Now, sir, I offer this amendment in good faith, and I hope it will be adopted.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line three, strike out the words 'from the State treasury'; in line five, after the word 'elected,' insert 'the salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be paid by the State. One half of the salary of each Superior Court Judge shall be paid by the State, the other half thereof shall be paid by the county for which he is elected.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire merely to explain this amendment, that gentlemen may understand that they are voting simply upon one proposition, namely: whether the State shall pay half the salaries and the county half. If this section is adopted in this way it will stand thus: that the Judges of San Francisco will receive a salary of four thousand five hundred dollars, and the other Judges a salary of three thousand five hundred dollars each; that is, that the State will have to pay for the first class, two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars each, and the counties, two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars each. As to the others, the State will pay one thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars and the counties the balance. This amendment presents the single proposition that the State shall pay half and the county half. It is unnecessary to repeat the arguments which have been made here.

MR. EAGON. I raise the point of order, that the proposition presented in this amendment has already been voted down in the amendment of Judge Campbell.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is overruled; it is a different proposition.

MR. EDGERTON. I desire to ask the gentleman if it is not true that many of the counties are so badly in debt that the Judges would have to take their pay in scrip, so far as that portion is concerned, which would greatly depreciate their salaries?

MR. McCALLUM. The Judiciary Committee, of which the gentleman is a member, reported for those counties at two thousand dollars. If my proposition is adopted they will get one thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars from the State.

MR. EDGERTON. My proposition is that there will be no uniformity at all. Some of these smaller counties will pay their share in depreciated scrip, while others will pay in money. Perhaps some of them will get fifty cents on the dollar, and some thirty cents. Now, sir, I am opposed to subjecting the judicial officers of this State to any such discount upon their salaries.

MR. McCALLUM. I will take that as the gentleman's speech.

MR. EDGERTON. Is it not true that this amendment will relieve your county to a very great extent?

MR. McCALLUM. Alameda has two Judges, at an expense of nine thousand dollars to the State. Under this amendment the State would pay four thousand five hundred dollars, and the county four thousand five hundred dollars. My judgment is that the county would pay as much in the one case as in the other. If this amendment is adopted it will have a great influence in assisting us to arrive at a conclusion as to the proper number of Judges. It is the only hope which I have of ever getting through with our work.

MR. EDGERTON. As far as getting through is concerned, I am ready to support a motion to adjourn sine die now; but I am not going to support an amendment which subjects judicial officers to any such proceeding as this.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Howard, Smith of Fourth District, Waters, and Cross.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Lost.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: As far as the remarks of the gentleman go with regard to depreciated county scrip, it has no reference to this question at all. If the gentleman can name a county in this State where the County Judge is not satisfied with his position, I would like to have him name one. The same fund that pays the County Judge, and other county officers, will pay that portion of the salary of the Superior Judge in this case. I don't know why these men who are elected Superior Judges should be entitled to any superior rights over all other officers, over the Legislature, and even over this Convention. Why should there be a special privilege for these men? Why should it be paid out of the State treasury when the other county officers are paid out of the county treasury? We don't propose to import men from San Francisco and Sacramento for these positions. In order to prevent their hanging about the Legislature for an increase of pay, we propose to say that the counties shall pay a portion. It is not a question of the benefit of localities. I have not come here to legislate in the interest of localities, but in the interest of the people of the whole State. We, of El Dorado County, don't ask the State to pay for our Judges. The other counties don't ask it. I believe it is in the interest of a good judicial system, and in the interest of good Government, that the State shall pay a portion and the counties a portion, so that questions will not constantly rise, so that conflicts will not constantly occur, in relation to the raising of Courts to a higher grade. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

MR. EDGERTON. This proposition, if adopted, leaves the question open as to how these Judges are to be paid, and it leaves the question open as to whether the Legislature may increase or diminish salaries. Now, the gentleman from El Dorado represents a county whose scrip is largely depreciated.

MR. LARKIN. It pays the officers in cash.

MR. EDGERTON. It is not ready to pay its debts. The Supervisors skulk into their room at night so as to avoid paying their just debts, and they may do it again. It is surprising to me that a gentleman who represents such a county as that should not be willing to have these Judges paid by the State, as they have a right to be, instead of having them paid in county scrip worth perhaps twenty cents on the dollar.

REMARKS OF MR. EAGON.

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: I am surprised at Mr. Larkin. I agree entirely with the gentleman from Sacramento in regard to this matter. Now, sir, we do not hear these objections made by gentlemen from San Francisco. The people of that city, by their representatives on this floor, do not object to these salaries being paid by the State. But we find men from the mountain counties, from the small counties of this State, where the population is run down, where the counties are burdened with debt and high taxes, endeavoring to fasten upon their own people an additional burden which the State ought to bear, and is perfectly willing to bear. San Francisco and other wealthy counties are perfectly willing to relieve us of a portion of the burden which we are so ill able to bear, and why should any reasonable man turn his back on his own county and reject the offer.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, McCallum, Brown, Dudley of Solano, and Doyle.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services or compensation, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected: During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constition, the annual salary of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be six thousand dollars each, payable quarterly out of the State treasury. Until otherwise changed by the Legislature, the Superior Judges shall be divided into three classes, at the following annual salaries, payable quarterly, that is to say: To the first class, five thousand dollars; to the second class, four thousand dollars; to the third class, three thousand dollars.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I have presented this amendment in this shape for the purpose of getting the question divided. In the first place, it will enable gentlemen to vote and fix salaries for the different classes distinct and separate from the counties. In that way they can vote upon the abstract question: What shall the salaries be? In a subsequent section we can take and classify the counties. I believe in that way we can arrive at a conclusion. I believe it is better to fix salaries in this way, independent of any consideration of what counties are to be in certain classes.

MR. LARKIN. I am in favor of that amendment.

MR. MCCALLUM. I raise the point of order, that the amendment proposes to strike out what the Convention has already inserted, namely: that half the salary of the Judge shall be paid by the county, and half by the State. This amendment says they shall be paid out of the State treasury.

THE PRESIDENT. The point is not well taken. He moves to strike out the words "with others."

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: When this report was before the Committee of the Whole, while it did not entirely meet my views, still, it was indorsed by such eminent men, that I did not then offer any opposition to it. But, sir, the farther I look into it, the more I hear about it, the more I am satisfied this whole scheme is worse than the old system. This scheme might do very well in other States; it might do in a State that has not the area of territory that we have, with a larger population; in a State where the people are divided pretty nearly evenly in the counties, and where at least each county can afford to support one Judge. But we have an ahomalous condition of things here. We have a large territory with a small population. Now, under the present system, these small counties can employ County Judges to do their County Court business at a small salary. Now we are to have a system by which every county in the State is to have a Superior Judge, no matter how small the county. You cannot get them for small salaries, because they are debarred from all other business. It is said that the Supreme Court, being divided into two branches, can do more business. I doubt it very much. I am opposed to the whole thing, and if if be in order, I move that this report be rereferred to the committee, with instructions to strike out and insert the judiciary system of the present Constitution.

MR. VAN DYKE. I hope the Chairman of the committee will accept an amendment, to the effect that the State pay half and the county half, inasmuch as that seems to be the wish of the Convention. It will only open that controversy again if it is not done.

MR. WILSON, of First District. I had drawn that amendment before that last vote was taken. If that is the sentiment of the Convention I have no objection to changing it.

MR. VAN DYKE. It is the sentiment of the Convention, two to one.

THE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection the gentleman will have leave to amend the proposition.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. It is all wrong. It amounts to taking care of San Francisco, and no one else.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. President: I offer an amendment which I wish to have read, for information.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen, by striking out all after the words 'salary of,' in line eight, and inserting 'three thousand dollars each, payable quarterly, except the Judges of the City and County of San Francisco, and the County of Alameda, which shall receive four thousand five hundred dollars each; provided, that the salaries paid to these Judges, two thirds shall be paid out of the State treasury, and one third shall be paid by the counties.'"

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: Will a notice to reconsider be in order?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir.

MR. BIGGS. I hope the amendment will not pass, for it is well known that the interior counties are not able to pay half the salary of their Superior Judges. I hope the amendment will not pass. I am surprised at the gentleman accepting such a proposition. I voted aye, in order to move a reconsideration.

MR. WILSON. Here is another gentleman voted aye, because you did.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I wish to make an inquiry. When will it be in order to move to strike out this salmagundi?

THE PRESIDENT. Which salmagundi? [Laughter.]

MR. HOWARD. This entire article.

THE PRESIDENT. I do not think it will be in order at all.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I would inquire if, after we adopt this amendment, it will be in order to adopt further amendments?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir.

MR. STEDMAN. Well, then, sir, I desire to call the attention of this Convention to the fact that this amendment proposes to pay first-class Judges five thousand dollars. I certainly believe that is too much, and in the interest of the overburdened taxpayers, I object to it, and protest against it. I also desire to call attention to the fact that second-class Judges are to be paid four thousand dollars. I protest against that. It proposes to pay third-class Judges three thousand dollars, and that is also too much. If we adopt the amendment, the system will cost a great deal more than that proposed by the Committee of the Whole.

SPEECH OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I had made up my mind that I would listen to the lawyers on this subject, and not say a word. But it has assumed an aspect that compels me to speak, sir. The proposition of the gentleman from San Francisco is utterly inadmissible. I would say to the gentleman from Los Angeles that I do not propose to starve or destroy the judiciary. On the contrary, I desire to promote its efficiency, its honesty, its integrity. But it does not follow because I desire to do this, that I shall favor a proposition to load down the taxpayers of California beyond the point necessary to be done. Now let us see what the proposition amounts to. The gentleman proposes three thousand dollars a year for first class Judges. Take the county of Alpine. It pays its County Judge now one thousand dollars a year. Who can dispute the fact that he is a good, honest, efficient County Judge? Under this provision, in addition to that and the one thousand five hundred dollars paid by the State, the people of that county would have to contribute five hundred dollars besides, perhaps to the very same gentleman. What will the people say to that? I leave gentlemen to infer. Take other counties, while the objection might not be so clear, yet I hold that it is not in accordance with reason and justice. The gentlemen have an overweening desire to uphold the dignity and honor of their profession. While I can excuse them for such a laudable desire, yet I feel impelled to call upon them to consider the necessities and rights of other men as well as themselves. Now, is it true that it is necessary for the taxridden people of California to pay from three thousand to five thousand dollars a year for these places? I deny it. It is true that in the great cities there are eminent gentlemen of the profession who can command such salaries, but they are the exception. But it is also true that many of our best Judges are incompetent to earn such salaries at the bar. I do not desire to drag the profession down, nor do I want to starve the Judges out, nor impair the efficiency and honor of the Courts. I desire no such thing. Nor do the taxpayers desire any such thing. All they desire is that we shall pay a fair price for fair services rendered. The whole thing resolves itself now into one of values. Will the services of the men who are to be elected to these places be worth more than that in the market? It is time that we realized that the flush times of 'forty-nine have passed, and lawyers must come down off their high horses as the rest of the people have had to do. The people of California are really no better off to-day than the people of the other States, and the Judges are paid no such prices there, as the gentlemen well know. Considerations of principle, as well as considerations of economy, demand that these salaries shall be cut down.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Stedman, West, Evey, Nason, and Wilson of Tehama.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

Hale,

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute after the word 'each,' in seventh line, 'until otherwise provided by the Legislature, the Superior Court Judges shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars each, payable quarterly, except the Judges of the City and County of San Francisco, and the Counties of Alameda, Butte, Colusa, Contra Costa, Amador, Fresno, Kern, Los Angeles, Monterey, Napa, Nevada, Placer, Sacramento, Santa Clara, Stanislaus, San Joaquin, Solano, Sonoma, Yolo, Yuba and Sutter combined, which counties shall receive an annual salary of four thousand dollars each, payable quarterly.'"

REMARKS OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: In offering that amendment, I shall not attempt to make a speech, because there has been a good deal of talk already. I only make this apology for it. It reduces the expenses about six thousand dollars below the present measure. According to that amendment the expenses will be two hundred and seventy-four thousand dollars annually. The present expense is two hundred and eighty thousand dollars. The classification of the counties is based upon the assessed value of their property and their representation combined. I have compiled the statistics very carefully, and I think it is right.

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: That amendment provides, like nearly all the rest, that the salaries shall be payable quarterly. The salaries have heretofore been payable monthly, and I can see no reason why they should not in the future be paid monthly instead of quarterly. A Judge needs money to live on the same as the rest of us, and why should he be compelled to wait three months when the money is lying idle in the vaults. I suggest to the gentleman that he make the amendment read monthly instead of quarterly. It seems to me that this will be sanctioned by the common sense of the Convention.

MR. WELLER. I will accept the amendment.

MR. STEDMAN. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Weller.

Lost.

NOTICE.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the McCallum amendment to section seventeen of the amended report of the Committee on Judiciary was passed. Also, the concurrence of and adoption of section seventeen by this Convention.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment or substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court and the Judges of the Superior Courts shall severally at stated times, during their continuance in office, receive from the State treasury for their services, a compensation which shall not be increased nor diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constitution the annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be six thousand dollars each, to be paid monthly out of the State treasury. The Superior Judges shall be divided into three classes at the following salaries, payable quarterly, that is to say: to the first class, four thousand dollars; to the second class, three thousand dollars, and to the third class, two thousand dollars; provided, that half the salary of the Superior Judges shall be paid by the State, and the other half thereof shall be paid by the county."

MR. VAN DYKE. That provides, in the first place, for paying these salaries out of the State treasury.

MR. HUESTIS. That is a mistake in correcting it. I can obviate that.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. If you obviate that I shall vote against it.

MR. HUESTIS. All right; everything goes. Let it stand.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Huestis.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. West, Wyatt, Huestis, Kelly, and Howard.

MR. HUESTIS [pending roll call.] Mr. President: It is evident that there is a mistake in the wording, and I ask leave to withdraw it.

Leave was granted.

MR. HARVEY. Mr. President: I offer an amendment by way of substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive from the State treasury, for their services, a compensation, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. The annual salaries of the Justices first elected under this Constitution shall be six thousand dollars each. The Judges of the Superior Courts, until classified by the Legislature, are hereby classified as follows: Those of counties containing twenty thousand inhabitants or over, shall constitute the first class; those of counties containing eight thousand inhabitants and under twenty thousand, shall constitute the second class; and of all counties containing less than eight thousand inhabitants, shall constitute the third class. The annual salaries of the Judges of the Superior Courts shall be as follows: The counties of the first class, four thousand dollars each; for counties of the second class, three thousand dollars each; for counties of the third class, two thousand dollars each; and such salaries shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected, which compensation shall be paid at stated times during their continuance in office, as follows: two thousand dollars out of the State treasury, and the remainder out of the treasuries of their respective counties. The Legislature may by law provide for the consolidation of counties for judicial purposes, and fix the compensation of the Judges of such counties."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Harvey.

SPEECH OF MR. HARVEY.

MR. HARVEY. Mr. President: It may seem somewhat foolish in me to offer this amendment. I have tried for some time to get the floor in order to give it a chance to be voted down. In support of this amendment I wish to say a few words. I contend that in many respects this amendment is better than the one which preceded it. It provides first for the proper classification of the counties. The classification provided here is the same now fixed by law, which has been in force ever since the adoption of the Codes. There is uniformity as well as economy. It decreases the amount of pay; and right here let me say that we seem to have forgotten the old war cry of economy, which echoed through this hall a few weeks ago, and I am alluding to the action of this Convention when the article on Executive department was under consideration. Then three thousand dollars was supposed to be sufficient for the Secretary of State; three thousand dollars was deemed sufficient for the State Controller. I cannot see why it will not apply just as well to the Judges. Take the office of Controller. Here is my friend Stedman, do you suppose he would consent to take that office for three thousand dollars a year? Not much. Again, this amendment leaves the question flexible for the next Legislature to act upon. It also relieves the poor counties from a great deal of responsibility. It provides that Judges from the third class shall receive their entire salary from the State treasury, and I say that is right. The last clause, that the Legislature may provide for the consolidation of counties, I contend is a very necessary provision. It will often become necessary to consolidate counties for judicial purposes. I have seen this system tried in the State of Nevada, and they were forced to that conclusion. When the Constitution of that State was first framed it provided that each county should form a judicial district. That system was soon changed, counties of small business and population were consolidated, and a large amount was thus saved.

Now, I wish to call attention to another thing. I took occasion yesterday to look over the cases and examine as regards the salaries paid to Judges. In the twenty-second district, composed of the counties of Mendocino, Sonoma, and Marin, I find that the salary of the Judge is five thousand dollars. The salary of the County Judge of Mendocino, is one thousand five hundred dollars; Sonoma, three thousand dollars; and Marin, one thousand eight hundred dollars. Total for County Judges, six thousand three hundred dollars. Total amount, eleven thousand three hundred dollars. But we as economists have provided for giving Sonoma County nine thousand dollars for salaries alone. Mendocino and Marin three thousand five hundred dollars each, making sixteen thousand dollars. Here is an increase in these three counties of four thousand seven hundred dollars. And take the matter nearer home, in my own district, composed of Napa, Lake, and Solano. The District Judge gets five thousand dollars. The County Judge of Napa, gets one thousand eight hundred dollars; Lake, one thousand dollars; and Solano, two thousand dollars; making four thousand eight hundred dollars, or nine thousand eight hundred dollars altogether per annum.

Digitized by Google

But we propose here to give each one of these counties a Judge at three thousand five hundred dollars, making a total salary of ten thousand five hundred dollars, or an increase of seven hundred dollars. Now, sir, I hope the Convention will give this amendment due consideration before voting on it. I would like to hear from some of the members of the legal profession. While I claim to be a lawyer, I am not lawyer enough to hurt, and there may be others in the same fix.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I believe this amendment meets the case. I know that our delegation are in favor of it. I believe it contains a proper classification, and I know that the salaries are high enough, and I hope it will be adopted.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. WATERS. This question has been discussed over and over, forty or fifty times, and I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Larkin, Freeman, Tully, and Holmes.

Carried; by a vote of 65 ayes to 35 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Harvey, which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive from the State treasury for their services a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have elected. The annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court first elected under this Constitution shall be six thousand dollars each. The Judges of the Superior Court, until classified by the Legislature, shall be classified as follows: Those counties containing twenty thousand inhabitants or over shall constitute the first class, those counties containing eight thousand inhabitants and under twenty thousand shall constitute the second class, and all counties containing less than eight thousand inhabitants shall constitute the third class. The annual salaries of said Judges shall be as follows: For counties of the first class, four thousand dollars each; for counties of the second class, three thousand dollars each; for counties of third class, two thousand dollars each; and such salaries shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected, said compensation payable at stated times during their continuance in office, two thousand dollars thereof out of the State treasury, and the remainder out of the treasuries of their respective counties. The Legislature may by law provide for the consolidation of counties for judicial purposes, and fix the compensation of the Judges for such counties."

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Brown, Caples, Larkin, Bell, and White.

JUDGES INELIGIBLE TO OTHER OFFICES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section eighteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 18. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall be ineligible to any other office or public employment than a judicial office or employment, during the term for which they shall have been elected."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

CHARGING JURIES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section nineteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 19. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may, except in criminal prosecutions for libel, state the testimony and declare the law."

MR. BARBOUR. I move that the section be stricken out.

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order. The same object will be accomplished by refusing to concur.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: That section is entirely unnecessary, and will cause a great deal of trouble at one time or another. I find in no other Constitution, any attempt to control this matter. If the section is examined, it will be found that it may result in extreme confusion and unnecessary conflicts between the Court and attorneys, in regard to charging juries. It provides that the Court may not charge the jury upon matters of fact, but may state the testimony. Now, there is a partial contradiction of terms. It is not necessary to state the testimony, because all the Courts are now provided with reporters, who take down the testimony in shorthand. The statement of the testimony made by the Judge may not agree with the reporter's notes, and if this provision remains, his statement would have to prevail over the writer's notes, therefore I hope the Convention will refuse to concur.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring.

The Convention refused to concur.

REPORTER OF DECISIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 21. The Justices shall appoint a Reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court, who shall hold his office and be removable at their pleasure. He shall receive an annual salary not to exceed twenty-five hundred dollars, payable quarterly."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'quarterly,' and insert the word 'monthly.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the section as amended.

Adopted.

JUDGES PROHIBITED FROM PRACTICING LAW.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 22. No Judge of a Court of record shall practice law in any Court of this State during his continuance in office."

The amendment of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section twenty-three. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 23. A grand jury shall be composed of twelve jurors, and a concurrence of nine shall be necessary to the making of a presentment or the finding of an indictment."

The action of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR JUDGES.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 24. No one shall be eligible to the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, or to the office of Judge of a Superior Court, unless he shall have been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State."

MR. McCOY. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out the words, 'or to the office of Judge of a Superior Court.'"

MR. McCOY. The reason I offer this is that in some counties they have no lawyers eligible to the office under this provision.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I shall support the amendment of the gentleman for the reason that, in a large number of counties in this State, it virtually declares who shall be Superior Judge. In quite a number of counties there is not to-day anybody eligible under this provision to the office of Superior Judge. I understand that in the County of Amador there is but one. I know of but two in El Dorado. There are many counties in this State where men are practicing law, who might be able to be admitted, but are not, and it is too far to go for that especial purpose. I believe that men who are holding the position of County Judge in many counties, are not eligible under this provision. I believe the people are the best judges as to the qualifications of their officers.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not prevail. I think we should have some protection against getting men upon the bench who are not qualified to discharge the duties. Men may contrive to get on the party tickets who are wholly unqualified for the place. I think the salaries are high enough, so that the best men in the county can afford to go on the bench—men of talent and ability. I think we should have some clause that will prevent scheming politicians from foisting men on the bench who are not fit for the place. If there are men who are qualified, but have not been admitted, they can easily go before the Supreme Court and be admitted; and if they cannot pass the examination they have no business on the bench. I hope, therefore, that the amendment will not prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I do not see why this amendment should prevail. Every school teacher in the State has to be examined; every carpenter has to learn a trade; every blacksmith has to serve an apprenticeship before he can work; then why should these men be permitted to occupy these important positions, where life and property are entrusted in their keeping, unless they have learned their business. Let me say further, that under this Constitution the Superior Judges of the State will have to pass upon questions that will necessarily go to the Supreme Court for its consideration. All important questions affecting life and property will have to go there, and I hope we will throw around that office safeguards that are necessary to secure able and competent men. If there are counties where none of the attorneys have been admitted, let them do as other attorneys have done, go to the Supreme Court and be examined. I hope that the motion to strike out will not prevail.

MR. TINNIN. I hope it will be adopted. The section as it stands now is nothing but a premium on carpet-baggers. In many counties there are eminent lawyers who are well qualified to discharge the duties, who do not deem it proper to come to Sacramento to be examined for admission to the Supreme Court. If the people of the counties are satisfied, I don't see why this Convention should object to it. I am opposed to this system of close corporations.

MR. HOWARD. If it were in order, I would move to strike out the word "lawyer," and insert "cobbler."

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: Allow me to say one word in reply to the gentleman from Trinity. If there is any lawyer who aspires to the position of Superior Judge, if he cannot pass an examination before the Supreme Court, he is not fit for the position. I agree with the gentleman from Santa Cruz on that point. I do not suppose the gentleman would be willing to trust his life in the hands of a doctor unless he was a regularly licensed physician. I believe the dignity of the profession requires that every man should be admitted. If he is not competent to pass that examination, he is not fit to become a Superior Judge. I hope this motion will be voted down. The gentleman says, if the people want to elect an incompetent man, that is their look out, and we have nothing to do with it. I say not. It is a matter in which every citizen of this State is interested. He is paid out of the State treasury, in part, and every citizen in this State has a right to go into that Court and have his claim settled. It is not confined to the immediate county. It is an outrage upon decency to strike out this qualification.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I do not expect to be a candidate for Superior Judge; therefore, I have no personal interest in this matter. But from my personal experience, I will say that it would be very injudicious to strike out these words. In the first place, there is no exclusive privilege granted, for there is no member of the community who cannot become a licensed lawyer if he choose to turn his attention that way; therefore, these positions are open to the whole State. But, before a man should be allowed to occupy the position, he should have devoted himself to the profession, and have risen, as other men have, to the proper point. Suppose you allow any citizen in the county to become a Judge. Why, it would not be whether he is the best qualified man for the place, but rather, whether he is the most skillful politician. Now, I don't know whether my friend Tinnin is a lawyer or not, but he is a popular politician, and if he wanted the Judgeship he could get it, whether qualified for the position or not. Now, I would ask him him, whether, when he goes to build a bridge, he takes an engineer or not? If you go into a mining enterprise, would you employ a competent miner or not? If you are going to build a house, would you hire a carpenter, or somebody who knows nothing about it? The man who occupies the position of Superior Judge has civil cases and criminal cases to try. He may have very important cases with regard to private property. He may decide such a case, and it will be reversed. He decides it again, and it is reversed again; because he makes some error for want of knowledge. A man may be on trial for his life. It is a very serious matter, and a man should know something of criminal law in order to deal out justice. Why not take men who are versed in the law, instead of men who know nothing about it? It is a question too plain for argument.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Carried, and the section concurred in.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I wish to offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. No Judge of a Superior Court, nor of the Supreme Court, shall, after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and eighty, be allowed to draw or receive his monthly salary unless he shall take and subscribe an oath, before the disbursing officer, that no cause in their respective Courts remain undecided that has been submitted for decision for the period of sixty days."

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I offer that in the interest of economy, and to correct an evil which has been felt all over this State. It has been the custom for Courts to keep cases under advisement as long as two years at a time. This section is right, and the people demand it.

MR. TULLY. Suppose the Judge gets sick.

MR. BIGGS. Then he don't draw any pay.

MR. MORELAND. Do you want every Judge in this State to come up and take an oath?

MR. BIGGS. That has been adopted in many of the States. It is right. It is a great protection. I am willing to make it three months. But there ought to be some limit. As it is now there is no remedy whatever.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Suppose he has it in hand sixty days and does not yet understand it?

MR. BIGGS. Then he had better resign, if he cannot understand it in sixty days.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I was requested by one of the oldest Judges of San Francisco to offer just such a proposition as this. A provision of this character is very desirable in this Constitution, as it gives to all litigants the right to a speedy decision. This will be in the interest of poor litigants. Rich litigants can stand the delay, but it is a great hardship on poor men. The demand for a provision of this character is very general, and I hope it will be adopted. It is a notorious fact that some of the Judges have held their decisions for years.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I offered an amendment upon this subject which will be found in the Journal. It properly belongs to article three of the Constitution, under the head of distribution of powers. It provided that the Legislature might prescribe conditions as to the time in which cases should be decided. I thoroughly sympathize with the object which the gentleman has in view, though I do not believe this is the place for it. I don't think it is within the dignity of the Constitution to express it in that manner. It does not appear in any of the other Constitutions in that shape. It belongs in article three of the Constitution.

MR. ESTEE. Suppose the Judge is sick?

MR. McCALLUM. My amendment simply provides that the Legislature may prescribe conditions upon which cases shall be decided within a limited period of time. It leaves it to the Legislature. The details of the matter should be left to the Legislature.

MR. EDGERTON. Suppose the Judge is sick three years. I suppose the theory of this proposed section is that the interests of the public demand it, and if he is sick three months or five months, and the public interests are suffering, that he ought to resign. I know there has been an immense amount of oppression practiced, involving an outrageous delay of justice. It has prevailed to a most extraordinary extent all over the State. It seems to me this is the proper place for a provision of this kind. There ought to be something of the kind, but whether sixty, or ninety, or one hundred days, I cannot say. I would ask the gentleman to make it one hundred, or one hundred and twenty days.

MR. BIGGS. I have made it ninety days.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. West, Wyatt, Sweasey, and Lampson.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the proposed new section offered by the gentleman from Butte, Mr. Biggs.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Biggs, Grace, Brown, Doyle, and White.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: Before the article is engrossed, I wish to offer an amendment to section seventeen. It is the same amendment which I offered in Committee of the Whole.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

MR. McCALLUM. Not in order?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir; not in order. The previous question was ordered, and it cannot be amended now.

MR. McCALLUM. The previous question was not on that section at all.

MR. WEST. Do I understand the Chair to decide that the original section seventeen cannot now be amended?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair so decides.

MR. WEST. Then I hope the article will be voted down.

NOTICE.

MR. KEYES. I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to adopt the amendment offered by Mr. McCoy to section twenty-four; also, the vote by which the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-four was adopted.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I now move to strike out section nineteen.

MR. WEST. I move the Convention do now adjourn.

No second.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to strike out section nineteen.

MR. McCALLUM. That section as it now reads is the section as it now stands in the present Constitution. I don't believe it is safe to strike it out.

MR. EDGERTON. If that is stricken out the old common law rule will prevail, that Judges may charge the jury and state the facts. That is the effect of it.

MR. McCALLUM. That is the Constitution as it now stands.

MR. EDGERTON. It would give the Judge arbitrary power over the jury as to facts or anything else.

MR. McCALLUM. It has stood in this State for twenty-nine years.

MR. SHAFTER. I hope we will retain that section.

MR. BARBOUR. I suppose gentlemen understand what they are doing, but, in my opinion, in order to make the thing harmonious, and avoid confusion and conflicts between the Court and the attorneys, it will be necessary to strike it out.

MR. WINANS. I move we do now adjourn. It is too late to discuss it now.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard of Los Angeles, McCallum, Nelson, Gorman, and West.

The roll was called, and the motion lost by the following vote:

MR. WILSON, of First District. I hope it will not be stricken out.

MR. CAMPBELL. I give notice that to-morrow I will move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole to section nineteen.

MR. VAN DYKE. I give notice that I will to-morrow move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the amendment to section seventeen.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section sixteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section fifteen by striking out, after the word 'except,' in first line, the following words: 'Justices of the Peace.'"

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: The object of this is to place all judicial officers upon an equality. It is to put Justices of the Peace upon salary. This is one of the most important reforms we can adopt, as gentlemen will find out. It is the same amendment which I suggested in Committee of the Whole.

MR. TINNIN. I move to adjourn.

MEMORIAL TO CONGRESS.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I call for the reading of the special order.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, A certain bill is now pending before Congress, purporting to grant forty-five thousand acres of land to the University of California, in excess of the one hundred and fifty thousand acres granted to endow a College of Agriculture; and whereas, the Regents, members of this Convention, assert that the Regents have asked for the passage of no such bill, and that it is neither directly nor indirectly in the interest of the University; and whereas, grants of land made in the manner proposed by said bill only afford land monopolists opportunities to rob the public domain of lands which ought to be granted only to actual settlers and in limited quantities; therefore,

Resolved, By the Constitutional Convention of the State of California, now in session, that Congress be and is hereby respectfully but earnestly memorialized to refuse to pass said bill, to the end that whatever remains of the public domain may be retained for the use of those who will settle upon and improve it.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed, and a copy, signed by the President and Secretary, be sent without delay, to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: But few words are necessary in explanation of these resolutions and the reasons why they should pass. Under Act of Congress, July, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, the State became entitled to one hundred and fifty thousand acres of land, for the benefit of a college of agriculture and mechanic art. How that grant became transferred to the University of California it is not necessary here to relate, only to prove the fact that it was done. Nearly all of that grant has been listed to the State of California, and by the Regents, sold. How much more than the one hundred and fifty thousand acres has been disposed of by the University I am not prepared to say, but that the University has claimed nearly thirty-nine thousand acres in excess of the one hundred and fifty thousand acres granted, appears by the official letter of the Hon. James A. Williamson, Commissioner of the General Land Office, to the Register of the Land Office, in San Francisco, September twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight. That letter was in reply to the inquiries by the Register of the Land Office at San Francisco. From this it appears that an application had been made to the Register at the Land Office, at San Francisco, and by him rejected. It was then referred to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and this letter was in reply. Two points were raised, one was in relation to the compliance or non-compliance with the Act of Congress, and the other was in relation to the fact that the State had already applied for an amount largely in excess of the grant. The first point was overruled, and the second point was considered well taken, and the action of the Register sustained in the following words:

> There is, however, another good reason for the rejection of these applications, namely: That the State has already selected lands largely in excess of the amount to which she is entitled by law. From an examination of the list now on file in this office, it is found that there have already been selected in satisfaction of this grant one hundred and eighty-eight thousand seven hundred and eighty acres and seventy-three one hundredths, or thirty-eight thousand seven hundred and eighty and seventy-three one hundredths acres in excess of the amount to which the State is entitled by law. On this ground the said applications should be and the same are hereby rejected.
> J. A. WILLIAMSON, Commissioner.

That letter was dated September twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, the day on which this Convention met. That is all the official information we have concerning the matter. As I before remarked, how much land the Regents of the University have sold I do not know. But here it officially appears that the Regents have made application for nearly thirty-nine thousand acres in excess of the grant. The next that appears concerning this matter, so far as my information goes, is in the following telegram:

> WASHINGTON, January 27th.—The bill for the relief of the California State University, introduced to-day by Booth in the Senate and Davis in the House, is a measure presented at the request of the University, and with the approval of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, which, in brief, allows the University, through the State authorities, to surrender to the United States the lands hitherto selected and disposed of by the University Regents, but thrown back on their hands by the purchasers; and provides for giving them a title to an equal number of acres out of the subsequent selections in excess of the total to which the University was entitled under the Agricultural College grant. James W. Shanklin, the University Land Agent, is here to promote the passage of this bill.

There are two bills now pending before Congress for the relief of the University. One is entitled the Booth bill, and the other is entitled the Davis bill. What the Booth bill is for, it is not necessary here to inquire. The Davis bill is for the purpose of granting to the University forty-five thousand acres of land in excess of the grant of one hundred and fifty thousand acres, so far as our information goes. That bill, which, as it is here related, was introduced in the Senate by Booth and in the House by Davis on the same day, is the Davis bill, and is the bill at which these resolutions are aimed. It is hardly necessary to speculate upon the reasons which induced the Commissioner of the Land Office to change his opinion, and after rejecting the claim of the State to this thirty-nine thousand acres in excess of the grant, to recommend the passage of this bill before Congress. What his reasons are I do not know. I did not know until very recently that the Regents were asking for the passage of this Davis bill. I understand now that the Regents disclaim any relation to that bill at all; disclaim any paternity of it, or any wish that it should pass. I am glad to ascertain that that is the fact, but it does seem to me that their opposition to the bill, feeble as it is, comes at a very late day. It is a pertinent inquiry, when it appears by the report of the Surveyor-General, made to this body early in the session—on October twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight—that there had been actually listed to the State for the University one hundred and forty thousand seven hundred and fifty-nine and ninety-two one hundredths acres. By the official letter of the Commissioner of the Land Office, it appears that the Regents have already selected thirty-eight thousand seven hundred and eighty and seventy-three one hundredths, or nearly thirty-nine thousand acres, in excess of the grant to which the State is entitled. On this point there are conflicting statements likewise. Mr. A. S. Hallidie, who was but recently ex officio one of the Regents, makes public a letter, under date of January twenty-fourth, in which he states that there is but five thousand seven hundred and nine acres not listed or sold on account of Congressional Act, so there is a discrepancy between the report of the Surveyor-General and the statement of Mr. Hallidie, one of the Regents. It would appear from one that there is about nine thousand acres yet remaining, and from the other but about five thousand. However that may be, it is immaterial to the issue presented by these resolutions. These resolutions are aimed at the bill which seeks to grant forty-five thousand acres in excess of the one hundred and fifty thousand acre grant. It is that against which these resolutions protest. I am in favor of these resolutions, and opposed to the granting of any special grant to the University, or to any other purpose under the sun. Not that I have any opposition towards the University——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's ten minutes have expired.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I think it would have been more manly, and I am sure it would have been more definite, if the gentleman had distinctly arraigned the Regents for malfeasance, or misfeasance, or wrong in some shape or other, than to have merely indulged in incidental insinuations. The gentleman says that their opposition to this bill comes with a feeble effort even at this late day. Their opposition to the bill came when they were asked to present it, or take means for its presentation to Congress. There are two bills in Congress. One is the Booth bill, and that the Regents approve. That was presented at their instance, and that means simply this: that, whereas, in the first place, they made a selection of lands for themselves, to the extent of a large number of acres under the administration of their first land agent, and these lands proved to be entirely worthless, and unreceivable for the purposes of the grant; and, whereas, they had not received, nor been enabled to enjoy the fruits of the one hundred and fifty thousand acres, but fell short to the extent of over twenty thousand acres of fruition of that grant, they therefore appealed to Congress to aid them and to give them the benefit that the grant was designed to give, but of which they had been deprived by unaccountable circumstances, involving no wrong on their part. That is the Booth bill. It is to give them the amount of land that they should have. Although they received applications for a larger amount than one hundred and fifty thousand acres, yet that course was necessary in the pursuit of their business; because, on the one hand the applicants took the chances of coming within the one hundred and fifty thousand acres; and on the other hand, the necessity of making the application arose, because, if they had waited until they could get the one hundred and fifty thousand acres, years upon years would have elapsed before they could have realized the results of their sales. Their business was conducted upon a strictly business plan, and as a financial scheme, involving the highest degree of merit and success. As regards the other bill, in regard to which our opposition comes with a feeble effort at this late day, the bill itself is a recent creation of men who are seeking to use the University as a means to accomplish private ends, and the gentleman who challenged us as having made a feeble effort at a late day had just as much opportunity to learn about the bill as we had, and knows just as much about it. The bill itself is of recent origin, and it is something of which we have nothing to do. We have no lot nor part in the matter. The men who are engineering that bill applied to the Regents to give an acquiescence, and the Regents refused to act. The men then went forward—among them one Nourse—in their own private interests, and introduced the bill. The gentleman who institutes this investigation declares that the Regents, members of this Convention, assert that they have not asked for the passage of this bill. Why, then, if they assert that, and no one asserts to the contrary, does he deal in innuendo and aspersion? Why does he stab in the dark? Why, if he has anything to say against the Regents, does he not come out and point out where they have done wrong? I dislike this method of dealing with questions by innuendo. I dislike insinuations. Now, sir, I have explained this matter as fully as I could, and as fully as we who are Regents here are informed about. We are entitled to our land, and we will get it if Congress chooses to be equitable and just.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I think neither of the gentlemen have hit upon the exact object of the bill. I have occasion to know what the point is. There have been certain surveys made in different parts of the State, and particularly one in Contra Costa County. The survey was made at a time when the settlers and those who had lived there for many years, and owned what they supposed was a grant title, were perfectly uninformed upon the subject. I refer now to the one back of San Pablo. The first thing they knew they found that the survey had been made, and covered a large portion of the land claimed under a grant title by people who had lived there twenty or thirty years. Of course the people went immediately to look into the title, and found it to be covered with University scrip. Now I understand that this bill would validate the claim to that forty-five thousand acres, and with it the Regents of the University, as I understand, have no more to do than a child unborn. If I am correctly informed, and I get my information from people who live on that grant, and whose homesteads will be imperiled, the members of Congress had nothing to do with it. They supposed they were serving the State. But this bill would give validity to that class of scrip, and it would take from these people their homes. Now some of these settlers came to my office last Saturday, when I was down, and presented this matter, and I have stated the facts here as I understand them. I believe, therefore, while I do not think we are here to pass such resolutions, that it would be in the interest of public justice to adopt these resolutions; but for this reason and nothing more. I do not think the Regents know anything about it. They are merely using the Regents' names to pull chestnuts out of the fire, whereby some men can get rich.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I simply want to corroborate what Mr. Estee states to be the fact. I know it to be a fact. I have lived in Contra Costa County many years. My father-in-law was one of the men who live upon that grant. He and his family live upon that land to-day, and have been occupying it for twenty-nine years with many of their neighbors. Last Spring this land was surveyed and they went to the land office to file upon these lands and found that it was located upon by some one scrip. If this forty-five thousand acre bill passes, and this scrip is made good, it will simply rob these people out of their homes. I have talked with Mr. Martin and other Regents, and I am satisfied that they knew nothing about it. It is undoubtedly gotten up by some land sharps to carry out their evil designs. I say it is the duty of this body to enter its protest now and stop this highway robbery. It is what people condemn and have a right to denounce. I denounce it as a high-handed robbery. I can look at it in no other light.

MR. MARTIN, of Alameda. Mr. President: At one of the regular sessions of the Board of Regents this matter was under consideration. It was presented to them formally by Mr. Nourse, who is the author of the bill, and who represents certain parties who want to obtain University titles to cover certain lands. The Regents had this matter under consideration, and after full and mature deliberation, determined not to recognize it in any shape or form. I suppose that Mr. Nourse, or some other gentleman in the interest of the parties that he represented, went to Washington for the purpose of introducing this bill in the name of the University. The University is not responsible for it, does not recognize it in any shape, and will not indorse it. But, Mr. President, there are other matters in connection with this resolution. I do not indorse everything that this memorial contains. There is a bill before Congress in which the University is interested, and this memorial might be taken to refer to that. I am in favor of that bill, not because it would take lands from parties who occupy them—and that cannot be done if the law is complied with—but simply because I am working for the University. I am there for the purpose of administering this trust, or any other of a beneficial character to it, and for that reason I might favor an additional grant of land to the University. But upon this proposition to-day before this Convention, if it comes to a vote, I shall vote in opposition to it because I believe it will prejudice the interests of the University now before Congress, with reference to the lands that properly belong to the University.

The reason why the Regents are before Congress at all is simply this: that from eighteen hundred and sixty-two up to eighteen hundred and sixty-eight not one acre of land was sold that belonged to the University grant. It was in the charge of the State. No application had been made for it. A law was then passed by the Legislature placing this grant in the hands of the Regents for their administration. A law of Congress was made giving them the privilege to go into the railroad belt to locate their lands. In eighteen hundred and sixty-one an Act was passed giving them the privilege to locate upon unreserved lands. It was under these laws that the University effected the sales that they have now already made. I stated before when I addressed this Convention with reference to these lands, that the University had sold actually one hundred and thirty-two thousand one hundred and thirty-one acres of the one hundred and fifty thousand acres granted. I reiterate that as the truth, from official documents furnished me upon this floor. I know this to be correct, sir, and the excess that is spoken of here, of thirty-eight thousand acres, is simply on applications that the Regents granted from time to time. This had to be done in order in any way to get rid of the grant. This grant would not have been sold in fifteen or twenty years, had it not been for the mode and manner of administration adopted by the Regents. I have before me now a statement which will show the manner in which these applications have been made, the number, and the extent of them:

Statement of Applications made by the Regents of the University to United States Registers, from 1868 to August 24, 1878.

YEARS.	Number of acres applied for.	Number of acres rejected.	No. of acres accepted by U. S. Registers.	Number of acres in conflict.	No. of acres no action by U. S. Registers.
1868 and 1869	25,989	16,789	9,200	----------	----------
1870 and 1871	249,025	220,852	27,853	320	----------
1872 and 1873	88,356	19,784	64,448	480	3,644
1874 and 1875	39,897	6,648	33,249	2,210	----------
1876 and 1877	16,358	5,232	11,126	302	----------
1878	16,125	240	560	----------	15,325
Totals	435,750	269,545	146,436	3,312	18,969

I say that when these are closed the University will still have additional lands to sell. It has not sold one acre over its grant. It has twenty thousand acres to sell. The reason why we are before Congress is simply this, that between eighteen hundred and sixty-two and eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, no lands had been sold that belonged to the University grant. The Regents found that the land was being taken up all over the country, and they sent out agents to locate. They located certain lands that are worthless for the purposes of the University. That is why we are before Congress. It is good land for one dollar and twenty-five cents an acre, but it is not good land for six dollars and twenty-five cents an acre. Then we have other lands that have been applied for in regular form. These lands were forfeited by the applicants. We are in the land business, and we simply wish to get rid of these lands. These four hundred and thirty-five thousand acres were applications in contest in the land office, and in some cases other parties got them. That is the position we occupy to-day. In reference to Mr. Williamson, I called upon him when he was here. He did not understand our grant. He knew nothing about it. He simply took such information as he derived from the gentlemen who are now manipulating this matter in Washington. He indorses the proposition that the Regents have before Congress to-day. So far as the Regents are concerned, in reference to this matter, I have a telegram here which was sent to Washington on January twenty-fourth by our land agent, informing Mr. Shanklin that the Regents were in no way committed to the forty-five thousand acre bill. I have also a letter in response to it from Mr. Shanklin, dated January twenty-eighth, and inclosing a copy of the Booth bill, entitled a bill for the relief of the University of California. It was introduced on the twenty-seventh of January, and is numbered one thousand seven hundred and fourteen. [The speaker read the bill.]

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: This matter is of some importance, and it strike me that the preamble as now presented is not expressed exactly as this Convention ought to express it. It seems to me to imply a condemnation, and I think it would be better for this Convention to appoint a committee to report speedily upon this subject a proper memorial and resolution to be sent. I therefore move that the whole subject-matter be referred to a special committee to examine and report to the Convention resolutions to be sent to our Representatives in Congress in such form as the Convention may approve. I request, at the same time, that I may not be on the committee. I do not want to be Chairman of it for I do not understand the subject, and there are gentlemen here better able than myself.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I will second the motion of Mr. Wilson. I do not think the resolution is in the shape that it should be. I will briefly state, so far as I know, that there are two bills, as has been explained, pending in Congress. One is indorsed by the University and the other by private parties, about whom the University Regents know nothing. They have telegraphed that it is not their bill, and they do not wish it passed. That was done some time ago. Now, then, Mr. Martin has a copy of the bill which is indorsed by the Regents. Some years ago, the University employed agents to make selections of land, under this one hundred and fifty thousand acre grant, for the University. They made three selections. Well, it turns out that a great many of these lands are waste lands, good for nothing. The University could not sell them, and the bill that we have sent on and indorsed in Congress, is to release us from these locations. The object is to restore to the public domain the lands which were located by these agents, Colonel Jack Hayes, and others, and that the Regents be allowed to take other lands that they can avail themselves of to a better advantage and sell to a better advantage to the University. Here is a report from the State Land Commissioner of the State of California, in which this language occurs: "The management and disposal of the lands in this grant appear to have been conducted wisely and well, and the Land Agents of the University appear to have no trouble in selling their land at five dollars an acre, during the same period of time in which the State is selling sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections of indemnity land at one dollar and twenty-five cents an acre, and upon the same terms of payment." It goes on to state that the expense attending the sale of her lands is much greater than that of the University. That was a report made to the Legislature by a committee appointed in regard to the matter, and with which the Regents had nothing to do at all. Now, we do not know what this other bill is, we are not in possession of it, and I think it is necessary that there should be a committee appointed to inquire into this matter. Let us have the facts before us before we act.

MR. REYNOLDS. Have you a copy of the Davis bill?

MR. HAGER. We have nothing to do with that at all.

MR. WINANS. The Regents have no copy of it, and have never seen it.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I hope that the motion to postpone the consideration of this subject, or to appoint a committee, will not prevail, unless that committee be instructed to report immediately. We have had committees appointed who have taken weeks, yea, have taken months, and some of them have not reported at all as to the subjects submitted to their consideration. If this matter is to be acted upon at all by this body, it should be acted upon immediately, because Congress may, at any moment, take action in the matter, and then it is too late. If the matter is considered, and the resolutions are passed, whether they be the Reynolds resolutions, or any other resolutions, it will take one week for the resolutions to go from here to the City of Washington. We have no time to lose, sir. Mr. President, these bills, or at least the Nourse bill, is a bill gotten up for the purpose of unsettling land titles in this State, and for the purpose of making rich litigation for somebody. Two bills have been introduced in Congress, one called the Booth bill, and the other called the Nourse bill. The most iniquitous of the two is the Nourse bill; it seeks to obtain forty-five thousand acres of land under the plea that it is for the University of California. It does not stop there. By its provisions, it confirms all locations that have been made on school lands.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. There is nothing before this Convention. The matter of memorializing Congress as to what it shall do, is a matter not germane to the business or purposes of a Constitutional Convention. The purpose of this body is to make a Constitution, and not to memorialize Congress about what it shall do.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken. The Convention has made these resolutions the special order.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It further confirms locations that have been made under lieu certificates and school lands. As is well known by persons connected with land matters in this State, certain sections were granted as school sections, and where these sections fall within Spanish grants, the Government issues lieu certificates. A contest was waged a number of years, in regard to lands in the Los Positos grant, in Livermore Valley; they undertook to locate their lieu certificates, and after a contest of years, the settlers succeeded in securing their title rights. But this bill gives the parties who have located under lieu certificates, the absolute right and title to the lands, whether they be within the boundaries of Mexican grants or not.

MR. CASSERLY. Is the gentleman speaking now to the Nourse bill?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman must confine himself to the question before the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I am not in favor of committing the resolutions, I believe that we ought to vote upon the resolutions immediately. I believe that we have seen the curse of landgrabbing in this State. We have seen the settler go, with his family, upon land, and work there for years, and then have a man stand back with his locating certificate, and rob him of the fruits of his industry and toil. I have not heard it said upon this floor, that the University of California is in need of money; they do not claim that they are in need of money, and I do know that the people of California do not desire to have the management of its University turned into a broker shop. If the University cannot be perpetuated——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman must confine himself to the question.

MR. BEERSTECHER. The motion is to commit. If the University cannot be perpetuated without entailing misery, by oppression and by injustice; if it can only rise amid the tears and groans of outraged families, then, sir, it had better sink to the ground.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. REED. Mr. President: I think it is eminently proper and just that this matter should be referred to a special committee, simply for the reason that the language in the memorial is not of the dignified character, in my judgment, that should be sent to our Senators and Representatives. I have hastily prepared a resolution eliminating some of the objectionable features, but I should prefer that it should be referred to a committee that can report almost immediately, and the Convention can take action this evening or to-morrow morning. It will require but a very short time, and I think it will be just, and proper, and wise.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that no delay will occur in this matter. A bill is liable to pass in Congress—either the Nourse bill or the Booth bill, or both—and to pass immediately. There are no delays in steals, and if Nourse can force the bill through to-day he will do it, and he is there with his lobby for that purpose. I am entirely opposed to any delay. Every time a steal is proposed, some delay is hatched up until after the steal has been effected. Now, I want to make one effort before the steal takes place to-day, to say that I am opposed to it. If the Nourse bill does not represent the University, and if the University is opposed to it, let the Regents of the University who are opposed to it come up and say that they are opposed to it. Let us not try to gloss it over and put it in fine language, but say, in the language of an honest man, that it is a steal. That is just the language that will suit me. I do not want anything more than that. This man Hallidie, who took me to task the other day——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman must confine himself to the question.

MR. WYATT. Yes. The question is on delay, or on referring to a committee. I am utterly opposed to committing the resolutions for further delay in this matter. It is only calculated to delay it. I hope we will vote on it just as we are. The University has given us all the information they can.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope these resolutions will not be committed, and that the vote will be taken immediately. The resolutions are aimed at the forty-five thousand acre steal. They are aimed at the Davis bill. I only mentioned the Booth bill in my remarks so as to inform the Convention that there was another bill pending before Congress, and that it was not that one at which the resolutions were aimed. Now, I do not see any necessity for discussing the Booth bill, or discussing what the University desires to do, or is aiming to do; but the only need is, that we express by these resolutions what we mean in regard to the forty-five thousand acre grab. But immediately gentlemen arise and parade before us the great economy with which the University has managed this land grant. Mr. President, these remarks are wholly aside from the question, and have nothing to do with it. As to committing the resolutions for the purpose of dressing them up in finer language, I am opposed to it. I am sure that the resolutions are aimed at the forty-five thousand acre land grab, and I am not particular as to the language used in opposition to it. There can be no mistake about it. According to the Booth bill, read by the gentleman from Alameda, these resolutions could not be construed to apply to that, because they expressly state that it is forty-five thousand acres that they are aimed at.

Messrs. Dudley of Solano, Hunter, McFarland, Brown, and Tully demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the motion of Mr. Wilson, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Wyatt, Barton, Brown, Condon, and Huestis.

The roll was called, and the motion lost by the following vote:

MR. REED. Mr. President: I desire to send up a substitute. I would say that the substitute is the same in substance——

THE PRESIDENT. Under the previous question no amendment is in order.

MR. HAGER. With the consent of the mover of the resolutions, I would like to offer an amendment.

MR. REYNOLDS. The amendment of the gentleman is merely half a dozen words or so to designate the bill.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I object.

MR. GRACE. I object.

MR. HAGER. Cannot the mover accept an amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir; the previous question has been ordered.

MR. HAGER. I ask unanimous consent that this amendment be accepted.

MR. WEST. I object.

MR. HAGER. The amendment is simply to insert, "not Senate bill one thousand seven hundred and fourteen, introduced by Mr. Booth." Without that it might do a great deal of mischief. We are all against the Nourse bill. We will all vote for it with that in.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will send up his proposition.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend in line one, by inserting after the word 'bill,' 'not Senate bill one thousand seven hundred and fourteen, introduced by Mr. Booth.'"

MR. GRACE. I object to this.

MR. WYATT. I object, too.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the memorial.

NOTICE.

MR. TINNIN. I desire to give notice of a motion to reconsider.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the memorial to Congress, introduced this day by Mr. Reynolds, was passed."

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I am in favor of the substance of the resolutions, but I am opposed to the manner in which it is worded. It is indefinite. I desire to have a more definite expression.

RECONSIDERATION—JUDICIARY.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: In accordance with notice, I move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to order engrossed, for a second reading, the article on judiciary.

The motion prevailed.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. Presideut: In pursuance of notice, I move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the amendments of the Committee of the Whole to section seventeen.

The motion prevailed.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I think we got into a wilderness of difficulty yesterday, and I think we will get into another one here to-day, and I think that the best plan we can adopt is to take the sense of this Convention on certain propositions, and recommit this article to the Judiciary Committee to amend it in conformity with the wishes of this Convention on those propositions. We are spending days and days here in wrangling over questions without taking the sense of the Convention upon propositions. Now, yesterday we did take the sense of the Convention upon one proposition distinctly and fairly. If we can do that to-day on two or three other propositions, and have the Committee on Judiciary formulate the article to harmonize with the sense of this Convention, we will be advancing in our labors. I have a resolution here which I wish to offer, to take the sense of the Convention on certain propositions. These propositions I wish to call a vote on separately. They are then subject to amendment, but when we take a vote on a proposition it will be a direction to the Committee on Judiciary, and we can consider that as settled. By this means I think we can get through with this matter in a short time. I understand that the sense of the Convention is in favor of the scheme before us. The great difficulty is the great expense it seems to entail upon the State. I send up this resolution, Mr. President.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That the article on judiciary department be recommitted to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department, with instructions to amend and reconstruct the same so as to harmonize it with the following amendments and propositions, to wit: First—Judges of the Superior Courts; salaries payable, one half out of the State treasury and one half by their respective counties. Second—Ten Judges to the City and County of San Francisco; two each to Alameda, Sacramento, Los Angeles, and Santa Clara; and one to the counties of Yuba and Sutter jointly; and one to each of the other counties in the State. Third—Salaries of Superior Court Judges as follows: San Francisco and Alameda, five thousand dollars; Sacramento, Santa Clara, Los Angeles, San Joaquin, Sonoma, Nevada, Solano, Butte, Placer, and Yuba and Sutter jointly, four thousand dollars; El Dorado, Humboldt, Amador, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Contra Costa, Napa, Mendocino, Colusa, Yolo, Calaveras, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Shasta, Siskiyou, Tulare, Tuolumne, Tehama, Sierra, Marin, Ventura, Plumas, Lake, and Kern, three thousand dollars; all other counties in the State, two thousand five hundred dollars."

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I hope that this resolution will not pass. It does not seem to me that it helps us at all out of the difficulties in which we are placed——

MR. VAN DYKE. I had not yielded the floor. Now, as I said, the difficulty seems to be that the Convention cannot agree on any scheme that is before the body. The system before the Convention amounts to over three hundred thousand dollars as it is now. The old system, including all the Judges, was about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. This, as proposed, will amount to two hundred and sixty-one thousand dollars; and that leaves the Supreme Court as it is now before the Convention. It does not disturb that at all. I was in favor of reducing it to five, but in consultation with a number of gentlemen, they urged that it would disturb the whole scheme and therefore that was omitted. Now, sir, in reference to the scale of salaries. Of course the vote will be taken upon each of the propositions, and as each proposition is reached I think we will be able to show to the Convention the justice of that classification on the basis of population and the assessment roll combined. Now, sir, take the County of Alameda, as a unit, on the assessment roll and population, and it gives San Francisco a fraction less than ten Superior Judges. In the scheme now before the Convention it has twelve Superior Judges. The present scheme displaces nine Judges in San Francisco. I think ten will meet the demand for the present. We have got to reduce somewhere. Now, in reference to the salaries. Take the County of Alameda; it has an assessment roll of over forty million dollars. There is no other county, except San Francisco, that comes up to a little over eighteen million dollars, excepting Santa Clara, which, I think, is twenty-seven million dollars. This is a reduction of the present rate to the District Judges from six thousand dollars to five thousand dollars. Now, in the other large counties the scale is four thousand dollars, which is a reduction from five thousand to four thousand dollars. It is a reduction of one thousand dollars on the scale of prices, and the Supreme Court salaries are the same as at present.

Now, the question is simply whether we are satisfied with the article as reported by the Committee of the Whole. If we want to change, how are we going to change it? Whether we are going to do it here in utter confusion, or whether we are going to get the sense of the Convention on certain propositions, and then have the article adjusted to those propositions? I think we can do it better by submitting certain propositions to this Convention. The gentleman from Santa Clara said he was opposed to it. What part of it? Let us vote upon one. If you are opposed to that, vote it down. We have fought this in the Convention three or four days, and we are as far as ever from an adjustment of the matter. It must be evident to every member here that some plan has got to be adopted to get us out of this dilemma. Now, what plan? What better than to take the sense of this Convention upon certain propositions? Take it first upon paying the salaries half out of the county and half out of the State treasury. That we have already adopted. Take it next on how many Judges you will allow San Francisco and these other counties. You get a direct vote whether you will have ten or twelve. So with the other counties. Then you come to the question of salaries. You can say what you will allow them, according to the population and assessment roll. It seems to me, that by that means we can get through with this question, and let the Committee on Judiciary formulate the article according to the sense of the Convention.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I desire to offer a substitute for the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That the article on the judicial department be recommitted to the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department, with instructions to report to the Convention instead thereof the provisions of the present Constitution, as contained in article six thereof."

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I think this Convention is satisfied, after a full discussion of this whole scheme, that it will not work in this State. I do not believe, sir, that at the present time there are a dozen counties in the State of California in which that scheme would work—outside of San Francisco and Sacramento, and Alameda, perhaps, and one or two other counties. There may be six or eight counties where the provisions providing for one Court in the county would do. There may be about that many counties where the population is just about large enough to give business to one Court. In the County of Sacramento you would have business enough to support two Judges; perhaps, so would Alameda. The balance of the counties are too small to pay a good salary to more than one Judge. If you fix a county where it was just about right to have one Court, when the business of the county increased so that the one Court could not do it all, what would be the result? You would either have to compel that Court to do more business than could be done properly, or else you would have to create another Court, and you would have two Courts, neither of which would have enough business to do. I say that in this State, with the population we have, this system will not work. It is a system that does not prevail anywhere else that I know of in the United States. Some one said it was the system they had in Nevada, but it is not. In Nevada they have abolished their County Courts, and they have their District Courts, districts being composed sometimes of one county and sometimes of more. Your system here proposes to abolish the District Courts and have nothing but County Courts. You provide that there must be a Court in every county in the State. Under our present system the ordinary legal business, the small criminal business, and the probate business, is done in the County Court. If it is a small county a lawyer can be found who will take the office for a small amount. He can practice law and make money in other ways. Under this system you provide that he cannot practice law. In most of the small counties there is not more than one or two men fit to occupy the position of Superior Judge, because a momentous case may be taken before any Court in the State. We want such men as will not take your office for two thousand dollars a year. They can make more money without it. What are you going to do, if you give him two thousand dollars? You have got to have a man who is not to be a Judge, or else you must give a larger salary than you propose. Under the old system if the business falls off you can add more, or you can take off a county or two, and create a new district. There is a flexibility about it by which with ordinary expense you can have the business of your people done. Under this system you cannot do it. It will not work, except in San Francisco, and perhaps in Sacramento and Alameda, and perhaps Los Angeles. I think in Sacramento there is too much business for one and not enough for two.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. The District and County Judge are both kept employed all the time in our county.

MR. MCFARLAND. Then we will say you have enough business for two; but in a number of the counties there is not enough business for one, and in a great many of the counties there is too much for one and not enough for two. You cannot fix it anyway. You cannot divide it at all. There is no district about it. You must allow one Judge to do more than he can do properly, or two to do very little.

Now take your Supreme Court. I do not see how it is better than the old system. I think it is worse. I say that the present system is a flexible system, that can be applied to all circumstances. If your districts are too large, you make them smaller. I have no objection to extending the jurisdiction of the County Court. My proposition is to take the present judicial system of the State, and if you could amend it a little, all the better.

MR. EDGERTON. You propose to have the committee report the whole system. We are not at liberty to make any amendments.

MR. WILSON, of 1st District. Are you really in earnest in your proposition? [Laughter.]

MR. MCFARLAND. Yes, I am in earnest; and I tell you you will find that if that mongrel system is adopted, the time will come when you will think I am in earnest, and when you will be glad to go back to the old system. I make that prophecy. Of course if the committee report the old system here, and anybody sees any amendment that can be made to improve it, it can be done. It is the only way that I see to get at the matter at all. Now there is a proposition here to recommit this to the Committee on Judiciary with certain instructions. I say that the present system is infinitely better than this one.

Digitized by Google

MR. BARBOUR. Suppose we have the district system?

MR. McFARLAND. I do not propose to sit down here and write out instructions. I say, let the committee report back here the present system, and then we will have it before us, and can amend it if necessary.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I am opposed to both these propositions. It does seem to me that the real difficulties in the way exist in sections two, three and seventeen. Now, under the old system, we had an annual outlay of two hundred and thirty-nine thousand nine hundred dollars, as I figure it, and under the new system it will be three hundred and three thousand dollars, making an increase of sixty-three thousand dollars over the old system. Now, I am satisfied in my own mind, that the people of the State will not be satisfied with that. A great many gentlemen say that the people will be satisfied. I do not believe it. They are compelled now to retrench in every particular they can in their private expenses as well as their public expenses. Now, while I am a lawyer, while I have the natural pride belonging to my class, and the natural bias, I am still a taxpayer of this State. There are a very large number of people who are not litigants, who are taxpayers, who will not approve of this policy of increasing expenses. I am utterly opposed to this monstrosity of a Supreme Court, as reported here. I have been opposed to it from the beginning, in committee and out of committee, and the more I consider it the more obnoxious it seems to me. The committee had almost completed their work when this matter was sprung upon them. It was not the work of that committee or any member of it. It was brought in there when the work was largely done, and we were compelled to act upon it without sufficient consideration. Many of us were opposed to it there, and the more I study it, the more I become convinced that we were right.

MR. WILSON. Are you aware of the fact that we have not now a Supreme Court under consideration, but merely the Superior Courts?

MR. LAINE. I am aware that there is a motion to send this back to the committee to strike out this system. Now, in the first place, that Supreme Court is complex, cumbersome, and costly, and I believe it is a Court of fragments lightly bound together by the Chief Justice. It sits in two departments, and it sits in bank. How can it be always open by any possibility? Then, in addition to that, it is required to have three calendars. There is the calendar of number one, the calendar of number two, and the calendar of bank, and a large number of cases in judicial limbo laid by to wait a time when the Chief Justice and two of his Associates require it to be heard. It gives the power to one man. Then it leads to delay. It amounts to a mill with two hoppers. You must grind it in hopper number one, and then go in bank to grind it over again after waiting thirty days. Then it turns it into a political machine. Suppose the Chief Justice is a Democrat; what chance will a Republican have in that Court? It is no use to talk to me about the uprightness of Judges. We have the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States Act; we have seen the famous "seven to eight." I believe with Thomas Jefferson: trust no man. Now, for these reasons, I say the system is not a good one. It is a monstrosity; and I believe that any person who will diligently study this matter will see that it is impossible to make it work. I propose to go back to the second section of the old Constitution, and then in place of the third section, fix the salary of the Supreme Court Judges at five thousand dollars.

MR. HILBORN. Does the gentleman not know that the Supreme Court at the present time is utterly insufficient?

MR. LAINE. The gentleman knows why; he knows that one of the Judges is incompetent to do anything. I believe that five active, intelligent Judges can keep up with the calendar. There has been an article published in the Law Review, and it criticises this system, and I think correctly. I think any lawyer who peruses it will think so too.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's ten minutes have expired.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I am very much surprised, at this late hour in this discussion, to have heard the argument of my friend from Santa Clara, for whom I entertain so much respect and good feeling. He has been perfectly silent in the Convention up to this late period of time, if I recollect right, upon the subject of the judiciary; and now, merely upon a motion to recommit the article, he has made an argument against the entire system from first to last. I am not at all impressed with the force of his argument. In the first place, he moralizes upon the fact that this new system is an increase of sixty-three thousand dollars over the old system. Now, let us see what logic there is in that. The old system is admitted by every person to be utterly inadequate to the wants of the State. Every person knows that it is utterly inadequate, both in the Supreme Court and in the District Courts, and if there is any one thing upon which the intelligent people of this State have desired some change, it is in a judicial system. Now we have devised here a plan which I think, in the judgment of a great majority of this Convention, is a superior plan to the old system for the present wants of the State, and is an adequate and efficient plan for the wants of the State. What if it does cost sixty-three thousand dollars more? If it is a better system, if it provides an efficient judiciary, if it makes decisions more speedy and supplies wants which now exist, it must cost more. If there is any logic in his argument, you must throw away a good system because it costs more than a bad system.

Now, so far as the Supreme Court is concerned, I must put my judgment against the gentleman. Every member knows that the Supreme Court is inadequate to perform the duties of that Court. There are no five men in the State of California who can keep up the calendar of the Supreme Court and write decisions. That has been demonstrated, and no gentleman who understands the business will deny what I say. I assert it as a fact, that there are no five men in the State of California who can write the decisions of the Supreme Court and keep up with the calendar of the Supreme Court of this State. Therefore, you derive from this fact this result: you must increase the judicial power of the Supreme Court. To increase it in numbers does not increase it in power. How then will you increase the power of the Supreme Court and render it adequate to the business which pertains to it? By no other plan but by increasing the Judges and allowing them to sit in departments. I see no difficulty at all in allowing them to sit in departments for the purpose of trying two cases at once, and no difficulty in allowing them to resolve themselves into bank upon important and exceptional cases. The system of sitting in bank and sitting in separate departments has existed in many States of the Union. There is nothing impracticable in it. There is no difficulty in arranging the calendars. It is simply a matter of routine. Suppose it does increase the expenses of the State. It will result in prompt decisions; men will know their rights and will not be delayed. Each county in the State will have a Judge belonging to itself, and the people will be satisfied when they see that. They will say, this judicial system has cost sixty-three thousand dollars more than the old, but we have got a great advantage from it. We have now a Judge in our county, and do not have to run off into other counties. He is always there. He is always at home. We have our Judge confined to the business of our own county. The people will be satisfied, and it is a popular system so far as my information goes. All the counties of the State, with very few exceptions, like this system of having their own special Judge, and they ought to have it. So that I have no doubt myself that the people will be satisfied when they see the working of the system, and find how much better it is than the old, and how much more speedily cases will be decided. Now there is nothing in the objection that the Chief Justice may use his position for political purposes. We have amended the section already, and provided that a majority of the Court may order a case tried in bank, so that any objection upon that score is removed by the amendment which was adopted yesterday.

Now, as to the system proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke. Why, he is wonderfully self-sacrificing. He proposes to reduce the judicial expenses of the State, and commends it very highly, but you will find that the County of Alameda has two Judges at five thousand dollars.

MR. VAN DYKE. Well, if the gentlemen find out that it is not right, cut it down.

MR. WILSON. I was astonished at the self-sacrificing spirit of the County of Alameda. It is certainly very commendable. Now, charity should not only begin at home, but I think economy should begin at home. If the gentleman had come forward and said that upon consideration he was satisfied that Alameda would only require one Judge, and that they were willing to take three thousand five hundred dollars, then he would have carried out the economical idea which he applies to other counties. But he presents his scheme of economy with the prominent feature in the foreground that Alameda shall have two Judges, each with a salary of five thousand dollars. Now, when you come to consider this whole thing my own opinion is that the report of the committee, as originally reported, is better than anything that has been presented. If there is any injustice done to any county by being placed in a class different from that to which it belongs, it is a thing that can be very easily rectified on the next reading of the bill; but the section originally reported, it seems to me, comes nearer doing right than any other proposition before the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: It seems to me that the motion of Judge McFarland is an insult to the intelligence of this Convention.

MR. McFARLAND. Then it won't insult the gentleman from Kern, I know. [Laughter.]

MR. SMITH. This plan was thoroughly considered by the Committee. It was thoroughly considered by the members of the Bar of San Francisco. When the report was submitted to this Convention, the very best of men said that it was one of the best reports submitted here. The Committee of the Whole took it under consideration, and, with very few amendments, adopted it. Now, after the Convention has passed through nearly all of its labor, after it has passed beyond the time that it was allowed to sit and draw pay, Judge McFarland comes forward and proposes to set this ship at sea again. The gentleman from Santa Clara concurs with him on the general proposition, but very materially disagrees with him upon the plan that shall be adopted when we come into the consideration of the matter again; which only shows that if the matter comes up again we are farther at sea than we were when we first began this question. Now what is all this difficulty about? Simply upon a question of salaries which are not permanent, but only for the first term. When you look into this matter, it is so small and inconsiderable that it seems to me to be surprising that this Convention should have taken up the time that it has in considering a question of salaries. Now there has been a good deal of pulling and hauling from different portions of the State from local feelings. So far as I am concerned, although I have been charged with being selfish in this matter, I wish to say that so far as my section is concerned, I leave it entirely with this body as to what they shall say in regard to that matter. Now we have passed upon nearly all of this matter. It has been thoroughly considered, and now the proposition is to go back and adopt the old system. Why, the first thing that was suggested in calling this Convention was the reorganization of the judiciary of this State, and it seems to me strange that some gentlemen are now taking the back track in regard to the matter. I like to give men credit for good motives, but it seems strange that men who have stood by the system now seem to want to take the back track. I do not understand it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. McFarland.

The substitute was rejected.

Digitized by Google

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That the report of the judiciary be referred back to the committee, with instructions to classify the Superior Court Judges in two or more classes, with salaries not to exceed four thousand dollars for the first class, to be paid out of the State treasury."

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: If that resolution passes, that will be all the instructions that the committee will have from this Convention. There is much more that should be embodied in the instructions in relation to this report. There should be changes in relation to the judicial system, in relation to the expenses of that Court, so that it will accord with the acts of this Convention in other respects. I hope it will be referred with such special instructions as will correct and remedy the evils that exist in the minds of a majority of this Convention. When the Chairman of the committee says that of all the questions to be considered by the Constitutional Convention this was the most important, I beg leave to differ with him. It was a question of some counties, but to my mind, from the best information I have, a large majority of Judges and lawyers in this State opposed the calling of a Constitutional Convention. I believe this system, as stated by the gentleman from Santa Clara, originated outside of this Convention; outside of the brains of the Committee on Judiciary. I believe it was intended, if passed in the present form, to load the Constitution so that it would endanger its success before the people. For that reason I voted against its engrossment, and if it is not amended I will vote against it again. If the old Constitution can be amended as suggested by the gentleman from Sacramento this morning, and so as to provide those provisions which we sought yesterday, it can become a part of the Constitution of this State and will be adopted by the people.

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I trust that this proposition will not be adopted, and in saying this I do not wish to be understood as expressing any opinion upon the merits of the proposition per se. The scheme of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Van Dyke, is to take the sense of this body upon distinct and separate propositions. Now, what should be the salary of the Judges of the several Superior Courts in this State, is presented as a distinct proposition, and when we come to that it will be open to amendment, and the Convention can pass upon it and adopt it in the form in which it is presented, or amend it according to its pleasure. There is another proposition as to whether the salaries shall be paid wholly from the State treasury or whether they shall be paid half from the State treasury and the other half from the county treasury? Still another, that there should be a fixed sum, say two thousand dollars, paid from the State treasury for the salary of each and every Superior Judge in the State, and that the balance shall be paid from the county treasuries. I would prefer the last proposition. I hope, Mr. President, that we will take the sense of the Convention upon these questions, and I believe in that way we shall be able to determine the matter. I propose to offer an amendment to provide for the payment of two thousand dollars by the State towards the salary of each Judge and the balance from the respective county treasuries.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: I voted against the engrossment of the article because I thought the system proposed was too costly. I trust now, that the article will be rereferred to the Committee on Judiciary with instructions to give it a more economic basis. The Chairman of the Committee says that a good system must necessarily be more costly. Now, I think one of the elements of a good system is, that it be economic as well as effectual. I trust that the Superior Courts will be divided into three classes. Four thousand dollars for the first class I think would be enough salary, three thousand dollars for the second class, and two thousand dollars for the third class; that would be more economical than the scheme proposed in section seventeen, and would better meet the wishes of the people.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This report being before the house now on the motion to reconsider, I do not know that there is any objection to any amendments being offered. I would like to inquire of the Chair if any person could not offer an amendment?

THE PRESIDENT. Undoubtedly he could—any amendment to section seventeen he chooses.

MR. HAGER. That is what I understand. I would ask, therefore, why it is necessary to recommit this to the committee when we might offer these amendments here at this time. If it should be recommitted to the committee I hope it will be without instructions.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from Yolo.

The substitute was rejected.

MR. VAN DYKE. I ask for a division of the resolution so that the sense of the Convention can be taken upon the first proposition first, and so on seriatim.

MR. HOLMES. Mr. President: I send up a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That the report of the Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department be referred back to the committee without instructions, only to harmonize said report with the views of this body."

[Laughter.]

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move to lay the resolution on the table. Let us quit this foolishness, and go on and get through with this business.

MR. VAN DYKE. Ayes and noes.

Messrs. Hale, Filcher, Huestis, and Nason also demanded the ayes and noes.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: There seems to be a misapprehension. My motion is to lay these buncombe resolutions on the table, and not the article.

THE PRESIDENT. I understand the motion. The question is on the motion to lay the resolution of the gentleman from Alameda upon the table.

MR. WILSON. I understand that to lay the resolution on the table does not carry the section.

THE PRESIDENT. It carries nothing but the resolution itself.

MR. VAN DYKE. In other words, it leaves us just as far off as ever.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. TINNIN. I hereby give notice that I withdraw the notice given by me this day, to reconsider on to-morrow, the vote by which the memorial to Congress, introduced by Mr. Reynolds, was passed.

IN RELATION TO THE JUDICIARY ARTICLE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That the article on judiciary be referred to the Judiciary Committee, with the following instructions: First—Substitute for section two the following, viz.: Section two. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, excepting such business as may be done at Chambers; and the presence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment. Second—Amend section three by striking out all after the words, 'Section three. The,' in the first line, down to the words, 'an entry,' in the eighth line, and insert the following, viz.: 'Justices of the Supreme Court shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large, at the general State elections at the times and places that State officers are elected, and the term of office shall be ten years from and after the first Monday in January next succeeding their election; provided, that the Justices elected at the first election under this Constitution shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that one of them shall go out of office at the end of two years, one at the end of four years, one at the end of six years, one at the end of eight years, and one at the end of ten years.' Third—Amend section seventeen to read as follows, viz.: Section Seventeen. The Justices of the Supreme Court shall severally receive from the State treasury an annual salary of five thousand dollars, payable monthly. Each Judge of a Superior Court of this State of counties and cities and counties, of the first class, shall receive an annual salary of four thousand dollars; those of the second class, an annual salary of three thousand dollars; and those of the third class, an annual salary of two thousand dollars; all said salaries to be paid out of the State treasury monthly. The following counties and cities and counties shall be counties of the first class (naming them). The following counties shall be counties of the second class (naming them). The remainder of the counties of the State shall be counties of the third class. The Legislature may, from time to time, as population and the public interests require it, change the above classification, and may, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to both branches of the Legislature, abolish the third class."

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I raise the point of order, that the Convention had refused to refer with instructions; and further, that only section seventeen is before the Convention. The question is, whether this Convention will concur with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to section seventeen. The gentleman is now moving to recommit the whole article with certain instructions.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention before recess, by a direct vote, refused to recommit this article. Therefore upon that ground the Chair decides that this motion is not in order.

MR. LAINE. This is with different instructions.

THE PRESIDENT. No matter; no business has transpired since.

AN APPEAL.

MR. LAINE. I most respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The appeal was seconded by Messrs. Wyatt, Stedman, Larkin, and White.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention has under consideration the report of the Committee on Judiciary. They have adopted a large portion, almost the whole of it, having passed upon every section in it. They have reconsidered the vote on section seventeen, and that section is now pending. Before recess motions were made to recommit this article, and certain sections, with instructions, and they were voted down. Without any business transpiring since, the gentleman from Santa Clara again moves to recommit this same section to the committee, with instructions, identical almost with the instructions moved by the gentleman from Sacramento, and which the Convention voted down. The Chair decides the motion out of order, and from that decision the gentleman appeals. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention.

MR. MCCALLUM. There has been no vote to reconsider anything except that by which the article was ordered engrossed.

THE PRESIDENT. There has been a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to section seventeen.

MR. MCCALLUM. That vote has not been taken yet.

THE PRESIDENT. Long ago, sir. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Larkin, Condon, Filcher, and Wyatt.

The roll was called, and the decision of the Chair was sustained by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'each,' in line seven, and insert the following: 'Each of the Superior Court Judges shall receive an annual salary, to be fixed by the Legislature, payable at stated times, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he shall have been elected, one half of which shall be paid from the State treasury, and the other half of such salaries from the treasuries of the respective counties for which such Judges are elected. Until otherwise changed by the Legislature, the annual salary of each of the Superior Court Judges of the City and County of San Francisco, and the Counties of Alameda, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Los Angeles, Santa Clara, Sonoma, and Nevada, and the Counties of Sutter and Yuba jointly, shall be forty-five hundred dollars; of the Counties of Amador, Butte, Colusa, Contra Costa, Calaveras, El Dorado, Fresno, Humboldt, Kern, Marin, Merced, Mendocino, Monterey, Napa, Placer, Plumas, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Solano, Stanislaus, Tehama, Tulare, Tuolumne, and Yolo, thirty-five hundred dollars; and of all the other counties, twenty-five hundred dollars.'"

SPEECH OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: There are two or three things which I think have been sufficiently foreshadowed here, so that any person can become satisfied that there is a clear majority in favor of those certain propositions. Yesterday there was an amendment passed which divided the salaries between the State and the counties. It seems to me that is a fair expression of the sentiment of the Convention. I think that was passed by a respectable majority. Now, there are some who think that salaries were made too low, and that they ought to be five thousand dollars in some counties. There are others who think them too high. Now, it is evident we must make some concessions. I am willing to do so, for my own part. I am willing to concede something. I think the salaries as I have fixed them are about an average of the judgment of the Convention. I have endeavored to strike an average. I will admit that it increases the expenses of the judiciary system somewhat, something less than thirty thousand dollars. The whole thing will be about two hundred and ninety-three thousand dollars. If gentlemen will scan closely the present salaries of the different County Judges, and District Judges, and Supreme Justices, they will find that they all amount to two hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars. Now, it is said that the present system is inadequate. Of course if we are to have greater efficiency we must expect it to cost more. We have increased the expense a trifle, but gentlemen must remember that the expenses of the old system are constantly increasing. There is scarcely a session of the Legislature but what creates two or three new Courts, with all the attendant expenses, with salaries of five thousand to six thousand dollars a year. Now, I take it for granted that this new system will cut off this increase, and will be fully adequate for some time to come. Now, I place the salaries in such a way that there will be no applications to the Legislature to have them raised. The counties will be interested in the matter, and they will not be apt to consent to it. While the people of a county would scarcely take any pains to work against an increase of the Judge's salary where it is paid by the State, they would certainly object when it comes partly out of their own pockets.

I call attention to another thing. The section as amended by the Committee of the Whole fixes salaries at four thousand five hundred dollars and three thousand five hundred dollars, leaving none less than three thousand five hundred dollars. Now I take it for granted that these figures are satisfactory to a majority of this Convention, except as to the smaller counties. Therefore I have placed some ten or twelve of the smaller counties at two thousand five hundred dollars a year; then after it is passed, if there are any other counties which ought to be placed in a different class, it can be made known and the section modified accordingly. It can be modified, if it suits the Convention, according to the wishes of the delegations. I do not really think that a four thousand dollar salary is too much for the middle class counties, but it would probably be entailing too great an expense. Here we have four thousand five hundred dollar salaries for all the counties mentioned by the Committee of the Whole, with Nevada added. I thought that nothing but fair, and the Convention has so decided. There is no doubt in my mind that in the course of six years the present system will be expanded until the expense will be as great or greater than it will be under this system, and then it will probably not be as efficient. I believe it is conceded generally that this system will be much more efficient, and while the present cost for salaries may be a little greater, it will save thousands of dollars every year to individuals by making litigation cheaper. These are the facts which led me to introduce this amendment. I think we should all be willing to concede something; give way a little, in order to hit upon something that will be the average judgment of the Convention. I have not interfered with the salaries of the Supreme Court at all. That has been fairly decided, and the conclusion reached that they shall have a salary of six thousand dollars a year.

SPEECH OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I am not able, myself, to approve of any scheme that I have heard, or that I may hear, which embraces the proposition to make the judiciary system of this State to depend for salaries on two, three, or four sources. I have had nothing to say during this long discussion. I do not now propose to speak with regard to any other point but this one, though I may hereafter. I have been at a loss to understand upon what ground, upon what considerations of policy, gentlemen think it so desirable that the State judiciary should not be paid by the State. The article proposes, in lieu of County, District, and Probate Judges, to appoint Superior Judges, one for each county in the State. That constitutes the subordinate judiciary system—the entire system—with the exception of the Supreme Court. The Judges of these several counties have general jurisdiction. Their process runs throughout the State, and suits from one county may be tried in another. All their proceedings are for and in the name of the people of the State. The criminal proceedings are all in the name of the people of the State of California. It is true that the County Courts try certain grades of offenses, and the District Courts certain other grades, but the distinction is purely artificial and made for convenience. Now we propose to substitute for these several Courts one Court, one State Court, and there is no ground for this artificial distinction. There is no room for it. Now if there are State Courts, and they take cognizance of all cases that come before a Court, upon what ground is it made local to the county? I hear but one reason, and that is if we make the county pay the salary there will be a feeling against excessive salaries. Now I fancy that will apply just as well the other way. If he is dependent upon the county for his salary, he will be incited to make himself popular in the locality, which will interfere with his usefulness and efficiency as a Judge of a State Court.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: The gentleman has seen fit to classify the county which I represent as a second-class county, and I repudiate all such classification. The delegation from Butte is united. We consider we have a first-class county.

MR. ROLFE. I placed it there just the same as the Committee of the Whole placed it there.

MR. BIGGS. But during the discussion of this question it was shown that a great injustice had been done to Butte County. We have but one lawyer, and he is not on the Judiciary Committee. Had he been there, the county would not have been overlooked. I am in hopes Butte County will be put in the first-class counties. We are able to pay a fair salary, and we want a competent Judge. I hope the amendment will be voted down; and let us adopt the report of the Committee of the Whole, and when it comes to second reading, we can formulate this matter and get it into proper shape.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line eight, strike out the words 'thirty-five hundred,' and insert 'three thousand.' In line eleven, strike out the words 'four thousand five hundred,' and insert the words 'four thousand.'"

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I believe that the objection of the majority to the amendment of the Committee of the Whole was in regard to salaries. I believe the majority of this Convention will agree to give Judges of the first class four thousand dollars; of the second class, three thousand dollars; and of the third class, two thousand five hundred dollars. I offer this in order that the Convention may vote on this distinct proposition of salaries. I would ask to have it divided, so as to vote on each separately. Now, sir, I am not in favor of degrading the judiciary; but I do think, in these times, that four thousand dollars a year, for four years' services, will be a good compensation, and will not debase or degrade the judiciary. I believe we have in Los Angeles quite a number of eminent and respectable lawyers who would consider four thousand dollars a year a good salary. I believe what is true of that county, is true of other counties in the State. I have been sent here in the interest of economy and reform, and I believe every other member who was sent here for that purpose will conscientiously say that four thousand dollars is sufficient and ample. I desire that the vote be taken separately on the three classes.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: If this amendment is voted down I propose to offer an amendment, for the purpose of getting this question segregated, so as to reach a decision one way or the other. We have not been able to arrive at any definite conclusion, from some cause which nobody can see. So long as we put the salaries and the counties together, we will never arrive at a conclusion. We have been trying it every possible way. Twenty or thirty different amendments have been offered, and they have all been voted down, and there is no prospect of ever reaching a conclusion in that way. I propose to offer an amendment dividing the Judges into classes, so as to leave the classes to be filled. Possibly we can get a decision one way or the other. It will be a great struggle to agree, but possibly we may be able to do so. Say the first class shall receive an annual salary of blank dollars, the second class a salary of blank dollars, and the third class a salary of blank dollars. Then when we get it in that condition we may be able to fill the blanks. I shall formulate such an amendment and offer it if this one is voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: If this amendment shall be voted down, and the proposition which the gentleman from Marin proposes to offer shall be voted down—and I suppose it will—I intend to offer an amendment. [Laughter.] It has no particular bearing on the present proposition, but is in relation to the future. We have made no arrangements for the future. It is to the effect that after the next census, and every ten years thereafter, the Legislature shall classify the counties according to population, and determine the number of Superior Court Judges for each county, and fix the compensation thereof according to such classification. Counties having a population of twenty-five thousand or less, shall be entitled to one Judge; counties having more than twenty-five thousand, are entitled for every additional thirty thousand, or any fraction thereof exceeding ten thousand, to an additional Judge. That provides for the future. I may, if I have a chance, offer this as a guide to the Legislature.

THE PRESIDENT. The first question will be on striking out "three thousand five hundred dollars" in the eighth line, and inserting "three thousand dollars."

Division was called for, and the amendment adopted by a vote of 60 ayes to 51 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on striking out in the eleventh line, "four thousand five hundred dollars," and inserting "four thousand dollars."

Division was called for, and the amendment adopted by a vote of 76 ayes to 34 noes.

RECONSIDERATION.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I gave notice that I would move to reconsider the vote by which what was known as the McCallum amendment was adopted. I now move to reconsider that vote by which that amendment to section seventeen was adopted. I am in hopes it will be reconsidered.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope the motion will be reconsidered. This amendment was voted down a number of times, but the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, seemed determined to force it on the Convention. These are State Courts, and it seems to me the salaries ought to be paid by the State. I hope the motion to reconsider will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: If this Convention is disposed to an act of gross injustice, they will reconsider the vote by which a fair proposition was adopted, dividing the expense between the State and the counties. Now, sir, I have not made a calculation exactly, but I believe the judicial force is distributed about one sixth to San Francisco, and about half of the taxable wealth of the State is there; and you now propose to impose this extra burden of sixty thousand dollars a year upon the people of San Francisco, to support the Courts in the interior. I admire the zeal with which gentlemen from the country advocate the proposition. This is not a sectional matter, it is a question of justice. No member, no matter where he comes from, ought to be willing to do an act of plain injustice. It is not the fact that these are State Courts in the full sense. The old District Courts are State Courts, and there is a good reason why they should be paid by the State. But the Superior Courts not only take their place, but also the place of the County Courts, which now do all the county business, and are paid by the counties. You are adopting a county system, and these Judges are county officers. They are not State officers or county officers, except as we make them such. They are county officers just as much as the County Judges are county officers. We have wiped out fifty-two County Courts, and incorporated the Courts into these new Courts. Now you propose to throw the whole burden upon the State. It is plain that it will operate unequally. I could not consistently go home and face my constituents, and say that I did not raise my voice in opposition to such a plain injustice. The people of San Francisco are generous to the country. We are already educating your children. We pay annually seventy thousand dollars or eighty thousand dollars for the support of education in the interior. Now you want us to support your judiciary. It is wrong. This is a very fair proposition already, to divide the expense with you.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I hope this motion to reconsider will not prevail. I hope it will be allowed to stand. It is no more than fair that each should pay half. It is an unfair proposition to require one county, not only to pay its own Judge, but, in addition, to pay for the Judge of some other county. By requiring each to pay half, the inequality is remedied to some extent. Of course, we cannot get exact equality, but we come nearer to it by requiring each to pay half than we will by requiring it all to be paid out of the State treasury. Some of these small counties which are not, in fact, able to stand all the expense, will be greatly assisted by a provision of this kind. That is all right, provided the State is willing to assist them to that extent. If there are any counties which are so poor that they cannot afford to pay the half of three thousand five hundred dollars a year, let the delegations come forward and ask this Convention to put them in a lower class. Let the counties pay half and the State half, and the Legislature will not be lobbied to death every session for an increase of salaries for this county and that county. If the salaries are paid out of the State treasury, there will be all sorts of contrivances to get additional Judges and more pay. The representatives from one county will vote for some scheme in return for an equal favor from the representatives of some other counties. There is too much of it done, and it will continue to be done, unless there is a check put to it. This is one of the reasons why I am opposed to making this change. I hope it will be allowed to remain as it is.

SPEECH OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I see no way out of this thing but to adhere to the report of the Judiciary Committee. It is evident that the more we flounder about the farther we get from the right. Now, it was said the other day that San Francisco had seceded under the command of my friend, Judge Hager. Now I am more than ever satisfied that it is true since the remarks of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour. We have adopted a State system of Courts. He says San Francisco pays half the taxes. Now, if there is any principle established in relation to taxation it is that all property shall be taxed throughout the State for the State. There would be just as much logic in saying, when you come to levy taxes for the support of Government, that San Francisco should pay only half. There is no justice or safety in any other rule than that which taxes the property of the whole

Digitized by Google

State for the support of the State Government. Whenever you depart from that rule you will find yourself at sea on an ocean of confusion. Now, sir, it would be infinitely better to go back to the old system of District and County Courts than to adopt this system with such a rule of taxation, because then we know where we are. If we have a County Court it is a county institution to a certain extent, though not to the full extent—not to the extent that is pretended here. How is it that you want the county to pay half, when you admit that they are State Courts? Following up the argument of the gentlemen here, it would seem that the county is no part of the State, and that when you are taxing the people of the county you are not taxing the people of the State. That is the logic of their proposition, and a most extraordinary proposition it is too. It is a monstrous proposition to exempt property in San Francisco which has been made in the interior. I am opposed to this whole juggling scheme, and I will never vote for it. I would rather see the Constitution go down than to see any such pernicious principle engrafted upon it.

SPEECH OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I feel a good deal of reluctance in offering any suggestions upon the amendment now before the Convention, or even upon any other legal proposition. I see so many of these venerable Grangers, who have been engaged all their lives in an occupation so foreign to that involved in this subject, who know so much more about it than the most distinguished lawyers and jurists of the State, and so many young men like the distinguished jurist from San Francisco, Mr. Stedman, whose first growth of mustache has not yet reached the full length, and who are so prolific of suggestions—I say all these things are calculated to produce a great deal of hesitation upon the part of a young man like myself, who has only been at the bar a matter of thirty years. [Laughter.] Now, there are several reasons why I am opposed to this measure. It has been said that these Superior Courts are county institutions. I deny it, sir. I say they constitute a State judiciary system. The whole legal and equitable power of the State is lodged in these Courts, and each one of these Courts is but an arm of this great system. This is a State institution. The people of Siskiyou have just as much interest in the administration of State justice, of State law, and State equity, in Sacramento County, as they have in their own county. So much for the theory of it. And it is because it is a State institution that the State and not the counties should pay, as the State has always paid the State judiciary, ever since eighteen hundred and forty-nine. The next reason is, that it is absolutely disgraceful to subject the judicial officers of this State to any such proceedings, whereby they have to take their pay in depreciated county scrip, and then traffic with the banks in order to get money to live on.

My third objection is founded upon this consideration. I think if there is any class of officials in the land who ought to be thoroughly independent, it is the judiciary. The Judge of a county ought to be entirely free from any connection with the county business. In order that he should be, he should draw his pay from the great broad State—from the State treasury—where he will have one unvarying source to get his salary from. He can feel like he is a free man, dependent upon no man. There is great inequality necessarily in classifying by population. According to the plan suggested by Judge Hager, a county having thirty-five thousand people would have two Judges, and a county having twenty-four thousand would only have one. Besides, population is not a good test in this matter. Take Mendocino, or some other of the small counties, and either one of them may have two or three times as much litigation as there is in Sacramento, and consequently a great deal more for a Judge to do. This is actually the case in many instances that I know of, and it tends to show the utter absurdity of this thing. These are the reasons why I shall not vote to reconsider.

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: The reasons why the Superior Courts are State Courts have been very fully explained on this floor. It is true that the judiciary system of the State rests on these Courts to a certain extent. But, sir, we have already provided, that for the trial of rights in regard to real estate in Sacramento, the proceedings shall be had in the Sacramento County Court. The property rights of citizens of Sacramento are to be tried before the Superior Judge of Sacramento County; and what difference does it make whether he is called Superior Judge or County Judge? County Judge did not sound sufficiently dignified for a Court of general jurisdiction, so we changed the term. He is the Judge of the county. He tries no criminal cases except those which arise in his own county; he judges cases in regard to the rights of property which arise in his own county, and only those. If a man who resides in Los Angeles wants to sue a man in Sacramento, it can be tried here, it is true. But the Sheriff of Sacramento County may be called upon to serve a process for some man in Los Angeles; and there is just as much reason for saying that the Sheriff is a State officer as that the Judge is a State officer.

MR. EDGERTON. The Sheriff cannot serve it out of his own county, and the Judge can hold Court all over the State. An action for ejectment from land in San Diego can be brought any place.

MR. CROSS. No, sir.

MR. SCHELL. Cannot a case be changed from one county to another?

MR. CROSS. Certainly; but that is an exception. That brings me to the next proposition. The Superior Judge takes the place of the old County Judge, who has always been paid out of the county treasury, and of the District Judge who was paid out of the State treasury. Now, these two functions are combined in one man, who is to be County Judge and State Judge, so to speak, and I can see no earthly reason why the county should not contribute a portion of his salary. Now, the strongest argument in its favor is that which has been repeatedly made on this floor. It is recognized as a fact that the Legislature will be besieged at every session for an increase of salaries. This will certainly be the case if these salaries are paid out of the State treasury. If we provide that the counties shall pay part, there will not be any such applications unless there are good reasons to back them.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to reconsider.

Upon the motion to reconsider, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Barbour, Larkin, Barton, Doyle, and Vacquerel.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, to section seventeen.

MR. GLASCOCK. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line eleven, after 'Nevada,' the words 'Butte, Colusa, Amador.'"

REMARKS OF MR. GLASCOCK.

MR. GLASCOCK. Mr. President: It is the desire of the people of Colusa County that it be placed in the list of first class counties. We do not claim that either upon population or taxable property; it is simply because of the amount of business done in Colusa County. I hold in my hand the calendar of the last term of Court there. There were ninety cases. I have in my possession the entire number of cases entered in the District Court in the last twelve months—two hundred and twenty-five. The entire number of cases in the County Court was eighty-six. The number of cases in the Probate Court, I do not remember, but altogether they amount to more than one for every judicial day in the year. It is the anxious desire of the people of that county to be placed in the first class list.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I have corresponded with a great many persons in Colusa County who make the same statement. It is well known that Judge Belcher has tried to get this in the report, but being a modest man, never could get the floor. He will tell this Convention that there were one hundred cases on the docket. We have to-day on our trial docket over one hundred cases; and there are over three hundred and fifty cases during the year. Our population is between twenty thousand and twenty-five thousand, and we pay taxes on eleven million or twelve million dollars. We have no objection to paying half of a first-class salary. The Butte delegation is united on this proposition. I ask Judge Belcher to make a motion to include Butte and Colusa, and I ask the Convention to do me the kindness to grant the prayer of the citizens of those counties. We have the wealth, and I am sorry to say we have the litigation.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not pass, and that these gentlemen will remain where they are. There are plenty of lawyers in the country who never made one thousand dollars a year, and they will be perfectly willing to take these positions. When you can get a Judge cheap, I think it is best to get him. There is no trouble about getting Judges, for there are plenty of lawyers who will take these positions at any price.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I hope gentlemen, when they vote upon this amendment, will realize what they are doing. We cannot get absolute equality if we stay here till Christmas. It is absolutely unfair to take one county out of a class and place it in another, where it is not entitled by population to be placed. That is just what is being attempted here. We must have some basis to be guided by, and then we must abide by it. If we deviate from that we are all at sea, for this gentleman will claim an exception in favor of his county on account of some peculiarity, and another on account of some other peculiarity, and so on. One will have more litigation in proportion to population. The only thing we can safely be guided by is population. It will not do to lift one county right over a dozen that have more population. The only thing to do is to stick right to this classification. If you do not take population as a gnide, then what will you be guided by? It will not do to go by population in one case, and by the calendar in another.

MR. BIGGS. Last year Butte County raised twenty thousand bushels more grain than any other county in the State; she produced more gold and more lumber.

MR. DAVIS. I move the previous question. [No second.]

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: I ask the gentleman from Colusa to insert Amador in his amendment. [Laughter.]

MR. HILBORN. I would like to have him insert Solano also. [Laughter.]

MR. SHAFTER. Please insert Marin. [Laughter.]

MR. WHITE. Insert Santa Cruz.

MR. ROLFE. And San Bernardino also.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment.

Lost.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after 'diminished,' as follows: 'After their election nor.'"

MR. HAGER. That is, that their salaries shall not be decreased nor diminished after their election nor during their term. The Supervisors might act after their election and before they are sworn in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section seventeen as amended.

The amendment as amended was concurred in.

RECONSIDERATIONS.

Mr. KEYES. Mr. President: I wish to call up my motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to adopt the amendment of Mr. McCoy to section twenty-four, and also the vote by which the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was adopted to section twenty-four.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-four.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: Yesterday I voted for section twenty-four, but I have turned another somersault. I hope it will be stricken out. I was of the opinion that it would require a good deal of ability and learning to fill these positions, but I have changed my mind, and I want it stricken out, because my friend Larkin, of El Dorado, may have aspirations that way and this section would bar him out. [Laughter.] I think anybody who can get himself elected as Superior Judge, ought to serve whether he knows anything about law or not. [Laughter.]

MR. WATERS. I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Carried.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: On yesterday I gave notice that I would to-day move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to adopt the amendments to section nineteen. There was some misunderstanding, I think, on the part of some gentlemen. The section as adopted by the Committee of the Whole, is as follows: "Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may, except in criminal prosecutions for libel, state the testimony and declare the law." By the act of the Convention yesterday the words "except in criminal prosecutions for libel," were left out because it was supposed that the section was necessary inasmuch as it was believed that it was all provided for in the bill of rights, which says that in that class of cases the jury are to be the judges of the law as well as the facts. The object is to let the jury have the case to determine unbiased by any declaration of the Court. It is idle to say that the Judge may declare the law, and then that the jury are to determine the law. The two things are in opposition. One contradicts the other. Now, if the jury have power to determine the law in the same manner, and to the same extent as they do in matters of fact, then it is not proper for the Judge to declare the law. I therefore move to reconsider the vote.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I am sorry that the Convention in its wisdom saw fit to non-concur in this amendment. I believe in all criminal cases, where there is a jury, the Judge should be debarred from stating the testimony to the jury, for the simple reason that if the mind of the Judge is biased in any degree his mind will always lean, and he will be found to dwell upon the strongest points in favor of the side to which his feelings are most inclined. And if the jury is to judge of the weight of the testimony and the credibility of the witnesses, they ought to judge of that testimony as it impresses itself upon their minds, not as it impresses itself upon the mind of the Judge. The strong points of the testimony, on the one side or the other, stated over concisely to the jury at the very last moment, would have great influence upon their minds. They would have their particular attention called to them when otherwise, perhaps, their minds would be more apt to compare the whole of the testimony in the case. Now, the testimony can be stated to the jury in such a manner that it amounts practically to a charge upon matters of fact, and yet not amount to an error that can be taken advantage of. Now, in relation to this subject of libel, what propriety is there in allowing—where the jury are the judges of the law and the fact—the Judge to put that testimony before the jury so that it will amount practically to a charge with reference to matters of fact? There is no sense in it; there is no propriety in it. It is virtually robbing the jury of the prerogative conferred upon them by another section. This section ought to remain in.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This is substantially the old Constitution. Why should we change it? I hope there will be no reconsideration.

MR. CAMPBELL. The reason is that Judges have disregarded it, and claim the right to instruct the jury upon matters of law in libel cases.

MR. HAGER. Let them do as they have done heretofore. I don't know that the press requires any more protection than they have had.

MR. HERRINGTON. Is it any reason why we should perpetrate a wrong, because it has been done in the past?

MR. HAGER. I don't know that it has been wrong. I have never understood why the press should have any more protection than anybody else. I have changed my notions on that matter. I presume they should be under the law just like any other individual, and have no special privileges. They are not of any more exalted character; they are not exempt from sin. They have their rights guaranteed, and that is all they ought to ask. It is all I am willing to concede.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

Division was called for, and the motion was lost, by a vote of 38 ayes to 49 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question now is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

MR. SHOEMAKER. I move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention is ready to take a vote now.

Carried; and the article ordered engrossed and read a second time.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to the report of the Committee on the Right of Suffrage.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. Every native male citizen of the United States, every male person who shall have acquired the rights of citizenship under or by virtue of the treaty of Queretaro, and every male naturalized citizen thereof, who shall have become such ninety days prior to any election, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year next preceding the election, and of the election precinct in which he claims his vote ninety days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may hereafter be authorized by law; provided, that no native of China shall vote at any election; provided further, that no idiot, insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector; provided further, that no person hereafter convicted of the embezzlement or misappropriation of public money, while holding office or employed in the public service, shall ever exercise the privileges of an elector, or hold any office whatever in this State."

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'ninety days' in the sixth line, and insert: 'when in cities of over twenty thousand inhabitants, thirty days; and in other precincts, ninety days.'"

SPEECH OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: The present law requires a residence of thirty days. The reason given for this change is that it will prevent the colonization of voters. Now, in no city in this State has there been any grievance resulting from the colonization of voters—the grievance rests solely and alone in the country districts. If the gentlemen desire to require a residence of three months in the country districts before a man can vote, very well. We are willing to make the change for them. But as the grievance which has been the cause of this change does not exist in the cities of this State, there is no reason why it should be changed; and there is every reason, in the larger cities of this State, why this change should not be made. In the country the precincts are large. The territorial limits are large. They don't move from one precinct into another. If their residence is in one precinct they are likely to remain there for at least one year. Houses and lands are rented for the term of one year; whereas, in the city the term is from month to month, for thirty days, no longer. The precincts in the city are of limited extent. The Palace Hotel is in itself one precinct in San Francisco, and under that section a person living and boarding in that hotel, occupying rooms there, or, if you please, they work there as servants, if a man leaves that hotel and goes across the street to the Grand Hotel, only about sixty feet distant, he is disfranchised for three months. I am unable to see the justice of it. There are a number of men in that city who work on the water front, and they are in the habit of moving their families to the particular part of the city that they are working in, taking a house or rooms for one month. When work ceases in that part of the city, they move to some other place. There are one hundred and thirty precincts in that city, and people are continually changing and moving about. They do it from necessity; and if from any cause they go from one precinct to another, perhaps only across one street, they are debarred from voting for ninety days. It is unjust to the people of that city, and I protest against it. There is no necessity for the change. There is nothing that requires the limit to be raised from thirty to ninety days. There is no occasion for it. I hope, sir, that the amendment will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. It seems there is just as much argument in favor of the country. It is not so easy to colonize in the country as in the city.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Do you know anything about the city?

MR. SMITH. Yes, sir; I lived in San Francisco longer than you have. I have lived in the State all my life. Now, it seems to me that ninety days is too long a time. It will certainly have the effect of disfranchising more than is necessary. It will certainly be a great injustice, which, in the county where I reside, will work a hardship. There are a large number of laborers in that county who cannot reside permanently in any one place. They stay in the county, but reside in different parts of it, wherever they can get work. It seems to me that sixty days would be ample. I see no reason for discriminating against the country. On the contrary, if there is any discrimination it ought to be in favor of the country. I shall favor the amendment for sixty days.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The proposition—I am satisfied the Convention don't clearly understand the effect. In its effect it will disfranchise a large number of people in every county in the State. No man will desire that. No man should seek by any means to disfranchise votes. When you prescribe that a man shall reside one year in the State, in the county three months, and thirty days in the precinct, you have obviated the opportunity of colonization. Under the old Constitution, thirty days in the county was all that was required. In my county this change would disfranchise a large number of men who are engaged in the mountains in Summer. There is no necessity of this. I hope the amendment will be made applicable to the whole State. I shall offer an amendment to that effect.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I will accept the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the gentleman will have leave to modify his amendment.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment as modified:

"Strike out 'the election precincts,' in line six, and insert 'county.' Also, insert, after 'ninety days,' in line six, 'and in the election precinct thirty days.'"

SPEECH OF MR. EAGON.

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: I hope none of the amendments will be adopted. The only reason given is, that certain persons in the city who are constantly moving about, may be deprived of their votes. Now, sir, there can be no rule adopted which will not work some hardship. The idea of the committee was this, to prevent fraudulent voting. It would be better that a few should be deprived of their votes, by reason of moving about, than that the election laws should be grossly violated by men who are not residents of the districts. If this rule is adopted, colonization will be made very easy in the cities, for men can be changed from one ward to another in thirty days who have no right to vote there, who do not live there and do not intend to live there, and thus the will of the people may be defeated. I hope that this section will be adopted, and that ninety days will be the rule. Large bodies of men might be taken to San Francisco for the purpose of carrying an election, because it would only be necessary to keep them there thirty days.

MR. SMITH. They would have to be in the county ninety days under this amendment.

MR. EAGON. There are officers to be elected in different portions of the county. These voters may be changed from one part of the county to another in order to elect certain officers. I hope the report of the committee will be carried out; it will meet the wishes of the people. You may disfranchise a few, but you must remember that the rule works both ways, and every illegal vote that is cast disfranchises a legitimate voter. Besides, as I understand it, a man does not lose a residence in one place till he gains it in another. In that case, if it is so held, these men who move around will not be disfranchised. Our object was to stop illegal voting, and I hope it will pass.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: The question before the Convention is simply this: Shall we leave the way clear, as it has been in the past, for this system of colonization, or shall we concur in this report and prevent that system of colonization which has corrupted our politics all over the State? Which will you have, gentlemen? Will you have a fair ballot, or will you open the door to fraud, as it has been opened in the past? Gentlemen say colonization would not be practical in thirty days. Experience has shown to the contrary. It has been done, and we have a right to judge the future by the past. What is to prevent corporations from sending hundreds of men from one locality to another in local elections? When Supervisors are to be elected at different times in a county, what is to prevent the colonization of voters where great interests are at stake? Absolutely nothing. The gentleman from San Francisco seems to think that the cities alone suffer. I will say to the gentleman that more men have been disfranchised in the country than in the city, because there is a large voting population. The element which comes to the country to work in summer suffer in this respect, and, as a rule, thirty-three per cent. of that element is disfranchised under the law. Nobody complains, because it is a recognized fact that registration laws are necessary to protect the ballot box, and men submit. Why should they not submit to this provision, which is even more necessary than the registry law? I call upon members to reflect upon this subject. It is one of vast importance. It is right that men, under certain conditions, should be deprived of their votes, in order to secure the purity of the ballot box. The county will suffer more than the city, and yet the gentleman makes an exception in favor of the city.

MR. BEERSTECHER. As the amendment reads now it applies to all alike.

MR. CAPLES. I did not know that. I am opposed to it, however, because I am opposed to colonization.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I am in favor of the proposition. This rule of colonization works both ways. There are business men in San Francisco who employ hundreds of workmen, and if their politics don't suit, they discharge them about election times and employ others. I am in favor of the proposition.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will pass. Now, the gentleman from Amador alludes to the evil of colonization, which the ninety day rule will prevent. Now, sir, I undertake to say that a thirty day rule is all that is necessary to correct these abuses. There is no danger of men being colonized in the precinct for thirty days. The gentleman from Sacramento wants to know if we want to open wide the door to fraud. No, sir, we are seeking to close up the already wide doors. We require a residence in the county for ninety days, and in the precinct for thirty days. There has never been any rule requiring a residence of more than fifteen days in the precinct. So we are doubling the time in the precinct, and increasing the term of residence in the county from thirty to ninety days. Why then should the gentleman pervert the issue by appealing to us not to throw open wide the door to frauds when we are actually closing the door. I think it would be sufficient for the Constitution to require ninety days in the county, and leave the rest to the Legislature. But I am willing to put in the thirty day rule as to precincts if it is deemed best. There is no sufficient reason for colonizing men for thirty days. Certainly the election of Supervisors will not justify it, and the ninety day rule will prohibit the colonization of counties.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I am willing to go as far as any man to protect the purity of the ballot box. I believe that to put in a fraudulent vote is no better than stealing. But, sir, while I am willing to do that, I am not willing to inflict a punishment upon a person in every way qualified and eligible, by preventing him from casting an honest vote, by such a provision as that proposed here. Now, for the sake of preventing a fraudulent vote now and then, do you propose to disfranchise honest citizens by the wholesale? It is a monstrous proposition. I am utterly opposed to an ironbound provision like this.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Condon, O'Sullivan, Doyle, Brown, and Larkin.

The roll was called, and the amendment was adopted by the following vote:

AYES.

Andrews,	Harrison,	Reynolds,

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section—'provided, further, that the Legislature may, by law, remove in whole or in part, the disabilities to exercise the elective franchise on account of sex.'"

SPEECH OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: Were I only to consult my own judgment and my individual desire, I should stand immovably upon the principle of striking down, now and forever, all barriers which would prevent women from exercising every political right or privilege which is exercised by men. Our Constitution would no longer be blemished by the assertion of a disfranchisement which is neither based on reason, on necessity, nor on the mandate of natural law. But I recognize public opinion as it exists in this State, and shall not insist that this Convention should exhibit a grasp of intelligence in advance of the people it represents. I do not expect, sir, that the mass of mankind should understand clearly the principles upon which their own changes are founded. We are naturally wedded to our idols, whether those idols be in the realm of substantial entities or of speculative thought, and however easy it may be for us to conform to prejudices rendered venerable by time, we find it exceedingly difficult to emancipate ourselves from the fetters of hoary prescription, even at the stern behest of reason and justice. One of the most astute philosophers of the present age has pointed out this great difficulty in the incipiency of revolutionary reforms, and tells us that, "to see the futurity of the species, has always been the privilege of the intellectual elite, or of those who have learned from them; to have the feelings of that futurity has been the distinction and usually the martyrdom of that elite." But happily, the time for martyrdom of those who advocate female suffrage, has passed, and it is no longer even unpopular to assert that the disfranchisement of one half of the human family is nothing more nor less than a bald and flagrant outrage.

Sir, we have heard on this floor harangues against female suffrage which it would be absurd to dignify as arguments. One gentleman gravely assures us that the ballot belongs to the men, because they have won it by the sword, and must maintain it by the sword. This is the veriest sophistry. The liberty of our people was won by the sword, but behind the sword was the heroic devotion and the uncomplaining suffering and endurance of the women. It was a mutual sacrifice, and one in which the women exhibited as high a courage, and as constant a patriotism, as the men. The result of these mutual sacrifices was liberty, in its national sense, to both sexes; and as the ballot is a mere incident to freedom, one sex has as much right to it as the other. If only those who bear the shock of battle are entitled to the vote, it should, by that gentleman's logic, be limited to the military exclusively, and male civilians, as well as women, ought to be disfranchised. If this gentleman is not prepared to give the ballot exclusively to the army, I submit that his conclusion extending it to civilians only of one sex is illogical and refutes itself. Gentlemen have also raised the objection that women are by habit and style of thought unfit to exercise the function of suffrage. That is an argument which reacts upon those who make it. Women are by habit and style of thought what society has made them, and if their custom of reflection has not run in political currents, it is simply because they have been precluded from exercising political functions. But women enfranchised would start out with a much larger capital to intelligently and correctly exercise their new function than any class which has ever yet been suddenly invested with the right to vote. They are our equals in acquired intelligence, and our superiors in quickness of apprehension and in moral conscience, and their average vote would be nearer a verdict of right on political subjects than that of men. Let me read you a short extract from John Stuart Mill bearing on this point. In a powerful plea for the equal rights of the sexes, he says:

"In the case of election to public trusts, it is the business of constitutional law to surround the right of suffrage with all needful securities as to limitations; but whatever securities are sufficient in the case of the male sex, no other need be required in the case of women. Under whatever conditions, and within whatever limits, men are admitted to the suffrage, there is not a shadow of justification for not admitting women under the same. The majority of the women of any class are not likely to differ in political opinion from the majority of the men of the same class, unless the question be one in which the interests of women, as such, are in some way involved; and if they are so, women require the suffrage as their guarantee of just and equal consideration."

The conscience of the nation is aroused to the great injustice done to women in circumscribing their callings and professions in life, and we have even opened to them a wide range of subordinate positions under Government. While we are conceding to them employment in public trusts, we are morally estopped from refusing to extend to them the right of suffrage. Men are advanced in political life because of their influence over votes. This is their bribe to the dispensing power. What legitimate influence can women bring as long as they are disfranchised? They can only supplicate through their male friends for appointments from those who depend for their positions upon votes. Beyond that they may exercise the blandishments of their sex, and the denial to them of the vote is to give public sanction to the encroachment of an immoral temptation.

But as I have said, Mr. President, I do not expect this Convention to go farther on the subject of female suffrage than public opinion in this State will warrant. I claim, however, that the principle of female enfranchisement is rapidly gaining ground in every intelligent community, and that what is public opinion to-day on this subject will not be public opinion to-morrow. Should this Constitution be ratified, long before it shall have run its course there will be an irresistible public demand to remove the inhibition on account of sex, and I submit that it would be the part of wise statesmanship to adopt the recommendation of the original committee, and leave it to the Legislature at any time to pass a law granting the suffrage to women. This is all the friends of female emancipation ask on this floor. They only demand that the door shall not be entirely shut against the righteous principle they advocate. It is not asking much; you could not concede less without, in my opinion, exercising a wanton act of tyranny.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

Carried, by a vote of 71 ayes to 35 noes, and at five o'clock and twenty minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at half-past nine o'clock.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That no scrip for per diem shall be issued to delegates who absent themselves ten days from the sittings of the Convention.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: There have been thirty or forty delegates absent here for the past month, not on account of sickness, that I am aware of, and some of the delegates have gone for good and do not intend to return here. I have a letter here from a prominent citizen of the town of San Buenaventura, informing me that delegates Fawcett and Finney do not intend to return here. There are other delegates, probably, in the same position, and I do not think that it is proper that the State should be put to the expense of appropriating money to pay these gentlemen.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I move to amend, by striking out "ten" and inserting "seven."

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I accept the amendment.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I am opposed to all these buncombe propositions. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

MR. EDGERTON (when his name was called). I am utterly opposed to these Cheap John buncombe resolutions. I vote aye.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. O'Sullivan, Beerstecher, White, Lindow, and Freud.

The roll was called, and the motion was lost by the following vote:

Gorman,

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to resolution, 'for the time of during such absence.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. I rise to a point of order that was ruled on by the Chair early in the session. I introduced a resolution very early in the session, providing that no member who was absent without leave should draw any salary or per diem. Some one raised the point of order that it was not within the power of the Convention to control the per diem, and the Chair ruled that the point of order was well taken.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair did not entertain any doubt about the question. I do not think the Convention has any control over it. If they choose to pass any such resolution I have no objection to it.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I hope that neither the resolution nor the amendment will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair simply expresses its opinion about the action of the Legislature. I do not recollect what that decision was.

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to have the ruling of the Chair. I raise that point of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the point of order is well taken, and the resolution is out of order.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be requested to furnish to this Convention the amount of stationery drawn by each member of this body.

MR. KELLEY. Mr. President: It has been whispered around this Convention that there has been considerable speculation going on in stationery amongst these members.

MR. EDGERTON. Name them.

MR. KELLEY. I have never heard any names called. I have seen Pages come in here with arms full of stationery for one person, enough to last them their lifetime, provided they die in any kind of season. I hope this resolution will be adopted.

The resolution was adopted.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That nine hundred and sixty copies of the article on judicial department, as ordered engrossed, be printed.

Adopted.

NOTICE.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: Notice is hereby given that, on to-morrow, I will move to amend Rule Forty-three of the standing rules of this body, by striking out from line one, the word "ten," and inserting in lieu thereof the word "five."

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on right of suffrage. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: As this matter was very fully discussed by the gentleman moving the amendment, I move the previous question on the article.

Upon ordering the main question, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, O'Sullivan, Steele, Wickes, and Grace.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to order the main question put by the following vote:

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I am sorry to see that certain gentlemen on this floor are in the habit of moving the previous question whenever the question before the Convention does not suit their views, although they will keep this body discussing for days when it is about their individuality or the interest of their little county; but this question is one of vital importance to the State at large, and I protest against this gagging of a few. Mr. President, I have discussed this question when in Committee of the Whole on a standpoint which I think has no more force to-day, as, according to the doings of Congress, the war cry has somewhat changed, and the motto of Chinese can't come can be added to Chinese must go. I intend to express my views from social laws and the immutable laws of nature and equity. The part that the women perform in society is one that has been the most unknown, and the less investigated. There are three prevailing opinions about women and their duties in this world. Some people consider women as being weak and fickle, who, the same as a child, must be kept in guardianship. Others believe that woman must be considered as a dainty and precious flower, which must be kept and preserved at a great expense, and which must keep out of all our anxieties and cares, so as not to fade itself. The third opinion is that women are equal to men, and claims for her all the privileges entitled to themselves. The first opinion is the one of those who, having no faith in themselves, cannot accord any to others, and they take a woman as a slave or an inferior being, but, thank God, those are few. The second opinion is the one of the idealist, poets, and dreamers, who form an ideal of everything and never look at the reality; that class is very numerous, and certainly cannot but be approved in their opinion. But the third opinion is the one of the positivist and materialist; it is the opinion of men who look at things in their true light, and believe in equality, in justice, and in reality. I maintain that between man and woman there is no superiority, no inferiority; there is equality of wants, equality of virtues, equality of vices; the same necessities exist between the two, and the only difference is in the diversity of aptness to perform the same duties. Women, as well as men, possess the right to exercise the faculties that nature has bestowed upon them; and I deny to anybody, be he ever so high situated, the right to confiscate that free exercise for his own ambition. I have said, and I repeat, sir, that there was equality, and the only difference was the diversity of aptness to perform sometimes the same duties. If the principle of equality exists, and I challenge any one to prove to me the superiority of man, therefore in voting there is no difference in the aptness. Voting does not require physical strength; it requires judgment; it requires brains; it requires that sense of foresight which the women certainly possess more than men.

Upon what grounds do you want to refuse to beings that are your equals, that possess the same quality to perform the same duties; upon what ground do you refuse them the same rights that you claim for yourselves? Be consistent, gentlemen. The first principle of republicanism is equality, and the first maxim is to accord to others the same privileges that you claim for yourselves. I protest, sir, against any doctrine tending to absolutism. Some gentlemen will object that if women vote they will neglect their family duties. And you men, because you vote, do you neglect your duties? And if you fulfill them, cannot women do it also? Are you better, and do you mean to flatter yourselves so much as to not fail? Some other gentlemen will object, also, on account that women by mixing with men will degrade themselves, and that politics will be equal to depravity. Don't you every day in life mix with women, and still they are honest, and you are also? Some other gentlemen will say that lobbying will be done by women, and that it will be hard to oppose it. Well, gentlemen, it might be hard; but when I have seen the lobbying that has been done in this Convention, I do not know if lobbying done by women could be more obnoxious. Then, gentlemen, according to that theory, you would acknowledge your weakness; and you call yourself the strong sex; and still a woman will make you vote wrong the same as a champagne supper. Then women are strong and you are weak; and, as such, you must accord them the right that you cannot perform as strongly as they could. But, Mr. President, that amendment does not give women the right of suffrage; it provides that the Legislature shall have power, when the people desire it, to give them that right of voting. I tell you, gentlemen, as much solons as we may be, although we think ourselves infallible, we have not the right to determine what the public opinion will be in ten years or fifteen years; and why not adopt this amendment, if the people instruct the Legislature to give women the right of suffrage? I deny to this Convention the power to bind the next generation. The earth moves around the sun, and as progress goes forward, liberal ideas are bound to go ahead. Republican principles are gaining every day, and he who tries to oppose them commits either a blunder or a social crime. Therefore, I hope the amendment will prevail. It cannot do any harm; it can do good; and until I see any good reasons, except a narrow-minded prejudice of backward civilization, I will vote to sustain the woman suffrage, and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: The action of this body heretofore shows that no positive provision for woman suffrage can be carried. The friends of the measure, therefore, now only ask that the original provision of the Committee on the Right of Suffrage be adopted. That is the present amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers. It simply provides that the Legislature may remove the disability of sex. I hope it will be adopted. I know how settled and pronounced is the opposition here to woman suffrage—that it cares not for discussion, and shuts its ear to argument. It is well, however, to remark how opinions sometimes change in this world; how whole currents of history change; how the social, civil, and political condition of large classes of people change. The superb contempt which the proud Templar in Ivanhoe had for Isaac of York, was representative of the feeling entertained in those days, by Norman and Saxon both, against the Jews. And yet it will be noticed that the time came when descendants of the race, represented by Isaac, were among the foremost of Englishmen, and that one of them to-day stands behind the British throne, a power greater than the throne itself. The question, sir, whether or not American women shall be freed from their political disabilities, presents an issue in American politics that is interesting, important, practical, and urgent. It has survived the diseases of infancy; it cannot now be suppressed by ridicule or withered with a sneer. It has received, and is now receiving the earnest attention of some of the best thinkers of this country and of this age. Woman suffrage has already received the support of large minorities of the Legislatures of a large number of the American States, and been adopted in one of the Territories. It has had a most respectful hearing before a committee of the Senate of the United States; and while the report of that committee was adverse, its opposition was mainly on the ground that the proposed change in the elective franchise is a matter more properly belonging to the States than to the General Government. It is indorsed by eminent Congressmen and statesmen; is advocated by leading magazines, newspapers, and lecturers throughout the country, and has many earnest friends in every walk in life. It has many advocates, also, in England—a country still far behind ours in the recognition of liberal political ideas. And more than that, sir, it is in the direction of, it is akin to the other achievements of that grand movement in American and English history which has had for its object the sacred principle of human liberty, and which, commencing with the angry clangor of the half-drawn swords at Runnimede, and struggling on from year to year, from generation to generation, from century to century, gradually, from time to time, struck off most of the shackles that bound the minds and persons of men, and invested the people with most of their inherent rights; until at last, in our own country, it has accomplished by legal enactment, by constitutional declaration, a recognition of the great truth that all American men, at least, are free and equal in their political rights.

But this movement, until within recent years, did not include woman—except so far as she was, to some extent, necessarily included in the great principles which it sought to establish. Her political status has not been changed in the least by this long and glorious struggle. It is the same that it was before the Norman set foot in England. Her general condition has undoubtedly been greatly improved. She is better fed, better clothed, better housed, better educated, better cared for, more respected. But she has no more political rights to-day than the singing birds which you keep in gilded cages, or the horses which you pamper in garnished stalls. She has certain civil privileges temporarily granted her; but, as she had no hand in creating them, so would she be helpless to prevent their destruction. Political power, sir, is the only basis upon which civil or individual rights can be safely rested. We have a striking instance of this truth in this State, at this time, in this Convention. Our desks are groaning under the weight of propositions charged with the purpose of utterly destroying all the civil rights of a large portion of the population of this State. They have come from all quarters—from gentlemen representing all political parties, and every phase of political sentiment and affiliation. It has been stated that there are more than one hundred thousand Chinese in this State. It is well known that nearly all of them are men, over twenty-one years of age. Suppose, sir, that each of those hundred thousand men was a voter, having his right to vote embedded in the Constitution! How many of these propositions would you see here then? Not a solitary one. In that event the guttural grunt of the pig-tailed Chinaman would be as potent in the land as the nasal twang of the native-born Yankee, the "whars" and the "thars" of the southwesterner, the rich brogue of the gentleman from Tipperary, or the sweet accent imported from the vine-clad hills which stud the Rhine. I say this, sir, not because I do not concur in opposition to Chinese immigration, for I think it a great evil, but to show how strong among the forces which protect individual rights in this country is the ballot, and how weak is everything else without it. Civil rights and personal privileges not founded on the rock of political power are as insecure and unstable as a house built on shifting sands. Only a few of the objections to woman suffrage can be noticed in my limited time. It is said that it would unsex woman, and that it is against the laws of God and nature. Unsex woman! Well, sir, if the thing could be done, I would like to witness the wondrous spectacle of a California Constitutional Convention, led by my gallant colleague, Doctor Caples, unsexing a woman. Against God and nature!

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's ten minutes have expired.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I desire to place myself on record in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers. I believe in the right of women to the suffrage. We have made suffrage universal so far as men are concerned, including all the ignorance of the country, black and white, good, bad, and indifferent. Now I do not believe that it is right to deny an intelligent woman that which we have granted an ignorant man. Another phase of the question is, that women who are property owners are taxed without representation. This is manifestly a gross wrong, such a wrong as the men of the American Revolution protested against. I believe that this will be successful before many years, though now apparently unpopular. Public opinion on this subject is not yet founded on the basis of an intelligent canvass of the merits of woman's rights. But when the time comes that the subject shall be calmly investigated, this great reform will be granted with very little opposition. Mr. President, to say that women generally do not want the franchise, and that most of them will not avail themselves of an opportunity to vote, is no argument against granting this right. Women who are taxpayers will certainly avail themselves of an opportunity to help in choosing their Assessors and Tax Collectors if the right is granted to them. Mr. President, there are many noble women in the United States who are the peers of any man, and the superiors of three fourths of our present voters, and it is a gross injustice that they should be deprived of votes in this government. All reforms in the infancy of their agitation are unpopular, more through ignorance of their merits than from any other cause. The demand for woman suffrage is of this character. It is founded on eternal justice and will ultimately triumph, like all great truths. With women as voters, I firmly believe that we would have better politics and purer government. The time when woman was made a mere slave to man has passed forever, and her full equality in all rights must be acknowledged in the new era which is at hand.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I have no speech to make, but I wish simply to announce my adherence to the proposition to restore political rights to women. We have heard nothing against it. The fact is, sir, that gentlemen seem to be afraid that contact with women at the polls will certainly reduce women to their level. They admit that men are so corrupt, so debased, and so evil that contact with them on the part of the women, in the performance of one of the most important functions of life—voting—will deprave these women so that the domestic life will be invaded by all manner of evils. Going to the polls to vote, and coming in contact with men in the exercise of their political right, will so degrade them that they will be unfitted for the other positions in the world and in domestic life with the same men. Now, if these men are thus debauched, and are conscious of that fact, possibly we had better endeavor to elevate them by contact with these women. It may do them some good. The women have always been supposed to sacrifice themselves for the benefit of man. I can fancy that people coming from lands where woman is merely a beast of burden; where she walks on one side of a rope and the dog on the other, as in some places in Europe at this day, while the model man smokes his pipe and saunters along at ease, that men should have this degraded idea of women. But how, in the name of God, enlightened men, born in this country, and having the history of this country before them, can entertain such views, I fail to comprehend. You deprive them substantially of the right of petition. Men appear in the Legislature for them. The lowest criminal that is charged before the Court has a right to select his own counsel and appear in person. You deprive women of that right in the legislative department of the country. You say that she shall not appear by counsel selected by herelf. She must appear by those whose interests are opposed to what she desires, and you call it the right of petition. You say in the Constitution that they shall not come to the halls of the Legislature; that they shall not come there and influence legislation as regards the disposition of their property, the security of their lives and their relations with their husbands.

Those who hold the reins of government, and who undertake to make laws and interpret laws againt them, are the only ones to be heard on the question. It is true they may send a petition, but it is thrown under the table because it comes from women. If they have not the right to vote, what is the use of undertaking to act through a petition. It all amounts to nothing more nor less than that they have the misfortune, in the mysterious process of nature, to be born female rather than male. That is all. It is a gross outrage, and it cries out against the country and the institution that will do such injustice. There are men here who hear me to-day, who will see the time when women will vote, and they will regret the time when they opposed it too. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Vacquerel, has approached one of the dangers of the future. Who knows but that twenty years from now the Chinamen may vote. No one supposed when the old Constitution was adopted, that there would be one hundred and twenty thousand Chinamen in this State to-day. We do not expect to-day that they will vote. We did not expect twenty years ago that the negroes would vote. How do you know these contingences may not occur, and yet you propose to tie the hands of the Legislature so that they cannot give the ballot to women. It is wrong and imprudent on the face of it. I respectfully submit that this proposition ought to left open to the Legislature, and if we cannot trust the men who come here to the Legislature, we had better begin to distrust ourselves likewise, for they are just as likely to be intelligent and honest men as we are. I for one, sir, have no particular sentimentality upon this subject; but the God of justice rules this world, and there is retribution for those who undertake to violate its laws. You may tie your ropes of sand as much as you please, but justice will prevail in the end.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: On yesterday evening the gentleman from Los Angeles, recklessly, needlessly, and with malice prepense and of forethought, opened his manuscript batteries upon the common sense of this Convention. [Laughter.] The smoke has cleared away, and we are able to report but one casuality, time was the only victim. Mr. President, the question presented here is whether we shall authorize the Legislature to extend the suffrage to females. What is this demand that is being made? Gentlemen tell us that they merely desire that women may have a right to vote. Is this all? No, sir. This fungus growth upon the body of modern civilization is no such modest thing as the mere privilege of voting, by any means. Gentlemen here may be novices, they may be new beginners, they may not be fully educated, and may not know what this demand amounts to; but let us look to Europe. What is the demand in England? The right merely to vote? Oh, no; by no means. The demand is for the abolition of all distinctions between men and women, proceeding upon the hypothesis that men and women are all the same. Now, Mr. President, gentlemen who are so verdant as to believe that this demand is merely to vote, may be excused possibly for assuming that the mere exercise of the elective franchise would not seriously impair the integrity of society, the virtue of women, and the honor of men. But, Mr. President, there is no apology for such a degree of ignorance in this enlightened century, with the telegraph and the newspapers. Gentleman ought to know what is the great and inevitable tendency of this modern heresy, this lunacy, which of all lunacies is the mischievous and most destructive. It attacks the integrity of the family; it attacks the eternal decrees of God Almighty; it denies and repudiates the obligation of motherhood. It undertakes to nullify the decrees of God Almighty in fixing upon women a duty that is imperative, a duty that must be obeyed, a duty that disqualifies her for a rough and tumble contest with men in the struggle of political life. What reason is there for assuming that if these distinctions are all abolished, and women are turned loose in the world upon an equality with men, that they will maintain that high standard of purity and excellence that they have attained to. I am amazed! I confess that I am utterly incapable of comprehending the depth, and the width, and the extent of that ignorance that can conceive of the possibility of such a state of things. Let us illustrate for a moment. Take the case as it would occur in our midst here. Abolish the distinctions; and if you confer the ballot, the rest all comes as a necessary sequence, because the exercise of the elective franchise implies all the corresponding obligations of Government. Women, if they vote, can be elected to office. They would necessarily and naturally drift into primary politics. They would engage in all the tricks and corruption of the low and degrading associations that are inseparable from primary politics. They would be candidates for office. How would gentlemen like to bring this matter home? I ask gentleman to make a practical application of this rule to themselves. They have wives and daughters. Let us suppose your daughter locked up in a jury-room; your wife a candidate for the Legislature, stumping the county. She is the Democratic nominee. Her competitor, a Republican, might be a very ungallant man, and would insinuate that she was not exactly like Cæsar's wife, and finally end by declaring that she was not what she ought to be. Your wife stumping the county; one daughter locked up in a jury-room; the other daughter working on the road; you at home rocking the cradle, and reading a newspaper full of slanders and innuendoes against your wife, who is a candidate. Again, let us suppose that she is elected to a seat upon this floor; what would be the result? Now, Mr. President, we have seen a small illustration of what might be the result, particularly if it be a young and handsome lady. Half a dozen of our members here would be clustering around her like a bouquet. She would be the central figure, and they clustered around, discussing what? Matters at issue? Matters of State? No, beg your pardon, nothing of the kind. Discussing tweedledum and tweedledee, and what not, I do not know; but this I do know, that it would be nothing in regard to matters that would be pending before the Legislature. Perhaps you might happen in here and see your wife thus surrounded. You would think, very likely, that it was not a very pleasant condition of things, and that she had better be at home rocking the cradle, instead of yourself.

Mr. President, the cry is that women are deprived of their rights. Now let us examine this question for one moment. Of what rights are they deprived, and when? The gentleman from Los Angeles has charged me with having said that political power and political sovereignty are the creature of the sword. True, I said so. I did not go back and quote history and drift along down to our day to show how in every instance from the time that the wolf suckled Remus and Romulus, every political sovereignty has been born of the sword, and that political power is nothing but the creature of the sword. If I had been talking to or teaching a school of small boys, I should have done so, but I supposed I was talking to gentlemen who had read history, and if so they must know that the assertion I made is strictly true. I now assert that no government ever has been instituted, and no government ever has been maintained, except alone by physical power; and here is the secret of why men hold the power. Here is the philosophy of manhood suffrage. They say there are ignorant tramps that are permitted to vote, while intelligent females are deprived of the right of voting. Now the reason why the tramp is allowed to vote, is that political power, being the creature of the sword, and the tramp owing military service to his country is merely exercising that power that springs from his ability to maintain the government.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I have not occupied the time of this Convention on this subject during its previous discussion, and I shall not now occupy more than two or three minutes in stating my views upon this subject. Mr. President, I have a very great respect and a venerable regard for the thoughts of antiquity, and even for the forms of antiquity that come down to us in the present time to remind us of those dark days. I remember but a few years ago when Gerritt Smith and Wendell Phillips were lecturing through the country, showing that slavery was inconsistent with republican institutions and democratic ideas, and that it was the virus that would ultimately produce a revolution. I remember then there was these old fossils, these old whited sepulchers, asking us: Do you want your daughter to marry a nigger? Do you want your wife to run away with some old nigger? Do you want to be associated in society with niggers? It is refreshing now, in eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, to hear these same fossilized ideas presented to an intelligent audience. "Do you want your daughter locked up in a jury room? Do you want your wife locked up in a jury room and you at home rocking the cradle? Ha, ha." [Laughter.] These thoughts had their influence upon certain classes of minds, and they will have their influence perhaps on a certain class of minds at the present time; but I say we are living in an age of progress, and that the world is moving, and that, although we may be occasionally reminded of these monuments of the past, yet the world will move. These revolutions of progress will be made, although we may throw ourselves in the way and attempt to impede its progress. I do not know, sir, that the popular sentiment of California is sufficiently educated to indorse or to accept woman suffrage at the present time; but I ask my fellow delegates in this Convention—is it right, is it just, are we discharging the duties assigned to us in this Convention, by impeding the progress and thought of those who may come after us? What right have we by any iron-clad rule in this Constitution, to say that these subjects shall not be discussed; that the people shall not have the right to free discussion, and to instruct their representatives in the Legislature in regard to their wants in this respect? I say we have none. We certainly should leave it just as the Committee on Suffrage reported it to this Convention, making it possible for those who come after us to act as their consciousness of right may dictate. We have no right to stop the wheels of progress and say that they shall not progress any farther than we have done in our limited capacity. I certainly think, sir, in reading history, that just as civilization has progressed, just as enlightened views have obtained prominence, just in the same proportion has woman come up to her original position by the side of man as his equal. What man who possesses the right to be called a man would blush to be seen at the election, or any other place, with his mother, with his wife, with his sister, and recognize this sacred influence that always pervades society where these dear ones, these loved ones, are permitted to associate with us? Never before in the ages that have passed has man needed the purifying and elevating influence of the sex more than society needs it at the present time. I believe, sir, were woman recognized in her proper place now, these mushrooms of vice would be banished from your cities; these saloons and these gambling hells that are corrupting their fathers, brothers, and husbands would be banished. Now, let us leave the future to take care of itself, and if the Legislature in the future sees proper to remove the disabilities from women, in God's name, in the name of right, in the name of humanity, let them be permitted to do it. Throw no blocks in the way of the car of progress. I hope that the amendment will be adopted, and that this Convention will set itself right upon this subject.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: Believing that we ought to proceed to the transaction of other business; believing that the repetition of speeches made in Committee of the Whole, cannot accomplish any good object; believing that if this Convention continues constantly talking without acting, and believing that it is time to turn off the gas, I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Huestis, Dean, White, and Lindow.

MR. RINGGOLD. I call upon the Chair to enforce Rule Sixty-five, and have Mr. Freud vote.

MR. STEELE. I changed my vote from aye to no for the purpose of moving a reconsideration.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I call upon Mr. Freud to vote, under Rule Sixty-five.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section one.

The amendment was concurred in.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I move to strike out the words, "native of China," in section one, and insert "Chinese." There are a good many people who are natives of China who are white people, and who are in this State to-day.

THE PRESIDENT. We are working under the previous question and the amendment cannot be entertained.

ELECTION PRECAUTIONS.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section five of the article on suffrage, by adding at the end thereof the following, viz.: 'Every ballot voted shall be numbered in the order in which it shall be received, and the number recorded by the election officers, on the list of voters, opposite the name of the voter who presents the ballot. The election officers shall be sworn or affirmed not to disclose how any voter shall have voted, unless required to do so as a witness in a judicial proceeding. In all cases of contested elections, the ballots cast may be counted, compared with the list of voters, and examined under such safeguards and regulations as may be prescribed by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to call the attention of this Convention to this matter; I think it is of some importance. In this State we have been acting under the idea of a ballot, which is a secret vote, of course. The idea is to prevent people from being improperly influenced or governed in the elective franchise. I think we have, perhaps, carried that matter too far. In our efforts to entirely keep the ballot secret, we have opened the door to great evils—to double voting and to fraudulent voting. We may know that, in our county, a hundred fraudulent votes have been cast; men have voted that were not entitled to vote, and we may be able to prove that, but there is no way to prove for whom they voted. In many of the States of the Union attempts have been made to correct this evil. This is found in the Constitution of Missouri, and it is taken, word for word, from that Constitution. [Laughter.] You will observe that by this scheme, when a man goes to the poll to vote he gives his number from the register of voters. If he is the fiftieth man that votes, the ballot is numbered fifty, and the number fifty is placed opposite his name on the poll. The officers are sworn to secrecy, except upon judicial investigation. The ballots are preserved, and the moment a contested election comes up it is absolutely certain who the fraudulent votes have been cast for. I believe it is a measure that will commend itself to the Convention.

REMARKS OF MR. GRACE.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I just wish to say that I am satisfied with the system we have now in California. Our election system, I believe, is the best system that has ever been devised by man. It is utterly impossible for any of these landlords that own those large estates to compel their tenants to vote for any candidate which they favor. They cannot tell who does. A man can take his ballot and fold it up, and no man can follow him within one hundred feet of the polls, and he can go in there and cast his ballot. I have seen this system proposed by the gentleman from Santa Clara tried in Colorado during the war. The excitement was high in those times, because we had Union men, and loyal men, and those that were opposed to the Constitution, and said that it was a league with hell and a covenant with death. And we had there old fossils that were raising the secession flag. The tickets were numbered there, and these men that worked for the big landowners in the outside counties, if they did not support their men, they never worked another day on those places. It leaked out some way. I tell you there was a scattering. You could see them packing their blankets in every direction. There is where you could see a turn out of tramps. [Laughter.] I tell you, that when you come to destroy the secrecy of the ballot, you destroy the freedom of the country. I would not give a whoop in—kingdom come, for American liberty if this is adopted. [Laughter.] I tell you, I do not believe this Convention will reform the political morals, or any other morals of this world. When the Convention refuses to give women who pay taxes a right to vote, I do not believe we can improve upon a system that gives every American citizen a right to come up and vote a secret ballot. I tell you this is a subterfuge; it is an invention to wield the party lash, the landlord lash, and the railroad lash, and by their means, to wield tyrannical power over the common people. I am in hopes that the Convention will make the system that we have got perpetual as long as the Constitution stands, and that it will stand while this Government exists.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I do not know how this system has worked, or how it is working in the State of Missouri, but I do know that there was a special law passed, I think in eighteen hundred and seventy-four, in the State of Illinois, to apply to the City of Chicago, and after they had tried it once they abandoned it forever, because it proved to be the most pernicious and most damnable system that had ever been introduced. Just as well might you say that every man that places a ballot in the ballot-box, should take it openly and carry it there, and allow any one that may desire so to do, to read that ballot. If you desire to check fraudulent voting, the check must arise from registration; that is the proper way to check fraudulent voting. Require registration within a certain time, and allow no one to vote upon any certificates, and unless he appear upon the printed register, which printed register shall be exhibited in four public places, if you please, within the voting precinct; then there is no difficulty. The system in vogue in San Francisco to-day is, perhaps, one of the best systems in the world. It reduces the precincts to not more than three hundred voters. It obliges the register of that particular precinct to be published and be exhibited at least ten days before the election. Every person living in the precinct can go there and examine the number and the names of the registered voters, and there is no difficulty at all, sir. If this method were adopted, and the election officers might be sworn that they would not divulge as to who any particular individual voted for, that oath would be violated, it would amount to nothing, and any candidate for office might lodge a complaint in a Court and require the ballots to be brought into the court room, and expose the vote of every particular individual. There would be no sanctity of the ballot, sir; it would destroy the system of the secret ballot entirely, and just as well might you require a man to go and vote viva voce.

MR. LAINE. I think no man is fit to vote that is not ready to vote viva voce.

MR. BEERSTECHER. You are a man that can be independent; you are independent in your means and circumstances, but if you were a poor laboring man, that was working for a tyrannical master, and that man came to you and said you must leave my employment unless you vote a particular ticket, you would tremble, sir, and you would hesitate before you would leave that man and throw your family upon the cold charities of the world. That was the reason of the establishment of the one hundred foot law. Before that law went into effect in this State, it is a well known fact that we would go with voters to the polls and see their ballots put into the box. This intimidation exists. I believe that if we desire to retain the sanctity of the ballot, and if we desire the voters of this State to be free and untrammeled to exercise their choice, then let us have a secret ballot, let us have no numbers upon that ballot to divulge to any man how any citizen of this State has voted.

REMARKS OF MR. GORMAN.

MR. GORMAN. Mr. President: I hope that this will not pass. I hope the amendment will be voted down, for these reasons: If there was anything, sir, which could control the ballots of the people of this country in the interest of money or monopolies it would be this very thing. Why was the law passed prohibiting colored ballots being used? Because at Mare Island every man that voted there if he did not vote a certain ballot it was known very well, and he was discharged. Now, sir, all that any man employing a great number of men would want would be an excuse. They would dictate to every man who worked for them how to vote. I have seen a great number of men discharged because they did not vote in a certain way. The ballots were marked so that everybody could know. There would be no independent voting at all. I hope this will not be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I have lived several years where this system was in vogue. It was the only place in America where there is a despotism—in the City of Salt Lake. The Gentiles have tried to abolish this thing there because of the power it gives to the church. It makes one master for the people, and that master which happens to be in power—that power which happens to have the government. Now, sir, if the law prevailed in this State the party in power would hold an iron rod over a large number of voters. Talk about the oaths. Why, they would amount to nothing. The ballots would be on file. The County Clerks could always have them at their hand, and know exactly, and the moment it was known exactly how each man voted, could hold it as a terror over the voters at every election. It would be worse than viva voce voting. It has proven so in Salt Lake, and the Gentiles there have fought against it, as I said, more than anything else; for the purpose of bringing down the power of the church. I, for one, do not vote for this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. TOWNSEND.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: When this was first introduced I thought it was certainly a very good amendment; but after listening to the gentleman from San Francisco, I must concur with him that it is a little tyrannical. It deprives people of the privilege of voting four or five times, which has been considered a great privilege.

MR. GRACE. How would it?

MR. TOWNSEND. This would detect it. If we had this system, you would know. His name would be down.

MR. GRACE. Doesn't the present system require every man's name to be written down?

MR. TOWNSEND. They would know who he voted for so many times.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Do you suppose that these repeaters ever vote twice under the same name?

MR. TOWNSEND. I do not know. There is one thing we do know, that in case of a contested election, we could know who he voted for. But you are probably better informed in regard to repeaters than I am. I do not know much about that. It would have this merit: It would keep parties up to their contracts. When they sell their votes, and then do not vote as they agree, it would be discovered, and they would be punished in that way. [Laughter.]

Messrs. Van Dyke, Barton, Larkin, Dean, and Huestis demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

FOR SCHOOL OFFICERS.

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: I send up a new section to be added to the article, for Mr. Blackmer.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Women having the requisite qualifications of age and citizenship, as prescribed in section one of this article, shall have the right to vote at all elections for school officers, and shall be eligible to any educational office within the State."

MR. STEELE. Mr. President: Mr. Blackmer is not here, and in his absence I have offered this section. I do not know as it will do any good, as this Convention seems to be determined to set down upon woman suffrage and to deny to woman the position she ought to hold. She is a natural teacher, and to-day more than half the teachers in the country are women. There is no good reason why women should not be eligible to any educational office in the State. In many States she does hold certain offices, and in many places she holds the office of postmistress. Wherever she has held such offices she has proved herself able and competent. I hope that the gentlemen of the Convention will put away their prejudices and do this justice to woman, and make her eligible to any educational office, and if the people see fit to elect her that they may have the privilege of doing so.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment allowing women to hold school offices. In fact, sir, under the Codes to-day women can hold school offices. If the Codes are examined the anomaly will be found to exist that the laws allow women to hold school offices and does not allow her to vote for the office that she is qualified to hold. As has been stated by the gentleman who preceded me, if there is any office at all that woman is qualified to hold it is an educational office. Certainly she ought to have a right to say something in regard to the education of her children. I am in favor of the amendment. It is no innovation. It would merely place in the Constitution that which is in the statute to-day. It would merely be wiping out an absurdity which allows a woman to hold an office for which she is not qualified to vote.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: This is merely an entering wedge. This is an attempt to do indirectly what gentlemen have failed to do directly. This whole heresy turns upon the assumption that women are a class separate and distinct from men; that they have rights separate and distinct from men. It always proceeds upon the assumption that God Almighty has not imposed upon women the duty of maternity. Now, if we can repeal the laws of God Almighty, and say that women shall no longer perform that great function, why then we may adopt these provisions. I deny that we can do it. This is simply an entering wedge to get at what is simply a stultification of the common sense of the history, of the logic, and the human experience of six thousand years. Why is it that to-day all at once women are separate and distinct from men? Why is it that they are absolved from the obligations that God and Nature's God has imposed upon them? They say it involves the tyranny of the husband. Is it true? Is there any tyranny? Is it not a fact, that the women of to-day are infinitely and incomparably above what they have ever been in any age of the world? No man can deny it. They occupy a sphere infinitely above that of men. But this modern philosophy says that women are only men in disguise; that they have the same rights, and we must abolish the distinctions that nature has made. I protest, in the name of morality, in the name of common sense, in the name of the experience of mankind for six thousand years against this foolish, this hostile attempt to abolish the distinctions that are founded in nature and cannot be repealed by human folly.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I do not desire to make a speech on woman suffrage, because I am opposed to it. I am opposed to it because the noblest of women, those who bear and nurture the children, would not vote. It would allow a certain class of women to go to the polls and vote, while the good mothers who raise the children and stay at home and take care of them, would not be represented. That is the worst of the proposition, because I believe as Napoleon said: "She is the greatest benefactor of the State who bears and raises the most children." [Applause.] We all know that our mothers are not going to the polls to vote, and that every budding old maid will be there.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: If the amendment could be modified so as to apply to the mothers of children, and the female guardians of children, I do not know but what I would support it; but in its present shape I will not support it. I say that if women are to vote for school officers it should be the women who have reared the children, and I would be willing to confine the right of suffrage in men, in an election for school officers, to the fathers and guardians of children. I would be willing to restrict even male suffrage to that extent. Now, I will call the attention of the Convention to what this amendment, in its present shape, will result in. It will result in the necessity for providing separate ballot boxes, because the State Superintendent has to be elected with other officers under our present law. County Superintendents have to be elected with other officers, and the women, of course, have no right to vote for these other officers, and under this amendment cannot have the right to vote for them. Now, if she puts her ballot in the general ballot box who is to know whether she votes for only educational officers or not? Another confusion—at present there is no registration of women for voting. No person shall vote unless that vote is registered. Now, the registry law makes no provision for registering women. The registry law can be changed, but our first election comes before there is any Legislature called to change the election laws. I simply call attention to the confusion that will result. This amendment shows that it was got up in haste, without mature consideration, and it will not accomplish the object. It will only result in confusion. I say I want no public prostitute to vote for educational officers to educate my children. I say confine it to the mothers of children and I will support it, otherwise I will not.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: I believe in enlarging the sphere of women. Representative government is progressive, and is tending more and more to base itself upon intelligence. If man was intended to rule, not by brute force but by intelligence, woman ought to be taken in as a copartner with him in an intelligent representative government. Her activities could not have been designed to be swallowed up in marriage. She should be allowed to choose her own rulers, and to have more control of her own destiny. Every avenue of business should be open to her. She should be rendered more independent of man's mantle and home. None but the effeminate race of men who stand behind dry goods counters and peanut stands can object. Objectors have made but little advance on the ideas of the Mogul of India, Khan of Tartary, Sultan of Turkey, and Emperor of China, in reference to the status of women. Those who prate about woman's mission to bear children should be wished to have to bear one half of them. Grant woman the franchise, and under psychological laws she will bear a more self-reliant race, and a nobler type of manhood. Those who would deny to woman the ballot because she is not fitted for military service, may be cited to the heroic women who served our country in the Revolution, to Moll Pitcher, at Monmouth, who managed her slain husband's cannon, and received from Washington the commission of Colonel. They may be cited to the pioneer mothers of the West, who beat off predatory Indians; and to historic sieges, where female heroism was conspicuous. Is not the patron of our State an impersonation of female martial spirit? We should have signalized this day—St. Valentine's—by the passage of Mr. Ayer's amendment. It is a burning shame that we did not.

Messrs. Moreland, Hunter, Glascock, Doyle, and Pulliam demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Steele, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Barton, Brown, Grace, and Sweasey.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

NOTICE.

MR. STEELE. I hereby give notice that I will, to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to concur in the amendments to section one, offered by Mr. Ayers.

RESOLUTION—PAY.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I have a telegram calling me away this afternoon, and I desire to send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President of this Convention is hereby directed not to sign or issue any more scrip, or other evidence of claim, to any member of this Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is not in order.

MR. SHAFTER. I appeal from the decision of the Chair. I am in possession of a piece of paper which contains a falsehood on its face. It goes on to say that for services rendered the State is indebted to me seventy dollars. Now, sir, your name is undersigned, as President, to that paper. I do not know but that I shall have my right to proceed against you personally for the amount stated there. [Laughter.]

MR. LARKIN. I move that the resolution apply to the gentleman from Marin.

MR. SHAFTER. I have the floor. The statute of the State declares that we shall not receive any pay after one hundred days, and here is a paper which states that the State is indebted to me seventy dollars for the time which the statute declares I shall have no money for. It is a false statement on the face of it. It is against good morals and against public decency. It is an evidence of debt, and the law says there is no such debt existing. For one I protest against the issuance of paper of that character. It is putting out false pretenses.

MR. EDGERTON. Have you not received all the scrip that has been issued prior to this time?

MR. SHAFTER. Undoubtedly; and I am ready to return it. We all know that it is contrary to the statute which calls us here.

MR. GRACE. I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Under the table.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: The modesty of the gentleman from Marin overwhelms me. He has been here about half the time during the sitting of this Convention. He is a rich man.

MR. CAMPBELL. I believe the motion to lay on the table was seconded.

MR. CAPLES. The gentleman from Marin is a rich man; he has been here about half the time, perhaps less; he has been receiving his pay, I presume. Now, all at once it dawns upon him that it is immoral for members of this Convention to receive any pay for services that they have rendered at a sacrifice to themselves. Because I assume that gentlemen on this floor who, unlike the gentleman from Marin, have devoted their whole time, in a self-sacrificing spirit of patriotism to the public good, have sacrificed something. The gentleman informs us that he proposes to leave this Convention. He has been leaving all the time. He has been gone nearly the whole time, and he is going to leave this afternoon again, and therefore he hands in this resolution. Mr. President, I am simply overwhelmed by the gentleman's modesty.

MR. GRACE. I now renew my motion to lay the resolution on the table. I am also willing that the gentleman shall have leave of absence.

MR. ROLFE. I rise to a point of order. The resolution has been decided out of order, and there has been no appeal taken.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is now to lay the resolution on the table, which the Chair will entertain.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Shafter, Murphy, Hager, Burt, and Filcher.

The roll was called, and the motion prevailed by the following vote:

AYES.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the report of the Committee of the Whole on the article on water and water rights. The Secretary will read the amendments.

THE SECRETARY read all the amendments of the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment to section one, as follows:

Digitized by Google

"SEC. 1. The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated, for sale, rental, or distribution, is hereby declared to be a public use, and subject to the regulation and control of the State in the manner to be prescribed by law."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section one as amended in Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the end of section one: 'Provided the rates of compensation to be collected by any person, company, or corporation in this State, for the use of water supplied to any county, city and county, or city or town, or the inhabitants thereof, shall be fixed annually by the Board of Supervisors, or city and county, or city and town Council, or other governing body of such county, or city and county, or city or town, by ordinance or otherwise, in the manner that other ordinances or legislative acts or resolutions are passed by such body, and shall continue in force for one year and no longer. Such ordinances or resolutions shall be passed in the month of February of each year, and take effect on the first day of July thereafter. Any Board or body failing to pass the necessary ordinances or resolutions fixing water rates, when necessary, within such time, shall be subject to peremptory process, to compel action at the suit of any party interested, and shall be liable to such further process and penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. Any person, company, or corporation, collecting water rates in any county, city and county, or city or town in this State, otherwise than as so established, shall forfeit the franchises and water-works of such person, company, or corporation, to the county or city, city and county, or city or town where the same are collected, for the public use.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I have presented this amendment at the request of parties who have made this subject their study, and also because my own judgment approves it, and because of the universal desire, so far as an expression has been had upon the subject, of the people I represent, that this sort of action should be taken by this Convention. These provisos with regard to the power of the State to control the use and regulate the sales of these franchises, and things which are clothed with a public use, which gives the authority of the public control, are all within the scope of the Granger and Elevator cases decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. As I understand it now, the provision and the amendment will contain two methods of regulation. One where water is furnished in ditches, say, for instance, for the use of a mining community, or for the use of an agricultural community, under regulation by law; that is to say, by laws enacted by the Legislature, or possibly by the delegation of the authority to some local body. The other is for the regulation of the subject where it condemns the supply of water for domestic use of the inhabitants of a city, or town, or some other incorporated political subdivision of the State, which has a body always able to exercise this control. The necessity for it in the case of San Francisco, and its supply of water is demonstrated by the fact that the Water Incorporation Act which was passed in eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, the General Incorporation Act, authorized water companies furnishing water for domestic and family uses to the inhabitants of these cities and towns, contained among other things a proviso that the rates to be charged for water should be determined by a Board of Commissioners to be selected in this manner: Two by the city, or city and county, two by the water company, and in case they could not agree they should choose a fifth. In case they could not agree upon a person for the fifth member, then the Sheriff of the county should appoint such person. Now, that proviso is extremely defective, and has always worked defective, especially in the case of the city of San Francisco. The great difficulty has been non-action; and it makes no difference what complaints come up from the citizens of that city in reference to oppressive and extortionate rates there is no power any where to compel the action, which was contemplated in the general Act for the incorporation of water companies. Something like eighteen or nineteen years have elapsed, and no rates have been established in that city at all except the rates that were established by the companies themselves. A decision of the Supreme Court was made by which it appeared that no rates could be collected unless they had been established in accordance with this provision of the law, and a Board of Commissioners was established under the law for the purpose of fixing rates. The rates they made instead of being a reduction were absolutely an increase. It is true the company voluntarily threw off ten per cent. from all bills, but if they should collect the full rates, as established by the Commissioners, it would almost double the rate actually collected. There are plenty of cases where favored individuals pay only nominal rates, while poor householders pay more than they do for bread. This provision is aimed at this sort of abuse and oppression. It requires the Board of Supervisors elected by the people themselves to act, and gives peremptory process to compel them to act, not to shuffle the responsibility off upon any Commissioners. Now, if the people cannot get reasonable rates by means of their own officers it is their own fault, and their own misfortune. They always have the opportunity of turning them out and placing others in power. It is but right and proper that we should have held in the Constitution that power of regulation.

Now, there is is another question which may arise in regard to this matter. In the legislative department we have already provided that the Legislature may establish the rates of charges to be collected by water companies and telegraph companies, and it may be claimed that there is a conflict. But that may be easily adjusted either by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, or when we reach the article on second reading. I maintain that whatever may be done with regard to the use of any other franchise, or the control of any other business, that upon the question of the regulation of water, there never ought to be an opportunity or a possibility for a monopoly of any kind. It is absolutely indispensable to human existence, and no people should be placed beyond the power to control and regulate the rates. And no monopoly ought to be permitted to run along and arbitrarily fix the rates for this great necessary of life independent of any control.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

MR. HAGER. I believe Mr. Beerstecher is entitled to the chromo, and I move it be awarded to him. [Laughter.]

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I think it no more than just that I should make a statement, because my amount there is higher than the facts justify. There were several articles brought to me which will be returned. They are no use to me. If my accounts are correctly stated they will be about on an average with other members.

MR. STEDMAN. I desire to offer a resolution in connection with this matter.

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment, offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I ask leave to correct my amendment so as to make it apply to incorporated cities, cities and counties, and towns. Strike out the word "county," where it first occurs in line three, and the words "county or," in line five, and "county," where it first occurs in line fifteen, and the words "county and city," in line seventeen, so as to read:

"Provided, that the rates or compensation to be collected by any person, company, or corporation in this State, for the use of water supplied to any city or county, or city or town, or the inhabitants thereof, shall be fixed annually by the Board of Supervisors, or city and county, or City or Town Council, or other governing body of such city and county, or city or town, by ordinance or otherwise, in the manner that other ordinances or legislative acts or resolutions are passed by such body, and shall continue in force for one year and no longer. Such ordinances or resolutions shall be passed in the month of February of each year, and take effect on the first day of July thereafter. Any Board or body failing to pass the necessary ordinances or resolutions fixing water-rates, when necessary, within such time, shall be subject to peremptory process, to compel action at the suit of any party interested, and shall be liable to such further processes and penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. Any person, company, or corporation collecting water-rates in any city and county, or city or town in this State, otherwise than as so established, shall forfeit the franchises and water-works of such person, company, or corporation, to the city and county, or city or town, where the same are collected, for the public use."

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I desire to say that I hope this proposition will pass. It is one of the most useful which has been offered in this Convention, and will tend to commend this Constitution to a very large portion of the people of this State.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

Adopted.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add, in line two, after the word 'distribution,' the words 'to the public.'"

SPEECH OF MR. WATERS.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: My object in offering that amendment is this: The section declares that the use of all water is a public use. That is, that a man who has appropriated water for years to his own use, for private use alone, in which the public have no interest—that the use of that water is a public use. Now I do not think the people of this State are ready to adopt any such proposition as that. When an individual has had the use of water for twenty-five or thirty years, I do not think it becomes us now to declare that it is a public use. Men have taken water at their own expense, for their own farms alone. Has the public any interest in that? Is that a public use? I don't think it can be contended that it is. The Supreme Court has decided many times that it is private property. Now if it is a public use, what protection has any single individual in its use? I do not mean to say that water for cities may not be regulated by law. But there is a broad distinction. If we have no right to confiscate this property, let us not say we have. If we have a right, let us not do it. I think this amendment ought to be adopted.

SPEECH OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I have no particular objection to this amendment. I think it will do no good. It is not necessary so far as the sale and distribution of water is concerned. Now this section reads as follows:

"SEC. 1. The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated, for sale, rental, or distribution, is hereby declared to be a public use, and subject to the regulation and control of the State in the manner to be prescribed by law."

The proposed amendment is to add, after the word "distribution," the words "to the public." Now I will point out to my friend that he will defeat the object of this section as it is now formulated. It ought to be borne in mind that the two objects sought to be attained are these: First, to secure to the public the right of control in respect to waters appropriated and used for sale, rental, and distribution, to guard against oppressive and extortionate rates. It is also to guard against oppression arising from discriminating rates. That is one side of the question.

MR. WATERS. Does my amendment militate against that idea?

MR. HALE. Not that part. Now on the second point. In this country we have to depart from the general principles adopted elsewhere, on account of the arid climate, which makes it necessary to utilize all the waters. There is a necessity for a right of way, hence the necessity of invoking the power of eminent domain, by which we can take private property for the purpose of securing a right of way. Now suppose that fifty miners, or fifty farmers, club together and appropriate certain waters, and construct a line of ditch for the purpose of conveying the water, and their intention is not to sell the water but by a system of distribution agreeable to themselves divide it among themselves. Now the necessity for a right of way for the maintenance of such water appropriation is just as important to them as though it was for sale to the public. That is the reason why these words were left out when it was originally formulated. It is to enable parties to have the right of way on the one hand and to guard against extortion and oppression on the other.

SPEECH OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: When these words, "for a public use," are injected into this section, it will be very difficult to determine what the section does mean. Now, sir, we, under our peculiar climate, and soil, and industries, are more dependent on the proper use of water than any other locality in the whole civilized world; and, sir, in some portions of this State water is being so taken up, and so appropriated, and so used, that God's humblest creatures, in many localities, have difficulty often in getting what is necessary to sustain life. Now, sir, it is only the use of water that any man can have. No law in any country has ever intended to grant to any man any interest in water, except the right to its use. Now, sir, there is no such thing in this State as regulating the price of private property. There never ought to be, in this or any other State, unless that regulation arises from the direct need. Now, in many places in this State, the water which God Almighty created for the use of all men, has been diverted from the natural channel, and run into some artificial channel, to enrich the few. Now, sir, I know some of these streams that have been diverted and run the entire length of the artificial channel, clear past the points where the water might be made useful, and there permitted to run to waste—water which God's creatures should have at some reasonable price.

Now, sir, some remedy for this state of things is demanded. Now, sir, if we find that what is needed is the knife, and I am to be one of the surgeons, I shall not hesitate to apply it. I understand full well the effect of the gentleman's amendment. It is this: While seeking to remedy the evil, the gentleman, by injecting a couple of words, will accomplish this result: That this State can only control the use of water when the water is sold for a public use, or rented for a public use, or distributed for a public use. But the Legislature, while it can regulate water for parks, for flushing sewers, for the purposes of the fire department, it cannot so much as lift a finger to regulate the sale of any water for the use of a private person. Now, you talk about land monopoly, and railroad monopoly, but they are as nothing compared with water monopolies. Nothing could be worse than water monopoly, unless it might be the monopoly of the air we breathe. One is as necessary to existence as the other.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I think the effect of this amendment will be to destroy the purpose of the section. Now, he proposes to add, after the word "distribution," the words, "to the public." Then if the water is not distributed to the public it is not a public use. If it is sold, or rented, or distributed to private individuals, then it is not a public use, and the Legislature can have no control over it. Therefore, I oppose the amendment. A man or a combination of men may take the water of a stream. It may be for their own uses and purposes entirely, for irrigation, or something of that kind. Then it is not a public use. Then the Legislature would have no right to interfere. They may sell it to their neighbors, and yet it is not a public use. Now, I am of the opinion that water, like air and light, should be free to us all. No man has a right, to the exclusion of others, to air or sun. Why? Because they are necessaries of life. Why should individuals or corporations control and monopolize the waters of the State any more than light and air, for one is as much necessary to life as the other. They are all necessaries of life, and ought to be entirely under legislative control. I recognize the right of private property, where men have built ditches. But I do not recognize the right of any man, or any set of men, to control the waters which may be necessary for any of the cities. Take the City of San Francisco. Suppose a few men get control of all the water within reach, and then say to the people, you cannot have this water unless you pay so much. Why should they go without it? They cannot get the necessaries of life because a few men control them beyond the power of the State. No, sir; it ought not to be. Nor ought they to be forced to go armed and break down the dam in order to get water. It ought not to be in the power of any man, or any combination of men, to control the necessaries of life. They ought to be subject to legislative control, and they must be. Not that the Legislature should do any injustice to private property. I would not advocate anything of that kind. But if any great necessity exists, the great power of the law should step in and rescue the citizens. I believe this amendment will take away that power.

SPEECH OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I cannot understand what the gentleman means when he says that water should be as free as the sunlight and the air, and then in the next breath says he recognizes the right of private property in water. There is no consistency in those two statements. Now, sir, I hold that a man who built a water ditch fifteen years ago, put his money and his labor on it, took the water that was free and carried it to another point where men wanted to use it for mining, is the owner of that ditch and has the right to run the water through it, as much as I am the owner of a piece of land and have a right to cultivate it. When gentlemen say water must be free, do they mean that it must run in its natural channels; that nobody must take it out? If that be the doctrine, how are you going to advance the interests of the State by allowing water to be used for mining and farming? How are you going to use it? Do you suppose men are going to build ditches and flumes over mountains and cañons to convey water to a place where it is needed if you are going to say when they get it there that the water is as free as the sunlight and the air, and that anybody can take it? Is there any sense in that proposition? Don't it strike direct at the rights of property? They take it from the man, because there are no streams left in this State that can be taken. There is scarcely a stream upon which there are not riparian owners. That was not the case twenty years ago. No man can take that water from them. The doctrine of this State is this: If I find a stream of water unappropriated, I can divert that water. If I choose, I may mine there, or I can divert it and take it thirty miles and open a mine, or sell it to men who want to open a mine. If there was any riparian owner there I could not do it. Take the County of Nevada, represented by Mr. Cross. The wealth of that county has been acquired in this very way. Men have diverted the waters of the South Yuba River at an expense of millions of money, carrying it to the mines. Do you mean to tell me that it is not private property, and that the State has a right to take it away whenever they choose? Suppose you let the water run in the natural channels, what good does it do anybody except the few who live along the banks?

MR. CROSS. Do you say there is any proposition here to take away that property?

MR. MCFARLAND. Under the guise of regulation, yes. The State may then say that the company shall not charge more than one cent an inch for water, which would amount to a confiscation of vested rights.

MR. CROSS. Do you deny the right of the State to regulate?

MR. MCFARLAND. Yes, sir; as I deny the right of the State to take money out of my purse. They are as much the owners as a man is of his house and lot in Sacramento. You have no more right to say what they shall charge than you have to say what the farmer shall charge for his wheat. The gentleman from Nevada says, we have no right to take away private property, and yet the Supreme Court of the United States says you have, in the Elevator cases.

MR. CROSS. That was where there was a public use.

MR. MCFARLAND. When a man erects a warehouse, and gets a good patronage, then the State can say what he shall charge.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. The gentleman undertakes to overrule the Supreme Court of the United States.

MR. MCFARLAND. You don't believe in every decision of that Court, do you?

MR. HOWARD. No, sir.

MR. MCFARLAND. The Supreme Court has overruled the doctrines you believe in, in relation to the powers of the General Government. The gentleman the other day repudiated the idea that this is a nation, and the Supreme Court has decided over and over again that it is a nation. I am in favor of the amendment, Mr. President, because it modifies the section to some extent. It is better than the original section. It is impossible to use water without there being a private ownership in it. You must come to the point that some man has a right to the use of the water, and when you come to that point, you must acknowledge and recognize private ownership. You cannot get out of it unless you say that water shall run in its natural channels.

SPEECH OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I had not proposed to say anything, neither do I propose to say much. But it does appear to me that this idea that water is free to everybody because God Almighty made it, is opposed to the spirit of our institutions, and would revolutionize the country. Now, it is evident when men commence to dig ditches in this country in order to advance the country, and make improvements, they are the owners of those ditches, and of the waters which they appropriate. That is what they calculated upon, otherwise they would never have made the outlay. Now, when you come to examine the decisions of the Supreme Court, you will find that they have decided that water when taken from streams in pipes or ditches, is as much property as anything else. Case after case may be brought forward to show the correctness of the proposition. It is contrary to law; it is contrary to justice. These men would never have invested their money in the way they have, had they thought there would ever have been such a state of the public mind as to cause the adoption of any such pernicious principle as that advocated here. We know that under the laws of this State, which are in accord with the laws of the United States, when a man diverted the water from a stream where there were no riparian rights, and used that water a certain length of time, he became the owner of it. He used it, and the Courts did not require of him to turn some of it back into the same stream. Neither could the man who afterwards settled along that stream below appropriate the water. It could not be done. And now, contrary to law, contrary to usage, contrary to experience, we are talking about the use of water; that there is nothing in it but a use, and therefore no property. Give every man the right to take the water from those who have taken it out. This amendment is some improvement upon this monstrous provision, and therefore I shall support it. But it does not reach the main question. Neither do I agree with the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager——

MR. CROSS. I would like to ask you a question.

MR. BROWN. No, sir; my time is short.

MR. CROSS. I thought perhaps I might get some light from you.

MR. BROWN. I didn't get any from you. [Laughter.] This idea that there can be no property right in water is wrong. It is contrary to what has been established as the correct doctrine by the Courts of the land. These wild notions are all wrong. They are contrary to justice and law, and right. We had better be guided by the decisions of the Courts of the land, and by experience, and by a sense of justice than to launch out upon an unknown sea.

SPEECH OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I thought this question had been thoroughly and amply discussed in Committee of the Whole. But it does seem to me that some gentlemen never understand or comprehend the situation, or else they are willfully blind, one of the two. The idea that water running through my place over any public land of the United States, may be appropriated, even according to the statute, and thereby become private property, according to the doctrine of the gentleman from Sacramento, is one of the most senseless propositions that was ever introduced to an intelligent mind. You talk about confiscation. You talk about robbery. There is no government upon the face of God Almighty's earth that ever permitted robbery upon such a broad scheme as this proposes to do. Consider that this water drops upon the public land, and then flows through my land. Then the gentleman from Sacramento comes along and says, I appropriate this water for this or that purpose. If I enter any objection, he says, he has acquired private property. So does any common thief acquire private property, but he does it in violation of law and justice. Is it possible that a man can take property in this way, and yet not consider that it is founded upon a public use. If that be so, where is your right to confiscate my private property, and make it your private property?

MR. MCFARLAND. Did I not state explicitly that if you had any right upon that stream I could not take the water.

MR. HERRINGTON. You take it out above me.

MR. MCFARLAND. I could not take it a thousand miles above you, strictly speaking.

MR. HERRINGTON. You do take it. I understand the law. You have taken it right there on the Yuba River and never asked the privilege of those below.

MR. TULLY. I rise to point of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is not in his seat. [Laughter.]

MR. HERRINGTON. When they made these appropriations of the headwaters of the San Joaquin, who ever asked permission of the farmers along the banks of that stream? No man. And when the miners wanted water, which of them ever asked the farmers along the banks of the Sacramento and its branches. Never a solitary instance. It has been appropriated by a simple notice that it was appropriated for a certain purpose. No one has any right to take these waters unless it can be shown that it is taken for a public use, and for the benefit of the public. Anything else is thieving and robbery; nothing short of it. What right has any man to take the water which runs through my place, and then declare that it is private property. What right has he to do it. God put it there; it was mine, and you had no right to take it. That is a most stupid proposition upon which the gentlemen stand. That is the absurd position in which they have placed this Convention, pretending that we know nothing about these great questions. Oh! who will come to the feet of Gamalia, and seek after the divine knowledge which the gentleman from Sacramento has been able to pour forth.

Now, it has been established from time immemorial, that even the sovereign itself does not own any private right in water, no right that he can deprive the citizen of. How can these gentlemen acquire what the sovereign never owned. You can only take it for a public use, for the benefit of the public, and to do this you must condemn it, and to condemn it, you must set up that it is for a public use. You can get it in no other way. What different right do you acquire by sticking up a notice, and declaring that you take it. It is all nonsense.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: It seems to me we have got a tempest in a teapot here. We have been lectured here about the gifts of God Almighty, and we hear it stated that there can be no private ownership in the necessaries of life. I understand that all the gifts of God are subject to private ownership. It useless to talk about anything else. All my friend from San Bernardino is trying to do, is to guard against individual wrong, and make this matter plain, so that individuals cannot come into the door yards of some of these parties down there, where they have appropriated the water for distribution among their own farms—so that they could not come there and take it away. That is all there is about it. Gentlemen do not seem to comprehend what is meant by the words, "to the public." It does not mean to the organized public, or to some municipal corporation. When I write a piece to the public, and publish it, I do it to the public—to everybody. When I have appropriated water for distribution upon my farm, I have not appropriated it for sale; I have not appropriated it for rental; I have not appropriated it for distribution. This amendment says simply when it is for distribution to the public—that is, to persons who may buy it. That is all there is about it. This whole discussion is entirely too broad. The amendment is simply to make the matter more clear. I am satisfied the amendment ought to prevail, that it will do no harm. When appropriation is spoken of, it means an appropriation made according to law.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: There seems to be a good deal of misunderstanding here. I have heard of the Legislature of a "thousand drinks," but I think this is a Convention with water on the brain. I don't wonder at it, for Sacramento is filled with water. As a city, it does not need water. We see it everywhere. It is of the consistency of coffee; you have to drink it. Now, we must remember that the resources of both the mining and farming regions have been greatly developed by the means of water. It has been the chief means in the mines. I believe in encouraging these things, and allowing the men who have put their money in, a fair profit. We ought to be very careful in the regulation of these properties, so as not to cripple them.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Coming from the section where I do, I am entitled to say something on this subject. Now, it seems to me that this matter involved here is the very matter that has been settled by this Convention in Committee of the Whole—the question of whether there ought to be the right to ownership of water. Now, if an individual takes up a lake, he deprives the farmers of the use of the water, and prevents the Legislature from regulating the water right, so as to avail the whole country. I am surprised at the gentleman from Tulare, who comes from a county where there is such a limited supply of water, and where the great body of the land is worthless without water. He wants to prevent the Legislature from so regulating the water right as to give to the settlers the advantage of all the water there is there. If this amendment is passed it will give the individual the right to use what he wants, and waste the balance of it, and prevent the Legislature from regulating that water.

MR. WATERS. Will the gentleman be kind enough to point out anything that will allow a man to waste water.

MR. SMITH. So long as it is a private use, and a private ownership, he can use it and control it as he pleases. So long as he uses the water for the public, that is a public use. But the ownership of the water is left in the individual, and he can control it, and the Legislature has no right to regulate it so as to give the advantage of it to the public. Now our object is to have the State control the water, so as to regulate its use, so as to give the benefits to the public, so far as that water will go, so as to prevent an individual owning water and using it without regard to the public benefit. This matter has been well settled by the laws of this State. The laws of this State have never yet recognized an absolute ownership in water; only a certain species of ownership. The Supreme Court has never decided emphatically that there is. The decisions all go to the effect that there is no ownership in the water itself, but only in its use. The State should have the right to condemn private rights, so that the water may be made available to the greatest extent that the water will go.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Bernardino, Mr. Waters.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Brown, Condon, Tully, Swing, and Waters.

Grace,

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding to section one, line four: 'provided, that the Legislature may, by general laws, authorize the taking of private property on just compensation made therefor, when necessary to the construction or maintenance of water ditches or canals for the drainage or reclamation of lands, and may on like conditions authorize the taking of private property when necessary to secure rights of way to or for drainage of mines.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HALE.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I ask the Clerk to read that amendment again. I do not believe it is understood by the Convention.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment again.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: This amendment has been considered in connection with section one, and I wish to say that the purpose of it is, that it was feared by many gentlemen who were farming along the rivers, where levying and reclamation is necessary, that there was an absolute necessity for a provision of this kind. There are lands in this State which are the most valuable that can be found, when fully reclaimed, but which never can be reclaimed unless this power of eminent domain can be invoked. Government, by an express Act of Congress, gives the right of way across the public domain for the purpose of draining mines, or allows the State to give the right of way. There is some doubt about this matter, as to whether the necessary right is conferred by section one; hence this amendment has been framed in order to render it certain. I believe it will be sufficient for the purpose. I hope it may be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. BARTON.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I desire to concur in the remarks of the gentleman. This proposition carries with it justice and fairness in behalf of the low lands of this State. Without some such provision as this, we cannot possibly expect the reclamation of land. There is no steal in it that any one need be alarmed about. There is no chance for any corporation to get control of it; but it is to enable the farmers to reclaim their lands. I hope it will be adopted.

SPEECH OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: This I look upon as only another mode of confiscation. Under this Government one man is just as good as another. One man's private rights are just as good as another's, though he may not be worth one hundredth part as much. I look upon this scheme as a direct infringement upon these private rights. They are to be taken upon making just compensation, but it says nothing about the public good. It is not confined to the public. It attempts to give the right of way across private property to a private individual, a miner, regardless of whether that mine is for the public use or not. Mines cannot be for the public use, any more than farms can. Government does not carry on the business of mining, though it does the business of coining. Now, I do not care if the amendment does say that just compensation shall be made. If I have property, it is my own business whether I dispose of that property or not, unless the State wants it for a public use. If the State needs the property for a public use, or if an individual needs it for a public use, then my property can be paid for and taken. But no man's property ought to be subject to be taken for private use upon any compensation whatever. I may have a horse; he may not be of use to me, though I believe the horse is dead, but I may have a mule, and he may be of no use to me. Another man might have a great deal of use for him, and he may come and offer me his full value; but neither the State, nor any power in the State has the right to say that I shall give him that property for ten times its value, unless I am willing to do it. Now, we authorize the owner of a mine, whether a corporation or an individual, to go across the private domain of another man to get that mine drained. Now, if there is any such law as that, it is contrary to the Constitution of this State, contrary to the Constitution of the United States. I have authorities here to show it. I may have a farm, and another man may have a mine right alongside of it, and for the purpose of getting to his mine, it may be necessary to ruin and destroy my house. Still my dwelling may be worth twice as much as his mine; he may be willing to pay me all it is worth; still, I contend I have a right to say that he shall not have it. There is no justice in it. You will find a case in Chetney's New York Reports, Beatman v. The Saratoga Railroad Company. In that case it is decided that such a thing as I have described is contrary to the Constitution of the United States. If we put it in this Constitution, it will be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States. "The right of eminent domain does not imply the right of the sovereign power to take the property of one citizen and transfer it to another, even for full compensation, where the public interest will be in no way promoted by such transfer." That is what is decided in that case, and this amendment will be in violation of it. It goes on to show that such a proceeding would be in violation of the contract by which the Government of the United States granted this land to the individual, and therefore repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, where it says that no State shall pass laws impairing the obligation of a contract.

MR. HITCHCOCK. In reclaiming fifty thousand acres, is not that for a public use?

MR. ROLFE. If it is a public use there is no necessity for this provision; you can always take property for a public use, and there is no necessity for putting anything more in the Constitution. Nobody denies that individual property can be taken for a public use, whether for reclamation, or what not. This is simply an attempt to infringe upon the sacred right of private ownership where no public interest is involved, for if there is any public interest, this is wholly unnecessary.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: The gentleman referred to a portion of a decision to sustain his position; if he had read the whole of it, he would have found a different state of things. He stopped short of that portion which defines water rights. Now, the object of this provision is this: It is well known that there are large tracts of land, valuable agricultural land, in this State, that need draining, but are not drained for the reason that the parties cannot get the right of way; this is also so in the business of mining. The man who owns the drainage will charge an enormous price for the right to run a tunnel through. Now, if the gentleman had read further in the same decision, he would have found this: "But if the public interest can be in any way promoted by the taking of private property, it must rest with the wisdom of the Legislature to determine whether the benefit to the public, by the use, is of sufficient importance to authorize the exercise of the right of eminent domain."

Mr. ROLFE. It says the Legislature may do that. Then what is the use of a constitutional provision?

MR. CROSS. We are a legislative body. I don't know whether it is unnecessary or not. When the Legislature comes to do it, I do not want them to find any snag in the Constitution which will prevent their doing it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

The amendment as amended was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole, in striking out section two. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. The unappropriated waters of the lakes and rivers of this State are declared to be public property, and may be appropriated by individuals, associations, or corporations, subject to such conditions and restrictions as the Legislature may impose."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole, in striking out section three. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. The Legislature shall enact laws permitting the appropriators of water and the owners or occupants of land to construct levees, ditches, canals, flumes, and aqueducts, or run their water through natural channels, for agricultural, mining, manufacturing, milling, domestic, drainage, reclamation, or sanitary purposes, across the land of others."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in adopting a new section. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The right to collect rates or compensation for the use of water supplied to any county, city and county, or town, or the inhabitants thereof, is a franchise, and cannot be exercised except by authority of and in the manner prescribed by law."

Concurred in.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature may pass laws permitting the owners or occupants of land to construct drains or ditches for agricultural or sanitary purposes across the lands of others."

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order. The same thing has been voted down twice.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Rights to the use of water heretofore acquired by appropriation and use of the same according to law, which have vested and accrued, are private property, except in so far as the use may be for a purpose in which the public has an interest."

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I contend that this amendment is strictly in line with the decisions in the Elevator cases. That is a mere declaration of what I consider is the law. Anything else we can say is nugatory. I do not desire to enter into a discussion of the question at all, but it seems to me a plain proposition.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I cannot see any particular objection to the amendment, and yet it seems unnecessary, as my reading of section one seems to cover the point. Unless used "for sale, rental, or distribution" it cannot be affected by the Legislature. But where the use becomes public, then it is subject to this provision. I cannot see any necessity for the amendment.

MR. WATERS. If two private individuals appropriate water for distribution between themselves?

MR. FILCHER. Certainly.

MR. WATERS. Then this section don't cover them.

MR. FILCHER. I do not see why not.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Mr. President: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Water for the use of any city or county, or city and county, or town, in this State, or the inhabitants thereof, can only be appropriated by the lawfully constituted authorities of such city or county, or city and county, or town. Any appropriation of water heretofore made by any person, association, or corporation, for the purpose of supplying any city or county, or city and county, or town, or the inhabitants thereof, not actually evidenced and carried into operation by the construction of waterworks, and the furnishing of water at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be void."

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. Mr. President: I am in favor of this amendment because I think it is about time this wrong upon the people of the State should be stopped. Now, sir, this is one of the most serious questions that has ever presented itself to the people of California. It is an evil that has been growing up for years. The Spring Valley Water Company controls the city in its grasp. This says that these waters can only be appropriated by the authorities of the cities, counties, and towns, for the use of the people. It does not interfere with parties who have appropriated waters, or prevent them from carrying their works into effect. The only means San Francisco has of relieving herself from this curse is to construct waterworks of her own.

MR. FILCHER. We are called upon to vote upon this proposition and I wish to say that the subject is fully covered by section six of the article on corporations. I shall therefore vote against this amendment.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: My idea is that it is very doubtful whether it is or not. Take a case like Lake Tahoe. Somebody stuck a notice on it declaring that they were going to bring the water to San Francisco. That is a private appropriation. Now, it is necessary to prevent in future any such locations of these waters, if there be any such left in the State.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I am opposed to the adoption of this amendment. It is the assumption of a power to declare a forfeiture in certain cases. Now, it is not competent for this Convention to take upon itself judicial functions. That is for the Courts to say, and not for us. The object may be a good one, but if these rights exist, we cannot declare them forfeited.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I do not believe that the gentleman who has offered this amendment understands the scope it will have. I will give an example. Suppose the farmers of Los Angeles County want to appropriate the waters of some river for the purpose of irrigating their fields. If this amendment is adopted, it could not be done. They must go and get the Board of Supervisors to claim the water, and then furnish it to them. Nobody can appropriate water except the State, county, city, or town. I understand the object of this is to get some relief against Spring Valley, but I apprehend that the company would ask nothing better than this. They never would have any complaint. I should be glad to support a proposition to accomplish the object which this is intended to accomplish, but this will not do.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Smith.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, Farrell, O'Sullivan, Smith of San Francisco, and Beerstecher.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Dean, Larue, Laine, and Swing.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

The motion prevailed, and the article was ordered engrossed and read a second time.

NOTICES OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that, on to-morrow, I will move to reconsider the vote by which section —, added in the Committee of the Whole to the article on water and water rights, on motion of Mr. Herrington, was adopted.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention ordered to engrossment the article on water and water rights.

MR. THOMPSON. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, February fifteenth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, move to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment of Mr. Hitchcock, to section one, was rejected. Also, I give notice that, on to-morrow, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the article on water and water rights was ordered engrossed and ordered read a second time.

STATE INSTITUTIONS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read the following proposed new section:

"SEC. 6. After the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, the labor of convicts shall not be let out by contract to any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, and the Legislature shall, by law, provide for the working of convicts for the benefit of the State."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be ordered engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

HARBOR FRONTAGES, TIDE WATERS, ETC.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendments of the Committee of the Whole to the report of the Committee on Harbor Frontages, Tide Waters, and Navigable Streams.

THE SECRETARY read the amendments, and then read section two, as follows:

"SEC. 2. No individual, partnership, or corporation, claiming or possessing the frontage or tidal lands of a harbor, bay, inlet, estuary, or other navigable water in this State, shall be permitted to exclude the right of way to such water whenever it is required for any public purpose, nor to destroy or obstruct the free navigation of such water; and the Legislature shall enact such laws as will give the most liberal construction to this provision, so that access to the navigable waters of this State shall be always attainable, and that the people shall not be shut out from the same."

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. All tide lands within two miles of any incorporated city or town in this State, and fronting on the waters of any harbor, estuary, bay, or inlet used for the purposes of navigation, shall be withheld from grant or sale to private persons, partnerships, or corporations; but sites for wharves, warehouses, or other necessary incidents to commerce, may, upon application to the Board of Supervisors of the counties in which such sites are situated, and after due public notice of such application, be leased by such Boards for a term of twenty years to such persons, partnerships, or corporations; provided, that nothing in this section shall apply to the tide lands of the Bay of San Francisco."

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'commerce,' in line five, these words: 'excepting on the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, or within the limits of the City and County of San Francisco;' and strike out all after the word 'years,' in the eighth line, and insert the following: 'or less, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: The object of this amendment is to prevent hereafter any grant of these water frontages being made to private individuals for the purpose of speculation. I had thought that all the water frontages were owned by private individuals, but I find there are certain portions, such as China Basin, now in dispute between the city and certain parties; and this is to secure to the city whatever rights she may have in the premises. This absolutely reserves the right of the City of San Francisco beyond the power of any Board of Supervisors to lease them to private individuals. This amendment seems to me to be necessary to secure the rights of San Francisco.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I object to this amendment. I do not think it ought to pass in the shape in which it is in. It would give the Board of Supervisors the right to let out wharves for a period of twenty years. It would be an immense thing for somebody to get control of the wharfage privileges for twenty years from the Supervisors. If we except anything, we ought to except the whole Bay of San Francisco.

MR. BEERSTECHER. With the consent of the Convention, I will move to strike out all after the word "corporations," in line four. I will change my motion, and move to strike out——

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to strike out all after the word "corporations."

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

The amendment as amended was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be ordered engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

Carried.

And at five o'clock P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning, at half-past nine o'clock.

RECONSIDERATION.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention on yesterday ordered to engrossment the article on water and water rights. I move to make the motion to reconsider the special order for Tuesday next at two o'clock P. M.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I think it is very bad policy to postpone it that length of time. We can dispose of it, and submit it to the Committee on Revision.

MR. WATERS. The Revision Committee have nothing to do with it.

MR. LARKIN. I withdraw my objection to it.

MR. HAGER. For one of the Committee on Revision, I would like to state that the committee cannot act until all these propositions have passed their second reading, therefore there is no delay on the part of that committee.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I would amend my resolution, that all notices of reconsideration on the subject of water and water rights go over until that time.

Mr. LAINE. I would like those who are in favor of this motion to state the object of it, so that we can vote intelligently upon this matter.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I move to lay the motion on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Tinnin, Brown, Hager, Pulliam, and Waters.

RESOLUTION.

Resolved, That the usual recess be dispensed with for this day, and that the Convention adjourn at two o'clock P. M.

Adopted.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I move to reconsider the vote by which the article on water and water rights was ordered engrossed.

THE PRESIDENT. That vote carried your motion to the table.

CITY, COUNTY, AND TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The report of the Committee on City, County, and Township Organization is the next business in order. The Secretary will read the amendments of the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read all the amendments of the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment to section two as follows:

COUNTY SEATS.

"SEC. 2. No county seat shall be removed unless two thirds of the qualified electors of the county, voting on the proposition at a general election, shall vote in favor of such removal. A proposition of removal shall not be submitted in the same county more than once in four years."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section three.

NEW COUNTIES.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. No new county shall be established which shall reduce any county to a population of less than eight thousand; nor shall a new county be formed containing a less population than five thousand; nor shall any line thereof pass within five miles of the county seat of any county proposed to be divided; nor shall a county be divided, or have any portion taken therefrom, unless a majority of all the qualified electors of each county affected, voting at a general election, shall vote therefor. Portions of a county, when added to another county, or new counties when created, shall be liable for their just proportion of all debts and liabilities then existing of the county or counties out of which they are respectively formed or taken."

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I move to strike out section three.

MR. EVEY. I second the motion.

THE PRESIDENT. The motion is not in order.

MR. EVEY. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words, 'nor shall a county be divided, or have any portion taken therefrom, unless a majority of all the qualified electors of each county affected, voting at a general election, shall vote therefor.'"

MR. EVEY. Mr. President: I hope that that amendment will be adopted by the Convention. As this section now stands it will be impossible to form a new county in any portion of this State hereafter. There are many counties in this State of large area, and in course of time it will be necessary to divide them and form new counties, and without this amendment that can never be done. As it now stands, without the consent of the old counties no new county can be formed. I think this provision ought to be qualified, so that the people hereafter, if it should be necessary to form a new county, may have the privilege of doing so without asking the consent of the old counties. I hope the Convention will adopt this amendment.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I think that amendment should prevail. In the first place, one part of that clause is utterly senseless, it reads: "Nor shall a county be divided, or have any portion taken therefrom, unless a majority of all the qualified electors of each county affected, voting at a general election, shall vote therefor." There is only one county affected, and that part of the clause, "of each affected," is nugatory. In the first place, it provides that no portion of a county shall be taken from one county—I suppose it means to add to another—unless a majority of all the qualified electors of each county affected, shall vote therefor. Now, sir, I object to that because theoretically it is wrong. It proceeds upon the theory that the inhabitants of a county have alone to be consulted in the organization of a new county. Sir, this matter of county organization is involuntary on the part of the people, it is compulsory. A county is an organ of the State, for the purpose of the administration of its police, of its finances, of the construction of its highways, taking care of its wharfs, and all that, and so I insist that the people of a county are not alone to be consulted. It seems to me that the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles is a judicious one and ought to prevail.

Mr. INMAN. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment offered by the honorable gentleman from Los Angeles will prevail. Take my own county; the people of Alameda County, outside of Oakland, may want a new county some time. Oakland to-day has about two thirds of the voters. Our interests are not identical at all. If Oakland wanted to prevent the division she could do it; strike this out and it would leave that matter to ourselves to decide. If we have got to consult Oakland we never can separate. I am satisfied that within two years our people will want to do that. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles will be adopted. I think it is too early in the history of California to say that we have completed the framework of the State as regards the erection of new counties. In the section as reported by the Committee of the Whole, we have prohibited the erection of new counties during the life of the Constitution. I hope that the day will come when the system of large landholding will give way in this State; when this State will be opened up to immigration; when the country will be settled up by small landholders; when a large population will be dotted over the valleys; when the resources of the country will be developed, and that we will be allowed the erection of some more new counties and Court Houses for the proper administration of justice in this State. From a selfish standpoint, I might oppose this amendment because my county now extends, the south half of it, below our Court House for one hundred miles. There is at least forty miles of that that some day ought to be erected into another county. If I was selfish I might claim that it should stand in Monterey County for all time to come. It is not for the best interests of the country that that should be the case. Many other instances might be given where new county seats will be needed in the future, and we ought not to stop the growth of this country in this way.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: This section three as reported by the Committee of the Whole does mean something, and in answer to the gentleman from Sacramento I will say, his criticism on that section is about as sharp as the pyramid of Cheops, in Egypt. The object is to prevent this indiscriminate creation of new counties. Carpetbaggers go to work and create a new county in order to place themselves in positions. Now, let us take another view of this question. Many of the counties of this State are in debt. Some of them owe large sums of money that requires the taxation to be high. Portions of these counties are desirous of evading that tax, and they seek to secede and unite themselves with other counties where the taxes are lower. That has been one of the inducements to bring about this disorganization of counties, in addition to this office scheme to which I have before alluded. It should be the policy of the State to curtail the expenses of the Government, and curtail the taxation of the people, and the more counties you create the more expenses you have to sustain. Instead of increasing the counties of the State it should be the policy of the State to decrease them. Take, for instance, the County of Alpine, that was created under an excitement. It is a small county incapable of self-support. If you strike out this portion of this section you open the door to more counties of that kind. I hope that the section will be retained as it is. It is necessary to curtail the expenses of the people of this State.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: The gentleman from Trinity misapprehends the effect of this clause. If we retain it, it will prevent the abolition of these little counties. The point he makes about the debts of the county is already provided for in the latter part of the section, which says: "Portions of a county, when added to another county, or new counties when created, shall be liable for their just proportion of all debts and liabilities, then existing, of the county or counties out of which they are respectively formed or taken." But if this clause remains, we cannot get rid of Alpine, Mono, and some other small counties. I agree with him that the formation of these little counties is an outrage.

MR. DAVIS. Mr. President: I think, as Mr. Tinnin says, it does amount to something. It means that there never shall be any more new counties formed in the State of California. The objection that he makes, that the new counties would evade their share of the debt, is not good, because the new counties have had to pay their proportion to the county from which they were taken. I believe the time is coming when we will need new counties in California. The County of Nevada and the County of Placer, now extend along the line of the State of Nevada about one hundred miles. The residents of the eastern part of these counties have to travel about eighty to one hundred miles to their county seat, at an expense of twenty dollars or thirty dollars. If litigants take their cases from the Justice's Court to the County Court on Appeals, and there are five witnesses on each side, it costs about three hundred dollars expense to go to the county seat and return, besides the amount of time lost in doing so. Although our end of the county do not now demand a new county, but the time will come when the population will be such that we will need a new county, and if it did I do not think we could ever obtain it under the section.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles will be adopted, and if it prevails, I shall also move to strike out the words: "nor shall any line thereof pass within five miles of the county seat of any county proposed to be divided." I think these provisions are too restrictive, and will control the people beyond any reasonable demand on the part of justice. I think the people in the future will be able to decide these matters intelligently for themselves. I hope the amendment will prevail.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope, too, that the amendment will prevail, for I have in my county several cases where it would do a very great injustice if we were bound up in this way. I trust that the clause will be struck out. There are provisions enough already to prevent these small counties being created. That is all we want. I am opposed to these small counties, and I know that they are got up sometimes in the interest of office hunters; but that would be going a little too far.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I have no objection to striking this paragraph out. It was put in there for the purpose stated by the gentleman from Trinity. So far as I am concerned personally, I have no objection to striking it out, but I wish to defend the grammar. I do not think the section is senseless, and cannot see the point of the objection of the gentleman from Sacramento on that ground.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. RHODES. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after 'therefore,' in line seven, and insert the following: 'Every county which shall be enlarged or created from territory taken from any other county or counties, shall be liable for a just proportion of the debts and liabilities of the county or counties from which such territory shall be taken.'"

MR. RHODES. Mr. President: The section, as it now reads, provides: "Portions of a county, when added to another county, or new counties when created, shall be liable for their just proportion of all debts and liabilities, then existing, of the county or counties out of which they are respectively formed or taken." Under that, a portion of a county might be made liable for the debts of another county.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

On a division, the vote stood 46 ayes to 20 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. No quorum voting.

MR. LAINE. Ayes and noes. I think we are getting on dangerous ground here.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I do not see any improvement the amendment would make. The section now reads: "Portions of a county, when added to another county, or new counties, when created, shall be liable for their just proportion of all debts and liabilities then existing, of the county or counties out of which they are respectively formed or taken." Now, the gentleman's amendment is a mere change of phraseology, and it seems to me is a change for the worse. I think we had better stand by the article as adopted in Committee of the Whole, because that expressly says that the new county created, or the new territory created, shall be liable only for its proportion of the indebtedness of the old county, or the county from which the territory was taken, existing at the time of the creation of the new county, or at the time of the taking of the territory and placing it upon the other county.

MR. RHODES. I would ask what portions of the county should be liable, if not the whole?

MR. BEERSTECHER. If a certain portion of Tulare county were taken off and added to Kern County that portion of Tulare County that was taken off and added to Kern County should be liable for the existing indebtedness of Tulare County at the time of the division; but the whole of Kern County should not be liable. Therefore the word "portion" should be in there every time.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: After the very luminous explanation of the constitutional question involved by my distinguished friend from Kalamazoo, who has just taken his seat, I think that the amendment, as offered by the gentleman from Yolo, should prevail.

MR. MILLS. Mr. President: There would be no means of enforcing this payment in a part of a county. Take, for instance, Alameda County. When that county was created, a portion of Contra Costa County was taken and a part of Santa Clara County was taken to form Alameda County. Alameda County assumed its proportion of the indebtedness of Contra Costa County. You could not levy and collect a tax on a portion of a county; therefore I hope that the amendment will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: There would have been some propriety in this amendment, if the portion which has been stricken out had been allowed to remain in the section, because then the people would have had something to say about whether they should have a county or not. But now it has become a matter with the Legislature. Now, since that power is lodged absolutely in the Legislature, I do not think it would be right and proper for the Legislature to arbitrarily say, when they are taking a portion of one county to add to another Congressional district, by adding it to another county for the purpose of making a representative in Congress, that that whole county should become responsible for any portion of the debt for which that portion stricken off is liable. It ought not to be so. That portion is no more liable when it is stricken off than it was before for any debt that may have existed. In fact its burdens are to be lighter when it is attached to these other counties. This arbitrary way of taking portions of counties for political purposes, for the purpose of advancing political interests, for making Congressmen, or even members of the Legislature, ought not to entitle them to say that a county should be saddled with indebtedness that has been created by another county.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: It seems to me that there is a new and novel doctrine being promulgated here. I confess that it is new and novel to myself, at all events; and I venture to assert that it is new to everybody; that nobody, here or elsewhere, ever heard of such oppression as to make a portion segregated separately and distinctively liable for its proportion of the debts of the county from which it was taken. I assert that such a proposition was never heard of before. The rule has been in all such cases, here in California and elsewhere, that the county to which the territory was added should be responsible for a just proportion of the indebtedness. That is the rule that has always prevailed. It is the only equitable and just rule. Now, let us see how this proposition would work. Accept this new theory that a portion shall be distinctively liable, and where do you find yourselves? It would necessitate a separate and distinct assessment for that particular territory, because when it is added to the other county its property is assessed and it becomes liable with the county to which it is attached for the debts and liabilities of that county. In addition to this, gentlemen say that it shall be liable separately for the liabilities of the county from which it is taken. Here you saddle upon it a double liability, and you necessitate the creation of a separate assessment or collection of the separate accounts for this particular part of the territory that is taken from one county and attached to another. Now who ever heard of such a proposition as this? It is manifestly new, novel, and absurd. I submit that it would require a system of counties and county governments for which there is no provision in law, and would necessitate a special statutory regulation for the assessment and collection of taxes, because this territory would have to be assessed twice. It would have to be assessed in common with the county to which it was attached under the law, and then, in order to fill the requirements of its special liability for the debts of the old county from which it was taken, there must be another assessment, another collection of taxes, another fund raised for a special purpose. Now, it seems to me that it is self-evident that this proposition is not desirable: that it is not only new and novel, but wrong in principle, and unjust. The proposition of the gentleman from Yolo aims to obviate this difficulty, and does obviate it, and, in my opinion, ought to be adopted. I hope it will, because if this new theory is to be adopted it will result at all events in great inconvenience, and I think in injustice, too.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I call the gentleman's attention to article ninth of the new Constitution of Missouri, it says: "When any part of a county is stricken off and attached to another county, the part stricken off shall be holden for and obliged to pay its proportion of the liabilities then existing, of the county from which it is taken."

MR. CAPLES. The gentleman had to go "all the way to Pike" for it, and notwithstanding the high authority of the precedent, I still maintain, Mr. President, that the proposition is wrong in principle, unjust, and ought not to prevail.

MR. HERRINGTON. When a part of San Mateo County was added to Santa Cruz County, or vica versa, whichever way it was, were the debts saddled on to the whole county?

MR. CAPLES. Undoubtedly, always. It has always been the rule, when territory is taken from one county and attached to another county, that that other county becomes responsible for its proportion of the debts and liabilities. I submit that it is a just rule, because it must be remembered that territory is never taken from this county and given to that county only at the solicitation and with the consent of that other county. Now, if it was a thing that ever could be done, or would be done, that territory should be forced on to a county against the will of that county, then there might be an injustice in cases where there was a heavy indebtedness in the counties from which the territory was taken. But this is never done, never has been done, and never will be done.

MR. HERRINGTON. You have stricken out that provision allowing the county to have anything to say about it.

Mr. CAPLES. No, sir.

MR. HERRINGTON. Yes, you have.

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I think, sir, that this amendment ought to prevail. For instance, the question is at this moment being agitated, of adding Santa Cruz County to Santa Clara County. Now, suppose that Santa Cruz County is added to Santa Clara, would it be just that we should pay a portion of Santa Clara's debts and then we would be separately assessed for our own debts, after Santa Clara had accepted us, debts and all? If such a thing did happen—it is not very likely to occur, but it might—we would have to pay all our debts and then a part of the debts of Santa Clara. If this amendment is not adopted, we would first be assessed for our own debts and then be assessed for Santa Clara's debts too. The county to which territory is added gets a great advantage in the increase of property on their assessment roll. They know what they are about when they take territory in, and they will not take the territory if it is an incumbrance. I think it is just that this amendment should be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I do not know but what it is a knock-down argument, because a similar proposition is in the Constitution of Missouri, but so far as I am concerned, it does not make any difference whether it is the Constitution of Missouri or any other Constitution. I hope that this Convention will have some intelligence of its own, and act upon fair and just principles in deciding these questions. Now, sir, I think it can be demonstrated as easily as that two and two make four, that the amendment ought to be adopted. Why, sir, it seems to me ridiculous to talk of making a portion of a county—only a portion of a county—liable for the debts properly belonging to the whole county to pay. Now, sir, I take it, that wherever any portion of a county is taken from one county and added to another, or portions of counties taken and a new county organized, that it is done by the concurrence of the people residing in the counties affected. I take it, that no portion of a county will be taken from one county without the concurrence of the county that receives that acquisition of territory. Now, why should not the whole of that county become responsible for the indebtedness? It is willing to take the territory, but not willing to take the debts. For instance, if a portion of San Joaquin County were taken from that county and added to Sacramento County, it would be with the concurrence of Sacramento County. If Sacramento County is willing to receive that acquisition of territory, it ought to be willing to pay its debts. Is not that easily understood? It seems to me that it is beyond argument. It is too clear to argue, that in that case the whole of Sacramento County ought to pay. If it were not so, the result would be inextricable confusion, to say nothing of the injustice of the thing. It would be unequal taxation if you were to adopt any other plan. I hope the amendment will prevail.

MR. RHODES. Mr. President: I desire to insert in my amendment the word "existing" before the word "debts."

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the word will be inserted. The Chair hears none.

Messrs. Steele, Wyatt, McConnell, Davis, and Evey demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Rhodes, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Laine, McComas, Hunter, Larue, and Herrington.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section six.

INCORPORATION OF CITIES AND TOWNS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. The Legislature, by general laws, shall provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification, in proportion to population, of cities and towns; and cities and towns heretofore organized or incorporated, may become organized under and subject to such general laws. Cities and towns may become incorporated under general laws, whenever a majority of the electors voting at a general election shall so determine, and shall organize in conformity therewith."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out section eight. The Secretary will read the section.

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICERS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. No person shall be eligible to a county or city office unless he has been a citizen and resident within such county or city for two years next preceding his election or appointment to an office therein."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. Any city may frame a charter for its own government, consistent with and subject to the Constitution and laws of this State, by causing a Board of fifteen freeholders, who shall have been for at least five years qualified electors thereof, to be elected by the qualified voters of such city, at any general or special election, whose duty it shall be, within ninety days after such election, to prepare and propose a charter for such city, which shall be signed in duplicate by the members of such Board, or a majority of them, and returned, one copy thereof to the Mayor, or other chief executive officer of such city, and the other to the Recorder of deeds of the county. Such proposed charter shall then be published in two daily papers of largest general circulation in such city for the last twenty days, and within not less than thirty days after such publication it shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such city at a general or special election, and if a majority of such qualified electors voting thereat shall ratify the same, it shall at the end of sixty days thereafter become the charter of such city, or if such city be consolidated with a county in government, then of such city and county, and shall become the organic law thereof, and supersede any existing charter and all amendments thereof, and all special laws inconsistent with such charter. A copy of such charter, certified by the Mayor or chief executive officer, and authenticated by the seal of such city, setting forth the submission of such charter to the electors and its ratification by them, shall be made in duplicate and deposited, one in the office of the Secretary of State, the other, after being recorded in the office of the Recorder of deeds of the county, among the archives of the city, and thereafter all Courts shall take judicial notice thereof. The charters so ratified may be amended at intervals of not less than two years, by proposals therefor, submitted by legislative authority of the city to the qualified voters thereof, at a general or special election, held at least sixty days after publication of such proposals, and ratified by at least three fifths of the qualified electors voting thereat. In submitting any such charter, or amendment thereto, any alternative article or proposition may be presented for the choice of the voters, and may be voted on separately without prejudice to others."

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I move that the consideration of this section nine be postponed until two o'clock next Monday. My object in making this motion is because with the exception of the Chairman of this committee and myself, there are none of the delegates at large from the first Congressional district, which consists of the city and county of San Francisco, present. These gentlemen are unavoidably absent, and will be here by Monday afternoon at two o'clock. They desire to be heard upon the question of concurrence in the amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole to section nine. They are opposed to section nine either in the form of the amendment or the original section. They desire it stricken out, and I wish for them to have a hearing upon this subject, because as it stands, it mainly concerns matters immediately affecting the interests of the city and county of San Francisco. It is a most important question, as it involves the very form of government and organization of that city. I state this because the other delegates of this Convention suppose that the representatives of the city and county of San Francisco were unanimous in their desire to have it passed. I find that the city itself is opposed it; the citizens are largely opposed to it; the press has denounced it, and it is intrinsically objectionable in the highest degree; and therefore it demands further consideration at the hands of this Convention. An opportunity should be given these gentlemen who are unavoidably absent to be here. I therefore make the motion that the consideration of this section be postponed until Monday at two o'clock P. M.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's motion is not in order. You can move to have the section temporarily passed.

MR. WINANS. I move that it be temporarily passed.

MR. LARKIN. I would ask him how many of the delegation from San Francisco are absent?

MR. WINANS. All of them excepting Judge Hager and myself, of the delegates at large from that district.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask if Judge Hoge is not a representative from San Francisco? I believe he is present.

MR. WINANS. Judge Hoge is a silent member.

MR. LARKIN. There are thirty direct representatives of San Francisco present, and three of its indirect representatives are absent. I think this Convention is just as well prepared to-day to act upon this as it will be next week. There may be three or four of these men that directly represent San Francisco absent next week. They appear to be here to-day, and I hope that this Convention will not put this over on account of those three gentlemen that indirectly represent San Francisco.

MR. WINANS. I was not guilty of the discourtesy of saying that these gentlemen were not representatives of San Francisco. I spoke of the delegates from the First Congressional district, and cast no reflection upon those who represent the city alone. But I think that those who represent the city and county in the form of a Congressional district, ought to have a hearing as well as those who represent the city as such.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope that this motion will not prevail. We have been here now going on five months, and we are very anxious to get through with this work and go home. Three of these gentlemen are absent, and I am very sorry because I would like to have them here, but I do not know any good or substantial reason why this Convention should pass its work over in this manner. San Francisco is very well represented here, and if these gentlemen were particularly anxious to be here and attend to this matter they should be here instead of being away. I hope that no delay will take place, and I am satisfied that the people of San Francisco are very well satisfied with the article.

MR. WINANS. There are five absent.

MR. WELLIN. Then there are five absent, but the President has his vote like any other delegate. I hope it will not be passed over.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I hope it will be passed over temporarily. There is more in this section, perhaps, than a great many gentlemen think. I consider that the future of San Francisco depends upon this section. To my mind it is a damnable section. I think it is a matter of courtesy that it should be passed temporarily until these delegates are here to answer for themselves. No harm can come of it.

MR. WINANS. The passing of it will involve no loss of time whatever.

MR. FILCHER. Isn't it their own fault that they are not here now?

MR. INMAN. I don't know whether it is or not. Business may have called them away. Sickness may have called them away. It certainly injures no one to let it go over.

MR. STEDMAN. Isn't it a fact that these gentlemen are never here except when they want to be?

MR. INMAN. I think that is presuming a good deal, my young friend. I know not their business, their wants or wishes; nor do I think, my young friend knows. I hope it will pass temporarily.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: This is a question of very great importance and ought to be considered—if gentlemen will allow me to speak without talking so loud that I cannot hear myself. This is a question of great importance. Now we know that on Saturdays we do not have a very full house, as a general proposition. There are many gentlemen, members of this Convention, and especially those who represent the Congressional district which includes the City of San Francisco, who are compelled, by the nature and extent of their business, to be absent frequently, and more on that day than any other. But this is not a matter which affects San Francisco alone. It affects every city in the State, and it ought to be considered carefully before definite action shall be taken upon the subject. As the section now stands it includes the entire State, and, so far as the city which I have the honor in part to represent is concerned, we do not desire to be included in it. I believe the delegation from that county, with perhaps the exception of Mr. McCallum, who is absent, are united upon that subject.

MR. BARBOUR. One representative of Alameda County insisted that Oakland should be included.

MR. CAMPBELL. I am aware that Mr. McCallum introduced that amendment; but at the same time I am also aware, after consulting with my colleagues, that they are opposed to this section, as far as our county is concerned, and I think I conversed with Mr. McCallum afterwards, and he appeared to think that he had acted rather hastily in this matter and without due deliberation. I think that if he was here to-day that he would be in favor of at any rate leaving out the City of Oakland, where he resides. However, he will be here on Monday to speak for himself, I think. It will be really a needless task for us to go over this subject with a thin house, on Saturday, and then when the matter comes up on the second reading have another consideration of the subject. On Monday we will doubtless have a full house. There can be no harm in passing this section temporarily, and I trust that the Convention will do it.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I am disposed to give this section the fullest hearing possible, and if the gentleman from San Francisco will promise us that his colleagues will be here, I think I will vote to pass it.

MR. WINANS. Yes.

MR. AYERS. I want to see Mr. Barnes once more in his chair. This Convention has been longing for him. He has not been here since Christmas, and if the gentleman will promise to bring Mr. Barnes back I shall certainly vote for it.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Barnes has been very sick, and is at death's door, or has been at death's door.

MR. WINANS. He has had a very narrow escape of his life. I think he will be up Monday.

MR. AYERS. I did not know that. I take it all back.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I have this to say as my reason for asking the Convention to pass this section temporarily. We are here as a Convention to frame a Constitution which shall be acceptable to the people of this State. It is my earnest desire that we shall be able to present to the people of this State a Constitution which shall be superior to the one under which we now live, and unless we do we cannot reasonably expect a ratification by the people of our work. Now, sir, I do believe, and take it to be the desire of every member of this Convention, that we should be able to frame a Constitution better than the old one, and one which will be ratified by the people. I believe, to accomplish that result, that we should at all times have as full a Convention as possible. If matters of such vital importance as this can be acted upon by a full Convention, it will do much toward the ratification of the Constitution we present. I believe that it will give much better satisfaction to the people of this State and all parties that are represented here. Now, it is said that many of the delegates are absent, and that they can be here as well as we, but I would remind gentlemen that many of these gentlemen have matters of grave importance upon their hands to attend to, and they cannot readily set these matters aside so that they may remain here and discharge their duties constantly. Now, I take it that no member of this Convention expected, when he first came here, to remain here longer than one hundred days. But that time has been very materially extended, and how much longer we will remain we cannot tell. It is not to be expected that gentlemen will come here and sacrifice their entire business at home. I do not think we have a right to complain of members of this body who go away to attend to their home matters. I hope the section will be passed over.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I desire to remind members of this Convention that we are building up very rapidly an expense of one hundred thousand dollars, and delays, in my opinion, are very dangerous at this particular time. Now, sir, if the Chairman of the Committee on City, County, and Township Organization desires this delay, I will vote for it; otherwise, I shall vote against it.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I hope we shall pass this section over, and for the practical reason that if we do not we will consume the day in discussion without coming to a vote. It is obvious that there is too much controversy in it to be disposed of to-day. I desire, for one, to hear everybody who represents San Francisco, and I think it is no more than right and just to pass it.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will simply say that this is merely a motion to temporarily pass this section. If the Convention gets through the balance of the article they can take up this section if they desire it. It would occasion no delay in the business whatever.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I am in favor of getting along with the business of this Convention, and for that reason I am in favor of passing this section and letting it go over until Monday, for this reason: The same thing has occurred here on nearly every Saturday for the last few weeks, that when business up that was contrary to the wish of some of the representatives on this floor, with a thin house, they gave notice of a motion to reconsider, and it took up all day Monday to get back where we started from. For that reason I shall vote to pass it over.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I think as a matter of ordinary parliamentary decorum, we should hear from the Chairman of the committee. I would ask him if he is willing that this section should be temporarily passed?

MR. HAGER. I am much obliged to my friend for assisting me to get the floor. I have been trying to get the floor during the whole of this discussion. I have not been able to, even on one of the most important sections that has passed. I had an amendment to offer, but I was not able to get the floor—so many other gentlemen were ahead of me. I have no objections to this postponement. There is certainly a great deal of misapprehension about the effect of this proposition, and if the Convention will indulge me for about five minutes I will explain it. In the first place, it is not intended to be independent of the Legislature at all. It has never been constructed to be independent of the Legislature. It says: "Any city may frame a charter for its own government, consistent with and subject to the Constitution and laws of this State." That is what it does, and then the other provisions provide that the Legislature, by general law, shall regulate corporations in their organizations. The whole thing is under the control of and subject to legislation.

MR. WYATT. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is not confining himself to the subject in hand, which is the motion to temporarily pass.

MR. HAGER. I asked the Convention to indulge me for five minutes. I have no objection to the matter being postponed. I want to call the attention of the gentlemen to the platform upon which we were elected, where it says that the Legislature shall provide for the incorporation of cities and towns in this manner. Now I ask my colleague, Mr. Winans, whether he stands upon his platform or not, in which we pledged ourselves to this very section that is incorporated in this section? This proposition is framed with the very letter and words of the platform under which we were elected. This whole article has been framed in reference to its being local, with the people, and not with the Legislature, subject to special legislation, and when you take out one stone from the arch the whole thing falls.

MR. WINANS. I do not consider that standing on that platform is the question involved in this motion at all.

Digitized by Google

MR. HAGER. I have no objections to passing it over.

MR. HEISKELL. I desire to ask the gentleman by what authority that platform was given to the people?

MR. HAGER. That platform was adopted at a public meeting held by the Non-Partisans in Platt's Hall, and that platform we all subscribed to.

MR. HEISKELL. It came up into our county without any father, and I did not know how it got into the world.

MR. McFARLAND. Isn't that platform full of flies already?

MR. HAGER. As the gentleman is full of molasses, he will catch them.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to temporarily pass the section.

The motion prevailed.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section twelve.

POLICE AND SANITARY REGULATIONS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 12. Any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws."

MR. CROUCH. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twelve by adding thereto the following: 'and may make appropriations of money for the detection, arrest, and conviction of any person or persons committing offenses within their respective limits.'"

MR. ROLFE. I would like to ask the gentleman, if this police power does not include that?

MR. CROUCH. Mr. President: I will state that I understand this section gives these counties, cities, and towns authority to make police and sanitary regulations, but that does not necessarily imply the power to make appropriations of money for the arrest of persons, and for the expenses arising therefrom. Now, it is only a few days since that three barns have been burned in our county, and there is no way of finding out who did it. That is the reason why I want to fix it so that they should have power to make appropriations, and offer an inducement for officers to go to work and find out. The Legislature now has power to do it. I understand that where the power is not withheld, it is granted or possessed by the Legislature, but there is no means of compelling the Legislature to give this power. I care not in what form it is, but I think the provision ought to be made.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: It seems to me perfectly clear, that under section twelve, as it stands, they would have that power. They have not that power now, because the Supervisors have simply limited powers conferred upon them by law. But where you give them the general powers to make all this class of police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws; where you prohibit the Legislature from passing special laws, as we have done, it is clearly an incident to that police power to make such appropriations, where they are not absolutely limited by law. It seems to me that the amendment is wholly unnecessary, but if there is any difference of opinion among gentlemen, I would be willing to vote for it.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I think the gentleman from Alameda is entirely right in his construction of this section, and that unless there is some clause in some other part of the Constitution—and my impression is that there is—imposing a restraint as to the appropriation of money, I think there is no doubt about it. If there is such a clause, it seems to me that the amendment should be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out section thirteen. The Secretary will read the section.

LOCAL TAXES.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 13. Taxes for county, city, town, school, and other local purposes must be levied on all subjects and objects of taxation. In addition to that which may be levied for the payment of the principal and interest of existing indebtedness, the annual rate on property shall not exceed the following: For county purposes, in counties having two million dollars, or less, shall not exceed —— cents on the one hundred dollars' valuation; in counties having six million dollars, and under ten million dollars, such rate shall not exceed —— cents on the one hundred dollars' valuation; and in counties having ten million dollars, or more, such rate shall not exceed —— cents on the one hundred dollars' valuation. For city and town purposes such annual rate on property in incorporated cities and towns shall not exceed —— cents on the one hundred dollars' valuation; and in any city and county, with consolidated government, such rate shall not exceed —— cents on the one hundred dollars' valuation."

PROFIT ON COUNTY MONEY.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section nineteen.

"SEC. 19. The making of profit out of county, city, town, or other public money, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any officer having the possession or control thereof, shall be a felony, and shall be prosecuted and punished as prescribed by law."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the the Committee of the Whole to section twenty.

INDEBTEDNESS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 20. No county, city, town, township, Board of Education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner, or for any purpose, exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for them respectively for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the qualified voters thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose; and in cases requiring such assent no indebtedness shall be incurred (except by a county to erect a Court House or Jail, or of a city, or city and county, for the construction of waterworks, or for their acquisition by means of condemnation), to an amount, excluding existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding two per centum on the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the assessment next before the last assessment for State and county purposes previous to the incurring such indebtedness, and unless, before or at the time of incurring such indebtedness, provision shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years from the time of contracting the same. Any indebtedness or liability incurred contrary to this provision shall be void."

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 20. No county, city, town, township, Board of Education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner, or for any purpose, exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for them respectively for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the qualified voters thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose; and in cases requiring such assent no indebtedness shall be incurred (except by a county to erect a Court House or Jail) to an amount, excluding indebtedness existing at the adoption of this Constitution, in the aggregate exceeding, in any county, city, or town, two per centum, or in any city and county, with a consolidated government, four per centum, on the value of the taxable property therein, respectively, to be ascertained by the assessment next before the last assessment for State and county purposes previous to the incurring such indebtedness, and unless, before or at the time of incurring such indebtedness, provision shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years from the time of contracting the same. Any indebtedness or liability incurred contrary to this provision shall be void"

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The object is to strike out the provision in regard to the acquisition of waterworks in the City and County of San Francisco, and to increase the allowance there from two to four per cent. That will enable the city, if they see fit, to establish waterworks. That clause was inserted by an amendment, and has been subjected to a great deal of criticism, as it was intended to purchase the Spring Valley Waterworks. In all other respects it remains the same, except the use of the term, "existing at the adoption of this Constitution." I hope that the amendment will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: That directly prevents the construction of waterworks, or their acquisition in any way. Now, I believe it would be better to retain that section as it is, with the two per cent. limitation, which I believe to be a wise restriction, and the insertion of the words "purchase or," so that the section will read: "except by a county to erect a Court House or jail, or of a city, or city and county, for the construction of waterworks, or for their purchase or acquisition by means of condemnation." Now, it will be observed, that as the section stands, it enables a city to acquire waterworks, but it enables them to acquire them only in two ways—by construction and by condemnation. Now, it might be that it would be advisable to purchase waterworks without resorting to the means of condemnation. It would not leave the Board of Supervisors the right to buy, but it would require a vote of two thirds of the people in favor of the purchase. Then the terms would be known in advance. They would know just what they were going to pay for it. I do not believe that it is in the power of any corporation to induce two thirds of the electors to purchase waterworks at too high a figure. Now, it will be observed, that if you go to work to acquire by means of condemnation, you have got to get a vote of two thirds in order to authorize the condemnation; but you cannot tell what the amount of the purchase money will be until the condemnation takes place. In other words, the people will have to vote for a contract without any knowledge whatever of the price that they will have to pay; because, if is done by condemnation, that is a proceeding in Court which binds the parties, and if the price is fixed in that way, the city would have to pay whatever the bargain was, a good one or not. On the other hand, if you give them the privilege of purchasing them, they know beforehand exactly how much they have to pay, and the people then vote upon that question understandingly. I question very much whether it will be policy for any city to acquire waterworks by purchase, or condemnation, or otherwise; but still it may be to the advantage of a city to do so. It has been in the City of New York a matter of very great advantage, and I think it would be perfectly safe to leave this matter in that shape—to give the power of construction, or purchase, or condemnation, subjected to a vote of two thirds of the people. I am opposed to the amendment as it stands, simply because it leaves out that power on the part of the city to purchase.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I do not suppose the Convention understands this amendment. It has been criticised by some of the press of San Francisco, because we allowed two per cent. every year. That was corrected to not exceeding two per cent. The county might, by a vote of the people, go in debt every year two per cent. in addition to existing indebtedness. In other respects it is the same as it was in regard to all the other counties of the State, and in San Francisco I have changed it to four per cent. The greatest amount that could be raised by the people of San Francisco would be four per cent. on the taxable property of that city and county. The taxable property is about four million dollars. In that case all that they could raise would be sixteen million dollars. That is intended to cover—in case they see fit to obtain waterworks—that is intended to give them the power to do it by a vote of the people under this increased license. Across the bay Oakland may go in debt to any extent she sees fit. In that respect I think the amendment is better than if we put in such a clause. It has been said that this section is a constitutional provision to purchase Spring Valley. If we put it in that form, to do a thing by general taxation without specifying the cost, we accomplish the same purpose. Now, the whole proposition is simply this: That no county or city shall incur an indebtedness or liability exceeding in any one year the amount of revenue provided; that each county shall raise revenue each year for all county expenses. There is no limitation upon the amount of taxes for general county purposes. They may make it two or three per cent., or six per cent. for county purposes, for the necessities of the county, but if they want to go in debt for any purpose beyond the ordinary expenses of government, they must submit it to a vote of the people.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I am sorry to say I cannot agree with the gentleman. It seems to me in attempting to remove an objection he has fallen into the very error he seeks to avoid. If I understand the amendment it permits San Francisco to incur an indebtedness of four per cent. by a vote of two-thirds of the people. But they may incur that indebtedness for any purpose whatever.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager.

Division was called for, and the vote resulted in 48 ayes to 28 noes—no quorum voting.

The ayes and noes were then demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Wyatt, Brown, Reynolds, and Holmes.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: There are localities in this State where levees are necessary, and this rate of two per cent. is not sufficient to build the levees needed, and I am not sure that four per cent. is enough. If we adopt such a provision as this there are localities in this State that will be ruined, because the people could not protect their property. This amendment therefore ought to prevail.

MR. CAMPBELL. I ask for a division of the question.

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the result announced—ayes 51, noes 50.

MR. FREEMAN. I offer an amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. No amendment is in order; the substitute is adopted.

MR. EDGERTON. I wish to have the word "of," in line seven, changed to "by." This is merely to correct the grammar of the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is looking at the wrong document; there is no "of" now in the section.

MR. MCFARLAND. I am sorry that no amendment is in order. I hope the section will be stricken out. A Board of Education, where it is absolutely necessary to build a school house, could not do it under this law. I hope the whole thing will be voted down.

MR. HAGER. It is no limitation upon taxation for the purposes of government. There is no limitation upon regular revenue.

MR. MCFARLAND. Suppose two thirds of the people want to incur a debt of more than two per cent., do you say they shall not?

MR. HAGER. The committee reported it at five per cent., but the Committee of the Whole cut it down to two per cent. I would be willing to make it five per cent.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary informs me that he has made an error in the vote on the last amendment. It should read: ayes 51, noes 52—negatived. The Secretary will call the roll over again.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after 'of,' in line eight, 'purchase or.'"

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: That will simply change the exception so that the section will read as follows:

"SEC. 20. No county, city, town, township, Board of Education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner, or for any purpose, exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for them respectively for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the qualified voters thereof, voting at an election to be held for that purpose; and in cases requiring such assent, no indebtedness shall be incurred (except by a county to erect a Court House or Jail, or of a city, or city and county, for the construction of waterworks, or for their acquisition by means of purchase or condemnation), to an amount, excluding existing indebtedness, in the aggregate exceeding two per centum on the value of the taxable property therein, to be ascertained by the assessment next before the last assessment for State and county purposes previous to the incurring such indebtedness, and unless before or at the time of incurring such indebtedness, provision shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years from the time of contracting the same. Any indebtedness or liability incurred contrary to this provision shall be void."

As it is, two thirds of the people must vote in order to do it. I think it is better to retain the section as it is, with the two per cent. limit, and the permission to purchase or condemn waterworks. It may be advisable to purchase waterworks without condemnation, and this will require a vote of two thirds of the people. If waterworks are to be acquired by means of condemnation, the people, when they vote, cannot know what price is to be paid. If the price is fixed too high there is no escape, but if they are allowed to purchase, the people know how much they have to pay before they vote. I am doubtful whether it will ever be of any advantage to a city to purchase waterworks, but the time may come when they will have to do it.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: There are cities that have not yet got waterworks, and I look upon the amendment as a very proper one. I hope it will be adopted.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I hope that all these amendments will be voted down, and that some member will move to strike out all the latter part of the section; it simply hampers the people unnecessarily.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I hope, with the last gentleman, that all amendments will be voted down until we come to the one indicated by him. A two-thirds vote ought to be sufficient to guard against abuses. The rest of the section is merely a limitation upon the right of self-preservation.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I can imagine a number of emergencies which would make the section very injurious. Suppose that a calamity should happen to San Francisco like the one that happened to Chicago; what could the city do? School houses would have to be rebuilt; all their public works would have to be reconstructed, in order that the city might go forward. Under this iron-bound rule the city would have to be abandoned. The City of Marysville was flooded two years ago, and it became a question whether the city should be abandoned or the levees rebuilt. They levied a tax of four per cent., which was as much as the city could stand, and incurred an indebtedness besides. It was a necessity. They had a right to use their discretion, and say whether they would abandon their homes or not. If this rule had been in force they must have abandoned the city. If we put in any such iron-bound rule we shall make a very great mistake. If we require a two-thirds vote I believe that is ample protection.

MR. CAMPBELL. If that is the proper construction to put upon it, I would be willing to withdraw my amendment till a vote could be taken on striking out that part of the section. My impression is that the adoption of this amendment would not interfere with it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment.

Lost.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I now offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'purpose,' in line five, down to and including the word 'and,' in line twelve, and insert 'nor' before the word 'unless,' in said twelfth line."

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will be adopted. It seems to me that when two thirds of the people of a town, county, or school district find it necessary to expend some money, either for building levees, Court Houses, or school houses—when two thirds of them come together and vote to expend a certain amount of money, they should be permitted to do so. If we limit them to two per cent., or four per cent., when the emergency arises, that is sufficient. The gentleman from Nevada has spoken of Marysville. I can see how there may have been a necessity of the same kind in Sacramento last year.

Digitized by Google

If the levees should give way and the town be flooded, there would be a necessity for a larger expense even than five per cent. Suppose a school house burns down after the taxes for the year are levied. They must wait a year before they can expend even two per cent. to rebuild that house.

MR. CAPLES. If we want to build a palace, of course it won't.

MR. BELCHER. It might not. The districts are not all wealthy districts. Many of them have comparatively a small amount of property. If two thirds of the people want to spend a certain amount of money, they have a right to do it. It is safe to trust them.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: What is it that is proposed to be done there? The proposition is, that we shall remove all restrictions from the taxing power. The power to tax is unlimited in this State. It is proposed to allow the people to vote any tax, and perhaps the taxpayers themselves will be overruled by means of colonization, as we reduced the limit of residence yesterday from ninety to thirty days. Are we prepared to strike out all restrictions, and leave the taxing power free to confiscate the property of the people? The Constitution framed thirty years ago provided a limitation, and wisely, too. In that thirty years we have had occasion to realize the wisdom. What would have been the condition of some of the counties only for the veto of Governor Haight? They would have been bankrupt. It is a dangerous power to leave unchecked. The voters, in many instances, are in the majority. Take, for instance, the attempt made last Winter in the Legislature in relation to the indebtedness of El Dorado County. Delegations of taxpayers were here working for the bill. It was favorable to the taxpayers, and when it was submitted to the people, the taxpayers all voted for it; but it was defeated by the non-taxpayers. This illustrates the danger of leaving the taxing power unrestricted. It may be used to the extent of confiscation. Our people are subject at times to a mania for expenditure. Gentlemen will recollect when subsidy measures were extremely popular. Now such a measure could not get a corporal's guard. But who knows when it may come back? Certainly, if the experience of the past is worth anything, we should put in these safeguards. The gentleman says we cannot build school houses. Not if we make palaces out of them, instead of school houses. But I deny the legitimacy of a tax on property to build such houses. It is robbery. It is not necessary to make such use of the people's money for such purposes. Here is our County Hospital, built for the paupers of the county, which cost one hundred and thirty thousand dollars. That illustrates this spirit that is shown. What will two per cent. do? It is a poor school district in which there is not fifty thousand dollars taxable property, and would not two per cent. of that build two school houses? I am opposed to taking the shackles off of the taxing power.

MR. BEERSTECHER. You would oblige me very much by pointing out where there is any limit in the present Constitution.

MR. CAPLES. Three hundred thousand dollars is the limit.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Where is any limit for counties and cities?

MR. CAPLES. So much the worse. [Laughter.] It fixes the limit for the State, and I would go further and fix it for the counties. We find that the municipal indebtedness is greater than the State indebtedness.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The compromise bill that the gentleman speaks of, in reference to El Dorado County, was not in our interest. The gentleman says the taxpayers voted for it. Such is not the case. The taxpayers voted against it because it was robbery. These people had a contract to build a road. They built it two thirds of the way and stopped. We said to them: complete your road and we will pay you the balance. El Dorado is ready to pay every dollar she owes, but she does not owe this road anything. When some men want to sneer at a county they refer to El Dorado. She was the mother county of this State. She has paid more money in proportion to population than any other county in this State. She has done more to develop the resources of this State than any other county. She never repudiated anything that was just.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Laine.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Caples, West, Wyatt, Huestis, and Campbell.

STREET IMPROVEMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in their amendments to section twenty-five. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 25. No public work or improvement of any description whatsoever shall be done or made in any city, in, upon, or about the streets thereof, or otherwise, the cost and expense of which is made chargeable or may be assessed upon private property by special assessment, unless an estimate of such cost and expense shall be made, and an assessment, in proportion to benefits on the property to be affected or benefited, shall be levied, collected, and paid into the city treasury before such work or improvement shall be commenced, or any contract for letting or doing the same authorized or performed. In any city where there are no public works owned and controlled by the municipality, for supplying the same with water or artificial light, any individual, or any company duly incorporated under the laws of this State, shall, under the direction of the Superintendent of Streets, and under such regulations as the municipality may prescribe, for damages and indemnity for damages, have the privilege of using the public streets and thoroughfares thereof, and of laying down pipes and conduits therein, and connections therewith, so far as may be necessary for introducing into and supplying such city and its inhabitants either with gaslight or other illuminating light, or with fresh water for domestic and all other purposes, upon the condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges thereof."

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I move that the Convention non-concur with the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to section twenty-five. Section twenty-three is substantially similar in character, almost identical in language with that portion of the present section now proposed to be stricken out, and it seems an incongruity that the Committee of the Whole has stricken out section twenty-three, and that the Convention should now affirm that action, and yet should sustain that portion of section twenty-five to which objection is here raised, because, as I say, the latter involves the direct principles of the former, and while it possesses certain of the objectionable questions of the former it has none of the merits. Now, here is this proposition:

"No public work or improvement of any description whatsoever shall be done or made in any city, in, upon, or about the streets thereof, or otherwise, the cost and expense of which is made chargeable or may be assessed upon private property by special assessment, unless an estimate of such cost and expense shall be made, and an assessment in proportion to benefits, on the property to be affected or benefited, shall be levied, collected, and paid into the city treasury before such work or improvement shall be commenced, or any contract for letting or doing the same authorized or performed. In any city where there are no public works owned and controlled by the municipality, for supplying the same with water or artificial light, any individual, or any company duly incorporated under the laws of this State, shall, under the direction of the Superintendent of Streets, and under such regulations as the municipality may prescribe, for damages and indemnity for damages, have the privilege of using the public streets and thoroughfares thereof, and of laying down pipes and conduits therein, and connections therewith, so far as may be necessary for introducing into and supplying such city and its inhabitants either with gaslight or other illuminating light, or with fresh water for domestic and all other purposes, upon the condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges thereof."

We adopt, it is true, the plan of taking this power from the Legislature and giving it to the local authorities; and then we go further and propose to take the power away from the local Boards and give it absolutely to an individual. It is true, we qualify the right to that extent that we say it shall be exercised under such regulations as the municipality may prescribe, and that the city shall have the right to regulate charges, but that is only regulating the modus operandi.

MR. CAMPBELL. It says, under such regulations as the municipality may prescribe for damages and indemnity for damages.

MR. WINANS. What does that mean? What injuries may or may not be possible? It only gives the municipality power to control the mode of action, and the means of indemnity under certain circumstances, which circumstances might be difficult to reach, or impossible to be determined. It is a limit without specifying even the character of damages, without prescribing any legal criterion whereby they may be determined. Why, sir, I never heard of such a thing as placing an individual in a position where he may defy the Government. It is well enough to say that the people shall be governed by the supreme authority of the State, or by the subordinate authority of the subdivisions, but when it comes to elevating a man above the law, whereby Government is confronted, and defied, and trampled on, I say we are going too far, and we should consider what we are doing and revoke our action. I submit that it is not only wrong in principle, but absolutely in contradiction of the doctrine which we established when we repudiated section twenty-three.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in lines five and six, the words, 'collected and paid into the city treasury.'"

REMARKS OF MR. FREEMAN.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I desire to call attention to the fact that under the provisions of section twenty-five no street work can be done in any city until the entire assessment is paid into the city treasury. Assume that a certain block needs to have the street repaired in front of it. There may be twenty owners upon it. Nineteen may pay the full amount, but the twentieth either will not or does not pay. There can be no contract let for the repairing of that street. The street may be in a ruinous condition. It may be utterly impassable, and in such condition as to render the city liable for damages for injuries to persons, and yet under this provision not a finger can be raised towards fixing it until the entire amount is paid in. It is wrong.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not be carried. This part of the section refers to the original opening of streets, and not to repairing them. It is true that under this system there may be some delay, but a provision of this kind will save from twenty-five to fifty per cent. Of course, if any such case should occur as the gentleman mentions, in the opening of a street, the party could be compelled to pay up by judicial proceedings. It is absolutely necessary to do something to reduce the enormous expenses of street work. It is one of the greatest evils that the people in large cities have to bear.

The amendment was lost.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'performed,' in line eight."

THE PRESIDENT. That will leave the section as it was reported by the committee.

MR. HAGER. The question will be presented whether the report of the Committee of the Whole shall be concurred in or not? I wish to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line eleven, strike out the word 'under,' and insert 'for such purpose, under and by authority of;' and in line twelve, before 'regulations,' insert 'general.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Judge Hager.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Winans.

Lost.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I wish to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend the section, as amended by Committee of the Whole, as follows: strike out all after the word 'performed,' in line eight, and insert in lieu thereof: 'no exclusive right or privilege shall ever be granted to any individual, incorporated company, or association, of using the public streets or thoroughfares of any city, city and county, or town, for supplying the same, or the inhabitants thereof, with gas or other commodity for illuminating purposes, or with water for domestic or other uses; nor shall such privileges ever be granted upon more favorable terms to one company or individual than to another.'"

MR. HERRINGTON. The objections made by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Winans, are good, and the object of this amendment is to provide against the possibility of the abuses which he points out.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I object to that section because it destroys all competition.

MR. HAGER. I rise to a point of order. The Convention has refused to strike this out.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not well taken. The rule expressly provides otherwise. If the gentleman will examine the rule he will find he is mistaken. The question is upon the amendment.

Lost.

NOTICE OF RECONSIDERATION.

MR. CROSS. I hereby give notice that I will, on Monday next, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to strike out of lines six and seven, of section twenty-five, the words, "collected and paid into the city treasury."

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words, 'Superintendent of Streets,' in line twelve, and insert the words, 'proper municipal authorities.'"

MR. HAGER. Why not say: "Superintendent of Streets or other municipal authorities."

MR. HILBORN. I will change it to that effect then.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Solano, Mr. Hilborn.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Commitee of the Whole, as amended.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Leave of absence for one day was granted Mr. Keyes.

Two days leave of absence was granted Mr. Wilson, of Tehama.

Three days leave of absence was granted Messrs. Lampson and Edgerton.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

RESOLUTION—CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, A bill for the restriction of Chinese immigration has passed both houses of Congress, and is now in the hands of the President of the United States for approval; therefore, in view of the vital importance of such restrictive measure to the citizens of this State, we, the delegates of the people in Constitutional Convention assembled, do hereby, on behalf of ourselves and our constituents, most respectfully ask the President of these United States to approve such bill.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: This Convention has clearly and positively expressed its sentiment upon the subject of Chinese immigration in the Chinese article that was adopted some time ago. In consequence of the expression in that direction of this Convention, and in consequence of the memorial that was sent by this Convention to the President and the houses of Congress at Washington, and the memorials that were sent requesting similar memorials to be sent by the Governors of Oregon, and Nevada, and Washington Territory, and Arizona, Congress has seen fit to move in this matter, and the consequence has been the passage of a restrictive bill against Chinese immigration. One of the principal opponents of said bill was Senator Hamlin, of Maine. Said Senator caused the speech of Mr. Stuart, a member of this Convention, to be read in the Senate of the United States as expressive of the sentiment of this Convention, and the Senators favoring such measure, not knowing that Mr. Stuart was the only man that stood upon this floor defending the rights of the Chinese serf to drive out the free laborer of this country, were unable to make a statement to that effect, and the consequence is that the sentiments of Mr. Stuart, as expressed in his speech, to a certain extent, at least, are believed to be the sentiments of this Convention. Some of the papers have stated that the President may hesitate, yea, that he may even refuse to sign said bill, thus obliging the bill to go back to Congress to be passed over his veto, which, under the circumstances, would be an impossibility. In view of the vital importance of this matter, in view of the fact that certain sentiments were published as the sentiments of this Convention, which are not the sentiments of this Convention, I hope that the Convention will pass this resolution. I make the motion, sir, that the resolution be telegraphed at once to the President of the United States.

MR. MORELAND. This is in the nature of lobbying.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment to the resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Convention be hereby instructed to telegraph our delegation in Congress to point the President to the absence of delegate Stuart's name from the memorial to Congress on the Chinese question, which lately passed this body, as sufficient answer from the people of this State to the injustice done them by the use of that delegate's speech on the floor of the United States Senate, on the passage of the bill restricting Chinese immigration.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I accept the amendment with the consent of the house.

MR. LAINE. I hope you will not accept that.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Then I don't accept it.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: Believing this is a matter of most vital importance to the people of this State, and in vindication of the honor, and integrity, and the standing of the members of this Convention, I propose to take no roundabout course in informing the representatives of the people of this State, and the President of the United States, of our desire and our demands; therefore I offer this amendment to the original resolution, hoping that the Convention will be prompt in its adoption and instruct the Secretary to telegraph the same immediately. The speech of Mr. Stuart—I am sorry that he is not in his seat this morning—is not only an insult to the dignity of this Convention, but an insult to the dignity of the people of this coast, he being the only member upon the floor of this Convention who has refused to sign the memorial forwarded to Congress by this body. Therefore I hope that the Convention will hasten to inform our representatives of the true condition of facts.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: The Senate has materially amended the bill as passed by the House, and it has to go back to the House and it may be eight or ten days before this bill reaches the President, or it may never get there.

MR. BEERSTECHER. The only object of this resolution is to show the President of the United States how we stand upon the subject, and it is perfectly proper.

MR. FILCHER. The object is to set the President and the Congress right upon the subject, and show that there is but one member of this Convention that holds the views of Mr. Stuart, and for that reason I think the substitute of Mr. Barton is the best.

MR. BARTON. By permission of the Convention, I will offer mine as a substitute for the original.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I object.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I make no objection to the passage of the resolution offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, except the statement that the bill is not in the hands of the President, but I am opposed entirely to the amendment offered by Mr. Barton. I do not think it proper for this body to undertake to censure, as that does, the action of any member of this body. It is no insult to this body for any member to take a position opposite to a majority of this body. He had a perfect right to be opposed to it, and he had a perfect right to make a speech against it. The memorial has already gone from this body.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I think the objectionable part of the resolution could be removed by striking out the following words: "And is now in the hands of the President of the United States for approval." With the consent of the Convention I will strike out those words.

MR. McFARLAND. I would ask the gentleman if he has accepted the amendment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. No, sir.

MR. McFARLAND. I am opposed to the amendment. I believe that all of the members except two signed the memorial, which is now in the hands of Congress. It is a very strange thing that we are afraid that the influence of this entire body can be overcome by the speech of one gentleman. At the same time it was asserted by a member from this State that it did not represent the views of this Convention, and the fact was apparent there that all of this body except Mr. Stuart had signed the memorial. It seems to me that it is too much of a small thing for this body to undertake to allude to Mr. Stuart's name in any shape or form. He made a speech against it, and he had a right to do it.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I see no occasion, under the circumstances of the case, for this Convention undertaking at the present time to instruct the President of the United States, or the Congress of the United States, in regard to this matter; and I think I do see a sort of impropriety in passing a resolution in regard to a matter which is going on well, and which will undoubtedly be consummated according to the wishes of this Convention. As to the amendment, the impropriety of that I hope will be obvious enough to the members of this Convention. It is true that if there was any danger that the interests of the State would suffer from a misapprehension of the views of the Convention on account of the expressions of one member, it might be that the necessity would require the Convention to adopt such a step as that contemplated, and to point out the fact that the one individual had taken an extreme view in opposition to the views of the majority; but I do not know any reason we have to suppose that Mr. Stuart's speech in this Convention is any more misunderstood in the Senate of the United States, or in Congress, than it was here. Sir, it would be a great impropriety to censure Mr. Stuart, or any other member, for a decorous expression of any sentiments in regard to Chinese, or suffrage, or anything else upon this floor. And aside from any censure, direct or implied, there is no misapprehension, so far as we know, on the part of the Senate or any branch of the Government produced by that speech, or by any other cause. On the contrary, this Convention has in a proper and dignified manner, at the right time, clearly and distinctly made known to the Congress and the President of the United States, the views and wishes—the most earnest wishes and desires—of the people of this State. That expression and others, I have no doubt, has had a wholesome influence. I do not understand that any material doubt exists in the minds of any, that the bill, if concurred in by the House, will receive the approval of the President of the United States. It has been understood that his sentiments have been expressed strongly and distinctly in that way. I know we have seen rumors that possibly there has been a change of sentiment, but we have no ground to presume anything of the kind. I think it will be more in accordance with the dignity and duty of this body to await further events before taking this action. I should much prefer that this matter should be laid upon the table, though I shall be ready to join with members of the Convention when there is shown any necessity for such action.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I differ with the gentleman from Mariposa radically. It is true, as he asserts, that the sentiment of the people of California ought to be understood in Washington, but is it? Has misrepresentation done its work there? Now, I call the gentleman's attention to the positive fact that within the last week, and during the discussion of this subject in the Senate of the United States, the old false and infamous cry has been used, that the opposition to Chinese immigration was confined to the hoodlums of San Francisco. It is a preposterous outrage upon truth that such assertions should be made there; but they are made. We have got to take things as we find them in this world. The pro-Chinese advocates in Washington have resorted to and depended upon falsehood and misrepresentation from the first, and I believe that there are thousands and millions of people in the East to-day who believe that false and infamous charge, that only the hoodlums of San Francisco want the Chinamen driven out. It is true that this Convention has already sent a memorial, but there is sometimes great virtue in reiteration; and it seems to me that we have reached a stage in the proceeding in which it is right and proper to reiterate our sentiments in the most positive and emphatic manner. The only objection I have to the resolution of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Beerstecher, is, that is not sweeping enough; it is not strong enough. I would fain hurl it back with all the force and vigor that the mother tongue is capable of. Let us say it again; let us continue to say it. This Convention, in sending a memorial signed by one hundred and forty-eight out of one hundred and fifty representative men, give an illustration of unanimity of sentiment unparalleled in political history.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope that the resolution will be adopted. I am in favor of a simple telegram to the President of the United States, earnestly urging him to sign the bill. That is all that we need, and I am surprised at the gentleman from Mariposa attempting to throw cold water on such a simple proposition as this. It is true we have sent memorials, but the President or Congress does not know what our opinion is on that particular bill. Why not assure them that we want that particular bill passed? There can be no objection to it. So far as that memorial is concerned it was signed before this bill was introduced. Now that we have something tangible, we want to assure them that that is the thing we want. A speech is delivered in this Convention—the only one that is quoted from in Congress at all—which, while it is only the assertion of an individual opinion, by one member, is easily tortured into an expression of the sentiment of a large portion of the people of the State, by a member who declares in express terms that Chinese immigration to this State is not detrimental. For that reason I hope that the resolution will be adopted, and that we will send the resolution directly to the President at headquarters.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I believe the Convention sufficiently understands the subject-matter, and I therefore move the previous question.

Messrs. Larkin, Lampson, Doyle, and Smith of Santa Clara also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The amendment of Mr. Barton was rejected, and the original resolution of Mr. Beerstecher was unanimously adopted.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the resolution be at once telegraphed to Washington.

The motion prevailed.

CITY, COUNTY, AND TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.

THE CHAIR. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on City, County, and Township Organization. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out section twenty-six. The Secretary will read the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 26. The Legislature shall not pass any local or special law in the cases following: Regulating the affairs of counties, cities, towns, townships, wards, city or county Boards of Education, school districts, or other political or municipal corporation or subdivision of the State; authorizing the laying out, opening, altering, maintaining, or vacating roads, highways, streets, alleys, town plats, or parks; relating to cemeteries, graveyards, or public grounds not of the State; locating or changing county seats; incorporating cities, towns, or villages, or changing their charters; creating offices, or prescribing the powers and duties of officers in counties, cities, towns, townships, or school districts; regulating the fees or extending the powers and duties of county or municipal officers; regulating the management and maintenance of public schools, the building or repairing of school or Court Houses, and raising of money for such purposes; extending the time for the assessment or collection of county, city, or other municipal taxes, or otherwise relieving any Assessor or Collector of county or city taxes from the due performance of the official duties, or their securities from liability; legalizing the unauthorized or invalid acts of any officer or agent of any county or municipality thereof; directing the payment of money out of the treasury, or by any officer of any county, city, or town, without the consent of such county, city, and town; directing the payment of money from out of the treasury, or by any officer of, or creating any liability against, a county, city, town, or any public or municipal corporation, without its consent."

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I merely desire to state that section twenty-six was upon my motion stricken out, because the whole subject matter had been provided for by the Committee of the Whole, in the article on legislative department. I believe that the action of the Committee of the Whole in striking out was proper in that respect. Of course, we do not desire to incorporate the same matter in this article on city, county and township organization as we have already incorporated in the article on legislative department.

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

CITY GOVERNMENTS.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the report of the Committee of the Whole on section nine, which was temporarily passed.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: It is quite evident that the situation of the Convention for the consideration of that section is worse than it was on Saturday. I therefore move that section nine be made the special order for to-morrow at two o'clock.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: This motion will carry the whole article over until to-morrow, and if the gentlemen from San Francisco desire to act upon this matter, if they desired to come here and do their duty they should have staid here. These very gentlemen that demand this postponement have kept us here five months. I am here now in order to help complete this work, and if they wanted to they certainly could forego the pleasure of visiting San Francisco. I am in favor of this Convention now completing this article to the best judgment of a majority of this Convention, and stand by that judgment. Let us not postpone this article for the convenience of any man. Each and every other we pass upon, the same argument will be offered. Let us proceed with our work in order, and if they are not here it is not our fault.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I trust, too, that this will not be put off. These gentlemen had full notice. The gentlemen from San Francisco had telegraphic notice that this was coming on this morning. The Convention, to accommodate them, put off this for one day. They paid no attention to it whatever. Every one of them read that in the papers yesterday, and yet they do not come. I think it is trifling with this Convention. Their conduct is an indignity to this Convention. I hope that the Convention will go right on and finish the article, and give them notice that they cannot trifle with us in this matter. They could have come up yesterday just as well as not, but they just expect that we will be trifled with here.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I understood that this was set for two o'clock, and if it was not it ought to have been. We had as many in this Convention on Saturday as we have now. I am in favor of getting along with the business of this Convention, and I want to get through, but I do not see any good in us taking up a thing that interests San Francisco directly when one half of the delegates from that city are absent. If we pass anything some one will give notice of a reconsideration, and when they come it will all be gone over again. So in order to facilitate business I think it is better to let this pass over and take up something else, and then this evening or to-morrow we can pass upon it.

MR. LARKIN. I will state to the gentleman that the Chairman of the committee will not be here until the day after to-morrow.

MR. GRACE. We will get all that we can get; there will certainly be some of them here. I know some gentlemen that I am satisfied will be here. It is generally understood that there would be all of the eight specially elected on the Non-Partisan ticket by the people. I would like to have these eminently respectable gentlemen here. I believe that it is in the interest of economy, and everything else, to let this pass over.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope, as this is a matter of the greatest importance, involving an entire change in the system of government of all the large cities of our State, that, as we have delayed so far in this matter, we will offer another chance to those who are absent. I have no desire to put this matter over until to-morrow, but I hope it will be made the special order for two o'clock to-day, then, if they are not here, let the Convention go on with the work.

MR. LARKIN. The Chairman of the committee will probably not return before the middle of the week, but would be satisfied with the action of the Convention.

MR. WELLIN. This matter is of such importance that it ought not to be rushed through in a slim house; if it is it will offer an opportunity for the enemies of our work to oppose it.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I am fain to admit that there is much force and truth in the observations of the gentlemen from El Dorado and Santa Cruz, but if it is trying to our patience, the fact nevertheless remains that we have barely a quorum here, and that this section nine is of vital importance. True, gentlemen should have been here, but they are not here. Is it wise in us, with a bare quorum here, to rush this matter through? I beg gentlemen to reflect upon the magnitude and importance of section nine, and ask themselves whether it is wise in us, because other gentlemen have not done their duty, to put this matter through? I admit that it requires a very large degree of patience for us to sit here, day after day, and be delayed in our action by the absence of gentlemen who are neglecting or refusing to perform a solemn duty. I submit that in this case it is necessary, because, upon our action in regard to this section nine, may depend the fate of the Constitution that we are making. If it was a trifling matter, if it was a matter less vital, I should concur with the gentlemen in opposing all procrastination, but this is no trifling matter, it is a matter of the very first magnitude, that may involve the success of the work in which we are engaged. Now, the time would not be entirely lost; we can occupy ourselves upon minor matters. Our action upon these minor matters will undoubtedly give satisfaction to the absentees and to the country, but I submit that it is not wise for us to precipitate action now upon a measure of such magnitude as section nine.

MR. WYATT. I move the previous question.

MR. LEWIS. I ask to make a personal explanation.

MR. GRACE. I ask the gentleman to withdraw the motion for the previous question. I believe the gentleman ought to have a chance to make his explanation, he has not sacrificed much time.

MR. WYATT. I withdraw it.

MR. LEWIS. Mr. President: I simply wish to state that in conversing with Mr. Winans, he asked a postponement only until to-day at two o'clock, and I am in hopes that the gentleman who made the motion will so amend it. In conversing with him he said, that if it went over until this afternoon, it could be properly considered. They all look upon it as a matter of the greatest importance. I certainly hope it will go over until this afternoon.

MR. LARKIN. Wouldn't it take the whole article?

MR. WEBSTER. I move to amend to to-day at two o'clock.

MR. LAINE. I would ask if that simple section will carry the balance of the article?

THE CHAIR. The article is on engrossment.

MR. LAINE. There are some amendments to other sections.

THE CHAIR. Under our procedure, the question would be upon the engrossment of the article.

MR. LAINE. The sections are open to amendments.

MR. SCHELL. If that be the case, I would temporarily withdraw the motion so that amendments may be offered to other sections.

MR. LAINE. I think that would be better.

THE CHAIR. The gentleman will have leave to withdraw his motion. If there be no objection, section nine will be temporarily passed.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section one by striking out all after the word 'counties,' in the first line, and insert the following: 'Cities and counties, cities, towns, school districts, and supervisor districts. And other municipal subdivisions of the various counties are hereby recognized as legal subdivisions of the State, and shall so remain until changed, modified, or abolished by law.'"

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: If the Convention will examine this first section, it will be observed that it is limited to counties. Now, there is too much or too little stated there. We have got various other subdivisions of the State.

MR. TURNER. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. It has been a uniform rule here, that no amendments have been allowed to an article until all the amendments proposed by the Committee of the Whole had been disposed of.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is well taken. The section is not open to amendment at all.

MR. SCHELL. Then I renew my motion to postpone section nine, until to-morrow at two o'clock. If any gentleman desires to move an amendment let him do so, but I desire to more fully state my reasons. It is not as the gentleman from El Dorado intimates, that this motion is for the purpose of accommodating any member of this Convention. I do not make it, sir, to meet the convenience of any man. I do it, because when I look around me I see a great many of these seats vacant. The reasons for these members remaining away I do not know. I know they are away frequently on Saturday and Monday.

MR. WYATT. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman has spoken once on this question.

THE CHAIR. He merely made his motion.

MR. SCHELL. I will not detain the Convention long. I think, sir, that if we make this the special order for two o'clock, we will be in just the same position that we were Saturday and are at this hour. We know that on Tuesdays, as a general thing, we have a full Convention, and that is the reason why I have made the motion as I have. I am as anxious to get through with the business as any gentleman here, or as any man possibly can be, and that is another reason why I have made this motion. I believe that by doing so—by settling this question with a full Convention—we shall settle it so that it will stay settled, and will not require any future action by this body. If we act upon it to-day, why, sir, the probability is that a motion will be made to reconsider the action of the Convention whatever it may be, and then it will come up again for discussion. I believe that it will save time to make it the special order for Tuesday at two o'clock.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I second the motion of Mr. Schell. The more haste the less speed has been the rule in this Convention on Mondays. Whenever an important thing has passed on Monday, it has taken all day Tuesday and sometimes Wednesday to reconsider it. I think by postponing it until to-morrow we will save time. I hope the motion will prevail.

MR. WICKES. Mr. President: I trust that the motion will not prevail. I believe this Convention saves time by going on with its work systematically. I do not believe that we should defer to those gentlemen who are absent every week running backward and forward home. If they were very much interested in the section they would be here in their seats.

The motion prevailed, on a division, by a vote of 51 ayes to 30 noes.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I move that the Convention adjourn until two o'clock P. M.

Lost.

MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: We can take up the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects and consider it.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Murphy in the chair, for the purpose of considering the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects. I will say that the Chairman of the committee is here, and it is with his knowledge and consent that the motion is made.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that motion will not prevail. We are not prepared to take up that this morning. There are a great many very important propositions to come up on that. I hope that it will not be sprung on us. As to the report of the committee, I think it is very defective. It does not cover many things that ought to be attended to in that report. I hope that the Convention will go on, will go right on with its business and take the next thing on the general file.

MR. MARTIN, of Alameda. Mr. President: The next thing would be the article on education. I hope that the consideration of that article will not be taken up this morning, for the reason that the Chairman of the committee, Mr. Winans, is confined to his bed from sickness. I have just received a note from him, saying that he would not be able to be here this morning. I hope that some other article on the file will be taken up.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope that we will not this morning go into the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects. There are some persons deeply interested and they are not here. I would just as lief go on with the regular order of business as this.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole on the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

On a division, the vote stood, 42 ayes to 34 noes.

THE CHAIR. No quorum voting.

On a division, the motion prevailed, by a vote of 43 ayes to 37 noes.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read the article.

THE SECRETARY read:

in this State be held in trust for any lien; but the creation of any trust in lands for the benefit of an alien shall at once escheat the land to the State.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section one.

SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. The City of Sacramento is hereby declared to be the seat of government of this State, and shall so remain until changed by law; but no law changing the seat of government shall be valid or binding, unless the same be approved and ratified by a majority of the qualified electors of the State voting therefor at a general State election, under such regulations and provisions as the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of each house, may provide, submitting the question of change to the people."

MR. WICKES. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out all after the word "remain," in line two.

MR. CROSS. I second the motion.

MR. WICKES. Mr. Chairman: This amendment fixes Sacramento as the seat of government for the State. I think that is a matter that should be fixed in the Constitution. It should not be left to the caprice of demagogues and politicians. We were cursed by such fickleness in the earlier history of our State. The State, too, has spent a great deal of money here in Sacramento, and has acquired a valuable property here. On the question of economy this should be settled in the Constitution, and also I think it would be a fitting tribute to the indomitable people of Sacramento, who, preëminently, I will say, represent the energy, and the enterprise, and the industry, and the public spirit of California.

MR. BARBOUR. Suppose Sacramento washes away.

MR. WICKES. There is no danger of Sacramento washing away. This building never will be washed away.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I do not see any necessity for the amendment. I think that the section as it is now is conservative enough. It requires a two-third vote of the Legislature to submit the question. I think that is strong enough to prevent anything like rash action with reference to the removal of the capital. I have no feeling on this subject, but still I believe we should leave some sort of flexibility to this matter, while at the same time we should be conservative. There is no necessity for the amendment.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: It appears to me that there is no occasion whatever for the amendment. Now I do not think there is any antagonistic feeling against Sacramento as the State capital, but to attempt to bind the future entirely to this place I think would be wrong, and when the matter is provided for here that by a certain action of the Legislature the matter shall be submitted to a vote of the people, it seems to me that that should be sufficient. I therefore agree entirely with the gentleman from Los Angeles, that this amendment is unnecessary. I think, in fact, that it might work a future hardship and might almost deprive us from having any capital at all, because we do not know what may be the result with regard to any city in this State. We do not know what calamities may befall any part of the country. We may have war or invasion, and we could not have any capital anywhere else.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. Chairman: I would simply say that we have been to a great deal of expense in the erection of this building, and I know something about it. I was Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and we made a thorough investigation. We have got a building here that is a credit to the State, and one that every citizen of the State should be proud of.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I object to the amendment. We could move the capital easier than we can keep the members here. There have been constant adjournments of the Legislature to allow the members to go to San Francisco. I think the amendment should not pass.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section one as follows: Strike out the words 'by a two-thirds vote of each house,' in line six; also, strike out all of line seven."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: Of course it is generally understood that there is very much importance attached to this capital question. I know that every time this question has come before this Convention or before the Committee of the Whole, that every gentleman who has the impudence to take a position against the permanent location of the capital at Sacramento, is charged as being unfriendly to the citizens of Sacramento; that he is casting aspersions upon the character and the fame and name of the people inhabiting the city of Sacramento. It is not true. It is not just to those who take a position antagonistic to the permanent location of the State government at Sacramento. It is well known and it cannot be denied, that this is not a healthy location. It is a boneyard for many of the best representatives that the people ever sent to this place. It is a place of interment for the distinguished brains of the State, it is true, and I do not know but what some of them have sought to obtain position for the very purpose that their bodies might be laid in state among the quiet weeping willows somewhere upon Burns' Slough.

MR. BIGGS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

MR. HERRINGTON. I do not believe that this question needs any illustration. I shall cover the whole ground in this speech of mine. I do not intend to leave anything out. I do not want to be disturbed. I am now before this Committee, and I propose to have my say just a little while. I know that I was denounced on one occasion, and it was said I had been slighted by some of the distinguished and beautiful females of the City of Sacramento. Well, I do not deny that I have not met with many of that distinguished class since I have been here. I have been busy. I have not had time to pay my court or addresses to any of that distinguished class. I know that there are some persons who find time for little else than that perhaps, but it has been my fortune to be fully employed, and my time has been fully occupied with the duties of the Convention since I have been here. However pleasant such an occupation may be to other distinguished gentlemen, however pleasant it may have been for me, I know that so far as I have been concerned my time has been wholly occupied, without reference to my business employment, in the business of this Convention. Now, Mr. President, I know that no better compliment can be paid to the people of Sacramento than to say of them that they have the indomitable energy and perseverance, and the will, to live without the capital of the State, or seat of government, located here. Now, I am not saying anything at all against the good character and the indomitable perseverance, and the great success that has attended the people of Sacramento. But I do submit that there are some circumstances which are against keeping the capital here in Sacramento. The chief objection is the unhealthy location. It is true that it is healthy for those who have become acclimated here, but persons coming here from other localities do not find that genial climate which is required to keep up the increased energy of their brains, or the vigor of the physical constitution, so as to enable them to do the best work for the people of the State of California. Finding that to be the case, I submit in all conscience, there should be some other location in the State of California found that will answer a better purpose for the seat of government than the City of Sacramento. This is saying nothing against the people of Sacramento, or their moral qualities, but going directly to the point which should be considered as the sole qualification for the location of the capital above all others, when you have taken into account that other question of a central position. Now, I do not object to it in consequence of its particular location with regard to other portions of the State. I think it is centrally enough located, and it is easy enough of access, but the miasmatic influences of its atmosphere are perpectly insupportable.

MR. INMAN. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out all after the word "law," in line two, and add the following: "Provided, however, that two thirds of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature shall concur in the passage of such law." That is the present Constitution. In looking over this section one, I see it requires a vote of the people. Now, I do not suppose that there are a dozen people in the State who want the capital removed, unless circumstances compel them to do it, but I have made up my mind that Sacramento is doomed, at some future time, to inundation. Should these rivers break in it will fill up to a level with the levees, and if you have to submit it to the people it will take two or three years. I object to this section as it now stands, not that I want the capital removed, I have nothing against Sacramento in the least, but I want it so that the people can change it if necessary.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. Chairman: I would like to ask my friend from Santa Clara, who spoke to his motion, this question. I understood him to remark that this was a boneyard. I do not know whether he meant this body or meant the City of Sacramento in general. If he meant the latter, I desire simply to remark that I understand that Sacramento, so far as its health statistics go, compares favorably with any other locality in the State; that, I think, disposes of the whole question, so far as the sanitary condition and the climate are concerned.

MR. TULLY. The reason is, that when they get rich they go to San Francisco to die.

MR. SCHELL. I believe this section is right. I believe that whenever we seek to tear up the foundations of the State capital, that it should be at the instance of two thirds of the Legislature; at least two thirds of the Legislature ought to vote in favor of submitting it to the people first, and then the people may, by a majority vote remove it. It is not an ordinary question that ought to be submitted to merely a majority of the Legislature. When it comes to incurring so great an expense as would be involved in the removal of the State capital, I think something more should be demanded than a mere majority vote. I hope that the amendment will be promptly voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I see no occasion to change my position, that the section should remain as it is. Notwithstanding the criticism which a member of the Sacramento delegation made on the City of Los Angeles, I feel that I can do justice to Sacramento, and not for the reason, either, that might be implied by the speech of the gentleman from Santa Clara, for I have not had the satisfaction of capering nimbly in any lady's chamber to the lascivious pleasings of the lute; but simply, as I look upon it, as an economical question, and one which the State at present takes great interest in. The capital is located here now, and should not be changed without some great and imperative cause. I have no feeling in this matter, for the reason, perhaps, that I have but a very slight interest in it. This will be your capital at this end of the State, but in the future years, when that grand and glorious new State of South California will rise [laughter], then there will be no competitor, in my opinion, for the capital of that State. We will leave you with regret, we shall always remember you with kindness, but we will also remember that whilst we have been attached to you, you have forgotten to give us as fair a representation as you did to other portions of the State.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: I have no objection to the capital remaining permanently at Sacramento, so far as I am concerned. It is centrally located, and so far as its being the graveyard of the State, I know nothing about it. I do not expect to be buried here—for the present, at least. In fact, I judge it to be rather a healthy place, where the Public Administrator has to employ a "killer" to make a living. [Laughter.] I am in favor of permanence as much as possible. I am also in favor of permanence in the Constitution. I am in favor of making no unnecessary changes in the Constitution; and, therefore, I am in favor of the amendment of Mr. Inman, which leaves the Constitution in this regard just the same as it has always been. The capital can be changed at any time by a majority of two thirds of both branches of the Legislature. I do not know as I have a correct view as to what constitutes the State capital. My view is, that it is where the Legislature meets, and where the Governor and State officers have their offices. If that is what constitutes the State capital, contingencies may arise, and have arisen, which compelled the Legislature to remove the State capital temporarily. One Winter, in consequence of a flood, the Legislature had to move temporarily to San Francisco. Now, if this section offered by the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects is adopted, I am not sure—although I will not say I am correct in that—but that kind of a change would necessitate a vote of the people of the State at large before the Legislature could move down to San Francisco in case of a flood. I do not expect Sacramento to be washed out permanently, but the Legislature might have to move temporarily. I would ask if that is not moving the State capital? I am in favor of Mr. Inman's amendment.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the last amendment—the one moved by Mr. Inman—will not be adopted. It is very dangerous indeed, and has subjected us in times past to very great injury. You will remember that this is the old Constitution. When the State capital was moved temporarily from the City of San José to the City of Vallejo, the Supreme Court decided that it took two thirds to put it on wheels, but a majority could keep it on wheels. Having once moved it, a majority could afterwards keep moving it. That is the decision of the Supreme Court of this State upon this identical section; so that the amendment of Mr. Inman is much worse than the one offered by the committee, or the one offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Inman.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. Chairman: I am very sorry to see the spirit that is being manifested here. These amendments are evidently conceived in a spirit of captious malice. Every gentleman upon this floor must know, and does know, that this agitation can amount to nothing practical. As long as California remains territorially as she is now, Sacramento is and will be the capital; but if the gentleman from Los Angeles secedes from the State——

MR. AYERS. I object to the word secession. The northern portion may secede from the southern——

MR. CAPLES. The gentleman says that he does not propose to secede, but that the State may secede from Los Angeles. Now, that reminds me of a remark I have frequently heard here, that however absurd it may appear, Los Angeles was California.

MR. AYERS. I would ask the gentleman if Los Angeles was not the capital of this State before Sacramento was thought of?

MR. CAPLES. True enough; so was Marblehead quite a town before Chicago was ever thought of. When the State shall secede from Los Angeles, then this will become a live and practical question, and my friend from Santa Clara may then, with some propriety and common sense, come in here with a proposition like his; but until that consummation the question is a dead question; it is a malicious question; it is a question without any practical object or aim, except the gratification of personal feeling; and I protest against the manifestation of this feeling here, and the waste of time to the detriment of public business.

MR. INMAN. I deny having any feeling in the matter whatever.

MR. CAPLES. I did not refer to you. I spoke of the gentleman from Santa Clara.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I want the gentleman's words taken down.

MR. CAPLES. I am willing to have them go down.

MR. HERRINGTON. His remarks are——

MR. CAPLES. If the gentleman has any question to ask, all right, but I claim that I have the floor and not he. He desires that the words should be taken down. I have said that the spirit was a captious spirit, and that it was dictated by personal feeling and animosity, and if the gentleman has any objection to make to the language, he is welcome to have it taken down. I reiterate that the feeling is a captious one, and that there is no demand for it, and no practical good can come out of the agitation of this question. Now, I am perfectly satisfied and willing that the section should be maintained as it comes from the committee; but I would not care if there was not a word put into the Constitution on the subject.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I desire to say that I am going to vote for the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, and that I have no feeling of malice, and if there is any feeling, except by the gentleman himself, I do not know it. We desire merely to give the power to the people to move the capital at any time they wish. We do not intend to tie down the Legislature to a two-third vote if we can help it. I trust that the amendment will be adopted. I believe in the will of the people being obeyed in this matter.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. Chairman: I hope that this amendment will not be adopted. I think more regard should be paid for the public interest in the matter of economy than to allow a mere capricious majority of the Legislature to change the capital of the State. The capital has been located here at immense expense. It is true, I think, that it was a great mistake in placing it here, but it is here, and it has cost the people of the State a great deal of money, and it should not be removed unless some great calamity or misfortune befalls this city which necessitates that removal.

MR. TULLY. Mr. Chairman: I hope that the amendment will not prevail, but that we will leave it as it comes from the committee. There has been a good deal said here in reference to lobbying, and I don't know any section that has been adopted, or anything that this Convention could do to encourage lobbying more than to adopt this amendment. There would be a fight every time the Legislature met for a majority to move this capital, perhaps down to Los Angeles, or some other prominent place. I would like to have it at Gilroy if it is to go.

MR. AYERS. How would Milpitas suit you?

MR. TULLY. Yes. We could have a custom house on the bay, and the petrified Indian as Collector. But, sir, I think we had better leave it as it is. The gentleman from Santa Clara perhaps is in for some State office, and that is the reason why he wants to look into the health of the locality. He says he has not had time to visit the ladies; that he has been laboring here for the good of the people. Now, I do not wish to make any invidious remarks, because I like the gentleman, but if you take his personal appearance I do not think he would amount to much among the ladies. [Laughter.] Look at him! What kind of a figure do you suppose he would cut among the ladies? He says he don't love the ladies. Now, a man that don't love the ladies generally don't love his country. I never knew a man that did not love the ladies that ever did much for his country. [Laughter.] I trust that the people of Sacramento, particularly the ladies, will pardon my friend for criticising their beautiful city as a boneyard; and that there is no society here that a man can live in; and that by the time a man gets acclimated here he dies. I don't want them to lay anything up against him, and when he is elevated to the Supreme bench——

MR. HERRINGTON. I want his words taken down.

MR. TULLY. When he is elevated to the Supreme bench and comes up here, I hope my friend McFarland will treat him kindly, and when the Bar Association gives good dinners you will invite him out. However, I should like to see him improve in his personal appearance. [Laughter.]

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of section one.

Adopted.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section two.

DUELLING.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. Any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within this State or out of it, or who shall act as second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, shall not be allowed to hold any office of profit, or to enjoy the right of suffrage under this Constitution."

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out in the second line after the word 'duel,' the following: 'with deadly weapons;' also in line three, where such words occur."

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: I do not see the sense of that section. I would like to know what is a deadly weapon. Is it a Krupp gun? Is it a broom-stick? Or is it a needle? Now, according to the best authorities a duel is a combat between two persons, to decide some private contest, or to establish a point of honor. You can fight with bullets, with the revolver, as well as with your fists. A man's fist is as much a deadly weapon as a revolver. For instance, if the Chairman was to strike somebody in the head with his fist, I think it would be very nearly a deadly weapon. According to this section we will prove that they have used no deadly weapon. If we are going to abolish the duello, let us abolish it altogether, or specify the kinds of weapons. I hope the amendment will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to the amendment of the gentleman, and in favor of striking out the section; and consequently I shall move to strike out the section. The section was passed at the time of a certain great excitement in this State. It is due to this Convention, and due to the State of California, that the leading man of this Convention, and I believe the ablest man upon this floor, the most independent, free from any rings, or cliques, or restraint, that we should not place this in the Constitution as a stain upon his name. The men that fight duels are not thieves; they are not men who sell out their constituents; they are not men who stoop so low as to buy their way to the State Legislature; yet the men who do these things are not disfranchised. You allow the most corrupt man to hold office; but you wish to say, that because an honorable man is compelled to defend his honor and engage in a duel that he cannot hold the office of Constable, or Justice of the Peace, or any other office in this State. I am no apologist for duels, but I believe the people are capable of selecting the men that should represent them, from the highest to the lowest position in this State. A man should not be disfranchised because he defends his honor, or the honor of his wife and family, under excitement. I am in favor of striking it out.

MR. SCHELL. This says, "after the adoption of this Constitution."

MR. LARKIN. There may be such a thing then. I would not have a provision in the Constitution to prohibit a man from defending his honor, or the honor of his family—the honor of his wife, mother, or sister. I am in favor of striking out the section, and leaving the people to decide whether they will elect a man under those circumstances or not.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the amendment proposed by my colleague from San Francisco, Mr. Vacquerel. It is a matter of extreme difficulty always to say what is a deadly weapon. The language is unnecessary. Duel has a certain definition and meaning. Now I remember the case of the Frenchman who was challenged by an Englishman. Under the code the party challenged is entitled to select the weapons. The Frenchman chose asafœtida, in a close room, and he cleaned the Englishman out, because he liked asafœtida and it killed the Englishman and never hurt the Frenchman. I am in favor of striking out the language "deadly weapons," because asafœtida was deadly to the Englishman and did not hurt the Frenchman.

MR. BROWN. Mr. Chairman: It strikes me that this would not have the desired effect, provided "deadly weapons" is stricken out. For instance, it is necessary for us to study as to what the word "duel" means. It is supposed to mean a combat between two. Then under this section, two men who engaged in a fist-fight would be disfranchised, though we do not consider that is a very great crime. I cannot see the propriety at all of striking these words out. A jury can always decide what is a deadly weapon, and we all know it. It appears to me that it would only be weakening the section down until it amounts to nothing, or it would mean too much—that any fight whatever would deprive a man of certain privileges.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I am perfectly astonished at the gentleman from El Dorado. We all know that this was intended to destroy a most baleful practice which had run to an extent that was perfectly outrageous at the time of the adoption of the Constitution in eighteen hundred and forty-nine. It was not pointed at any particular case. It has been adopted in several of the States, and the whole sentiment of the people is against the idea of dueling. It is the most absurd idea in the world. We are nearly rid of the practice, and this provision in the Constitution tends to break it up. When a man is insulted he has the right now, if the law won't do it, to inflict punishment himself, and if a jury of his country sustain him in that it is all right. But the duel often makes the innocent suffer and lets the rascal escape. I did not suppose there was a man in the State of California that would raise his voice in favor of dueling at this date.

MR. AYRES. Mr. Chairman: I see no need to amend this section in the manner proposed, and I must say that I am astonished at the lack of historical information shown by the gentleman from El Dorado, when he intimates that this section was adopted for the purpose of meeting a memorable duel which occurred in this State. I assert that it was an original section, adopted at Monterey. All the great duels in this State after the organization of this State government—and there were many fierce and some revolting ones—occurred in defiance of the institution of the Constitution. I do not see any necessity for making the change.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. LAVIGNE. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two by adding, after the word 'offending,' in line five, the following: 'or shall be guilty of assault with deadly weapons.'"

MR. LAVIGNE. Mr. Chairman: I cannot see a good reason why a man who attempts to kill somebody should not suffer the same penalty as the one who fights a duel or accepts a challenge. The man who, being insulted in his honor, and who sends a challenge to another, or accepts one, is undoubtedly a gentleman; he proves to be brave and risks his life to wash out an insult, or give satisfaction to his adversary. The other is a coward. He attacks a man often with premeditation and in a cowardly and contemptible manner. There is no comparison between the two. The first one is entitled to the respect of all honest men; the other is a base assassin. When he is not it is because circumstances did not allow him to carry out his purpose. It seems to me that if the former deserves to be punished the latter should also be deprived of his privilege of citizenship. I hope that the amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. MORSE. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by inserting, in line five, after the word 'offending,' as follows: 'or engage in a prize fight.'"

The question was put on the amendment and no quorum voted.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out the section, and upon that I call for the ayes and noes.

THE CHAIRMAN. The ayes and noes cannot be called in Committee of the Whole. The Secretary will call the roll for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is a quorum.

The roll was called, and ninety-one members found present.

The motion to strike out the section was lost, on a division, by a vote of 21 ayes to 69 noes.

MR. AYERS. Mr. Chairman: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend, by inserting after the amendment of Dr. Morse: 'or be voluntarily present at any lascivious or barbarous exhibition.'"

MR. CROSS. I object to that, as not being purely local to that State of South California, which is not yet formed.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment was adopted, on a division, by a vote of 52 ayes to 31 noes.

MR. CROSS. I move to amend, by inserting the words, "or bet on a horserace."

THE CHAIR. The amendment is out of order.

MR. WATERS. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Huestis, Hunter, Brown, and Barton.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIR. That carries the article over.

MR. CROSS. Then we have not considered the article at all. I think we had better all have been at home to-day. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

MR. LARKIN. Does the Chair rule that the article——

THE CHAIR. The Chair was mistaken. I did not know that an amendment had been made to the rules.

MR. BLACKMER. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to one fact. I noticed that in passing the first section the Chair called for a vote upon the first section. The ruling of the President of the Convention has been that if there were no further amendments to a section it was passed, and we took no vote upon the section, so that there is no vote except upon the amendments. I do not know whether the Chair decides the rule in that way, while he is occupying the chair, or not.

MR. MCFARLAND. I suppose that the only effect of this is to pass to the next section.

THE CHAIR. The Secretary will read section three.

OFFICIAL OATH.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. Members of the Legislature, and all officers, executive and judicial, except such inferior officers as may be by law exempted, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: 'I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of ——, according to the best of my ability.' And no other oath, declaration, or test, shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust."

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to offer to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section three by adding thereto as follows: 'and no officer of this State, or of any municipal corporation thereof, shall be required to give any official bond, except in cases of officers who, by virtue of their offices, have custody of private property.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. Chairman: This is a proposition which I introduced in the early part of the session of this Convention. It is appropriate to the article on miscellaneous subjects. Since that time, sir, I have had conversations about that matter with a great many gentlemen for whose judgment I have the greatest respect, and I find that nearly every one that I have conversed with is in favor of it. I am opposed to the practice of requiring a bond from any public officer elected by the people, except in the case of such as Sheriff, or Public Administrator, and one or two others, who, by virtue of their office, have private property in their charge. It would be wrong to compel any private individual to submit his property to an officer without security. Now, sir, when the public selects a public officer, I say that it is wrong in principle to compel him to bring in two, or three, or half a dozen of his friends to be responsible to the whole community. I believe it is wrong to place a public officer in the humiliating position of being a beggar among his friends. Everybody knows that he does not like to do it. Every man knows that if a man goes on an official bond it is because he does not like to refuse a friend; and it has got so now, that men qualified to go on bonds refuse. Now, suppose that an official bond has three or four signatures; suppose it occurs that through fraud or mismanagement the money is lost; who should lose that? Is it not more equitable, is it not more just, that the whole community should lose it, than that one or two men that happen to go upon the bond should? Now, it is no answer to this proposition to say that a man need not go upon an official bond, because somebody must do it, or else the business of the public ceases. It is not like asking a man to go on a promissory note. That is a private arrangement. The business of the State cannot go on unless somebody goes on these bonds, and they are forced to do it. Now, I would like to know what justice there is in this proposition? Here is a man indorsed by the people; he has a majority of the popular vote; the people themselves chose him for their representative in some office in which money is involved. The community have said that he is the right man. Now, then, according to the general doctrine, he has got to get two or three of his friends to go on his bond. If the people turn out to be wrong in their judgment; if they have made a mistake as well as the friends who go on his bonds, then the two or three friends have to suffer to the ruin of their fortune, and the people lose nothing. Sometimes it all falls upon one or two, or even upon one man, who has to pay that bond to the deprivation of his own family. I say it is wrong in principle.

Again, the man who holds a responsible office is put under obligations to those who go upon his bond, and that is wrong. If that position is a responsible one, the men who go upon his bonds have him to a great extent in their power. He has got to put in the deputies they want. He has got to be governed to a great extent by them; and then, after all, while you depend upon these official bonds, in nine cases out of ten you fail anyway. We all know how hard it is to collect on a bond. The sympathy of everybody is in favor of the bondsmen, and if there is any excuse for the Court or the jury to let the bondsmen get off, they will do it, because they see the intolerable injustice of compelling men to pay who did not know any more about it than the whole community; who have only made the same mistake that the whole community has made.

And, again, sir, there is another reason for the adoption of this amendment, and I think it is a most important one: The tendency would be to compel every man in the community, particularly the taxpayers in a community, to take some part in the selection of our public officers. I have had something to do with politics, and know that the best men in the community hardly ever take any interest in the selection of public officers. They could see to it that good men are put up, but they will not do it. They say: "Oh, well, if this man is elected County Treasurer, and anything goes wrong, his bondsmen will have to pay for it." Now, I want that sort of men to exercise their influence in public affairs. I want them to understand that if they allow other men to run politics and anything happens to the public, that they have got to pay it themselves; that they are not to depend upon two or three friends of this public officer who have gone on his bond. In that respect it would compel the taxpaying portion of the community to take a part in politics and give it greater dignity, and to see that a better class of men were put in office. If it was understood that the man who was elected Tax Collector or Treasurer in any city or county had to stand upon his personal character, and if it turned out that he was dishonest, the taxpaying community would have to foot the loss; they would see to it that men of character and standing and tried worth would be nominated for these offices by all political parties, and then no matter which party carried the election, good men would be there. I believe there would not be as much loss on the public from bad officers as there is now; I believe that it would be much less, and that we would have a better class of men in these offices that control money. I ask any gentleman on this floor if he thinks it is right that one man should pay out of his private fortune a large amount of money, which is lost through the incompetency or dishonesty of an official selected by the people themselves? I do not believe any man thinks it is right.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. Chairman: I do not agree with the gentleman from Sacramento as to his views in relation to this matter. Men are placed in nomination before the people by their friends. Their friends advocate their claims, and these same friends after presenting these men before the Convention and before the people, advocating their election, should be willing to give security to that people that they will not rob them. Nine men out of ten in every community are not personally acquainted with the officers that are nominated.

MR. MCFARLAND. Is it not a common thing for a man to go to his political opponents for his bond; to men who have not voted for him?

MR. LARKIN. Certainly. But who would not be willing to give security for that man, for every dollar, for every cent, that he might rob the people of. There must be some responsibility. An irresponsible party might be the most popular candidate and you would have the community responsible for his acts. That man was placed in nomination by friends who urged his election, who secured his nomination, and who should go upon his bonds. These are the men, and not the whole people, who should be security for that man. So far as the question of bonds is concerned, in my own experience I have never seen a worthy man but what could get plenty of bondsmen. I have known men that could not get bonds—a number of them; but this principle that the community should take the responsibility is all wrong. There must be responsibility, and that responsibility must rest with the men that placed him before the people and demanded his election. The idea of getting better men; that the people will watch more; care more who they vote for. I look upon the thing as preposterous.

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento. I know that in my own county a few public spirited men have had to take all the risk, and in the adjoining county of Monterey there have been several gentlemen ruined by going on bonds. I believe when the people elect a man they should be responsible for him.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I desire to offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Members of the Legislature, and all officers, judicial and ministerial, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe to the following oath or affirmation: 'I, ——, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support, protect, and defend the Constitution and Government of the United States, and the Constitution and Government of the State of California, against all enemies, whether domestic or foreign, and that I will bear true faith, allegiance, and loyalty to the same, any ordinance, resolution, or law of any State Convention or Legislature to the contrary notwithstanding; and further, that I do this with a full determination, pledge, and purpose, without any mental reservation or evasion whatsoever. And I do further solemnly swear (or affirm) that I have not fought a duel, sent or accepted a challenge to fight a duel, nor been a second to either party, nor in any manner aided or assisted in such duel, nor been knowingly the bearer of such challenge or acceptance, since the adoption of this Constitution of the State of California; and that I will not be so engaged or concerned, directly or indirectly, in or about any such duel during my continuance in office; and that I do not now nor never will employ any Asiatic, Mongolian, or Chinaman, nor be in any manner interested in the profits of his labor; and that I will use all my endeavors as a citizen and an officer, to prevent the further importation of any Asiatic, Mongolian, or Chinaman; and further, that I will endeavor by every Constitutional or legal means, to remove from the State all those who are now here; and I do further swear (or affirm) that I have paid no money in the form of a bribe, or donation, or made any promise of patronage, to secure my election to the office of ——, on which I am now about to enter (if an oath), so help me God; (if an affirmation), under the pains and penalties of perjury.'"

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two as follows: Strike out all of line one, and the the word 'judicial,' in line two, and insert "all State, county, township, district and municipal, executive, legislative, judicial, and ministerial.'"

MR. WATERS. I move the previous question.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Santa Clara has the floor.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. Chairman: "Members of the Legislature and all officers executive and judicial." Now, the way it reads it will be construed not to apply to anything except State officers. I do not understand, Mr. Chairman, that below a State officer there is an executive officer, where it is spoken of in the Constitution, or that below the Legislature there is a legislative officer included in this section; it confines it exclusively to the Legislature. There are other legislative officers of this State besides officers that are in the Legislature. The State officers are included by the very terms of this section, if gentlemen will notice it and just read it; the Boards of Supervisors are given legislative functions by the new system which we have adopted; the Mayor and Common Council of the City of San Francisco, when that city is organized as it is contemplated it shall be, will be a legislative body, and there is no reason why they should not be sworn as officers and take the oath to support the Constitution of this State.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I wish to call the attention of the Committee of the Whole to a feature in this article which I have sent up, and that is that it gets over all this difficulty that the State has labored under heretofore while trying to prevent the custom of dueling, and placing laws upon the statute books to prevent persons who have ever fought a duel from occupying any political position. In this proposition I propose that the party shall take an oath that he has never fought a duel; therefore the burden of proof rests upon his shoulders. Those who desire to suppress dueling had better vote for it in that form. The next feature is the matter of bribery. There is no law now which reaches a person who offers bribes. The burden of proof again falls upon the people. In all cases it has been next to impossible to prove where bribery had been carried on, and where bribes had been offered. But in this case it again calls upon the person to prove by his own oath that he has not given or promised a bribe in any shape or form. These, and also the employment of Chinese, are three reasonable features why this proposition should be accepted. As to the question of the Union, and loyalty to the Government, I think that part is beyond doubt.

MR. WATERS. Mr. Chairman: I renew my motion for the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Prouty, Hunter, Holmes, and Larue.

The main question was ordered.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington.

The amendment was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wellin.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend, by striking out of line nine the words, 'or test.'"

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: This is an amendment which seems to be of some significance. We have already provided that there shall be some test—as that the Governor shall be of a certain age, etc. If you leave the words "or test" in we shall have two conflicting sections. It adds nothing to the strength of this section unless it is meant to be in direct conflict with some other provisions which we have adopted. We have prescribed certain qualifications for office, and to leave these words here would be in direct opposition to the qualifications we have adopted.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: The hour of half past twelve having arrived, I move that the Committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

The motion prevailed.

IN CONVENTION.

Mr. Murphy in the chair.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, have made progress and ask leave to sit again.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took the usual recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., Mr. Murphy in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS.

MR. DEAN. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, to further consider the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects.

Carried.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

The vote was taken, but the Chair declared no quorum voting.

The question was put again, and on a division the vote stood 22 ayes to 35 noes—no quorum voting.

THE CHAIRMAN. There is evidently a quorum present. The Secretary will call the roll to ascertain.

The roll was called and eighty members answered to their names.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I think some members are voting under a misapprehension. This only applies to the oath, and there is no test in striking it out.

The amendment was lost—ayes 11.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. All officers or Commissioners, whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers or Commissioners, whose office or duties may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people, or appointed, as the Legislature may direct."

MR. JONES. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section four.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. Chairman: One objection to this is that the Legislature has full power to provide for the election or appointment of Commissioners without any constitutional provision. Still if there was no other objection but that I would not make this motion. Now, there is one Board of Commissioners in this State with regard to which the Legislature has not the power to say whether it shall be elected or appointed. That is the Board of Yosemite Commissioners. By an Act of Congress, passed in eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the premises known as the Yosemite Valley and Mariposa Big Tree Grove, were granted to the State of California, and it was prescribed that such property should be managed by a commission composed of the Governor of the State, and eight other Commissioners appointed by him. Now, there have heretofore arisen, and will hereafter arise, questions as to whether these Commissioners may be regarded as State officers, subject to the control of the Legislature. The Commissioners have claimed that they were independent of State authority. They claim that they are Federal officers. I do not understand that the Legislature of the State of California has ever conceded anything of the kind. They take charge of the State's property, and, with the exception of the Governor, they are appointed by the Executive of the State. They make certain reports to the Legislature of the State. Now, if we adopt this section we provide that they shall be appointed or elected, as the Legislature may direct. Now, since these Commissioners may not have that regulation assigned by the Legislature, the adoption of this section is impliedly confessing that it is not a State Commission. The election or appointment is not prescribed. There is a Commission, the appointment or election of which cannot be prescribed by the Legislature, and this amounts to an admission that it is not a State Commission. The State has no control over the appointment of them. This is the only objection I have to this section—that it is a concession that this is not a State Commission.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I hope the motion will not prevail. If we strike out this section it will allow the Legislature to create a Commission and appoint to that office. This is an inhibition which will prevent the Legislature from appointing to an office. Both Governors Booth and Haight vetoed bills upon that ground. Section four is the section under which these decisions were made, and it ought not to be stricken out.

The motion to strike out was lost.

MR. JONES. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for the last five words, 'in accordance with law.'"

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is upon that amendment.

Rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. The fiscal year shall commence on the first day of July."

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out July and insert January.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman: I had thought that such an amendment would be a good one, but on consultation with the Treasurer of my county, and other officials throughout the State, I find that the change is not a good one. As far as the State is concerned it would be all right, but we collect taxes on the first Monday in January, and then there is the delinquent roll, which is not finished until February or March. The consequence is that the fiscal year often runs until after the taxes are collected. I think the change would be a bad one.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. Suits may be brought against the State in such manner and in such Courts as shall be directed by law."

No amendment.

THE SECRETARY read section seven:

"SEC. 7. No contract of marriage shall be invalidated for want of conformity to the requirements of any religious sect. But no marriage hereafter contracted in this State shall be valid between the parties thereto unless a public record thereof be made in such manner as may be provided by law."

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment or substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No contract of marriage if otherwise duly made shall be invalidated for want of conformity to the requirements of any religious sect."

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. Chairman: That is substantially the old Constitution. I will say that if this section is adopted it will virtually destroy the sacredness of marriage, from the fact that it requires a public record to be made, and there are a great many who would enter into a contract of marriage, not knowing of any such provision. The marriage would be null and void under this provision, unless a public declaration be made. Now, sir, the apparent result of this section ought to be obvious to every member of this Convention. The matter is fully covered now, I think, by the Code. Section sixty-eight of the Civil Code covers the ground, and the provision of the old Constitution is all that is necessary here.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: The argument of the gentleman does not strike me with a great deal of force. The object of this amendment is a good one, and I will state it to the Convention. There is a practice that has grown up in this State whereby persons, after the death of some wealthy individual, come forward and by perjury establish a marriage. Now, this would be impossible under a provision requiring it to be made a matter of public record. There ought to be some guard against the evil.

MR. BARRY. If this section should be passed, and there should be a private marriage, would not the effect be that the children would be illegitimate?

MR. LAINE. No, sir; it is limited to the parties themselves, and not to the children.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: It seems to me we are going too far in constitutional legislation and treading on dangerous ground. It is easy to regulate the marriage relation by statute, as far as public convenience and public necessity require that it ought to be regulated. It is unwise, in my judgment, to adopt a strict constitutional rule which, if it be found to work badly, cannot be changed by the Legislature. Now, in New York, many years ago, for reasons very similar to those given by Mr. Laine, an attempt was made to legislate in this same way. The result was that in two years it was repealed, because it was found that a great many persons who supposed they were married were not, and it was found that men died, leaving supposed widows, who were not widows, and the law was repealed. This matter can safely be trusted to the Legislature. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

The amendment was adopted.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. All property, real and personal, owned by either husband or wife before marriage, and that acquired by either of them afterwards by gift, devise, or descent, shall be their separate property."

MR. DUNLAP. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding: 'And laws shall be passed as to the property that is held in common by the husband and wife.'"

MR. DUNLAP. That is the law of the old Constitution. I don't think it would be wise to change the rule.

MR. LAINE. It is unnecessary, for the Legislature will pass these laws anyway.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. No perpetuities shall be allowed except for eleemosynary purposes."

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment or substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Perpetuities and monopolies are contrary to the genius of a free government, and shall never be allowed; nor shall the law of primogeniture or entailments ever be in force in this State."

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Section nine, as it stands, is meaningless as it can be, therefore I offer this amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. ROLFE.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. Chairman: This same amendment came up before the Committee of the Whole in another article. It was discussed there. The same amendment now offered was offered before. Now the word "perpetuities" includes the others. Where perpetuities cannot exist, it certainly prohibits primogeniture and entailment. But this section does allow, and is intended to allow these perpetuities to eleemosynary institutions. That should not be prohibited. This section contains all that is necessary for the Constitution. It covers the whole thing, including the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. Chairman: I hope the amendment will be adopted. I think the provision of the old Constitution is not sufficiently full and elaborate to meet the demands of the times. Because a thing is in the old Constitution, is no reason why it should not be changed. We have been here five months trying to change the old Constitution, and whenever we find anything that needs changing it is our duty to change it, because that is what we were sent here for. That is the way we make new Constitutions. Now, under this original provision here, what is to prevent A from willing his property to his oldest son B, and what is to prevent B from willing it in turn to his oldest son C, perpetuating it down the line? For the purpose of preventing that I ask for the adoption of the amendment. Another thing I object to is, that it excepts eleemosynary institutions. I do not want to except anything. Europe has been troubled with eleemosynary church institutions, and it has cost revolution after revolution. I am no more in favor of allowing perpetuities to them than I am to the Bank of California; I want them to stand on the same level as all other institutions and within the control of the legislative power of the State. I don't want any power built up in this country under the guise of an eleemosynary institution that shall be above all future Constitutions and above the legislative power; I therefore hope that the amendment will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: I think we have learned something that we never thought of before, namely, that the granting of perpetuities to eleemosynary institutions led to the destruction of States. Now, let us see what eleemosynary means. Webster defines the word as meaning, relating to charity, alms, or alms-giving; intended for the distribution of charity; given in charity or alms; supported by charity; that is the definition. Now, the gentleman deliberately says that hereafter there shall be no gifts in this State to eleemosynary institutions.

MR. WYATT. I think you misunderstood me, I said no perpetuity should be granted.

MR. ESTEE. I understand the gentleman; he opposes this section because it allows grants to eleemosynary institutions, and is in favor of the amendment because it prohibits it; I think that is his proposition.

Digitized by Google

MR. WYATT. No, sir, not exactly; I say they should not be allowed perpetuities beyond legislative control.

MR. ESTEE. Eleemosynary institutions do not make purchases, they are simply charitable institutions, and our proposition is, that no perpetuities shall be granted except to that class of institutions. This is allowed everywhere in the world, and I hope California will not be an exception to the rule. I hope that in California, whenever any citizen who has no heirs; whenever any citizen whose heirs are unworthy of his confidence, dies, he shall be permitted to give his property to eleemosynary institutions and direct its use; that is the reason I most earnestly oppose the amendment. I believe the old section is correct; it reads exactly as the new one does. I claim that charitable grants should be encouraged as much as possible. Allow those who choose to give to charitable institutions the power to do so; give them the broadest latitude. Let them not be circumscribed in their liberality, and when you do that you are only responding to the broad and liberal sentiments of the people of this State.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of this amendment. I deny the right of any man on this floor to legislate forever. It is all very well to talk about charity. Let us be charitable with what we possess, and not with what we do not possess. What suits us to-day, might not suit the people fifty years from now. Have we a right to legislate for them? I deny it. Let us legislate for the present generation, and not until the resurrection.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of the section as it stands; first, because it is the old Constitution; second, because I can see no reason why we should discourage wealthy men who are so disposed from leaving their money to charitable institutions. They would never do it if we give the Legislature power to get at that money, and either confiscate it or divert it from the purpose for which it was given.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I am in favor of this section as it stands. There is a misunderstanding with some. It does not apply to children of families; but only the exception is made so as to allow these gifts to be made for charitable purposes. Why not? If a man wants to leave ten thousand dollars to one of these institutions, why should we step in and say he shall not do it? And of course he won't do it when he knows that the endowment is liable to be diverted at any time.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan.

Lost.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to the section: 'Nor shall primogeniture or entailments ever prevail in this State.'"

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: Now this amendment in no wise affects eleemosynary institutions. It does not prevent any one who may see fit from donating or devising property to them.

MR. TULLY. I rise to a point of order. That is the same thing just voted down.

THE CHAIRMAN. The point of order is well taken.

MR. WYATT. If it would do any good—but we have never yet been able to overrule the decision of the Chair.

MR. VACQUEREL. I move to amend by adding, "no perpetuities shall ever be allowed in this State."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

Lost.

BRIBERY AND ITS PENALTIES.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 10. Every person shall be disqualified from holding any office of profit in this State who shall have been convicted of having given or offered a bribe to procure his election or appointment."

No amendment.

THE SECRETARY read section eleven:

"SEC. 11. Laws shall be made to exclude from office, serving on juries, and from the right of suffrage, those who shall hereafter be convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, or other high crimes. The privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence thereon from power, bribery, tumult, or other improper practice."

MR. HAGER. I move to amend by striking out the word "hereafter," in the second line. Let it apply to all who have been convicted as well.

MR. ESTEE. That includes members of this Convention. [Laughter.]

MR. AYERS. That would leave it unequal. I move to strike out the words, "those who shall hereafter be," and insert "persons."

Adopted.

ABSENCE FROM THE STATE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section twelve.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 12. Absence from this State, on business of the State or of the United States, shall not affect the question of residence of any person."

THE CHAIRMAN. There being no amendment, the Secretary will read section thirteen.

PLURALITY OF VOTES.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 13. A plurality of the votes given at any election shall constitute a choice, where not otherwise directed in this Constitution."

THE CHAIRMAN. There being no amendment, the Secretary will read section fourteen.

A STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 14. The Legislature shall provide, by law, for the maintenance and efficiency of a State Board of Health."

THE CHAIRMAN. There being no amendment, the Secretary will read section fifteen.

MECHANICS' LIENS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. Mechanics, material-men, artisans, and laborers of every class, shall have a lien upon the property upon which they have bestowed labor or furnished material, for the value of such labor done and material furnished; and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens."

MR. MORELAND. Mr. Chairman: I offer a substitute for section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. Mechanics, laborers, artisans, and material-men of every class, shall have a lien upon the article manufactured or repaired by them, for the value of their labor done thereon, or material furnished therefor. The land upon which any building, improvement, or structure is constructed, and a convenient space about the same, may also be subject to such liens. The Legislature, at its first session, shall provide for the proper enforcement of such lien."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. Mechanics, artisans, laborers, material-men, and miners, shall have liens upon the building, structure, mine, or other improvement upon which they have performed labor or supplied material, for the value of the work done or material furnished, and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the speedy and efficient enforcement of such liens, making such building, structure, mine, or other improvement, and the owner thereof, responsible for such liens, notwithstanding any payment, settlement, or contract made by him with contractors or subcontractors before such liens have been paid."

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman: The amendment is the minority report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects. The section as reported, like the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Sonoma, does not strike at the question that affects mechanics and laboring men in this matter. To all intents the constitutional provision, and the enactments of the Legislature have been of no value to them, and it is a fact that most of them have preferred to lose their debts rather than endeavor to enforce the law. The Legislature has passed laws, but the artisans have been deprived of the benefit on account of collusion between the owner and the contractor. Whenever the artisan attempted to apply his lien, he was forestalled by the fact that a payment had been made by the owner. The object of this amendment is to correct that evil, by making the contractor the agent of the owner, so that when the lien is filed the owner cannot come forward and say I have paid it. The decisions were to the effect that a payment discharges a lien, so the hands of the artisans were tied. That is the reason the mechanics of the State want this provision. It is one that no Court can get around. Of course, if you could prove that these payments to the contractor were not made in good faith that would vitiate it, but that is a hard thing to do. The fact is they are not generally made in good faith, but the thing is to prove it. The fact is, that two thirds of the contracts in the city of San Francisco for the erection of buildings have been taken by the contractor with the intention of defrauding the workmen who do the work. Now, so far as the owner is concerned, he has a perfect means of protecting himself, because the owner need make no payment until he is presented with proof that the sub-contractors, laboring men, and material-men are all paid. This amendment is intended to reach directly that evil.

MR. INMAN. Mr. Chairman: Though I possibly could stand that section as it now stands, the amendment is too much. It gives a lien on the land. I am entirely opposed to it.

REMARKS OF MR. MORELAND.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. Chairman: I have not had time to examine the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, but it seems to me that most of it is matter that can be regulated by law. The amendment which I have introduced differs with the section reported by the committee in two respects. First, it extends the lien to the land on which the building is constructed, and a convenient place about the same. That is what the law is at present. To give mechanics a lien upon the house itself, would be of but little avail. They must have a lien upon the ground in order to benefit them much. They could take the house away, but it is not worth much after it is moved. That is the principal difference between my amendment and the original section. The other respect in which it differs is, that it provides that the Legislature, at its first session, shall provide for the proper enforcement of it.

MR. CAPLES. You say you would give a lien upon the land. Suppose A, who resides in New York, leases a piece of land in San Francisco to B, for a term of years, and B lets a contract to build a house, and a lien is filed on that house and on the land.

MR. MORELAND. That can all be provided for by law, as it is provided for at this time.

MR. HILBORN. This will not protect all classes of laborers. If we are going to protect any, it seems to me we should include them all. If a man helps to drive a band of cattle or sheep, he ought to have a lien on them until he is paid his wages. It should not be confined to mechanics alone.

SPEECH OF MR. FARRELL.

MR. FARRELL. Mr. Chairman: This question is one of no ordinary importance. I hope it will receive at the hands of this Convention that careful consideration which its importance demands. I believe this class of citizens should receive this protection. I know from my own personal experience as an artisan, and the experience of the vast army of builders, mechanics, and material-men of the city which I in part represent, that the passage of this amendment as proposed by Mr. Barbour will be to these people one of the best arguments in favor of the adoption of this Constitution. Mr. Chairman, if this Convention adjourns without granting this much needed relief, it will be almost fatal to the instrument which we are framing. Gentlemen have stood upon this floor and demanded the taxation of mortgages and the restriction of corporations; and now we insist on a proper consideration of the industrial and mechanical interests. We are only asking the Convention to protect the laboring man and mechanic from thieving contractors and scoundrelly owners, who connive to swindle the workman out of his wages. This is the most important provision that has been before the Convention. These laboring men and mechanics have been the victims of swindling contractors long enough. I am opposed to the section introduced by the committee, and also to the amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma. We want to have some responsibility attached to the owner. We want to make the owner responsible for all the debts on the building until it is completed, so that the sub-contractors and material-men will receive their money. If we place this responsibility upon the owner, he will take it upon himself to know that the contractors are responsible parties, and he will see that the mechanics and laboring men are paid as they go along.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to this idea of making the owner responsible, unless there is a clause in there providing that such claim or lien shall be filed with the County Recorder within sixty days after the completion of such building or furnishing of such material. Without that, it will leave a lien upon the property forever. That is what I object to.

MR. BARBOUR. That will do no harm. I will accept that amendment.

MR. ESTEE. I shall support the amendment if that is put in. That is all I object to. Then the owner need not pay for his building until the end of sixty days. That is all right. I think this whole matter is in the nature of legislative enactment; yet, if it will accomplish the purpose of protecting laboring men and mechanics, who are dependent upon their daily earnings for their daily bread, I am willing, as far as I am concerned, for it to go into the Constitution. It can do no harm if properly guarded, and it may do some good. The owners will have sixty days in which to look round and see whether these bills for labor and material are all settled or not.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. Chairman: I understand a part of the reasons which may be urged for making mechanics preferred creditors, but why they should be preferred to the man who furnishes money to pay laborers is more than I can understand. The section reported by the committee is better than the amendment. I understand why the workman should be a preferred creditor, but I don't understand why the lumberman should be a preferred creditor. There has been no good reason urged here why he should stand on any better ground than any other creditor. Certainly lumber dealers are capable of looking out for their own interests. If they are not satisfied as to the solvency of the creditor then let them get security. I hope the amendment will be voted down, and the words "material-men," stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I think an examination of the laws of other States will show that they nearly all include material-men, as well as mechanics and laborers. Now, sir, the gentleman says, he cannot see why material-men should be included, why he should have a lien for the lumber which he furnishes, when the man who furnishes the money has not. The man who furnishes money, in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, always takes security before he furnishes the money. The money, in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, is furnished on mortgage, and the man who borrows money generally takes sufficient to construct the building. Whereas, he goes to the material-man and orders material as he needs it. If there is any reason why the mechanic should have a lien, there is the same reason why the material-man should have a lien. Mr. Inman says, he is not in favor of having a lien upon the land. I allow that argument to go for what it is worth, coming from a farmer. Now, sir, I desire that mechanics, laborers, and material-men should have a good and sufficient lien; one that can not be overturned and set aside by the decision of any Court in this State. The report of the majority amounts to nothing. But the amendment of Mr. Barbour as amended by Mr. Estee, means something. It says that the material-man and the laborer shall have his coin, notwithstanding any collusive contract that may exist between the man erecting the building and the owner; and that they shall have a right to have this lien enforced within a limited time.

SPEECH OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. Chairman: I am in hopes that the amendment presented by Mr. Barbour will be adopted by this Convention. We have been called upon from time to time to adopt measures for other interests in this State. The farmer has been protected by having his growing crops exempted from taxation; the railroad companies have been looked after; those who deposit their money in banks have received some protection, and now we, as working men, ask some protection. We ask what is just and fair. Now, I will give a sample of the way business has been conducted in San Francisco: In eighteen hundred and seventy-six, a man named Irwin entered into a contract with a man named Flood, to build six houses in San Francisco, for the sum of fifteen thousand dollars. The work, when finished, cost twenty-five thousand dollars, and the laboring men, material-men, and sub-contractors lost on that piece of work over ten thousand dollars. The gentleman from Solano wants to know what reason there is for including material-men. There is one reason why they should all be protected. It is one of the easiest things in the world for the owner of the property, when he lets a contract for building, to get security of the contractor that he will pay the bills. I have had experience in building for over twenty-five years, and I have seen a great deal of this swindling. There is no opportunity for a man who applies for a job on a building to know whether the man he is working for is good pay or not. He simply goes to work there, supposing that the business will be carried on honestly, and that he will get his pay. The owner, by conniving with the contractor, make a contract at thirty or forty per cent. less than it is worth, and then divide the difference between themselves, and cheat the laborers out of their labor. All we ask is some protection against this kind of thing. Look at the maritime rules. Let a man go to work on a ship, and that ship must pay for every dollar before it can leave. The same is true as to material. We are perfectly willing to accept the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee. We only want what is right.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. SWING. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Biggs, McFarland, Tully, and Larue.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

Division was called for and the amendment adopted, by a vote of 51 ayes to 33 noes.

IN RELATION TO INSURANCE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section sixteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. The amount named in either a fire or marine insurance policy shall be deemed to be the true value of the property insured, for insurance purposes."

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words, 'deemed to be,' where they occur in the second line."

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. Chairman: It occurs to me that these words are superfluous. By striking out these words it will read: "The amount named in either a fire or marine insurance policy shall be the true value of the property insured, for insurance purposes." It occurs to me that they mean nothing, or else they mean just what the section does without them.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman: I think this section ought to be stricken out entirely, and I so move. If this section is adopted it will lead necessarily to very great frauds. It proposes to establish an arbitrary rule, that, for instance, if I insure a quantity of goods for ten thousand dollars, that the goods shall be deemed to be worth that amount. It shuts out all inquiry in order to get at their true value. Now it is necessary to insure property constantly which the insurer has not seen and cannot see; which he has no opportunity to examine. Take property that is at sea. The insured party is the only one who knows what the value is, and he has the means of ascertaining precisely what it is. Then again, take an insurance on a stock of goods in a store. It is impossible for the insurer to examine these goods, examine every portion of them. They necessarily have to go upon a general estimate of their value, and even then they are liable to be imposed upon, for the stock of goods is constantly fluctuating. If he keeps a proper set of books, and they are preserved, there is no difficulty in telling what have been destroyed. But if you pass a section of this kind, it will open the door to wholesale frauds. The opportunities for fraud will be greatly increased in the case of personal property. For these reasons I move to strike out the section.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. Chairman: I hope the section will pass. There is not one solitary question that has ever come up before this Convention that is more important than the one under consideration. If there is one question that the people of California are interested in, it is this one. I have known instances in Auburn where men have insured for years, and paid in insurance a large amount, and when the property was destroyed they could not get anywhere near what it was insured for, without going into a lawsuit with a powerful corporation. Now, if we pay these companies their rates on a certain amount, that amount should be paid. If it stands there twenty years without loss, they are getting four per cent. on the money. If the property is insured for ten thousand dollars, it ought to be paid accordingly. That is the principle of life insurance. If a man dies he is paid the amount of his policy. People are always browbeaten, and threatened with a lawsuit unless they submit to the arbitrary reduction of the adjuster. They come and insure my house for one thousand dollars, and so long as it stands they collect rates on the valuation of one thousand dollars. But it burns down, and then the adjuster comes along and says, I will pay you five hundred dollars, and I have to take it or go to law with the chances in favor of the full amount being squandered in the expense of litigation. The people realize these abuses forcibly, and they demand some protection. I hope the section will be retained and made stronger if possible. I would like to see the phraseology corrected to read something like this: that the amount named in a fire or marine insurance company shall be the amount for which the company shall be liable. If they take an insurance on my property for more than it is worth, that is their business. I hope it will not be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. Chairman: I don't know whether I am on the popular side or not, but I am going to take the chances. This is a very bad provision and should be stricken out. The reasons for it are very apparent to me. This says that the amount named shall be deemed to be the true value of the property for insurance purposes. Now, sir, insurance companies largely depend upon the representations of the owners as to the value of the property. It must always be so. You cannot measure every bolt of broadcloth and every yard of linen. You have to take the word of the merchant as to the value of his goods. If you insert such a provision as this in the Constitution, you will be putting a premium on falsehood and arson. When such a provision as this appears in the Constitution of California, every villain who can, by false representations, induce an insurance company to place a policy upon his property, will be induced to fire his property, thereby endangering other property adjoining him. That would be one of the most dangerous features of this thing. I know of an instance where a man insured his property for more than it was worth, and three times it was burned by incendiary means. The third time, at the request of his neighbors, whose property had been destroyed by fire, the company contested his claim, and found that the property which was insured for two thousand five hundred dollars was only worth about five hundred dollars. This is a danger which we should avoid. This same danger would occur in marine insurance. With such a provision as this, some man might be induced to fire the ship in order to get the insurance, thus endangering the lives of hundreds. It won't do; there is no reason in it.

MR. FILCHER. Are you an insurance agent? [Laughter.]

MR. CROSS. No, sir; but I have studied this business in connection with my profession. Let us be guided by reason and not by prejudice. Let us act as reasonable men, and not put a premium on fraud in the Constitution of the State. It is a rule of law that frauds vitiates every contract; but here we propose to do away with that, and reverse the rule of law. I hope it will be stricken out.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: If this section is not stricken out I will move to insert after the word "insurance" the words "and criminal." I will do that in order to make the section consistent. Now, sir, if a man gets the value of his property which has been destroyed, if he be an honest man, that will satisfy him. The owner should receive pay only for what is destroyed. A man may have his goods insured for ten thousand dollars, and that may be a fair valuation. Yet in a month the stock may be sold out down to two or three thousand dollars. Does any reasonable man say that the company ought to pay him the full amount in the policy. I say pay a man just what he has lost and no more.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. TULLY. Mr. Chairman: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Huestis, Shoemaker, Estee, and McConnell.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster.

Lost on division—ayes, 11.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on striking out the section.

Division was called for, and the section was stricken out, by a vote of 51 ayes to 32 noes.

TERMS OF APPOINTED OFFICERS.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. When the term of any officer or Commissioner is not provided for in this Constitution, the term of such officer or Commissioner may be declared by law; and, if not so declared, such officer or Commissioner shall hold their position as such officer or Commissioner during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment; but in no case shall such term exceed four years."

MR. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out the word "their," in the fifth line, and insert the word "his." My object is to make it good grammar. I hope this instrument will be gotten up in good English, at least.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. Chairman: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Governor, and all the officers under this State, shall be liable to impeachment for misdemeanor in office during their continuance in office, and for two years thereafter, or more, as the case may be."

Lost.

ALIENS SHALL NOT HOLD REAL ESTATE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read section eighteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 18. No persons other than citizens, or those who have declared their intentions to become such, shall hereafter acquire or own, either by purchase or otherwise, real property in this State contrary to this provision—such property shall escheat to the State; nor shall any lands in this State be held in trust for any alien; but the creation of any trust in lands for the benefit of an alien, shall at once escheat the land to the State."

MR. AYERS. I move to strike out the section.

Carried.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. Chairman: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No person shall, on account of sex, be disqualified to enter upon and pursue any lawful business, avocation, or profession."

Adopted.

MR. INMAN. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Lost.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. Chairman: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 19. Eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work on all public works."

Adopted.

PAY OF MEMBERS.

MR. DEAN. Mr. Chairman: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Nothing in this Constitution shall prevent the Legislature from providing by law for the payment of the expenses of this Convention, including the per diem of the delegates for the full term of said Convention."

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Chairman: I object to this because the members are directly interested. I don't think it looks well to put a thing of that kind in the Constitution if there is any prohibition that can be fixed in the legislative department. I am opposed to putting in such a a suggestion to the Legislature as this.

The section was adopted, on division, by a vote of 58 ayes to 33 noes.

PAY OF SUPERVISORS.

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Supervisors of the various counties of this State shall receive for their services an annual salary of one hundred and fifty dollars, and one dollar for every twenty miles of travel from their place of residence to the county seat and back; and this shall be in full for all services rendered by them, and they shall hold such sessions for business as may be prescribed by the Legislature."

MR. WHITE. Mr. Chairman: I hope this amendment will be adopted. This will be ample pay for the Board of Supervisors who will not be more than thirty or forty days in session. The idea of paying Supervisors such large sums is all wrong. Almost every farmer interested in the welfare of the county, is willing to take the office for only his expenses. One hundred and fifty dollars, with his mileage, will more than pay his expenses. I hope it will be adopted.

MR. WATERS. I move that the committee rise, report back the article, and recommend its adoption.

Division was called for, and the motion prevailed by a vote of 55 ayes to 37 noes.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the report of the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, have amended the same, and recommend its adoption as amended.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do now adjourn.

Lost.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that four hundred and eighty copies be ordered printed.

So ordered.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Murphy in the chair, to consider the article relative to the distribution of powers.

So ordered.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE SECRETARY read amendment number five hundred and thirty-six, introduced by Mr. McCallum:

"SECTION 1. The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, the executive, and judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases hereinafter expressly directed or permitted.

"SEC. 2. The Legislature may provide that cases submitted in the Courts shall be decided within a limited time, under such conditions as may be provided by law."

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out section two.

Carried.

MR. BARTON. Mr. Chairman: I believe that section one will conflict with the duties of the Railroad Commission, and I move that it be stricken out.

MR. CROSS. I think it is all right, except that the word "hereinafter" should be stricken out, and say: "except as in this Constitution provided."

MR. ESTEE. I hope the word "hereinafter" will remain in there, because there is no question but what the Railroad Commissioners will exercise both legislative and judicial functions. Why strike it out?

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. Chairman: I am opposed to striking out the section. We have four powers which we might just as well specify. We have the executive, judicial, legislative, and Railroad Commissioners. [Laughter.] Therefore I hope we will specify the powers of government in this Constitution.

MR. HAGER. This is copied from the old Constitution.

THE CHAIRMAN: The question is on the motion to strike out the section.

Lost.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Nevada, Mr. Cross.

Adopted.

MR. VACQUEREL. I move to insert, "and Railroad Commissioners."

Lost.

MR. LARUE. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report back the article, and recommend its adoption.

Carried.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the article on distribution of powers, have amended the same, and recommend its adoption as amended.

MR. FILCHER. I move that four hundred and eighty copies be ordered printed.

So ordered.

STATE AND MUNICIPAL INDEBTEDNESS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I move that the Convention resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Murphy in the chair, for the purpose of considering the article relative to State and municipal indebtedness.

So ordered.

IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

THE CHAIRMAN. The Secretary will read the article.

THE SECRETARY read:

"ARTICLE —.

"STATE INDEBTEDNESS.

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not, in any manner, create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except, in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by some law for some single object or work, to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means, exclusive of loans, for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years of the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all moneys raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created; and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each judicial district, if one be published therein, throughout the State for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people."

MR. LAINE. Mr. Chairman: I move to strike out the words, "judicial district," and insert "county or city and county."

Adopted.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. Chairman: I move that the committee rise, report the article back, and recommend that it be adopted as amended.

So ordered.

IN CONVENTION.

THE CHAIR. Gentlemen: The Committee of the Whole have instructed me to report that they have had under consideration the article on State and municipal indebtedness, have amended the same, and recommend its adoption as amended.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I move to adjourn.

Lost.

MR. AYERS. I move to take up the preamble and bill of rights for second reading.

Lost.

LOCAL OPTION.

MR. HAGER. I move to take up proposition number five hundred and twenty-two, relative to local option.

So ordered.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move that the report of the Committee of the Whole be adopted, and the article be indefinitely postponed.

Carried.

LAND AND HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move that we now take up for consideration the article relative to lands and homestead exemption.

Declared carried.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. It takes a two-thirds vote to take it up out of order.

THE CHAIR. Well taken.

Division was called for, but no quorum voted.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I move we adjourn.

Carried.

And, at five o'clock P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

EDUCATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business on the general file is the report of the Committee of the Whole on the article on education. The Secretary will read the amendments.

THE SECRETARY read all the amendments, and then the amendment to section four as follows:

"SEC. 4. The proceeds of all lands that have been or may be granted by the United States to this State, for the support of common schools which may be, or may have been, sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted, or have been granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State."

Concurred in.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Committee of the Whole to section five.

Digitized by Google

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 5. The Legislature shall provide for a system of common schools by which a free school shall be kept up and supported in each district at least six months in every year, after the first year, in which a school has been established."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section six.

THE SECRETARY read;

"SEC. 6. The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority; but the entire revenue derived from the State School Fund, and the State school tax shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools. In the primary and grammar schools no language but the English shall be taught."

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six as follows: Strike out the words, 'in the primary and grammar schools no language but the English shall be taught.'"

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: It seems to me that it will debar children attending the grammar schools from any preparation for entering the University. I hope it will be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento. I hope that the amendment will be adopted, and that the section will be restored as it originally stood before the amendment was offered by General Howard. In advocating the striking out of this portion of the section which was added to it by General Howard, I am not influenced by any sectarian or by any national feeling. But, Mr. President, I place it upon the broad ground of education. It is too late in the day for a Convention, as intelligent as this Convention, to place a limit upon the educational facilities of the children of this State. I, sir, have had occasion before this subject come up before the Convention, to examine carefully and critically, from every existing Constitution of every State of this Union, and, sir, I fail to find anything similar to the one that was added to this section upon the motion of the gentleman from Los Angeles, General Howard. When the pilgrims from England hundreds of years ago landed on Plymouth Rock they brought with them the common school system, and as early as sixteen hundred and forty-seven there was in Massachusetts Bay Colony a law providing for the instruction of the youth in every township.

As early as sixteen hundred and forty-seven it was provided in Massachusetts Bay Colony that if a town contained over one thousand inhabitants that they were obliged to employ a teacher, at public expense, who was competent to teach Latin and Greek, and fit children for the University. In seventeen hundred and twelve, in Connecticut, grammar schools were organized in which the Greek and Latin languages were taught at public expense. Now, sir, two hundred and twenty years ago, in Massachusetts Bay Colony, and over one hundred and fifty years ago, in the Colony of Connecticut, they were already giving to the youth of those Colonies the advantages, through the medium of public schools, to learn the dead languages, and be prepared for the University. Now, sir, if I had time, and this Convention was in the mood to listen, I would be able to demonstrate that at the Exposition of eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, at Paris, where competent Commissioners were sent from this country, and were sent from England—the report of these Commissioners goes on to say that England and the United States are far in the back ground as far as the education of the masses is concerned. That Germany, and France, and Austria are taking the lead in these matters. The English Commissioners say that England is daily losing footing in the marts of the world because her artisans, her laborers, her common people, are not receiving as thorough an education as the laboring people of Germany, France, and Austria are receiving. It is a known fact that Prussia conquered Austria in eighteen hundred and sixty-six through the intelligence of her soldiers; also, that Germany overcame France because of the intelligence of her soldiers, many of whom were able to speak the French language, and had a topographical knowledge of the French territory. The rudiments of education were laid deep in the minds of these men. In the plastic minds of their youth was planted the seed that sprung up and germinated, and they to-day make these nations the foremost nations of the world in regard to education. I merely desire, now, as a part of my argument, to read a speech that was delivered by Robert C. Winthrope, of Massachusetts, at the Boston Lyceum, December twentieth, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight:

"Among the many striking changes of these wonderteeming times, hardly any one seems calculated to make a stronger impression upon a reflecting New England mind, than this. If there has been anything upon which New Englanders have been accustomed to think that they might pardonably pride themselves, it has been their free school system. While others have been boasting of the fertility of their soils and the salubrity of their climates, we have been content to be jested about our rocks and ice, our east winds and consumption, while we could point to institutions of popular education, which were admitted to be models for the world. And year after year, as our sons and daughters have swarmed out from the old New England hive and sought better soils and brighter skies in the distant west, we have commended these cherished institutions to them with our parting tears, and counted it among our most precious consolations under the bereavement, that by them and in them New England principles would be planted and perpetuated thousands of miles over the mountains. How harshly, then, does it strike upon our eyes, and ears, and hearts, to see other institutions now sought out as examples, to have other schools made the object of praises so long awarded to ours, and to feel that New England will soon be called on to acknowledge and admire, in the intellectual fields and gardens of our country, 'strange leaves and fruits not her own'—novas frondes et non sua poma. Above all, how stern and stoical a philosophy does it require, not only to acquiesce in the justice of all this, not merely to give the assent of silence to the sentence which supersedes us in our most cherished field of competition, but even to unite, as we have done, in transferring the very diadem of our beauty and our pride to other hands!

"But this view of the circumstances to which I have alluded comprises but a small portion of its impressive character. Had the free school system of New England been obliged to relinquish its claims upon the admiration and imitation of the world in favor of similar institutions upon our own American soil; had some thrifty scion of our own raising outshot the parent stock, and were it now standing by its side to cast upon it no greater disparagement than that of being 'the lovely mother of a lovelier daughter,' our vanity might have been healed by the very blow which wounded it, and we should have been compensated for the immediate honors we had lost, by the derivative and reflected glory we had acquired. But far different has been our fate. Robbed of our own richest and proudest distinction, we are compelled to see it claimed and enjoyed by those whom we have been accustomed to regard with feelings only oscillating between pity and contempt, and with whose intelligence, moral, or political condition we should have scorned to claim, or even to admit, any connection or sympathy. The ignorance and degradation of Prussian hirelings, and Austrian bondsmen, and Russian serfs, have so long been the theme of our wholesale declamations, and have constituted so completely the sum and substance of all our associations with those regions of the earth respectively, that as little should we have expected any good thing out of either of them as an ancient Jew did out of Nazareth. Yet, from these very mountains of darkness and valleys of the shadow of death a light has sprung up, of whose rays we are now glad to borrow. What would——"

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time has expired.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I ask leave to finish the reading of this.

MR. WYATT. I object.

MR. WATERS. I object.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I hope that the Convention will concur in striking out the last part of this section. I have failed so far to see the necessity of inserting such a clause in the organic law of the State, and I am yet to see a plank in the platform of the different parties represented in this Convention that gives power to the delegates to restrict education. Education is the corner-stone of republican institutions, the safeguard of liberty, and I may well say the pride of this Union. The common school system of the United States is the admiration of the whole world, and the best proof that can be given is, that other nations try to establish such systems in their domains. Actions speak louder than words, and I am yet to hear of any people in the world that does not fully recognize our common school system as the best. Then, gentlemen, why should we try to undermine that solid foundation? Why should we go backward instead of progressing? Did we come here to legislate in favor of sectarianism? Did we come here to abridge the liberties of the people? Did we come here to restrict education? Why, Mr. President, I enter my solemn protest against any measure that tends to curtail education whatsoever. Can we go back to our constituents with a clear conscience; with the satisfaction of having done our duty, if we keep such a clause in the Constitution? We have been sent here to try to stop monopoly of land; to lessen the expenses of the State; to render taxation equal; to try to stop Chinese immigration, and so forth; but I deny that any member has been elected to abridge or lessen education. If the teaching of foreign languages was not existing to-day in our public schools, I certainly would not raise my voice to establish it, but it exists, sir, and nobody finds fault with it, unless some members of this Convention. Why should we, then, touch upon a subject that the people do not want us to approach? We have enough evils to remedy without trying to correct what is faultless. Man is a sociable being, and susceptible of perfection. He has certain wants to satisfy, and an intelligence to develop, consequently he has to progress; he has to think, to reason, to learn, and he has that superiority over the beast that he never stays stationary. The birds build up their nests to-day with the same class of materials that they did one thousand years ago; the bees construct their hives in the same manner that they did since creation. If beasts possess all their knowledge in coming to life, it is the contrary with man. He comes into this world without any knowledge, and it is only by education that he becomes the master of creation. If nobody teaches a child to read or write will he know it by instinct? I say no; therefore the necessity of education; and the more education man receives, the more learning he possesses, the more superiority he has over those more ignorant.

But the aptness of men is so different that it is impossible for any one to regulate it. How can you allow every one to develop their natural faculties if the study has to be equal and uniform for all? Why, gentlemen, we have not so far been able to equalize land taxation, and that we should try to equalize intelligence by rendering it uniform is a monstrous hypothesis. I know that the gentleman who offered this amendment in the Committee of the Whole argued the principle of economy, and the principle of Americanization, as the strongest theories in favor of his opinions. Why, consistency was a gift of the gods in old times, but I see that we will have to scratch that word from the dictionary. Is it on the ground of economy that the same gentleman, for whom I have great respect, wanted to pay high salaries to the judiciary? Is it on the principle of economy that he has advocated the establishment of the Railroad Commission? Why, in algebra, plus multiplied by plus gives less; well, plus of such economy by plus more of such will give less economy, consequently more expenses, and therefore it cannot be upon that principle that the author of such amendment can favor it. It must then be the principle of Americanism. Other gentlemen have also said that this was an American State, and that, as such, nothing but the American language should be taught in the government schools. Certainly, to prejudiced and narrow-minded men this would be the ne plus ultra of arguments; but I was astonished to hear of their being brought forward by the gentlemen that have done it. I say and maintain that such arguments are anti-American, anti-liberal, anti-social, anti-republican. They are anti-American—as I never knew yet a citizen of this great republic to be an enemy of progress. I never knew any yet who did not profess liberal and social principles. Anti-republican, because that very word is the companion of education; one cannot exist without the other. Who tried to destroy the Mexican Republic not long ago? Was it not ignorance, and sectarianism, and despotism? Who killed the last Republic in Spain? Was it not the same causes? Who, not two years ago, tried to stifle the French Republic? Was it not the same element? And I say, here in this State, who is the bitterest enemy of our public school system? Who tries to destroy it? The same element that has worked in those countries—ignorance, bigotry, and sectarianism. Are we going to surrender in our fight? Will civilization have to succumb? Have we to go backward? I say that such theories are anti-American. Do you want to Americanize by force, or persuasion? Why, gentlemen, take any foreigner that comes here two years after his arrival, and tell me if that man has not changed as day and night. Why? Because he come gradually to American principles. He is not forced, but he himself recognizes them as the grand principles of humanity, and he throws off those shabby, ignorant, bigoted, national principles and becomes a new man. What produces such reaction? It is the educational system; it is the republican institutions; it is the air of liberty that he breathes that changes him entirely. Therefore, as this clause is against all American doctrines, against all principles of liberty, against all social laws, against the welfare of the people and the Republic, I hope it will be stricken out, and that we will give as much margin to our educational system as it possesses to-day, and more if it is in our power; and I hope that Mr. Larue's amendment will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. FREUD.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: It is very seldom that I rise to inflict myself upon this Convention. I would much rather listen to men of superior wisdom and experience, to older gentlemen upon this floor. But, sir, in what has been said upon this subject I am sorry to say that the gentlemen have run far over the mark. I am in favor of striking out this clause, and I am governed by no national prejudice, for there is no German or French blood in my veins; but, sir, the question is whether the teaching of languages ought to be included in a common school education; whether the State ought to be taxed for the instruction of our children in the languages. Now, sir, it is my opinion that that ought to be the case; that in the study of the modern, and if you please the ancient languages, the student receives a better knowledge of his own. It is like studying the peoples of the various countries of the world. In doing so, and in returning to your own, you have a better conception of it. I spoke to General Howard concerning the very amendment he introduced here, and he said to me that he had no objection to having it stricken out. I do not believe, sir, that the student in studying the various modern languages of the world becomes less of a patriot. I do not believe that he has less love for the institutions of this country after he has studied the institutions of others. Rather I should say that he sees wherein ours is superior to others, and in so much he loves and worships his own the more.

I cannot see why this clause should be retained. It will strike a blow at all the cosmopolitan schools throughout the State. If it is not stricken out I should like to see an amendment put in that will leave it to the various counties, at least, to decide whether their children shall have the privilege of being instructed in the various modern languages. But I think that the State will not be the loser in a financial point of view in teaching its children the modern languages. This is exceptionally a cosmopolitan State. We can bring the foreign people of this State nearer to our own institutions by teaching them in connection with their own language the language of our country. I hope, sir, without any further remarks, that this clause will be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I indorse the sentiment of the gentleman who last took his seat. I believe that the last clause of this section ought to be stricken out, and I have another reason for it; my reason is, that I think it is very proper that it should be left to the Legislature; that the idea of saying that, in the primary and grammar schools, no language but the English should be taught, is wrong, and that by laying it down as a rule for the next quarter of a century, would be unwise indeed; I would leave it to the Legislature. In San Francisco we have some cosmopolitan schools, and they work very well indeed, and the people are satisfied with them. San Francisco pays into the treasury, two thirds of the entire State school tax which is received from direct taxation. While the population of San Francisco is composed of almost every nationality, I think that it is highly proper to leave it to the Legislature; let the Legislature say, from time to time, whether they shall or shall not have cosmopolitan schools. We might just as well say that they shall not teach arithmetic. Why not say that algebra shall not be taught, and that surveying shall not be taught? I know many gentlemen who say that it is foolish to teach grammar; you might just as well say that English grammar shall not be taught in the common schools. You are selecting a class of studies that a great many people object to.

MR. TOWNSEND. Are you not aware that there are a very few such schools in the State? Why should San Francisco have special privileges?

MR. ESTEE. San Francisco pays for them. She pays eighty-five thousand dollars to support the schools in the country.

MR. BIGGS. How long would San Francisco exist without the other portions of the State?

MR. ESTEE. We could not unless we sent up to Butte County for some of its wheat. This is not a question of feeling, it is a question of propriety; it is a question of State policy; it is a question of right. Shall this Convention put into the organic law of the State, a prohibition against any class of education?

MR. BIGGS. Yes, put it in.

MR. ESTEE. No, it is wrong, it is contrary to the best policy of the State; and let me say to the gentleman from Butte, and to the gentleman from Mendocino, that it will cost this Constitution many a vote of as good men as there are in the State. My chief objection is, that you place in the organic law of the State, a prohibition against teaching a certain class of studies that is contrary to the best policy of the State; that it is contrary to the enlightened spirit of the age; that it is unjust and wrong, and I hope it will not be adopted; I hope you will leave it to the Legislature. You strike that out, and the Legislature can control it, and if a majority of the next Legislature, or the one following, does not desire to have any of the languages taught in any of the common schools of the State, they can say so; they have the control of the subject. Let us not put such an inhibition in the Constitution.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask the gentleman from San Francisco, whether San Francisco has not been teaching the languages in its common schools for over fifteen years?

MR. ESTEE. About that I do not know. About the last ten years I know, personally, that they have been taught in the cosmopolitan schools.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Would this not change the whole theory of the educational system in San Francisco?

MR. ESTEE. Yes. In the high schools, so far as I know, they teach some of the languages. Scholars are prepared for the University there, and they ought to be so prepared.

MR. SCHELL. Do they teach the languages in the primary schools?

MR. ESTEE. I believe not, sir. It is a long time since I was there.

MR. SCHELL. Are you favoring teaching German, and French, and Spanish, in the primary schools?

MR. ESTEE. No, sir. I am not favoring teaching them anywhere, unless the Legislature says so; but I am not willing to have the Legislature bound down in this matter.

MR. SCHELL. Are you in favor of teaching the Chinese in the grammar schools?

MR. ESTEE. That depends on the teacher. If the gentleman wishes to teach I am in favor of it.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope the motion will not prevail to strike out the amendment as offered by Mr. Howard and adopted by the Committee of the Whole. I believe that the committee acted discreetly in adopting that amendment. I hold that the public schools of the State should lay the foundation for a good and thorough English education. I hold that we should recognize this fact, that we are, or should be at least, an English speaking people, and that the tendencies of the times are to promote a system of smattering education, a little of everything and nothing perfect or complete in anything. The education of children in the public schools has been spread over so much and so many studies that but very little is taught to perfection. The result is, a little smattering of Greek and Latin is obtained by those who cannot talk perfectly the English language—and a little German, a little French, and a little Spanish. I do not object to these accomplishments. They are grand accomplishments, and they are in many cases essentially necessary to the transaction of certain kinds of business. But I do not believe that a classical education should be provided for in the common school system. I hope that this amendment will be voted down. I favor a legitimate education. It is proper and legitimate that the State should educate her children in the English branches, and if the people desire a higher education it is their privilege to obtain it, and they can have the privilege of obtaining it in higher schools than the common schools of the State. I hope this amendment will be rejected.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I do not know what kind of an education the gentleman from Los Angeles refers to when he speaks of a legitimate education. It is a kind of education that I have not yet made the acquaintance of. As a member of the Committee on Education, and in the absence of the Chairman of the committee, who is unavoidably absent on account of sickness, if I could possibly get the attention for a moment, I would like—but there are so many committees in session in different parts of this hall, and I know the business they have in hand is so very important that the question under discussion will not receive much attention. If we could be fortunate enough to go into Committee of the Whole, and not into so many committees at the same time and place, we would be better off.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will come to order. Gentlemen will resume their seats. The gentleman from San Diego will proceed.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: This clause which it is proposed to strike out simply prohibits any city, or incorporated town, or district from establishing a school with their own money and by a vote of the people of that locality, which will be corresponding in grade to a primary or grammar school, in which none but the English language shall be taught. I ask the gentlemen of this Convention to think for a moment whether we are ready to take that stand; to say that no division of this State shall have the right with its own money, and in the good sound judgment of the people that live there, to have a school where they may teach anything but the English language. This says, that in primary and grammar schools no language but the English language shall be taught. That is a broad and sweeping assertion, which covers all grammar and primary schools.

Digitized by Google

MR. CROUCH. What does "high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools," mean?

MR. BLACKMER. The section allows the people to establish them if they wish; but primary and grammar schools are the very ones in which some people want the privilege of having other language than the English language taught. Now, we have given cities the power to regulate their own affairs, but when they come to their public schools—the schools that they may establish with their own money—then we say that if they are primary and grammar schools, they shall never teach anything but the English language in them. Now, while I agree entirely with a great many of these gentlemen, that we want a system of education that shall be broad and comprehensive, I do not believe that it is absolutely an essential thing that we should have a uniform system throughout the State. In fact, that is one trouble with our system. We attempt to educate every child up to the same standard. There is no room for development outside of it. We attempt to bring every mind that is brought under the control of the public school system on to a dead level, and the dead level is mediocrity. What we want is, if here and there a bright child is found, to step outside of the regular beaten track and educate them so that they will be shining lights in the world. We want these cities and these districts, if they wish to establish a school where they may teach other languages than the English language, to have the power to do so. Why, sir, there are plenty of men who will tell you that the best idea, and perhaps the first idea they got of the English language—of their own tongue—was what they got after they undertook the Latin. If there were no people in the State but Americans I would still take this ground; but when we look at the cosmopolitan inhabitants of this State, we are doing them a greater injustice than the injustice we are doing to ourselves. I hope that the common sense of this Convention will strike out that clause and let it stand as it was. Then there can be established in incorporated cities, or in towns, or other localities, if the people who are there desire it, these schools, in which those who are here from foreign countries, and those of our own people who desire to fit themselves for the very best positions there are in the country, will have an opportunity to get this starting point, and there should be that opportunity. I hope the clause will be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I favor the striking out of the clause. In this cosmopolitan age, the languages form a necessary portion of a good education. There is one point, as regards this State, which I think bears upon this question with great force. This State is the Anglo-Saxon outpost of the great population to the south of us, which speaks a language different from ours. In the future it will be a popular question in this State to control the commerce of the vast populations which are to the south of us, and there is no manner in which we can more successfully obtain that control than by allowing our children to become conversant with the language which prevails among that people. I look upon the clause as it now exists in this section as a monstrous clause; as one that is illiberal in its character, and one which will prevent future Legislatures, if it should be found necessary, from enabling our children to branch out in this particular class of knowledge. Mr. President, we should not place a limit or a bound to the possibilities of education. We should not restrict our children to a course of study which will not reach the full fruition of all the knowledge which may be obtained. I would not place this iron-bound clause in the Constitution, because it may hereafter work great injury. I would rather leave it open to successive Legislatures, if it should be found necessary, to allow the children of this State to acquire any species of knowledge which it may be necessary for them to acquire. I hope, Mr. President, that the clause will be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. LAINE.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I am in favor of an education, but I think that no education can be had that is greater and finer than an education in the English language. It is, sir, the language of literature and freedom from its inception down to the present time. I should have anticipated, going back two hundred years, to have found a different system, because two hundred years ago much of the literature of the world was locked in different languages—in the ancient languages. But, sir, at the present day there is not a history of a country on the earth, or an institution, that is not to be found in the English language, which is, of all the languages known now to this earth, the conquering language. It is a language that is as broad of compass, as deep and rich as any to be found upon the earth. This limitation here is only to the primary and grammar schools of this State; that in these schools nothing but the English shall be taught. It is the language of the country. It is the language of the common people, and it tends in itself to bring us all together as Americans, loving its literature, loving its institutions; whereas, if we put in the idea of our being a cosmopolitan people, there will be some other languages taught of which the child will get a smattering. We cannot teach them all. If it is right to teach French and German, it is right to teach Irish, and Italian, and Chinese, and Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin. When we find we cannot teach them all, let us compromise on the language of the country. Let those who desire to educate their children farther pay for it. I believe it is a wise rule, and it is fair to every class of foreign citizens.

MR. VACQUEREL. What is the use of writing that in Latin and not in English? [Pointing to the inscription over the President's chair.]

MR. LAINE. None whatever. Half of the members cannot translate it.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: It is my belief that it is over crowding the youth in teaching the foreign languages in the common schools. If the people want foreign languages taught in the schools, let them have it, but here a majority of the people take no interest whatever in teaching foreign languages, besides it is time to teach a foreign language when the child shall have attained that age sufficient for it to understand and appreciate the benefit derived therefrom. Now, sir, the section reads:

"SEC. 6. The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority; but the entire revenue derived from the State School Fund, and the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools. In the primary and grammar schools no language but the English shall be taught."

Now, then, it should read as follows: "The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools. High schools, normal schools, evening schools, and technical schools may be established by the Legislature." Now, sir, I do not believe that it is just to the people, or that it is just to ourselves, to go and tax everybody indiscriminately for having a language taught in the public schools. I would give every child in California a University education if it were within our power, but I would not ask any man to contribute to giving my child such an education. Mr. President, is an amendment in order?

THE PRESIDENT. No, sir.

MR. DOWLING. Well, I have got an amendment I would like to offer, and it reads as follows:

"The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools. High schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority for such municipality or districts in which a majority of the parents or guardians, by a direct vote at a special election, may determine to support such schools."

In these technical schools they can teach foreign languages. It is time enough for a child to begin to learn the foreign languages when he has a pretty good knowledge of the English language. Besides, teaching foreign languages in the schools has a tendency to divide the children; has a tendency to nationalize the children; has a tendency to drive them away, and one part will be German, another part will be French, and another part will be English. Why might not the Irish demand that the Irish language be taught in the public schools?

MR. LAVIGNE. Can you show us an Irish dictionary?

MR. DOWLING. Yes. The Irish is a distinct language. It is a written language. I can read and write it as well as I can the English language. Now I believe that this amendment that I have read is the true rule; that is, allowing the people to establish their schools if they wish to, at their own expense.

Messrs. Hunter, Waters, Dunlap, Brown, and Morse, demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

MR. WELLER [before the vote was announced.] Mr. President: I change my vote from no to aye, for the purpose of moving a reconsideration.

THE PRESIDENT. The next question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out section seven. The Secretary will read the section.

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 7. A State Board of Education, consisting of two members from each Congressional district, shall be elected by the qualified voters of the district at the first gubernatorial election after the adoption of this Constitution, who shall hold their office for the term of four years, and enter upon the duties thereof on the first Monday of January next after their election; provided, that such members first so elected shall be divided into two equal classes—each class consisting of one member from each district—and that the first class shall go out of office at the expiration of two years from the commencement of their term of office; and at each general biennial election, after such gubernatorial election, one member of such Board shall be elected from each Congressional district, so that one half thereof shall be elected biennially. The Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be ex officio a member of such Board, and President thereof."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section eight.

TEXT-BOOKS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. The local Boards of Education, and the Boards of Supervisors and County Superintendents of the several counties which may not have County Boards of Education, shall adopt a series of text-books for the use of the common schools within their respective jurisdictions; the text-books so adopted shall continue in use for not less than four years; they shall also have control of the examination of teachers and the granting of teachers' certificates, within their several jurisdictions."

MR. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President: I move to strike out the words "and County Superintendents," in line two. I see, by looking over the old Constitution, that there is no provision in the Constitution for County Superintendents. I think that really they are unnecessary, entirely so. They only entail an expense of one hundred thousand dollars or one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars on the State, without any benefit. We have now stricken out the State Board, and that has left local boards. I think that each district can just as well manage their own school matters as the State can, therefore I think that a County Superintendent is entirely unnecessary, and I hope that it will be stricken out. When the proper time comes, I shall move to strike out section three.

MR. LAMPSON. Mr. President: It seems to me that this is the most essential portion of the article. The duty devolves upon the Board of Supervisors and the County Superintendent, whose duty it is to examine teachers and see that they are qualified to teach. When we strike that out you leave it with the County Boards of Supervisors, and in some of our counties there are Supervisors who cannot read or write. When this is stricken out you will have no head to the examining board.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. MCCONNELL. I have an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add 'subject to general legislative enactments.'"

MR. MCCONNELL. Mr. President: It will not be necessary to say anything upon that amendment; I think it will recommend itself to the general good sense of this Convention, and I hope it will be adopted.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: It seems to me that will open the door to bring back the old system. We have got rid of this Board of Education, but that thrusts us back to the old system, whenever the Legislature desires to have it so.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope that amendment will be adopted. We have in each county set up a Board that is entirely independent of any central authority. Now, it should be the endeavor always in any system of school education to provide for keeping up and continually raising the standard of teaching, and any system that does not do that is doomed to destruction. There is no question about it. Now, what have we done? We have left it so that in every county of this State where there is a scarcity of applicants for teaching that the standard of teaching will be lowered, and there can be no other result. The Board will have the absolute authority to say what that standard shall be, and when the necessity comes upon them to find teachers to fill the positions and keep up their six months' school, that standard will be lowered of necessity; while in other counties, where there is a large supply of teachers, the standard will be kept up to what it is now. But the general tendency of the whole system will be to lower and degrade the standard of teaching. Now, there should be a general legislative enactment which should determine something in regard to the examination of these teachers and the granting of certificates. This Convention has decided to do away with the State Board of Education. I voted against striking that out, and I was very sorry to see it done, because, in my judgment, it is a need of our system. But if the Convention has determined to take that out of the system, it should by all means say that when these County Boards have control of granting certificates, it should be under general legislative enactments; not under a special law that will be made for one county, and another special law for another county, but a general law which shall determine how these examinations shall take place in all the counties, and what shall be the standard. Otherwise the whole system in regard to our teachers will be disintegrated. I hope the Convention will examine this carefully, and see how we have torn this whole system into pieces. I hope that this amendment will be adopted.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento would destroy all we have done in relation to placing the common schools under local control. It will again reinstate the old law. The gentleman from San Diego regrets much that we have effected the change in regard to the policy of the government of our schools. We have changed that policy, and this Convention declared, by a very decided vote, that they wanted no more of it. We have placed it under the local control of the counties, and that amendment will destroy all that we have done. I hope that that amendment, and all other amendments tending to centralize power, will be voted down.

Messrs. Waters, Tully, Ohleyer, Brown, and Biggs demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the amendment of Mr. McConnell, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Blackmer, Brown, Condon, Barton, and Stevenson.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section nine.

SECTARIAN SCHOOLS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. No public money shall ever be appropriated for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, or any school not under the exclusive control of the officers of the public schools; nor shall any sectarian or denominational doctrine be taught, or instruction therein be permitted, directly or indirectly, in any of the common schools of this State."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section ten.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 10. The University of California is hereby declared to be a perpetual institution of this State, organized to administer a great public trust, and the Legislature shall have no power to impair or divert any gift, grant, or donation made to it from the purposes or objects of those making such gift, grant, or donation. Its officers shall hold office for such time as the Legislature may prescribe. Instructions shall be therein given, in addition to other matters, in agriculture, metallurgy, the mechanic arts, and applied sciences. It shall be entirely independent of all political and sectarian influences."

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I offer a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 10. The University of California shall constitute a public trust, and its organization and government shall be perpetually continued in the form and character prescribed by the organic Act creating the same, passed March twenty-third, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, and the several Acts amendatory thereof, subject only to such legislative control as may be necessary to insure compliance with the terms of its endowments, and the proper investment and security of its funds. It shall be entirely independent of all political or sectarian influence, and kept free therefrom in the appointment of its Regents and in the administration of its affairs; provided, that all the moneys derived from the sale of the public lands donated to this State by Act of Congress, approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the several Acts amendatory thereof, shall be invested as provided by said Act of Congress; and the interest of said moneys shall be inviolably appropriated to the endowment, support, and maintenance of at least one college of agriculture, where the leading objects shall be (without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics,) to teach such branches of learning as are related to scientific and practical agriculture and the mechanic arts, in accordance with the requirements and conditions of said Act of Congress; and the Legislature shall provide that if through neglect, misappropriation, or any other contingency, any portion of the fund so set apart shall be diminished or lost, the State shall replace such portion so lost or misappropriated, so that the principal thereof shall remain forever undiminished."

REMARKS OF MR. WEBSTER.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: This amendment is in substance what was offered by me something like a month ago, which under a misapprehension on the part of a great many was voted against. It occurs to me, sir, that this secures the permanency of the University, and at the same time secures a compliance with the several Acts and donations to that University. It is secured in its organization and government according to the Act of eighteen hundred and sixty-eight. The first section of that Act reads:

"A State University is hereby created, pursuant to the requirement of section four, article nine, of the Constitution of the State of California, and in order to devote to the largest purposes of education the benefaction made to the State of California under and by the provisions of an Act of Congress, passed July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," etc.

This provides for a college of agriculture, a college of mechanics, and a college of mines and other matters. In the original Act it provided that eight of the sixteen Regents should be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate of the State, the other eight should be elected by the Board of Regents themselves. An amendment in the Code provides that: "the University is under the control of a Board of Regents consisting of twenty-two members; but the President of the University for the time being shall be a member of the Board of Regents by virtue of his office. Sixteen members of the Board are appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate. Their term of office is sixteen years. Six members of the Board hold by virtue of their offices as provided in section three hundred and fifty-three," which reads as follows: "The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Speaker of the Assembly, Superintendent of Public Instruction, President of the State Board of Agriculture, and President of the Mechanics Institute of San Francisco, are ex officio Regents of the University of California." It also provides in sections one thousand four hundred and forty-nine and one thousand four hundred and sixty-one in regard to the government of the University. This constitutes its organization and government. In regard to the donation of Congress it is provided for in substance, as is provided for in the Act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two. It provides also that in case of any loss or misappropriation that the State shall replace any such loss or misappropriation, so that the fund shall remain inviolate and undiminished forever. It is almost in the exact language of the Congressional Act, so I think there can be no objection to this. It secures the permanency of the University and at the same time secures a proper distribution, and that the funds shall be appropriated for the purposes for which they are donated.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will not be adopted. It is practically the same one that we disposed of in Committee of the Whole, after a long debate. I know that this Convention is not in a condition to listen to any talk; but I desire to raise one or two objections to it now. The Act of Congress is binding upon this State, having accepted the trust, whether we put it in the Constitution or not. It is idle to put it in there. It makes this first organization iron-bound, so that it cannot be changed in any way. We never could add a college or make any change whatever. In that it is vicious. The University should be forever under the control of the State; provided, however, that it should not be destroyed, and the section that we have adopted fixes it better for the University, in my judgment, than the other.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I think this is the third time that gentlemen have got up here and read this Act. I believe this Convention is ready to vote. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Murphy, Tinnin, Biggs, and Tully.

The main question was ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda.

The amendment was rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring in the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

A TEXT-BOOK.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I desire to offer a new section that I think will be acceptable to this Convention.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend the article on education by adding a section thereto, to read as follows, viz.: 'SEC. —. The Legislature shall cause to be published, at the expense of the State, a book, of convenient size, containing the Constitutions of the United States and of this State; the Declaration of American Independence, and Washington's Farewell Address; and shall cause the same to be distributed, free of cost, to the children in the common schools, and to be used therein as a text-book.'"

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: It strikes me that this ought to be adopted. If there is anything in this State that our children ought to know, and know well, it is the Constitution and government of this country. Those who are in favor of an enlarged education, and in favor of an intelligent exercise of political rights, should favor this section.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I move to include Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation.

MR. BROWN. I object.

MR. CROSS. I do not know what this amendment is offered for, but I think it may be for something serious. I move to amend by inserting "the autobiographies of all the members of this Convention."

MR. ROLFE. I suggest that we include the ten commandments and the Lord's Prayer.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

PRINTING OF TEXT-BOOKS.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The Legislature, at the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall provide for the appointment of a Commission to compile a series of school text-books, which, after preparation, shall be printed in the State Printing Office. The text-books thus compiled and printed shall constitute a uniform series of text-books, to be used in the public schools of this State on and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, and shall be furnished to pupils at cost price."

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: There are two good reasons for the adoption of this amendment, and I ask the earnest attention of the delegates to the subject. First, the adoption of the system which I propose will completely destroy all motive or inducement to a lobby on the school book question. Once the State prepares and publishes its own school books, the corrupting influence attached to the private competition and speculation of the present system will be effectually prevented in the future. This in itself will be an excellent result, which I feel sure is desired by every good citizen. It is notorious that a disgraceful lobby influence assails the Legislature at every session. One set of corruptionists seek the adoption of new text-books, and another to retain the series in use. These lobbies were here in force around the last Legislature, and if it were not for their influence, it is not improbable that this school book question would have been settled at that session. Grove L. Johnson in the Assembly introduced a bill proposing exactly the method which is embodied in this amendment which I propose, namely: that the State should prepare and print its own text-books, and forever put an end to the disgraceful squabble between rival book houses and the corrupting influence growing therefrom. I call the attention of the Sacramento delegates in this Convention to the fact that the entire Sacramento delegation in the last Legislature advocated the adoption of this system—that the State should prepare and print its own text-books.

Digitized by Google

The second potent reason for the adoption of this amendment is that it will prove a wise measure of economy, saving a large amount of money in the aggregate to the people, who have to buy school books for their children. Under this system which has been in vogue, the text-books used in the public schools of this State have been changed several times—I do not know how many times—through the corruption or prejudice of the State Board of Education, at great expense to the parents of this State at every change. If you confirm the system now proposed in section eight, as it stands, leaving it to the County Boards of Education to adopt text-books, for use within their respective jurisdictions, confusion worse confounded will result. There will be no uniformity, and additional expense will be piled on to parents who may chance to move from one county to another. I cannot, for the life of me, see how such a system can commend itself to any gentleman who will give the subject a moment's thought and unbiased consideration. One of the best reasons in the world why the State should undertake to do this work is the fact that we have a complete and well appointed printing office here in Sacramento where the State printing is now done, and which, since its establishment three years ago, has resulted in an annual saving of fifty thousand dollars, as compared with the cost of printing when farmed out. Here is the report of the Superintendent of State Printing, which shows that there is a saving of one hundred per cent. in the printing. So economy is established in that printing office. That printing office is lying idle most of the time between the sessions of the Legislature. Why not make use of it instead of enriching speculating book sellers? On December sixth, Mr. Thompson, Superintendent of State Printing, at the request of the Convention, furnished the following statement:

MR. PRESIDENT: In compliance with certified resolution from the Convention, dated December fourth, I have the honor to submit the following estimates. These figures are made upon the basis that the State possessed the text and copyright, and all the appliances necessary for doing such work. For the first one thousand, complete series, of a book in every respect equal to the Pacific Coast Readers, it would cost the State:

For composition	$449 06
For paper	352 90
For press-work	150 50
For binding	665 00
For engraving cuts	3,750 00
For electrotyping	568 80
Total	$5,936 26
Each additional thousand	$1,168 40

The cost of publishing a series, equal in all respects to the McGuffey Readers, would be, for the first thousand:

Composition	$489 61
Paper	267 50
Presswork	161 75
Binding	665 00
Engraving	3,500 00
Electrotyping	534 00
Total	$5,617 86
Each additional thousand	$1,094 25

I hold that this report demonstrates that this system would save fifty thousand dollars a year to the State, and it would destroy all incentive for the corrupt lobbying which has disgraced this State. There is this about printing our school books here, we shall be encouraging home industry in a most practical manner. The money now goes to eastern gentlemen, McGuffey & Co., who pay their journeymen printers Chinese wages. In our State office, fair living wages are paid. I ask gentlemen if they think it likely that there was anything wrong in this proposition, that it would have been advocated, as it was last Winter in this Capitol, by such honorable gentlemen as N. Greene Curtis, Creed Haymond, and Grove L. Johnson?

Messrs. Murphy, Biggs, Tully, Dean, and Brown demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. O'Sullivan, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. O'Sullivan, White, Freud, Ayers, and West.

MR. HERRINGTON [when his name was called].—I vote aye for the purpose of moving a reconsideration.

NOTICE.

MR. HERRINGTON. I hereby give notice that I will, on Wednesday, February nineteenth, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention ordered to engrossment the article on education; also, to reconsider the vote by which the Convention adopted the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section six, of the article on education.

LAND AND HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

THE PRESIDENT. The next article on the file is the article on land and homestead exemption. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The Legislature shall protect, by law, from forced sale a certain portion of the homestead and other property of all heads of families."

MR. CROUCH. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section —, by striking out the words 'a certain portion of,' in lines one and two."

MR. CROUCH. Mr. President: As it reads now, it says that the Legislature shall protect by law from forced sale, a certain portion of the homestead. I suppose the object is to protect a homestead, and not a portion of it. I think that amendment ought to be adopted.

MR. WEST. Will you accept an amendment, to insert "not exceeding five thousand dollars?"

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I hope that amendment will not prevail, because the homestead is the place where the family lives and may be worth one hundred thousand dollars.

MR. LARUE. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Tully, Waters, Kelley, and Ohleyer.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in its amendment.

LAND MONOPOLY.

THE PRESIDENT. There appears to be several additional sections here, printed as a supplement. The Secretary will read them.

THE SECRETARY read the additional amendments adopted in Committee of the Whole, and then the first one, as follows:

"SEC. —. The holding of large tracts of land, uncultivated and unimproved, by individuals and corporations, is against the public interest, and should be discouraged by all means not inconsistent with the rights of private property."

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section —— as follows: 'SEC. —. After the adoption of this Constitution, the State shall never grant or patent any more than three hundred and twenty acres of land to any one person, corporation, or association of persons. The acquisition of large tracts of unimproved land for the purposes of speculation, by any individuals and corporations, is dangerous to the well-being and prosperity of the State; and the Legislature shall pass laws abolishing land monopoly by defining the tenure thereof; and it shall empower the State Board of Equalization to levy a graduated tax on the land of persons, corporations, and associations of persons, in excess of six hundred and forty acres, whether cultivated or uncultivated, in proportion to its productive capacity.'"

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: We have been talking here for the last five months about monopolies, and of all the monopolies existing in California to-day, the land monopoly is the most grinding. The amendment I have sent up provides that hereafter the State can never grant or patent any more than three hundred and twenty acres of land to any one person, corporation, or association. Now the laws of the United States—the homestead law—has been so that no man can homestead over one hundred and sixty acres of the public domain. The only way we can get at this grinding monopoly, and these worst of all Communists, is by a system of graduated taxation imposed on all holdings in excess of six hundred and forty acres. That is what my proposition calls for. If a man cannot live on four hundred and sixty acres of land he had better starve. Again, sir, if we adopt this system, what will the consequences be? The consequence will be that these men who have immense tracts of land, such as gentlemen own in the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, will sectionize it and sell it out in small quantities. Unless we adopt a system of this kind, I cannot see where land monopoly will stop. You say tax it equally. We have been working under equal taxation for the last three years, and still land monopoly is on the increase to-day instead of on the decrease. Now, gentlemen, there is nothing in this proposition but what is right, and just, and proper, and if we adopt it I have no doubt in the world but that it will be pleasing to the people.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I send up a substitute for the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for section ——, introduced by Mr. Van Dyke: 'SEC. —. The Legislature shall have power, and it is hereby made its duty, to pass laws to prohibit and prevent the monopoly of land by regulating the representation, use, and occupation thereof by restricting its tenure and possession, and to pass all necessary laws not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States, to prevent the acquisition of large landed estates by persons or corporations.'"

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I am aware, sir, that the Convention wants to get done with its business, but I feel constrained to make a few remarks touching the passage of this measure. I offer it as a substitute for the one which was adopted in Committee of the Whole, and it is the same in principle. The one offered by Mr. Van Dyke contains a declaration, or the assertion, of a principle which seems to have been conceded by all the political organizations of this State, that land monopoly is a curse, and gently calling for its discouragement. Now, sir, the present proposition is one that no man, unless he takes the ground fairly and squarely that land monopoly is not an evil, can object to. In point of fact it does not augment the power of the Legislature at all over this subject. It will, however, make it the duty of the Legislature to exercise this power for the purpose of preventing the accumulation of large landed estates. It proposes to take no man's property. It proposes to interfere with no man's vested rights. There is, sir, a universal and growing demand throughout this State on the part of every one who studies the situation, that laws must be aimed at this monopoly, and that the legislative attention should be called specifically and directly to the evil, and whatever can be constitutionally and legally done by the Legislature touching the subject, in relation to these matters, over which it does possess jurisdiction, ought to be done. This, sir, is a sort of compromise, offered and intended as such. There are many gentlemen in this Convention who were strenuously determined to stand squarely upon the proposition of an absolute land limitation. Now, sir, we have not stood upon that. We have not contended for that. We have not made a direct and positive issue. We want this Constitution to succeed. We have made a great concession, only asking that the attention of the Legislature be specifically and positively called to the question, and that action upon their part be demanded. I hope the Convention will grant us this simple request. I hope that we can go hence and say to those who are opposed to land monopoly, we have given you an opportunity to go before the people and elect to your Legislature representatives who are in favor of exercising the power of the State for the purpose of correcting the evil, subject to the Constitution and laws of the land. There is no communism or agrarianism about this proposition. It is a simple, plain, American proposition, and it seems to me that it ought to be adopted, and that it will perhaps be satisfactory to the people as a step in advance on the demanded reform.

MR. TINNIN. You speak in your amendment of the Legislature regulating the representation of land. What do you mean?

MR. BARBOUR. We say, for instance, that every man must use his property in such a manner as not to injure his neighbors or the community. Now, the law of adverse possession is a law of representation. If you do not represent your land for five years, allowing another to stay there in possession, you lose it. That is the law of representation. An old miner like you ought to know what a law of representation is.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: As there seems to be no disposition on the part of the Convention to debate this section, I shall avail myself of my privilege to say a few words upon it. Now, Mr. President, I think this section is most vicious in its principle. To say that the Legislature shall have a right to lay down rules for one citizen of the State as to how he shall use his property, when it does not conflict with any public policy, is wrong in principle. I care not how much political capital can be made out of a provision of this sort, it is vicious upon the face of it. I shall vote against it or any of its kindred, let the consequences be what they may. When you announce a principle of this sort, it is not limited to large tracts. It allows the Legislature to hamper a man even in his homestead or small tract of land. I do not think this Convention is prepared to adopt any such principle.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

MR. MURPHY. I move that the special order be temporarily postponed.

So ordered.

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege. I see, sir, in the Record-Union of yesterday, the eighteenth instant, in my absence there was quite a flurry among the politicians, and particularly with the Workingmen, upon the reading of my late speech on Chinese in the United States Senate, during the debate on the iniquitous bill restricting Chinese immigration. The gentleman from Humboldt, Mr. Barton, said "the speech of Mr. S. was an insult to this Convention and the people." If he alludes to the reading of it in the United States Senate, undoubtedly they will apologize by telegraph to him and his party. If it is to me, I will inform him, and all others of his party, that "truth will prevail." What I said was not answered then, nor since, and every intelligent gentleman on this floor who has resided in this State over one year knows that it is unanswerable. Every word is truth. I think it unnecessary to telegraph your resolution to the President of the United States to approve the bill, as he undoubtedly has read my speech. [Laughter.] My course on this floor has been strictly controlled by parliamentary courtesy, and I hope it will continue so until the cease of our labors.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President: I wish to set myself right. I again repeat that the speech delivered by the gentleman from Sonoma, and read in the Senate of the United States, is a gross misrepresentation——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order. No such remark is in order.

MR. BARTON. I claim the right to place myself right.

THE PRESIDENT. You cannot place yourself right by attacking a member of this body.

MR. BARTON. Then I will proceed and confine myself to the subject. I say that I have a right to use the language I did use, and, with your permission, I will try to justify my course. The gentleman says that most of them are of the foreign element, ignorant of the practical workings of our Government. I repeat again, that there being but one dissenting voice against the memorial——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is not in order. He has no question of privilege. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: It is not necessary for me to say more than a word on this question. All the delegates know that land monopoly exists in this State to a fearful extent; that a few men have grabbed hundreds of thousands of acres of the best land in this State, through illegal means, and hold it for speculative purposes. They also know that it would be better for the State to have this land divided into small parcels and given to actual settlers. The people of this State demand that we shall do something to relieve them from this curse, and if we do not do it the people will hold us to a strict accountability.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I am in favor of the principle contained in the proposed amendment, but not in favor of the matter of details stated therein. Of all the arguments used against interference in these cases, there is one expressed in the Constitution of our State, and I believe in every State in the Union that recognizes the Declaration of Independence and its language, in relation to the right to acquire, enjoy, and possess private property. The gentleman uses the word "representation," and I confess I am at a loss how to apply it. I believe the Legislature can take some action to remedy this evil, which, in my judgment, has not been magnified. But, sir, so far as we can constitutionally go, we have gone, except, perhaps, in one respect. We have declared that lands cultivated and uncultivated of the same quality and similarly situated, shall be taxed at the same value. When the article on revenue and taxation shall again come before the Convention I propose to offer an amendment that large tracts of land of the same quality, and similarly located, shall be taxed at the same rate per acre as smaller tracts. That is a provision which will, in my judgment, go a long way towards curing this evil. I propose to go for the principle without going into details.

Digitized by Google

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Why do you propose to do a thing indirectly, when you can just as well do it directly?

MR. MCCALLUM. You cannot attack the vested rights of any man. But when you tax his land at the same rate that you do any other piece of land of the same quality, and similarly situated, you don't directly or indirectly infringe upon any principle of government whatever. Unequal taxation has permitted these men to hold these tracts of land, but unequal taxation has been more the fault of Assessors than of the law. I am willing to support the principle of the amendment if the gentleman will strike out the details. If I have an opportunity I shall offer an amendment, that the Legislature shall pass all necessary laws, not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States, to prevent the acquisition of large landed estates by persons and corporations, leaving out the ways in which it shall be done.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be adopted, because I think the Constitution ought to contain, if not a positive prohibition against the acquisition of land in large quantities, still a proclamation that it is against public policy, and should be discouraged. I think the gentleman from San Bernardino is very unfortunate in some of his statements in opposition to the amendment when he said that the State could not lay down rules as to how a man should use his property. It seems to me, that if he will look at the Code of Civil Procedure, he will find that he is mistaken. He said further, that this is a vicious principle. He had just as well undertake to say that the homestead and preëmption laws are vicious. He further says that this thing is not limited to large tracts. Why should it be limited to large tracts? Why not include town lots and forty-acre lots as well as large tracts. There have been rumors and rumors; among them is one that, once upon a time, the railroad company gave out an intimation, in the nature of a hint, that it would antagonize land monopoly unless it obtained the assistance of the landholders. We know what has been done since. Now, I don't accuse the gentleman from San Bernardino of anything improper, but he has certainly overlooked the fact in his opposition to the railroads, that their side is the side of the land monopolists.

MR. WATERS. Will the gentleman allow me a moment? I don't like to interrupt the gentleman while he is speaking, but I want to know what is the meaning of his remarks. Speak out. I want to know what your intimations are.

MR. REYNOLDS. Simply that the gentleman is inconsistent in opposing railroad monopoly while favoring land monopoly.

MR. WATERS. If we give the Legislature power to limit land tenure, they could say that no man should hold more than ten acres of land.

MR. REYNOLDS. The gentleman is assuming that the Legislature will seek to deprive a man of his property without just cause. Sir, if the gentleman himself chooses to go away and leave his homestead for five years, to an adverse party, does he not lose it? And is there any objection to such a statute? And why should he, under such a pretense as that, undertake to raise an inference that the Legislature will seek to enact laws that will deprive men of their property when it is properly used? I insist that the position of the gentleman against railroad monopoly and against land monopoly is inconsistent and cannot be explained.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I fully agree with Mr. Reynolds in the last part of his argument, that the condemnation of one kind of monopoly and the upholding of another kind is inconsistent. Now, the proposition here is to limit the right to own land, and that the Legislature shall control the use of it, and direct him how it shall be used. Well, now, that is exactly what we have done in other cases, and I shall hope to see my friends, the Grangers, subjected to the same process as to how they shall buy their farms and how they shall use them. They know more about other people's business than they do of their own, and I cannot see why the Legislature should not take their business in hand and do some regulating. I don't see why the Legislature should not direct how they shall use their lands, what they shall plant, when they shall plant, and what price they shall charge for the produce. It was all right with the gentleman from Tehama, when we were dealing with railroads. He is perfectly willing to regulate them, but when it comes to any legislation affecting his thousands of acres of land, then he kicks over the traces. Land monopoly is a thousand times worse evil than railroad monopoly. I admit that I would cut every man down to about twenty-five thousand acres. [Laughter.] I would be willing to vote for an amendment, if it could be done, that every man who owns no land be permitted to go and take up three hundred and twenty acres of unoccupied land, provided he would live on it and make a home. That would stop some of this clamor. I am not going to give the poor man sympathy with nothing else. I am willing to do something besides talk. I would stop their hungry mouths with bread. Let these clamorers have the land—there won't be a great many of them who will take it.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of Tehama. Mr. President: It seems that these gentlemen propose to legislate these men out of their property. They propose to do it by unfriendly legislation. That is what the gentleman from Alameda proposes. Now, I would like to know how he is going to do it, any more than we can regulate how much business he shall do, or how much money he shall have? I am utterly opposed to this thing of legislating the people's land away by men who live around the city, and who never pay a cent of taxes. I was opposed to giving it away as subsidies to great corporations, as has been done by the Republican party. The members on this floor seem to be actuated by a spirit of agrarianism and communism in this matter.

MR. DOWLING. How much swamp land do you own?

MR. WILSON. I don't know that I will ever get an acre. I have a lot filed on, but I don't know that I will ever get it.

MR. DOWLING. How much have you filed on?

MR. WILSON. Probably one hundred thousand acres; half the State. [Laughter.]

MR. DOWLING. I presume this State was not big enough, and so you ran over into Oregon?

MR. WILSON. Such laws as this would soon drive us all into Oregon.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

LANDS TO ACTUAL SETTLERS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in a new section which the Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Hereafter lands belonging to this State, which are suitable for cultivation, shall be granted only to actual settlers, and in quantities not exceeding three hundred and twenty acres to each settler, under such conditions as shall be prescribed by law."

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. The public lands of this State shall hereafter be granted only to actual settlers, and in quantities not to exceed three hundred and twenty acres to each settler, and no land warrant, land certificate, or land scrip shall ever be issued or sold by this State or by authority thereof."

SPEECH OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: Under the section reported by the Committee of the Whole, this limitation is made to apply only to lands suitable for cultivation. If these words are left in, the lands belonging to this State, from the cheapest salt marsh and tide lands up to the highest priced swamp lands, will be taken up by speculators and not by actual settlers. For instance, the Legislature has to enact laws by which swamp land is to be taken by the State. Parties have come here and taken, under the Swamp Land Act, at one time, twenty thousand acres, and then come back at the next session and asked the Legislature to make an appropriation for irrigating the land, because it could not be cultivated without irrigation. Now I ask you what standard can you set up for land to be cultivated? The highest mountain peaks have been taken as swamp land, and the lowest, wettest, and best land in the valleys has been taken under the Desert Land Act. What law can you pass that will be equal to the elasticity of the consciences of these perjurers and land grabbers? There is but one safe rule, and that is that lands shall be taken from this State in small quantities and by actual settlers. That is the only way to cut them off. The land laws of the State ought to be as well settled as the law that a criminal has the right of trial by jury; and the test ought to be as plain as to whether the land has been severed from the public domain, as that the criminal cannot be tried without a jury. It ought to be as cardinal as that representation and taxation go together. Then, gentlemen, I hope that this amendment will prevail. You say all the lands of this State have been taken. I know that a great many of the sixteenth sections have been taken by speculators, and so long as we allow this system to prevail they will continue to be taken in the same way. Just so long as land scrip is issued by the State, this system will be followed up. I ask you, then, to cut off this system of issuing land scrip. Cut off the issuing of these warrants and make the test one that is honest, straight, and fair—that when a man occupies public land of this State for a certain length of time he can acquire title, and not otherwise. Therefore I ask you, in the interest of the rising generation of boys and girls of this State, to give them a chance to get public lands belonging to this State, and that they shall not have to go to some great land grabber and buy the privilege. Such a policy will enhance the wealth and increase the population of this State. I hope, therefore, that the amendment will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: There is one fatal objection to this amendment; it interferes with the right of alienation. Of course it is easy to make a speech about land monopoly, and yet I do not apprehend that this Convention proposes to give away what land there is left. I apprehend that we do not propose to give away the donations made by the General Government.

MR. CROSS. This does not say anything about donations.

MR. ESTEE. His amendment says they shall never be sold. No certificate or warrant shall ever be sold by this State. Am I right?

MR. WYATT. No land scrip shall be sold.

MR. ESTEE. That is just as I understand it. That limit that a man shall be an actual settler, and shall only buy three hundred and twenty acres, is all right. It ought to have been made years ago. But now the State has only two or three classes of land—school land, University land, and swamp and tide land. Now, those are the lands granted to the State. They belong to the State. It may be well enough to limit the sale of State lands to actual settlers in quantities of three hundred and twenty acres of cultivatable land. Let the settler have the first right to buy the land. That I presume the gentleman wants to secure. But the idea that the State shall never issue or sell any school warrants might deprive us of the balance of the school lands donated by the General Government in the shape of sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections. I therefore hope the amendment proposed will not pass. The original section seems to me to be all that is required. It reads as follows:

"Hereafter lands belonging to this State, which are suitable for cultivation, shall be granted only to actual settlers, and in quantities not exceeding three hundred and twenty acres to each settler, under such conditions as shall be prescribed by law."

The gentleman can strike out these words, "suitable for cultivation," if he wants to. There are thousands of acres of this land that are utterly worthless except for grazing purposes, as everybody knows; and it seems to me that this condition ought to remain in.

MR. VAN DYKE. Are there any tide lands undisposed of in this State?

MR. ESTEE. I do not know, I presume there are. But I do know that if you cannot sell any of these school land warrants, that it will deprive the State of the remainder of the school fund. We have a right to sell the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections and put the money in the school fund. The whole thing will be mixed if this amendment is adopted. I would take the old section in preference to the one proposed.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I will call attention to the grants of Congress of lands for college purposes. The other States are allowed to issue scrip, locatable anywhere, in case they have no land. If we say our own State shall not issue any scrip, we deprive ourselves of our own land, and it will be taken up by foreign scrip.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: There is a great misapprehension here in regard to scrip. There has never been any scrip issued by the State of California, except for the five hundred thousand acre grant. There has not been any scrip issued for fifteen years. What the gentleman calls scrip is not scrip. As far as the State is concerned there is no such thing as State scrip, and no law for it. Scrip has reference to United States land. This amendment would work very injuriously, and is entirely unnecessary. With reference to the suggestion about striking out the words "suitable for cultivation," I put in that language at the instance of many gentlemen who are very familiar with this business. In the mountains, and even in the valleys, there are places where the lands are not fit for cultivation. I believe there are in Sacramento County a few sections that are not located. I know there was a few years ago. They are not suitable for cultivation. They might be suitable for pasture, and some of them are scarcely suitable for that. There are eighty million acres yet to survey in this State. Many of these school sections will fall in the mountains, where the land is not suitable for cultivation. Now the present law limits the amount that one man may apply for to three hundred and twenty acres, but the spirit of the law is evaded, because there is no provision for actual settlement. There is nothing to prevent one person from taking up all these school sections. By the dummy system there is no limit to the amount of land which one man may acquire, because there is nothing said about actual settlement. Now, as to these lands which are not fit for cultivation, three hundred and twenty acres would be no object to persons who might desire them. The effect would be in many cases to leave the school sections unsold entirely, where otherwise persons living in the neighborhood would be perfectly willing to take the land and pay for it. It would work badly in such cases. There is no doubt there has been a vast amount of perjury as to the quality of these lands, but it is utterly impossible for us to make any regulation in regard to that matter. That depends upon testimony. The fact may be this way or that way. They are to be tried as any other questions of fact. I hope we shall adopt the section as reported.

MR. REYNOLDS. In the section last adopted, I was paired with Mr. Schell. He would vote no, and I would vote aye. I voted aye when I had no right to, and I ask leave to have the Journal corrected to that effect.

So ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Monterey, Mr. Wyatt.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out the words, 'which are suitable for cultivation.'"

MR. WEBSTER. Without this amendment the section, as it now stands, amounts to nothing, because land will be entered upon the ground that it is not fit for cultivation.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I hope the Convention will go slow on this matter, because it is dangerous. The State owns no land except what she acquires by virtue of her sovereignty under the Swamp Land Act. As to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections the State has no absolute title; because, if any of them are settled upon, the State can not get them. The only way the State can get these lands, is by application to the United States. It must be selected and listed. The State does not own it. She acquires it from the United States. If one of these sections is found in place upon survey, and no preëmption upon it, then it belongs to the State.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I cannot understand the point which the gentleman makes. The provision here is to go to actual settlers only. I trust this section will be adopted as amended.

MR ROLFE. I believe this State has some tide lands. If this amendment is adopted, no tide land can be sold except to actual settlers, and some of them cannot be very well settled upon; the result would be that they could not be sold.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Stuart, Townsend, Smith of Santa Clara, and Laine.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Division was called for, and the Convention concurred in the amendment by a vote of 75 ayes to 21 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section —.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. No perpetuities shall be allowed except for eleemosynary purposes."

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I move to strike it out.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring, which will accomplish the same object.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for the section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"No person shall hereafter acquire by purchase, gift, or device, more than six hundred and forty acres of land in this State."

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: This is a section of which I am the author, but there is a section in another article identical with this, and therefore this might as well go out.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

The Convention refused to concur.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be ordered engrossed and read a second time?

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on ordering the article engrossed and read a second time.

So ordered.

SPECIAL ORDER—CITY CHARTERS.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon section nine, of the article on city, county and township organization. The Secretary will read:

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. Any city may frame a charter for its own government, consistent with and subject to the Constitution and laws of this State, by causing a Board of fifteen freeholders, who shall have been for at least five years qualified electors thereof, to be elected by the qualified voters of such city, at any general or special election, whose duty it shall be, within ninety days after such election, to prepare and propose a charter for such city, which shall be signed in duplicate by the members of such Board, or a majority of them, and returned, one copy thereof to the Mayor, or other chief executive officer of such city, and the other to the Recorder of deeds of the county. Such proposed charter shall then be published in two daily papers of largest general circulation in such city for at least twenty days, and within not less than thirty days after such publication it shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such city at a general or special election, and if a majority of such qualified electors voting thereat shall ratify the same, it shall, at the end of sixty days thereafter, become the charter of such city, or if such city be consolidated with a county in government, then of such city and county, and shall become the organic law thereof, and supersede any existing charter and all amendments thereof, and all special laws inconsistent with such charter. A copy of such charter, certified by the Mayor, or chief executive officer, and authenticated by the seal of such city, setting forth the submission of such charter to the electors, and its ratification by them, shall be made in duplicate and deposited, one in the office of the Secretary of State, the other, after being recorded in the office of the Recorder of deeds of the county, among the archives of the city, and thereafter all Courts shall take judicial notice thereof. The charter so ratified may be amended at intervals of not less than two years, by proposals therefor, submitted by legislative authority of the city to the qualified voters thereof, at a general or special election held at least sixty days after the publication of such proposals, and ratified by at least three fifths of the qualified electors voting thereat. In submitting any such charter, or amendment thereto, any alternative article or proposition may be presented for the choice of the voters, and may be voted on separately without prejudice to others."

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move to strike out the word "freeholders," in line three, and insert "electors." Freeholder is an old fashioned term, and is against the spirit of the bill of rights.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not be adopted. I think the word freeholder should remain there. I think the person should be a permanent resident so as to have the confidence of the community.

MR. BARBOUR. May there not be heavy taxpayers in San Francisco who are not freeholders.

MR. ESTEE. There may be very good men who do not pay any taxes. I do not pretend to say that there are not just as good men among those who are not taxpayers as there are among the taxpayers. Yet, in selecting men to frame an organic law for a city, we should select men who are well known in the community, and we would be more apt to find them among freeholders than among any other class. These men are to control the destinies, to a certain extent, of a great city; they are to frame a charter for three hundred thousand inhabitants, and they should be selected from among the best minds in the city. I therefore appeal to this Convention not to allow the words to be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I call the attention of the gentleman to section twenty-four of the preamble and bill of rights, as adopted at the last consideration of the article: "No property qualification shall ever be required of any person to vote or hold office." Now, sir, what else is this than a property qualification? It is provided that there shall be a qualification of five years residence in the city, and it seems to me that ought to be sufficient. If the electors choose to send a man to perform this work who does not own real estate, I think they should have a right to do it. I hope the amendment will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This is a very small matter. Had it not been in the Missouri Constitution perhaps I would not have put it there. It is not in conflict with other portions of the Constitution, because it is all one instrument and must be taken together. That is, no property qualification shall ever be allowed except as provided in the instrument itself. I believe in framing an organic law that you should select citizens who themselves have something at stake—something to look after. If a man has a little homestead where his family are, he has something to look out for—something to protect—and in that respect there is more safety in taking men from that class of the community. When the charter is framed every man in the city comes forward and votes on it. There is no prohibition in that respect. But in the mere framing of it, I can see no objections to allowing the word to remain. I was going to offer an amendment to meet the wishes of some who think this is too vast a power to be placed in the hands of the people of San Francisco, and that the charter so framed should be ratified by the Legislature. As soon as this amendment is disposed of I shall offer an amendment to that effect.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I hope these words may not be stricken out. It may be that a man who has been in the country a year, knows all about the wants and necessities of the people, but I prefer to trust men who have acquired an interest in the community.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be adopted, because this qualification will accomplish nothing. Now, the gentleman from the Fourth District might be a very competent person to sit upon that Board, though he might not own a foot of land. On the other hand, I would be a very unfit person though possessed of any number of town lots. It is a question of the fitness and character of the individual, and not the fact of his happening to invest his money in real estate. A man may own a lot somewhere that would qualify him to act under this provision, and yet he may not be able to write his own name.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Lost.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in line fourteen, 'at the end of sixty days,' and insert, 'be submitted to the Legislature, and if approved by a majority vote of the members elected to each House, it shall.' Line twenty-nine, after 'thereat,' insert, 'and approved by the Legislature, as herein provided for the approval of the charter.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The whole purpose of this article has been to take from the Legislature the power of special legislation, which we all admit is necessary. It was my intention, as far as I am concerned, to allow the counties to take care of their own affairs; to allow them to say whether the county should be divided or not, and thus cut off the log-rolling around the Legislature by men who are scheming for the offices. One man wants to be County Judge, another Sheriff. We all know that oftentimes a new judicial district has been created because some popular politician wants the position of Judge. That has been done again and again. I know it from my own experience as a legislator. Now these are ideas which have been indorsed by all the recent Conventions. When a man builds a house, if he does not adopt all the modern improvements he has an unsalable house. If we fail here to adopt the improvements which have been made in government during the last fifteen years, we will be behind the age. In former times the legislative power was unrestricted. But since that it has been found necessary to place restrictions upon the Legislature. It is the policy now to give the people more direct control, and take away from the Legislature the power to pass special laws. That is the platform on which we of San Francisco were elected. There is no provision in this article that has been criticised by the press or otherwise, but what is to-day in the platform which was adopted by the party, and sustained by the very papers which to-day are assailing this article--not assailed because it is wrong, but because that it is the intention to take San Francisco out of the State. Now, it will not admit of any such interpretation. The very first part of the section says, a city may frame a charter, subject to the Constitution and laws of this State. It must be subject to general laws, and those general laws may be just as stringent as the Legislature shall see fit to make them. There never was any idea of secession. There never was any thought of setting up an independent government. San Francisco is subordinate to the laws of this State by the very terms of this section. As far as I am concerned, in making this report, I have tried to adhere to my pledges. The Convention must not lose sight of the fact that we have already taken from the Legislature the power of special legislation. We are, therefore, dependent upon general legislation, general laws, and we must frame our Constitution with reference to it. That being so, we must provide some means for the government of cities. Suppose you strike out section nine, how is the City of San Francisco, or any other city, going to have a charter. There is no way provided except in this section. Look at the laws of this State, and you will find stacks upon stacks of Acts conferring additional powers upon the Boards of Supervisors. The taxes of that city are greater than any other city in the United States, or in the world; yet, gentlemen want to pile them up higher still. You must recollect that they are not all rich men. There are poor people there who have their little homes, and it is very hard for them to pay three or four per cent. taxes—just as hard as it is for you gentlemen who live in the country. We must put a stop to it or it will end in bankruptcy. In the last ten years you have trebled the municipal debt in the United States. In the next ten years it will be trebled again; and perhaps before that time it will be greater than the national debt. I have offered this amendment in order to meet the criticisms which have been made. I have some other small amendments to offer to further perfect the article, if I am not cut off by the previous question.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will pass. As this section stands, it proposes to give to the cities of this State what I conceive to be the most dangerous powers, without any check, without any restrictions. It proposes to give to the cities of this State the actual power to repeal the existing laws of this State. Let us look at the thing. After stating, if the qualified electors approve of it, it shall become the organic law thereof, and supersede the existing charter, and all amendments thereto, and all special laws inconsistent with such charter. In other words, the laws of the State of California, without the action of the State of California, may be repealed by the City of Oakland or the City of San Francisco. I do not believe it is safe to trust any such power as that in the hands of any city in this State. It would be absolutely placing the city beyond the power of legislative control. Now, while I do not believe that the Legislature should interfere in the concerns of a city affirmatively, while I think they ought to be left to the judgment of the people of a city, yet at the same time, I believe that we ought to retain in the Legislature a preventive, conservative power, which will prevent the city from injudicious legislation in the shape of a charter. When a proposition is made to repeal the laws of the State, I think the State at least ought to be consulted. Further, there is this idea connected with the matter, and that is, that the charter may be gotten up and passed hastily, at a time of public excitement, which will open the way for a very mischievous government. If that were done there would be no way of reaching the people; it would be beyond the power of the Legislature to help them. Now, while I should prefer that cities should be organized under general laws, yet, if a different system is to be adopted, it should be under a certain amount of legislative restriction. Abuses and corruptions may creep in, as was the case in the City of New York, where the Legislature had to step in and exercise its preventive power.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: This amendment meets my most hearty approval. Without it, I should vote against section nine. I do not believe that the City of San Francisco is an independent sovereignty. I believe the State is so largely interested in the way of commerce, that the State power should have control in a large degree of the affairs of that city. I do not believe that it would be wise or just for this Convention to adopt a rule by which that city might place itself entirely outside of the control and jurisdiction of the Legislature. I feel sure that the amendment will commend itself to the favorable consideration of the best business interests of San Francisco. I am sorry that the people of San Francisco are not willing that the Legislature should exercise paternal control over them. The committee of fifteen, as laid down here, will frame a charter. That charter will be submitted to a vote of the people, and then the Legislature will have only this control over it. They can say whether the charter shall be adopted or rejected.

MR. HAGER. Allow me—there is one mistake made which I want to correct. The Legislature will always have control, because the charter must be subject to general laws. By general laws they may repeal the charter.

MR. ESTEE. I understand the point which the gentleman makes, but I disagree with him on the effect of it. If the Legislature passed a law repealing the charter, that would be a special law, and therefore unconstitutional. I am not in favor of placing the City of San Francisco beyond the control of the Legislature of this State. I therefore hope this amendment will be adopted, with such other amendments as are necessary.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be adopted. It removes many of the evils pointed out when this matter was under discussion in Committee of the Whole.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I cannot see that there is any real necessity for section nine. Section six is all that is necessary.

"SEC. 6. The Legislature, by general laws, shall provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification, in proportion to population, of cities and towns; and cities and towns heretofore organized or incorporated may become organized under and subject to such general laws. Cities and towns may become incorporated under general laws, whenever a majority of the electors voting at a general election shall so determine, and shall organize in conformity therewith."

When the motion to strike out section nine failed I then moved to strike out the classification as to one hundred thousand inhabitants, at the same time saying I was opposed to the section. There is no necessity for it.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hope that amendment will not be adopted. That is an abandonment of the whole principle of self-government. Now, sir, this section has been the subject of a great deal of criticism and misrepresentation on the part of some of the press. For those who have made it their business to malign this Convention I have no respect. For the fair, honest criticisms I have every respect, and to such I pay attention. Now, sir, the whole intent of this section has been misrepresented. It is either misunderstood, or willfully misrepresented. It is nothing in the world but the ordinary, plain, simple doctrine of self-government, applied to the people of San Francisco. I admit that the section as amended may be vicious, applying to every city in the State. There was no necessity for it except in the case of San Francisco. It does not throw San Francisco out from under the control of the State, and no man whose opinion is worth respecting will assert anything of the kind. The line of demarkation is just as plain as the authority by which we are sitting here and framing a Constitution, subject to, and in harmony with the Constitution and laws of the United States. It is nothing but a system which will allow the State to Act upon matters of State concern, while the localities regulate local matters. That is all there is of it. When you propose that the charter shall be subject to the action of the Legislature, you leave it at the mercy of a hungry lobby. The charter comes up and it gathers the lobby around again. If an amendment is adopted at any time to the charter, it must go to the Legislature, and you gather the lobby around again. No, sir, it will never do. It will place us at the mercy of gas and water corporations, who will wield a powerful lobby to defeat any reform measures which we may adopt. I am opposed to the amendment, and I hope it will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: If the Legislature is to pass upon the charter, it should pass upon it before its submission to the people of San Francisco. Let them reject or approve it as a whole; not allow the Legislature to alter or amend it. I am in favor of some check upon the city, but I believe that the check ought to be in this way: After the convention of fifteen has worked out a charter, let it go before the Legislature to be approved or rejected as a whole. Why go to the trouble and expense of voting on it, and then bring it to Sacramento for the lobby to work on? If the Legislature is to have power to amend it, then we might as well give the whole thing over into the hands of the Legislature at once, and let them frame a charter; there would be no use of putting the city to the expense of voting upon it, but frame the instrument and submit to the Legislature first as a whole; in that way it would be a check.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment because it proceeds upon the theory that the people of San Francisco are bent upon self-destruction, and the only way in which that dire result can be averted is to submit the charter to the Legislature. Now, sir, it is the habit of the people of San Francisco to point with pride to their charter, but it is not their habit to point with pride to the one hundred supplemental Acts passed by the Legislature—they might as well be denominated one hundred raids upon the taxpayers of San Francisco, or one hundred steals out of the treasury. Were they adopted by the people? Were they asked for by the majority of the people of San Francisco? By no means. Were they not adopted by the people? Were they ever defeated by the Legislature? Never one. There is not a gentleman within the sound of my voice who ever knew of an amendment to the charter being defeated by the Legislature; nor did the country members ever come to the rescue of San Francisco—if they did, when? I pause for a reply. When have the people ever voted to injure themselves?

MR. ESTEE. In eighteen hundred and sixty-four, when the people of San Francisco voted a million dollars as a subsidy to the railroad company.

MR. REYNOLDS. I defy any gentleman to name a single instance where the country has ever saved the city. One gentleman in his wisdom speaks of the harbor of San Francisco. Does he not know that the harbor is under control of the Federal Government? Does he not know that charter rights pertain to police regulations within the city, and that alone? Hence, it is useless to talk about the city being saved by the Legislature. It is absurd. If there were any examples to refer to, there might be something in the argument, but, as it is, it is absurd.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: If this amendment is adopted I shall oppose the entire section. As it is now, it applies to all the cities in the State, and I am not disposed to have every small city in this State, when it wishes to adopt a new charter, or to amend its charter, to be subjected to the lobbies and the Legislature. It contravenes the entire system which we have attempted to adopt with reference to local self-government. If gentlemen will confine this section to cities of fifty thousand or one hundred thousand inhabitants, I will vote for any amendment which they may offer.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will prevail. Every citizen in this State has an interest in San Francisco, and a large number of the inhabitants of this State own property in San Francisco. To say that San Francisco, or Oakland, or any other city, shall make a charter which cannot be revoked by the power of the State, is something that I will never consent to. Now, the men selected will frame a charter. It will be submitted to the people who will vote on it. If they express themselves in its favor it will go before the Legislature. If it does not contain any provision injurious to the State at large, there is very little doubt but what, with such a recommendation, it will be indorsed, and will become the charter of the city.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I think this whole scheme is vicious and dangerous. There is no necessity for it. It is all provided for in section six, and that is sufficient. Here is a bill that effects the whole State. There is no locality about it. This system is vicious, and there is no good in it from top to bottom.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I concur in the remarks of Mr. Beerstecher. I desire to read, for the information of the Chairman of the committee, an amendment which I shall offer. Insert, after the word "Legislature," where it first occurs in the amendment: "for its approval or rejection as a whole, without power of alteration or amendment."

MR. HAGER. That is the intention of my amendment, but I have no objection to making it more emphatic. I will accept the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment as amended, offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Hager.

Adopted.

MR. MURPHY. I move that the Convention take a recess until seven o'clock.

Division was called for, and the motion lost by a vote of 55 ayes to 56 noes.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add at the end of the section: 'the Legislature may at any time abrogate such charter or any part thereof.'"

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: If this term "organic law" means anything, it means a law which cannot be changed by the ordinary course of legislation. Our Constitution is the organic law of the State, and the Legislature cannot change it. It is said that the charter must be consistent with and subject to the general laws of this State. That is all right as far as it goes. But when it is so framed it becomes the organic law of the city. Now, we have the further provision that the Legislature must reject or approve it as a whole. If abuses should creep in under it, and it should be found not to work well, there is no power in the Legislature to do anything, because they have ratified it as a whole, and it has become the organic law of the city. Now, sir, this amendment is designed to guard against such a state of things. It can do no harm, and it may prove a very great good.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Stuart, Waters, Lampson, and Tuttle.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

REPORT.

MR. AYERS, from the Committee on Reporting and Printing, reported as correctly engrossed: Amendment number five hundred and three, judicial department; amendment number five hundred and ten, revenue and taxation.

NOTICE.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I hereby give notice that I will, to-morrow, move to amend Rule Thirty-three, governing the course of business in Convention.

RECONSIDERATION—EDUCATION.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I move now to reconsider the vote whereby was passed to engrossment and second reading the article on education. The desire which I have to reconsider this originates in the fact that this Convention have left out of section six the State Normal School as a part of the public school system, and it ought to be in there. I desire also that it be amended so far as that section is concerned to prevent if possible the indiscriminate erection of local normal schools, which in their effect will have a tendency to destroy the State Normal School, and thereby compel a great number of persons who otherwise might have the benefit of the normal school free of additional expense, to go into these local districts and pay their way in order to become good teachers in this State.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: It is stated by the gentleman from Santa Clara that he desires the reconsideration of the article and the section six, for the purpose of inserting the State Normal School as a part of the common school system of this State, it having been omitted from section six as it now stands. There can be no objection to that. While favoring that change, I am also in favor of striking out the words "and grammar," in line six, so that the clause will read: "In the primary schools, no language but the English shall be taught." I hope, sir, that the motion to reconsider will prevail. The objections that were raised to striking out the whole of the sentence—"In the primary and grammar schools, no language but the English shall be taught"—was, that the primary schools were overcrowded with studies, and that scholars that went there were unable to get a thorough knowledge of the English language, as before they were thoroughly proficient in rudimental English studies they were put into classes embracing the languages, and the languages were taught to those children to the detriment of the common theory of English common school education. That, Mr. President, was the objection urged by a number of gentlemen on this floor. In order to obviate that, if the amendment be adopted, nothing but the English will be taught in the primary schools, and there will be no danger of the children being instructed in the languages when they are yet unlearned in the English language. Mr. Larue's amendment was to strike out the clause. If this motion prevails, I shall offer an amendment to strike out simply the words "and grammar." The schools throughout the rural districts of this State, outside of the cities, are all primary schools, and it would be impossible under the Constitution to teach anything but the English language in these schools in the country districts, unless the people of those districts saw fit to raise that grade of their schools to the grammar school; but it would enable the people of the cities of this State in their grammar schools to have the languages taught.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, O'Sullivan, Tully, Herrington, and Weller.

The roll was called, and the motion to lay on the table was lost by the following vote:

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I am opposed to the reconsideration of this article, and I am amazed at the coolness with which gentlemen assert that the normal school should be a part of the public school system of the State. This seems to be the chief cause or apology for reconsideration. What logic; what justice; what propriety; what common sense is there in educating school teachers? It is true that the taxpayer is lawful prey for everybody to pluck, but if we start in with this system of educating teachers, we must carry it out in full. We have provided for a great number of Superior Judges here and for legislators, etc. Why not have a normal school for Judges and for legislators? School teachers are well remunerated for their services. Their salaries are higher than the corresponding duties and position in other departments of life in California. Why not permit them to educate themselves? Why educate them at the expense of the taxpayers?

MR. WHITE. Why does the Legislature appropriate one hundred thousand dollars this last year to educate lawyers?

MR. CAPLES. Did it do it?

MR. WHITE. Yes, sir.

MR. CAPLES. I am informed of it for the first time. If the gentleman is correct, I avail myself of this occasion to enter my protest against that one hundred thousand dollars too. If we expect, Mr. President, to complete our labors here we have got to cease this eternal reconsideration. In this case there is no legitimate apology for it, except that the normal school should be incorporated into the common school system. Now, I am ready and willing, Mr. President, to admit that the State owes to the children of the State, an education, or the elements of an English education, merely the basis of an education, but if it is desired to educate beyond that point, I hold that it is the privilege of every parent to educate their children up as high as they choose to do—make lawyers, or doctors, or professors of them—but I deny that the State owes that kind of an education to the children of the State; an attempt to give them that kind of an education is robbery and nothing else; it is robbery of taxpayers. It is not honest, and I avail myself of this occasion to enter my solemn protest against any such form of robbery. Mr. President' the idea prevails here, it prevails in the State, it is a popular delusion, that taxation hurts nobody but the taxpayer, and I declare that no greater mistake was ever fallen into. An onerous taxation handicaps, discourages, and represses every species of industry and industrial enterprise that offers employment to the poor man; yet gentlemen who think that they are not in the boat, and do not care whether she founders or not, are ready to pile on taxes for this, and that, and everything, thinking all the time that it is not their funeral. I beg to ask those men to reflect one moment upon the consequences of that system of taxation that levies and collects an onerous tax upon property. What is the effect? Can any gentleman for one moment doubt that the effect is to discourage the development of the resources of the country and prevent industrial enterprises that alone would give prosperity to the whole people? Is it not true? Gentlemen must remember that we are all in the same boat; the rich and the poor, the high and the low, must flourish together, or suffer together. The policy of wisdom, the policy of justice, and the policy of honesty, is to confine the expenses of government to the legitimate, and necessary, and the inevitable expenses of government, and not to extend the government so as to engage in every species of enterprise.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: Upon this question I have hitherto listend to others and voted without speaking, but I desire to say a few words explanatory of my votes. I do not consider the proposition presented to involve merely a question of taxation as has been stated by others. I do not consider it to be merely a question of birthplace or race, but rather one of governmental policy. Now, my ancesters originally came from the same German land as those of my colleague, Mr. Beerstecher. He, a recent emigrant, may have more attachment for the fatherland, so called, than I have, yet I certainly have no prejudices against the land from whence, at a more remote period, my ancestors emigrated, or against more recent emigrants. Why should I? We are a nation of immigrants and have been a nation of immigrants. I mean a nation in the broadest sense, as my friend, Mr. Estee, took some exceptions to that a few days ago. Our people came from all parts of the world—from the British Isles, from the vine-clad hills of France, from the plains of Holland, from the valleys of the Rhine, and from the cliffs of Switzerland. They traversed the Atlantic when it was an unknown sea. They landed upon this continent where before them was wide, unbounded, magnificent wilderness; where sprang and fell the forest leaves; where ebbed and flowed the ocean tide in uninterrupted stillness; where, in a new world, they were untrammeled and unfettered by anything they had left behind them in the old world.

For what purpose did they come? For what purpose did they leave their beautiful home land? For what purpose did they cross the unknown sea? For what purpose did they make their home in the unexplored wilderness? They came seeking political and religious freedom. They invited friends and relatives they left in the Old World to join them in the new land. Did they come here for the purpose of reëstablishing European institutions? Did they come to transplant the seeds of monarchical or imperial government in this free land? No, they came to establish a government of freedom for themselves here, and not for the land they had abandoned. When they endured all this; severed home ties and came to this continent free and untrammeled, it was with the determination of being a part of the new institutions in the new land, and not a part of the home government they had left. If immigrants come here now for the purpose of being educated in the German, or in the French, or in any other language, with a view of returning to the country from whence they came, they are not a part of us, and do not belong to us. If they come here for the purpose of being citizens of this country, then I hold out to them this sentiment: that language is a bond of union between us as a people. And unless we are united in language and of one tongue, we never will become homogeneous; on the contrary, we would be a heterogeneous people, as Austria is to-day. Look at the Empire of Austria, composed of Zechs, Sclavs, Germans, Hungarians, and various other races, without the cohesive bond of a common tongue; speaking different languages; its people unaffiliated in sentiment, and without homogeneity. It is ready to crumble to pieces for want of that cohesion which all the world regards as the true bond of a common language which makes one people. Unless we make our people homogeneous by language, we never will be homogeneous in sentiment.

MR. BARBOUR. I would like to ask the gentleman a question. Now we print upon the coin of the country "E pluribus unum." Do you object to that?

MR. HAGER. I think it well that every man should know something of Latin. General Jackson when, at Harvard, they conferred upon him the degree of LL. D., said to Major Downing: "I suppose we must talk Latin now to these learned men; won't E pluribus unum do?" and the Major thought it would. It is well to know a little Latin, even if it be only E pluribus unum. [Laughter.] Now, what is the purpose of education? Is it to instruct a child in the German, the French, the Spanish, or the Italian, or any other language? The purpose of education is to fit him for the duties of life in the sphere where he is located. What are the purposes of education here with us? Why, to instruct the youth of this land, whether they be French, German, or any other race, in American institutions—not French institutions, not German institutions. If they are destined to perform the governmental duties of life as citizens of a common republic, are we bound to teach them these duties in the different languages of their home land, according to the different races to which they belong? In such case we must have teachers in German, French, Spanish, Dutch, Scandanavian, and most important of all, if numbers are to be taken into consideration, in the Chinese. If we must teach the German children in their language, must we not also teach the Chinese in their language? I refer Mr. Beerstecher to the policy of his own country, Germany, in regard to Alsace and Lorraine, where that subjugated people, although French, are taught in the schools only in the German language—French being prohibited in order to make them German citizens, familiar with German institutions, and to divest them of that French character and nationality which they have inherited. They say, and they say with truth, that if they are continued to be educated in the French language they never will become Germanized. The Germans are right in this national policy towards Alsace and Lorraine if they wish to make those people subordinate to German institutions. And that should be our policy. Every child here should be taught in the language of Washington, the language of the Declaration of Independence, the language of the Constitution of the United States, the language of the Constitution of the State of California, and if we ever expect to have a homogeneous people we must do this. I have no prejudices of race, but I am in favor, sir, of one flag, one language, and one country.

MR. ESTEE. Didn't you vote the other day against one nation?

MR. HAGER. No, sir; I said the Government of the United States might not be all that constitutes the nation. We are a nation—so I proclaim it—composed of a Federal Government sovereign to the extent of delegated powers; composed of State governments, sovereign except so far as they are limited by charter; composed of the people, sovereign over all. These constitute the nation. The Federal Government, State governments, and the people, compose the nation. But the Federal Government alone is not the nation. We recognize the sovereign power to be with the people, and when you undertake to say that the Federal Government of itself is the nation, you leave out the powers reserved to the States and to the people.

MR. AYERS. Would you make the exigencies of conquest and war, as in Alsace and Lorraine, applicable to a State like this?

MR. HAGER. I was referring Mr. Beerstecher, who favors teaching in our schools in foreign languages, to what they are doing in his native land, and I admit it to be good national policy on the part of Germany, if they wish to Germanize Alsace and Lorraine, to have none but the German language taught in the schools.

MR. AYERS. Has the treatment of Alsace any application to this State at this time?

MR. HAGER. In reply to Mr. Beerstecher, I have referred him to the action of the government in his native Germany as being different from what he would have us do here. This is merely illustration. My argument is simply one of policy and patriotism. In my opinion, it is the duty of every citizen who looks to the future welfare of our country and the preservation of its institutions, to favor the language of our own country, in all teaching in our public schools, in preference to that of any other country; and if children of foreign birth are brought here to be educated in German or in French, with the idea of returning to their native country to live there, why, I am prepared to say we do not keep school by public taxation for the world.

MR. AYERS. Does it detract from the patriotism of our children to teach them other languages?

MR. HAGER. It detracts from the obligations of the State and the citizen taxed. Every man should know how to perform the duties and exercise all the privileges of a citizen; he should be able to understand the institutions of the country and to read the Constitution in the language of the country, and the instruction in our public schools should be directed to these purposes. If any desire to acquire German, or French, or Latin, or Greek, or any other language, the opportunities of a lifetime are before them. The common school can only open the doors of science and give the student a glimpse of the apartments within, but the exploration of the chambers of knowledge is the work of a lifetime. No one can complete an education in two or three or four years. He can only learn how to acquire an education in after years. The professors open the doors of science and let the student have a glance of the interior. The exploration is the work of a lifetime.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's ten minutes have expired.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I have taken some interest in this question, but from an entirely different standpoint from that taken by my friend Judge Hager and the other gentlemen on this floor. I maintain that we ought not to close the door of science on any field of inquiry that the children of our country desire. I maintain that to lay down in the organic law that we shall not teach but a certain line of studies, would be an infringement upon the rights of the people of the State. I maintain that the people of this State should have a right ten years from now to say that there shall be a cosmopolitan school in San Francisco if they want one; that in San Francisco American-born children may, in the grammar schools of the country, study Latin or French if they want to; that the people shall have the right, at any time hereafter, to say, in any municipality of this commonwealth, that certain lines of study shall be adopted. That is my position. The idea of assuming in this Convention that henceforth nothing but a certain line of studies shall be adopted in the common schools of the country, is doing injustice to the intelligence of those people who are to come after us. I welcome my friend Judge Hager back to the American nation. I remember what my friend said, and he doubted that this was a nation, and I am glad to see that he has got a little of the true religion in him.

MR. HAGER. I said nothing of the kind. Our speeches were both noticed in the papers.

MR. ESTEE. I appeal to what the gentleman said.

MR. HAGER. I said there was no doubt we were a nation.

MR. ESTEE. Very well. This has nothing to do with the propositions that the Germans when they come here shall be taught the German language, that the French when they come here shall be taught the French language. It is not to pay any deference to the German, to the French, or to any people that this proposition ought to be reconsidered and voted down as passed by the Committee of the Whole. That cuts no figure in the case. The proposition is: Shall we say in the organic law of this State, that the Legislature hereafter shall not provide that French, or German, or Latin may be taught in the grammar schools of this State. Are we prepared to say that the people ten or twenty years from now will not have sufficient intelligence in the legislative department of the government, to judge whether they want to teach Latin or French, or any other study to the children of this State at that time? Can we not safely leave this to the intelligence of coming generations? Is it a wise policy to do it? That is the proposition. Do we possess all the intelligence, and all the wisdom that is ever going to exist in this State? Can we not safely leave some questions to the intelligence of those who come after us? We have survived here for thirty years under a Constitution that had no such thing in it. There are communities where parents desire to fit their sons for the University, and where they send their sons to the grammar school in the hope of obtaining a higher education; where the sons desire to devote their lives to literature, we will say, they go there and desire to take the primary steps in Latin, or in French, or in Greek. I can see no reason why they should not. Do not their parents help pay for these schools; and if the community in which they live are anxious that they should be so taught, why should we say that they shall not? Take San Francisco, for instance, I would like to know what right we have to say that the City of San Francisco shall not have a cosmopolitan school there. I say that it is interfering with the system of local self-government, which my distinguished friend, from Germany, Judge Hager, has advocated so ably on this floor. It is a question of local self-government. We do not wish you to put any such cloud upon our intelligence. Let us in the future have cosmopolitan schools wherein French, German, and Latin may be taught if we want them. That is all the people of San Francisco, of Sacramento, or any other part of the State desire. It is not that it shall be done. It is not that any of these languages shall be studied in these schools. It is a question of inhibition. Shall we be prohibited from having these schools? Now, I do not bow to any gentleman upon this floor in devotion to the country of my birth. I claim that the youth of the country ought to be taught the English language. They ought to be taught to revere the Constitution of the United States, and the laws of the United States, and more, sir, they ought to be taught devotion to the flag of their country. I recognize that, and I recognize that the common school system of our country is the very palladium of American liberty—and on that term I refer to my friend from Alameda, Mr. Van Voorhies, who is familiar with the question of palladium.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: There was a palladium in the bill of rights. Now, it seems there is a second one. I never heard of two, but my ingenious and eloquent friend who has just spoken, seems to have discovered a second one.

MR. ESTEE. Well, I stole it from Pallas. My friend Casserly says there can be no nation; that etymologically speaking, nation is the wrong word.

MR. CASSERLY. I said no such thing. I am not in the habit of talking nonsense.

MR. ESTEE. I understood my friend to say so.

MR. CASSERLY. What I said was that the word nation was nowhere to be found in the American Constitution.

MR. ESTEE. It is found in forty million of American hearts, if it is not in the American Constitution, and it ought to be there forever. [Applause.]

MR. HERRINGTON. I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six, on education, as follows: Strike out the words 'normal schools,' in line two, and add and insert the words, 'the State Normal School, and such additional State normal schools as the Legislature shall provide,' after the word 'schools' first occurring in line two."

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's amendment is not in order. The sixth section is not before the Convention.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I move, then, to reconsider the vote by which section six was concurred in.

MR. GLASCOCK. I rise to a point of order. The gentleman's notice was not to reconsider the motion by which the Convention concurred in the report of the Committee of the Whole, but by which the Convention adopted the amendment. I believe the Convention has not adopted any amendment yet.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention concurred in the amendment in Committee of the Whole, and adopted it under the previous question.

MR. GLASCOCK. I believe the gentleman's notice does not cover that ground.

THE PRESIDENT. The notice expressly covers it. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

The motion prevailed on a division, by a vote of 56 ayes to 53 noes.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I now send up my amendment again.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six, on education, as follows: Strike out the words 'normal schools,' in line two, and add and insert the words, 'the State Normal School, and such additional State normal schools as the Legislature shall provide,' after the word 'schools' first occurring in line two."

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: The amendment as amended will read:

"SEC. 6. The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, the State Normal School, and such additional State normal schools as the Legislature shall provide, and such high schools, evening schools, and technical schools as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority; but the entire revenue derived from the State School Fund and the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools. In the primary and grammar schools no language but the English shall be taught."

The words "normal schools" I leave out. The object and purpose of this amendment, gentlemen of the Convention, is to prevent what may occur if the section is allowed to remain as it now stands. The State Normal School of course depends for its support upon the entire State. As it is now conducted, it is extremely efficient in its management, and is well calculated to produce the results anticipated when it was founded by the State. It has now, to some extent, become the pride of the State, and particularly of the people in the neighborhood where that institution is located. It has for its object and purpose the training of educators. The standard to which that class of educators should be instructed in the profession in which they are engaged and employed, should occupy a clear position and should be a great assistance in carrying forward the great system of education that we have adopted in the State. This section, as it now stands, will permit the establishment of local normal schools, and if these various localities in the State that are able to support local normal schools should choose to establish them, there will be in almost every large city in the State a local normal school. The State Normal School will become inefficient in its management, attendance, and support, and will hardly be worth the money that is appropriated for its support by the State authorities. The consequence will be that persons who desire to be educated in the normal school and follow the profession of teaching, instead of having a place where they may acquire that education without expense, will have to pay for it in your local normal schools. I say that the normal school should be patronized by the whole people of the State; that it is supported by the State and should not be local in its character, nor localized so far as the institutions themselves are concerned. There are localities where it is impossible to keep up the common schools, in consequence of a sparsely settled neighborhood, and in such cases the law now permits persons in these districts to send their children into other districts for the purpose of educating them, by paying therefor a compensation fixed by the Boards of Education. This same system is attempted to be inaugurated with reference to normal schools by the section as it now stands—permitting the various localities that are able to establish and support normal schools at home, leaving the State Normal School probably without that support that it ought to have. Besides that, it is degrading the character of the institution itself. These are the reasons that actuate me in offering this amendment, and I do submit that the institution as it has been established, ought to be supported with the greatest efficiency that it is possible to give it.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I voted to reconsider this section for the purpose of indicating that I desire to strike out that section. It is inconsistent with the balance of the report of the committee, and inconsistent in every respect with the system of common schools established in this State. Section six was not placed in there by the committee. It was done by an ex-State officer of the public schools that sought to engraft upon our common school system a system of high schools, grammar schools, technical schools, and other schools that are not, and never were, contemplated in the common school system of this State.

MR. BLACKMER. Does not the gentleman know that the section was reported by the Committee on Education?

MR. LARKIN. And offered by Mr. Swett.

MR. BLACKMER. You are incorrectly informed.

MR. LARKIN. This section is not in accord with section four of that report. Section four provides that the taxation of this State shall be appropriated to the common schools. In section six, the words "common schools" are studiously avoided, and avoided for a purpose. Whenever language is used in a Constitution, and a word in an article indicates one thing, that word, if it is intended to convey the same idea, should be used in every section and every line where the same idea is intended. It was a fraud intended upon this whole system which we have established throughout the State, and must be supported by the State. Why should anything else than a system of common schools, which is common to every child in the State, be supported by the State. These gentlemen that advocate that system certainly will not do it with good faith to the common school system, but seek, by that section, to defraud the children of this State out of the money that should go to the common schools, and take it to educate children to a higher degree. That is my objection to it. It is a fraud on the face of it; if it is not, why not use the words "primary school," in the final clause of section four?

MR. REYNOLDS. I would like to understand the gentleman. Does he mean to say that the words "common school" are studiously omitted from section six with the intent to appropriate money to any other purpose than the common schools—the primary and grammar branches?

MR. LARKIN. I know of no other reason for using the words than to avoid section four, which directly provides that no money shall be appropriated except for common schools. This section should not be here. Common schools are schools common to every child in the State. The original report of the committee on section four contained these words: "Subject to the provisions of section six of this article." Section six was intended to qualify section four.

MR. REYNOLDS. Does the gentleman know what a primary and a grammar school is?

MR. LARKIN. I will find out from the gentleman from San Francisco when I want to know.

MR. REYNOLDS. If the gentleman says that this section six was intended to qualify section four, the gentleman is mistaken.

MR. LARKIN. Then strike it out and leave section four, leaving the Legislature to determine what common schools are and to define them; that is all that is necessary in the Constitution. We have already provided that all the taxes shall be for the common schools. What source of revenue have you to support these schools enumerated in section six, except you obtain it by fraud, contrary to section four? Section six provides that "The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority." Now, any man who reads the English language, can see that there is an intention there to have other schools than what are considered common schools, supported by the State. I am in favor of striking out that section, and that every child in the State shall receive the benefits of a common school education—no more and no less.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: As I understand it, it would not be in order now to strike out that section. Now, sir, it seems to me that the present amendment, introduced by the gentlemen from Santa Clara, is not the feast to which we were invited here on this motion to reconsider. As I understand it, the object of the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Convention concurred in that report of the Committee of the Whole, was to allow an amendment to modify the restriction in reference to the teaching of languages in the schools. Now, I hope that the Convention will confine itself to that proposition. I am in favor of modifying that so as to allow the cities in this State, if they see proper with their own funds, to allow the teaching of others than the English language. That was my object in voting for the motion to reconsider. I hope the Convention will vote down the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, and come to the question for which the reconsideration was had.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: As a member of the Committee on Education, I desire to state the position taken by that committee in regard to this question of the normal school. It was not the desire or the intention of the committee to exclude the normal school from the public school system. The question was before them for discussion, and the first part of this section was put there for the purpose of determining what the public school system should be, and that determination was arrived at for the purpose of saying that whenever any of the schools should be established, that then they should come under the authority and the control of the school officers so that no school might be established, and then start off upon a course of its own.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I would like to state, that if I have got to set here and listen to the same speeches over again, I want to hear them. We can't hear a word over here; there is too much noise.

MR. BLACKMER. Now, sir, if you will examine the first part of this section, it says that the public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority. The normal school has been established by the Legislature, consequently it is included in the public school system by this section. So have evening schools in San Francisco, and they are included in this public school system. There is no necessity of placing this State Normal School in this section, because it is already included. The argument of the gentleman from Santa Clara is that there should be no other normal school, because we have one at San José. I am in favor of the normal school; I take pride in it; I know that it is doing a grand and a glorious work in this State; but I do not propose to put anything in this Constitution that will prevent another being established if it seems wise for it to be done. Now, sir, the normal school having been included in the other, there is no necessity for this amendment. In regard to the question of striking out this section, if that comes properly before this Convention, I will improve the opportunity to express my mind upon it. As for the gentleman from El Dorado, I do not know whether he has railroad on the brain, or what the matter is. He seems to find fraud and intention of wrong in everything that he does not agree with. Now, sir, I hope a figment of the brain—I do not believe the gentleman's heart means it. But, sir, it is unjust, and it is unwise to get upon this floor and charge fraud upon the Committee on Education in reporting this article. There are no grounds for it, and he has no right to do it.

MR. HERRINGTON. The gentleman has misrepresented my amendment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: As I understand it, the object of the Convention in reconsidering the vote upon section six, was to allow an amendment in relation to teaching the languages in the high schools. I do not understand, sir, that the object was to insert any amendment in relation to normal schools. I find, sir, upon reading section six, as it stands, that there is ample provision made in relation to the normal school. There is no trouble, sir, about the normal school at all. The normal schools are a part of the common school system, and the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara would in no wise change the section in that respect. I hope that we will come to a vote upon the amendment of Mr. Herrington, and that the amendment will be voted down, because it seems unnecessary; and then that the Convention will proceed to a vote upon the question for which the article and the section was reconsidered, and that is, to strike out in the sixth line the words, "and grammar."

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I presume that we will consume the balance of the month upon this matter. Now, when Congress passed this Act, they used the word "common schools." It had a clear and well defined meaning. It meant that class of schools that taught the common English branches, and nothing else; and I do not believe in changing that word. I hope that these amendments will be voted down, and that an amendment will be adopted striking out "primary and grammar," and inserting the word "common." It is the best word. It is the word under which we received the donations, and it is the word under which we should continue.

MR. REYNOLDS. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara—I have nothing to say.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move to amend the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section six, by striking out from line six, the words "and grammar," where they occur the second time.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I have seen some reason in the remarks of the gentleman to think that perhaps I was mistaken, and that the objection to the section rested only upon the assumption that it will, as it reads now, prevent the teaching of any language but the English in any schools belonging to the public school system. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, and the gentleman from San Diego, have particularly complained, if I understand them rightly, now that the people of a city or a town ought to have the right to have any language taught in any school which they organize and pay for. I agree perfectly in that, and I do not think it is the desire of any one here to object to that, or to weaken education, or to discourage the highest education attainable by any one. But here is another proposition: The term "common school," has a well known, clear, and definite meaning in the existing Constitution. Section three of article nine provides that the Legislature shall provide for the system of common schools. The term common schools is universally understood throughout the United States, and has been for generations. It is understood to be a system of schools for the education of American youth; to train them in the use of the American language; to prepare them to be American citizens, and to perform the duties of such; and so far as the common school system can, confer a general education upon the people. Now, there is something necessary to preserve that. The common school system can be destroyed in more ways than one. It can be effectually destroyed, broken down, and ruined, by putting too much on it; more than ever was contemplated; more than it is practicable to carry, as it could be by withdrawing the funds of support from it. The law has provided what the common schools are, and has prescribed as full a course of education as can be maintained in the common schools to the advantage of the common schools. If you put in more you will break down the system. I desire to preserve that system. I do not call it a palladium—I do not know much about palladiums—never had one. [Laughter.] But our common school system is well known. Our greatest scholars—our University men—men famous throughout the world for their culture—have not been afraid to stand up and eulogize the merits of our plain common school system, which lays the elements of education before every boy and every girl in the land; gives them a good English education, and leaves them armed in this way for the conflicts of life, or to go forward and achieve a higher education. I think that the difficulty under which the Convention is now laboring arises from the fact that a new term—a term of indefinite meaning—is used in the sixth section, instead of the term common schools. The expression used in the fourth section is common schools, and in the existing Constitution it is common schools. Now, if we will just strike out these words, "primary and grammar," and use the term "common schools," we shall be all right.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I wish to call the attention of the Convention to the fact that if the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco should prevail, it would provide that the entire revenue derived from the State school fund and the State school tax may be applied to the teaching of all the modern languages or ancient languages in existence. It would, as the gentleman has just remarked, break down the entire common school system. In striking out the words, "and grammar," it would provide that the funds thus raised——

MR. ESTEE. You have got the wrong "grammar." You have got the first word "grammar" in the sixth line, and the amendment is to strike out the words "and grammar," where they occur the second time in line six.

MR. WEST. The amendment is to strike the words "and grammar" out of the amendment offered by General Howard, and adopted in Committee of the Whole. It would leave the clause: "In the primary schools no language but the English shall be taught." Just before that it says, "but the entire revenue derived from the State school fund, and the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of the primary and grammar schools." Therefore, in the higher grade, or the grammar schools, in our common school system, may be taught all modern and all ancient languages, and the public funds paid therefor.

MR. CROSS. Have you any idea that the State will ever go crazy on the subject?

MR. WEST. I cannot say what freaks the Legislature may take.

MR. CROSS. Do you think that this Convention has all the wisdom of this century?

MR. WEST. I insist that my assertion is correct, that all these languages might be taught. A better amendment would have been to strike out that amendment so introduced by Mr. Howard, of Los Angeles.

Messrs. Walker of Tuolumne, Waters, Smith of Fourth District, Heiskell, and Moreland demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention, on a division, by a vote of 64 ayes to 60 noes.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Beerstecher, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Beerstecher, Wellin, Barton, Ayers, and O'Sullivan.

THE FILE.

THE PRESIDENT. The next article on the file is the article on schedule.

MR. MCCALLUM. I rise to a point of order. Rule Fifty-three provides:

"All propositions and resolutions embracing matter proposed to be incorporated in the Constitution, reported by a standing or a special committee, shall be read when reported, and shall be placed on a general file, to be kept by the Secretary, in the order in which they are reported. They shall be taken from the file and acted upon in the order in which they are placed thereon, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention; provided, that engrossed propositions and resolutions shall be placed at the head of the file, in the order in which they are received. Two hundred and forty copies of the file for each day shall be printed."

I see by the file published February seventeenth, that the preamble and bill of rights is at the head of the file for a second reading. I give importance to this, because we have not yet referred anything to the Committee on Revision; and if we are to adjourn about the last of next week, as nearly all of us hope and believe, it is necessary that something should be referred to that committee to formulate. When they report, the Convention has to act upon their report, and there is very considerable business for that committee, which, in my judgment, will require the labor of that committee for one week. I propose, then, that we take up this file in the order in which it stands in this Convention, and consider these propositions on second reading, and then go ahead with this matter of schedule. From our experience here this morning, we do not know what deadlock we will get into. I hope we will proceed to the file.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention has been taking up these reports without objection, and they have a right to do it now, if they desire.

MR. MCCALLUM. I object. The Convention has not otherwise ordered, and I call for the file in the order in which it stands. If the Convention desires to proceed in this way, let some gentleman make that motion.

THE PRESIDENT. If the gentleman has any motion to make, let him make it.

MR. MCCALLUM. Is it necessary to make any motion?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has announced that the report of the Committee of the Whole on schedule is the matter before the Convention.

MR. MCCALLUM. I move that we proceed to take up the file in the order in which it stands, commencing with the preamble and bill of rights on second reading.

MR. ESTEE. It will not take us probably two hours to get through with the balance of the file. There are just two propositions—schedule and State boundary. I hope that the motion will not prevail.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: We have not got through the file. We have to go through it before we commence at the top again. The rule is to put engrossed bills at the top of the file, but we must go through the calendar before we get back to the top. That is the ordinary rule.

MR. MCCALLUM. The rule says that they shall be taken up in order. The Chair can decide it as a point of order. My point of order is, that that which is at the head of the file comes first in order.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention has unanimously dispensed with that order.

MR. MCCALLUM. I object to that any farther.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that the point of order is not well taken.

MR. MCCALLUM. I will submit to the ruling of the Chair, in order that the gentleman may see the effect of it.

SCHEDULE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will proceed to the consideration of the report of the Committee on Schedule. The Secretary will read the amendments of the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read all the amendments proposed by the Committee of the Whole, and then the amendment to section two, as follows:

INSTRUMENTS.

"SEC. 2. That all recognizances, obligations, and all other instruments entered into or executed before the adoption of this Constitution to this State, or to any subdivision thereof, or any municipality therein, and all fines, taxes, penalties, and forfeitures due or owing to this State, or any subdivision or municipality, and all writs, prosecutions, actions, and causes of action, except as herein otherwise provided, shall continue and remain unaffected by the adoption of this Constitution. All indictments or informations which shall have been found, or may hereafter be found, for any crime or offense committed before this Constitution takes effect, may be proceeded upon as if no change had taken place, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section four.

CIRCULATION OF THE CONSTITUTION.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 4. The Superintendent of Printing of the State of California shall, at least thirty days before the first Wednesday in May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, on such terms as may be reasonable, select and contract with one newspaper proprietor in each county in this State in which a newspaper is published, for the publication and issuance, once a week for two successive weeks next before said election, in their respective papers as a supplement thereto, the printed copies of this Constitution, as hereinafter provided. The circulation of such papers shall be taken into consideration in making such contracts and selection, and the papers so selected shall issue a number of such supplements equal to the circulation of such papers in this State. In counties containing property of an assessable valuation of ten million dollars or over, not more than three such papers may be so selected. The Superintendent of Printing shall cause to be printed and delivered to the newspapers so selected, in due time for publication thereof, a number of such supplements equal to twice the State circulation of such papers. The Governor shall issue his proclamation, giving notice of the election for the adoption or rejection of this Constitution, at least thirty days before the said first Wednesday of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine; and the Boards of Supervisors of the several counties shall cause said proclamation to be made public in their respective counties, and general notice of said election to be given at least fifteen days next before said election."

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all down to and including the word 'papers,' where it occurs in the fifteenth line, and insert the following: 'The Superintendent of Printing of the State of California shall, at least thirty days before the first Wednesday in May, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, cause to be printed at the State Printing Office, in pamphlet form, simply stitched, as many copies of this Constitution as there are registered voters in this State, and mail one copy thereof to the Post Office address of each registered voter; provided, any copies not called for ten days after reaching their delivery office, shall be subject to general distribution by the several Postmasters of the State.'"

REMARKS OF MR. WEBSTER.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: It occurs to me, sir, that the plan as adopted by the Committee of the Whole is unsatisfactory. I think, sir, under that plan, under the most favorable circumstances, not more than one half of the qualified voters of this State will receive a copy of this Constitution, while other voters of the State would receive from one to ten, owing to the number of papers that they take through which this Constitution was sent out. Now, sir, the object of this matter is that the greatest number of electors of this State should be informed in regard to the work which we have been doing here. Another point is the cost of this publishing and sending out. I took the trouble to go to the State Printing Office and get a statement from the State Printer in regard to the cost of this work, and I find that the supplements will cost more, or as much at least, as the pamphlets. Now, the plan adopted by the Committee of the Whole provides that the State Printer shall select and contract with a certain number of papers to circulate supplements. Now, sir, we will take three papers which, under this plan, must be selected in San Francisco. The average circulation of these three papers would not be less than twenty thousand each. The Call claims thirty-five thousand. This would make sixty thousand circulation for San Francisco. Take the average of the other sixty-three papers in the State which are to be selected to be one thousand circulation each, including Alameda and Sacramento, and it would make sixty-three thousand additional circulation. Now there would be a sufficient number of supplements furnished to equal twice the State circulation of such papers, which would make the aggregate number to be supplied, at the lowest possible, of two hundred and forty-six thousand supplements. These supplements, according to the estimates of the State Printer will cost eight thousand five hundred and eighty-three dollars. For sending them out through the several papers, there has been different estimates as to what these papers will charge. It is claimed that some of them will do it gratuitously, but the probability is that the rate could not be less than thirty dollars for each; therefore the cost of such circulation would be one thousand nine hundred and eighty dollars, making an aggregate cost of ten thousand five hundred and sixty-three dollars. Now, sir, according to the estimate of the State Printer, for one hundred and fifty thousand copies of this Constitution in pamphlet form, stitched, we have an aggregate cost of seven thousand eight hundred and forty-eight dollars; for mailing, etc., one thousand dollars, making the aggregate eight thousand eight hundred and forty-eight dollars, as against ten thousand five hundred and sixty-three dollars for the supplements—a difference in favor of the pamphlets of one thousand seven hundred and fifteen dollars. The postage on the supplements will be at least equal to the postage on the pamphlets; so that it occurs to me, sir, that it will be much more expeditious and much more satisfactory to have this in pamphlet form than in supplement form, especially when it will cost no more, admitting that the number on the Great Registers of the State equals two hundred thousand. The largest vote polled in this State, which was in eighteen hundred and seventy-six, was one hundred thousand and fifty-five. The vote previous to that was one hundred thousand and twenty-two. But admitting that there are fifty thousand of registered voters in excess of the actual voters, and we have a cost of the pamphlets for two hundred thousand, not greater than the cost of two hundred and forty-six thousand supplements. The trouble with the supplements is that they will not reach more than half the registered voters in the State. Under the plan adopted by the Committee of the Whole, the State Printer has got to enter into negotiations for the purpose of determining what these papers will charge. That will probably consume a month of time. I learn from the State Printer that to print one hundred and fifty thousand pamphlets will take fifteen days, running day and night; and that it will take no additional time to send them out through the mail, because this can be done at the same time the printing is going on. If you print two hundred and forty thousand supplements it will take additional time. Besides, the supplement form would not be convenient to handle and study. It would be torn up a dozen times before it could be completed. If it is in pamphlet form, if the Constitution should be adopted, which we have reason to believe it will be, every qualified voter in the State will have a Constitution in his house, which is subject to his inspection. I think it is not necessary to say anything more upon this subject.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: How is it possible for the State Printer here to know the post office address of every voter in the State? I suppose there is a penalty for opening a package addressed to any person, so that they could not be distributed by postmasters.

MR. WEBSTER. I do not know about the penalty for opening pamphlets, but so far as learning the address of voters is concerned there would be little trouble. The great register gives the precincts, and there are post offices in most of the precincts or townships.

MR. SHAFTER. I do not myself recollect whether there is a penalty affixed to the opening of pamphlets directed to others, but every one will recollect that there are severe penalties for opening letters.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I earnestly hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda will be adopted. It is necessary, in fact it is indispensable, that we should advertise the Constitution that we are about to adopt here and place it before the people. The mode presented by the committee is to have supplements printed and have them sent out under contracts with newspaper publishers. Now I submit that this plan is entirely, wholly, and utterly inadequate. There is not only a majority, Mr. President, but there is a vast majority of the voters of California, who do not subscribe for any newspaper. They might see a copy of the Constitution or they might not. The proposition of the gentleman from Alameda is to have it printed in pamphlet form and mailed to every voter in the State. The cost will be little more, if any, and it is the most thorough means of getting the Constitution before the people. It would be worth the money it cost the people of California, because it would be bringing before them a matter that is of vast consequence to them and to the State. It would induce them to take an interest in the politics of the country. It would induce them to inform themselves in regard to the fundamental law of the land, and even if the Constitution should be rejected, it would be worth the money it cost. It is a patent fact that the average voter does not take that interest in public concerns that he should do; that he is not as well informed as he should be in order to discharge wisely the great functions of the elective franchise. Now I can conceive of no method that would be so well calculated to induce the average voter to inform himself as this proposition of sending the Constitution in pamphlet form to every voter in the State. I hope that this amendment will be adopted.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: So far as the suggestion made by the gentleman from Marin is concerned, it will be observed by reference to the Act of Congress on that subject, that the objection has no force. This clearly would not come, in my judgment, within the meaning of that Act. But if it could, by any possibly strained construction, it would be very easy to indorse in print upon the wrapper: "If not called for within ten days, deliver to any person applying for it." That would obviate every possible objection that might remain.

The amendment was adopted.

The amendment of the committee, as amended, was concurred in.

POLL BOOKS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of section six.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. The Clerks of the several counties in the State shall, at least five days before said election, cause to be delivered to the Inspectors of Elections, at each election precinct or polling place in their respective counties, suitable poll books, forms of return, and an equal number of the aforesaid ballots, which number, in the aggregate, must be ten times greater than the number of voters in the said election precincts or polling places. The returns of the number of votes cast at the presidential election in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-six shall serve as a basis of calculation for this and the preceding section; provided, that the duties in this and the preceding section imposed upon the Clerk of the respective counties shall, in the City and County of San Francisco, be performed by the Registrar of Voters for said city and county."

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I move to amend section six as amended in Committee of the Whole, by inserting before the words "poll books," in line four, the word "registers." It is a fact that, in many counties in this State, the registers were all used up at the last election for delegates to this Convention, and unless we make it obligatory upon the Clerks to furnish the Election Board or the Inspectors with registers, there will be a probability of some of the counties being without them at that time and unable to furnish them. I think the amendment will commend itself to the judgment of a majority of this Convention.

The amendment was adopted.

The amendment of the committee as amended was adopted.

CANVASS OF RETURNS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 8. The officers of the several counties of this State, whose duty it is, under the law, to receive and canvass the returns from the several precincts of their respective counties, as well as of the City and County of San Francisco, shall meet at the usual places of meeting for such purposes on the first Monday after said election. If, at the time of meeting, the returns from each precinct in the county in which the polls were opened have been received, the Board must then and there proceed to canvass the returns; but if all the returns have not been received, the canvass must be postponed from day to day until all the returns are received, or until six postponements have been had, when they shall proceed to make out returns of the votes cast for and against the new Constitution; and the proceedings of said Boards shall be the same as those prescribed for like Boards in the case of an election for Governor. Upon the completion of said canvass and returns, the said Board shall immediately certify the same, in the usual form, to the Governor of the State of California."

Concurred in.

FUTURE ELECTIONS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 10. In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the term of all officers elected at the first election under the same shall be, respectively, one year shorter than the terms as in this Constitution provided; and the successors of all such officers shall be elected at the last election before the expiration of the terms as in this section provided. The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law."

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section: 'Judicial officers and the Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be elected at the time and in the manner that State officers are elected."

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: That amendment is offered for the purpose of getting around the difficulty of having a special judicial election. It would bring the election at the same time that the other State officers are elected.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section ten as follows: Add at end of section, after the word 'laws,' the following: 'and the first term of all county officers so elected shall commence at the close of the term, now fixed by statute, of their respective predecessors in office.'"

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: The terms of many of the county officers in this State terminate on the fourth of March. As we have provided in the Constitution, the officers to be elected will enter upon their duties in January. It would be an injustice to turn all these gentlemen out of office for even the period of a month and a half or two months, as would be the case in this instance, if these officers enter upon the discharge of their duties in January. Under this provision that injustice may be avoided, and I think it is the duty of this Convention to do so, where it can be done without inconvenience and without lumbering up this instrument.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: By the provisions of this Constitution we turn out of office several Supreme Judges, twenty State Senators, and numerous other State officers and all the Judges of the District and County Courts. Now, I do not know as it is any more unjust to turn out of office a County Clerk than it is a County Judge, District Judge, Supreme Judge, or a State Senator, or any other officer. I took occasion here, at a former time, to express my objections to turning men out of office, legislating them into office, any more than we could possibly help. The Convention has adopted another rule, and I say, in the language of my friend from San Francisco, what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

MR. LARKIN. That amendment would extend the term of office.

MR. ESTEE. You will mix the thing all up.

MR. HERRINGTON. They won't go out of office until the fourth of March.

MR. HAGER. This amendment will not do in the shape it is in. It would carry over the County Judges, too. If it is expedient to extend the term of any officer, like the Assessor, or Tax Collector, let them be named.

The amendment was rejected.

The amendment of the Committee of the Whole was concurred in.

TO TAKE EFFECT.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section eleven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 11. This Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock meridian."

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I hope that an opportunity will be given to amend this article. As the matter now stands, if I understand the reading correctly, the provisions relate merely to officers elected under this Constitution.

THE PRESIDENT. The section is not before the Convention.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I will come around to it. Now, sir, section eleven says that this Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine. But as far as the election of officers is concerned, this article does not relate to county officers at all. It relates merely to State officers. You fix the terms of county officers, and then you have got to have your county and city elections long after the Constitution went into effect.

MR. ESTEE. That is so. What of it?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Well, we want them all at the same time.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section: 'so far as it relates to the election of the officers named in this Constitution, and those who have been heretofore provided for, and not prohibited or superseded by this Constitution; but as to all other matters and things, the same shall take effect and be in force on the first day of February, eighteen hundred and eighty, at twelve o'clock meridian.'"

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess till two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

SCHEDULE CONTINUED.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to take the place of the amendment of the gentleman, with his consent.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add at the end of section: 'so far as the same relates to the election of all officers heretofore provided by laws, and who are not named or provided for in this Constitution; and also such officers who are named in this Constitution, the commencement of the terms of officers, and the meeting of the Legislature. In all other respects, and for all other purposes, this Constitution shall take effect on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, at twelve o'clock meridian.'"

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: This amendment changes it until the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty. That is the shortest period that it is possible to fix for the Constitution to go into effect for all purposes. That is the day of the meeting of the Legislature. The reason for that is this: that we have made changes in the system of taxation and the judiciary system. It will be impossible to make the new Constitution work harmoniously until after the Legislature meets. Something of this kind must be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon adopting the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee.

Adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. I wish to offer a new section.

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order at present. The question is upon concurring with the Committee of the Whole in their amendment to section eleven as amended.

Concurred in.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I now offer a new section.

A CODE COMMISSION.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by adding the following section: 'SEC. 12. Immediately after the adoption of this Constitution, the Governor shall appoint three persons, learned in the law, as Commissioners, whose duty it shall be to carefully examine the various Codes and general laws of this State, and prepare such amendments thereto, or any portion thereof, as may be necessary to adapt the same to the provisions of this Constitution, and submit a report of their work to the Legislature first to assemble under this Constitution, during the first week of its session. The said Legislature shall provide for defraying the expenses of such Commission.'"

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: It must be apparent to all the members of this Convention, that when this Constitution goes into effect the revision of a code and general laws will be necessary, and some amendments made in order to adopt them to the changed condition of the fundamental law. It will be impossible for the Legislature to do it unless by and through its committees; and it will take probably a month or two of the session of hard work on the part of the Judiciary Committee, of either house, to go through the codes and the general laws, and suggest necessary amendments. Now, I have seen this in one of the papers, and it struck me as a very useful suggestion. Here three men can do the work of the Legislature for a month or two. It will be a matter of economy and will expedite matters. We have abolished District and County Courts, and established Superior Courts. It will be necessary to change the laws in that respect. It seems to me the suggestion is a wise one and ought to be adopted. It is a matter of economy in every sense of the word.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: This amendment would obviate the necessity of calling the Legislature together. I am opposed to it. We will elect a Legislature who will come here for the very purpose. The general laws of the State require no material change.

MR. WHITE. I wish to offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Provided, the expense of such commission shall not exceed five thousand dollars."

MR. VAN DYKE. Say ten thousand. That is reasonable.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I hardly think it is necessary for us to put a section of that kind in the Constitution. Suppose we say, that all laws in force at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, applicable to the District and County Courts, shall be applicable to the Superior Courts until changed by the Legislature. That is the whole thing.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Cruz.

Lost.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the new section.

Lost.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I will offer this as a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. All laws relative to the present judicial system of the State shall be applicable to the judicial system created by this Constitution until changed by the Legislature."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the new section.

Adopted.

BALLOT PAPER.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section five as follows: 'The Secretary of State is hereby authorized and required to furnish the Superintendent of State Printing a sufficient quantity of the legal ballot paper now on hand to carry out the provisions of this section.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: This is offered for the purpose of enabling the Superintendent of Printing to comply with the duty imposed upon him by this section. The State Printer has no ballot paper, and the Secretary of State has. It is the only paper there is in the State.

Adopted.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Brown, Doyle, Tully, and Hunter.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried, by a vote of 64 ayes to 33 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be ordered engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

STATE BOUNDARY.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the article on State boundary.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. The boundary of the State of California shall be as follows: Commencing at the point of intersection of forty-second degree of north latitude with the one hundred twentieth degree of longitude west from Greenwich, and running south on the line of said one hundred twentieth degree of west longitude until it intersects the thirty-ninth degree of north latitude; thence, running in a straight line in a southeasterly direction to the River Colorado, at a point where it intersects the thirty-fifth degree of north latitude; thence, down the middle of the channel of said river to the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, as established by the treaty of May thirtieth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight; thence, running west and along said boundary line to the Pacific Ocean, and extending therein three English miles; thence, running in a northwesterly direction and following the direction of the Pacific coast to the forty-second degree of north latitude; thence, on the line of said forty-second degree of north latitude, to the place of beginning. Also, all the islands, harbors, and bays along and adjacent to the coast."

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I move to amend by inserting, after the word "also," in line fourteen, the word "including." That was suggested to me by Judge Shafter. I presume it is correct.

MR. ESTEE. Does that take in the Sandwich Islands?

MR. TULLY. That is a land grabbing scheme.

The amendment was adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section one of the article.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, the executive, and judicial, and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except in the cases as in this Constitution is expressly directed or permitted."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section two. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 2. The Legislature may provide that cases submitted in the Courts shall be decided within a limited time, under such conditions as may be provided by law."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall this article be ordered engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

STATE INDEBTEDNESS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the article on State indebtedness.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not, in any manner create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except in case of war to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by some law for some single object or work to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means, exclusive of loans, for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years of the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all moneys raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created; and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each judicial district, if one be published therein, throughout the State for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people."

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the article be ordered engrossed and read a second time?

So ordered.

MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment, and then read section two:

DUELING PROHIBITED.

"SEC. 2. Any citizen of this State who shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within this State or out of it, or who shall act as second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, or engage in a prize fight, shall not be allowed to hold any office of profit, or to enjoy the right of suffrage under this Constitution."

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words, 'or engage in a prize fight.'"

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: It is said that a Constitution is a historical work, as well as a political work. It will not be to our credit to have some future generation read such a provision as this. It seems to me it is trivial. The class of men who run for office are not the class who engage in prize fights. If we want prize fighters in office I think we should have the right to put them there.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: It would be a reflection upon the State of New York which sends a distinguished prize fighter to Congress. I think this is going too far.

The amendment was adopted by a vote of 53 ayes to 44 noes.

MR. LARKIN. I move to strike out the whole section.

THE PRESIDENT. Not in order. The question is upon concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole, as amended.

IN RELATION TO MARRIAGE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

BRIBERY AND SUFFRAGE.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment of the Committee of the Whole to section eleven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 11. Laws shall be made to exclude from office, serving on juries, and from the right of suffrage, persons convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, or other high crimes. The privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections and prohibiting, under adequate penalties, all undue influence thereon from power, bribery, tumult, or other improper practice."

MR. O'SULLIVAN. I move to amend by adding after "forgery," the word "malfeasance."

MR. VAN DYKE. Is not that a high crime, covered by the present section?

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Yes, but this defines it in the Constitution.

Division was called for, and the amendment was adopted by a vote of 46 ayes to 37 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended.

MECHANICS' LIENS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read section fifteen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 15. Mechanics, artisans, laborers, material-men, and miners shall have liens upon the building, structure, mine, or other improvement upon which they have performed labor or supplied material, for the value of the work done or material furnished. And the Legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of such liens, making such building, structure, mine, or other improvement, and the owner thereof, responsible for such liens notwithstanding any payment, settlement, or contract made by him with contractors or subcontractors before such liens have been paid; provided, that such claim of lien shall be filed in the office of the County Recorder within sixty days after the completion of such building, structure, or work, or the furnishing of such material."

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'liens,' in line seven, and insert 'value of work done, or material furnished.'"

MR. HERRINGTON. This is to correct the reading of the section. I suppose of course it is intended to make the building responsible for the labor and material, not for the lien.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I suppose it is hardly worth while for me to say anything about this section. I simply want to call attention to the fact, that under this section no man can make a contract to build a house. If he does, he cannot pay a cent of money on it until sixty days after the completion of the contract. It will be unsafe for any man to let a contract to build a house, unless he provides in the first place that not a cent of money shall be paid until sixty days after the completion of the building. I think it is much better to let this matter rest with the Legislature, where provisions can be made in detail. The owner cannot know what is going on. He wants to make a contract on the best terms, and he cannot get as good terms for credit as he can for cash. We have not room in the Constitution to go into details, and it is much better to say that the Legislature shall pass a lien law than to undertake to enact a lien law in the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I am anxious that every man who labors or furnishes material should have the best lien that the law can give him. I am also anxious that the man who owns property shall not have it taken away from him without his consent or knowledge, and in some reasonable way. I oppose this section for the reason that it accomplishes neither of its purposes. It does not secure the laboring man as well as the present provisions of the Code, and yet, while it does not do that, it opens the door for a possibility that a man's property may be taken from him without his consent or default in any way. Now, there are a large class of cases in which the men who do work and furnish material will have no security whatever, except the personal security of the person who employs them. This is not Constitution making, it is Constitution tinkering. Let us do some Constitution making, and stop this tinkering. I think it is much better to have a simple provision in here that the Legislature shall provide by law for securing mechanics and material-men, by giving them liens upon the property. This section will not help them to get their pay. It will have the opposite effect in a large number of cases. I cannot support this amended section, because I believe it is not as good as the present provision of the Code. The Legislature has been trying for a number of sessions to make a perfect lien law, and they have now a very good one on the statute books. I do not want to go backward and put in a Constitutional lien law that will be imperfect.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I agree with Mr. Cross, that the Legislature, for the last fifteen years, in answer to the demands of mechanics and laboring men, has been trying to make a good lien law. At every session, the mechanics of San Francisco send a man here for the purpose of getting the lien law in good position; the result has been confusion worse confounded all the time. This whole thing is infirm in principle; they want to make the man who is going to build a house, the insurer for the fulfillment of a contract with a third person. Now, there is no contract between the owner of a building and the laborers, none whatever; he has a contract with the contractor, it begins and ends with him, he has nothing to do with the persons whom the contractor employs; this thing is all wrong. Now, this is not as good a lien law as the present law on the statute books, as has been pointed out by the gentleman from Nevada, while it is likely to work great wrong and injustice in many instances. There is no lien on the real estate whatever, it is expressly confined to the building or mine. The owner is made liable personally for the payment of all the labor and material furnished, though he has no control over the laborers, and nothing to say in the purchase of the materials; this provision makes him personally responsible—it is a fraud; at all events it ought to be confined to the amount of material and labor furnished. Now, how is the contractor to work? He must pay his men from day to day, and yet he cannot receive a dollar until sixty days after the completion of the contract. There is no man in his senses, who will take a contract under any such terms. There is no man in his senses, who will undertake to put up a building under such a law. Now, I am opposed to it. If gentlemen will get up something reasonable that will protect the laboring man and not destroy other interests, I will support it, but not this thing.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I am much pleased to find the gentleman from Marin coming over to our side to help us, but I am afraid the kind of help he offers will not do us much good. Now, I wish to offer an amendment to make it include the land belonging to such building, structure, mine, or improvement. That will obviate some of the objections raised. I will ask Mr. Barbour to accept the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman cannot accept it.

MR. WELLIN. It is rather foolish to go over the same arguments that were gone over in the Committee of the Whole. The gentleman says that this will injure the workingmen. Well, I as one of them know what they want in order to protect themselves. It may be that frauds will occur on the other side. I am in favor of guarding against them also. But it must be remembered that wealthy men always have the means of protecting themselves. It is an easy matter for them to require and obtain security that will secure them against loss. There is no danger of trouble so long as the contractor is compelled to deal honestly with the workmen. I want to call attention to the fact that the same kind of a law as this has applied to ship building for two hundred years, and there has been no complaint of wrong done by reason of it. The ship cannot leave the harbor till every plank is paid for. She could not go on to the dock to buy supplies till the work has been paid for. But if this section is not as perfect as it ought to be, then it would come with much better grace if these gentlemen would come forward and give us the benefit of their legal knowledge. I would be glad to have gentlemen like Judge Shafter give us the benefit of his knowledge and experience. All we ask is just what is fair and right, and we shall not be satisfied unless we get it. I can assure you that it will make a vast difference in the vote on the Constitution whether this section is put in or not.

REMARKS OF MR. WATERS.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: There are three propositions involved in this. In the first place you must consider whether section fifteen, as reported by the committee, is better than the statute which exists to-day, or not. If not, whether section fifteen, as amended by the Committee of the Whole, is better than section fifteen, as reported by the committee. Now, I think if these Workingmen will pay a little more attention to the lawyers, and give the lawyers a little more credit for honesty, they will arrive at better conclusions on this question. Now, the statute as it stands to-day, not only gives the mechanic a lien upon the structure, but upon sufficient land around it to make it convenient to use the structure. That is the law to-day. You will find it in section eleven hundred and eighty-five of the Code of Civil Procedure. Now, the section reported by the committee gives the mechanic a lien upon the property. Not only a lien upon the structure, but upon the land itself. It reads, as follows:

"SEC. 15. Mechanics, material-men, artisans, and laborers of every class, shall have a lien upon the property upon which they have bestowed labor or furnished material, for the value of such labor done and material furnished; and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens."

Now, the section which the Workingmen themselves have offered, reads as follows:

"SEC. 15. Mechanics, artisans, laborers, material-men, and miners shall have liens upon the building, structure, mine, or other improvement upon which they have performed labor or supplied material, for the value of the work done or material furnished. And the Legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of such liens, making such building, structure, mine, or other improvement, and the owner thereof, responsible for such liens notwithstanding any payment, settlement, or contract made by him with contractors or subcontractors before such liens have been paid; provided, that such claim of lien shall be filed in the office of the County Recorder within sixty days after the completion of such building, structure, or work, of the furnishing of such material."

I say section fifteen, as reported, is better than the statute, because it gives a lien upon the whole property. The section gives them a lien upon the whole property, and if the building is pulled down or destroyed, the lien still holds good. That is what the mechanics want. I myself think it goes too far, but the other does not go far enough.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN DYKE.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington—that is, that the property shall be liable for the value of the labor and material put upon it. I would then be in favor of striking out, in line six, "and the owners thereof," making the property responsible for the material which goes into it and the labor bestowed upon it. Now, sir, I am in favor of a declaration in this Constitution in favor of a live lien law. I think it is just as necessary as a declaration in favor of homesteads. It is true that the Legislature can provide for a lien law without such a declaration. Nevertheless, all the modern Constitutions come up to the demands of the times and put this declaration in. Several of the new Constitutions have declared in favor of a lien law. I refer you to the Constitutions of North Carolina, Georgia, and Texas. I think we should not adjourn without putting in a similar declaration here. They do not go into details. It has been said here that the Legislature has been tinkering at this every session. I am aware of that. But the lien laws have been evaded and rendered useless by construction, and have been practically frittered away. The present lien law is of no practical benefit whatever. It was intended when passed, in eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, to be of some value. The Codes went into effect and stripped it of all its value. An effort was made in eighteen hundred and seventy-four to restore it, but still the Supreme Court have construed it to be dependent upon the contract. The result is that the owner colludes with the contractor, and the laborer finds there is nothing due on the contract. For all the benefits that flow from it the law might as well be abolished. The laboring men are thus often swindled out of their just compensation, and under the present state of things there is no help for it. I am in favor of a law after the style of the United States maritime law, which is just to all concerned. That law has existed for centuries. But I am not willing to go to the extreme of holding the owner personally liable beyond the value of the work done or the material furnished, which is amply secured by a lien on the property. It is a singular fact that the lien law in this country had its origin in Washington, at the time that city was selected as the site for the national capital. It was recommended by Thomas Jefferson, for the purpose of securing parties who did the building the value of what was put into the building. It is a principle founded in justice. It is just and proper that the laborer should be paid for his services, and that the man who furnishes material should have a lien upon the property.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: None of the objections to this section reach to the great question involved. Gentlemen seem to desire to destroy the utility of this section. One gentleman remarked that we should determine whether this section is better than the present statute. I admit that the present statute, so far as it is possible to judge from the proper meaning and interpretation of language, is as good a thing as mechanics could ask for. But on account of the construction put upon it by the Courts, it is not worth the paper it is written on. We want a declaration in the Constitution that no payment by the owner or his agent shall work a discharge of a lien. That is what we want in the Constitution. Now, all these objections are technical objections. These gentlemen must have been educated in a technical school. Now, they object because we do not include the land. You cannot hold the farmer's land if the building should be burned down before it has been delivered to him. There is no intention here to make a Code in the Constitution. The intention is to put in a declaration here, that the lien shall be valid notwithstanding any contracts made. Is not that a plain enough proposition? If gentlemen are in favor of a lien law, let them say so. If they are opposed to it, let them vote against it. That is all there is about it. The intention is to give to the laboring men a lien similar to that which the United States gives to her seamen, by which they can rely upon the ship for their wages. The theory of a mechanics' lien law is that he has performed labor upon a structure and improved its value. It contemplates that a man who has put his labor into a thing and increased its value, on that thing he has a lien until his services are paid for.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I offered a proposition, number four hundred and seven, which seems to be the framework of this proposition. That proposition was referred to the Legislative Committee and was rejected. The same proposition, and others, were referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Subjects, which reported this section fifteen which, perhaps it is proper to say, is the lien law petitioned for by the mechanics, as shown by their petitions now on file. After I saw these petitions I did not deem it my duty to go behind them. I find, however, that the minority of that committee have reported proposition four hundred and seven, with some amendments, which has been adopted by the Committee of the Whole. Now, the amendments have not improved the proposition materially. The better course will be not to adopt the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, leaving section fifteen stand, and then amend that section. In eighteen hundred and sixty-eight a mechanic's lien law was passed, which gave satisfaction; that law had provisions similar to the law which passed in eighteen hundred and seventy-four, which held that the contractor should be held to be the agent of the owner; and had that law been valid, no better law for the mechanics could be wanted, but the Supreme Court, disregarding the last section, say that the owner who pays the contractor in accordance with his contract, in the absence of any fraud or collusion, who, still being held liable, would be a violation of the contract. That would be impairing the obligations of a contract. Now, my own judgment would be, to take section one thousand one hundred and eighty-three of the Code, which enumerates other improvements besides those mentioned, and provides for a lien upon sufficient land for the use of the building. Now, I propose to vote against this amendment of the Committee of the Whole, in the hopes that section fifteen may be amended and made effective.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I am a fair mechanic myself; I have cut some timber, I know something about it, therefore I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. McConnell, Davis, Estee, and Brown.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the Convention refused to order the previous question by a vote of 43 ayes to 50 noes.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I think the amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole is imperfect. I don't know when it can be said that a mine is complete. This is a lien on the mine, building, etc., and is good for sixty days after it is completed. But this would be a very uncertain thing. Now, I had some experience in this matter when we were building the University. The contractor would have to wait until the expiration of the time allowed by law before he could get his money. He was subjected to great inconvenience. The laborers could not get their money because the contractor could not pay, and so they, themselves, were the sufferers by it. Now, I knew a case where a man put up a barn. He thought it was all right, and paid the full amount to the contractor. Afterwards a lien was filed for the full value of the building. The result was that there was a lawsuit, and the claimant took possession of the building. The owner was so indignant that he let it be sold, and built another barn. There ought to be some certainty about these liens, as well to the man who owns the property as to the man who does the work. Now, as to a mine. When can you say that a mine is finished? The work is continuous. Now, we should say here that there shall be a lien law; but as to the details, that should be left to the Legislature, so that when any mistake is made it can be corrected.

REMARKS OF MR. FARRELL.

MR. FARRELL. Mr. President: I was in hopes that this section would be adopted, as reported by the Committee of the Whole. I have no objections to the Herrington amendment, but, sir, I do object to this mode of offering amendments for the purpose of tearing this section to pieces. Now, sir, the principal object of this section is to place some responsibility upon the owner of the property. As the matter stands now there is no responsibility upon his part at all. He takes no interest in it so long as the building is completed and turned over to him. The responsibility for the whole matter is left in the hands of the architect. This will place such a responsibility upon the owner that he will take an interest in the matter, and see that the bills are paid. Before he makes a final settlement he can require the contractor to hand in receipted bills for all work done and material furnished. I hope the section will stand.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington.

Adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words, 'and the owners thereof,' in line seven, and in line eight strike out 'him,' and insert 'the owner.'"

MR. VAN DYKE. This is something like the maritime law. It holds the property for what is put into it. I wish to rest this upon the same basis as the Pennsylvania lien law. It is founded upon the maritime law. Now, the contractor engages men. These men have a personal claim against him, but not against the owner. They have a lien on the property. That is the proper manner in which to construct a lien law. I hope that amendment will be adopted. I do not see the justice of holding the owner responsible personally.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: If we are to adopt anything I desire that it shall be made practicable as far as possible, and I want to remove what I consider fatal objections. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda goes further to remove such objections than any other measure. I hope it will be adopted, for without it the section goes to an unreasonable extent—far beyond what any reasonable man ought to ask.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda.

Division was called for, and the amendment was adopted by a vote of 45 ayes to 38 noes.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert before 'building,' in line two, the word 'crop.'"

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: There have been efforts made here to protect laborers and artisans to the utmost extent of constitutional power. I now propose to protect those who work on ranches, that they may have a lien upon the crops which their labor helps to produce. It is as just as any of the others, and I hope it will be adopted.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

IN RELATION TO INSURANCE.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the Committee of the Whole in striking out section sixteen. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. The amount named in either a fire or marine insurance policy shall be deemed to be the true value of the property insured, for insurance purposes."

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I hope that will not be stricken out. That is one thing that is settled in all commercial affairs, and that is that the principal is responsible for the acts of an agent. If an insurance company sends out an agent to solicit insurance, and takes the money of an individual, I say the company should be responsible for the risk paid for. It has been the custom of insurance companies in this State to send out agents to solicit business, and obtain money from persons, and when the property is destroyed pay them perhaps thirty per cent. of the value of the property destroyed. I say it is an outrage, and I am in favor of adopting this section.

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: In addition to what has been said by the gentleman, I wish to say that I believe it is in the interest of the people of this State to adopt this section. We have been trying to protect the people against other combinations of capital, and yet, when we come to protecting them from the encroachments and swindles of these insurance companies, we are met with a refusal. Now, in regard to the objections urged the other day against this section, that it would encourage the destruction of property for the sake of the insurance, it seems to me the reverse would be the result. Now, it holds to reason, that insurance companies govern their actions according to the law, and if they knew that they would be compelled to pay the full amount of the policy on the destruction of the property, that very fact would induce them to adopt a system of self-protection, and take smaller risks than they do at present. Certainly, they would lay down the rule that property should not be taken for more than two thirds of the actual value. They would govern themselves accordingly. Now, sir, the rule at present seems to be this: The agents are paid a certain percentage, and it is to their interest to get all the money they can. That is an incentive for them to place a high valuation on a piece of property. Now, no man pays a premium on a policy, unless he believes he will receive the amount of that policy. But no sooner is the property destroyed than they begin to search for evidence to show that the property was not worth that amount; and whether they establish the fact or not, they nevertheless throw the homeless man into a controversy which he is not able to carry on with a powerful corporation, and he is compelled to take what the company offers him. I say that this provision is right and just, and ought to be adopted in the interest of the people of this State.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I am surprised that a gentleman of so much intelligence as the gentleman from Placer should get up here and advocate such a proposition as this. It is not in the interest of the poor man; it is not in the interest of the rich man, or of any other human being, because it is absolutely ridiculous. I propose to vote against it. Let us see what the result would be. When the property is large there are always two or three policies. Now which one of them is going to be the one? Now what is my friend going to do with this class of cases? Here I have a warehouse full of grain. I ship grain out of it every day. When it was full I got an insurance policy on it. I have insured it for ten thousand dollars, and they agree to pay ten thousand dollars if it is destroyed. Now I ship the grain away, day after day, until there is only one ton left. Now, if that one ton of grain should burn up, the insurance company, under this provision, would have to pay me ten thousand dollars for that one ton of grain. In other words, there would be a premium of nine thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars for me to burn up that grain. It would be putting a premium on dishonesty everywhere. It would be no protection to honest men; it would be an actual premium on crime, on incendiarism. I don't think we can afford to do it. For one I will support no such monstrous proposition. Insurance companies are just like everybody else. I make a bargain with them and, if there is no deception, in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred they pay me in full. But the trouble mostly arises in the insurance of stores. You have a store in the country, and when you get in a stock of goods have it insured. The stock probably runs down, and when low a fire occurs. Now, there is always a question of fact to be determined, as to what the value of the goods is. The owner is not entitled, by any rule of law or justice, to the full amount of that policy unless the goods are there. He is entitled to be paid for just what he lost and no more.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: As there is a thin house, I think it would be well to hold an evening session. I will offer the following:

Resolved, That when this Convention adjourns, it adjourn until seven o'clock this evening.

As there is some little difficulty in getting a full vote here, I call for the ayes and noes.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

RESOLUTION—THE DEBATES.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton have in their possession a full and complete stenographic report of the debates and proceedings of this Convention; and, whereas, it may be advisable, in the near future, for the State to possess itself of said report; and, whereas, in such an event, the lack of an official sanction by this body of said report would greatly impair its value and usefulness; therefore be it

Resolved, That the said E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton be and they are hereby declared the official reporters of the Constitutional Convention of California, held in the years eighteen hundred and seventy-eight and eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, subject to the following restrictions: First, in the event of the State desiring to possess itself of a long-hand copy of said report, it shall be the duty of the said Willis and Stockton, jointly or severally, to furnish the same to the State, and to receive therefor a compensation which shall not exceed ten dollars per day each for the time spent in taking said report, and twenty cents per folio for transcribing the same into long-hand. It shall be the further duty of the said Willis and Stockton, or either of them, in the event of the publication of said report by the State, to furnish each member of this Convention, if desired, a long-hand copy of his speeches and propositions, for revision and correction, before being submitted for publication. Unless the State shall hereafter purchase the said report of the proceedings and debates of this Convention, as above provided, no claim of the said Willis and Stockton, or of either of them, against the State for services already rendered in this Convention, shall have any binding effect or be other than void.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I have introduced this resolution because I desire these debates to be preserved in some definite and official manner. You will observe that the State is not bound to pay one dollar by this resolution. If the people of the State, through their representatives fresh from the people, should think these debates of sufficient importance to have them published, they will be in a form in which they will be sure of being written out as delivered in this body. I maintain that, notwithstanding the endeavor to traduce this body, the debates have been able, dignified, and respectful. I desire to preserve them, sir, for that reason. Already a prominent author on Constitutions, whose works are read from here from time to time, has sent here asking after the debates of the Convention. That demonstrates the importance of publishing the debates. They are a part of the history of this State now.

Mr. President, that these debates will be correct is evident in this Convention beyond a doubt. We have seen the press of this State garble the reports and even change the language of the articles. We have seen the Convention misrepresented on one page of the Union, and then, on turning over to the reports made by these gentlemen, we have found it correct. The Journals of this Convention have frequently been corrected from their reports. They have reported us correctly always, and have had the courage to stay here and take these reports in full, and they ought to be recognized as the official reporters.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I move that this be printed in the Journal, and made the special order for two o'clock to-morrow.

The motion prevailed.

AMENDMENT TO RULE.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: Yesterday I gave notice that I would offer an amendment to Rule Thirty-three. I now move to amend Rule Thirty-three so it shall read as follows:

"The previous question shall be put when demanded by five members, but shall only include the amendments then pending, and the section and article under consideration shall be open to further amendment."

Mr. President, I propose this amendment because, as the rule operates now, when the previous question is demanded, not only is all further debate cut off, but members who may have important amendments to offer, are completely prevented from doing so. It is bad enough to cut off debate, but the cutting off of all further amendments is simply a despotic curtailment of the rights of members who may happen to be in the minority. It simply involves a question of justice and fair dealing, and I trust the committee will amend the rule as I propose.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I question the propriety of making any change in the rules. If the rules had not been changed from the first, this Convention would have been through with its business. I hope the Convention will vote down this and all other amendments to the rules, and not take up time in considering them.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I do not desire to detain this Convention but a moment on this question. But I submit, if it were possible to prevent the captious moving of the previous question, I would be satisfied, and prefer that the rules should remain as they are; but we have witnessed a disposition to captiously move this question, and I am satisfied that this change ought to be made. It is the only safeguard against such provisions as we find with reference to this double-headed Supreme Court, and a few other provisions that we have yet remaining on our hands.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I take it for granted, of course, that a good deal of this reference to previous question is directed at me. I receive it in that kindly spirit in which it is given. I confess that, perhaps, in the eyes of some gentlemen upon this floor, a majority of this Convention having ordered the previous question to be put, in order to cut off some of their great views, has been very captious. It is always put to a majority of the Convention. It seems to me that we have been here debating and amending for five months, and it is time we did something. A majority of the Convention has a right at any time to order the previous question, and it is better to move the previous question than to be talked to death.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I hope that the rule will not be amended. For one, if I may be permitted to refer to myself in this honorable body, I feel like one who has been very nearly talked to death, and I am satisfied, sir, that upon the various propositions and amendments which may be offered in this body for consideration, nothing new will be said. There should be some limit to amendments as well as debate.

The amendment to the rule was rejected.

RESOLUTION—AN ADDRESS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I offer a resolution, at the request of others.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That a committee of nine be appointed to prepare and report to the Convention an address to the people of the State, carefully reviewing the Constitution presented by this Convention, and indicating the material changes made in the existing Constitution, and that such address be made public in such manner as this Convention shall direct.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I believe that there are two similar resolutions laying on the table. I move that temporarily be laid on the table.

MR. CROSS. There is no such resolution. There is one for a committee of five and one for a committee from judicial districts. I would like to have the subject disposed of. I understand that the Convention is likely to get through with its work by the close of next week. I am no stickler for that particular resolution, and offer it at the request of members. I move that the subject-matter of this resolution be taken up and disposed of.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: There have been two resolutions having the main object in view that this has, introduced and laid on the table. In my judgment, one of the resolutions is better calculated to reflect the wishes and desires of this Convention and advance the interests of this Constitution than that which has just been read. I think it would be proper, if we are going to take up this subject, to pay proper respect to the other resolutions, by taking them up and considering them all at the same time. I would suggest to the author of this resolution this morning, that he should suggest the taking up of all the resolutions, and considering them all at the same time.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: It seems to me that the number stated in this resolution is all right. The time is near at hand when our labors will be completed, and, considering the fact that there are material changes in the Constitution, I think it is a matter of great importance that the people should know as soon as possible what they are, and they can be better prepared to vote on our work. I believe that this resolution should be now adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I think it is no more than right that gentlemen who introduced resolutions on this subject before should have their resolutions considered in connection with this, and I move that the consideration of this question, involving all the resolutions, be made the special order for to-morrow, at ten o'clock. Then gentlemen can consult these various resolutions and inform themselves as to which they want.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alameda, to make this subject the special order for to-morrow, at ten A. M.

The motion prevailed.

MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the report on miscellaneous subjects. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out section sixteen. The Secretary will read the section.

INSURANCE POLICIES.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 16. The amount named in either a fire or marine insurance policy shall be deemed to be the true value of the property insured for insurance purposes."

REMARKS OF MR. WHITE.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I know that the insurance companies insure buildings in the most careless manner. They send out agents that take insurance for more than the property is worth. If a building is burned then they try to prove it was insured for more than its value, and in that way swindle the parties out of the policy. This is to guard against swindling, and I am surprised that a man of Mr. Estee's standing in the community would stand up here and say that it is a premium for swindling. It is a premium exactly the other way. They would stop taking insurance on buildings for more than they are worth. It is a fraud upon the public to allow men to go and take these immense premiums all over the country. If there is a loss they go into a lawsuit and refuse to pay. I know it. I have seen it in my own place. There is not a single case decided in our county without a lawsuit, and it costs a poor man more than it is worth for his insurance. A man will get perhaps half he claims at the end of a lawsuit. It is a regular system to fraud the country; and it was not a fair way of meeting this question to say that we who advocate this section are in favor of covering up fraud. It is no such thing. Fraud is fraud, and the law protects the insurance companies in that matter fully.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLIN.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope that this section will be retained so that it can be amended and cured of its defects. I am satisfied that the idea is a good one and intended to protect the people against a business which is bordering on fraud. I will take a case in Sacramento County, in the destruction of the County Hospital. Although the building was entirely destroyed, and it was well known that there was nothin the shape of incendiarism, still the companies refused to pay the county what the policies called for. They had been receiving the premiums all along, but when the property was destroyed, they offered them ten thousand dollars less than they had agreed that the property was worth. Now, sir, the whole system is managed in a loose and unsatisfactory manner. When a person insures his property he has a right to expect to get that money that the agreement names, when the property is destroyed. That is only a fair and reasonable proposition, and I am astonished to hear gentlemen raise so many objections to it. In answer to these objections, it is enough to say that the agreements are so drawn that the companies protect themselves. In regard to the objection raised by some, that it would cause incendiarism, I will state that the business is carried on now in the very manner that causes incendiarism. The new proposition would entirely destroy the cause for incendiarism. In the first place, the insurance agents that go about the country are incompetent to judge of the value of the property, and they make out insurance very largely in excess in the value of the property, whereas, a competent insurance agent would make it out one third less, and therefore a man would be no gainer by destroying the property. Now, if the companies knew that they were obliged to pay the amount named in the policy, they would be sure to employ competent agents, and never take a risk upon property unless they intended to pay the amount of the risk; the result would always be that the owner would take good care of his property. Now, the whole system, as carried on, is a fraud on the people, and gives an immense profit to the insurance companies. This profit is wrung from the working people generally. According to the report of eighteen hundred and seventy-four, there was a profit of over three millions of dollars on the insurance business of California. There is not a case where the property is totally destroyed but what there is a contest, and poor people are compelled to take whatever the companies are willing to give them. The whole system has been managed so as to oppress the people, and we desire now, for once, to say that whatever a company names in the policy shall be the amount that they will be obliged to pay; and let them, instead of insuring for the whole value, insure for that which they mean to pay, and not be receiving money as they now are under false pretenses.

MR. ESTEE. Did you ever know of the amount being more than what the owner asked?

MR. WELLIN. They have no right to insure for more than what the owner asks. I maintain that when they insure a building for the full amount that the owner asks, and he asks more than it is worth, they are offering him a premium to burn that building, and they are partners to the fraud. The agent who permits or guarantees an insurance for more than the property is worth, is offering a premium to a man to burn his property, and destroy his neighbor's property alongside.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I suppose that we all understand that a policy of insurance is a contract, and that it takes two parties to make a contract. A man has property and he wants to get it insured, and he goes to an insurance office and states the value of his property, whatever he may see fit to believe that it is worth. Now, the insurers, they examine the property, and they may say that it is worth so much, or that it is worth less; but if a man overrates his property, I do not see why we should put in a constitutional provision to assist him in perpetrating a fraud. If he does overestimate his property willfully and intentionally, it is a fraud. No man is bound to get his property insured for more than it is worth. I do not suppose there is scarcely any prudent man that gets his property insured for its full value. Generally some of the property is saved before it is totally destroyed, and in that case he gets such damages as he has sustained. Now, this proposition, as offered here, might be operative as to real estate to a certain extent, and that is, that the value of the property fixed in the policy in regard to real estate could be easily established. But in the case of personal property it would not work. Suppose a man had a store full of goods, and insures them at a fair valuation. In the course of three months he sells out one half of the goods, or the whole of them, and the premises are burned down. According to a strict interpretation of this section, in that case the amount named in the policy would be the amount that the company must pay. The insurer could not come in and show that he had disposed of the property, but would have to pay the whole amount named in the policy. This provision does not except even cases of fraud. It ought not to be in the Constitution.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I would judge from the amount of talk in this chamber, that this debate is not very interesting, therefore I demand the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Huestis, Moreland, Larue, and Tully.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I would like to ask unanimous leave to send up a proposition.

The main question was ordered.

Upon concurring in the recommendation of the committee in striking out section sixteen, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Filcher, Barton, Tinnin, Burt, and Kelly.

The roll was called, and the Convention concurred by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment to section seventeen.

TERMS OF OFFICERS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 17. When the term of any officer or Commissioner is not provided for in this Constitution, the term of such officer or Commissioner may be declared by law; and, if not so declared, such officer or Commissioner shall hold his position as such officer or Commissioner during the pleasure of the authority making the appointment; but in no case shall such term exceed four years."

Concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in recommendation of the Committee of the Whole, to strike out section eighteen. The Secretary will read the section.

HOLDING OF REAL ESTATE.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 18. No persons other than citizens, or those who have declared their intentions to become such, shall hereafter acquire or own, either by purchase or otherwise, real property in this State contrary to this provision—such property shall escheat to the State; nor shall any lands in this State be held in trust for any alien; but the creation of any trust in lands for the benefit of an alien shall at once escheat the land to the State."

The recommendation of the Committee of the Whole to strike out the section was concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the new section adopted by the Committee of the Whole on motion of Mr. Joyce.

HOURS OF LABOR.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work on all public works."

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: Upon reading the proceedings had upon last Monday in the Convention, you must have been reminded of some early scenes of school life when the master was absent, and the pupils availed themselves of their privilege of putting an interpretation upon liberty, and construed it to mean license, and forthwith proceeded to prove their faith by their works, in singing songs, throwing books, and turning hand springs over the benches. Mr. President, this is a faint outline of the scene we had last Monday; but now that we have got down to sober work I hope that we will correct the mistakes and blunderings into which we fell on that excited occasion. This new section provides that eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work. Now, Mr. President, suppose that our Granger friends here should come in with an independent section declaring that one thousand five hundred pounds of barley should be a ton. Would we laugh at them? or would we accede to their proposition and put it into the Constitution? Suppose we should do it? what would be the result? Who would be benefited? Would the Granger be benefited? I think not. The proposition is too plain for argument, and this section is precisely a parallel case. Eight hours shall constitute a day's work. What is a day's work, and what is a day's work worth? You may ask the same question in regard to the one thousand five hundred pounds and the ton of barley. It depends upon the market. If eight hours be worth two dollars, by the same rule that all values are determined, by the law of supply and demand, ten hours would be worth two dollars and fifty cents a day. Now, who is benefited by this declaration that eight hours shall be a day's work? Let us see what the result would be. The contractor who can afford to pay two dollars for eight hours work could afford to pay two dollars and fifty cents for ten hours work. The idler who desired to call eight hours a day's work and get two dollars would be satisfied. But the industrious man, perhaps, would prefer to work ten hours and get two dollars and fifty cents. Now, does any gentleman assume that one thousand five hundred pounds of barley is worth as much as two thousand pounds, or that eight hours work is worth as much ten hours; or does he assume that it will command as much practically? If he does, I pity his intelligence. The truth is, Mr. President, that there is nothing in this proposition, but claptrap and buncombe to catch the silly. The time was, I believe, when this cry of eight hours for a day's work was started and advocated in good faith by simple minded ignorant men; but every man of intelligence knows that labor like every other commodity has a value that is determined, not by statutory regulations by any means. Statutory regulations cannot fix the value on anything. It is that greater and higher law of supply and demand that fixes the value of everything, labor included. The time was when the cry was made in good faith, but I venture to say that few to-day are so ignorant as to accept it in good faith. Surely no gentleman on this floor can accept it in good faith, because he knows that ten hours is worth more than eight, and will command more. I hope that we will put no provision in this Constitution that we are making that will bring reproach and contempt upon it. I expect, Mr. President, to defend the Constitution that we shall here make before the people, because I believe that it will be an improvement upon the old one; that it will save a large amount of money to the people of California; and I do not desire to have it thrown in my face when I am upon the stump defending this Constitution, that we have in certain provisions that are beneath the intelligence of any respectable body of men. I do not desire to have it thrown at me that we were incompetent to make a Constitution, and that we have proven that fact by inserting in it propositions that are absurd on their face, and that could not meet the approval of any man of intelligence.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I would ask the gentleman whether he is not aware that this is the law of the State to-day according to the Codes.

MR. CAPLES. The gentleman is a lawyer, and I presume he is correct when he says that it is the law, and I avail myself of the occasion to say that it is a very silly law, and that it has nothing in it but buncombe.

MR. LARUE. Mr. President: I move to amend section nineteen by striking out the word "public" and inserting the word "State." I have no objections to its applying to State work, but in public work of some kinds, such as the building of levees, roads, and bridges, it is often necessary that they should put in a full day's work. On works conducted by the State, I have no objection, but otherwise I think it is not proper.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will not be adopted, and that the section and the principle involved will not be restricted. Now, sir, I dislike to trespass upon the patience of this Convention, but I feel it necessary to raise my voice here on behalf of labor. This measure, sir, ought to be adopted, and so far as this Convention is able to do so, without pretending to interfere with the private contracts of man, we ought to assert that humane, liberal, and progressive idea that mankind were not made like the beasts of the field, to be brutalized and degraded by excessive labor. It has that effect, sir. Reasonable labor, with time for improvement and relaxation, and for tired nature to rebound and be restored, is what is needed. It is that odious class system, by which one portion of mankind are constantly reduced to the position of serfs while another portion live luxuriously, against which we protest. Now, sir, a constitutional provision of this sort, relates to Courts and all those public matters over which the State does have control. Eight hours labor is enough for any human being, and I desire to see the time, and I believe that the liberal judgment of those who reflect most upon this subject, is to the same effect—that all our efforts should be directed towards producing in this world more laborers and fewer loafers.

REMARKS OF MR. JOYCE.

MR. JOYCE. Mr. President: I was not much surprised to find the gentleman from Sacramento take the position he did, in fact I was very much surprised that the gentleman did not bring in the Chinaman. I was waiting to hear him come to the conclusion that the American laborer should be brought down to the level with the lowest laborer on the face of God's footstool. I expected he was going to show us how much better it would be if the laborer could work twenty hours a day instead of ten. Now, if there is anything that is going to relieve labor and advance the wages of labor, it is a reduction of the hours of labor, and if we do not begin with the public works I do not see how we can accomplish anything. This does not in way apply to the farmers, and they must not be hoodwinked by any argument that this system of labor extends to farm labor. If any man can show us where it extends to farming, I will back down; it simply refers to public works. Now, another reason why I should be opposed to the amendment is simply this: Every man on this floor knows that there is a thousand dollars laid out in doing public work in San Francisco to every one that is laid out in doing State work. This will be a great favor to the laborers of this State. We have sufficient proof that public work has been done to better advantage by the day than what it has by contract. We have shown that public work is done in most of the Eastern States by the day. It is done better, and it is done cheaper, and the work gives better satisfaction. Even when Boss Tweed, in New York, was stealing more than two and one half per cent. of the public funds, the work was generally done well. Twenty-five per cent. does not more than average the amount of stealing that is done under the public contract system. Now, if we had our City Hall done by the day, it would not have to be done half a dozen times over. If we had the street work all done by the day, it would not have to be done twice in one year. I say that if there is anything to be done for the laborer, it is by reducing the hours of labor.

REMARKS OF MR. CONDON.

MR. CONDON. Mr. President: I cannot afford to let this question pass without expressing a few thoughts upon experience and study upon this great and important question. I am surprised, sir, to hear the expressions made on this floor in regard to this all important matter; a matter, sir, that is not local in its character, but which, sir, has engaged the attention of some of the greatest minds, not alone in the United States, but in Europe. A reduction of the hours of labor is neither a new nor novel question, and, sir, it is one of those great overshadowing questions which it is safe to say will yet, not alone confine itself to eight hours, but eventually come down to six or less. The provision adopted has been wisely restricted in reference to labor on farms, and for private individuals. "Eight hours shall constitute a day's labor on all public works." It has been thoroughly demonstrated, and I defy contradiction, as a mechanic, that to-day any workingman can accomplish more in a week than he could three years ago in one week. That is a fact probably unknown to a majority of men, and especially to farmers on this floor. But this is a fact, Mr. President. That eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work is one of those great problems which I was of the impression that this Convention would heartily endorse. There is not a man, or rather a member of this Convention, who has not on all past occasions presented to the people of this State their avowed intention to redress the wrongs of the workingmen; but unfortunately for them, and unfortunately for them who placed them in power, on every occasion they have been untrue to the trust reposed in them by this very people. And, sir, it is too true that they no longer will be led to the belief that these men are calculated to be real reformers in these matters. They themselves have inaugurated a party which in principle being reform, and not this idea of preaching reform before election and immediately after election repudiate these very principles, and these very promises they had made to the people. These men cannot forget these facts. Men who have occupied high political positions in this State; men who have been before the people and asking for their support and pledged themselves on all occasions to these principles; men here on this floor who in the halls of Congress raised their voices in favor of these propositions, and especially the eight hour law; I would like to hear them now stand upon this floor and speak out their minds, and give expression to what they have reiterated on these past occasions to-day, when this very question is in jeopardy of defeat in this Convention. My friend, Mr. Hager, well I remember when he was elected to the United States Senate, when he was called before the mechanics of San Francisco, there he pledged himself to these reform measures, and particularly to that very plank which is before this Convention at the present time. He was true to his pledge on that occasion; so was Mr. Casserly, and I am sorry—probably I am a little too fast—that they come not to the defense of this proposition. I hope they will, because they have given this matter study. I hope this Convention will adopt the proposition without any change, and that they will reject the amendment offered by the gentleman.

REMARKS OF MR. CASSERLY.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: This question of the hours of labor is undoubtedly a very broad one, and upon which a good deal may be said from one standpoint, and a good deal may be said from a different standpoint. I must confess that I listened with some regret, not unmingled with surprise, to the remarks of my friend Doctor Caples, the delegate from Sacramento. I think I have hardly ever listened to him, however much I might disagree with his conclusions, without learning something that I did not know before; and therefore it is that I deprecate, in the case of a gentleman as accomplished and intelligent as he is, the spirit in which he seems to have couched his remarks. Now, sir, this question of the hours of labor is undoubtedly one to which I have given a good deal of attention, and wherever I have been, in public station or in private station, no man can say truthfully of me that I have ever failed in the duty that I owe to the intelligent working people of this country in regard to the hours of labor, or any other idea which interested them deeply. It is not my habit, sir, to make great promises before election and afterwards to give a very small and trifling performance. I believe, sir, that it may be said, without fear of successful contradiction, that the best judgment of the enlightened men who have studied this subject is, that eight hours is a legitimate day's work for a single man. I do not refer now to mere theories, but I tell this Convention what the greatest private employer of labor that ever lived, who at one time had as many as sixty thousand men in his employment, says. He has left behind him the statement that the result of his experience was that working your men eight hours a day, Mr. President, you get more work and better work out of them than if you worked them up to nine or ten hours. I can remember the time when Mr. Van Buren shortened the day's work in the yards of the United States from twelve hours to ten, and I can remember perfectly well hearing, in my father's house, what a disturbance it was thought that would create, and how the employers objected to it, still the law went into effect, and after awhile the private employers followed the example of the greatest employer in the country, which is the country. Everything went along and the employers were not hurt. They found that the work was better done than under the old system. I am perfectly convinced that eight hours for a day's work is the true system both for the employer and for the workmen who are in his employment. It is a very remarkable fact, sir, that the views of the workingmen are thoroughly sustained by the views of the scientific men who have studied this subject thoroughly—especially the scientific men of England and of France—and they have ascertained and determined that eight hours is a proper day's work for a workingman, and under the circumstances, I do not see any occasion for jeering at the views of the workingmen upon this floor. If they are wrong, beat them by fair argument, but I confess that I have but very little patience with the disposition to laugh down a great question like this, which interests so many, by that kind of argument which is no argument whatever. Now, sir, the English gentleman to whom I have referred, was no sentimentalist, far from it; he died worth thirty millions of dollars, you can judge for yourselves what that man's experience is worth. There are two views of this subject; one is the view of the average employer, and that is to get out of his men all the work that he can during the working hours; the other is the view which a great Government should take in dealing with the question, namely, to have the workingman work just so many hours as will maintain his productive powers to the highest point and for the longest average of his life; that is the proposition, and gentlemen should look at it as statesmen and not in the narrow light of prejudice. Sir, whether this proposition fails or succeeds, I shall feel that the Convention, in dismissing it in the spirit in which it seems disposed to dismiss it, will make a very great mistake. But whatever the Convention does, I shall not cease to uphold, in my humble way, my idea of the workingman's day—eight hours for sleep, eight hours for rest, and eight hours for work. That is all I have to say on this question.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I did not propose to say anything upon this question. This is a question I have taken a deep and lively interest in. In eighteen hundred and sixty-seven-sixty-eight we passed a law as it is in the State of California. I indorsed it very cordially, and I must say, as the gentleman who has just preceded me has remarked, that eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep, and eight hours for rest, is what every American citizen should foster and encourage. I was instrumental in having such a bill passed, so that a man could return to the bosom of his family and devote eight hours to recreation.

MR. CAPLES. Has the gentleman ever tried it on his own farm?

MR. BIGGS. I propose to do so.

MR. CAPLES. Do you propose to work your men eight hours?

MR. BIGGS. I propose to work my men from sun to sun upon the farm, and I propose to pay them for the additional hours of labor. Any man has a right to make a private contract for his labor on the farm. This does not have reference to the work on the farm.

MR. CAPLES. That is my position.

MR. BIGGS. God bless the Workingmen of San Francisco! Stand by your guns! You never stood by a nobler proposition. [Laughter.] When you come to defend such a measure as this I am with you. You mean what you say, and stand by it. I want to see every gentleman placed upon the record upon this question. In my harvest field I work all the hours I can. When the tax Collector comes to my men they say: "Go to the old man and he will pay my taxes." I work them whenever necessary, and pay them well; but I think eight hours is sufficient for men to work. How long do you work here? Do you put in eight hours a day?

MR. CAPLES. I work, myself, pretty near fifteen hours a day.

MR. BIGGS. Yes, I do it, and I have done as much manual labor as the gentleman from Sacramento. I propose to do it yet. Whenever any gentleman is not disposed to do that, I cannot look upon him as a friend to the laboring class. You will find about fifteen or seventeen newspapers in the corners where they sleep. I take care of them, and their interest is my interest. I am the friend of the laboring classes, and I do not care what this Convention does. But I propose that my voice shall be heard in advocacy of the interests of the laboring classes, and eight hours is sufficient labor. Doctor Caples, I am surprised at you. [Laughter.]

MR. CAPLES. You represent the laboring classes. Will you tell us how many hours you work your men?

MR. BIGGS. Perhaps from eight to fifteen hours.

MR. MORELAND. How much do you pay them?

MR. BIGGS. I pay from two to four dollars a day. I pay better than most men, and I have a better class of men. How much do you pay your chambermaids? You work them day and night and pay them a dollar a day. [Laughter and applause.] You want to grind down labor. You want to work them twelve hours a day. I can say to the gentleman that whenever it is necessary to work in the night my men are ready and willing to go. I have no need of asking them. I hope that the Convention will put this in the organic law, that eight hours shall be a legal day's work upon all public works. You want to send your amendments in to load it down and kill it. I have seen too much of these amendments. I want to take it just as it come from that committee, and I am going to stand or fall by the same. For God's sake, let that strike the feeling of sympathy which rests in your bosom [laughter], to protect and relieve the burden of the working men, and when you go home your constituents will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." [Laughter and applause.]

MR. ESTEE. And may the Lord have mercy on my poor soul.

MR. REYNOLDS. I move we sing the doxology.

MR. ESTEE. A-men!

Messrs. Hunter, Brown, Holmes, Dean, and Larue demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The amendment of Mr. Larue was rejected.

Upon concurring with the committee, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Joyce, Condon, Grace, and White.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I offer a new section.

ELECTIONS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. Elections of the officers provided for by this Constitution, except at the election in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, shall be held on the even numbered years, next before the expiration of their respective terms. The terms of such officers shall commence on the first Monday in January next following their election."

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I think that proposition is understood, and I offer this amendment to bring the Convention to a vote upon the question.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I would like to call the attention of the Convention to one matter in connection with the proposition. I see that it provides that the terms of officers shall commence on the first Monday in January next following their election. In years past we have found that the first Monday was an unfortunate day in this respect. It very often fell on New Years' day. Now, generally people like to be with their families on holidays. Then it is the next day after Sunday. I think if we were to fix the day for the terms of these officers to commence on the first Tuesday after the first Monday, and that the Legislature should convene on the Tuesday after the first Monday, it would be a better time for the terms to commence, and for the Legislature to convene. Otherwise we will have the same trouble that we had under the old Constitution, and probably at an early day propositions will be made to change the time of the meeting of the Legislature, as they did before. The result was that changing and making a different time for the commencement of the Legislature and the term of office, that there was one month came between the meeting of the Legislature and the time that the Judges took their places, and applications could be made for an increase of their salaries before they took their offices. I hope therefore that all of the departments of the Government will be changed so that the terms will commence on the first Tuesday after the first Monday. Some of them have been so changed. We had better have uniformity, and I propose as an amendment here to make it the first Tuesday after the first Monday. Then I hope we will make all the other propositions conform to that time. I send up that amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'Monday,' and insert 'first Tuesday after the first Monday in January.'"

Adopted.

The section as amended was adopted.

OFFICE SEEKING.

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: I offer a new section.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. —. As every freeman, to preserve his independence (if without an estate), ought to have some profession, calling, trade, or farm, whereby he may honestly subsist, there can be no necessity for nor use in establishing offices of profit, the usual effect of which are dependence and servility unbecoming freemen in the possessors or expectants, creating faction, contention, and discord among the people; but if any man is called into public service, to the prejudice of his private affairs, he has a right to a reasonable compensation; and whenever an office, through increase of fees, or otherwise, becomes so profitable as to occasion many to apply for it, the profits ought to be lessened by the Legislature."

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: I hope this section will be adopted. Many of the members of this Convention appear to think that we shall be unable to secure officers to carry on our Government in the future if we should reduce the salaries from those established over a quarter of a century ago, when money did not have one half the purchasing power it has to day. Still, I think if the present hard times and shrinkage of values continue a few years longer, the people will be willing to reduce salaries and fees so they will correspond to the present value of money. I only want to live until I may be in some nominating convention when there will not be more than a dozen applicants for every office there is to fill. If that time should ever come, I should expect that the millennium was near at hand, and that the angel Gabriel was about to blow his horn. This section now offered is found in the Constitution of the Government which was once complimented by the great Frenchman, Dr. Tocqueville, as being the best, cheapest, and purest on the face of God's earth. I think the proposed section enunciates a correct principle, and should be incorporated in this Constitution. I trust it will meet the approval of this Convention and be adopted.

MR. ESTEE. I would like to ask the gentleman if he has examined the Constitution of Missouri? Can he find that in the Missouri Constitution?

MR. McCONNELL. No, sir.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Messrs. Dean, Hunter, Brown, Larue, and White demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon ordering the article engrossed for a second reading, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. O'Sullivan, Joyce, Kenny, Wellin, and Vacquerel.

NOTICE.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that, on to-morrow, February twenty-first, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the article on miscellaneous subjects was ordered engrossed for a second reading.

PREAMBLE AND BILL OF RIGHTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on preamble and bill of rights, on second reading.

Following is the article, as engrossed for second reading:

PREAMBLE AND DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

PREAMBLE.

We, the People of the State of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure and perpetuate its blessings, do establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing, and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

SEC. 3. The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land.

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be guaranteed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness or juror on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require its suspension.

SEC. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted. Witnesses shall not be unreasonably detained, or confined in any room where criminals are actually imprisoned.

SEC. 7. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but in civil actions three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. A trial by jury may be waived in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, by the consent of both parties, in open Court expressed, and in civil cases by the consent of the parties, signified in such manner as may be prescribed by law. In civil cases, and cases of misdemeanor, the jury may consist of any number less than twelve that the parties may agree upon in open Court.

SEC. 8. Offenses heretofore required to be prosecuted by indictment shall be prosecuted by indictment or by information, after commitment and examination by a Magistrate, as may be prescribed by law; but a Grand Jury shall be drawn and summoned at least once a year in each county.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact. Indictments found or information laid for publications in newspapers shall be tried in the county where such newspapers have their publication office, or in the county where the party alleged to be libeled resided at the time of the alleged publication, unless the place of trial shall be changed for good cause.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right to freely assemble together to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by this State in time of peace, and no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner to be prescribed by law.

SEC. 13. In criminal prosecutions, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial; to have the process of the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and to appear and defend, in person and with counsel. No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. The Legislature shall have power to provide for the taking, in the presence of the party accused and his counsel, of depositions of witnesses in criminal cases, other than cases of homicide, when there is reason to believe that the witness, from inability or other causes, will not attend at the trial.

SEC. 14. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made to or paid into Court for the owner, and no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation other than municipal until full compensation therefor be first made in money or ascertained and paid into Court for the owner, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, unless a jury be waived, as in other civil cases in a Court of record, as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in cases of fraud, nor in civil actions for torts, except in cases of willful injury to person or property; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligations of contracts shall ever be passed.

SEC. 17. Foreigners of the white race, or of African descent, eligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, while bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State.

SEC. 19. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue, but on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 20. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid or comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 21. No special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the Legislature; nor shall any citizen, or class of citizens, be granted privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not be granted to all citizens.

SEC. 22. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise.

SEC. 23. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

SEC. 24. No property qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote or hold office.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: If it is in order I will move that the reading of the bill of rights be suspended unless called for by somebody.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman can move to suspend the rules and dispense with the reading of the article by sections, and have the article read by its title.

MR. WYATT. I make that motion.

MR. VAN DYKE. A printed copy of the engrossed article is on the desk of each member.

The motion prevailed.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Preamble and bill of rights, as amended in Convention, and ordered engrossed for a second reading, January twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine."

Digitized by Google

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section three.

THE NATION.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section: 'and the State of California is an inseparable part of the American Union.'"

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: This Convention has been very severely criticized for its action in regard to this part of the bill of rights, and I think somewhat unjustly, but for the purpose of setting the members right—and I have no doubt that they will be glad of the opportunity—I offer this amendment. It will then read: "The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, and the State of California is an inseparable part of the American Union." I do not think there can be any objection to that, I think it will give the Convention an opportunity of placing itself right. It has been misunderstood by some of the press of the State.

MR. LARKIN. Is there any question about California being in the Union?

MR. VAN DYKE. No, sir.

MR. LARKIN. Then let us not raise it.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I was in hopes, after we had had this matter under advisement so long, and so much having been said against it, that this would prove to be entirely satisfactory. Herein we recognize the Constitution of the United States as the supreme law of the land. We may wish [confusion, hisses, and calls of "louder"]—gentlemen, I object. It is supposed there are no monkeys in this respectable audience. We may wish that there shall not be any sickness, we may wish that no plague of any description shall ever visit this country, we may ardently desire that there shall not be an insurrection here, but for us in this body assembled to make an assertion that such should not be, would simply be preposterous. It is understood that the members of this Convention ardently desire to perpetuate the American Union. They ardently wish never to see the dark clouds of war rise upon the American horizon. They would regret exceedingly that such should ever occur. Greatly, I am impressed, would every member of this body regret that any such calamity should attend posterity. But notwithstanding all this, we do not know what may transpire hereafter. We live not only in a land of sunshine and shadows, but we live in a world and in an age of convulsions, where mighty changes take place, and as to what changes may occur we cannot tell; and for us to take a position of this description, declaring that under no circumstances whatever could this be made separate—that under no circumstances whatever could this be a separate part of the Union—would be taking a position that if we were tyrannized upon, that if the iron heel of an oppressor should come down upon us, we would lose our human right; that we do not possess the rights of freemen, that we do not possess those natural rights found in the great Declaration of Independence. [Applause.] Now I am impressed with the truth of this remark, that there is more involved in what is presented before us than we may suppose. We do not wish to see a separation. We wish nothing of the kind, but how do we know that such shall never be in this world where men are but human—where men with power have become oppressors, where what has been may be again, and where things run in circles. We know that we have got oppression at Washington. We wish for reform and we hope never to see difficulties. Things are improving, but we do not know these facts which we assert. [Cries of "louder."] I will try and make you hear. You have to stamp to keep from hearing. You do not want to hear, and that is what is the matter with you. If you will listen, perhaps you will learn something in regard to American freedom. These are principles which concern our country. These are things which concern posterity, and we wish to see the tree of liberty rise still higher in its grandeur, and its lofty branches overspread the country; but we do not wish to bind down posterity by anything here that may, in the future, crush the heel of the giant upon posterity. We wish nothing of the kind. I think this amendment is entirely unnecessary. It embraces something which is not called for, and would have a tendency to bind future generations and make them swear to something which they could not support. I am in hopes that this body will sustain the report as it is before this house.

Messrs. West, Van Dyke, Campbell, Hunter, and Moreland demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Van Dyke, Schell, Brown, Freeman, and Stuart.

The roll was called, and the amendment adopted by the following vote:

DEXECUTIVE EPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The next article is that on executive department. The following is the article, as engrossed for second reading:

ARTICLE V.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The supreme executive power of this State shall be vested in a chief magistrate, who shall be styled the Governor of the State of California.

Digitized by Google

SEC. 2. The Governor shall be elected by the qualified electors, at the time and places of voting for members of the Assembly, and shall hold his office four years from and after the Monday after the first Tuesday in January subsequent to his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

SEC. 3. No person shall be eligible to the office of Governor who has not been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this State five years next preceding the election, and attained the age of twenty-five years at the time of said election.

SEC. 4. The returns of every election for Governor shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of government, directed to the Speaker of the Assembly, who shall, during the first week of the session, open and publish them in the presence of both Houses of the Legislature. The person having the highest number of votes shall be Governor; but, in case any two or more have an equal and the highest number of votes, the Legislature shall, by joint vote of both Houses, choose one of said persons so having an equal and the highest number of votes for Governor.

SEC. 5. The Governor shall be Commander-in-Chief of the militia, the army and navy of this State.

SEC. 6. He shall transact all executive business with the officers of government, civil and military, and may require information, in writing, from the officers of the executive department, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

SEC. 7. He shall see that the laws are faithfully executed.

SEC. 8. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have power to fill such vacancy by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Legislature, or at the next election by the people.

SEC. 9. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Legislature by proclamation, stating the purposes for which he has convened it, and when so convened it shall have no power to legislate on any subjects other than those specified in the proclamation, but may provide for the expenses of the session and other matters incidental thereto.

SEC. 10. He shall communicate by message to the Legislature, at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

SEC. 11. In case of a disagreement between the two Houses with respect to the time of adjournment, the Governor shall have power to adjourn the Legislature to such time as he may think proper; provided, it be not beyond the time fixed for the meeting of the next Legislature.

SEC. 12. No person shall, while holding any office under the United States or this State, exercise the office of Governor, except as hereinafter expressly provided.

SEC. 13. There shall be a seal of this State, which shall be kept by the Governor, and used by him officially, and shall be called "The Great Seal of the State of California."

SEC. 14. All grants and commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of The People of the State of California, sealed with the great seal of the State, signed by the Governor, and countersigned by the Secretary of State.

SEC. 15. A Lieutenant-Governor shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the Governor; and his term of office and his qualifications of eligibility shall also be the same. He shall be President of the Senate, but shall only have a casting vote therein. If, during a vacancy of the office of Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor shall be impeached, displaced, resign, die, or become incapable of performing the duties of his office, or be absent from the State, the President pro tem. of the Senate shall act as Governor until the vacancy be filled or the disability shall cease. The Lieutenant-Governor shall be disqualified from holding any other office, except as specially provided in this Constitution, during the term for which he shall have been elected.

SEC. 16. In case of the impeachment of the Governor, or his removal from office, death, inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, resignation, or absence from the State, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the Lieutenant-Governor for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease. But when the Governor shall, with the consent of the Legislature, be out of the State in time of war, at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue Commander-in-Chief of all the military force in the State.

SEC. 17. A Secretary of State, a Controller, a Treasurer, an Attorney-General, and a Surveyor-General shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, and whose term of office shall be the same as the Governor.

SEC. 18. The Secretary of State shall keep a correct record of the official acts of the legislative and executive departments of the government, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all matters relative thereto, before either branch of the Legislature, and shall perform such other duties as may be assigned him by law.

SEC. 19. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Surveyor-General, shall each, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected, which compensation is hereby fixed for the following officers for the two terms next ensuing the adoption of this Constitution, as follows: Governor, six thousand dollars per annum; Lieutenant-Governor, the same per diem as may be provided by law for the Speaker of the Assembly, to be allowed only during the session of the Legislature; the Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Surveyor-General, three thousand dollars each per annum; said compensation to be in full for all services by them respectively rendered in any official capacity or employment whatsoever during their respective terms of office; provided, however, that the Legislature, after the expiration of the terms hereinbefore mentioned, may by law diminish the compensation of any or all of said officers, but in no case shall have the power to increase the same above the sums hereby fixed by this Constitution. No salary shall be authorized by law for clerical service, in any office provided for in this article, exceeding sixteen hundred dollars per annum for each clerk employed. The Legislature may, in its discretion, abolish the office of Surveyor-General; and none of the officers hereinbefore named shall receive for their own use any fees or perquisites for the performance of any official duty.

SEC. 20. The Governor shall not, during his term of office, be elected a Senator to the Senate of the United States.

RELATIVE TO CHINESE.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article relative to Chinese, on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read:

ARTICLE —.

CHINESE.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall prescribe necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens, who are or who may become vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in the foregoing shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such police laws or other regulations as it may deem necessary.

SEC. 2. No corporation now existing or hereafter formed under the laws of this State, shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, employ, directly or indirectly, in any capacity, any Chinese or Mongolian. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this provision.

SEC. 3. No Chinese shall be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work, except in punishment for crimes.

SEC. 4. No person who is not eligible to become a citizen of the United States shall be permitted to settle in this State after the adoption of this Constitution.

SEC. 5. No aliens ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall be permitted to catch fish in any waters under the jurisdiction of this State; nor to purchase, lease, own, or hold any real property in this State, and all contracts of conveyance or lease of real property to any such aliens shall be void.

SEC. 6. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared herein to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. Asiatic coolieism, being a form of human slavery, is forever prohibited in this State, and all contracts for coolie labor are null and void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or their location within prescribed portions of those limits; and it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of this article as a part of the Constitution.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I move to strike out section four. It is a contradiction of terms. It is in direct conflict with the laws of the United States and the treaty-making power.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope the section will not be stricken out. It has been thoroughly discussed, and the Convention has decided to retain it, and I do not think it ought to be altered at this late day.

MR. WELLIN. I call for the ayes and noes.

Ayes and noes by Messrs. Condon, Brown, Caples, and Webster.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I am and have been a consistent enemy of Chinese immigration. I have been for twenty-seven years denouncing this curse, and I am ready to go as far as any other gentleman here within the limits of the power we have. But I do not propose to sustain a proposition that is in direct conflict with Federal authority. I recognize the fact that the Constitution of the United States, and the treaties made in pursuance thereof, are the supreme law of the land, and for that reason I shall vote to strike it out.

REMARKS OF MR. FREUD.

MR. FREUD. Mr. President: I shall not detain the Convention a moment. I most sincerely hope that nothing that is contained in this article will be removed by the Convention at this late day. The most radical features of this article have already been removed. It is possible that the bill now before the President may not be signed. If it should be signed, it is possible that it may be repealed at some future day. There is nothing in this that I can see that is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States; if so, I should not vote for it. I hope that this whole article will pass as it has passed on previous occasions; it is too late now to change it.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I am opposed to this whole article, and I hope it will be stricken out.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I should be glad to vote for this whole article, but I have, on two or three occasions, taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and there are some of these sections I cannot vote for.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President; I wish to express my dissent from the doctrines here. The first section I have no particular objections to, because it applies to all alike, but as to the others, they are in conflict with Federal laws and the Federal Constitution. I have taken an oath, over and over again, to support that Constitution, and I am not going to violate it.

MR. BARBOUR. Then does not the bill now before Congress violate the treaty and the Constitution?

MR. SHAFTER. No, sir; for the reason that the Government has always the right of self-protection; but the State has no such authority, because she is bound by the authority of the United States. I am opposed to it; and no Constitution in violation of Federal authority shall ever receive my sanction. It has been thrust into the Convention to put those who were in favor of doing anything they legitimately could to remedy the Chinese evil, into a false position, and then charging them with being in favor of fostering Chinese immigration.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I think this question has been fully discussed before, and I move the previous question on the article.

THE PRESIDENT. You cannot, because there is an amendment pending.

MR. LARKIN. Then I move the previous question on the amendment.

Seconded by Messrs. Condon, Joyce, Holmes, and Larue.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried, by a vote of 70 ayes to 20 noes.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out section four. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the section was stricken out by the following vote:

AYES.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move to strike out section five.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out section five.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: Section five reads: "No aliens ineligible to become citizens of the United States shall be permitted to catch fish in any waters under the jurisdiction of this State; nor to purchase, lease, own, or hold any real property in this State," etc. Mr. President, that means, first, that those Chinamen who are here now shall not be permitted to pursue an ordinary calling by which they may earn a living; and, second, that they are not to be permitted to hold real estate. In other words, no Chinaman in this State can rent a house or a room to live in. Everybody knows that such a provision could not be enforced; that the Chinese who are here must live; that they must sleep somewhere. If not allowed to support themselves, the people would have to do it. If they live in any of the towns, they must have houses to sleep in; they cannot sleep in the fields. That section seems to me to be utterly heartless. It would be a disgrace to our State to pass it. The Chinese came here under treaty stipulations, and under the law of nations; the adoption of such a section, so grossly in violation of the terms of the treaty, would be considered a just cause for war, if any effect were given to it. It is contrary to the most enlightened spirit of the age, and would be a disgrace to our boasted American civilization. And, sir, for one, I utterly reject the idea that a section of that kind would meet or remedy the evil we labor under. It would turn all civilized people against us everywhere. It would show to the world that we are below these very people we would proscribe, in point of civilization; these people whom we call heathens. If we cannot control our own prejudices and feelings enough to act in a civilized manner, we are incapable of making a Constitution. I am as anxious to get rid of the Chinese as any man in the State of California, but I will not vote to deprive them of the means of procuring the necessaries of life, or add to the great wrong inflicted upon us by being ourselves in the wrong. Besides this, it will injure the very cause we are trying to promote. It would have a marked effect on public sentiment in the East. Imagine a Senator or Representative in Congress, when the question of Chinese immigration is under debate, getting up and reading section five now under consideration. I want to know what Senator or Representative would not denounce it as being opposed to the spirit of our civilization. It would array against us a prejudice that we are not entitled to have arrayed against us, and that we should seek to avoid. I appreciate what the gentleman from San Francisco has said. I, too, have taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States; and I do not believe there is a lawyer on this floor, who has given this subject thoughtful consideration, but is satisfied that section five is unconstitutional. It is contrary to the Constitution and laws of the United States. Therefore I earnestly appeal to the members of this Convention to strike out this section. Section four was nothing compared to this. This section says in effect that the Chinese shall not lease real estate; that they shall not own real estate; that they shall not live in a house; and any contract whereby they are permitted to do so shall be void. This would be futile if adopted, for it could not be enforced, and no rational man can, for one moment, believe it ought to be enforced.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I am willing to go as far as any one to suppress Chinese immigration, but I do not think this section will effect that purpose. It will be in contravention of the law and the treaty. I do not care to put myself on record as favoring a proposition which I believe will be in contravention of a solemn treaty. That treaty guarantees to that nation certain rights. Now, I do not want to occupy time discussing this matter, but I shall move to amend by offering a substitute for section five, to the effect that "after the year eighteen hundred and eighty, no resident foreigner ineligible to become a citizen of the United States shall hold, own, or inherit property, nor do business, nor engage in any occupation or employment in this State unless he shall first become registered, and take out a special license therefor, and pay into the State treasury annually the sum of five hundred dollars, the money to be used as a fund to depart such foreigners who may be convicted of crime," etc. That applies to all classes of foreigners who are ineligible to become citizens. It also gives them sufficient notice.

MR. STUART. Will that apply to any but Chinese in fact.

MR. HAGER. I think there are some others.

MR. ESTEE. What are you going to do with those who cannot raise five hundred dollars?

MR. HAGER. There will be plenty of time for them to get out of the country. Leave it to the Legislature to enforce.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I regret to see this methodical combined attack upon this article. There seems to be a disposition to undo everything which we have done on this subject. The whole object of this article is to rid ourselves of an objectionable population. If it is the intention of gentlemen to break down this article they have gone the right way to do it. I say to gentlemen who have heretofore stood right upon this question, stand to your guns.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope, sir, that this Convention will act under the influence of reason and not of passion, and that we will not adopt a section that will shock the humane sentiment of the entire civilized world; that we will consider what effect this will have upon the very cause which these gentlemen profess to have so much at heart. What will be the effect of such a provision as that upon Congress. The very first thing they will do will be to authorize the Chinese to become citizens. They will do it for their protection, and they will be backed by the sentiment of the entire Union outside of this coast. That would be a terrible and fearful result. But it is a result that is just as certain to follow as that the sun will set to-day and rise to-morrow. I warn gentlemen that they will defeat the very purpose they have in view by the adoption of these extreme measures. It is policy, and it is our duty to conciliate our brothers at the East. The Chinese question as it exists upon this coast is understood by very few persons there. We are beginning to make an impression upon the public mind there, and if we adopt any such monstrous propositions as these we will undo all that has been done, and turn the whole tide of public sympathy against us.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I have consistently voted for most of these sections, but I cannot support section five. I voted for section four; I am sorry it has been stricken out. But section five goes too far. It will injure the very interest which we are so anxious to serve. I shall therefore vote to strike it out.

REMARKS OF MR. CASSERLY.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I ask the Workingmen to consider what effect this will have on the people of the other side of the continent—upon both houses of Congress. Why, any gentleman who has perused the public papers, must know that it is just as much as we can do to stem the current of public opinion there, and now we propose to furnish our enemies with a club with which to beat our brains out. That is just exactly what we are doing. It is a good thing sometimes to go a little slow, and this is one of the times. I appeal to this Contion not to strike such a deadly blow, as this is sure to be, at the best interests of this State.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I do not think this section will have any such effect as gentlemen seem to think. The proposition which has been stricken out was copied from the Constitutions of Indiana and Illinois. It was there applied to the negro. The Supreme Court affirmed the right of the State to forbid that class of persons from settling there. So far as the treaty is concerned, that has reference to commerce, and it never has been claimed that it has any reference to settlement in this country. I remember very early in the session, the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, said we had a right to meet these people at the Golden Gate and prevent them from landing. Now he says we have no such right. It is very strange how men will change. Now, I was opposed to striking out section four, and I am opposed to striking out section five.

REMARKS OF MR. VAN VOORHIES.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. President: I have not occupied much of the time of this Convention, nor do I propose to, but it seems remarkable to me that any man can oppose striking out this section. My idea is that the entire article ought to be stricken out, or at least all except the first section. The other sections in this article are simply vicious—villainous. The gentleman from Los Angeles says we must stand by our guns. Does he mean to tell us that we must stand by our guns, even though the sound of those guns involves us in a war with China? I ask if there are any civilized nations on the face of the earth who would adopt any such monstrous measures as this to drive them out? We propose to say that they shall not fish in the waters of the State. We propose to starve them out; that they shall not have houses to live in. Let us do away with all this kind of talk. Let us say to Congress that the Chinese must not come here in the way they have done, and let Congress—as Congress has done, or is doing—find the remedy and apply it. We propose, through Congress, to say to these people, you shall not bring more than fifteen Chinamen. We will take your silks, we will take your teas, your rice, your opium, your whisky—I don't know whether they make any or not [laughter]—but we don't want your people. "No alien"—that means a Chinaman; of course it don't mean an Irishman [laughter]—"shall catch fish." Well, what shall he catch? Do you mean that the Chinese shall not be permitted to live here?

MR. GRACE. That is what we mean.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. We have one hundred and fifty thousand of them on this coast, all of whom came here by our invitation and solicitation. Do you pretend to say that this one hundred and fifty thousand Chinamen must die? For the same spirit that will prevent them from eating fish, will prevent them from eating any other food. Is that what you mean? Do you intend to send a message to President Hayes and say, the Constitutional Convention has issued the edict: The Chinese must die? [Laughter.] They shall not live, we intend to kill them. I trust, sir, we shall do no such foolish thing as to set this State up as superior to the nation. [Applause.]

REMARKS OF MR. BARRY.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I shall vote to retain section five, for the same reason that I voted to retain section four, that I believe they come within the powers of this State, and are not in conflict with the powers of the United States. We are now threatened with a gigantic evil; we are threatened by revolution in our State. It is threatening the peace of the world and the welfare of our State. To strike out these sections now will be to proclaim that the State is powerless to protect herself from this great and overshadowing evil. If the President should fail to sign the bill now before him, then we will have no redress. All our powers for self-protection are at an end, and I shall vote to retain this, as I said before, because it is necessary for the welfare of the State. I believe, sir, without it we have nothing left. I believe it would have a bad effect upon Congress and upon the President, if we should strike this out. If we leave it in they will see that we are in earnest, and our demands will be more apt to be respected.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I was never aware exactly how the members of the committee stood on these questions. Mr. Wilson, of San Francisco, was on the committee; I don't know whether he has stood by his guns or not. Mr. Van Voorhies was on the committee, and whether he stood by his guns or not I do not know. He did write a memorial, but on this particular section I do not know how he stood. Now, sir, a very extraordinary thing presents itself here. Generally the previous question is sprung, but here there seems to be a disposition not to have the previous question, but to carry this article down, section after section, with a rush. We are appealed to not to disfigure the Constitution by such an inhuman thing. We are called upon not to discourage our friends at Washington, not to cause a revulsion of Eastern sentiment. Now, sir, instead of discouraging our friends, instead of setting the East against us, the contrary effect has been produced by the uprising of the Workingmen of California, and the adoption of this very section. Now, sir, I think we have convinced the people of the East that we are in earnest. Do gentlemen pretend here that they are ignorant about it? No, sir. This thing was published there three weeks ago, for there was a cut on the title page of Harper's Weekly, and Congress knew all about it, and yet the anti-Chinese bill went through all the same, where it never had a ghost of a chance before. Why are you preventing us from using whatever power the State has? We will cut a most comical figure in the eyes of the world when we are afraid to take the bull by the horns ourselves. Why, we should deserve the scorn of our own people and everybody else. Now, the State undoubtedly has this power over its waters, and ought to exercise it. There is no attempt in this section to starve them out. The next Presidential election is uncertain; the result hangs upon California, Nevada, and Oregon. We have no hope except in our own resources, and we must use them to the best advantage, and we must have these things retained in the Constitution, ready for use when other things fail, and other things are liable to fail. I do not propose to starve them out, but I propose to work them off, and circumscribe their employment. Is there anything wrong in that? Can you, or any fair minded man, say that we are inhuman because we refuse to open the avenues of employment to them? I dare you to go and do it. [Applause.] That is all we propose to do. Now, let us do something effectual here, let us answer the demands of the people. Let us show the people of the East that we are in earnest and that we mean to do something, and they will respect us and aid us.

NOTICE.

MR. CASSERLY. I hereby give notice that, on to-morrow, the twenty-first instant, I will move to reconsider the vote by which the preamble and bill of rights was finally passed.

CORPORATIONS OTHER THAN MUNICIPAL.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on corporations other than municipal, on second reading.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I move that the reading be dispensed with.

MR. TINNIN. I hope it will not be dispensed with. The idea of forcing through without reading the organic law of a State, is something unheard of. We have compelled the Legislature to read their bills at length, and I hope we will not stultify ourselves in any such manner.

MR. INMAN. I withdraw my motion.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

ARTICLE —.

CORPORATIONS.

SECTION 1. All laws now in force in this State concerning corporations, and all laws that may be hereafter passed pursuant to this section, may be altered from time to time or repealed.

SEC. 2. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the corporators and other means as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 3. Each stockholder of a corporation, or joint-stock association, shall be individually and personally liable for such proportion of all its debts and liabilities contracted or incurred, during the time he was a stockholder, as the amount of stock or shares owned by him bears to the whole of the subscribed capital stock, or shares of the corporation, or association. The Directors or Trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation or joint-stock association, during the term of office of such Director or Trustee.

SEC. 4. The term corporations, as used in this article, shall be construed to include all associations and joint-stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships; and all corporations shall have the right to sue, and be subject to be sued, in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but corporations or associations may be formed for such purposes under general laws; but no corporation, association, or individual shall make, issue, or put in circulation, as money, anything but the lawful money of the United States.

SEC. 6. All existing charters, grants, franchises, special or exclusive privileges, under which an actual and bona fide organization shall not have taken place, and business been commenced in good faith, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall thereafter have no validity.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall not extend any franchise or charter, or remit the forfeiture of any franchise or charter of any corporation now existing, or which shall hereafter exist under the laws of this State.

SEC. 8. The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be so abridged or construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies and subjecting them to public use the same as the property of individuals, and the exercise of the police power of the State shall never be so abridged or construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals or the general well-being of the State.

SEC. 9. No corporation shall engage in business other than that expressly authorized in its charter, or the law under which it may have been or may hereafter be organized; nor shall it hold any real estate for a longer period than five years, except such as may be necessary for carrying on its business.

SEC. 10. The Legislature shall not pass any laws permitting the leasing or alienation of any franchise, so as to relieve the franchise or property held thereunder from liabilities of the lessor or grantor, lessee or grantee, contracted or incurred in the operation, use, or enjoyment of such franchise, or any of its privileges.

SEC. 11. No corporation shall issue stock or bonds, except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received, and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock and bonded indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased, except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock first obtained at a meeting called for that purpose, first giving sixty days public notice, as may be provided by law.

SEC. 12. In all elections for Directors or Managers of incorporated companies, every stockholder shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, for the number of shares of stock owned by him for as many persons as there are Directors or Managers to be elected, or to cumulate said shares, and give one candidate as many votes as the number of Directors multiplied by the number of his shares of stock shall equal, or to distribute them, on the same principle, among as many candidates as he shall think fit; and such Directors or Managers shall not be elected in any other manner, except that members of coöperative societies formed for agricultural, mercantile, and manufacturing purposes, may vote on all questions affecting such societies in manner prescribed by law.

SEC. 13. The State shall not subscribe to, or be interested in, the stock of, or in any manner loan its credit to, any person, company, association, or corporation.

SEC. 14. Every corporation other than religious, educational, or benevolent, organized or doing business in this State, shall have and maintain an office or place in this State for the transaction of its business, where transfers of stock shall be made, and in which shall be kept, for inspection by every person having an interest therein, and legislative committees, books in which shall be recorded the amount of capital stock subscribed, and by whom; the names of the owners of its stock, and the amounts owned by them respectively; the amount of stock paid in, and by whom; the transfers of said stock; the amount of its assets and liabilities, and the names and place of residence of its officers.

SEC. 15. No corporation, organized outside the limits of this State shall be allowed to transact business within this State on more favorable conditions than are prescribed by law to similar corporations organized under the laws of this State.

SEC. 16. A corporation or association may be sued at the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises, or breach occurs; or at the county where the principal place of business of such corporation is situated, subject to the power of the Court to change the place of trial as in other cases.

SEC. 17. All railroad, canal, and other transportation companies shall be common carriers, and subject to legislative control. Any association or corporation organized for the purpose, under the laws of this State, shall have the right to connect at the State line with railroads of other States. Every railroad company shall have the right with its road to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad, and shall receive and transport each the other's passengers, tonnage, and cars, without delay or discrimination.

SEC. 18. No President, Director, officer, agent, or employé of any railroad or canal company shall be interested, directly or indirectly, in the furnishing of material or supplies to such company, nor in the business of transportation as a common carrier of freight or passengers over the works owned, leased, controlled, or worked by such company, except such interest in the business of transportation as lawfully flows from the ownership of stock therein.

SEC. 19. No railroad or other transportation company shall grant free passes, or passes or tickets at a discount, to any person holding any office of honor, trust or profit in this State; and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket, by a member of the Legislature, or any public officer, other than Railroad Commissioners, shall work a forfeiture of his office.

SEC. 20. No railroad company or other common carrier shall combine or make any contract with the owners of any vessel that leaves port or makes port in this State, or with any common carrier, by which combination or contract the earnings of one doing the carrying are to be shared by the other not doing the carrying. And whenever a railroad corporation shall, for the purpose of competing with any other common carrier, lower its rates for transportation of passengers or freight from one point to another, such reduced rates shall not be again raised or increased from such standard without the consent of the governmental authority, in which shall be vested the power to regulate fares and freights, authorizing such change.

SEC. 21. No discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation shall be made by any railroad or other transportation company between places or persons, or in the facilities for the transportation of freight or passengers within this State, or coming from or going to any other State. Persons and property transported over any railroad, or by any other transportation company or individual, shall be delivered at any station, landing, or port, at charges not exceeding the charges for the transportation of persons and property of the same class, in the same direction, to any more distant station, port, or landing. Excursion and commutation tickets may be issued at special rates.

SEC. 22. The State shall be divided into three districts as nearly equal in population as practicable, in each of which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts at the regular gubernatorial elections, whose salary shall be fixed by law, and whose term of office shall be four years. Said Commissioners shall be qualified electors of this State and of the district from which they are elected, and shall not be interested in any railroad corporation, or other transportation company, as stockholder, creditor, agent, attorney, or employé; and the act of a majority of said Commissioners shall be deemed the act of said Commission. Said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad or other transportation companies, and publish the same from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have power to issue subpœnas and all other necessary process; to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their decisions and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts. Said Commissioners shall prescribe a uniform system of accounts to be kept by all such corporations and companies, and they shall keep their accounts according to such system. Any railroad corporation or transportation company which shall fail or refuse to conform to such rates as shall be established by such Commissioners, or shall charge rates in excess thereof, or shall fail to keep their accounts in accordance with the system prescribed by the Commission, shall be fined not exceeding twenty thousand dollars for each offense, and every officer, agent, or employé of any such corporation or company, who shall demand or receive rates in excess thereof, or who shall in any manner violate the provisions of this section, shall be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars or be imprisoned in the County Jail not exceeding one year. In all controversies, civil or criminal, the rates of fares and freights established by said Commission shall be deemed conclusively just and reasonable, and in any action against such corporation or company for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge or jury, recover exemplary damages. Said Commission shall report to the Governor, annually, their proceedings, and such other facts as may be deemed important. Nothing in this section shall prevent individuals from maintaining actions against any of such companies. The Legislature may, in addition to any penalties herein prescribed, enforce this article by forfeiture of charter or otherwise, and may confer such further powers on the Commissioners as shall be necessary to enable them to perform the duties enjoined on them in this and the foregoing section. The Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, to remove any one or more of said Commissioners from office, for dereliction of duty, or corruption, or incompetency; and whenever for any cause a vacancy in office shall occur in said Commission, the Governor shall fill the same by the appointment of a qualified person thereto, who shall hold office for the residue of the unexpired term, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

SEC. 23. Until the Legislature shall district the State, the following shall be the railroad districts: The First District shall be composed of the Counties of Alpine, Amador, Butte, Calaveras, Colusa, Del Norte, El Dorado, Humboldt, Lake, Lassen, Mendocino, Modoc, Napa, Nevada, Placer, Plumas, Sacramento, Shasta, Sierra, Siskiyou, Solano, Sonoma, Sutter, Tehama, Trinity, Yolo, and Yuba, from which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected. The Second District shall be composed of the Counties of Marin, San Francisco, and San Mateo, from which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected. The Third District shall be composed of the Counties of Alameda, Contra Costa, Fresno, Inyo, Kern, Los Angeles, Mariposa, Merced, Mono, Monterey, San Benito, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Joaquin, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Stanislaus, Tulare, Tuolumne, and Ventura, from which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected.

SEC. 24. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this article.

MR. JONES. I offer an amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section three: 'unless such Director or Trustee shall show that such embezzlement or misappropriation happened without any fault or neglect on his part, and that he used the utmost diligence to prevent the same.'"

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I have supported the general doctrine of making Directors responsible, but I cannot say that it has ever met my judgment or my conscience that any officer should be held responsible, in which he himself was not concerned, and which was not the result of any negligence on his part, and in regard to which he can show that he did all in his power to prevent the act.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: Knowing that this same amendment has been offered and rejected six or seven times in its different forms, and that the whole matter has been thoroughly discussed before, I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Barton, Stedman, Wyatt, and White.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The previous question applies to the section and amendment only. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Joyce, Condon, Kenny, Larkin, and White.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on legislative department on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

ARTICLE —.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated The Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall be biennial, and shall commence at twelve o'clock M., on the first Monday after the first Tuesday in January next ensuing the election of its members, unless the Governor shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No pay shall be allowed to members for a longer time than sixty days, except the first session called after the adoption of this Constitution, which may be allowed pay for one hundred days. And no bill shall be introduced, in either House, after the expiration of ninety days from the commencement of the first session, and of fifty days after the commencement of each succeeding session, without the consent of two thirds of the members of said House.

SEC. 3. The members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, by the qualified electors of their respective districts, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature, and their term of office shall be two years.

SEC. 4. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly, and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State three years, and of the district for which he shall be chosen one year, next before his election.

SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts, numbered as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators elected in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two, from the odd numbered districts, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senators shall be elected every two years; provided, that all the Senators elected at the first election under this Constitution shall hold office for the term of three years.

SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial and eighty Assembly districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Senatorial and Assembly districts. Each Senatorial district shall choose one Senator, and each Assembly district shall choose one member of Assembly. The Senatorial districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, and the Assembly districts shall be numbered from one to eighty in the same order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of said districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust said districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming the population of any district. Until such districting as herein provided for shall be made, Senators and Assemblymen shall be elected by the districts according to the apportionment now provided for by law.

SEC. 7. Each House shall choose its own officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its own members.

SEC. 8. A majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

SEC. 9. Each House shall determine the rule of its own proceeding, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

SEC. 10. Each House shall keep a Journal of its own proceedings, and publish the same, and the yeas and nays of the members of either House, on any question, shall, at the desire of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 11. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, and shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

SEC. 12. When vacancies occur in either House, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

SEC. 13. The doors of each House shall be open, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the House, may require secrecy.

SEC. 14. Neither House shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which they may be sitting. Nor shall any members of either House draw pay for any recess or adjournment for a longer time than three days.

SEC. 15. No law shall be passed except by bill; nor shall any bill be put upon its final passage until the same, with the amendments thereto, shall have been printed for the use of the members; nor shall any bill become a law unless the same be read on three several days in each House, unless, in case of urgency, two thirds of the House where such bill may be pending, shall, by a vote of yeas and nays, deem it expedient to dispense with this provision. Any bill may originate in either House, but may be amended or rejected by the other; and on the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length, and the vote shall be by yeas and nays upon each bill separately, and shall be entered on the Journal; and no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each House.

SEC. 16. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, which shall enter such objections upon the Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both Houses, by yeas and nays, two thirds of the members elected to each House voting therefor, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after it has been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law, unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted,) shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case, he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the House in which the bill originated a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor.

SEC. 17. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for that purpose, the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members elected.

SEC. 18. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the Superior Courts, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall nevertheless be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment, according to law. All other officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office in such manner as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 19. No Senator, or member of the Assembly, shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this State, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which have been increased during such term, except such offices as may be filled by election by the people.

SEC. 20. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or any other power, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State; provided that officers in the militia, to which there is attached no annual salary, or local officers, or Postmasters whose compensation does not exceed five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed lucrative.

SEC. 21. No person convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of any State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State, and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution not under the exclusive management and control of the State, as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State; provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged, or sick, or disabled persons in indigent circumstances—such aid to be granted by a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of such respective institutions; provided, further that the State shall have, at any time, the right to inquire into the management of such institutions; provided, further, that whenever any county, or city and county, or city, or town, shall provide for the support of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, such county, city and county, city, or town, shall be entitled to receive the same pro rata appropriations as may be granted to such institutions under church or other control. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature.

SEC. 23. The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a compensation, per diem and mileage, to be fixed by law, and paid out of the public treasury; such per diem shall not exceed eight dollars, and such mileage shall not exceed ten cents per mile, and for contingent expenses not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each session. No increase in compensation or mileage shall take effect during the term for which the members of either House shall have been elected, and the pay of no attaché shall be increased after he is elected or appointed.

SEC. 24. Every Act shall embrace but one subject, which subject shall be expressed in its title. But if any subject shall be embraced in an Act which shall not be expressed in its title, such Act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in its title. No law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the Act revised or section amended shall be re-enacted and published at length as revised or amended; and all laws of the State of California, and all official writings, and the executive, legislative, and judicial proceedings shall be conducted, preserved, and published in no other than the English language.

Any member of the Legislature, proven to have been influenced in his vote or action upon any matter pending before the Legislature, by any reward, or promise of future reward, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, in addition to such punishment as may be provided by law, shall be disfranchised and forever disqualified from holding any office of public trust. THE JOURNAL.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITION.

MR. PROUTY presented a petition from Amador County, asking exemption of certain property from taxation.

Laid on the table.

RECONSIDERATION—CHINESE.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I move, in accordance with notice, to reconsider the vote by which the article on Chinese was adopted yesterday. I would say, in reference to that, Mr. President, that we yesterday proceeded with a very considerable amount of haste in the adoption of some of these articles. Section four—and section five, after some discussion—was stricken out. After that I believe the previous question was moved, and the article, with section six as amended, was adopted. Section six is somewhat long and somewhat involved, and it did not strike me with the same force that it has since, upon consideration of it. Now the last clause of section six is decidedly in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and my object in moving a reconsideration is that I may make a motion to strike out the last clause of section six, which is a mandatory direction to the Legislature to enact laws to prohibit the introduction into the State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. So far as the general question of Chinese is concerned I can say, with the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Casserly, who spoke yesterday, this is no new question with me. I have, for very many years, been opposed to Chinese immigration and to the residence of Chinese among us. Both in California and in the Atlantic States I have denounced it years ago, as being contrary to the policy of the State, and the well-being of the State, to have the Chinese here, and, upon broad principles of the non-assimilating character of Chinese, a bad policy to have a great mass of people who are uncongenial to us in every respect. I therefore, when this question first came before the Committee of the Whole, announced my desire to go as far as I could properly go towards remedying the evil. I am so now, but there are some questions which have been thoroughly discussed and determined by the Supreme Court of the United States, and are no longer open questions. Among others is the question as to whether a State has the right to exclude the immigration of foreigners into the State. The Supreme Court of the United States, in a series of cases, have decided that the State has no power upon that subject. The matter was very thoroughly discussed in what we call the "Passenger Cases," and in various other cases. In these cases, for instance, the States of Massachusetts and New York, for instance, attempted to exercise this direct power of forbidding the immigration of foreigners into the States. They undertook to exercise the same power by taxation, or through the power of taxation—the power of the State to tax being almost unlimited and recognized as one of the great essential reserved rights of the State. They undertook, indirectly, to effect this, and sought by recourse of taxation upon individuals, per head, to thus exclude them from coming into these States. The whole thing, as I say, has been thoroughly discussed in these cases in the Supreme Court of the United States, and they have held repeatedly that it is beyond the power of the State to exercise this power, as directly in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Therefore this latter part of section six, making it mandatory upon the Legislature to prohibit by legislation the introduction of Chinese into this State after the adoption of this Constitution, is a direct and palpable conflict with the Constitution of the United States. The question presents itself to this Convention whether they desire now to go before the country—before the people of the nation—with a Constitution which defies the Constitution of the United States, and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States? I, for one, do not wish to be placed in that position. I, for one, ask the Convention here seriously to consider the aspect in which they will be placed, and as to whether it is judicious, whether it is wise, whether it is right, to put ourselves upon the record in absolute defiance of the Constitution of the United States, and in absolute defiance of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States? As a matter of course we have got to pay some attention to the Federal authorities. They have it in their power, undoubtedly, to render this proposition of no effect. They have it in their power to provide for the entire safety of these people. They have it in their power to authorize them to inherit and purchase and hold lands in this State, and contrary to all of our wishes and desires, to engraft that people upon us forever. These are the constitutional powers of the Federal Government according to a series of decisions. Now that being the case, and we seeking at this time to have the friendly interference of the General Government to rid us of this people and to assist us in every respect, and proceedings having been almost consummated to that extent, I ask again whether it is not putting ourselves in a very improper attitude to go before the country with this kind of a Constitution? I therefore ask gentlemen seriously to consider whether we shall vote for a Constitution that contains in it this provision requiring the Legislature to do that which has been so repeatedly decided to be an unconstitutional thing? The object I have in moving to reconsider is to enable me to get at that section, and therefore I hope it will prevail.

MR. LARKIN. I desire to ask the gentleman to name when and where the Supreme Court of the United States decided the Constitution of Indiana, which extended up to eighteen hundred and seventy-two, in relation to negroes and mulatoes, unconstitutional? I will read the clause. It is no more definite than the one prohibiting Chinese coming to this State.

MR. WILSON. There are a thousand unconstitutional Acts in the United States that have never been brought before any Court.

MR. LARKIN. This was brought before the Court. This was the law of Indiana up to the time of the adoption of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments.

MR. WILSON. To the learned gentleman on constitutional law I yield.

MR. LARKIN. It says: "no negro or mulato shall come into, or settle in the State, after the adoption of this Constitution." This is in the Constitution of Indiana of eighteen hundred and fifty-one. The same provision was in the previous Constitution.

MR. EAGON. Is there any treaty between the United States and Indiana in this matter?

MR. LARKIN. It was not a question of treaty.

MR. EAGON. This is a question of treaty.

MR. LARKIN. That provision of the Constitution of Indiana was enforced in that State Government, and reaffirmed over and over by decisions declaring that provision constitutional.

MR. EDGERTON. I understand you to say that there has been adjudicated cases over and over again, deciding that clause constitutional. Will the gentleman tell me one case?

MR. LARKIN. I think I can. I know there are parties from that State——

MR. EDGERTON. I ask for a single case affirming the constitutionality of that section.

MR. LARKIN. I can go to the library——

MR. EDGERTON. You have not found it yet. I deny that any such case can be found.

MR. LARKIN. I say there are persons who have told me so; and so far as that section is concerned, the same rule will apply here.

MR. WILSON. If the power exists in the State, why go to the roundabout way of requiring the Legislature to do it? Why does not this Convention at once prohibit it?

MR. LARKIN. I propose to prevent them doing business in this State. They may come here, but as to their settlement, I believe that this State has the power to prohibit it. Therefore I shall vote against any proposition to reconsider for the purpose of amending that section.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: The gentleman from Amador asked the gentleman from El Dorado a most pertinent question, and that is, whether there was any treaty between the United States and the State of Indiana. Now, sir, I would like to call the attention of the Convention to the opinion of the Constitution of the United States upon this subject; and it seems to me, with all due deference to the constitutional law of the gentleman, who insists upon retaining this part of this section in the Constitution, that there can be no doubt that such a provision is in direct conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Now, sir, the language of article six of the Constitution of the United States is as follows:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from El Dorado to that section. The gentleman is a man of broad historic knowledge. He knows very well that the treaty with the Chinese Empire expressly stipulates that these Chinese may come to California; may reside here, and pursue the same vocations as subjects of the most favored nations.

MR. LARKIN. Is the word "settle" in that treaty?

MR. EDGERTON. The word "residence" is. That means the same thing. I do not see how they can reside without settling. Now, I ask the gentleman if his common sense does not dictate to him that such a clause in the Constitution of Indiana would be entirely nugatory, and in conflict with this provision of the Constitution of the United States? I deny that it was ever sustained. I think there was the same provision in the Constitution of Illinois; and everybody knows that these provisions are a mere relic of the institution of slavery; that they were incorporated in the Constitutions of these old States in order to exclude negroes from the borders of those States. It is too late to quote any such authority as that upon this question.

REMARKS OF MR. BARTON.

MR. BARTON. Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: It surprises me very much indeed to see this very sudden revolution of sentiment as expressed upon the floor of this house. I think, sir, it will be time for these gentlemen who have made this fight against this article to render their decision when they are called upon, if ever, to pass upon the constitutionality of our conduct and action here. Then, and not till then, do I consider, sir, that they have a right to pass upon the constitutionality of the action of this Convention. It would be far better and more manly for such gentlemen as Mr. Shafter, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Casserly, and those who make this effort, to draw up a proper memorial, if you please, to the President of the United States, and present it with all the power and courage of gentlemen, than to pursue this course. I, sir, admire to-day the spirit and the candor of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Stuart, in his manly fight upon a former occasion; but this spirit that is spread broadcast this morning, I say, and repeat again, that it confounds my powers of thought. The gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, asks the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, why he does not go directly by an act of this Convention and take ground against this thing? In answer to that, permit to say, that we do in this section four propose to do that very thing directly; and a majority of this Convention, by this unexpected somersault, voted to destroy that very section that we proposed to enact and incorporate here. I am opposed to this proposition of a reconsideration. It takes out the life and substance of the Chinese article, and I hope that this Convention will not stultify itself. Who is there within the sound of my voice believes that the Congress of the United States would have ever taken the course that they have, had it not been for the stubborn and determined course pursued by the representatives of the people of the State of California upon the floor of this Convention? After we made this appeal in behalf of our people, not only the Democratic, but the Republican statesmen of the nation have opened their mouths in vindication of our position. Now, sir, it has come to this, that we are determined to make the demand, and we make this demand in pursuance of the people's rights to-day, and in opposition to the proposition now pending for a reconsideration of the only thing left in the article on Chinese that guarantees to us the protection that we claim under State's rights. Therefore, I hope the proposition to reconsider will be voted down promptly.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I voted in favor of this article, but I hope that the motion to reconsider will prevail in order to remove the remaining objections to this section. There are evidently gentlemen here who do not scruple to violate the Constitution of the United States. I think it would be more proper to preserve our duties to that Government. There has been an appeal made to the old Indiana laws in regard to negroes. Why, in the first place, the blacks were not recognized as citizens of the United States. The Constitution requires the citizens of each State to respect the rights of citizens of other States. The trouble was that they were not citizens of the State to which they came or from which they came. There was no treaty obligation of any kind whatever. But there is an express provision of the kind in the Constitution of the United States, to prohibit our interference with foreign commerce, and commerce has been held over and over again to relate to persons as well as commodities. Cases have been cited here frequently, and it is unnecessary to again refer to them. The gentleman from El Dorado, with that broad stretch of judicial knowledge which he seems to possess, that solves everything without knowing anything [laughter], tells us his opinion. Gentlemen give us their opinions who have never read the Constitution of the United States, and set their opinions above those of men who have made a study of the law for fifty years. What is the opinion of such men worth on such a topic? If you had a five dollar case to try, would you go to one of them? and yet they set themselves up here as authority, and we have judges of constitutional law that have never read the instrument. For one, I repel the advice of such gentlemen. Go to the subjects that you understand and give advice upon them, but do not attempt to advise upon matters upon which you are as ignorant—as it is possible to be. Now as regards this treaty with China. Why, they can come here and settle. Now what is the provision in regard to that? The treaty says:

"Citizens of the United States visiting or residing in China, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation; and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States, shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions, in respect to travel or residence, as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favored nation. But nothing herein contained shall be held to confer naturalization upon citizens of the United States in China, nor upon the subjects of China in the United States."

The Constitution of the United States gives the power to make treaties to the President of the United States, with the consent of the Senate. It also provides that all treaties made in pursuance thereof shall be the supreme law of the land. Now this provision that the State of California may prohibit the Chinese from coming into this State, is in direct violation of the Constitution and the treaty, as held over and over again in the "Passenger Cases." We have no power over the subject. It is an interference with the commerce of foreign nations, and there is but one course of decision upon that point. You are going to expel these people. How are you going to accomplish it? Where are you going to take them to? Are you going to buy a navy and put the Chinese aboard of it? Wise men, where are you going with them? China will tell you that you shall not land them. How are you going to land them? Are you going to put them on some island and leave them to starve? If you land them anywhere you will have to land them by force. I imagine if you start in to take a lot of Chinamen out of the State you would be met by a volley of shot and shell before you got out of the harbor, and be told that you would not be allowed to override the Constitution and laws of the United States. If you get out upon the high seas and are captured, you will be found guilty of piracy in the act you are undertaking to perform. The nations of the world will not recognize the Constitution of the State of California as legal authority. Are you going to try it? I hope some of you will.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. The Act of Congress just passed, as I understand, is to prohibit the introduction of Chinese into the United States. Now, would it not be proper for this State to assist in carrying out that law; and this clause that Mr. Wilson proposes to strike out, has it not reference to that particular point?

MR. SHAFTER. The law has not passed Congress yet, to start with, and I do not think this was intended for that purpose, because it was put in here three or four months before that law passed the Senate. No, sir, the State of California has no right to assist the Government at all in this respect, any more than it has to pass independent laws. Where Congress has exercised its power, that is the end of all State rights. It has been so held a half dozen times. Gentlemen who desire to adopt this provision will find that they do not understand these things on the east side of the Rocky Mountains. I have lived there too long not to know what the result will be. You may undertake to put such a provision in your Constitution, but when you violate the Constitution of the United States, and violate the moral sense of these people, they will trample your Constitution in the dirt. You try it and see this nation is not going to submit to any attempts to defy its laws, and its sense of justice. Try it on if you want to, and see. You go and lay your hands under this law on the body of a Chinaman in San Francisco, and see if you are not brought before the United States District Court, and see if you are not tried and punished, and see if the whole power of this nation is not brought to bear upon you. You are advocating secession in direct terms. You are defying the law of Congress, and the Constitution of the country, and this country will never submit to it. You will find that the moral sense of this country will revolt against such action as is proposed here. You undertake to pass such a Constitution as this, and the President of the United States will find it impossible to resist the protests that are brought to bear upon him now. The whole religious, moral, and political sentiment of the East will be brought to bear upon him, and he cannot fail to yield. I desire to vote for any fair measure that will discourage Chinese immigration, but as to voting for anything that will violate the Constitution of the United States, I will not do it.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I send up and ask the Secretary to read the motion I desire to make if the article is reconsidered.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section six by striking out the following words: 'And it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution.'"

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I understood that, in the great constitutional debate which took place upon this question in Committee of Whole, that the case was closed, and it was closed against those gentlemen who now attempt to revive it and to prevent the insertion in this Constitution of the clause just read. The verdict of the Committee of the Whole was that, under the police power reserved to the States, we had this power. Authority after authority, decision after decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, was cited here for the purpose of showing that the States had this power; for the purpose of showing that the States had the right to exclude from settlement in their midst, and from their border, all elements which tended to disturb, to destroy, or to hurt the peace of the commonwealth. We showed that in the Passenger cases, that seven of the Judges in that case distinctly admit that the States had that power—that that right was reserved in them. With reference to the treaty power we showed, from the best authorities, that the treaty-making power could not exercise a power or accomplish an object which the whole Government of the United States could not do; that is, the legislative department. Now, sir, after this doctrine has been thoroughly and exhaustively discussed on this floor, after months have passed, after the press of the State have discussed the article and discussed the doctrine, it seems to me like springing a trap almost on this Convention at this eleventh hour to make a combined attack upon that doctrine as we have enunciated it in the Chinese article. Now, as to the practical use, under historical facts and the present, of maintaining in the Constitution the clause which has been read. Let us suppose, Mr. President, that the bill which has passed the Senate and gone to the House of Representatives, and which will probably go to the President for his signature, has become a law. That bill provides that no vessel shall bring to these shores more than fifteen Chinese passengers. The remedy there against this vast influx, throwing thousands upon our shores, would seem ample and complete; but is it? On our southern boundary exists a foreign territory. The Colorado River, which partly runs in this State and branches on the territory of a foreign power, affords an opportunity for rendering this law nugatory, practically, in all its aspects. What have the Chinese companies to do to defeat this Act? They have only to establish a colony on the other side of the line, below Fort Yuma, and there receive inhabitants from China in as large numbers as they have heretofore entered the Golden Gate. That colony will then be the supply of Chinese labor to the California market, and you cannot stop it. They will merely have to walk across the line, and how are you going to stop them under this Act? I say, sir, that we want exactly that power and that authority in this Constitution, to prevent the inundation, which has come heretofore by sea, from coming hereafter by land. It seems to me that the gentlemen who are learned in the law, those gentlemen who have spent forty years fingering over the vast tomes of musty legal literature, have come in here for the purpose—Mr. President, I am not in the habit of using slang terms, but I cannot think of any other—of bulldosing the gentlemen of this Convention by their superior attainments in that special line; to terrorize them from voting finally for this clause, on the ground that they are placing themselves in direct and rebellious antagonism to the Government of the United States. If gentlemen will remember the debate upon this floor, they will recollect in their minds how thoroughly we vindicated ourselves from any such aspersion, and they will not, at this late day, allow themselves to be frightened into leaving the solid and the tenable position for our own people which they took on that occasion. Mr. President, I hope that this article will not be reconsidered. I hope that this clause will not be stricken out. I hope that we will stick to what we have done, and that we will not present ourselves to the people of this State as the fickle beings which such action would show us to be.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: Believing that this question has been fully discussed, and that the Convention has expressed its opinion upon this article, I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Upon which the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Wilson of First District, Brown, Freud, Barton, and Barry.

LAND MONOPOLY.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I call up the notice I gave and move to reconsider the vote by which the article on miscellaneous subjects was ordered engrossed for a second reading.

MR. WELLIN. I second the motion.

REMARKS OF MR. VACQUEREL.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: On yesterday the previous question cut off all debates and amendments, and as it is about the fifth or sixth time that I have tried to introduce a proposition, I thought I could do no better than to give a notice of reconsideration. The proposition that I shall endeavor to offer if the reconsideration takes place, is a proposition that tends to destroy land monopoly at the end of a certain number of years. It is a system that exists in Louisiana, Canada, and other parts of the world. This is the proposition:

"No person shall ever be allowed to dispose of more than one third of the real and personal property of which he dies seized. The remaining two thirds of the property of the decedent shall descend to the heirs, in the manner provided by law."

This is the way of reaching land monopoly that does not hurt any one. It acts by death. As it is to-day, a man has a right to make a will and leave all his property to one child and leave the others without any. If a man owns twenty thousand acres of land, and happens to die, and has four children, it will be divided between four. When these children die the land will be divided among their children, and an estate of twenty thousand acres, in the course of about twenty or twenty-five years, will be divided into about fifteen parts. Now, this proposition does not tend to rob anybody. It does not say to one man, you must acquire but so much. Man has a right to acquire all the property he wants. It only tends by natural law to distribute the land.

Now, I know that some gentlemen will say that a man's property is his own, and he has a right to give it to whoever he pleases. Now, I deny that a man that gets married and has any children has a right to disinherit any of them. I deny that a man has a right to give all his property to one, and none to the rest. I do not care how they are brought up. A man spends his time in bar-rooms instead of bringing up his children rightly, and then when one of them goes wrong he disinherits him. I believe that this section will tend to the destruction of land monopoly, and therefore I hope the motion to reconsider will prevail.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

MR. McCALLUM. I second the motion.

SPECIAL ORDER—ADDRESS.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I call for the special order for ten o'clock to-day. The question of the address to the people of this State was set for ten o'clock to-day. I know the hour has passed, but I move it now be taken up.

MR. EDGERTON. I would inquire whether that motion is for an address to the people to vote against the Constitution or for it?

MR. BERRY. Such an address as the Convention should prepare, to induce the people of this State to vote for the Constitution and adopt it.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution offered by Mr. Tinnin.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That the President of this Convention is hereby authorized to appoint a committee of five members of this body, whose duty it shall be to draft and publish a memorial to the people of this State such recommendations as they may think proper in regard to the adoption of the Constitution formed by this body. Said memorial or recommendation to be ratified by this Convention before publication."

MR. BARRY. I move the adoption of the resolution offered by Mr. Cross.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, That a committee of nine be appointed to prepare and report to the Convention an address to the people of the State, carefully reviewing the Constitution presented by this Convention, and indicating the material changes made in the existing Constitution, and that such address be made public in such manner as this Convention shall direct."

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I offer a substitute by way of amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Resolved, first, That a committee be appointed in such manner as the Convention shall direct, to prepare an address to the people, explaining the material amendments proposed, and recommending the adoption of the new Constitution; second, that said committee shall consist of nine members of this Convention."

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: The first difference between that and the one presented by Mr. Cross is that it leaves the Convention to indicate, by another resolution, how the committee shall be appointed. I propose to have each proposition separate. Another difference is this, that the first proposition merely declares that the committee shall explain the material amendments, and goes no farther. In my judgment, there is no object in appointing a committee unless that committee is to recommend a new Constitution proposed by this Convention. The second resolution there—and it is placed second only that it may be convenient to have a vote on these resolutions separately—is simply to indicate the number of the committee; it is placed at nine, the same as the original proposition. I find that in the State of Illinois this practice was adopted, and I believe it has been usually adopted. In the Constitutional Convention of Illinois the language was to "appoint a committee consisting of nine members, to prepare an address to the people of the State, to accompany the Constitution, explaining the same and urging its adoption." This resolution in the Illinois Convention was afterwards changed so that a select committee was appointed for the purpose of nominating the committee which was to prepare the address. I would have included that in my resolution, but as I did not desire to be on that committee, I preferred to leave that to some other member to move if the Convention should adopt this as a substitute, because then it will be open for describing the manner in which this Committee on Address should be appointed. This select committee reported a committee on address, consisting of nine members, to which some others were added. That committee reported an address to the Convention and the Convention adopted it, which I suppose would be the proper course here; the committee should report to the Convention, and the Convention adopt the address. I submit to the Convention that the better manner of proceeding will be to adopt this substitute.

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: I hope, sir, that nothing will be done on these resolutions, but to reject all amendments, whatever they may be. Now, sir, it looks to me very much like presuming upon the ignorance of the people. The people have sent us here to do a job of work, and this looks as if we thought we had done a bad job. The people are intelligent enough to know whether this Constitution suits them, and to reject it if it does not. I hope this will not be done. Now, sir, if this is a good Constitution it needs no such address to the people of this State. If it is bad work, it will show at once that we are trying to cover up the bad points in the Constitution. The people have talked a good deal about this matter and they are capable of judging. Let us send this Constitution out without any embellishments, and let the people adopt it if they think it a good one, and reject it if they think it a bad one. I shall vote against any such proposition.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: The main point of objection that I discover to a resolution of this kind is this: in order to get an address of that kind properly before the people it would be necessary that it should be published in every county in the State. The object would be to get it before the people so that everybody could read it, and it would be necessary to publish it in every county in the State. Now, sir, I think finances are rather low so far as this body is concerned.

MR. BIGGS. I find in the Missouri Constitution a committee of thirteen published in the back of the Constitution a synopsis of the new Constitution, commencing at the bill of rights, and that was read ten times as much as the Constitution was. I will just show it to you.

MR. SCHELL. That may all be; yet, as I had occasion to remark here the other day, I hope that this body has got some sense of its own. I am making this point, whether or not we are going to incur a large amount of expense here for the purpose of setting this matter before the people of this State. Where are the means coming from? That is the point.

MR. McCALLUM. Don't you believe that every enterprising paper in the State would publish it as a matter of information?

MR. SCHELL. That is a question I cannot answer.

MR. McCALLUM. Any one else can answer it.

MR. SCHELL. My experience with newspapers is, that you can most always get any proper subject published if you are ready to come down with the coin for doing it. We have provided in one of the articles for publishing and sending out the Constitution, and that should be sufficient. So far as that is concerned I agree with the gentleman from Amador, that the people are presumed to be intelligent and be able to read and judge for themselves, and will be able to ascertain and determine what the material changes are that have been made; so I think, taking all these matters into consideration, it is unnecessary to adopt an address to the people.

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: If matters go on as they have these last few days, and we keep adding to and striking out all that is vital and that interests the people, the main sections that we were sent here to engraft in the Constitution, I am in favor of this address, because, Mr. President, I tell you it will need something besides the document to recommend it to the favorable consideration of the sovereign people of the State of California. We have, in the last few days, trimed it down until it is a mere wreck of its former grandeur. We have taken out the main sections that interested the people of this State more vitally than anything else. When this Chinese question was before the Congress of the United States and waiting the signature of the President, we have, right in the face of all this work, taken out sections that tend to weaken this Constitution more with the people of this State than all the work that we can do in writing out addresses for the favorable consideration of the people.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: It seems to me that this is a very necessary matter. There are a great many people in this State that have never read the old Constitution.

MR. SMITH, of San Francisco. How do you know the people never read it?

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. I have been among the people, and know a good deal of them. I know a majority of the people of every State do not understand the Constitution. Now, it seems to me that the members of this Convention, who get up this Constitution, understand the reasons leading them to the principal changes here better than the people of this State. There has been no time for the people to understand the changes in the Constitution. This Convention can assist them by bringing together in compact form the principal changes in the Constitution. I was met upon the street yesterday by a very intelligent gentleman, who wanted know why a certain change was made. He was against it, because he did not understand why the change was made. He could not find out from the papers, and he supposed that he could find out better by asking a delegate to the Convention. Now, these questions will be asked all over the State. A syllabus of the changes in this Constitution would be read more than the Constitution. The writer would have the two Constitutions before him, and would be able to point out the changes and the reasons for them. Would that not be a great assistance to the people? It seems to me so. It seems to me that it is necessary, and I see no reasons against it. It will not cost anything of any moment. We have already provided that this Constitution shall be published in pamphlet form. Why may not this address be published in the same pamphlet? The additional expense will not amount to anything.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I hope the resolution offered by Mr. Cross will receive the serious consideration and attention of this Convention, and finally be adopted. I think, sir, that it is necessary that we should send to the people such an address. Our Constitution is a long one, and it would be well for us to set forth in concise terms the changes we have made in this Constitution, as compared with the old one. I find, sir, that in the Convention of Ohio they refused to send out an address to the people, and their Constitution was beaten by an overwhelming majority. I find that the Convention of Illinois, of New York, of Massachusetts, and, in fact, all other Conventions, have sent out an address similar to the one called for in the resolutions. So far as the objection of Mr. McCallum is concerned, I am willing to trust the President of this Convention with the appointment of this committee. I do not see any necessity, sir, of appointing a select committee to name a committee to prepare this address. I think, sir, that the President of the Convention is well able to appoint this committee. I believe it will do a vast amount of good, and materally aid us in the adoption of our Constitution. I am sure, sir, there is a vast majority of this Convention in favor of the Constitution which we have framed, and who will do all they can to secure its adoption by the people.

MR. ESTEE. Under the rule the committees are all appointed by the Chair. It would take a two-thirds vote to adopt this amendment.

MR. EDGERTON. Judge Story wrote a review of the Constitution of the United States, and it took two huge volumes, and it is a much shorter document than this.

Messrs. Inman, Jones, Campbell, West, and Webster demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. McCallum, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. McCallum, Brown, Tully, White, and Gorman.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

PAIRED—Mr. Swing, aye, with Mr. Barton, no.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I move the adoption of the resolution offered by Mr. Huestis.

THE PRESIDENT. It is out of order. A resolution of the same character has just been voted down.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President appoint three additional members upon the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

MR. FREUD. I second the motion.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: The Committee on Revision and Adjustment consisted originally of nine members. On last week the gentleman from El Dorado, Mr. Larkin, made a motion that six additional members be appointed upon that committee, raising it from nine to fifteen. The Chair appointed the six additional members, and the committee consists now of fifteen members. The Chairman of the committee appointed originally, was Mr. Dudley of San Joaquin. He is not here, and I understand he has resigned the Chairmanship of the committee, and he probably will not be here. Mr. Eugene Fawcett is also a member of that committee, and I understand that he will not be here. Mr. Howard——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's motion will be out of order, he must give his notice.

MR. BEERSTECHER. All right. I give the notice, and ask that it be printed in the Journal. I want to take it up to-morrow.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I would like to offer a resolution in regard to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Revision and Adjustment be allowed a Clerk.

MR. HAGER. I will state with regard to that committee, for the information of the Convention, that Mr. Dudley did resign the Chairmanship but did not resign his position on the committee. The committee, as it now stands, is composed of sixteen, which is an unusually large number for a committee. It is rather unwieldy. I am willing to retire and give my place to any one who wants it. The larger the committees are the less work is done, and the more trouble there is in getting them together. It will be necessary to have a Clerk, and I make the motion because I stand next on the list to Mr. Dudley.

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution will have to go to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The article on legislative department is before the Convention.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section twenty-seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-seven by adding the following at the end of the section: 'Any county, or city and county, containing a population greater than the number required for one Congressional district, shall be be formed into one or more Congressional districts, according to the population thereof, and any residue after forming such district or districts, shall be attached, by compact adjoining Assembly districts, to a contiguous county or counties, and form a Congressional district. In dividing a county, or city and county, into Congressional districts, no Assembly district shall be divided so as to form a part of more than one Congressional district, and every such Congressional district shall be composed of compact contiguous Assembly districts.'"

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: Unless an amendment of that nature is adopted it leaves San Francisco in a position that a partisan majority in the Legislature can gerrymander it in a way that might often defeat in many respects the will of a majority of the electors of that district. Unless there is a guard of that kind put into the Constitution, the Legislature cannot only separate Senatorial districts, but they can divide Assembly districts. They can draw irregular lines passing zigzag across the city. I hope, in order to secure a fair division that this amendment may be adopted. I think that the experience of the whole country proves that such a restriction should be placed in the Constitution. Why, as far back as eighteen hundred, this matter of abuse in the division of Congressional districts commenced. The word "gerrymander" that has a place in the political literature of the day, took its name, as most of us remember here, from Eldridge Gerry, who was Governor of Massachusetts, in eighteen hundred and twelve, when that State in a certain manner was divided. And he being the leader of the party, it was laid upon him, though it was afterwards found out, that, although a member of the party that made the unjust division, he advised against it. I hope that this amendment will be adopted, for it will certainly be a guard against unfair political action hereafter.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: No one can object to that, and it will have the effect suggested by my friend from Napa. You will find a similar provision in all new Constitutions.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-two as follows: Strike out, in lines ten and eleven, the words, 'or sick, or disabled.'"

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: The section as it stands includes county hospitals. I do not suppose there will be any objection to striking it out.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I move to amend section two, line five, by striking out the word "called," and insert the word "holden." The object of that is: that the word called has no application. The first session will not be a called session.

MR. HAGER. If we strike out the word called, that would accomplish the result without inserting anything. I move a division of the question.

MR. VAN DYKE. I accept that amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment, as one member of the Legislative Committee, in the absence of the Chairman of that committee.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-one, line two, by striking out the word 'any,' before the word 'State,' and inserting the word 'this.'"

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: That is the way it came from the committee, but on motion of Mr. Reynolds, the word "any" was inserted in place of the word "this;" that having been done, the plain and palpable inconsistency which exists here would not be corrected by the Revision Committee. Were it not for the fact of action having been taken upon it, I suppose the Revision Committee would correct it. As it reads now, it makes nonsense, when taken in connection with the last clause of the section. It requires that our Legislature shall provide for punishing as a felony an embezzlement which occurred in any other State. I suppose there can be no question about this.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: I wish to state before this body that there was quite a discussion upon this subject, and that the conclusion was arrived at upon principle and in an intelligent way. It was considered at that time, and so discussed, that if any one in another State had been guilty of embezzlement or defalcation, that he should not, when he was here, pass along as if he had never done anything of the kind; but that this same wrongdoing should come up against him as much as though he had committed that deed here. This is not a mere error in words; it embraces a principle, and that principle was discussed at length, and it was considered proper that any person convicted of an embezzlement or defalcation of public funds of any State, that the same should be recorded against him here, and prevent him from holding office. I am in hopes it will not be stricken out.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: It was obviously the intention of the Convention that a person who had been convicted of embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of any other State, should be incompetent to hold office here. The section is right enough now, but in inserting the amendment, the word "such," in the fourth line was evidently overlooked, and it makes nonsense, unless the proper amendment is made by striking out the word "such," in the fourth line. Then the section will read:

"No person convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of any State or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State, and the legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of embezzlement or defalcation as a felony."

I will offer that as an amendment to the amendment if the gentleman will accept it.

MR. SCHELL. What right has this State to punish as a felony any defalcation of funds made by a person in another State?

MR. CAMPBELL. As I propose it will not provide for anything of the kind.

MR. SCHELL. Would it not be better to strike out all after the word "State," in the third line?

MR. CAMPBELL. That would be really just as well, because the State will always punish embezzlement and defalcation; but the section as it now stands is nonsense. I will send up my amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order at present.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: The section as it now stands is manifestly incorrect. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum, ought not to be made, because that word "any" was inserted on principle. We do not want men who have been convicted of embezzlement in other States to come here and enjoy office. The proper way to amend it would be to strike ont the word "such," in line four, or else strike out all the words after "State," in line three.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I do not care what this Convention does with the word "any," where it occurs before the word "State." nor do I care what it does with the section. The amendment is based upon a hypercriticism. I will only remark that I do not see any reason why, if we prohibit those who are convicted of defalcations in this State from holding offices of trust or profit, why we should permit those who have been convicted of the same offense in other States to come here and hold such offices. I do not see why a defaulter from another State should be considered any better than one of our own.

MR. CAMPBELL. I will ask the gentleman if he proposes to punish a man here for an offense committed in another State?

MR. REYNOLDS. Does the gentleman assume the preposterous position that the Legislature will proceed to enact laws to punish embezzlement committed in other States? Now, sir, the word "such," in the fourth line, does not refer to the word "any." It refers to the defalcation of public funds, and not the public funds of any other State than this State.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. McCallum.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I move to strike out the word "such," in line four, and insert, after the word "defalcation," in lines four and five, the following: "of the public funds of this State."

MR. AYERS. That is right.

MR. CAMPBELL. I have an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out of section twenty-one the word 'such,' in line four."

MR. CAMPBELL. Now, sir, the reason I offer this is, that the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento provides simply for the punishment of embezzlement or defalcation of funds of this State.

MR. EDGERTON. I accept that amendment. I think that covers the ground.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to say that section twenty-one, as proposed by my amendment, would have been precisely the Constitution as it is. Inasmuch as the word "any" has now been retained by striking out the word "such," the difficulty will be removed and in no other way.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento to strike out the word "such."

The amendment was adopted.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment to section twenty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'eight,' in line three, and insert the word 'six.'"

MR. WEST. Mr. President: Inasmuch as the Legislature will be the watch-dogs of the treasury, it is important and necessary that their ideas of economy should be practical. I do not propose to advocate this any more than to recommend it to the good common sense of this Convention, and upon the adoption of this motion I call for the ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Evey, Brown, Kenny, Stuart, and Nason.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

Messrs. Tully, Larue, Waters, Mansfield, and Murphy demanded the previous question.

The Convention refused to order the main question.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I move to amend section twenty-five by striking out the last subdivision thereof. I conceive that this is a very dangerous provision to have in this Constitution. The section prohibits the Legislature from passing certain local laws. After we have enumerated all we can think of, then we put in a clause here which gathers up everything else: "In all other cases where a general law can be made applicable." By a declaration in the bill of rights we have made this Constitution mandatory, except where otherwise provided. The result of leaving that in the Constitution will be to endanger every law to an adjudication upon the question, whether the Legislature could or could not pass a general law to cover it. In other words, the Legislature would not be the judge of the matter. We specify here thirty-two cases where the Legislature shall not pass laws local or special in their nature, and then we have added one which covers all we have enumerated, and possibly a great many others which we forgot to enumerate. It will leave the whole Legislature in doubt and uncertainty. Now, if we know of any more subjects than we have enumerated, let us right here and now specify them and stop. But I think this is decidedly dangerous. If it was merely directory it would be a different thing; but it is mandatory.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I agree with the motion to strike out subdivision thirty-three of section twenty-five. The article is now too iron-bound upon the Legislature, and makes it too uncertain as to the character of legislation that is not included within the prohibitory clause; and I therefore hope it will be stricken out.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I am very much in hopes that that will not be stricken out. It is found in all the modern Constitutions.

MR. VAN DYKE. All other Constitutions do not make it mandatory in every case.

MR. BIGGS. I want it mandatory—and I tell the gentleman to take his seat. [Laughter.] I hope we will stand by what was adopted in the Committee of the Whole; stand by the report just the way it is here, and not strike it out.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: If there is any one clause in this section twenty-five that ought not to be stricken out it is the last clause in it. Almost every State Constitution recently made, contains the same provision, and it is intended to cover various cases of special and local legislation which might come up; the idea is to abolish special and local legislation entirely. We have enumerated thirty-two cases, and cover the balance by this general clause. Why should there be any special legislation in any case where a general law can be made applicable? The gentleman who proposes to strike it out ought to suggest wherein some local or special Act would be proper where a general law would not be applicable.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda.

The amendment was rejected.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

Mr. Murphy in the chair.

PETITION.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: I ask leave, out of order, to present a petition. I have the honor to present a petition signed by some three hundred ladies of Sacramento City, asking of this Convention—to use their own language—"such provision in the new Constitution as will tend to secure to the women of the land a voice in the government of the country, by affording them the opportunity to exercise the right of suffrage." There are also about sixty other names signed to a similar petition, which could not, in the brief time, be transferred to this. The signers of this petition have not, therefore, taken any active public part in this movement. They cannot be called brawlers or seekers of notoriety. They are the mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters of as good, intelligent, and respectable citizens as there are in this State. This petition is the result of a plan for concert of action, inaugurated in this city within a day or two. If final action shall not be taken by this Convention on the matter of woman suffrage before further efforts can be made, they propose to add to the signers of this petition several hundred other names. Mr. President, the main argument used by the opponents of woman suffrage is, that women do not desire it. The character of the women who have signed this petition, and the large number of signers obtained in so short a time, considering the contemptuous opposition made by so many husbands and fathers, is, to my mind, a refutation of that argument. I firmly believe that if a fair expression of the sentiments of all the women in this State could be obtained, without any intimidation by the men who now so largely control their destinies, it would be found that a majority of them are to-day in favor of having the right to vote. I hope, sir, that this petition will have some influence in the final passage of the article on the elective franchise.

The petition was received, and laid on the table.

RESOLUTION RELATIVE TO MINING DEBRIS.

MR. REED. Mr. President: I ask leave to present a resolution and memorial.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, The Sacramento River, the great natural highway of this State, so important for the transportation of the products of the Sacramento Valley, has for many years been filling up with debris and obstructions of other character, thus destroying the navigation of said river to an extent that large steamers are now entirely unable to navigate the waters of the upper Sacramento for a distance of one hundred and fifty miles, where, ten years ago, such steamers were engaged in carrying the products of a large area of country with such facilities for navigation as to inure to the great benefit of the producers, now entirely closed; and, whereas, from the rapidity with which the navigation of so much of said river has been rendered useless, there can be no doubt but that, in the course of a very few years, the entire navigation of the said Sacramento River will be effectually closed, thus producing great inconvenience and distress to the entire producing classes now engaged in agricultural pursuits; therefore,

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be and they are hereby requested to use all honorable endeavors to procure the adoption of the amendment to the appropriation bill now pending before Congress, introduced in the Senate by the Honorable A. A. Sargent.

REMARKS OF MR. REED.

MR. REED. Mr. President: I will state that generally I am opposed to the introduction of resolutions of this character in a Constitutional Convention. But we have passed many such resolutions here, which were not one tenth part as important as this, and I ask the indulgence of this Convention to pass this resolution, and that it be telegraphed at once to Washington, as the harbor appropriation bill will probably be acted upon to-morrow, or next day. There is no provision for telegraphing, and I propose to do that at my own expense. This is a matter of great interest to everybody living in the vicinity of the Sacramento River.

MR. TINNIN. As far as the resolution is concerned, I have no objections to it. But the preample does not state the facts. Now, every man of intelligence knows that the navigation of this stream is just as open as it was fifteen years ago.

MR. REED. You are mistaken entirely.

MR. TINNIN. No, sir. The reason why steamers are not plying on the Sacramento to-day, is that the railroad company controls most of the steamers, and they have a monopoly, and have drawn the steamers off. As far as the resolution goes, I will favor the resolution, but I certainly object to the preamble.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon striking out the preamble. Lost.

MR. GLASCOCK. Mr. President: I know that every statement made in that document is true. I heartily concur in every word that Mr. Reed has said in support of the resolution, and I hope it will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Adopted.

REPORTS.

MR. HILBORN. Mr. President: Your Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, to whom was referred the resolution of Judge Hager, authorizing the Committee on Revenue and Adjustment to appoint a clerk, herewith report the same back, and recommend that it be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Adopted.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: Your Committee on Reporting and Printing beg leave to report as correctly engrossed: "Amendment number five hundred and fourteen—Water and Water Rights; Amendment number five hundred and twenty-three—Education; Amendment number five hundred and fifteen—State Institutions; Amendment number one hundred and seventy-eight—Harbors, Tide Water, and Navigable Streams; Amendment number five hundred and four—Suffrage."

SPECIAL ORDER—REPORTING DEBATES.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: I call for the special order.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution offered by the gentleman from Stanislaus, and made the special order for this hour.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton have in their possession a full and complete stenographic report of the debates and proceedings of this Convention; and, whereas, it may be advisable, in the near future, for the State to possess itself of said report; and, whereas, in such an event, the lack of an official sanction by this body of said report would greatly impair its value and usefulness; therefore be it

Resolved, That the said E. B. Willis and P. K. Stockton be and they are hereby declared the official reporters of the Constitutional Convention of California, held in the years eighteen hundred and seventy-eight and eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, subject to the following restrictions: First, in the event of the State desiring to possess itself of a long-hand copy of said report, it shall be the duty of the said Willis and Stockton, jointly or severally, to furnish the same to the State, and to receive therefor a compensation which shall not exceed ten dollars per day each for the time spent in taking said report, and twenty cents per folio for transcribing the same into long-hand. It shall be the further duty of the said Willis and Stockton, or either of them, in the event of the publication of said report by the State, to furnish each member of this Convention, if desired, a long-hand copy of his speeches and propositions, for revision and correction, before being submitted for publication. Unless the State shall hereafter purchase the said report of the proceedings and debates of this Convention, as above provided, no claim of the said Willis and Stockton, or of either of them, against the State for services already rendered in this Convention, shall have any binding effect or be other than void.

REMARKS OF MR. O'SULLIVAN.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: I desire to place my name squarely on record on this subject, because I am utterly opposed to the proposition of recognizing any persons as official reporters of this Convention. Such a recognition at this day and date will be fully equivalent to an election, which was voted down more than once by a large majority of this Convention at the commencement of the session. The proposition was then voted down because the estimated expense was considered disproportionate to the benefit likely to be derived by the State from having the speeches of members printed. I am opposed to saddling any expense upon the State now for any such purpose, as I was at first. I am opposed to the election of official reporters of this body, so that said reporters can go before the next Legislature with such an indorsement, which will be equivalent to an allowance of a claim for services. It will be a positive stultification of its previous action for this Convention to do it now, and what guarantee have we that these reporters are keeping a correct report of the proceedings. Let us not do this thing in the dark. Let us not spend the last days of the session in taking such action on suspicious cases such as this is, that will involve an enormous expense to the State. By doing so we will be imitating the reprehensible conduct of the last days of an expiring Legislature in rushing through enormous steals in disguise.

SPEECH OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I believe that a full and complete report of the proceedings and debates of everything that has occurred in this Convention ought to be preserved for the future. We have, in the course of our session, advocated some new principles and ideas of constitutional law. As far as the State is now concerned, the people have received those ideas with prejudice, as they have been presented to them in a garbled and in a misrepresented shape. And if hereafter, when this Constitution shall be adopted; and if hereafter the members of this Convention are taken to task by the people of the State for their action here, they ought to be enabled to point to the record and to show the reasons which actuated them in that action. This Convention has labored from the outset, throughout the entire session, with disadvantages of every kind. Nearly all the great organs of the State have been against us, and some of them have resorted to ridicule and falsehood as regards our conduct. I wish, sir, in the future to be able to vindicate my actions upon this floor. I do not wish in the years to come, when questions shall arise before the people, that anybody shall question my action, shall impugn my motives, by drawing upon me a file of the papers which have kept garbled accounts of the proceedings of this Convention. I wish to fall back upon the record, and upon that record I wish to stand. Mr. President, I hope that this resolution will pass. It does not follow necessarily that the State will carry out the exact implication of this resolution. I wish it to be in the power of the State—and I want to fix it here—for the State to acquire a longhand report of all the proceedings of this Convention. I consider the resolution sufficiently guarded. The State may take it or not, as it pleases; and the terms are the ordinary terms of the profession. Now, sir, suppose that we do not adopt this resolution; suppose we adjourn without doing anything in this matter; the gentlemen who have kept a copy of the notes of the proceedings of this Convention will own them as private property; and should this Constitution be adopted, the State will be required to carry out the comity that has existed between States in regard to Constitutional Convention proceedings, and exchange reports with them; and these gentlemen will have a corner upon the proceedings of this Convention, and may charge whatever they please. By adopting this resolution, which is acquiesced in by the gentlemen who have kept these notes, we shall secure ourselves against future speculation; and in that view, I consider the measure an economical one.

SPEECH OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I have heard a great deal of abuse of what the Legislature has done, and a majority of this Convention has, undoubtedly assumed that if they had been in the Legislature these great wrongs would never have been perpetrated. We are now, as the time passes for this session to draw to a close, being placed under the same peculiar temptations and conditions under which the Legislature often has acted; and that is, in the presence of these gentlemen, who are said to be the official reporters, we are called upon to declare that they are the official reporters of this Convention, and the question of courtesy is involved. My judgment is that a bigger job was never attempted by the State Legislature than the job for which we are attempting to lay the foundation. On three several occasions, by a direct vote of this Convention—and against my vote, I being in the minority—this Convention resolved that we would have no official reporters; that this State ought not to be put to that expense. Having resolved that, we have proceeded for about five months without official reporters. If we were to have had them, then I would like to have had the benefit of their reports; I would like to have known that the officers were sworn; that there was a responsibility, and for favoritism of one kind and another there should be some accountability. This is simply a private report, and we are asked, at the end of the session, to elect the gentlemen from the beginning of the session, leaving it to the Legislature. Why, that could have been done in the beginning, by leaving it to the Legislature to pay them, if there was no fund provided. But we are now adopting a declaration that these are the official reporters of this Convention. If we declare that they are, we will declare a falsehood. It is not true. They are no more official reporters than any other gentlemen whom the courtesy of the Convention has been extended to and given a seat here. I am perfectly aware, sir, that a document has been circulated here, signed by a majority of this Convention, and the subscription was from ten dollars to twenty dollars, averaging from fifteen hundred dollars to two thousand dollars, which, perhaps, made the gentlemen feel that if they were not officials they ought to be.

Now, sir, if anybody wants his speech reported let him pay for it, and make others pay for theirs. And I imagine the pay of the gentlemen will amount to a good deal more than the pay of delegates on this floor. I suppose it is safe to say that at twenty cents per folio the pay for speeches will amount to five or six hundred dollars, besides what was contributed by some of the members. Now, what is this proposition? "A per diem," says the resolution, "of ten dollars a day from the beginning of the session." For one hundred and fifty days that would be three thousand dollars for per diem of two men who are not officers of the Convention. Then, at twenty cents per folio, it lays the foundation for a raid upon the State Treasury to the extent of fifty thousand to seventy-five thousand dollars. And for what? For official reporters, gentlemen say, but I deny the "whereas." "Whereas, these gentlemen have in their possession a full and complete stenographic report of the debates and proceedings—." Where is the proof of it? Not one member of this Convention can say he knows it, and several can say we know it is not true. If gentlemen will propose these resolutions they must take the answer to them. I say from my own knowledge, and I have heard it from other delegates, that as to these reports, whatever may be the cause--whether they cannot hear, or what—that they scarcely furnish the framework of a speech. I would about as soon try to write out my speech from memory as from that framework. The only instance in which they purported to make a report of what I said—about ten minutes—there was not three sentences in it that I had used. The effect of this is about this—this revision: after a man gets his speech, if it does not suit him, he will write a speech that will suit him. If he cannot write he will call in some friend able to write it for him, and the speeches which would go into the official report would not be the speeches made here, but the speeches that gentlemen would have prepared for them by some friend or some clerk. And these speeches would be paid for by the State of California at twenty cents per folio. And even these unfortunate gentlemen who have already paid their twenty cents per folio—and I can name some who have paid a good deal—the State would pay the twenty cents for the same speeches over again. Now, sir, I trust that no such action will be taken by this Convention. It ought to be utterly silent upon the subject. Let the Legislature buy it if they will. It is introduced here and we are asked to give it sanction. We are asked to become particeps criminis in a job, the magnitude of which we know not.

Mr. HEISKELL. If the gentleman says there is any job in the resolution he states a falsehood.

SPEECH OF MR. VAN VOORHIES.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. Mr. President: I have a sort of an idea that my colleague, Mr. McCallum, is right. I don't think his speeches ought to be paid for. [Laughter.] These young gentlemen have staid here as long as we have, and have listened to (I suppose they have—if they have they have done more than anybody else in the world has) all the speeches made in this Convention. I say, therefore, we ought to adopt this resolution for them. Of course I do not mean that all the speeches that have been made ought to be published, because that would ruin the whole affair. [Laughter.] I think the Constitution would not be adopted. [Laughter.] But I believe most of the members have been earnestly and honestly trying to carry out what their constituents told them to do. [Laughter.] Now, Mr. President, there is one thing I want to say now. I have been told ever since the commencement of the session, that the eyes of the people of this State were upon me. I wish they would take them off. [Laughter.] The eyes of the people are on me. Am I not one of the people? I am an integral portion of the people, and whenever the people tell me that I have not done right I will tell the people to go to the devil, and not come to me about it. Now, these gentlemen have stayed here during the whole session; they have worked for us; they have reported our speeches—everybody's except mine; I didn't want them to report mine. [Laughter.] These young men have stayed here day after day, and worked for you, and why should they not receive this much consideration at our hands? They have worked laboriously, and I have no doubt honestly, and why should they not be sustained? I trust the resolution will pass.

SPEECH OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope, as I did at the beginning of this Convention, that we shall take some steps to provide for an official report of the proceedings of this Convention, in the event that the Legislature wishes to publish them. I do not believe the importance of it can be overestimated. And, sir, there is to be found plenty of evidence that the official reports of a Convention of this kind are of the utmost importance. We, sir, have had here a Convention the like of which has never assembled before. I think I shall be borne out by the great majority of this body, that we have had here a Convention assembled at a time such as no Convention ever yet assembled in. Questions that have not before agitated the public mind, have been forced upon the attention of this Convention. Some of these ideas have been repudiated, as they undoubtedly ought to be. But it is well to know what was in the minds of the people who are sent here, no matter what those ideas are. Now, sir, in regard to the opinions of those who are well posted upon this subject, I desire to read for a moment from "Jameson on Constitutional Conventions," a gentleman who is perhaps the best authority upon this particular subject of any man in the United States. Now he says this, in regard to providing official reports of the proceedings:

"It would be a most niggardly policy which should refuse the expenditure necessary to the preservation of most full and accurate reports of its debates and proceedings. Upon this subject, however, there has been no slight difference of views in different Conventions. In many of the States volumes have been published containing both the Journal and the debates of all their Conventions. In others the subject seems not to have been regarded as of any consequence whatever; and what little has been preserved has been owing to the private enterprise of the newspaper press. The result is that the memorials of the most important public bodies ever assembled in those States are often very meager, and more often confused and inaccurate. Such a policy is 'penny wise and pound foolish.' In after years, when it has become impossible to replace what has been lost, more enlightened public opinion commonly finds cause to regret a paltry economy which deprives history of its most important data. It should be remembered that our Conventions lay the foundations of States, many of which are to rival the greatness and glory of Rome, of England, and of France. In a hundred years from now what treasures would they not expend could they purchase therewith complete copies of their early Constitutional records—documents standing to their several organizations in the same relation as would the discussion of those ancient sages who framed the Twelve Tables of the Roman law to the Republic of Rome."

That, sir, is the opinion of a man who is probably the best judge in this country upon such matters. Now, sir, the question here is not whether we shall compel the Legislature to pay for these reports. The matter as stated by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. O'Sullivan, that it would be an attempt to put a large additional expense upon the State, is certainly not correctly stated. No additional expense will be incurred by reason of the passage of this resolution. It is simply stating that these gentlemen are the official reporters of this Convention. It simply binds them to do certain things in case the Legislature desires to publish these debates. Now, sir, what would have been the condition of these reports if these gentlemen had not stayed here and taken down the proceedings. The result would have been they would have been here for somebody else; they would have been here for some newspaper, the publishers of which desired to publish some portions of the proceedings of the Convention; and the proceedings would have been published in the interest of the sentiments of the paper publishing them, and our only recourse to find out what had been done, what was the intention of the Convention upon any subject, would be to refer to the reports as published by those newspapers, and instead of having a truthful report of the proceedings and doings of this Convention, we should have had a report of what some newspapers wished had been done, or as near to what they wished as they could warp the proceedings to fit. Now, sir, in contradistinction from that, these gentlemen have remained here at their posts, taking down these speeches during the whole time, and they have, and can furnish a verbatim report of everything that has transpired in this Convention, from the very beginning until now, and they will have such report until the end. This resolution only asks us to declare these the official reports. Now, if the Legislature shall desire to publish these reports at any time, these gentlemen are prohibited from receiving more than the regular per diem that is established by law for phonographic reporters all over the country, and when they write them out, they shall not receive in excess of the regular price per folio. And that is as much as we should say. Then if the Legislature in its wisdom should see fit to publish these debates, they must furnish the copy at the regular standard rates. I hope that this Convention will put the stamp of its approval upon these reports by declaring these gentlemen the official reporters of this Convention, for if we do less than that we shall not do justice to them, and we shall do a gross injustice, not only to ourselves, but to the people of this State.

REMARKS OF MR. TULLY.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I trust this resolution will not pass. It is the first instance in my life that I have ever seen an officer—an attempt to create an officer after the work was done. This Convention decided in the early part of the session that we would not have any official reporter; and at this day and age gentlemen come up here and introduce a resolution, and propose to say that what these gentlemen have done is official, and that it is correct—something about which they know nothing. How can any gentleman give his consent to vote that these reports are correct, when you know nothing about it? They have acted without bonds, without an oath, without any responsibility to anybody, no more than any other reporter in the country; and now they get up here and propose to say, after the work is done, that it is correct and official. I shall not vote for that proposition, and I hope the Convention will not do so. I know nothing about either of the young gentlemen who are employed reporting here. I presume they are paid or they would not be here. I know nothing about it, and care nothing about it, for it is none of my business; but my experience is, that gentlemen do not sit day after day and perform labor when they are not paid for it. I trust this resolution will be voted down. If the Legislature wants this thing, they can buy it. If not, they can let it go. As far as I am individually concerned, I would not give a flip of a penny for it. With a few honorable exceptions, the speeches that have been made are clap-trap and humbug, and I don't know of a man who would read the proceedings for less than ten thousand dollars.

MR. TOWNSEND. Have you contributed anything towards it?

MR. TULLY. No, sir. I say, if you go to employ a man to read these proceedings, he would charge ten thousand dollars to do it.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Do you think he would survive it?

MR. TULLY. I don't believe any man would come out with a sound clear head after he had read it through. Now, I hope that this thing will be voted down, because—as far as the author of the resolution is concerned, I attribute nothing to him. I know him to be an honorable man. But there is a nigger in the bush somewhere. It is an attempt to stamp this thing with an official character that will give somebody the right to go before the Legislature and demand an appropriation to pay for it. If it is not so, why do they want us to declare them official? Is it for mere idle glory? Why do these gentlemen care anything about it? No, sir; it is a scheme, and they desire to be placed in a position that will enable them to demand money from the State. I hope it will be voted down.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: This, sir, is a most extraordinary proposition that is brought in here, and if there was no other reason, it is reason enough to vote against it, that I do not understand it, and I doubt if any member of this Convention understands it, and I most seriously doubt whether the people will not understand it to be forty or fifty niggers in the fence. Now, sir, this reporting was entered upon as a private speculation, and I am in favor of allowing it to remain a private speculation. If the gentlemen desire a certificate that they have sat here and taken notes, I am content to give it to them, but I am not willing to brand their work as official and correct, even though there is a proposition there at the tail end that gentlemen can have their speeches revised: Now, sir, how do I know they are correct? What is the beauty of any official reports, that are ever offered to the world? Why, sir, it is that at the time, then and there, you have an opportunity to meet it, to answer it, and to state whether it is correct or not. There is not a set of debates in the country where the speeches were not written out and submitted to the members and inspected by them and verified in some way as correct. Now, sir, I do not know exactly whether I am correct or not, but I am informed by those who do the business, that after these reports get cold, no one but the reporter is able to verify them. My experience in Courts is much to the same effect, that those reports that are brought in there that have not been transcribed are very difficult to read, even by the authors themselves, and it is difficult even for them to determine exactly what was said.

MR. REYNOLDS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question? When testimony is taken by the reporters in Courts, is it not taken as correct every day in the week, and every week in the year, all over the State? Is it not the official record?

MR. BARBOUR. It is in the Courts. If the gentlemen want to have us put in evidence that they have sat here and taken these reports, I have said that they have. They have been here making reports, but, sir, I do not propose to say whether it is correct. I believe that this is intended to be construed into an indorsement or direction to the State to purchase these reports. I believe that the people will so construe it. I have said that it was started as a private speculation, and if the gentlemen can sell the reports to the Legislature I have no objection. I know that it is a physical impossibility for the one hundred and fifty-two members of this Convention ever to have an opportunity to revise at all, and we must all take our chances in that event, the one with the other. I want nothing better, nor nothing less. But, sir, I will not consent that it shall be published to the world that I said so and so here, and when I declare that I never uttered such language, they can turn to me and say that the report is official. I do not know that it is correct. I have no opportunity to examine it.

SPEECH OF MR. HEISKELL.

MR. HEISKELL. Mr. President: The Legislature that passed the Act calling this Convention, anticipated official reporters, and provided that they should have them if they saw fit to do so. Now, sir, as regards the correctness of these reports, we have just as much knowledge that they are correct as we would have if they had been sworn in as reporters. These gentlemen are ready to take an oath that they are correct. Now, the gentleman from Alameda has denounced this as a job, but he has not produced a scintilla of proof that it is a job. He had this resolution laying before him and did not point out wherein there is any chance for a job, he could not do it. He makes an assertion that is false, and he cannot back it up with any facts, even with the resolution before him.

MR. McCALLUM. I said it laid the foundation.

MR. HEISKELL. Where does it lay the foundation? You are asserting what you cannot prove, because it is not true. You make that assertion with the document lying before you. Newspapers are conducted by private enterprise, and I have no personal grievances against them. Now, sir, this does not bind the State to pay one cent; the State is protected in the last clause of this resolution. The gentleman still denounces it as a job, and I challenge him, or any other gentleman, to point out wherein there is any possibility of a job, or where anything is concealed.

REMARKS OF MR. STUART.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I am in favor of the resolution, but would like to have an amendment adopted striking out the clause allowing revision of speeches. I think I see in the near future a Victor Hugo in this State. He will want to write a Les Miscrables, and why not have the whole thing and take every word that has been said here by each individual, and let it go out as a volume, the like of which the world has never seen or read before. If the gentleman from Stanislaus would agree to an amendment striking out the revision, I think the Convention should unanimously support the resolution, and place it so that the Legislature can recompense these gentlemen for their daily labor and toil, both day and night, as long as they have been here.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: I wish to explain the vote I shall cast upon this resolution. I shall vote for it because I think it is a protection to the members. and a restriction upon the Legislature. Certainly we cannot prevent these speeches, or the record made here, from being published. These gentlemen can publish them whether the Legislature authorizes them to do so or not, and if there is not something done by this body, the Legislature can vote as much as they please. This is a restriction upon the Legislature, that these reporters shall not have more than a certain amount. Without saying anything here, the Legislature has full power in the matter, and can pay as much as it pleases. But by making them official reporters, you make them officers of this Convention, and limit the amount which they may receive. It seems to me that the Legislature would not have power to change that. These are the reasons why I favor the resolution.

REMARKS OF MR. TOWNSEND.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I shall vote for this resolution because I believe the State will need these records; I think it is but a simple act of justice. Now, I presume if the gentleman fron San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, had told these gentlemen that he would give them a certificate recognizing the fact that they were here, that would have settled the question, and they would not have presented this resolution, but he did not announce it in time. Now, I can hardly understand the opposition here, especially that of Mr. McCallum, who has probably made more speeches here than any other gentleman on this floor; I can only account for it on the ground that his speeches don't look as well on paper as he thought they would, hence he is opposed to their being preserved—and I don't wonder at it [laughter], looking at it in that light. And, sir, in regard to the correctness of these reports, I think, perhaps, in a good many cases, it would be more complimentary to members if they were not correctly reported; perhaps their speeches would read better. But, sir, it is a fact that there have been many able debates here. There have been questions of great importance brought before this Convention, such propositions as were never before brought before any deliberative body, and they have been argued by men who are able, intelligent, eloquent, and honest, and these debates are well worth preserving. I shall vote for the resolution.

SPEECH OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I hope this resolution will pass. As their merits seem to have been pretty thoroughly discussed, I will content myself with remarking that the opposition to them here reminds me of what I have heard of the Southern Pacific Railroad. It is said to be one of the sinuosities of that institution, that in overcoming an otherwise insurmountable mountain which lay in its track, it winds around in a circle, enters a tunnel, doubles on its track, and emerges on the other side and goes on its way. If these debates were written out and published, might they not show something of the same sort in the record of some gentlemen who oppose these resolutions? And is it not just possible that this fact explains that opposition? I can recollect much in the course of gentlemen who distort facts and pervert the meaning of these resolutions, that looks like doubling on their tracks—like going into their holes to come out on the other side.

Now, the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Barbour, questions the integrity of these reports; says we do not know anything about their correctness. Now, sir, the world has come to consider the report of an official short-hand reporter more correct than the memory of a speaker. We see that illustrated every day, in every Court in the State. They choose a short-hand writer, and he takes notes of the testimony of witnesses, writes it out afterwards, and the Court assumes that these notes are correct, without ever questioning the witnesses, or referring to them again. Why should we not be willing to do so? I am willing, as far as I am concerned, to trust the reporters' notes. I know that a short-hand reporter is but a machine, and it is impossible for him to write down what he does not hear. Now, I do not want to correct or change a single speech I have made. I am willing that all my muddy ideas and stumbling English shall go into the record just as the reporters hear it. If I have gone into any holes and come out on the other side, or doubled upon my track, I am willing that the notes shall show it. If other gentlemen cannot endure the ordeal, so much the worse for them. Let us regard that as an explanation of their opposition to having this record made.

MR. CONDON. Mr. Chairman: I wish, sir, to condemn the practice of introducing resolutions to make reports official reports of a Constitutional Convention as most dangerous, and this proposition which has been introduced here is no exception. Already, sir, the time occupied by discussions upon this question has occupied the time of this Convention to an unlimited extent. It is evident, sir, to my mind, that every gentleman within the hearing of my voice has been sufficiently informed as to its character, as to its true inwardness, and ready, no doubt, to vote, and I trust they will vote against it. Consequently, sir, in view of that fact, I move the resolution be laid upon the table.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to lay upon the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Reynolds, Huestis, Stedman, Heiskell, and Blackmer.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT—ELEEMOSYNARY INSTITUTIONS.

THE CHAIR. Section twenty-two is before the Convention.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line nineteen, after the words 'other control," the following: 'provided further, that those institutions receiving State aid shall receive all orphans, half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, directed to them by the State, and in case of a refusal on the part of any such institutions to receive such persons, the aid granted shall be forfeited.'"

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: That question was fully discussed before the Committee of the Whole, and there was such a heavy vote against it, that it is not necessary to argue it at length now. Very little need be said upon it. This is a matter that is perfectly safe to leave to the discretion of these institutions, as they only receive pay for what they support. I can see no sort of reason for imposing any such conditions upon them. They ought to be allowed to decide whom they will receive, and under what circumstances they will receive them.

MR. WELLIN. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will be voted down. It will simply put a whole poor house into an orphan asylum. It will take the inmates of the County Hospitals and transfer them, disease and all, into the asylums, simply because you give them a few dollars every year out of the State treasury.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Vacquerel, Stuart, Smith of Santa Clara, Herrington, and Gorman.

AMENDING AND REVISING THE CONSTITUTION.

SECTION 1. Any amendment or amendments to this Constitution may be proposed in the Senate or Assembly, and if two thirds of all the members elected to each of the two Houses shall vote in favor thereof, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered in their Journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon; and it shall be the duty of said Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner, and at such time, and after such publication as may be deemed expedient. Should more than one amendment be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished, by numbers or otherwise, that they can be voted on separately. If the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments, or any of them, by a majority of the electors qualified to vote for members of the Legislature voting therefor, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of this Constitution.

SEC. 2. Whenever two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall think it necessary to revise this Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote at the next general election for or against a Convention for that purpose, and if a majority of the electors voting at said election on the proposition for a Convention shall vote in favor thereof, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide by law for calling the same. Said Convention shall consist of a number of delegates not to exceed that of both branches of the Legislature, which shall be chosen in the same manner, and have the same qualifications, as members of the Legislature. The delegates so elected shall meet within three months after their election, at such place as the Legislature may direct. The Constitution that may be agreed upon by such Convention shall be submitted to the people, at a special election to be provided for by law, for their ratification or rejection, in such manner as the Convention may determine. The returns of such election shall, in such manner as the Convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the returns so certified to him; and it shall be the duty of the Executive to declare, by his proclamation, such Constitution, as may have been ratified by a majority of all the votes cast at such special election, to be the Constitution of the State of California.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I ask permission to have the Secretary make a correction in the sixth line, by striking out the word "and" where it first occurs.

MR. McCALLUM. I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in line two, section two, 'on the proposition for a Convention.'"

MR. McCALLUM. My proposition is to restore it as it was in the old Constitution. Under this section, if one hundred and fifty thousand votes are cast, five thousand might order a Convention called. I shall not occupy time upon this question, but call for the ayes and noes.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: That ought to be adopted; otherwise, if one hundred men vote for calling a Convention, and nobody votes against it, a Convention would be called. It ought to be a majority of all the votes cast at a general election.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will not prevail. This matter was discussed in Committee of the Whole. I see no reason why we should make an exception in this matter. When a man runs for office, or when any other proposition is submitted, the votes for or against determine the result. So it ought to be here.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I trust that it will remain as it is. I don't see why it cannot be submitted like any other proposition.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I think this section is right as it is. A majority of all the votes cast is enough.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the motion to strike out.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. McCallum, Brown, Grace, Belcher, and Gorman.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

NOTICE.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the article on legislative department was adopted.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

THE CHAIR. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on judicial department on second reading.

MR. CAPLES. I move to dispense with the reading.

Lost.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

ARTICLE —.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of the State shall be vested in the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment, in a Supreme Court, Superior Courts, Justices of the Peace, and such inferior Courts as the Legislature may establish in any incorporated city or town, or city and county.

SEC. 2. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices. The Court may sit in departments and in bank, and shall always be open for the transaction of business. There shall be two departments, denominated, respectively, Department One and Department Two. The Chief Justice shall assign three of the Associate Justices to each department, and such assignment may be changed by him from time to time. The Associate Justices shall be competent to sit in either department, and may interchange with each other by agreement among themselves or as ordered by the Chief Justice. Each of the departments shall have the power to hear and determine causes and all questions arising therein, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained in relation to the Court in bank. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary to transact any business in either of the departments, except such as may be done at Chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment. The Chief Justice shall apportion the business to the departments, and may, in his discretion, order any cause pending before the Court to be heard and decided by the Court in bank. The order may be made before or after judgment pronounced by a department; but where a cause has been allotted to one of the departments, and a judgment pronounced thereon, the order must be made within thirty days after such judgment, and concurred in by two Associate Justices, and if so made it shall have the effect to vacate and set aside the judgment. Any four Justices may, either before or after judgment by a department, order a case to be heard in bank. If the order be not made within the time above limited the judgment shall be final. No judgment by a department shall become final until the expiration of the period of thirty days aforesaid, unless approved by the Chief Justice, in writing, with the concurrence of two Associate Justices. The Chief Justice may convene the Court in bank at any time, and shall be the presiding Justice of the Court when so convened. The concurrence of four Justices present at the argument shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment in bank; but if four Justices, so present, do not concur in a judgment, then all the Justices qualified to sit in the cause shall hear the argument; but to render a judgment a concurrence of four Judges shall be necessary. In the determination of causes, all decisions of the Court in bank or in departments shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated. The Chief Justice may sit in either department, and shall preside when so sitting, but the Justices assigned to each department shall select one of their number as presiding Justice. In case of the absence of the Chief Justice from the place at which the Court is held, or his inability to act, the Associate Justices shall select one of their own number to perform the duties and exercise the powers of the Chief Justice during such absence or inability to act.

SEC. 3. The Chief Justice and the Associate Justices shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large, at the general State elections, at the times and places that State officers are elected; and the term of office shall be twelve years, from and after the first Monday of January next succeeding their election; provided, that the six Associate Justices elected at the first election shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that two of them shall go out of office at the end of four years, two of them at the end of eight years, and two of them at the end of twelve years, and an entry of such classification shall be made in the minutes of the Court in bank, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State. If a vacancy occur in the office of a Justice, the Governor shall appoint a person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a Justice to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the Justice so elected shall hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term. The first election of the Justices shall be at the first general election after the adoption and ratification of this Constitution.

SEC. 4. The Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity, except such as arise in Justices' Courts; also, in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand, exclusive of interest, or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars; also in cases of forcible entry and detainer, and in all such probate matters as may be provided by law; also, in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information in a Court of record on questions of law alone. The Court shall also have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and, also, all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the Justices shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State, upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the Supreme Court, or before any Superior Court in the State, or before any Judge thereof.

SEC. 5. The Superior Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, and in all other cases in which the demand, exclusive of interest or the value of the property in controversy, amounts to three hundred dollars, and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, and cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; also in actions of forcible entry and detainer, of proceedings in insolvency, of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; also, of all matters of probate, and, also, of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said Court shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in Justices' and other inferior Courts in their respective counties as may be prescribed by law. Said Courts shall be always open (legal holidays and non-judicial days excepted), and their process shall extend to all parts of the State; provided, that all actions for the recovery of the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real estate, shall be commenced in the county in which the real estate, or any part thereof affected by such action or actions, is situated. Said Courts, and their Judges, shall have power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto, and habeas corpus, on petition by or on behalf of any person in actual custody, in their respective counties. Injunctions and writs of prohibition may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

SEC. 6. There shall be in each of the organized counties, or cities and counties of the State, a Superior Court, for each of which at least one Judge shall be elected by the qualified electors of the county, or city and county, at the general State election; provided, that until otherwise ordered by the Legislature, only one Judge shall be elected for the Counties of Yuba and Sutter; and, provided, that in the City and County of San Francisco there shall be elected twelve Judges of the Superior Court, any one or more of whom may hold Court. There may be as many sessions of said Court, at the same time, as there are Judges thereof. The said Judges shall choose from their own number a presiding Judge, who may be removed at their pleasure. He shall distribute the business of the Court among the Judges thereof, and prescribe the order of business. The judgments, orders, and proceedings of any session of the Superior Court, held by any one or more of the Judges of said Courts, respectively, shall be equally effectual as if all the Judges of said respective Courts presided at such session. In each of the counties of Sacramento, San Joaquin, Los Angeles, Sonoma, Santa Clara, and Alameda, there shall be elected two such Judges. The term of office of Judges of the Superior Courts shall be six years, from and after the first Monday of January next succeeding their election; provided, that the twelve Judges of the Superior Court, elected in the City and County of San Francisco at the first election held under this Constitution, shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that four of them shall go out of office at the end of two years, and four of them shall go out of office at the end of four years, and four of them shall go out of office at the end of six years, and an entry of such classification shall be made in the minutes of the Court, signed by them, and a duplicate thereof filed in the office of the Secretary of State. The first election of Judges of the Superior Courts shall take place at the first general election held after the adoption and ratification of this Constitution. If a vacancy occur in the office of Judge of a Superior Court, the Governor shall appoint a person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a Judge to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the Judge so elected shall hold office for the remainder of the unexpired term.

SEC. 7. In any county, or city and county, other than the City and County of San Francisco, in which there shall be more than one Judge of the Superior Court, the Judges of such Court may hold as many sessions of said Court, at the same time, as there are Judges thereof, and shall apportion the business among themselves as equally as may be.

SEC. 8. A Judge of any Superior Court may hold a Superior Court in any county, at the request of a Judge of the Superior Court thereof, and upon the request of the Governor it shall be his duty so to do. But a cause in the Superior Court may be tried by a Judge pro tempore, who must be a member of the bar, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the Court, and sworn to try the cause.

SEC. 9. The Legislature shall have no power to grant leave of absence to any judicial officer; and any such officer who shall absent himself from the State for more than sixty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office. The Legislature of the State may, at any time, two thirds of the members of the Senate and two thirds of the members of the Assembly voting therefor, increase or diminish the number of Judges of the Superior Court in any county, or city and county, in the State; provided, that no such reduction shall affect any Judge who has been elected.

SEC. 10. Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the Superior Courts, may be removed by concurrent resolution of both Houses of the Legislature, adopted by a two-thirds vote of each House. All other judicial officers, except Justices of the Peace, may be removed by the Senate, on the recommendation of the Governor, but no removal shall be made by virtue of this section, unless the cause thereof be entered on the Journal, or unless the party complained of has been served with a copy of the complaint against him, and shall have had an opportunity of being heard in his defense. On the question of removal, the ayes and noes shall be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 11. The Legislature shall determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected in townships, incorporated cities and towns, or cities and counties, and shall fix, by law, the powers, duties, and responsibilities of Justices of the Peace; provided, such powers shall not in any case trench upon the jurisdiction of the several Courts of record, except that said Justices shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the Superior Courts in cases of forcible entry and detainer, where the rental value does not exceed twenty-five dollars per month, and where the whole amount of damages claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars, and in cases to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property when neither the amount of liens nor the value of the property amounts to three hundred dollars.

SEC. 12. The Supreme Court, the Superior Courts, and such other Courts as the Legislature shall prescribe, shall be Courts of record.

SEC. 13. The Legislature shall fix, by law, the jurisdiction of any inferior Courts which may be established in pursuance of section one of this article, and shall fix, by law, the powers, duties, and responsibilities of the Judges thereof.

SEC. 14. The Legislature shall provide for the election of a Clerk of the Supreme Court, County Clerks, District Attorneys, Sheriffs, and other necessary officers, and shall fix, by law, their duties and compensation, which compensation shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which they shall have been elected. County Clerks shall be ex officio Clerks of the Courts of record in and for their respective counties, or cities and counties. The Legislature may also provide for the appointment, by the several Superior Courts, of one or more Commissioners in their respective counties, or cities and counties, with authority to perform Chamber business of the Judges of the Superior Courts, to take depositions, and perform such other business connected with the administration of justice as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 15. No judicial officer, except Justices of the Peace and Court Commissioners, shall receive to his own use any fees or perquisites of office.

SEC. 16. The Legislature shall provide for the speedy publication of such opinions of the Supreme Court as it may deem expedient, and all opinions shall be free for publication by any person.

SEC. 17. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall severally, at stated times during their continuance in office, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be increased or diminished after their election, nor during the term for which they shall have been elected. The salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be paid by the State. One half of the salary of each Superior Court Judge shall be paid by the State; the other half thereof shall be paid by the county for which he is elected. During the term of the first Judges elected under this Constitution, the annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court shall be six thousand dollars each. Until otherwise changed by the Legislature, the Superior Court Judges shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars each, payable quarterly, except the Judges of the City and County of San Francisco, and the Counties of Alameda, San Joaquin, Los Angeles, Santa Clara, Sacramento, Nevada, and Sonoma, which shall receive four thousand dollars each.

SEC. 18. The Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall be ineligible to any other office or public employment than a judicial office or employment during the term for which they shall have been elected.

SEC. 19. Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact, but may state the testimony and declare the law.

SEC. 20. The style of all process shall be, "The People of the State of California," and all prosecutions shall be conducted in their name and by their authority.

SEC. 21. The Justices shall appoint a Reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court, who shall hold his office and be removable at their pleasure. He shall receive an annual salary not to exceed twenty-five hundred dollars, payable monthly.

SEC. 22. No Judge of a Court of record shall practice law in any Court of this State during his continuance in office.

SEC. 23. No one shall be eligible to the office of Justice of the Supreme Court, or to the office of Judge of a Superior Court, unless he shall have been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State.

SEC. 24. No Judge of a Superior Court nor of the Supreme Court shall, after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and eighty, be allowed to draw or receive any monthly salary unless they shall severally take and subscribe an oath, before the disbursing officer, that no cause in their respective Courts remains undecided that has been submitted for decision for the period of ninety days.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert, after the word 'detainer,' in line six of section four, the words, 'and in proceedings in insolvency and in actions to prevent or abate a nuisance.'"

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of that amendment. Adopted.

MR. INMAN. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Substitute for section two of the article on judicial department: 'Section two. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, excepting such business as may be done at Chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.'"

MR. INMAN. I don't want to steal any man's thunder. This is Mr. Laine's amendment. He is opposed to this double-headed Court.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Is it the amendment which he offered in Committee of the Whole?

MR. INMAN. I don't know.

THE CHAIR. It is the same amendment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: This matter having been before the Convention, and having been discussed for over a week, Mr. Laine having taken part and having introduced the same section, I believe we are ready to vote, and I therefore move the previous question.

THE CHAIR. Those seconding the previous question will rise.

Messrs. Dunlap, Condon, Huestis, Filcher, and Jones arose.

THE CHAIR. There is no second. The question is on the amendment.

MR. STEDMAN. Ayes and noes.

MR. EDGERTON. I offer an amendment.

THE CHAIR. The first question is on Mr. Inman's amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Stedman, Wyatt, Evey, Filcher, and Brown.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: This amendment was presented in the Judiciary Committee, and voted down. The report came in to the Convention, and this amendment was offered again in Committee of the Whole, and either at that time, or in Convention it was discussed. Mr. Laine made an argument upon it, and I replied to it, and it was voted down. I hope it will be adopted, for it will destroy the system which has been presented here. It has not a particle of merit in it, and has been twice defeated.

SPEECH OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I would be perfectly willing to take a Supreme Court in two departments, but I am utterly opposed to a system which places in the hands of one single Judge the power to shift himself from department to department as he pleases to decide cases; and I am opposed further to any Judge having power to assign cases to either department at the solicitation of friends, or by reason of any other influence brought to bear. Such a condition of things is now presented to us, and any gentleman who will read it will find himself at the mercy of one man in every case he carries into the Supreme Court. If he says a case shall go to one department, it goes there; if he says it shall be tried in bank, it is tried there. For the poor man who has neither friends nor influence, it requires the concurrence of four Judges to carry his case into bank, while one head can order the case of the man who is near the throne and judgment sent, to be heard before a full bench. The Chief Justice will have a dangerous power, and I care not how pure minded an Associate Justice may be, his opinions will be warped to some extent. It is human nature. It is useless to make words upon the subject, the facts must be apparent. I hope the amendment will be awarded a fair consideration.

REMARKS OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: It seems to me this is a very late hour in the day to suggest these radical changes in a system which has been made harmonious throughout and acted upon. Now, this section occupied a very large share of the time in the deliberations of the Judiciary Committee, and it was adopted there by a very large majority. It came before the Committee of the Whole, and received a very decided indorsement there. It has passed through this Convention, and this amendment was thoroughly debated and voted down by a large majority. I am confident that this system will receive the approval of a very large majority of those who have practiced in the Supreme Court. It seems to me that after a system has been so thoroughly discussed as this has, and received the commendation of the bar of the State, who are supposed to act in the interest of their clients, and who know more about the business than anybody else, it is too late to seriously consider these radical changes.

SPEECH OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: It was at such a late day when this report came into the Convention, that we had to take a great deal upon trust. I confess I did. I brought the matter before the Convention on its second reading, but at that time I had not fully investigated it. But, sir, every single moment I looked at it, and every reflection I gave it, only added to my distrust of the whole arrangement. Now, we are constantly lectured here, and constantly reminded by gentlemen that we of ordinary minds, upon these great constitutional questions—. But every well raised American has his ideas of Courts, and it is folly to thus fly in the face of well settled ideas as to what a Court should be, especially a Court of last resort. When they get a decision from that Court they must be satisfied, they must bow to it. Now, sir, that final judgment should not be merely the judgment of one department of that Court, but a judgment of the whole Court, and then the people will be satisfied; not alone that they must bow to it, but that they may be satisfied. Now, who can be satisfied with a judgment rendered by one of these departments? What lawyer will not tell his client that, if he could have got the case in bank, he would have won it.

MR. EDGERTON. Does not the gentleman know that the people of this State submitted to the judgment of these Judges for fifteen years, and that the two Judges were merely added in consideration of the amount of business?

MR. BARBOUR. That was the whole Court, not half of it. It is not the Court where less than half pronounce the judgment. I do not want any such provision in the Constitution, for we will not be able to get rid of the monster when we find that it does not work right. Now, sir, I say, if the great State of Pennsylvania can worry along with seven Judges and one Court, this State can. If the great State of Illinois, with four times the population of this State, can worry along with seven Judges and one Court, this State can do it.

REMARKS OF MR. SMITH.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: The question here is, whether we shall have a system of departments, or whether we shall continue the present system. Now, if the gentlemen wish to change this system, let them debate that question. If they wish to change the powers of the Chief Justice, let them debate that question; but not try to defeat this whole system by arguing propositions which are not before the Convention. This matter has been fully and fairly considered. It may be wrong. If it is, it has been made wrong after a long and thorough investigation by some of the ablest lawyers in the State of California. Now, a great deal has been said here about the powers of the Chief Justice. What is his power? Simply to distribute the business. He will have to act in accordance with the opinions of the other Justices. In order to wield this power he would have to know how certain Justices would decide on certain questions. He would have to know the principles involved in the case before him. So that it would be impossible, it seems to me, for him to get up any arrangement. It is impossible to carry out the different principles involved in the many cases brought before him. This system will certainly expedite business, and I cannot see where it confers any extraordinary power on the Chief Justice. It seems as though gentlemen would get tired fighting this by and by.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment for Mr. Herrington, and ask leave to have it printed in the Journal.

So ordered.

Following is the amendment:

"The Supreme Court shall consist of six Justices, one of whom shall be elected by them to act as Chief Justice; and a record of such election shall be made in the minutes of the Court in bank. The Court may sit in departments and in bank, and shall always be open for the transaction of business. There shall be two departments, denominated respectively, Department One and Department Two. The Justices shall assign themselves, by lot, to the departments, and a record of such assignment shall be made in the minutes of the Court in bank. The Justices shall be competent to sit in either department, and may interchange with each other when, from any cause, a Justice is incompetent to sit in a case pending in his department. Each of the departments shall have power to hear and determine causes and all questions arising therein, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, in relation to the Court in bank. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary to transact any business in either of the departments, except such as may be done at Chambers, and the concurrence of two Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment. The Chief Justice shall apportion the business to the departments. All cases involving the constitutionality of a law of this State as being in conflict with the Constitution thereof, shall be tried in bank. Cases in which any former decision of the Supreme Court is overruled by either department, shall be certified to the Court in bank, and be argued therein, and the decision of the Court in bank shall be final. The Chief Justice may convene the Court in bank at any time, and shall be the presiding Justice of the Court when so convened. The concurrence of four Justices present at the argument shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment in bank; but if four Justices so present do not concur in a judgment, then all the Justices qualified to sit in the cause, shall hear the argument, but to render a judgment, a concurrence of four Judges shall be necessary. In the determination of causes, all decisions of the Court in bank, or in department, shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated. The Justices assigned to each department shall select one of their number as presiding Justice. In case of the absence of the Chief Justice from the place at which the Court in bank is held, or his inability to act, the Associate Justices shall select one of their own number to perform the duties and exercise the powers of the Chief Justice during such absence or inability to act. After the first assignment of the Justices to the departments, at the expiration of their respective terms, or in cases of vacancy, their successors shall be elected or appointed to fill the vacancy in the respective department."

NOTICE.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: Notice is hereby given that I will, on to-morrow, or as soon thereafter as the motion can be heard, move to reconsider the vote by which the article on "future amendments" was adopted. Also, to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to strike out the words, "on the proposition for a Convention," in the fifth line, of section two.

MR. MCFARLAND presented a petition from women of Sacramento for female suffrage.

Laid on the table.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege. Some time ago when the article on land and homestead exemption was under consideration, I took occasion to make some remarks concerning a certain bill pending in Congress that was introduced by the Representative from the Third Congressional District of this State. The report of that bill was telegraphed to the California press as being in regard to the Klamath Indian Reservation. There is a Klamath Indian Reservation in the Third Congressional District which Mr. Luttrell represents, and I naturally supposed that the bill had reference to that. I have since learned upon good authority that the bill had reference to an Indian Reservation in Oregon. I know nothing of the merits of that bill, and consequently my strictures upon Mr. Luttrell and the bill were made under a false impression, and I take this opportunity to make the amende honorable to that gentleman, as I do not wish to misrepresent willfully any public servant.

TAXATION.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I ask leave to present an amendment to section one of the article on taxation, and also an additional section, and to have the same printed in the Journal.

THE PRESIDENT. The article is not before the Convention.

MR. JOHNSON. I ask leave of the Convention that they may be printed in the Journal out of order, for the information of the Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection it will be printed in the Journal.

The following are the sections:

"SEC. —. The value of the capital stock of a corporation shall be assessed in the county in which its principal place of business is located, and separately from all other property belonging thereto; and such stock shall be assessed at its market value when the assessment is made. The real property, and also the personal property other than the stock of such corporation, shall be assessed in the several counties respectively in which the same is situate. The value of such stock over and above the aggregate value of such real property, and the value of the personal property other than the stock, according to such assessment, shall be taxed in the county in which the principal place of business of such corporation is located; and the value of such real property, and the value of the personal property other than the stock, shall be taxed in the several counties respectively in which the same is situate. Such corporation shall furnish to the Assessor of the county in which its principal place of business is located a statement, under oath, of the aggregate value of its real property, and the value of the personal property other than the stock according to such assessment, within such time as may be provided by law; otherwise, the value of the capital stock of such corporation shall be taxed without deducting therefrom the assessed value of such real property, and the value of the personal property other than the stock. The shares of stock belonging to the stockholders in such corporation shall be exempt from taxation; provided, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to railroad corporations."

"SECTION 1. All property in this State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property' is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed; provided, that growing crops, and such property as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation; but property of any county or municipal corporation, not situated within the limits of such county or corporation, shall be liable to local taxation in the county where situated. The word 'property' shall also include stocks, but stocks shall be taxed as hereafter provided in this article. The Legislature may authorize a deduction of debts due to bona fide residents of this State from credits, except in the cases provided for by section four of this article."

REPORT.

MR. AYERS, from the Committee on Reporting and Printing, reported as correctly engrossed: Amendment number five hundred and twenty-one—City, County, and Township Organization; amendment number five hundred and thirty-four—Boundary; amendment number five hundred and thirty-six—Distribution of Powers; amendment number five hundred and twenty-four—Land and Homestead Exemption; amendment number five hundred and thirty-seven—State Indebtedness; amendment number five hundred and thirty-two—Schedule.

RESOLUTION—ADDRESS.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President of this Convention be requested to appoint, at an early day, a committee, to consist of one from each judicial district, whose duty it shall be to prepare an address to the people of this State, setting forth concisely the principal amendments proposed by this Convention to the present Constitution, and, as far as practicable, the reasons therefor; said address to be submitted to the Convention for action thereon before its promulgation.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I merely desire to say, in explanation, that I believe this resolution, or some resolution having the same object in view, is manifestly in the interest of the new Constitution, and that is the object I have in introducing it. I am not anxious to be appointed upon the committee, and would rather some other person would be designated in my place. I do not sympathize with the idea that was advanced here, that it would be an insult to the people of California; but, on the contrary, I think that they will appreciate any effort to assist them in the least in understanding the new Constitution. I believe there are manifest reasons for its adoption, and I ask that it be adopted.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: It seems to me that this is the same subject, substantially, that was considered the other day, and disposed of adversely. It does not readily occur to me what benefit can result from a codification of this Constitution. It amounts to a sort of code commission in substance. I submit that nothing ought to be sent out that does not receive the sanction of this body as a Convention; that a compilation of this kind, if it is to be official, ought to go to the people having the sanction of this body in its official character. It seems to me that a work of that kind would detain this body much longer than gentlemen, I anticipate, desire to stay here. I therefore move to lay the resolution on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Huestis, Burt, Filcher, Campbell, and Hall.

The roll was called, and the motion to lay on the table was lost by the following vote:

AYES.

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I believe that a similar resolution was offered to this body and I opposed its adoption, as I do the adoption of this. Perhaps the last vote plainly indicates that the resolution will be adopted; nevertheless, I desire to say a word or two in opposition to the adoption of the resolution. The resolution, if I understand it correctly, proposes a committee to be appointed, one from each Judicial district in the State. That would necessitate the appointment of twenty-three members of the Convention, which makes a committee too large and unwieldy. Now, sir, if I understand it rightly, it says further, that this Committee, if it be appointed, be appointed in behalf of the Constitution. It is, I take it, to be a committee to recommend the adoption of the Constitution. Now, sir, look at that proposition a moment, that we must have a committee here to recommend to the people the work of this Convention. If we adopt a Constitution here it will have to be by a majority of this body, and I take it that amounts to a recommendation. Can it add anything to the force or effect of it to appoint a committee of this body to recommend the same thing?

MR. HUESTIS. The gentleman does not understand the resolution at all. It does not say to recommend it.

MR. SCHELL. Does it not propose to appoint a committee in behalf of the Constitution?

MR. HUESTIS. No, sir; it does not.

MR. SCHELL. Then let it be read.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President of this Convention be requested to appoint, at an early day, a committee, to consist of one from each judicial district, whose duty it shall be to prepare an address to the people of this State, setting forth concisely the principal amendments proposed by this Convention to the present Constitution, and, as far as practicable, the reasons therefor; said address to be submitted to the Convention for action thereon before its promulgation.

MR. SCHELL. Now, sir, it is not as I understood it to be exactly; but I do not think it alters the case much. In order, sir, to explain fully the amendments which have been adopted here, which, by the way, are legion, it would take a whole volume. I think it will be admitted here that a great deal of legislation is put into this proposed Constitution; that the amendments are numerous, and there are many very radical changes from our present Constitution. I undertake to say, sir, that to state the reasons for all these changes would require a document longer than the Constitution itself, that we may adopt. I do not desire to go over all these objections which I raised here before, and I merely wish to say that the reasons for such a proposition are not sufficient to warrant this body in passing that resolution. I hope, sir, it will not be adopted.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: It appears to me, sir, that the Constitution framed for any State ought to represent the principles which are contained in it sufficiently clear, sufficiently correct, and sufficiently forcible; and whenever we take in consideration an address made to the people explanatory of the reasons why different prominent features of the Constitution were embraced, why, without we indorse such explanation, such arguments will need almost as much explanation as the great principles embraced in the Constitution itself. And it would appear to me very like an effort to explain something, and to enforce something, and to preach in behalf of something that does not possess those true merits which it should.

Now, I am under the impression that when this Constitution goes out before the people, there will be enough in it to study, there will be enough in it to investigate, without the argument and representation of abstract views, if we may call them such, of a committee. It will take almost as much time, and as much attention to investigate what is said by the committee, as to study the Constitution itself. Now, it appears to me self-evident, in a case of this kind, that if we attempt anything of this kind, it is evident that we conclude that the people are not competent to understand this work. Now, members will be called upon to explain this Constitution at home, and when they attempt their explanations they will come in conflict with the explanations of the committee, and it will only look the more complicated. These are some of the difficulties which must necessarily attend the proposition for explanations, and arguments in favor of the Constitution. I am under the impression if it goes forth in its native vigor, with these principles which are embodied in it, every member that is here can give such explanation to his constituents as would suit any reasonable man. I am convinced that there is scarcely a member here, perhaps there are a few exceptions, but what wishes that this Constitution should be adopted, but as to getting up something in order to enforce it, in order to make it appear right at all hazards, I think it is better to let it stand in its pristine excellence, and let it live or die upon its own merits.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the words 'one from each judicial district,' and insert 'nine.'

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment and the resolution as amended. It is not expected that the committee will enter into an elaborate argument, but that they will state briefly the differences between this and the old Constitution. That can be done very briefly.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I send up a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That a committee of three from each Congressional district be appointed by the President, whose duty it will be to prepare an address to the people of this State, to accompany the proposed new Constitution; the said address briefly pointing out the most radical changes proposed.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I am opposed to the substitute and the amendments, and the resolution. It seems that we have been committing a crime, and we want to exonerate ourselves before our crime goes before the people. We are asking for absolution of our sins. Now of course we may be men of good judgment, but the people, I think, have good judgment too. I think the people are educated enough to judge of our work, and this sending out an address to show them that we have been right where sometimes we may have wrong, I think looks like a little—I will not say bulldozing—but it seems something like it anyhow. Therefore I hope that the resolution will not prevail.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I am in favor of an address being presented to the people of this State, briefly stating the changes that have been made by this Convention. An address of that kind will call particular attention to the changes between this and the old Constitution. I think it should be presented to this Convention, and it should be adopted by this Convention. It should be presented by men who are in earnest in favor of this Constitution. With such an address presented to the people, I think it would call particular attention to these matters and would assist in explaining the reasons why the people should adopt this Constitution. As to the number that may be upon that committee, I am not particular, but I am particular that that committee should be composed of men that are favorable to this Constitution, and shall state briefly, in the most concise manner, the changes that are made between this and the present Constitutions.

Messrs. Wellin, Waters, Tully, White, and Gorman demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The amendments of Messrs. West and Murphy were rejected.

Upon the adoption of the resolution of Mr. Huestis, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Hale, Filcher, Blackmer, Steadman, and Huestis.

The roll was called, and the resolution adopted by the following vote:

CHINESE RESOLUTION.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be and are hereby tendered to the Congress of the United States for the triumphant passage of the bill restricting the immigration of Chinese to this country, and that the members of the Senate and House of Representatives, who supported that vital measure, merit and will receive the lasting gratitude of the people of California.

Resolved, That the Secretary is hereby directed to transmit copies hereof to the Senate and House of Representatives.

MR. SHURTLEFF. Mr. President: The intelligence of the final passage of the bill restraining Chinese immigration to this coast was telegraphed here last Saturday, the House concurring in the Senate amendments. To-day that important bill goes to the President of the United States for his signature. There has been, as all know, a violent opposition to that bill. The same spirit that protested against the destruction of African servitude at the commencement of this century, now raises a wail against this restriction of the Chinese coolie trade on this coast or in this country. But the representatives of the people have stood firm. They have done what we all believe to be to the interest of every man, woman, and child in America. The Senate of Rhode Island and Senate of Connecticut have passed resolutions condemning the action of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and asking the President to veto that important measure. I think it will be no egotism in us to assume that we know a great deal more about the subject of Chinese immigration, the black plague of American civilization, than do the people of Rhode Island or Connecticut. [Applause.] I hope that the members of this Convention will pass that resolution unanimously; that we may stand by our representatives, not only the delegates from this coast, but those from the other side of the mountains, who have grappled with this question and assisted in the passage of that bill.

MR. LARKIN. I move the previous question.

MR. STUART [not recognized]. I move to lay it on the table.

Messrs. Gorman, White, Harrison, and Wyatt also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the resolution, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, Barton, Dunlap, White, and Huestis.

The roll was called, and the resolutions adopted by the following vote:

THE JOURNAL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I am represented in the printed Journal as offering an amendment to section twenty-one of the article on legislative department, to strike out the word "any" and insert the word "this." That amendment was offered by Mr. McCallum. I desire to have it corrected.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is properly represented in the written Journal.

MR. EDGERTON. It appears from the Journal that Mr. Edgerton offered an amendment to strike out the word "such," in line four. That amendment was offered by Mr. Campbell.

MR. CAMPBELL. And accepted by you.

RESOLUTION.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be and they are hereby tendered to Denis Kearney for his services in the anti-Chinese cause.

[Applause.]

MR. BARBOUR. I call for the ayes and noes.

Mr. Larue moved to lay the resolution on the table, upon which the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Barbour, Grace, Doyle, Brown, and Smith.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: On the last day of the Convention I gave notice of a motion to reconsider which reads as follows: "Mr. President: Notice is hereby given that I will, on to-morrow, or as soon thereafter as the motion can be heard, move to reconsider the vote by which the article on 'future amendments' was adopted. Also, to reconsider the vote by which the Convention refused to strike out the words, 'on the proposition for a Convention,' in the fifth line, of section two." I make the motion at the request of some gentleman who desire to have an opportunity to correct their votes on the subject. I do not propose to argue it. I am still in favor of the adoption of the motion.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The motion prevailed.

REVISION AND ADJUSTMENT.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I call up the resolution I offered on Friday.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the President appoint three additional members upon the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: There are fifteen members on that committee, but only about twelve working members, as I stated the other day. This will increase it to eighteen members. By some oversight or inadvertence on the part of the appointing power, all of the persons comprising that committee are chosen from other parties than the Workingmen's party, and the Workingmen's party have one third of the delegates upon this floor and are certainly entitled to one member on that committee. And therefore, it having been an oversight or inadvertence upon the part of the appointing power, I make this motion, that there can be a representative of that element upon this committee.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: So far as the efficiency of that committee is concerned, it will be much more advisable to reduce it to five than it would be to increase it by any number.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: That committee did me the honor to appoint me Chairman upon the resignation of Judge Hall. We had six of these articles come in to us, commencing at half past seven o'clock, and we disposed of four of them. If we are not troubled with too many members we will get through to-morrow night, all that is submitted to us. There is very little really necessary to do. I respectfully submit that any greater number on the committee would have no good effect, and if any gentleman desires my place on the committee it is at his disposal.

The resolution was lost.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The unfinished business is the article on Judicial Department.

THE SECRETARY read the substitute offered by Mr. Inman as follows:

"Substitute for section two of the article on Judicial Department: 'Section two. The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices. The presence of three Justices shall be necessary for the transaction of business, excepting such business as may be done at Chambers, and the concurrence of three Justices shall be necessary to pronounce a judgment.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The first question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two by inserting after the word 'justice,' where it first occurs in line twenty-three, on page two, the following, viz: 'All sessions of the Court, whether in bank or in departments, shall be held at the capital of the State.'"

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I hope that this Convention will not go back on its action in Committee of the Whole. This matter of retaining the Supreme Court at Sacramento alone was fully discussed in the Committee of the Whole, and it was concluded to leave it to the legislative department, where it is now. There is no use of multiplying words upon this amendment, and I will therefore merely ask that this Convention follow the rule of the Committee of the Whole so that the Supreme Court may be in session wherever the Legislature may determine it shall be.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I do not rise to repeat the arguments, if they are worthy of that appellation, which I had the honor to submit to the Committee of the Whole upon this question. If, however, we were to follow the suggestion of the gentleman from Los Angeles, I think this amendment would meet with favor, because I believe it is true that this Convention has repeatedly gone back on and repudiated the work of the Committee of the Whole and changed it from top to bottom. I have only to suggest, in reference to this matter, that, as I am advised, and I believe I am correctly advised, that it is the work of a large majority of the bar of this State, that the Supreme Court be located permanently in one place, as a matter of economy; it is certainly a matter of economy for the State to have it in one place.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I trust the Convention will fix one place for the Supreme Court, and I am, for one, indifferent as to where it shall be. Now, if one department of the Supreme Court sets at Los Angeles, and another department is in session here, or somewhere else, and the same question is presented to both, it may decide both ways. If they were where they could confer together there would be no such difference of opinion; they could hear the case in bank, where there was such a division of opinion. I think that some definite place should be fixed.

REMARKS OF MR. WEST.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I suppose that the object of courts is for the benefit and accommodation of the people, that questions of law and equity shall be decided in accordance with the principles of right, and by subserving the best interests of justice and of the people. Now, you will remember—and I ask the attention of the Convention—that this Convention has been memorialized by the members of the bar in the southern part of the State, setting forth the reasons why a session of the Court should be held annually at Los Angeles. The reasons are fresh upon your minds, but for fear that some of the Convention may think that it is a matter of mere personal convenience to the bar, I wish to call the attention of the Convention to this fact, that in southern California, especially from the original unsatisfactory condition of the land titles, and the unfortunate location of a large amount of lieu land scrip, involving the title to a large tract of country now occupied by actual settlers, by persons who have purchased it in good faith, and paid the full price, in many cases exorbitant prices, difficulties have arose to disquiet these titles. Questions have arisen in the Courts, and very many of these settlers are absolutely too poor to fee an attorney to come up here to the Supreme Court in Sacramento; whereas, if there was a term there the local attorneys could attend to these duties at home for the people, at very much reduced rates. I now urge upon this Convention the justice of permitting a session to be held at Los Angeles, under the statute as it is at present, in consideration of the rights of that class of people who cannot come up here or fee an attorney to come here. I myself know of cases of poor men who are lawed out of their land simply because they could not raise money to send an attorney up here.

MR. EDGERTON. I would ask the gentleman if his vast experience in the practice of law, and in the argument of cases in the Supreme Court does not teach him that it costs a litigant only fifteen dollars to get into the Supreme Court and get out again; and it makes no difference whether it is in San Francisco, Sacramento, or Los Angeles?

MR. WEST. I am aware that the fees are the same, but the fees of the attorneys are different. I am aware that perhaps a gentleman located here, at Sacramento, would not raise this point. He might be very anxious that all cases be tried here, for the purpose of endeavoring to monopolize the legal business of the State as far as they can in Sacramento. I ask the careful consideration of the Convention on this one point that I have submitted.

REMARKS OF MR. EAGON.

MR. EAGON. Mr. President: I opposed, in the Committee on Judiciary, the moving of the Supreme Court from place to place, and having it in any other place than the State capital. I believe, sir, that this is the place where the Supreme Court should be held, and no other place. All this talk about economy to litigants has no bearing upon this case at all. If the people of Los Angeles desire to try a case in the Supreme Court, it costs them no more to try it in Sacramento than it does in Los Angeles. There are no witnesses to be brought here; there is no expense attending it. Now, I oppose it on another ground. Before this building was erected here, every year there were applications before the Legislature to remove the State capital, and it kept up and kept up until it was a source of annoyance to the Legislature, and a source of great expense to the State, until we got it fixed by building such a building here as the people would not tolerate the moving of the State capital. Now, sir, this thing will not stop here. They will want a Supreme Court at Marysville, in Butte County, or in Siskiyou County, or some other remote county in this State. There will be no end to this thing if it is not cut off squarely in the Constitution. There is no necessity for the Supreme Court to be on wheels, if for no other reason than to maintain the dignity of that Court. Running it all over the country it loses its dignity. I hope it will be put in this Constitution that we will have it here and nowhere else.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: This matter was fully discussed twice before this Convention, and twice the Convention, by a large majority, determined that the people of the southern part of this State should have the benefit of the presence of the Court at Los Angeles once at least in the year.

MR. EDGERTON. If Los Angeles should have it, why not the people of Siskiyou?

MR. BEERSTECHER. When they want it they can have it. It was stated on this floor that the Judges of the Supreme Court themselves have expressed their willingness to go to the southern part of the State, and of the efficiency of the Court while going from one part of the State to the other. Of course gentlemen like the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton, who are residents of this place, would like to have the Court permanently located here. They have selfish and sordid motives in desiring the Court to be located here. People, of course, have been in the habit, because unable to appear by their own attorneys, of sending their business to gentlemen who live here.

MR. EDGERTON. Will the gentleman from Kalamazoo allow me? Of course I have a certain legal pride in Sacramento, but I should very much prefer that it should be permanent in any other place to having it on wheels. Above all things, I desire that it shall be permanent; and if it cannot be permanent in Sacramento, for God's sake let us have it permanent in San Francisco, or Los Angeles, or in Kalamazoo.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Well, the gentleman has been so favorably impressed with the word "Kalamazoo," which he heard at a variety show here, that he has not been able to get it out of his head yet. Now, this leaves it to the Legislature. If the Legislature see fit to say that the Court shall be permanently located at Sacramento, then Sacramento will be the permanent location. The Legislature should have the power to say where the Court can sit. The people of Los Angeles enjoy the privilege and immunity to-day of having the Court sit at their city. Why say in this Constitution that it shall not sit there? I hope we will stand by our former decision.

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I believe it has been stated here that it has been the custom to hold the Supreme Court at the capital, except in one or two instances. As I cannot accommodate the bar of Sacramento in my vote, I propose to state that precedent is not in accordance with that statement. In looking over eighteen Constitutions which I find in American Constitutions, volume two, I find that in sixteen out of the eighteen the Constitution provides for holding Courts in different portions of the State, and in that respect the Supreme Court is different from the other departments of the government, where the officers are required to do business and, I believe, in most cases, have their residence at the State capital. There are only two Constitutions enumerated—that is, Nevada and Texas—where the Supreme Court is absolutely required to be held at the capital. Now, we propose to leave it just exactly as it is in the old Constitution, and where the law places it. We do not propose to amend the Constitution in that respect. Now, as to the expression of the bar, I must say that my experience is different from that of the gentleman from Sacramento.

MR. EDGERTON. Does not the gentleman know that most of the lawyers of San Francisco, having business with the Supreme Court, prefer that it should be in one place?

MR. MCCALLUM. So far as I have heard expressions from these gentlemen, it has been the other way. It is impossible to know unless you call the roll. California is the second State in size in the American Union, and when Texas shall be divided, as it may be in the near future, California will be the largest, and is a State where, more than any other, such a provision as this is just to the people—leaving the bar out of the question entirely. I propose to leave the Constitution just as I found it, so far as my vote is concerned.

MR. MANSFIELD. Mr. President: In the six lower counties of the State, accommodated by this Court at Los Angeles, there is a population of nearly one hundred thousand people. They pay into the treasury two hundred and sixty-eight thousand dollars a year, and this is the first recognition of any importance that they have ever received. The entire expense of the Court is less than six thousand dollars. I have the figures upon that subject, and ask the Secretary to read them.

THE SECRETARY read:

HON. JOHN MANSFIELD, Constitutional Convention:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of yours of even date, and in reply thereto, will state that the actual expenditure of the Supreme Court at Los Angeles will not be over six thousand dollars per annum.

D. B. WOOLF, Clerk of the Supreme Court.

MR. MANSFIELD. The number of cases on the calendar there last September was one hundred and fifty. For an attorney to come here to attend to a case involves an expense of nearly one hundred dollars. A single term at Los Angeles saves more to the people accommodated by this Court than the entire cost of the Court per annum. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I desire but a few words to respond to the remarks of the gentleman from Sacramento, in behalf of Siskiyou. If he had only added Shasta and Trinity, it would have been all that I could have asked. If we are going to have our Supreme Court on wheels, Mr. President, I think that Shasta, Trinity, and Siskiyou ought to have a chance. That august body might find it a little rough up there, but they would find it grand and lofty.

MR. SMITH, of Fourth District. Mr. President: This matter was fully argued in Committee of the Whole, and the facts brought here to show that the southern portion of this State demanded that they should have the Supreme Court remain there. There is a large population there, and that city is growing very rapidly. We leave the matter just as it is to-day, to the Legislature. If Shasta should become populous, she might have the Supreme Court there as well as any portion of the State. It would not be unwise to leave the matter to the Legislature. This idea of restricting the Legislature so much is wrong. I venture to say, that the gentlemen who do not care whether this Constitution is adopted or not, will vote to restrict the Legislature in this particular. If this amendment is put in, the southern portion of the State will vote strongly against the Constitution. I think it is nothing more than right that it should be left to the Legislature.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I rise to ask a question, in order that I may vote intelligently on this amendment. What is troubling me now, and what I most desire to know, is whether this is an economical body; whether it is in favor of retrenchment and reform? I do not hear any reply. I hear no answer, and so for information I ask to refer to a few figures. Perhaps some of the economists in this Convention do not know what it costs to hold the Supreme Court on a wheelbarrow and run it over the State into the different counties. There are some amusing items taken from official records in this respect. The first one at the head of the list is: "Los Angeles, rent one hundred and seventy-five dollars per month; San Francisco, rent four hundred and fifty dollars per month; Los Angeles, porter seventy-five dollars a month"—they have to have a porter there whether there is any Court or not; "San Francisco, porter seventy-five dollars a month"—they must have a porter, you know; "Los Angeles, Clerk one hundred and fifty dollars per month; San Francisco, Clerk one hundred and fifty dollars per month"—we must have Clerks and porters wherever the Court goes, whether there is any Court there or not; "board nine hundred dollars"—board for the Supreme Court nine hundred dollars; that is on the Los Angeles trip; board costs a good deal down that way; "incidentals" [laughter]—I don't know what that is; I never saw that word in an account before; I don't know what it is; but it is down here for two hundred and fifty dollars.

MR. MANSFIELD. I would like to ask the gentleman what he is reading from?

MR. REYNOLDS. A copy of the official records down stairs.

MR. MANSFIELD. The gentleman knows that he cannot produce that kind of evidence in any Court.

MR. REYNOLDS. I was not aware that I was in Court, or under oath; but if the gentleman wants to verify the figures that I have read, he has but to go in the office down stairs and find what the Board of Examiners have allowed.

MR. MANSFIELD. I would ask if that intellectual Colosus, the Controller of this State, is a member of that Board? The Record-Union published a statement, claiming that the information was got from the Controller's office in this State that a single term of the Court cost thirty-seven thousand four hundred dollars. That is a falsehood, and the man who published it knew it. The man that reiterates it knows it. The entire appropriations for two years was but thirty thousand dollars, and to come into Court with that sort of a paper it seems to me looks suspicious.

MR. REYNOLDS. I do not know what relevancy these statements have to these curious expenditures. The Board of Examiners have allowed for board nine hundred dollars—one month—and now it is expected that a claim will come in for board in San Francisco, while the Court is being held down there. Whether they expect to get their board while in Sacramento, I do not know. Now, the whole amount that it costs to keep this Court on wheels is two thousand two hundred and twenty-five dollars a month, amounting to twenty-six thousand seven hundred dollars a year. Now, the gentleman from Shasta says that it can be held in his county all the time for less money than that. Now, we have been practicing so much economy here this Winter, that without consuming any time in debating this question, I thought I would read these figures for the information of gentlemen who expect to vote upon the question. These, Mr. President, are expenses of the Court incurred in Sacramento.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I do not know what the gentleman from San Francisco is reading from. I imagine that he has swallowed the multiplication table. That that Board or any examining committee has a right to allow board for the Judges of the Supreme Court is perfectly ridiculous.

MR. EDGERTON. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

MR. HOWARD. No, sir. The gentlemen is prolific in questions, and he pops up and pitches into everybody. If we hold this Court in sections it must be held at different places, and if it is not the sections will do no good. It was upon the principle of King Alfred that justice should be brought home to every man's door. And now, in a State as large as this, if the Court is to be fixed at one place, and that place liable to inundation and every other calamity, there will be seasons when it cannot be held at all. The interests of justice require that it shall be held at different places. In the Summer the heat in Sacramento is such that it is totally unfit for the Supreme Court, and the Judges are unfit to work, and it is the interest of justice, and in the interest of the people that the Summer term should be held in San Francisco, or some other place where men can transact intellectual business. I warn gentlemen that if they adopt this proposition they knock this Court of two sections, and they might as well make up their minds to it now as any other time.

REMARKS OF MR. MCFARLAND.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: It seems to me that it is rather a delicate matter for our friends from Los Angeles to talk on this thing at all.

MR. AYERS. How about Sacramento?

MR. McFARLAND. I have not said anything, and need not add anything, to what was so well said by my colleague, Mr. Edgerton. We have had a little more delicacy than our friends from the lower country. Our object is to have the Supreme Court located at one place. If Sacramento is not a good place for it put it at San Francisco. I am willing, if that is a better place; but it should be permanent where the archives are kept, and where the State capital is. I know that a majority of the members of the bar, who do not happen to come from the particular region of Los Angeles, after having tried the experiment of having Court in San Francisco, prefer to have it here. Every lawyer who goes into Court with an important case desires two or three days of preparation. When he comes to Sacramento he has the State library, which belongs to him as much as anybody. He can take possession of it, and while he is waiting for his case in the Court, he can devote that time to a greater preparation of the case in the State library. You cannot do that even in San Francisco. You go to San Francisco to argue a case, and what are the facts? There is a library there belonging to the Supreme Judges, but you cannot get into it. You cannot send for a book that you happen to need, like you can here.

Now, it has been said here that there are only one or two Constitutions that locate the Supreme Court permanently at the capital; but there are only a few States where the Supreme Court is allowed to sit at more than one place. The only reason they can do it here is because the Legislature has decided the places where the Supreme Court shall sit. In nearly all the States alluded to, where the Constitution does not make any provision, the Supreme Court is located at the capital, and nowhere else. I understand that there are one or two, or three, but not more than half a dozen, where the Supreme Court is held at another place than at the State capital.

MR. MANSFIELD. Don't Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Texas, and I believe, Pennsylvania?

MR. McFARLAND. No, sir. I do not know——

MR. McCALLUM. Will you allow me——

MR. McFARLAND. No, sir; I will not allow you. I will say that in seven tenths of them, the Supreme Court is held at one place, and if no other different rule has been established in the Constitution, it is because the legislature do not propose to make any different rule. But, sir, if we take it to San Francisco, and then to Los Angeles, in an other year it may go to the northern part of the State. Now, the question is whether it is wise to allow these court records to be scattered all over the State. Would it not be better to have it at one place. Of course it is some disadvantage to attorneys who do not happen to live near the capital. You cannot expect to have everything in one place. They have got oranges, lemons, Italian skies, summers modified by ocean breezes, at Los Angeles. That is enough, sir. They cannot expect to have all the blessings that Providence confers upon man in one place. They are no worse off than the gentlemen from Shasta, or many other places, who have to come some distance. Everybody knows that the Supreme Court cases are tried upon records. Almost all cases are followed to the Supreme Court by the attorneys who tried them below. It is certainly no advantage to the attorneys of Sacramento, for they seldom have anything to do with the cases of other attorneys, except where they are called upon to do some work for nothing, and as a mere matter of courtesy to a friend. But it is better to have the Supreme Court at one place, disregarding all personal or local questions. We who live in Sacramento to-day, may live in San Francisco two years from now. This is a broader question than that, and I do think it is best to have it at one place, wherever that place may be.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: I hope that this very great injustice to Southern California will not be perpetrated by this Convention, of taking away the Supreme Court from them. The distance is very great from here to that country. I know that the people are very much excited about this very question. I have received several letters myself urging me to watch this. The letters very strongly urge their claims, and ask to have it left to the Legislature. They do not want any clause saying that Los Angeles shall have a Court. They want to leave it to the people, through their representatives in the Legislature, to say where the Court shall sit. I tell you that they may regard it as an insult, and it will create such a feeling that we cannot get this Constitution a fair consideration in the southern portion of the State, if we perpetrate this injustice to them. So I trust and pray that the fair feeling which undoubtedly prevails in this Convention will leave the Legislature to direct this thing as they see fit.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: As to the argument of the gentlemen who spoke in favor of the amendment, that it would detract from the dignity of the Court to have the terms held in different portions of the State, it seems to me that if it is necessary to preserve its dignity that it be in a body in the City of Sacramento, that the Supreme Court Judges had better be appointed rather than elected. Now, sir, the matter of holding this Court in different places is an experiment that is now in process of being worked out under the direction of the Legislature, and it is but just that that matter should be left to them to continue this until they have determined whether it is wise to continue it or not. If the Supreme Court of this State is to be located anywhere in the State of California, as a permanency, Sacramento is not the place for it, neither geographically nor any other way. If it is to be put anywhere as a permanency, and never be moved, that place should be San Francisco. There can be no question about it, and to attempt to fasten it here at Sacramento is unwise, and is an injustice if it shall be consummated. I ask it, sir, on behalf of the constituents whom I represent, who have sent their representative here to this body asking that it be not fixed as a permanency at this place, but that it shall be left to the Legislature. That request should certainly receive respect at the hands of this Convention. It is folly to put this iron rule here, to say that the Supreme Court should forever be held in the City of Sacramento. I hope this amendment will not be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton.

MR. WHITE. Ayes and noes.

The ayes and noes were also demanded by Messrs. Ayers, Brown, Howard of Los Angeles, West, and Lindow.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Inman.

MR. REYNOLDS. I am in favor of the amendment, and in order that it may be perfected I offer the following amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'Justices,' at the end of line one, as follows: 'Who shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State at large, at the general State elections, at the times and places that State officers are elected, and their term of office shall be ten years from and after the first Monday of January next succeeding their election; provided, that those elected at the first election shall, at their first meeting, so classify themselves, by lot, that one Justice shall go out of office every two years. The Justice whose commission shall first expire, shall be Chief Justice, and thereafter each Justice whose commission shall first expire shall in turn be Chief Justice. If a vacancy occur in the office of any Justice, the Governor shall appoint a person to hold the office until the election and qualification of a Justice to fill the vacancy, which election shall take place at the next succeeding general election, and the Justice so elected shall hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term. The first election of Justices shall be at the first general election after the adoption and ratification of this Constitution. The Supreme Court shall always be open for the transaction of business.' Also add to the end of the section as follows: 'In the determination of causes, all decisions of the Court shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated.'"

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I second the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. It is not an amendment to the amendment.

MR. INMAN. I accept the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman can accept the amendment with the consent of the Convention, and not otherwise.

MR. HOWARD. I object.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. The amendment is merely an addition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Inman. It is needless to say that this is a complete substitute for sections two and three of the report of the Committee on Judiciary. It is a complete substitute for the double-headed Supreme Court. It is a complete substitute for all of these unheard of powers granted to the Chief Justice by sections two and three, which I have referred to. It is the exact language of the present Constitution so far as the number of Judges is concerned, so far as the manner of their election is concerned, and so far as their terms are concerned, excepting only in relation as to who shall be Chief Justice. The language is there changed a little so as to determine beyond the possibility of a doubt that the Justice who is oldest in commission, who has the shortest term to serve, shall each in their turn be the Chief Justice. There is then a little addition made to the section, taken from the end of the third section of the report concerning a vacancy, that he shall be appointed and hold until the election and qualification of a successor, who shall hold the office for the remainder of the unexpired term. That provision will be found at the end of section three of the report. Then there is a further provision, not found in the old Constitution, that in the determination of cases all decisions of the Court shall be given in writing, and the grounds of the decision shall be stated.

Now, I have before stated some of my objections to this scheme of a Supreme Court. In the first place it is untried; it is unheard of. I have been examining the Constitutions of the other States, and I can find nothing like it between the lids of any book. That is an objection—that it is new and untried. Again, I can find nothing like these transcendental powers given to a Chief Justice. It is true that the Chief Justice must exercise great control over the management of cases, and the management of the Court, but it is not true that any such scheme ever devised was written or in a Constitution, or ever should be. I am opposed to it on that ground. I am opposed to it again because with this scheme of departments there never can be a satisfactory determination of a case except after three trials. You must have a trial of the case in department, and then you must have another trial to get it referred to the Court in bank, and then to get a judgment of the Court you must have another hearing. The longest purse would be likely to win the case—he who could hold out longest. I would be opposed to the election of the Chief Justice for any term, however short, but here we propose to elect a Chief Justice for a term of twelve years, and we propose further to give him absolute power over any man's case.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's time has expired.

MR. REYNOLDS. It seems to me that the reading of the amendment ought not to be taken from my time. I have only a word or two more to say.

THE PRESIDENT. It is part of your time, sir.

REMARKS OF MR. WYATT.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, will be adopted. It continues the old Supreme Court in its present form, with such improvements as are suggested by the working of that Constitution until its adoption in eighteen hundred and sixty-four. It defines the terms of the Court, so that there can be no question any longer when a gentleman is elected or appointed as to what his term may be; or rather, it prevents them all from being elected at one time, as may be the case under the present Constitution—by the Constitution creating the present Supreme Court. It divides them so that their terms are ten years, one going out each two years, and the one having the shortest commission being Chief Justice. I am in favor of that, because I believe the present Supreme Court amply sufficient to do the business of this State. As I understand it, the present Judges, some of them the best qualified to speak, say that five Judges now are amply sufficient to discharge the duties incumbent upon that Court; that the docket of that Court is now up with the business; that they are keeping up with the business; that they are able to keep up with the business; and that two additional Judges are not necessary in order to efficiently conduct the business of that Court. If that is the case; if the Court is amply sufficient to do the business of the Court; if promptitude can be administered in the affairs of the Court, then it is unnecessary to fasten upon this State two additional Judges, with the expenses of such Judges.

I am in favor of it as against the plan proposed by the committee, for the further reason that that plan vests too much power in the Supreme Judge of that Court. It gives to the Supreme Judge and the members of that Court almost, in my opinion, the same power that the Czar of Russia has in his dominions. It places it in the power of that Chief Justice to direct the manner of decisions of that Court. He can say what class of cases shall go to these three men, and what class of cases shall go to that three men. Then it is that he can make a redivision of the men into sections, and then it is that he can reapportion the cases in order to dictate the decisions of these men as he may want to do it, and in spite of the Court itself, the Chief Justice could direct what the line of decision should be, and he stands there as the Chief Justice for twelve years. Not only that, but we put in here in the Constitution, and make a permanent constitutional provision of that which should only be a simple rule of the Supreme Court in dividing the business, and in the manner of conducting its business, and so it would be changeable and flexible, as the rules of the Supreme Court ought to be. I am, therefore, opposed to the Supreme Court, as proposed by the committee, for that reason. It is too late in the day now, to go back and copy from the fashion of some Supreme Court that was established a century ago, and say that your Supreme Court is like that. We are not hunting for models of that character. Supreme Courts now are modeled more upon the principle of the present manner of conducting governments in the United States, and in accordance with the liberal principles and liberal views of conducting governments at this time.

But under this Supreme Court the question is, when you appeal to the Supreme Court which is proposed by the committee, not whether you appeal to the Supreme Court or not, and base the decision of questions on the learning and the honesty of seven men that have been elected by the people of the State as a Supreme Court, but you appeal to a Chief Justice to say whether your case shall be tried once or twice, and whether it shall be tried before three men or seven men. I say that we ought to establish no such provision as that in the Constitution of our State; and the law should be, that when you appeal to the Supreme Court you appeal to the Supreme Court, and not to the Chief Justice, as to whether he is going to allow you to be heard, or try your case in the Supreme Court or not. I am therefore in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds, because it continues the framework of the present Supreme Court, it continues the number of the present Supreme Court, it continues the efficiency of our present Supreme Court, and that is sufficient, taking them as a standard, taking their testimony upon the subject; and they say that they are amply sufficient to discharge the duties of that Court, as to the number of the Judges.

MR. WILSON. Did the Supreme Court tell you that personally?

MR. WYATT. They did not, Mr. Wilson. I will further inform the gentleman that I have not the honor of the acquaintance of any Judge of the Supreme Court; but as a matter of history—as a matter of current history of the State—I do propose to have some knowledge of the Supreme Court; although I now state that I never appeared in the Supreme Court, and have never appealed a case in the Supreme Court, and I do not claim that acquaintanceship and familiarity with the members of the Supreme Court that many other gentlemen do claim. But I claim to have some knowledge of the Supreme Court notwithstanding that fact; and the business of the Supreme Court is not so intricate, not so profound, and not so dark as that it cannot be fathomed with any reasonable search and investigation. I do state, as a matter of fact, that two Judges of the Supreme Court, and two of the leading Judges of the

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court, have stated to gentlemen on this floor, and since this Convention has been in session, that the extra number of Judges were uncalled for and unnecessary, and that the present Supreme Court was sufficient to do the business of the Supreme Court. And I further say that the double Supreme Court that is provided for in this recommendation of the committee is an untried and unheard of Court; one, too, that enlarges in one constitutional provision all the ordinary rules of the Supreme Court in the Constitution, but so interweaves and entangles them together, that it will take ten years at least for any Supreme Court to approve a system that would be known to the bar of this Court in the administration of justice. That Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, as provided for there, is so plenary in his powers and so unlike anything that has gone before him, that he is entitled to that degree which the Emperor of China has found necessary to give to Chin Lan Pin. The Emperor of China said to him that in consequence of the great power and the great services that he had conferred upon the empire, and of the great power conferred upon him, that he had honored him with the decoration of the third order of the peacock feather; and nothing would be equal to the honor that would be conferred upon the Chief Justice, proposed by the committee, except to honor him with the like decoration of the third order of the peacock feather.

THE PRESIDENT. Time.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: The Committee on Judiciary and Judicial Department is composed of nineteen lawyers, some of whom are the oldest lawyers in the State, and have been for many years attending every session of the Supreme Court. There were upon that committee two ex-Judges of the Supreme Court. The report of the committee was almost unanimous; so much so that it may be practically called a unanimous report. It was manifest to the committee that any five Judges of the Supreme Court were utterly inadequate to perform the business of that Court and write opinions. A report was presented to us by Mr. Woolf, the Clerk of the Court, showing a number of cases and the disposition of cases in the Supreme Court. I had the honor to ask for that report, and it was placed on the table of every member of this body. That report showed that more than one third, nearly one half, of the decisions of the Supreme Court were rendered without an opinion in writing—a fact to which I call the attention of the Convention as showing the fact of the utter inability of the Supreme Court to decide the cases, and keep up with the calendar, and write opinions, and that they were only able to keep up as far as they have have by omitting that very important duty. Now, everybody knows who has reflected at all upon this subject, or knows anything at all about it, that opinions must be written by a Court of last resort as matters of precedent. It is a very different thing from sitting down and saying that the judgment of the Court below is reversed or affirmed without giving any reasons, because when that is published, nobody knows whether that decision is right or wrong. But when the Judge has to sit down and write an opinion, or, in the language of this amendment reported by us, that they must give their opinion in writing, stating the grounds of the decision, then they are brought before the whole bar of the State, and they are bound to present themselves in a position where law and reason sustain the adjudication. Consequently it is the universal practice in the Courts of last resort in the States, and the Supreme Court of the United States, to render opinions addressing themselves to the intelligent judgment of the bar of the State or of the country, and of the Judges of the country.

Now I say, as a simple fact beyond contradiction, that the Supreme Court of California, composed of five men, is unable to discharge the duties of that Court and write opinions, and the report of Mr. Woolf shows that fact; some five hundred and odd cases having been decided without any opinion; and several gentlemen upon the floor here can testify to most important cases which had to go back into the Court below for new trials, where the Court had no data as to what the opinion of the Court was upon the questions and points presented; this occurred to myself in several instances. Therefore, this being an accepted fact before the Committee on Judiciary, the question was this: how can we increase the effective working power of the Court so as to enable it to perform its duty? To increase the number from five to seven did not change the power. If you are going to keep the Court working in one body then reduce it to three; three is better than five, and five is better than seven, and seven is better than nine. But the question is: how, under this condition of things, shall we increase an effective working power and enable the Courts to keep up the business? There were two plans. One was the establishment of the Court of Appeals, and the other was to increase the number of Judges from five to seven, and allow these Judges to sit in departments, and in that way enable them to keep up the business. After a great deal of discussion in that committee, and interchange of views on several occasions, the committee came to the conclusion that of these two schemes, the one since presented by the committee was a preferable one. The Court of Appeals in the State of New York has proved unsatisfactory to the bar, and has proved a sort of receptacle for worn out old Judges, and liable to be brought into conflict with the regular Supreme Court. The committee decided upon this plan, and I declare as my judgment, after twenty-five years of experience, that unless this system is adopted—to allow the Court to sit in departments—the Supreme Court of California will always be a year behind in its labor, and any citizen who wants to have his case heard, will have to wait one year at least after his case is regularly filed in the Supreme Court before he can be heard. Now, this system here is one which has received the approval, not only of the committee, but of a very large portion of the bar of the State of California who have had large experience in this matter, men who ought to know, men who have thought and reflected upon this subject. A large number of the lawyers of this State have given their judgment in favor of this as the best system which could be devised. My friend immediately upon my right, Judge Belcher, who was an honored member of that bench for some years, gives it his approval because of his personal knowledge of the working of that tribunal.

Now, as to the power of the Chief Justice, I cannot say that this argument is bosh, because it would not be respectful; but what is the power of this Judge? Why, Mr. Cross offered an amendment which I accepted to the extent of my capacity to accept and facilitate its adoption, giving power to the majority of the Court to control the question of sending to bank or retaining in departments. Where is this tyrannical and autocratic power? There is nothing at all in it. He is given the ministerial duty of assigning the six Judges their places in the departments, and arranging the calendar, which is done now by the Chief Justice of the State, and has been done by the Chief Justice of the State, and of all States throughout all time. These Judges are not compelled to sit there upon his assignment. This provision provides that they may change places. This is not a positive and absolute assignment. It is intended that the Judges may arrange this business to suit their judgment. They are qualified to sit in either branch. The Chief Justice may sit in either branch, and always make a complete complement in either of these Courts when some Judge was absent writing up an opinion. It provides that any four Judges may order a case to be heard in bank, so that if he declined to order a case in bank, a majority of the Court could order it into bank, notwithstanding him; and what a majority of the Court refuse to do is final in any case, because, in this country, in the judicial department, as well as in all other official departments, the majority must control. Now, the Chief Justice has it not in his power to do a particle of harm. Now, to disturb this system and adopt this amendment is simply to go back to an inadequate judicial power, insufficient to perform the duties, and go before the people of this State with the positive record evidence that this Convention, with a knowledge of the inadequate judicial power of the Supreme bench, had declined to remedy it. I took occasion to show by statistics, when this was before the Committee of the Whole, that the work of this Court is greater far than the work done by the Supreme Court of the United States, and that the present Court have only been able to do it by omitting to perform a very important part of their duty, which is to write opinions, and to give reasons for their decisions in the cases. Whilst this is not perfect, yet I give it as my opinion that it is the best system that has as yet been devised for the efficient working of the Supreme Court, and in that I am happy to say that a very large portion of the most intelligent and the most experienced and oldest attorneys in the State agree. As a matter of course, the great mass of the business of the State would be done in the two departments. A majority always having the power to send a case into bank, there could be no wrong committed, unless it was by majority, and a majority could always commit a wrong, organize the Court as you please. I hope that the Convention will vote down the amendments and adopt the report as it now stands engrossed.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I have already, sir, stated my objections to the plan, and do not now propose to reargue them. I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alameda, as amended or extended by the amendments of my colleague from San Francisco, Mr. Reynolds. That merely restores the system as we have it, with one or two additions that are demanded, and it is left in that flexible condition which I maintain it ought to be, so far as these matters of rule and practice and of procedure are concerned, subject to the regulation of law and the Court itself, by its own rules. Now, sir, I admit that it is presumptuous on the part of one who is not old or experienced to have an opinion in this Convention upon a legal proposition. But, as I have said before, a plain man may exercise his common sense upon a plain proposition, and according to that I maintain that this very section here in this judicial article is a piece of monstrous stupidity, and that is all that can be said of it. A gentleman has said here that the present Supreme Court is unable to perform the business before it. He says that upon the experience of the great lights of the bar of the State, as he says. He says that upon the judgment of two former Justices or Judges of the Supreme Court. Now, sir, since this proposition has been before the Convention, the present Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of this State has said that five Judges are abundantly able to perform the business of the Court, and that seven are not necessary.

MR. WILSON. To whom?

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. Chief Justice Wallace said that to Mr. White, and not very long ago either. Now, sir, if that be true where is the argument about the capacity of the Court. I admit that the capacity of the Court may be increased, but it is not to be increased by inserting in the Constitution a mass of details concerning procedure, which, never before, even a Legislature sought to interfere with. The ordinary rules of practice that govern a Court are always made up by the Court itself, and placed on file as required by law. I am willing to add a provision that the Legislature may increase the number by the addition of two Judges. Now, sir, I disagree with the gentleman that you cannot increase the power by the addition of Judges, because if you have seven Judges it is not necessary that all these Judges should be present hearing every argument. Two or three of these Judges will be writing opinions whilst the balance of the Judges are hearing the cases. Now, sir, when they consult together and come to a conclusion they appoint one of their number to write an opinion, and whilst the Court is in session and trials going on the opinions can be written. Now, one word about the writing of opinions. We have here now fifty-two volumes of Supreme Court reports. That includes the written opinions. Now, when we require them to state the reasons for a decision, we do not mean they shall write a hundred pages of detail. We not mean that they shall include the small cases, and impose on the country all this fine judicial literature, for the Lord knows we have got enough of that already. To give us the reason for it does not take three lines. I maintain that there is hardly a single case, many points as may be made, that cannot be cleared up, and reasons given in five pages. Many of the decisions now in the reports contain thirty pages. Let them write short opinions in all cases, and I contend that it will not be difficult for them to write up all the decisions of the Court. One word more as to this thing of departments. I maintain that this arrangement that is made here, instead of facilitating business is to increase the business of the Court, and to clog the administration of justice instead of facilitating it. Now, sir, you hear a case in one of the departments, and then it is heard in bank again. Why not go into the Court at once and hear it, and decide it, and be done with it. Now, it is fair to presume that two thirds of the cases will be appealed and go into bank, or every time it is heard and only two Judges concur in the opinion, according to the issues under consideration, they must go into bank. Now, look at it. Two of the Judges failing to agree with the other, that case must go into bank and be reargued and reheard. Does not that consume more of the time of the Court by far than to have heard the case at once. With regard to this argument that they are facilitating the business of the Court, it seems to me that I see in it a project by which the calendars would be infinitely more clogged up than by a provision that the cases should go right into Court and be heard. The gentleman who addressed this Convention last, exercised himself to prove that this is a good system. Take for instance, the subject of the assignment of the Judges to the departments. It is true, as the proposition afterward provided, that the Justice may assign the Judges or break up the Court as he may see fit; that they may interchange with one another by an agreement among themselves. The rest of the Judges have not a word to say about it, but you have got to get an agreement out of these two men, and practically where the case has been heard it could only be done by the assent of the Chief Justice. Consequently that is no protection at all, because by shuffling up the cards the Chief Justice could make up just such a Court as he can out of the material he has. Now, sir, it is true that a majority of the Court by the amendment of my friend Mr. Cross, of Nevada, are authorized to order a case from department into bank, but that requires a majority of the Court to do that, and unless that majority can be procured to do it you have no earthly means, although it may be the most important case ever brought up in the State of California, except by the arbitrary will of the Chief Justice.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman's ten minutes have expired.

REMARKS OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I have but one or two suggestions to make. If the gentleman will consult the present Constitution, he will find that it is in substance precisely the same as the amendment which he has sent up, and although apparently he does not provide that one Judge shall go out of office every two years, and that the Judge whose commission expires first shall be the Chief Justice, he will find that it is left in the precise condition of the amendment of eighteen hundred and sixty-four, which was held by this Court unanimously, and by the most eminent lawyers of the State, to mean that the Justice was elected for ten years, and that the Chief Justice held his office for ten years. I cannot be mistaken about that. I have carefully compared that amendment with the present Constitution.

MR. REYNOLDS. Will the gentleman permit me to state what the amendment is?

MR. EDGERTON. In the language of the gentleman from Los Angeles: "No, sir; no, sir." Now, then, I suppose there are a great many gentlemen on this floor that have no experience in the practice of law at all—farmers, mechanics, etc. Now, sir, I have a very great respect for the gentleman from Monterey, Mr. Wyatt. I have watched his course during this Convention, and I believe he always acts conscientiously and square up to his idea of what is right; but I appeal to him, whether he in this matter would take the judgment of persons who never had any experience at all against those whose whole lives had been involved in the question under consideration. Now, sir, at my left is one of the most distinguished lawyers in the State; a gentleman who has adorned the Supreme bench of this State; who knows what he is talking about—and I refer to Judge Belcher, of Marysville—and he gives this scheme his entire approval. It was also approved by many eminent Judges and lawyers in San Francisco, and was devised by the Bar Association of that city, borrowing it theoretically from the suggestions in the bill of Alexander H. Stevens, introduced into the House of Representatives, and which receives the sanction of Judge Davis in the Senate of the United States. Judge John W. Dwinelle appeared before the Judiciary Committee of this body and presented this bill, and urged its adoption. He appeared here as one of a committee deputed by the bar of San Francisco to get this Convention to adopt this scheme; and I do not know, and neither does the gentleman know, that John W. Dwinelle wants to take it back. About what the present Justices of the Supreme Court say, I hold that they are not to be consulted. They may possibly desire to retain office. I do not impute that, and I do not believe it; but I do not believe that any gentleman is authorized to come upon this floor and undertake in this debate to say what a Judge of the Supreme Court may have said upon the subject. I think it is an abuse of his confidence if he did say any such a thing. I can certainly have no object in view except the interests of this State, and the interests of the litigants that I may represent; and I believe that in the working of this Supreme Court, that instead of waiting five or six months, we will get prompt decisions, and have the reasons therefor in writing.

Messrs. Hunter, Dean, Larkin, Doyle, and Holmes demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Reynolds, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Reynolds, Larkin, Doyle, Barton, and Herrington.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. LINDOW. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on judicial department.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen by inserting the words 'Yuba and Sutter combined,' between the words 'Sacramento' and 'Nevada,' where they occur in the last line but one in the section."

MR. WILSON, of First District. I second the amendment.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: It will be recollected that when this matter was up before, upon my motion and at my suggestion, the Counties of Yuba and Sutter were combined for judicial purposes. I stated then that one Judge, I thought, could do the work of the two counties, and that it would be a saving to have one Judge and give him more work and more pay. If they were separate, under the present plan they would receive six thousand dollars, and under this plan they would receive four thousand dollars. It seems to me that there can be no objection on the part of any one to the motion I make, and I therefore hope that this amendment will be adopted at once. The delegations from the two counties are unanimous in asking for it.

MR. OHLEYER. Mr. President: It will be remembered that when this matter was up before the Committee of the Whole we arrived at this point that I opposed any action in the union of the two counties from the fact that I had not had an opportunity to consult with the people of my county. After that I took some pains to consult with our people, and while I found some opposition I also found some that were in favor of it; and now, in the condition that this article is now in, it is a matter of economy, both to the State and the counties, that this amendment be adopted; so I support the proposition.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I suppose that every one concedes that Yuba and Sutter should have a Judge with a salary of the highest class.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. HOLMES. Mr. President: I send up an amendment to section seventeen.

THE SECRETARY read:

"After the word 'Nevada,' in the thirteenth line, insert 'Fresno.'"

MR. HOLMES. Mr. President: Fresno is one of the largest counties in the State, and there is as large a business done in that county almost as there is in San Joaquin. I think that she ought to be entitled to have one of the first class Judges.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I do not object to putting Fresno up into the first class if we put all the others of the same class up. I see at the last general election Fresno polled one thousand and ninety-five votes; that is about two hundred less than Lake County; it is three hundred less than Marin County; it is three hundred less than Plumas County; about one hundred more than San Bernardino County; it is about one third as many votes as Humboldt County. I think that of all the counties Fresno is one of the last that should be put up.

MR. HOLMES. I will state that on the Great Register there are two thousand two hundred names, and there is over nine million dollars' worth of taxable property in the county. I have the Register here in my desk, and you can come around here and see it.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: It is not so much, sir, that I object to the amendment offered by my friend from Fresno, as it is that I see a general move all along the line if that amendment be adopted. Now, sir, if that be adopted I propose to have my county, Stanislaus, in. I will take occasion——

MR. BARBOUR. How much land to the acre is there in Stanislaus County?

MR. SCHELL. There is an adage which says: "Answer the fool according to his folly." Now, sir, I will take occasion to say that Stanislaus happens to be the leading grain growing county in the State. We raise there, and have for a number of years past, no less than seven million bushels of wheat, to say nothing of the immense quantities of barley that has been produced in that county. We have a population of about ten thousand inhabitants, and I might go on to a considerable extent in stating what a good county the County of Stanislaus is; but, sir, I do not propose to do that—a word to the wise, I hope, is sufficient. I merely mention this to show that if any of the other counties are raised, I propose that we shall have ours raised, too. I would be perfectly satisfied with three thousand five hundred dollars for the Superior Judge of the County of Stanislaus, and I think that, generally, the counties for which the salaries for Judges have been fixed at three thousand dollars, would be better at three thousand five hundred dollars. However, I am satisfied to leave it as it is if all are left so, but if one is raised, a number of them ought to be raised.

MR. WHITE. Mr. President: Our county has about twice the number of votes of Fresno, yet I do not propose to ask any more for our Judge than what we have got. We have two thousand six hundred votes, where they have only about a thousand; we have more taxable property, yet I think we have got salary enough, and I hope this amendment will not prevail. If Fresno is raised, two thirds of the other counties ought to be let in that class.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: It seems to me that all this attempt to put the smaller counties in the upper class, arises from the fact that gentlemen are conscious that the salary of three thousand dollars is not sufficient in any county of this State; and I do hope that this Convention will reconsider that matter, and that they will strike out four thousand dollars and insert five thousand dollars, and strike out three thousand dollars and insert four thousand dollars, and then it will satisfy everybody.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I believe that the State should pay a certain uniform sum to each Judge, and the balance, so far as the present term shall be fixed, by the members for their respective counties. I desire to offer an amendment to section seventeen, to provide that the State shall pay one thousand dollars to each Superior Judge in this State, and that the balance of his salary as fixed by this Convention shall be paid by the counties. A reasonable compensation in the County of El Dorado would be one thousand dollars.

MR. BIGGS. Make it two thousand five hundred dollars.

Messrs. Evey, Stuart, Moreland, White, and O'Donnell demanded the previous question, which was refused by the Convention.

The amendment of Mr. Holmes was rejected.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment, in hopes that the Convention will adopt it. It is essential and it is right.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen by inserting 'Butte' after the word 'Nevada,' in the last line but one."

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I would first say that we have between ten and twelve millions of property, and twenty thousand inhabitants; and I have got letters from there, and the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors came down here and stated that the people of the county were perfectly willing to pay it, and that there would not be five hundred votes for the Constitution there unless we can have a first class Judge. We have from three hundred and forty to three hundred and eighty cases during the year. We pay our District Judge five thousand dollars a year, and the County Judge one thousand five hundred dollars a year. I ask Judge Belcher to make a statement of facts.

MR. TULLY. I want to know if the gentleman voted for low salaries.

MR. BIGGS. I did not.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I hope that Butte County will receive her proper place. It is an important county in this State. There are a great many interests there.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will be voted down. Let gentlemen raise the salaries throughout the State and make them respectable, and pay Judges if they want high salaries in their counties. This thing of voting a little miserable salary to Judges generally, and then getting up and asking high salaries for one county, I object to.

MR. BIGGS. I voted to give your county two.

MR. TULLY. Let us have a general fee bill, and have respectable salaries, or make gentlemen stand in right where they belong. I hope it will be voted down.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I believe it is the worst kind of economy that can be attempted to put the salaries of Judges at a low figure. I am not on my feet, however, now to speak upon that question, but to say that I favor the amendment offered by the gentleman from Butte, Mr. Biggs. Territorially that county is large. It has a large body of the best agricultural land of the State. It has several important towns and villages, the chief of which are Chico and Oroville. There is no better section of country in the State, perhaps in the world, than a large portion of Butte County. It has, also, a large and important grain interest. The county is a wealthy county. Its last assessment roll was twelve millions of dollars. I attended the last term of Court, and found nearly one hundred cases on the calendar of the District Court. While I have favored putting the county that I live in in connection with another county, and urged that one Judge can do the business of both, at the same time I say that in Butte County there is business enough for one Judge, and his time will be so nearly all occupied that he will have nothing to spare. When he comes to do all the business of that county, he will be occupied as much as any one man ought to be occupied. The population being large, the wealth of the county great, the business large, there is no reason why the Judge of Butte County should be paid less than the Judge of any other county in the State. It is a first-class county in every respect. Now, you have got two Judges in Sonoma, both in the first class. I have nothing to say against Sonoma, but it has neither twice the population, twice the wealth, or twice the business of Butte. I hope that this amendment will be adopted.

MR. TOWNSEND. Mr. President: I hope that this amendment will be voted down. This Convention has persistently refused to vote decent salaries for Judges, and then members come forward and eulogize their counties. I consider Butte County decidedly a growing, thrifty, and fine county, and entitled to a first-class Judge; but they refused positively to put it in the other day, and will again. Now, if this Convention is ready to vote for decent salaries for Judges, I am willing to do so; but if they insist on putting down all excepting their own counties, I am opposed to it, and will help to vote it down.

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: I desire to offer a substitute for Mr. Biggs's amendment, if it is in order.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section seventeen by striking out the word 'three,' in line sixteen, page eight, and inserting in place thereof the word 'four;' and by striking out the word "four,' in line nineteen, and inserting in place thereof the word 'five.'"

MR. MCFARLAND. Mr. President: The present salary of District Judges in this State average about five thousand dollars a year. The great bulk of the salaries are five thousand dollars, and quite a number of them are six thousand dollars. I believe there are one or two that are only four thousand dollars. I do not believe that the people of the State demand any lower salaries, but this makes the salaries considerable lower. Now, it does seem to me that when gentlemen attempt to get their counties in the first class, it is because they honestly believe that a salary of three thousand dollars is not enough. I do not believe that it is enough. I do not believe we can get competent Judges in any county of the State for that salary.

MR. WHITE. How much does the United States Judge in San Francisco get—Judge Hoffman.

MR. MCFARLAND. He gets five thousand dollars, and everybody say that is not enough. But in addition to that, Judge Hoffman has a a life tenure. Three thousand dollars is better than eight thousand dollars for a term of years. It has been a universal remark that the salaries of Federal Judges have been too low. I do not believe that there are any considerable number of people in this State that demand Judges' salaries less than four thousand dollars. When I think of it, I believe Judge Hoffman's salary is six thousand dollars.

MR. WHITE. I think four thousand dollars.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I have had nothing to say upon this judicial article except when it has affected my locality; but I say, if this question is reopened that we shall not get away from here in another month. The salary question has to my mind been definitely settled, and it ought to remain where it is. There should be an end to this thing. I have no special objection to the County of Butte receiving a first class Judge, but they must draw the line somewhere. If we admit Butte, we must admit other counties, and we are rapidly getting into an inextricable tangle from which we will not emerge. Let us, Mr. President, accept this section as it is, and vote down every amendment, or else we will be here up to nearly the time when the vote should be taken on this Constitution. [Applause.]

Messrs. Lampson, Evey, Nason, Barton, and Rhodes demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the amendment of Mr. McFarland, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, West, Gorman, Brown, and McComas.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

Prouty,

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section twenty-three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section twenty-three by striking out, in line three, the words 'the Supreme Court,' and insert the words 'a Court of Record.'"

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: It has been ascertained since this article was passed to its present stage that there are many counties in this State that have no lawyer who is licensed to practice in the Supreme Court, and under this present system it would really be impossible in these counties to carry out the scheme as it now stands. As a matter of justice to the people in the several counties in this State, that are situated far from the capital, this amendment should be adopted. It will not in any way injure the interests of the State. These lawyers will be fully as competent to discharge the duties of the position as those who have license to practice in the Supreme Court.

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: It may be that in several counties there are lawyers who have never been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court and have practiced before the District Courts; but as it has been said in this Convention before if you are seeking somebody to perform special duties and special business, you seek somebody who is qualified to perform such duties. If you are after an architect you seek a professional architect. If you are after a physician you seek a professional physician. If there be a lawyer who could not get admitted to the Supreme Court, he is not fit to be elected Judge. You may say that there are lawyers who are fit to be admitted and who are not so. I say if there are such, let them come and get admitted to the Supreme Court. Why not? If there be in Siskiyou, or Trinity, somebody who wants to be elected Judge of a Superior Court, and who has not been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court, why not let him come if he is competent? No lawyer should be on the bench when he is not fit to appear before the Court to which his cases may go. I say that it would be the worst kind of policy to strike out this provision and adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Trinity. Why? Because all through these counties you will find incompetent men who can work themselves in politics, and get elected to positions on the bench and decide the rights of people who come before them. The people demand competent men, they need competent men, and I submit that this amendment ought to be rejected.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Trinity will prevail. It is well known, and I should think it would be known to the gentleman from Yuba, that in many of the counties of this State, some of the oldest attorneys and some of the most experienced attorneys are not admitted to practice before the Supreme Court. The character of their business has been such that it was not necessary for them to go to the expense and trouble of coming to the Supreme Court to be admitted to practice before that Court. It is a provision that does not exist in our present Constitution, and it will cut off from this position, and from the choice of the people, many of the most experienced attorneys in this State; men who have been practicing for twenty-five years in this State. I presume that the people are qualified to judge of this matter for themselves. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Trinity will prevail, because it will be a serious injury to many of the counties if it does not. These counties would be cut off from the services of these men in whom they have confidence, and would have to rely upon men that you might say were specially imported for that purpose. I hope the amendment will prevail.

REMARKS OF MR. LARKIN.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I think the people are capable of electing their Judges. In Amador County I understand that there is but one man that has been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court. In El Dorado we have a number of men, but whether they would be the men we desired to elect is another thing. I know men that have been practicing in the Supreme Court, that at one time, in the early history of this State, were indicted for grand larceny. There are other men besides those who have answered the conundrums propounded to them by the Supreme Court, who have served the people for thirty years in this State. We have the best judiciary of any State in the Union, and I think that people of the counties should have a right to select from more than one or two men. Under this section they will not have that opportunity, because there are not more than one or two men admitted to practice in the Supreme Court in a large majority of the counties in this State. There are District Judges in this State that have not practiced in the Supreme Court, and many County Judges who have not practiced before the Supreme Court. The people ought to have a right to determine this question, and I hope our distinguished members of the bar association will not make this a close corporation, so that those men that have not seen fit to come here from Siskiyou and San Diego to get admitted to the Supreme Court, cannot be elected to these positions. If we cannot trust the people let us abandon this kind of government.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I do not indorse any one sentiment enumerated by the distinguished jurist from El Dorado. I do not believe that any person knows any thing in any particular line, or profession, instinctively. I believe that he has to learn it. I believe that there ought to be no exception between the professions; that the lawyer ought to be admitted under the same solemnity, and the same form that members of any other profession are admitted to practice their peculiar calling. We recognize everywhere, that the doctor is not permitted to practice his profession until he has a diploma; until he is admitted under the forms of law. A school teacher even cannot draw his salary in this State until he is examined; but some of these distinguished jurists who never saw the inside of a law book, pretend to tell people of this State that a man can practice law and make a good Judge who has not only never studied law, but never been admitted to the bar. I hope that this Convention will not establish a rule different from any other Constitutional Convention, so far as I have been able to observe, in the Union: that you can pick up a man who knows nothing of law, who have never been admitted to the bar, and make a good Judge of him. It is true he may not be a good lawyer, but he is a good Judge. He has to pass upon the most sacred and important rights of life and property, without any study and without any previous preparation. Such argument is contrary to the best experience of thoughtful men everywhere, and I hope that this Convention will not adopt this amendment. There may be some counties where they have no Judge, and no lawyers admitted to the Supreme Court; but there is no county in this State where there are any lawyers, if they desire to be Judges, but that they can come and be admitted if they are capable; and if they are not capable they ought not to be Judges; better far to import a good man than elect an incompetent one. He will try all the murder cases; he will dispose of all the questions as to the settlement of the estates of deceased persons; try ejectment suits, mining suits, and every class of suit. Every class of interest of litigation will come before him, but the gentlemen from El Dorado and Trinity claim that a man needs no particular education in that line, to fit him for that important duty. I hope this Convention will not go back upon its record. I hope it will indorse this section just as it is, that no person shall be permitted to be elected Judge of a Superior Court, in any county of this State, unless he has been admitted to practice in the Supreme Court.

REMARKS OF MR. WATERS.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: There is one thing about this amendment that might be overlooked, if attention is not called specially to it. It is proposed that Judges of the Supreme Court are to have no qualifications.

MR. TINNIN. I propose to offer a substitute for the section to provide that no one shall be eligible to the office of Judge of the Supreme Court unless he shall have a license to practice in the Supreme Court, and no one shall be eligible to the office of Judge of the Superior Court unless he shall have been admitted to practice in a Court of record.

MR. WATERS. That is just as bad, for every case that goes to the Supreme Court must be first tried in some Superior Court, except certain special proceedings. That being the case, if the people want justice administered cheaply, and if the people want as few appeals as possible, it would be well to get just as good talent on the Superior Court bench as upon the Supreme Court bench, and I think every lawyer and every man who knows anything about this thing, will admit it. Now, if it is an admitted fact that it is just as important to have a good Judge on the Superior Court bench as it is on the Supreme Court bench, and the gentleman proposes now to modify his amendment so as to make the Supreme Judges qualified for their position, it seems to me that he admits the fallacy of the whole thing. There is nothing in it. Now the idea that there are attorneys anywhere in this State who are fit to sit upon the Superior Court bench, who cannot be admitted to the Supreme Court, is a fallacy. There may be instances where attorneys have not had occasion yet to come to the Supreme Court and be admitted, but they can do so whenever they wish when they are capable. I say if an attorney has no more pride in his profession, and no more pride in himself, than to sit down in some little outside county in this State, and never come to the highest Court in the State and be admitted to practice there, he is not fit material for a Judge. I may be wrong about this, but that is my sentiment.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I desire to put my amendment in the form of a substitute.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 23. No one shall be eligible to the office of Judge of the Supreme Court unless he shall have a license to practice in the Supreme Court of this State; nor shall any person be eligible to the office of Judge of a Superior Court unless he shall have been admitted to practice law in a Court of record in this State."

REMARKS OF MR. FILCHER.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: Not being a lawyer I do not presume to discuss this question wholly upon its merits. Nor, in fact, do I propose to enter into the discussion, but simply to reply to some extent to inferences thrown out by the distinguished gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee. He, with his usual eloquence, appealed to the Convention not to deviate from the well established custom of other States in reference to this matter. Now, sir, I happen to have before me the precedents of other States, so far as they have taken action in the matter of qualification of their judiciary, which I will refer to for the information of those who perhaps had not noticed it. I find that many of the States make no restriction, while some have what I consider a wise restriction. I believe that there should be some restriction, but that the one we have adopted goes a little further than we are warranted in going in justice to some of the outside counties. In the State of Arkansas, all that is required is that he shall be one year a voter of the State. In the State of Florida, they require that a Judge shall be a practicing attorney of the State. In the Constitution of Georgia, they require that he shall be a citizen of the State, and must have practiced law seven years. All reasonable restrictions. In the State of Illinois, they require that he shall be a citizen of the United States, resident five years in the State; resident of the district. In the State of Kansas, citizen of the United States; reside two years in district; must have practiced law eight years, if not upon the bench of a Court of record. Louisiana, citizen of the United States; five years in State; not less than three years in district; learned in the law, admitted to practice law in the State, and must be distinguished for integrity, wisdom, and sound legal knowledge. Missouri, citizen of the United States five years; voter in State three years. South Carolina, citizen of the United States; resident of State five years, and so on. You will find the great States of New York and Ohio have no restriction whatever. The people are left to judge for themselves. This will open the door for the importation of material solely to fill this position. Suppose in some county there is but one eligible candidate. It makes no difference what may be his moral standing, nor what may be his position in society, or the estimation in which he is held, he must be elected as a matter of necessity. Sir, I think that is going too far, and going much farther than necessity requires.

Messrs. Gorman, Dean, Hunter, Pulliam, and Swenson demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, Tinnin, Biggs, Kelley, and Grace.

MR. HERRINGTON. I move to strike out sections two and three and insert the following——

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

MR. HERRINGTON. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

THE PRESIDENT. Section two has been passed under the previous question.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I desire to call the attention of the Convention to one little error which occurred in section seventeen, which I suppose could be amended by unanimous consent, and that is, that the Judges' salaries are made payable quarterly. It ought to be monthly. I would therefore move that the word be changed by unanimous consent.

MR. LARKIN. I object.

PROSECUTIONS.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out, in lines seven and eight, section four, the words 'prosecution by indictment or information in a Court of record,' and insert 'amounting to felony.'"

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: If this amendment should prevail it will leave the Constitution precisely as it is in respect to appeals in criminal cases to the Supreme Court. I deem it of such importance, in view of the fact that there has been no full vote upon the question heretofore in this Convention upon a proposition of such magnitude as this. This is no matter of form. My amendment is greatly right or it is greatly wrong, and in either case every vote ought to be recorded upon one side or the other. The amendment to our present Constitution was made at the suggestion of my colleague, Judge Campbell, and afterwards at the suggestion of Judge Terry, of San Joaquin. As then stated, its main object was to give appeal in libel cases, but I submit even to the gentlemen who supported it, that since that amendment was adopted the action of the Convention has been such as to render such a provision as this directly inconsistent with what we have done in the bill of rights. When the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee accepted the amendment which I now propose to strike out, I then suggested that in Convention what was called the Fawcett amendment would probably be struck out. Since that time, by a majority vote, the Fawcett amendment was struck out, and section nine of the bill of rights now provides that in criminal prosecutions for libel the jury shall be the judge of the law as well as the fact; so that the object which this amendment had in view, namely, to give appeal in libel cases, is wholly defeated by leaving the Constitution as it is in respect to the jury being the judge of the law and the fact. How can you appeal to the Supreme Court on a question of law when the jury itself is made the judge of the law? Are you going to appeal from the judgment of the jury upon a point of law to the judgment of the Court on a point of law, saying at the same time that the jury shall be the judge of the law? If this proposition stands as it reads it will be saying, to read the two sections together, the jury in certain criminal cases shall be the judge of the law; next, the Supreme Court shall be the judge of the law. Or, in other words, the jury shall be the judge of the law; next, the jury shall not be the judge of the law. A great author has written: "Oh, consistency! thou art indeed a jewel!" and I submit that if we adopt this section as it reads, that they who vote for it may be called gems of the first water.

Now another serious objection. This section says that there shall be appeals in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information in a Court of record, on questions of law alone. What are the cases prosecuted in a Court of record by information or indictment? In every county we have now a District Court and a County Court, which are Courts of record for a prosecution in criminal cases, at least District Courts; and we have in the City of San Francisco two other criminal Courts that are Courts of record, having jurisdiction in misdemeanors even in the lower class; that is, the class of misdemeanors where the punishment does not exceed a fine of five hundred dollars, and imprisonment not exceeding six months. This article before us provides that the Legislature shall provide inferior Courts of record, and then under this section all misdemeanors, without scarcely any exception, or in fact, in one view, without any exception whatever, may be appealed to the Supreme Court, because misdemeanors, even at the Justice's Court, which are prosecuted by information, may be appealed to the Supreme Court, and where so appealed, by the provisions of this section they would be criminal cases prosecuted in a Court of record; because this section makes no distinction between the Court having the original jurisdiction of the case and those procuring an appeal. Then, sir, all this class of misdemeanors—the higher misdemeanors—will be appealed with scarcely an exception to the Supreme Court of the State. That may reap a rich harvest of fees for those lawyers whose criminal practice is mainly in cases of misdemeanor; but I have to say that it will at the same time reap a rich harvest of curses from those who have legitimate business in the Supreme Court, and whose business thereby will be greatly delayed. We have heard since this judicial article has been before us continually of a necessity for a change; and this article proposes to change by giving two additional Judges, in order to facilitate the business of this Court; in order that justice might be administered without delay. If the Supreme Court is to be inundated by this class of petty appeals in petty cases, I say that the whole object of the system will be defeated, in providing for a Supreme Court to sit in two sections, or to sit in two departments, and giving two additional Judges, in order that we might have a more speedy administration of public justice in the Supreme Court of the State.

REMARKS OF MR. CAMPBELL.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope that the amendment of my colleague will not be adopted. This matter was discussed after we had disposed of the libel question entirely, and one of the reasons why the section stands in its present shape was because, in the opinion of the Convention, it was proper that in the higher class of misdemeanors there should be an appeal. Now take, for instance, a case of obtaining money or goods under false pretenses; there are intricate questions of law liable to arise. There is a penalty of one year's imprisonment, and fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and the party may be sentenced to restore the property, of whatever value. Should there be no appeal, in such a case as that, to the Supreme Court? It seems to me very clear that there should, and it was to meet that class of cases, and that is a comparatively limited class. It applies only to that class of cases which must be prosecuted either by indictment or by commitment by a committing Magistrate, after examination. In that class of higher misdemeanors it seems to me that it is right that there should be an appeal. The minor class of misdemeanors are provided for in the succeeding section, which provides that the Superior Court shall have appellate jurisdiction in all that class of cases. As it stands now, the system is perfectly harmonious, and outside entirely of the question of libel, it gives an appeal in cases where there ought to be an appeal. So far as the question of libel is concerned, it is merely giving an appeal where there has been an erroneous ruling of the Court in regard to the admissibility of evidence—I suppose it would be then. The jury of course can not determine what evidence shall be admitted; that is a question that the Court has to determine in the progress of the trial. Of course, in that class of cases, there would be an appeal, as in case of any other case of misdemeanor. It seems to me that the section is proper as it is. It has been once adopted and sustained by the Convention, and I hope it will be again.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. McCallum, Grace, Lampson, Caples, and Walker of Tuolumne.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: I ask unanimous consent of the Convention to amend section seventeen by striking out "quarterly," and inserting "monthly."

THE PRESIDENT. By unanimous consent it can be done.

No objection was made.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I send up a substitute for section twenty-four.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 24. No Judge of a Superior Court, nor of the Supreme Court, shall, after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, be allowed to draw or receive any monthly salary, unless they shall severally take and subscribe an affidavit, before an officer entitled to administer oaths, that no cause in his Court remains undecided that has been submitted for decision for the period of ninety days."

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: The only change is to allow him to make the affidavit before any officer who can administer oaths.

REMARKS OF MR. BELCHER.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I have very serious doubts about the amendment proposed here to section twenty-four operating advantageously. What we want to do here is to make as good a Constitution as possible, and avoid puting in bad provisions. It is true there have been some evils which this amendment seeks to correct. There have been some Judges in the State who have unnecessarily held cases. I have myself seen some of the evils of that in having cases held by Judges for a most unnecessary time; but I believe that there are not many Judges of that kind in the State. I believe that generally Judges of our District Courts decide their cases promptly, and as promptly as they are required to do by this section. The difficulty that I see is with the Supreme Court. Every Supreme Court Judge can decide a case, unless it be a most extraordinary one, inside of ninety days. Now, in the Supreme Court if you say that every one of these Judges shall make an affidavit that every case is decided, when the time approaches that this affidavit is made they will stop hearing cases, unless it is clear that they can decide them within the time. There are many reasons why this section should not be adopted, and it seems to me that it had better be stricken out. Mr. President: Would a motion to strike out the section be in order now.

THE PRESIDENT. Yes. It is in order, and will be the first question.

MR. BELCHER. I move that the section be stricken out.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I am in hopes that motion will not prevail. I have stood by the report of the Judiciary Committee in favor of good salaries, and everything that they ask for. This is something that the people ask for. The gentleman well knows that District Judges have held cases under advisement for over two years. I ask, in God's name, if ninety days is not ample time for them to decide.

MR. FREEMAN. Mr. President: I trust that this section will not be stricken out. It attempts to provide a remedy which has long been needed. We can all understand that delays are dangerous, but there is still another reason for this section. Under this system of practice now prevailing in some of the Courts, while counsel are required to attend and argue the cases, they are taken under advisement and so kept until the arguments are entirely lost from the memories of the Judges. I have myself known instances in this district where the District Judge kept cases under advisement for three or four years, and went out of office without deciding them.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: It strikes me that if this Convention will be consistent with itself, that it will strike this section out. There is not enough delay to suit the convenience of those who desire to get compromises on either side. There is more time needed for the aristocracy of the community to oppress the poor in. There is more time required to effect the necessary compromise and the multiplication of appeals that are requisite to pile up expenses and compensate the counsel. You ought to be more consistent and strike out this section, and give a little more time for this class of oppression that you have heaped upon us by the adoption of this article. Now, I shall vote against striking it out, because I want not only justice administered at our door, but I want it done speedily and without the circumlocution of appeal after appeal, while the poor are ground to death beneath the heel of oppression. Under this system you have a rehearing in department and an appeal to Court in bank, and it may be detained until the Court sees fit to decide it three years hence. But be consistent with yourselves, and strike the section out.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The amendment proposed by the gentleman is good. The principle is a correct principle. Judges are public servants, and we ought to require of them the same kind of responsibility that we require from others. But I agree with the gentleman from Santa Clara, that in order to be consistent, the section should be stricken out. You have adopted the system here which invades the constitutional rights of the citizen. It conflicts with the Constitution of the United States of America, which grants to every man the protection of the law. You practically and virtually deny his right of appeal, except according to the sweet will of one man. You require him to take his chances of ever getting from the department into the Supreme Court of the United States, for a minority decision of your Supreme Court is not the final judgment of that Court of last resort pronounced by a majority of the Court. You have foisted that kind of a system upon us, and now to be consistent, the work should be finished, by denying to the citizen the right to demand of the Judge that the case shall be decided. I shall vote against striking out; but I submit, that in order to be consistent, those who adopted this system should strike out this section.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend by striking out the words 'nor of the Supreme Court.'"

MR. EDGERTON. I am decidedly in favor of retaining that part which relates to the Supreme Court. I could relate instances in my own experience, and in the experience of other gentlemen, where cases were tried, and argued, and submitted three years ago, and are not decided to this day. As to the Supreme Court, I think it is becoming in me, at least, to follow the suggestion of Judge Belcher, of Yuba. He has been upon the Supreme bench, and has worked twelve, fifteen, and sixteen hours a day; whereas my friends on the right think that nobody ought to work over eight hours a day. Gentlemen must remember that there are hundreds of cases in that Court to be disposed of, and that it requires great care to fairly consider and digest the character of conclusion reached and put it in proper form. I hope the amendment I have sent up will prevail.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Butte, and I stand here to testify that it is equally important that it should apply to the Supreme Court as to the Superior Courts. In my personal experience I have known this to occur, that under the statute of this State, which provided that in cases of a contest for an election of Trustees of a corporation that summary judgment should be rendered, that on appeal of that case to the Supreme Court, after I had obtained judgment, about one year elapsed before I could get a remittitur. It is true that this proposition does not specifically cover the evil in that particular case, but this section ought to reach the Supreme Court. I confess that I much prefer the amendment which I offered to the article on distribution of powers which merely provided that the Legislature may prescribe the conditions. However, I hope that this amendment of the gentleman from Yuba will be adopted precisely as he presents it, and that the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento will not be adopted as a qualification.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: There may be some use in hurrying up the Superior Courts in this way, but it certainly should not apply to the Supreme Court. You are going to have seven members. Suppose one man should be incompetent to sit, and they hear the argument and are equally divided. What are you going to do? They cannot agree upon a decision. There may be matters of great importance involved. By and by, perhaps within six months, one Judge will be going off. Ought they not to wait until after that time for a reargument? It seems to me they ought to. What is the use of ordering a reargument in such instances when it can do no good? Many instances could be cited where this rule would not work well by any means. I hope that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sacramento will be adopted, and the Supreme Court left out of this category.

Messrs. Murphy, Hunter, Dean, Larkin, and Lindow demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the motion of Mr. Belcher the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Biggs, Tinnin, Brown, Larkin, and Lindow.

The roll was called, and the motion to strike out was lost by the following vote:

PAIRED.—Mr. Boucher, aye, with Mr. Glascock, no; Mr. Mills, aye, with Mr. Turner, no.

MR. REYNOLDS [before the vote was announced]. I desire to change my vote from no to aye, for the purpose of moving a reconsideration.

RECONSIDERATION.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I now move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention adopted the resolution offered by Mr. Huestis, providing for the appointment of a Committee on Address, which reads as follows: "Resolved, That the President of this Convention be requested to appoint, at an early day, a committee, to consist of one from each judicial district, whose duty it shall be to prepare an address to the people of this State, setting forth concisely the principal amendments proposed by this Convention to the present Constitution, and, as far as practicable, the reasons therefor; said address to be submitted to the Convention for action thereon before the promulgation." If the motion is reconsidered I shall offer a substitute.

MR. STEDMAN. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The notice of the gentleman reads as follows: "I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted to-day, authorizing the appointment of a committee of nine to prepare an address to the people of this State, in relation to the new Constitution." My point of order is that no such resolution was adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken.

MR. HUESTIS. Mr. President: I hope that this motion will not prevail. This Convention is certainly not desirous of earning the character of being vacillating. There is no kind of doubt but what a majority of the Convention are in favor of the resolution. The gentleman from Del Norte recognized the idea to the extent of offering a resolution himself or rather an amendment. His amendment did not meet the approbation of this House. It was voted down. The resolution that he wishes to reconsider was adopted, and I submit that the Convention ought not to recognize the gentleman's offer, to undo that which has been done, and thus prolong the session. I move that the motion be laid on the table.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took the usual recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on laying the motion to reconsider the resolutions in regard to an address on the table.

MR STEDMAN. Ayes and noes.

MR. HUESTIS. Ayes and noes.

THE PRESIDENT. No second.

Division was called for, and the motion to table prevailed, by a vote of 48 ayes to 37 noes.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on revenue and taxation on second reading. The Secretary will read:

THE SECRETARY read the article, as follows:

ARTICLE —.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

SECTION 1. All property in the State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property,' as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed; provided, that growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation. The Legislature may provide, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, for a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State.

SEC. 2. Land, and the improvements thereon, shall be separately assessed. Cultivated and uncultivated land, of the same quality, and similarly situated, shall be assessed at the same value.

SEC. 3. Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one Government section shall be assessed, for the purposes of taxation, by sections or fractional sections; and where the section lines have not been established by authority of the United States, the Assessor and County Surveyor shall establish the section lines, in conformity with the Government system of surveys, as nearly as practicable. Each section or fractional section shall be valued and assessed separately; and for the purpose of subdividing and assessing, the Assessor and Surveyor, and their assistants, may enter upon any land within their respective counties.

SEC. 4. A mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation by which a debt is secured, shall, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an interest in the property affected thereby. Except as to railroad and other quasi-public corporations, in case of debts so secured, the value of the property affected by such mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or obligation, less the value of such security, shall be assessed and taxed to the owner of the property, and the value of such security shall be assessed and taxed to the owner thereof, in the county, city, or district in which the property affected thereby is situate. The taxes so levied shall be a lien upon the property and security, and may be paid by either party to such security; if paid by the owner of the security, the tax so levied upon the property affected thereby shall become a part of the debt so secured; if the owner of the property shall pay the tax so levied on such security, it shall constitute a payment thereon, and to the extent of such payment a full discharge thereof; provided, that if any such security or indebtedness shall be paid by any such debtor or debtors, after assessment and before the tax levy, the amount of such levy may likewise be retained by such debtor or debtors, and shall be computed according to the tax levy for the preceding year.

SEC. 5. Every contract hereafter made, by which a debtor is obligated to pay any tax or assessment on money loaned, or on any mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, shall, as to any interest specified therein, and as to such tax or assessment, be null and void.

SEC. 6. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered or suspended by any grant or contract to which the State shall be a party.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall have the power to provide by law for the payment of all taxes on real property by installments.

SEC. 8. The Legislature shall by law require each taxpayer in this State to make and deliver to the County Assessor, annually, a statement under oath, setting forth specifically all the real and personal property owned by such taxpayer, or in his possession, or under his control, at twelve o'clock meridian, on the first Monday of March.

SEC. 9. A State Board of Equalization, consisting of one member from each Congressional district in this State, shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, whose term of office, after those first elected, shall be four years, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property of the several counties in the State for the purposes of State taxation. The Controller of State shall be ex officio a member of said Board. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties of the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization for their respective counties, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the county for the purpose of county taxation; provided, said State and County Boards of Equalization are hereby authorized and empowered, under such rules of notice as the County Boards may prescribe as to the county assessments, and under such rules of notice as the State Board may prescribe as to the action of the State Board, to increase or lower the entire assessment roll or any assessment contained therein, so as to equalize the assessment of the property contained in said assessment roll, and make the assessment conform to the true value in money of the property contained in said roll.

SEC. 10. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads in this State, operated in more than one county, shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization at their actual value, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts, in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts; and all other property of railroads shall be assessed by the counties in which such property is situated.

SEC. 11. Income taxes may be assessed to and collected from persons, corporations, joint-stock associations, or companies resident or doing business in this State, or any one or more of them, in such cases and amounts, and in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 12. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry out the provisions of this article.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair will enforce the parliamentary rule that these sections will be called in their order, and gentlemen desiring to offer amendments can then do so. Amendments are in order to the first section.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SECTION 1. All property in this State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property' is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed; provided, that growing crops, and such property as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation; but property of any county or municipal corporation, not situated within the limits of such county or corporation, shall be liable to local taxation in the county where situated. The word 'property' shall also include stocks, but stocks shall be taxed as hereafter provided in this article. The Legislature may authorize a deduction of debts, due to bona fide residents of this State, from credits, except in cases provided for in section four of this article."

SPEECH OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: Section one was passed by the Convention quite hastily. Different amendments were offered, but they found nothing to suit and adopted section one. Now, we are upon the eve of sending out our work to the people, and it is certainly desirable that it should not be crude and inharmonious, otherwise the people will soon find it out, the papers will soon discover the defect, and it will be brought forward in order to defeat the Constitution. I want to see section one so formulated that it will answer the purposes for which it was intended. Section one does not accord with our ideas exactly in regard to the definition of the word property. Now, section one says: "The word 'property,' as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership," etc. Will any gentleman here tell me that dues are not credits? I understand that when anything is due to me it is a credit in my favor. Therefore, it is not necessary to have the word dues in this section. Will any gentleman tell me that bonds are not credits? Whenever I hold these bonds they are credits in my favor, and no repetition of words meaning the same thing is necessary. The word bonds is included in the generic term credits. Then we come to stocks. What are stocks? They are not real estate; they are personal property, assignable by certificate, and whenever I hold them they are credits in my favor. Therefore, I maintain that the words bonds, stocks, and dues are covered by the word "credits," and are therefore superfluous. Here is another reason why they ought to go out. I find at the close of section one that the Legislature may authorize a deduction of debts from—what? debts from stocks, from bonds, from dues? It says from credits; then there is no deduction authorized from bonds, from stocks, from dues. That was not the intention of this Convention. The Convention intended that rebate to apply to all credits. They did not mean to say that it should not apply to stocks, bonds, and dues. Now, when the Assessor comes you say these stocks, bonds, and dues are credits, and I have a right to a rebate. No, says the Assessor, the Constitution draws a distinction between them, and does not treat them as credits, and you can have no deduction. I say, therefore, that this section does not convey the meaning of the Convention in that respect. Again, it does not harmonize with section four, because the words "contract or other obligation," which are found in section four, are not in section one. Also, it says "property used exclusively for public schools." Now these words are not necessary, because public school property is already included in the sentence, "property belonging to this State, or any municipality thereof." Now, if these things are eliminated it will reduce the section very materially. It will then read as follows:

"SECTION 1. All property in this State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word 'property' is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed; provided, that growing crops, and such property as may belong to the United States, this State, any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation; but property of any county or municipal corporation, not situated within the limits of such county or corporation, shall be liable to local taxation in the county where situated. The word 'property' shall also include stocks, but stocks shall be taxed as hereafter provided in this article. The Legislature may authorize a deduction of debts due to bona fide residents of this State from credits, except in cases provided for by section four of this article."

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert after the word 'taxation,' in line six, the following: 'but property of any county or municipal corporation not within the limits of said county or corporation, shall be subject to local taxation in the county where the same is situated.'"

REMARKS OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I offer that amendment, and I am in favor of it. Now, the Spring Valley Waterworks are situated in San Mateo County, and constitute a very material part of the taxable property of that county. Propositions have been made from time to time pointing to the acquisition of these works by the City of San Francisco. Now, it does seem to me that the inhabitants of San Francisco, when they acquire and hold that property in the County of San Mateo, ought to pay the tax upon it. The burden rests upon the inhabitants of San Mateo County, while the people of San Francisco enjoy all the benefits. It seems to me wrong for one community to own and enjoy property at the expense of another community.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: It is only necessary to state the case that the gentleman has stated to convince anybody that the amendment ought not to be adopted. It would work a great hardship. The County of San Mateo would derive the money for the support of their government from San Francisco. No public property should be taxed.

MR. MOFFAT. Mr. President: I am in favor of the proposition. This water company controls twenty-five thousand acres of land in San Mateo County, and are constantly acquiring more. Nearly all that land will be covered with water and used for the benefit of San Francisco. All that land will be exempt from taxation, which is unjust to the taxpayers of San Mateo County.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: Our cities and towns are, and probably always will be, authorized to hold and own ground for cemeteries outside of their town limits. That is perfectly proper. Under such an amendment as this they would have to pay taxes on these cemeteries. That is one instance in which it would work a wrong.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: This amendment proceeds upon a fundamental error. It assumes that the county is separate from the State. As to the necessity for it, there is no necessity for it; when we say all public property shall be exempt from taxation, that includes all property belonging to a county, city, or town. To say that one county shall tax another county, is to say that the State shall tax its own property. I do not see any likelihood of the purchase being made, as the gentleman suggests.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: The State does not tax its own property, because that would simply be taking money out of one pocket and putting it into another. But this is a different case. Even the expenses of condemnation would have to be paid by the people of San Mateo County; the expenses of the Court, the witnesses, and all the officers, would have to be paid by them for the benefit of the people of San Francisco. There are twenty-five thousand acres of land necessary to those waterworks; and you might condemn half the county, and shift the burdens of taxation on to the other half, while citizens of San Francisco enjoy the benefits.

REMARKS OF MR. REYNOLDS.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: The gentleman says the expenses of condemnation must be paid by the County of San Mateo. I had supposed that the gentleman understood by this time that in a civil action the expenses are paid by the litigants.

MR. EDGERTON. Allow me——

MR. REYNOLDS. No, sir; in the language of the gentleman from Los Angeles, "Go away; go away." [Laughter.] Now, sir, the theory upon which this amendment proceeds is wrong, the gentleman to the contrary notwithstanding. No such thing can be found anywhere in the United States. Whoever heard of the different counties of the State of New York taxing the waterworks of that city, or anywhere else in the world? Who ever heard of such a thing? It is absurd. If the City of San Francisco ever condemns this property, she wants water and not land, any more than is necessary. If this could be done, the County of San Mateo might tax it to the tune of millions of dollars. There is scarcely any limit to its value. This land that is talked of belongs to the Spring Valley Water Company, who hold it for the purpose of monopolizing all the water in the country, and it is taxed to them. But there is no probability of San Francisco condemning all that land. There is no good reason for such an amendment as this, and I hope it will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: This amendment, though it comes from Sacramento, really originated in San Mateo, hence is based on purely selfish reasons. I suppose the citizens of San Francisco, for the same selfish reasons can oppose it, and seek to avoid the burdens which it seeks to impose on them. Now, as already stated here, this is an entire novelty, and violates the common principles of taxation, that the Government never taxes itself, either as a whole, or in any integral part of it. Counties are simply subdivisions of the State for the convenience of local government, but they are a part of the general government of a State. Now, why is it that the State is permitted to own property here in Sacramento without paying taxes on it. Here is this capitol, and the grounds around it. Why not tax them for the benefit of Sacramento? It would not be taking money out of one pocket and putting into the other, according to the theory of the gentleman from Sacramento, because it would come out of the pockets of people all over the State, and go into the pockets of the people of Sacramento. Why should not the county of Marin tax the State Prison, and the counties of Napa and San Joaquin the asylums? It is exactly the same principle. The application is different, but the principle is exactly the same. San Francisco, as a subdivision of the State, may acquire the Spring Valley Waterworks. If she does, she ought not be subject to taxation, because it is a part of the State property. This amendment, if it should pass, would simply amount to a prohibition to San Francisco from purchasing that property. She never would purchase it under these circumstances. I have no idea that waterworks of New York or Boston, are taxed by the different counties in which they are situated. I know that such is not the case in regard to the waterworks in Washington. If there are any such instances in the United States I have never heard of them. It would be a violation of the fundamental principles of taxation that public property should be taxed. I hope therefore that the amendment will be rejected.

MR. LARKIN. I think the gentleman's argument from San Francisco is far fetched. The buildings of the State are State property, while the property of municipalities belong to only a portion of the people of the State. If the people of Sacramento saw fit to build a canal costing millions of dollars to bring water here, I think it ought to be taxed. I think the proposition is correct. It occupies an entirely different relation. They might engage in railroading, and should they be exempt from taxes throughout the State.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton.

Lost.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I offer the following amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out Johnson's amendment, and substitute the following: SECTION 1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the State. All property in the State not exempt under the laws of the United States, except growing crops, property belonging to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation thereof, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. Mortgages on real estate, credits, and franchises shall be considered property for the purposes of taxation. The Legislature may authorize a deduction from credits taxed, of debts due to bona fide residents of this State, except in the case of debts or obligations secured by mortgage or trust deed on real estate."

REMARKS OF MR. MILLER.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: This proceeds upon the theory that the people of this State are pretty well satisfied with the system of taxation which now exists, with one or two exceptions—with the exception of mortgages, trust deeds, credits, and franchises. I think it has been pretty clearly demonstrated that it is the will of the people of this State that credits should be taxed, whether secured or unsecured, and also franchises. This amendment adopts the language of the old Constitution, with these exceptions; it also provides a system of rebate in the case of credits and debts. I do not believe that section one, as adopted, meets the approval of a majority of the people of this State; there are many things contained in it which had better be taken out. I offered it before but it was voted down; afterwards, many members who had voted against it, came to me and said they were sorry they had done so.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from San Francisco, General Miller.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: When this same amendment was offered before, I opposed it. The section which we adopted as section one, was adopted without due consideration; I remember the circumstances under which it was adopted. When the Convention was worn out, and prepared to take almost anything that was offered, the gentleman offered this amendment, and without being read more than once, it was adopted. The proposition offered by General Miller has some very strong features in its favor; one of them is, that taxation shall be equal and uniform; that was opposed before by some gentlemen who thought that at some future time it might be advisable to tax one class of industries higher than another; but in considering this subject, it appears to me that one class of property ought to be taxed at the same rate as another. Now, we have seen the evil already, for we have gone on and taxed much of the mining property in this State twice, while agricultural property has been taxed but once. Let me say that these gentlemen who think they are protecting the interests of poor men by refusing to say that taxation shall be equal and uniform, are making a very great mistake. Now, one industry should not be compelled to carry a burden that every other industry is not compelled to carry. I can see numerous reasons why this amendment is better than section one. There can be no room for construction so that mortgages shall escape taxation, for it expressly says that they shall be taxed. Section one is not clearly understood, and it is uncertain what the effect of it will really be. I am in favor of the amendment for these reasons.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: When this subject was before this body before General Miller proposed this amendment, proposing equality and uniformity of taxation, that doctrine was urged upon this body, but was rejected; probably because there existed a clause that taxation should be uniform upon certain classes of subjects. I endeavored at that time to point out the fallacy of such a proposition, but the Convention rejected it, and now, after having drifted far out into the dark, we are coming back again to the platform on which the State has rested for thirty years. I hope that we have learned a lesson, and that this proposition will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. ANDREWS.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I am opposed to the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco. It has been said that the words "equal and uniform" have been construed by the Courts. Do not gentlemen know that the construction has been that these words are an inhibition on the taxation of mortgages? I have here the decision of Judge McKinstry, in the fifty-first California, page two hundred and fifty-seven, and that decision goes to the effect that the taxation of mortgages is not consistent with the provision of equality and uniformity. That is why I object to these words here. No matter if we do say that mortgages shall be taxed, if we also say that taxation shall be equal and uniform, it leaves the question to be again raised, whether the taxation of credits is equal and uniform taxation. I am in favor of taxing all property, but I am not in favor of double taxation.

MR. HUNTER. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Barbour, Evey, Wilson, and Dunlap.

The Convention refused to order the main question.

REMARKS OF MR. BEERSTECHER.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I must say that I am very much surprised at the position taken by Mr. Cross, and I was unable to see upon what he based his position until he mentioned the word "stocks"—stocks! stocks! And that is exactly the difficulty with the gentleman. He does not desire to have stocks taxed, therefore he favors the amendment. Now, we have been discussing this matter for about two weeks. This equal and uniform business was before the Committee of the Whole and before the Convention, and was fully canvassed, and the Convention came to the conclusion that they were pernicious—that they were the cause of the Supreme Court deciding that the mortgage tax was unconstitutional.

MR. CROSS. Didn't you pledge yourself to support in this body the principle of rebate?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes, sir.

MR. CROSS. Is there any principle of rebate in this section?

MR. BEERSTECHER. Yes, sir; as I understand it.

MR. CROSS. Then you don't understand it.

MR. BEERSTECHER. That may be, as I have not the intellect that the gentleman has. I think it would be dangerous to lay down an absolute doctrine here that debts should be deducted from credits. I would leave that to the Legislature. If the law works bad they can repeal it. But in the Constitution it cannot be so easily changed. I hope that this Convention will not undo what it has done by allowing these words to be inserted. If we adopt these words we simply open the door for judicial construction which may, in the future as in the past, defeat the object of the Constitution.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: When this question was under consideration in the Committee of the Whole, I then took occasion to say that the words "equal and uniform" ought to remain in the Constitution, and I read from the decisions of the Supreme Court to show what the decisions had been. I read also from the same decision referred to by the gentleman from Shasta, the case of The People vs. The Hibernia Bank, and I attempted to show then, and I believe now, that it is the fact that the Supreme Court did not rest the question of the validity of the mortgage tax upon the words "equality and uniformity." Now, the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, General Miller, expressly provides that mortgages and credits shall be taxed, and then that there shall be a rebate. That provision for rebate takes the whole question out of the rule of that decision. The Board of Equalization, when they pass upon the value of mortgages, pass also upon the question of rebate. Therefore the arguments of these gentlemen have no application here. I think this Convention had better call a halt. I think I know what the public sentiment in this State is, and I believe the people are in favor of retaining these words in the Constitution; and they are in favor of it because these words mean something; because equal and uniform applies to every class of property and every class of taxpayers; because it is a protection, not alone to the rich, but to the poor. All property must be taxed at the same rate, so that every citizen must be equal before the law with every other citizen. It is well enough for gentlemen to get up here and recite the history of taxation in this State to show that a system of graduated taxation should be adopted. But that is a principle contrary to American doctrines, and contrary to the very first principles of justice. If you have a right to tax the rich man at a higher rate than the poor man, why, you have a right, if you get the power, to turn the tables and tax the poor man and let the rich man go untaxed. The true principle is to tax the dollar at so much wherever you find it. Tax every man's dollar alike. Make no discrimination. By adopting that rule you will commend your Constitution to the favorable consideration of the people of this State. I have yet to converse with any man in this State who has not denounced the proposition to strike out these words. Even those who are most strongly in favor of taxing mortgages are in favor of retaining these words. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Digitized by Google

REMARKS OF MR. REDDY.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: Are we to understand that it is the desire of this Convention to have a system of taxation that will be unequal, and not uniform? That seems to be the logical conclusion. It seems to me that every fair minded man ought to be satisfied with a tax that is equal and uniform. Then every man and every piece of property in the State is treated alike; then it is fair, and equal, and just. You say by striking out these words that taxation shall be unequal; that it is not desirable to have equal taxation; and yet, in this very same article we have provided for an expensive Board for the avowed purpose of making them equal. Why provide for a Board of Equalization in one section, and in another section say that we will not have equal taxation? That seems to me to be inconsistent. We have no use for a Board of Equalization if we refuse to insert these words. It seems that gentlemen fear to insert these words, because it may prohibit the Legislature from imposing double and treble taxation. That is the reason we are in favor of it, because we are opposed to double and treble taxation. Under the system we have adopted, they can tax one class of property at three per cent., and another class at fifty per cent., if they choose. It is a gross and uncalled for injustice. Under this you may take any special class of property and tax it out of existence. No fair minded man can insist upon any such thing as that.

REMARKS OF MR. DOWLING.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: Equal and uniform taxation will never satisfy the people of this State. We will always hear of the greatest distress; we will always hear of the grossest injustice, unless we have something besides equal and uniform taxation.

MR. REDDY. Do you desire that taxation shall be unequal?

MR. DOWLING. No, sir; every man must be taxed in proportion to his property. That is just.

MR. REDDY. Then why do you not say it must be equal?

MR. DOWLING. Because it can never be equal and be just. [Laughter.] It is impossible. Here is A, B, and C, each respectively. A has one acre, one thousand dollars; B has two acres, two thousand dollars; and C has three acres, or three thousand dollars' worth of property. It takes all A's property to support his family, while B has twice as much, and C three times as much. Now, B and C ought certainly to be taxed higher than A. There is no such thing as equal taxation, and just taxation. We have to have progressive taxation. How can you tax property when there is no such thing as property? If you have progressive taxation—that is, tax a man in proportion to what he is worth, in proportion to the property he has, then, sir, you have a just taxation. Because, if I am taxed for that which is absolutely necessary to support me, where does the tax come from? The thing is an absurdity. It must come out of my little capital stock; and if I take it out of my little capital stock, I might as well go to the poor house.

MR. CROSS. If we do not put these words in here, some future Legislature may tax small estates at higher rates than large estates.

MR. DOWLING. You are always clear headed in everything else, but I am sorry to say you are not on this question of taxation. I never heard of such an absurdity as taxing a man for what is absolutely necessary to support his family. You simply rob him. Mr. Edgerton, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Biggs are three gentlemen (I suppose.) [Laughter.] Mr. Edgerton owns a thousand dollars worth of property, Mr. Wilson owns two thousand dollars worth——

MR. EDGERTON. You are mistaken. [Laughter.]

MR. DOWLING. And Mr. Biggs owns three thousand dollars worth. Now, it takes every cent Mr. Edgerton's property will bring to support his family, and if he has to pay the Government a dollar tax on that, in the name of reason where is the dollar coming from, unless he pays it out of the capital stock. Now, Mr. Wilson can support his family on the same amount, and he can better afford to pay ten dollars tax than Mr. Edgerton can one. Again, Mr. Biggs has three thousand dollars, and he can support his family on one thousand dollars. This illustrates the fallacy of equal and uniform taxation.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I do not know that I have any new argument to present. This question has been argued twice and rejected. I have heard no new reason why we should insert this in the Constitution, not a single new reason. I maintain that when you have said that all property in the State shall be taxed you have covered the ground. Now, sir, in establishing a system of taxation you have two things to take into consideration. One of them is: is the rule a wise one per se; and then, has the rule worked well in the past. The State has been working for thirty years under this proposed system, and this Convention assembled here is proof that it worked badly. That is all there is of it. Now, sir, is it proper, is it right, is it wise to insist on restoring the same rule against which the people rose up, and to correct which this Convention was called? Now, sir, I say we are not in favor of unequal taxation. It is a rebuttal of the statement that we are willing that all property should be taxed. The State should not be subjected to these constant quibbles, and to restore these words, will be to throw the whole article open to this quibbling. We have laid down a correct rule. We have said that all property should be taxed in proportion to its value, and that is enough. In addition to that we say that property which has heretofore been held not to be property shall, for the purposes of taxation, be deemed property and subject to taxation. That covers the ground. I hope this amendment will be voted down.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: Some members express surprise and astonishment at the gentleman from Sacramento; others express a degree of astonishment at the member from Nevada; some again, at the amendment which has been introduced by General Miller. Now, sir, I have long since learned not to be very much astonished at anything. Now, it appears that the great ocean of discussion which this body engaged in is to be presented over again. These matters were discussed, and discussed very extensively. Our conclusions are embodied in section one of this article. I am convinced that it expresses the average judgment of this body, and there is no use of any further discussion.

REMARKS OF MR. SHAFTER.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: If we can get ourselves right on this question we had better try and do it. There is no need for any lengthy discussion. We have talked these matters over and over again. Now, sir, it has been demonstrated beyond all question that the term "equality and uniformity" has not been the rock upon which previous laws have split; it had nothing to do with it. There is no man who can demonstrate that these words had anything to do with it. It was because a piece of property was taxed in one form, and then taxed in another form, that the Supreme Court has overridden the Legislature, and refused to allow property to be taxed twice. We are called upon to restore these words, "equal and uniform," which never ought to have been left out; and I am in hopes that the amendment will be adopted. I thought it was right before; I think it is right still. Leaving out those words is merely opening the way for graduated taxation. My friend from Nevada was right. The man who thinks he is benefiting the poor man by leaving out these words is mistaken. They are the poor man's shield. When a poor man sits down and says that inequality before the law shall be the rule, he is his own worst enemy. The reason why some of these gentlemen are voting against this amendment is, that they want to prepare the way for a system of graduated taxation; but I hope their purpose will be defeated.

REMARKS OF MR. CAPLES.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: This is no new fight. It has been made on this floor time and time again. I can almost admire the pluck of the gentlemen who have been defeated time and time again; and still they come to the front ready to be defeated again, as they will be; because I warn them that the nigger in the fence was long since seen and discovered.

MR. CROSS. I object to the word "nigger." You should say a colored man in the fence.

MR. CAPLES. I am not fastidious, because we have something more important than color at this time. The gentlemen talk very nice and plausible about equal and uniform taxation, but I warn them that this talk is understood. These terms were used before to exempt property from taxation, and so they will be again; and that is the secret of their determination to get them into the new Constitution. We desire not only to reverse the Hibernia Bank decision, but we intend to put this section in such unmistakable language that no Court can ever misconstrue it, or interpret it to mean the exemption of any property from taxation, that these things shall not be exempt from taxation. We say that all property shall be taxed, and that it shall be taxed at its actual value, and that includes mortgages and solvent debts. What better form of words can you have? Does it not cover the ground? Why do they want any more? Simply because they believe that those words will open the question again to judicial interpretation, and serve their purpose to secure the exemption of certain kinds of property from taxation.

REMARKS OF MR. WELLER.

MR. WELLER. Mr. President: This question has taken up a good deal of time, and as long as it remains in its present condition I am willing it should take more time. I am ready to spend a good deal of time upon this question in order to have it right. It was the burden of taxation which certain classes were laboring under that caused this Convention to be called. These words "equal and uniform" have been in this Constitution nearly thirty years. They have been interpreted in various ways, and the last interpretation was that one class of people should bear the burden of taxation. The business men of the country, those who employ capital, employ labor, and develop the resources of the country, who are the life of the country, support this Government.

Digitized by Google

That is the interpretation placed on these words by the Supreme Court of the State. There is one thing lost sight of, and that is that taxation is for the support of the Government which protects us. Now, during the past ten years, since this decision, the wealthy class of people have escaped taxation. They have held the offices, but they have borne no portion of the burdens of taxation. It has been borne by the industrial classes alone. If that is equality and uniformity we have had enough of it. I don't object to the term, but it is the interpretation. My theory is to tax everything in the hands of the man who owns it, and then let them take care of their own private business between themselves. Let them be taxed, but don't undertake to keep book accounts between every man and his creditors. In that way you will get a larger amount of property on the assessment roll, and the rate of taxation will be correspondingly smaller. I am opposed to the amendment, and I am opposed to allowing any rebates whatever.

REMARKS OF MR. CASSERLY.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I shall not take much time in what I have to say. I have been an attentive listener to the debates here. I can make nothing else out of it than that the idea here is to inflict upon this State double taxation. Now, sir, why not tax things and not the representative of things? The very moment you depart from that principle of taxation you are all afloat; you are at sea. Now, take the case of depositors in our savings banks. They represent a very large class of citizens. Unlike the Chinese, their earnings return again to the avenues of commercial life, and help to develop the country. The aggregated wealth of these depositors is something enormous. The proposition now is to tax these depositors as follows: first, on their pass books; second, to tax the coin which they deposit; third, to tax the mortgage given as security when that money is loaned; fourth, to tax the land on which that mortgage is based. Now, sir, there are four distinct taxes which the depositor has to pay. I want to take this occasion to enter my solemn protest to anything of this kind. And you may depend upon it, this kind of taxation will not suit the justice-loving people of California. There are many other things I would like to say, but I know that the time is limited.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: A notice.

THE PRESIDENT. Out of order. Amendments to section two are in order.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section two, by adding, after the final word 'value,' the following: 'provided, however, that the Legislature shall provide a system of graduated taxation upon all large tracts of land owned by individuals or corporations.'"

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: This is the only way to get out of the monopoly of land, which is acknowledged, on all hands, to be the curse of the State. Land monopoly is increasing, and the people are aroused to the importance of the subject, and are determined that it shall be abolished. The only way now that we have left is by a graduated system of taxation. I hope that this amendment will be adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. Amendments to section three are in order.

MR. CAPLES. Mr. President: I move to strike out section three. This section is entirely unnecessary, and it would cost five millions of dollars to carry it out. Take the case of the Sheldon grant here in this county; it is cut up into lots of eight hundred and forty acres each, made by private survey, running parallel with the river, northeast and southwest, the Government would cut these lines with acute angles, and it would be necessary, under this section, to survey each one of these separate lots. The section is utterly preposterous, and can never be carried out.

MR. EDGERTON. The same amendment and same argument, with the same result. I again demand the previous question.

Carried.

And at five o'clock and twenty minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SECOND DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Wednesday, February 26th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with and the same approved.

So ordered.

PETITION.

MR. STEELE, from citizens of San Luis Obispo County, asking for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors.

Laid on the table.

REPORT.

MR. AYERS, from the Committee on Reporting and Printing, reported as correctly engrossed the article on miscellaneous subjects.

REVENUE AND TAXATION—CONSIDERATION RESUMED.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on revenue and taxation. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Sacramento to strike out section thirty-four.

MR. FILCHER. I desire to move an amendment to strike out and insert.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 3. Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one Government section, and which has been surveyed by the United States Government, shall be assessed for the purposes of taxation by sections or fractions of sections. The Legislature shall provide by law for the assessment in small tracts of all lands not surveyed by the United States Government."

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: In reference to the motion to strike out I will say this: I do not favor the section as it stands at present, for I believe it will prove a dangerous provision. But, sir, I do not think that where a proposition contains a good idea it should be stricken out without endeavoring to amend it.

THE PRESIDENT. The previous question was moved by the gentleman from Sacramento last night. The motion was pending and no vote taken upon it.

MR. ESTEE. I call for the previous question on this motion to strike out.

MR. EDGERTON. I ask leave to withdraw my motion for the purpose of offering an amendment. My impression is, that as that section now stands it will result in very serious complications, and vitiate any assessments in this State.

MR. FILCHER. I have the floor. I agree with the gentleman from Sacramento, that section three as it at present stands will prove pernicious. It would be hard to prove a constitutional assessment of this land. But, sir, as I before remarked, I do not think it becoming the part of the friends of this Constitution to stand up here and endeavor to strike out everything that does not exactly suit them. If there is a good idea contained in the section it is our duty to perfect it, and not strike it out because it contains one or two objectionable features. The idea that land should be assessed in small tracts is a good one. Take a large tract of land, and in going over it you may find a small valley of the very best character of land. The owner would point out the barren portion and say this is only worth one dollar and twenty-five cents an acre, while the rich portions may be worth twenty or thirty dollars an acre. I claim that we should provide for assessing these lands by small parcels. Now, if we say that they shall be assessed by Government sections, we know that there are large portions of the land that are not surveyed. The proposition I have sent up obviates the objection. It provides that all lands, so far as surveyed, shall be assessed by sections or fractions of sections, and that it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for assessing lands now unsurveyed in small tracts. I would like to have the gentleman from Sacramento look into the merits of the proposition. I believe it avoids the difficulties that are complained of, that it will stand the test, and prove beneficial.

REMARKS OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: The section as it now stands in the article before the Convention, is substantially the section as it was originally introduced by Judge Fawcett. When the report of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation was under consideration in Committee of the Whole, the section was stricken out and the substitute offered by the gentleman from Yolo, Mr. Reed, was adopted, as follows:

Digitized by Google

"SEC. 4. Every tract of land containing within its boundaries more than one Government section shall be assessed and valued, for the purposes of taxation, by sections or fractional sections, in such manner as the Legislature may by law provide."

Now, that is substantially the amendment, I think, of the gentleman from Placer. It was very thoroughly discussed in Committee of the Whole and adopted; but when the question came up before the Convention, upon a very elaborate discussion by the Convention, in which almost everybody who speaks at all upon the floor participated, that section, as offered by the gentleman from Yolo, was stricken out, and the original section adopted by the Convention, as it was offered by Judge Fawcett. Now, sir, about this matter of expense. I am informed that the cost of running these lines is about six dollars a mile. That is the prevailing price of making these surveys. The survey of a section would cost twenty-four dollars; and, in my judgment, the expense of these surveys, especially where you take into consideration that a large portion of the State is already surveyed, would be a mere bagatelle in comparison with the increased revenues that would be derived from the assessments on this plan. I am inclined to think that the section ought to be retained as it now stands in the report; and I hope that the Convention will vote down the amendments.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I offer an amendment—to insert the words "without actual survey" in the sixth line. No actual survey is necessary. The whole thing can be done by reconnoisance.

REMARKS OF MR. DUDLEY.

MR. DUDLEY, of Solano. Mr. President: The object of this section is a good one, but there are so many technicalities that may arise under it, that I do not think it safe. If any of the revenue officers do not comply in every respect with the letter of the law, there is an opening for a contest, and perhaps an opportunity to get out of paying the taxes. That being the case, it is certainly very plain that the less technicalities we have the better. There are difficulties which might not occur to one's mind at first thought. For instance, there is a very large portion of the territory of the State of California in Spanish grants, over which the Government lines have never been extended.

MR. BLACKMER. I think it would be in order for this committee to be allowed to rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again. It is impossible to hear what is going on.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will suspend his remarks until the caucus adjourns.

MR. DUDLEY. I was saying that a very considerable portion of the State of California is occupied by Spanish grants, and many of them have been surveyed in irregular forms. Those lying along creeks, the lines have generally been extended from the creek to the back part of the grant, regardless of shape and regardless of direction; they may lie from southeast to northwest, or in any manner. If we put a clause in this Constitution that will require lands that were already divided up into small tracts and that lie in that shape, to be resurveyed on the Government lines, I think there is danger of opening a road whereby property will escape taxation.

REMARKS OF MR. SCHELL.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I endeavored to make something of a fight against this section when it was before the Committee of the Whole, and I will say now again, that I think a very brief analysis of this section will show that there are several insupportable objections to the section as it was adopted; that it is entirely impracticable, and impossible to carry it out were we to adopt it. My first objection to this section is this—but before mentioning my objections I desire to say that so far as the principle sought to be attained, or the assessment and valuation of property is concerned, I believe it is a good one, and I am in favor of it, but I do not desire to incorporate an inflexible rule in this Constitution which is entirely impracticable, and which can not be enforced. In the first place, it is not proper to say fractional sections. Now, the first proposition is, that all lands, that every tract of land containing within its borders more than six hundred and forty acres, shall be assessed by sections or fractional sections. Now, everybody that knows and understands the system of surveys adopted by the Government of the United States, knows that a fractional section simply means a tract of land which contains something more or less than six hundred and forty acres. Now, I suppose that the object sought, or intended to be embraced here was, sections, or legal subdivisions thereof. A legal subdivision is a half section or quarter section; I suppose that was the intention, and it should be changed to read: section or legal subdivision thereof.

In the next place it is asserted here by the distinguished gentleman from Sacramento that it would be a mere bagatelle to subdivide or sectionize the non-sectionized lands of this State. Now, sir, I am willing to take the Surveyor-General's office in this State, as equal in authority to the honorable gentleman from Sacramento county. That office informs me, and did inform me as late as yesterday, that to carry out the provisions of section four here in relation to the extension of the United States surveys over the unsurveyed lands, would not cost this State less than one million of dollars. There are well informed gentlemen who say that it will cost much more. I have been once a Deputy United States Surveyor myself, and think I know something of what I speak, and I do think that this State cannot possibly afford to adopt any such measure as that. Why, the gentleman from Marin, Judge Shafter, stated when this matter was up before, that to comply with the provisions of this section in his county alone, would cost not less than one hundred thousand dollars, and yet the gentleman from Sacramento says it will cost but a mere bagatelle. Now, sir, I am further informed, and I get it from the maps and records in the Surveyor-General's office, that there are nearly five hundred Mexican or Spanish grants in this State. When this matter was up before I think I demonstrated how impossible it was to make this section work in connection with those grants, and I will not repeat it now. It is preposterous. I think if gentlemen will consider the proposition they will see that it is impracticable.

REMARKS OF MR. JONES.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I will detain the Convention but a very few minutes indeed. I wish to say, by way of shortening my own remarks, that, from some observation in regard to the public lands, surveyed and unsurveyed, I am satisfied that the views expressed by the gentleman from Stanislaus are sound and correct. My experience and observation is, that the posts of the Government surveys are not discernible to any man but a surveyor with his instruments in the field a very few years after they are set. No Assessor can go upon some of these tracts and assess any solitary section without another survey and marking of the corners. It might just as well never have been surveyed. There is a plat in the United States Land Office and notes may be had, but they would be utterly worthless to the Assessor. That the expense will be enormous cannot be disputed. I think if the Assessor wants to do his duty he can do so, generally. He can look over a tract of forty thousand acres, and can make a fair average of the value if he tries to. You cannot legislate honesty or conscience into the Assessors, whatever you may do in this Constitution, and so far as this hope is concerned we shall be utterly deceived and deluded.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I think this question has been fully discussed. I move the previous question.

Messrs. Wyatt, Biggs, Eagon, and Edgerton also demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention, on a division, by a vote of 64 ayes to 34 noes.

Upon the motion to strike out section three, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Larkin, Swenson, Morse, Kelley, and O'Sullivan.

The roll was called, and the motion to strike out was lost by the following vote:

THE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Placer, Mr. Filcher.

The amendment was adopted.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to rise to a question of privilege, and I rise for the first time in my life to a question of privilege on a newspaper item. I read from the report of our proceedings in the San Francisco Call of the twenty-second instant, as follows: "An effort was made by McCallum to strike out the following declaration in section twenty-one, 'but no person convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of any State shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit, in this State.'" Although this was not intended, as I am assured by the gentleman who wrote it, it is none the less serious. It is entirely erroneous. The plain facts are, and they appear in the official Journal of this Convention, that I supported section twenty-one, which is also quoted in this article. Further, that I, with the rest of the legislative committee, unanimously recommended as one section of our report this section twenty-one, which properly reads as follows:

"SEC. 21. No person convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of this State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust or profit under this State, and the Legislature shall provide, by law, for the punishment of such embezzlement or defalcation as a felony."

In Committee of the Whole the word "any" before the word "State" was inserted in place of the word "this." In Convention I moved to restore the word "this," so that it would read as before, and, as the old Constitution now reads, and said that would relieve the section of a plain absurdity, because the Legislature, of course, could not, as provided in the last two lines, provide for the punishment of such embezzlement in any other State. Mr. Campbell and Mr. Edgerton themselves suggested that striking out the word such in the last line would relieve the section of its inconsistency. Instead of opposing the section, as I am reported, I supported it, and only assisted in correcting the section so as to make it plain and effective. Mr. President, I merely wish to make that correction, and by way of apology for rising to anything that may be said in a newspaper. I will say now, and here, that I fully recognize the right of private reporters to report what we do say, or not to report what we do say, but to report what we do not do or say is an entirely different matter. In this connection, perhaps, it is proper to say that I have no complaint personally to make against the gentlemen who claim to be the official reporters for not having reported anything I have said, since I made a speech against their proposition to lay the foundation for a claim upon the State treasury.

MR. GRACE. Who claim to be official reporters of the Convention?

MR. McCALLUM. The gentlemen in whose behalf a resolution was offered claiming that they were the official reporters of this Convention.

MR. GRACE. I do not understand that those gentlemen claim to be the official reporters of this Convention.

MR. McCALLUM. That was the effect of the resolution. I have no complaint against them for not having reported in their newspaper reports, even any amendment that I offer which has been the practice since that discussion the other day. I recognise these private gentlemen as having a right to leave out anything I say, but when it is offered or put out under the pretense that it is an official or impartial report, it is not true. Three weeks ago these reporters came to me with that resolution. I declined to support it, and was substantially informed that unless I did support it that I would have no favors from them.

Mr. CROSS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is out of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The question of privilege is evidently exhausted.

Messrs. Barbour, Biggs, Wyatt, Harrison, and O'Sullivan demanded the previous question on the adoption of the article.

The Convention refused to order the main question put, on a division, by a vote of 49 ayes to 55 noes.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move to strike out section four.

Messrs. Miller, Reddy, Hunter, Murphy, and Freeman demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the motion to strike out section four, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Biggs, Dean, Freeman, Grace, and Hunter.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to strike out section four by the following vote:

Messrs. Estee, Reddy, Murphy, Tully, and Hilborn demanded the previous question on the adoption of the article.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

USURY LAW.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section five, 'and any contract made or entered into in this State, whereby the lender shall directly or indirectly, by discount or otherwise, receive a greater interest than ten per centum per annum upon the dollar for the loan, use, hire, or forbearance for the payment of money, shall be null and void. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.'"

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The previous question was ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: The amendment which I offer is intended to express and represent the ideas of a very large majority of the people of the State of California, as I believe, upon the subject of not only regulating interest in this State, but for the purpose of having a usury law by which only so much interest for the loan, use, hire, or forbearance in the payment of money shall be prevented from being collected. At the present time we have an interest law which says that ten per centum shall be the interest upon money until it goes into judgment; after judgment the demand shall bear interest at the rate of seven per centum per annum; but we have no law which forbids the taking by contract of any amount of interest that may be contracted for. It is to prevent contracts for a higher rate of interest than ten per cent. that I offer this amendment. A provision of this character is found in all the States in this Union, probably with one or two exceptions. Right now it is being debated in the State of New York to reduce their interest from seven per centum to six per centum per annum. It has been called for by the political bodies of this State, and I would have preferred to have reduced the legal interest to seven per cent.; but believing that seven per cent. could not be carried, and that ten per cent. could be carried, and that that would be a step in the right direction, I propose this amendment. I hope that every man who caused his constituents to believe that he would go for something of this character will now support the proposition.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The amendment is not germane to the section, and I am certain that there is some rule, though I do not recollect which one now, which prohibits this kind of an amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. Rule Twenty-eight. Under that rule, the Chair is of the opinion that this amendment is not in order. The Chair therefore decides the point of order well taken.

MR. McCALLUM. I move the previous question on the section.

MR. WYATT. With a view simply of getting a vote upon the question, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair, and ask for the ayes and noes.

MR. EDGERTON. That would not be a vote upon the merits of the question. It would be merely a vote upon the correctness of the ruling.

MR. AYERS. I second the appeal.

The appeal was also seconded by Messrs. West and Evey.

THE PRESIDENT. Rule Twenty-eight reads: "No subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment." The fifth section is a mere provision by which the borrower on a mortgage shall not be compelled to pay the taxes on the money loaned. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Monterey has no connection with that section whatever, but is a general usury law introduced by way of amendment to this section, and the Chair decides that it is not in order under Rule Twenty-eight of the Convention. The gentleman takes an appeal. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: I wish to say, that while it may appear that this is not germane to the subject of taxation, yet perhaps the declaration so often made upon this floor, that if you make the mortgage pay the tax it will increase the rate of interest, makes it germane to this section.

MR. EDGERTON. I am surprised that a gentleman of the intelligence of the gentleman from Nevada, should confound these two propositions. Is it possible that he can claim that a proposition providing for the raising of revenue, and the modes of assessment, has any connection whatever with the policy over usury law? They are as far apart as the poles. The proposition of the gentleman from Monterey is for a usury law, and the subject under consideration is revenue and taxation.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I have seconded the appeal, not on account of any want of respect for the decision, but from a conviction that this clause would be legitimate and proper in this connection, and hoping that a vote of the Convention upon that appeal may be upon the merits of the question. This section five proposes to regulate matters of contract as between the money loaner and the borrower. The amendment offered by the gentleman on my left simply carries the idea of that section out to its legitimate consequence, and that is, that the lender is prohibited from including in his contract that he will raise the interest of the debtor, and compel the debtor to pay an exorbitant rate of interest. I hope the Convention will view it in that light, and that the vote will represent the views of the Convention upon the merits of the question.

Digitized by Google

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I rise for the purpose of making a suggestion to the gentleman who offers the amendment. I am in favor of the amendment, and will support it in its proper place, but I think the ruling of the Chair is right, that this is not germane to the question now before the Convention. I ask the gentleman from Monterey to withdraw it and offer it as an original section under the head of miscellaneous subjects.

MR. McCALLUM. I desire simply to indorse that sentiment. I am one of the minority in favor of the proposition, but I will not vote against the decision of the Chair because I am in favor of the merits of the proposition.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I maintain that the Chair is correct in its ruling on this proposition. This is simply an endeavor to fix a usury law upon the article on revenue and taxation.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I move to lay the appeal on the table.

MR. REYNOLDS. I make the point of order that the gentleman from Alameda made the motion while not in his seat.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken. The question is on the motion to lay the appeal on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Reynolds, Wyatt, Evey, West, and Wilson of Tehama.

The roll was called, and the appeal laid on the table by the following vote:

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Taxes shall be paid by installments, or otherwise, as the Legislature shall provide."

Messrs. Edgerton, Brown, Dean, Keyes, and Caples demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The amendment of Mr. Herrington was rejected.

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section nine.

EQUALIZATION.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out the word 'county' where it first occurs in the eleventh line before the word 'taxation.'"

MR. ROLFE. Mr. President: The way this reads now, I think that this is an oversight, and that that word "county" got in there by a mistake of the committee, because here we have two Boards of Equalization. The State Board of Equalization is confined to equalizing for the purposes of State taxation, and the County Boards—this word "county" being in here—to county taxation; now, under this section, if the County Board of Equalization raises a man's property it can only apply to his county taxation. Therefore, if I own a farm which should be assessed at two thousand dollars, and which is really only assessed at one thousand dollars, and the County Board see the inequality, and after giving me notice, they raise the value of my farm to two thousand dollars, as it should be; now, unless the State Board also go through the formalities of raising that, I only pay taxes on one thousand dollars' worth of my farm for State purposes, while I would be required to pay taxes on two thousand dollars for county purposes. I think it was the evident intention of the Committee on Taxation, that if the County Board of Equalization acted in a legal manner on a certain assessment, and raised a man's assessment, that it should apply to his State tax too. Under our present system, if a man's property is raised from one thousand dollars to two thousand dollars, why, it raises it for all purposes, both State and county. Now, I think, so far as the County Board of Equalization is concerned, it should be allowed to remain just where it is now. If the County Board of Equalization raises the valuation of a man's property, it should apply to both county and State taxes; and then, of course, the State Board of Equalization has a supervisory control over the matter as regards State taxation. I call this to the attention of the Convention, and I think it was an oversight on leaving that word in there.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: It seems to me that if the gentleman would look at the provision immediately following he will confess that his amendment and remarks are hypercriticism on the section. If it was not for the word "county," the County Board and the State Board would have a concurrent power under this section. That was thoroughly debated in the Committee of the Whole, and the Convention, by a decided vote, determined to have it stand as it is; and I now demand the previous question upon it.

MR. ESTEE. That word "county" ought to be stricken out. There is no doubt about it.

MR. VAN DYKE. There is no doubt about it.

Messrs. Edgerton, Brown, Caples, Biggs, and Barton demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The amendment of Mr. Rolfe was adopted.

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: I have an amendment to section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section ten by inserting after the word 'railroads,' in next to the last line, 'and municipal corporations.'"

MR. BARRY. Mr. President: The necessity of an amendment something like this, it seems to me, ought to be obvious to every member of the Convention. This amendment is pretty much of the same import as the one offered yesterday. If a county has a large amount of property situated within its limits it should derive the benefit of the taxes on that property.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The amendment is not pertinent to the section.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken.

MR. DOWLING. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to be added to section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

"And the property of any corporation, municipal or otherwise, not exempted by this Constitution, shall be taxed in the county in which the property is situated."

THE PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

INCOME TAX.

MR. MILLER. Mr. President: I move to strike out section eleven. We have now provided for the taxation of all property in the State according to its value. This article, if carried out, will subject every kind of property of every description to taxation. It is proposed here in section eleven to place it in the power of the Legislature to levy income taxes. If this should stand, with the taxation of property as provided in section one, it provides for a system of double taxation, which I think is unnecessary and not only unnecessary but unjust. If it were desirable to establish in this State a system of taxation of incomes, it should be restricted to certain classes of incomes. It might be restricted to the incomes of railroad corporations, banking associations, insurance companies, and institutions of that kind; but if you require the establishment of an income tax, there ought not to be a specific tax upon the property of persons paying the income tax, because if you do that you tax them twice, and they are bearing double burdens of taxation. My objection to this is that it is against all systems of income tax. It has been tried in the United States. It was unpopular with the people for the reason that it was impossible to so adjust the system as to make it equitable and just among the people. This section providing for an income tax was adopted here without much consideration and without much thought, and it simply provides for a system of double taxation upon the property of the people of this State. I am opposed to it.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: I desire to offer an amendment, as a substitute for section eleven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 11. The Legislature may provide for the assessment and collection of a tax upon incomes derived from investments in bonds, credits, stocks, dues, franchises, or any of them, and other like property, in lieu of a direct or ad valorem tax upon that class of property."

REMARKS OF MR. MCCALLUM.

MR. McCALLUM. Mr. President: In order to offer an amendment to the section, it will be necessary to vote down the motion to strike out. I am not in favor of the section as it stands, for some of the reasons urged by the gentleman from San Francisco, General Miller. I have not heretofore taken any part in the discussion of the main feature of this report on revenue and taxation, and do not now propose to go farther than to state my position. I have always entertained the idea that property included what is called intangible property as well as tangible property. Under the old system in California taxes were paid upon credits and the like, and many of the older citizens have paid many a dollar, and many hundreds of dollars, on that species of property. I confess that I never changed my mind even after the decision of the Supreme Court reversing its own decision. Therefore, having been accustomed to that idea, I believe that the principle of section one is right. But at the same time I confess that practically it will result in too many cases in double taxation, and sometimes in triple taxation. I am inclined to think if this section eleven should stand just as it is, and the Legislature should act upon it, that there will be still a further taxation—you might say the possibility of quadruple taxation in some cases—as for instance in the case of stocks, in which the property itself is taxed, the capital stock is taxed, it is taxed in the hands of the parties, and then as income. I am satisfied that the theory of an income tax is the true theory with regard to all that class of intangible property, but the Constitution cannot provide the system. It requires the action of the legislature. The true theory of taxation is to tax the tangible property as such, and to reach intangible property through an income tax. At the same time I voted for section one in the absence of such a provision. Therefore I propose this substitute for section eleven. If this principle is right, it is necessary that it should be placed in the Constitution, because the legislature could not avoid this section one of the Constitution, which requires a direct tax, unless the Constitution so provides. This does not require the Legislature to do this thing, but it authorizes the Legislature to do this thing. Now, sir, as to the unpopularity of an income tax, I submit that it comes from taxing a man's labor or occupation. That is not just. Whatever may be his pursuit in life, the labor of his head, or hands, or both together, ought not to be taxed; but an income derived from property, and especially an income derived from investments from intangible property, which cannot be conveniently reached, even though you insert it in the law, I deny has ever been unpopular. I believe that such a scheme can be devised, and if it can it will result in a just system of taxation. This proposition, if adopted, can do no harm, possibly it may do much good.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: It is greatly to be hoped that the principle contained in this section shall not be departed from. All this talk about the unpopularity of an income tax is not based upon reliable data. The income tax imposed by the United States Government was unpopular, simply because the rate of tax imposed was enormous, as high as ten per cent.; and when the law was repealed it was merely repealed by one vote in the Senate, and the principle of an income tax was sustained by the best financial minds in the country. The report of Commissioner Wells also sustains the same principle. There is no iron-clad rule laid down in this section; it merely gives the authority to the Legislature to impose an income tax, and I presume the good sense of any Legislature which undertakes to deal with the subject, will select such interests and such classes and such people as should properly be brought under this system of taxation; and it will endeavor, I have no doubt, to avoid anything like double taxation. There are classes of people in this State, and their numbers are becoming very large, who afford no sustenance to the Government whatever, who own large fortunes and great revenues, and who are not paying any of the just proportion of their burdens to support the State. I think it would be the course of wisdom for us here to leave that enabling section in the Constitution, so that we may hereafter provide to make that class pay their just proportion of the Government dues.

Messrs. Murphy, Estee, Hunter, Reddy, and Dunlap, demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the motion to strike out, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. White, West, Burt, Ayers, and Wyatt.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to strike out section eleven by the following vote:

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M. President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on water and water rights, on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

ARTICLE —.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated, for sale, rental, or distribution, is hereby declared to be a public use, and subject to the regulation and control of the State, in the manner to be prescribed by law; provided, that the rates or compensation to be collected by any person, company, or corporation in this State, for the use of water supplied to any city and county, or city or town, or the inhabitants thereof, shall be fixed, annually, by the Board of Supervisors, or city and county, or City or Town Council, or other governing body of such city and county, or city or town, by ordinance or otherwise, in the manner that other ordinances or legislative acts or resolutions are passed by such body, and shall continue in force for one year and no longer. Such ordinances or resolutions shall be passed in the month of February of each year, and take effect on the first day of July thereafter. Any Board or body failing to pass the necessary ordinances or resolutions fixing water-rates, where necessary, within such time, shall be subject to peremptory process, to compel action at the suit of any party interested, and shall be liable to such further processes and penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. Any person, company, or corporation, collecting water-rates in any city and county, or city or town in this State, otherwise than as so established, shall forfeit the franchises and waterworks of such person, company, or corporation, to the city and county, or city or town where the same are collected, for the public use.

SEC. 2. The right to collect rates or compensation for the use of water supplied to any county, city and county, or town, or the inhabitants thereof, is a franchise, and cannot be exercised except by authority of and in the manner prescribed by law.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Insert in line three, after the word 'use,' the words 'in so far as the public has an interest in such use.'"

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: The whole theory of this thing proceeds to regulate water rights in which the public have an interest, to wit: those water rights where the water was appropriated for the purpose of supplying cities and towns with water. But unfortunately it includes all water rights, whether quasi-public or private. I don't think it is necessary to say that the use of all water is a public use. I don't believe it is right. I demand the ayes and noes.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

THE PRESIDENT. Amendments are in order to section one.

MR. MCFARLAND. I offer an amendment to section one.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out 'and agricultural,' in line four, and insert 'and' before 'moral,' in said line."

MR. MCFARLAND. The whole section refers to individuals—to human beings, and not to land. It is nonsense to talk of the moral and agricultural improvement of the people.

Digitized by Google

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: These words were not reported originally by the committee, but were interjected as an amendment by the Committee of the Whole. Therefore, if there be any defect in the grammar, it is the fault of the Committee of the Whole. I have no objection to the motion to strike out.

The motion to strike out was lost.

THE PRESIDENT. Amendments to section two are in order.

No amendment.

Sections three and four were called, and no amendments offered.

MR. LAVIGNE. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section five by adding to the section the following: 'and it shall be the duty of the Legislature to provide for a system of compulsory education for all children under the age of fourteen years.'"

MR. BLACKMER. The Legislature has that power now.

The amendment was rejected.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: I move to strike out section six.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out.

MR. LARKIN. Mr. President: The Convention struck out the amended section of the Committee of the Whole. Now, in order to harmonize the balance of this article the section ought to be struck out. Leave it to the Legislature to determine what common schools are. Section four reads as follows:

"SEC. 4. The proceeds of all lands that have been or may be granted by the United States to this State for the support of common schools, which may be or may have been sold or disposed of, and the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to the new States under an Act of Congress, distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the several States of the Union, approved A. D. one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and all estates of deceased persons who may have died without leaving a will or heir, and also such per cent. as may be granted or have been granted by Congress on the sale of lands in this State, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, the interest of which, together with all the rents of the unsold lands, and such other means as the Legislature may provide, shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State, subject to the provisions of section six of this article."

Section six reads as follows:

"SEC. 6. The public school system shall include primary and grammar schools, and such high schools, evening schools, normal schools, and technical schools, as may be established by the Legislature, or by municipal or district authority; but the entire revenue derived from the State School Fund, and the State school tax, shall be applied exclusively to the support of primary and grammar schools."

Now there is a conflict between the sections.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: The presence of that section is desirable in order to insure perfect harmony in the article. It is in no respect inconsistent with the provisions of section four, as it simply declares what common schools are. It ought to remain.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. TULLY. Mr. President: I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Grace, Condon, Keyes, and Wyatt.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to strike out section six.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Blackmer, Larkin, Brown, Nason, and White.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to strike out by the following vote:

Prouty,

MR. MARTIN, of Santa Cruz. Mr. President: I move to strike out section seven. This section will authorize a different kind of text-books in every county in the State, and create great confusion, and involve a great deal more expense to parents than the present system.

REMARKS OF MR. CROSS.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: This section could not have been well understood before. It says that the local Boards of the several counties shall do so and so. I call attention to the fact that there is no such thing as a local Board of Education. This says local Boards of Education of the several counties. There is only one county in the State which has a Board of Education, and that is San Francisco. (To a member interrupting: If you will allow me I will make this argument myself, and then you can have the floor.) Then it goes on to provide that in counties having no Board of Education, the Board of Supervisors shall have control of the matter of prescribing what books shall be used, and conduct the examination of teachers. My experience has led me to believe that the class of men who are selected with reference to their competency to deal with county roads and such subjects, are not the best men to deal with the schools. They are not familiar with the examinations of teachers. These Supervisors are men who perhaps never paid any attention to text-books, and know nothing about them. The books they studied are out of date now, and they have neither the time nor the disposition to examine the modern text-books to ascertain which are the best books. I am satisfied that such a system, if adopted in this State, would be very injurious to the public schools of the State. When it comes to selecting text-books they are just as likely to be corrupted as the Legislature.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: This section, as well as the section which preceded it, was very thoroughly discussed and investigated by the Committee of the Whole, and the report of the Committee on Education, which prescribed that the State Board of Education should recommend a series of text-books, was rejected. The subject-matter involved was made the topic of the most rigid scrutiny, and this system received the sanction of a large majority of the Committee of the Whole. If you strike it out you leave the article without any provision for text-books at all, and without any provision for granting teachers' certificates. It will leave us entirely at sea. The proposition is not that the Board of Supervisors shall prescribe text-books, but the Board of Supervisors in connection with the County Superintendent. The County Superintendent is chosen with reference to his fitness to judge of such matters, and in order to avoid a one-man power, the Supervisors are to act with him. This is only carrying out the doctrine of local self-government which has been sanctioned by this body.

MR. WEST. Mr. President: I hope the motion will not prevail. Where there is no Board of Education the County Superintendent and the Board of Supervisors will form a Board for the purpose. I would suggest to the Chairman of the committee that the word "and," in the first line, should be stricken out and the word "or" substituted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out the section.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Martin of Santa Cruz, Evey, Brown, West, and Winans.

MR. McFARLAND. Mr. President: When we struck out the State Board of Education we left the whole system without a head, and I do not suppose it is necessary to remedy it now. The section provides that the text-books shall be chosen by the different counties, which will only add to the confusion. I am in favor of striking out the section, and leaving it to the Legislature to formulate a system which this Convention has failed to do.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the Convention refused to strike out by the following vote:

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add at end of section seven, 'subject to general legislative control.'"

MR. McCONNELL. Mr. President: This was offered before when we had a very thin house, and I think it was not understood. This will leave it in the power of the Legislature to regulate it, and there will be some uniformity.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I am willing, on behalf of the Committee on Education, to accept that amendment, if there is no objection.

MR. WYATT. Mr. President: I think this amendment is an evidence that the Convention is getting the softening of the brain. The whole idea has been heretofore to take this corrupting book question out of the hands of the Legislature, and now it is proposed to restore it, and bring back to the Legislature all the evils attending the corrupt lobby on the text-book question.

MR. LARKIN. The proposition is a remarkable one, and conflicts with every provision of the section. It places this matter right back where we have sought to take it from. We have proposed to leave this matter with the local authorities, and now, at the very last moment, the gentleman proposes to qualify it, and hand it back to the Legislature. I am opposed to it.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I am in favor of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Sacramento. I believe the Legislature should not be divested of all control over this matter. I believe if we are to have an educational system which will amount to anything, it should be uniform throughout the State, and the Legislature must have some control in order to give it uniformity. We are attempting to divide the institution up into fifty-two different parts, allowing each part to select its own books, and adopt its own system for the examination of teachers. I say such a system is contrary to the judgment of the best educators in the country. I am one of those who believe that experienced teachers have a better knowledge of these matters than those who are not engaged in the profession, and I presume there is no teacher who understands his business who will maintain that a Board of Supervisors should either select books or examine and pass upon the qualifications of teachers. Just imagine the Board of Supervisors of one of your interior counties selecting spelling books for your children.

MR. TINNIN. Every county in this State has a superintendent, and he is the Board de facto.

MR. ESTEE. I will illustrate it. Now, there will be all the way from three to twelve members of the Boards of Supervisors, and one superintendent to each Board. The result will be, unless they are much wiser Boards than they are and have been, they will take this matter into their own hands and attempt to manage the educational interests of the county, to the detriment of those interests. They will destroy the grand system that is created by the State. I maintain, that because there is some few things in the conduct of some men who have had charge of the educational department of this State has been wrong, that is no reason why we should destroy the entire system. It ought to be uniform all over the State. Everywhere, all over the country, the educational system is considered a State institution. It is under State control. The State furnishes the money for its support, and the State ought to have control. We want it to be a State system. We want uniform rules, uniform laws, and uniform and permanent regulations for the examination of teachers. The educational interests of this State are the most important interests in the State. We ought to treat it with all the dignity that belongs to it.

REMARKS OF MR. BLACKMER.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I hope this amendment will be adopted. I was in favor of it before. I do not wish to go over the ground again, but it is certain that if this section is left as it is, the standard of our teachers will be greatly lowered, and instead of elevating the standard of education in the State, it will be constantly lowered. If we are to be successful, the standard must be upward. If the system does not keep rising it will keep degenerating—it never can stand still. Unless there is some great central control in the examination of teachers, that will certainly be the result. This section, with this amendment, will not throw the text-book question back into the Legislature, as gentlemen claim. It says in so many words, that these local boards shall select a series of text-books. Then that they shall also have control of the examination of teachers, and grant teachers' certificates. If the amendment is adopted, it will apply to the last part of the section, that to the control of the examination of teachers. "Subject to general legislative enactments." Now, that is just what ought to be in there, and if you do not put it in, before many years roll around you will be sorry for it. I feel in earnest upon this question, because having determined not to have a State Board, there is no central authority which has the power to keep this standard up. If this amendment is not adopted, the standard of our teachers will be lowered, and the efficiency of this great educational system impaired.

REMARKS OF MR. TINNIN.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: This Convention started in at an early day to adopt what is called local self-government. This section is in harmony with that idea. One of the great evils of this State has been the lobby influence around the Legislature on the question of school books, and we have attempted to cure that evil by taking this power out of the hands of the Legislature. Now, the gentleman proposes, by this amendment, to overturn it all, and place the whole matter right back in the hands of the Legislature. I am opposed to it.

REMARKS OF MR. BIGGS.

MR. BIGGS. Mr. President: I desire to offer one or two remarks in answer to the gentleman from San Francisco. I have been taught to believe that consistency was a jewel. When we wanted to leave the Railroad Commissioners to the Legislature he said it would not do. Now, he turns a political somersault and proposes to leave this whole matter to the Legislature.

MR. ESTEE. I never said any such thing.

MR. BIGGS. You did; you proposed to take the control of railroads away from the Legislature.

MR. ESTEE. For the reason, as I then said, that the Legislature had not the time to give it the necessary consideration.

MR. BIGGS. This is for the purpose of doing away with the lobby. I am willing to acknowledge what he says about the Supervisors so far as his own county is concerned. We can except that county. I hope this amendment will not be adopted. In the language of a great statesman: "Stand by your guns, and keep your powder dry." [Laughter.]

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: I move the previous question on the whole article.

Seconded by Messrs. Larkin, Huestis, McComas, and Herrington.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Division was called for, and the Convention refused to order the main question, by a vote of 47 ayes to 64 noes.

MR. WEBSTER. I offer a substitute to section nine.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 9. The University of California shall constitute a public trust, and its organization and government shall be perpetually continued in the form and character prescribed by the organic Act creating the same, passed March twenty-third, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, and the several Acts amendatory thereof, subject only to such legislative control as may be necessary to insure compliance with the terms of its endowments and the proper investment and security of its funds. It shall be entirely independent of all political or sectarian influence, and kept free therefrom in the appointment of its Regents and in the administration of its affairs; provided, that all the moneys derived from the sale of the public lands donated to this State by Act of Congress, approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the several Acts amendatory thereof, shall be invested as provided by said Act of Congress; and the interest of said moneys shall be inviolably appropriated to the endowment, support, and maintenance of at least one college of agriculture, where the leading objects shall be—without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics—to teach such branches of learning as are related to scientific and practical agriculture and the mechanic arts, in accordance with the requirements and conditions of said Act of Congress; and the Legislature shall provide that if, through neglect, misappropriation, or any other contingency, any portion of the fund so set apart shall be diminished or lost, the State shall replace such portion so lost or misappropriated, so that the principal thereof shall remain forever undiminished."

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: All I have to say is that this was offered last week, but owing to the previous question it was not fully understood and was voted down. It is at the earnest request of the friends of the University that I offer it now. The amendment ought to be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. WINANS.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: When this question was up before, it was disposed of under the previous question, without a word having been uttered by any member of the Board of Regents, or by the Chairman of the committee; we had no hearing on the matter. The same thing occurred when it came up in Convention, when the interests of the University were sacrificed by the previous question. Now, sir, the proposition that was adopted by the Convention was the very worst of all those which have been presented to this body, not only throwing the University into the hands of the Legislature, but making it the plaything of politics. Now, in all these great institutions it is a cardinal principle that they must be stable. They must be beyond all power of assault and subversion, or they will be a failure. There are men in this State who are anxious to make donations to this institution the moment it is placed upon a permanent basis. But so long as it is made subject to legislative caprice; so long as it can be made subject to the beck of politicians; so long as it can be made to subserve sectarian or political designs, it never will flourish. I have letters from the President of the University of Michigan, who complains of this same evil. It was urged that if it is made permanent, then the Legislature would have no control. Not so. This present system was adopted ten years ago, and has not only had a magical effect, but has developed the noblest college existing on the continent. This amendment now pending meets the wishes of the Regents, and of that class of agriculturists who take an interest in this institution. I hope gentlemen will stand by to repel all unfriendly assaults upon the University of California.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add: 'No person shall be debarred admission to any of the collegiate departments of the University on account of sex.'"

MR. WINANS. Both classes are taught there now.

MR. AYERS. I want to see both sexes walking side by side in the University, as they can in any of the other schools of the State. The gentleman intimates that there is no necessity for it. I think recent history points to the fact that there is a necessity for it. I hope it will be adopted.

REMARKS OF MR. JOHNSON.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: It seems to me that this section ought to be amended in several particulars. I call attention to the phraseology. It is a new kind of nomenclature which calls languages "matters." "Instruction shall be given, in addition to other matters, in agriculture, metallurgy, the mechanic arts, and applied sciences." The languages, mathematics, etc., are denominated "matters." Now, I suppose hereafter, when a student is interrogated as to what he has studied there, he will reply, "matters." [Laughter.] Why, it is an insult to the people of this State; an insult to the great institution of which we are justly proud. As far as my knowledge extends it has been well conducted. I am satisfied of its efficiency. And whenever I see the iconoclastic hand attempted to be laid upon such an institution as the University of California, giving powers to the Legislature that will cripple her, I shall oppose it. Let the phraseology of this section be as broad as the Act of Congress. Now, sir, there are some things that ought to be safe from attack. This institution, which has been so kindly fostered by private grants and donations, which has received the fostering care of the State and of the United States, ought to be let alone. I believe the amendment of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Webster, is correct. As to the other amendment offered by Mr. Ayers, I have no objection to that.

REMARKS OF MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: The words "public trust." were discussed before at great length, and they were regarded as highly objectionable. Now, I have said that I am hardly ever astonished at anything, but I certainly had not anticipated that this would come up again, after all that was said here in opposition to it. We said that it should be a perpetual institution, but we carefully avoided the words "public trust." Now, sir, what has been given and donated to that institution cannot be taken away by the Legislature. I am under the impression that we may safely lodge with the Legislature power even to remove the Regents, if it shall become necessary. Why should not the Regents be amenable to Legislative authority when they do anything amiss? I cannot see anything wrong in it. Now, if there is anything in this section that is contrary to the Act of Congress, I have not seen it. I have heard it asserted, but I cannot see it; neither is there anything antagonistic, except it be antagonistic to say that the Regents shall not be superior to the law.

NOTICES.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I hereby give notice that I will, on to-morrow, move to reconsider the vote by which the Convention this day adopted the article on taxation.

RECONSIDERATION AND QUESTIONS OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I offer a motion. I move to reconsider the vote by which the article on judicial department was yesterday adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. No such notice is on file. The motion is not in order.

MR. REYNOLDS. I do not understand that. According to Rule Thirty-seven, a notice necessarily has to be on the record. On yesterday, when the question was upon the adoption of that article, I voted in the negative, and after the announcement of the vote was made, changed my vote from the negative to the affirmative, thereby voting with the majority, at the same time stating that I did so for the purpose of moving a reconsideration.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Was not that announcement made by you before the Chair had announced the result of the vote?

MR. REYNOLDS. That announcement was made at the time I changed my vote.

MR. WILSON. The Chair had not announced the result.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. The Chair ruled that the motion was not in order, and no appeal has been taken.

THE PRESIDENT. That is the decision of the Chair.

MR. REYNOLDS. The way I understand Rule Thirty-seven is——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order. No such notice was given and entered upon the minutes.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: Then I desire to speak to a privileged question.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will state his privileged question.

MR. REYNOLDS. Growing out of this motion I attempted to make. In addition to what I said, I changed my vote——

MR. EDGERTON. The rule requires it to be stated in writing.

MR. REYNOLDS. Will you sit down until I get through with this privileged question, and then talk?

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman must first state the privileged question, and then the Chair will determine whether it is a privileged question or not.

MR. REYNOLDS. In addition to what I have stated concerning——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. REYNOLDS. Will the Chair state why?

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair has already stated, that if the gentleman desires to rise to a question of privilege, he must state the question, and then the Chair must decide whether it is a question of privilege or not.

MR. REYNOLDS. My question of privilege is, that having voted in the negative, I changed for the purpose of moving a reconsideration; and I twice attempted to get the ear of the Chair to send up a written notice. Afterwards, in the afternoon, during the consideration of the article on taxation, I obtained recognition by the Chair, and did send up a notice in writing.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that it is not a question of privilege. Therefore the gentleman is out of order.

MR. REYNOLDS. Will the Chair wait until I have stated the question?

THE PRESIDENT. You have stated it already, and the Chair has decided it.

MR. REYNOLDS. It is a privilege——

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will take his seat.

MR. REYNOLDS. I desire——

THE PRESIDENT. Sergeant-at-Arms, will you arrest the gentleman?

[The Sergeant-at-Arms approaches the gentleman.]

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

THE PRESIDENT. Appeal from what decision of the Chair?

MR. REYNOLDS. From the decision that the question is not a question of privilege.

THE PRESIDENT. Under Rule Thirty-nine, no appeal will lie to such decision. That is the opinion of the Chair.

[Order for arrest vacated.]

STATE INSTITUTIONS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on State institutions and public buildings, on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

ARTICLE —.

STATE INSTITUTIONS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

SECTION 1. There shall be a State Board of Prison Directors, to consist of five persons, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall hold office for ten years, except that the first appointed shall, in such manner as the Legislature may direct, be so classified that the term of one person so appointed shall expire at the end of each two years during the first ten years, and vacancies occurring shall be filled in like manner. The appointee to a vacancy occurring before the expiration of a term, shall hold only for the unexpired term of his predecessor. The Governor shall have the power to remove either of the Directors for misconduct, incompetency, or neglect of duty, after an opportunity to be heard upon written charges.

SEC. 2. The Board of Directors shall have the charge and superintendence of the State Prisons, and shall possess such powers, and perform such duties, in respect to other penal and reformatory institutions of the State, as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 3. The Board shall appoint the Warden and Clerk, and determine the other necessary officers of the Prisons. The Board shall have power to remove the Wardens and Clerks for misconduct, incompetency, or neglect of duty; all other officers and employés of the Prisons shall be appointed by the Warden thereof, and be removed at his pleasure.

SEC. 4. The members of the Board shall receive no compensation other than reasonable traveling and other expenses incurred while engaged in the performance of official duties, to be audited as the Legislature may direct.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to further define and regulate the powers and duties of the Board, Wardens, and Clerks, and to carry into effect the provisions of this article.

SEC. 6. After the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, the labor of convicts shall not be let out by contract to any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, and the Legislature shall, by law, provide for the working of convicts for the benefit of the State.

HARBORS, TIDE WATERS, AND NAVIGABLE STREAMS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on harbors, tide waters, and navigable streams, on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

ARTICLE —.

HARBOR FRONTAGES, ETC.

SECTION 1. The right of eminent domain is hereby declared to exist in the State to all frontages on the navigable waters of this State.

SEC. 2. No individual, partnership, or corporation, claiming or possessing the frontage or tidal lands of a harbor, bay, inlet, estuary, or other navigable water in this State, shall be permitted to exclude the right of way to such water whenever it is required for any public purpose, nor to destroy or obstruct the free navigation of such water; and the Legislature shall enact such laws as will give the most liberal construction to this provision, so that access to the navigable waters of this State shall be always attainable, and that the people shall not be shut out from the same.

SEC. 3. All tide lands within two miles of any incorporated city or town in this State, and fronting on the waters of any harbor, estuary, bay, or inlet, used for the purposes of navigation, shall be withheld from grant or sale to private persons, partnerships, or corporations.

MR. TINNIN. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section two.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section two—'but nothing in this section shall in any manner impair the rights of the owners of any lands covered with water, who have title thereto under the State of California.'"

MR. TINNIN. The State of California has disposed of a large portion of these tide lands to individuals. Under this section these parties would have no right to fill them in.

MR. AYERS. I have no particular objection to the amendment, but it is not necessary. Whatever titles have passed cannot be disturbed.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I think the amendment is a very dangerous one. It might be construed to deny the right of eminent domain.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: It seems to me that the amendment is a very proper one. This section details that no individual owning tide land shall be permitted to disturb or destroy the navigation of the water. If I had my way I would strike this out. I do not believe the State is in a position to deprive parties of the right to fill in their lands which the State has sold them.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. McCallum, Brown, Beerstecher, Herrington, and Walker of Tuolumne.

The roll was called, and the amendment rejected by the following vote:

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section three: 'but sites for wharves, warehouses, or other necessary incidents to commerce, excepting on the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, may, upon application to the Board of Supervisors of the counties in which such sites are situated, and after due public notice of such application, be leased by such Boards for a term of twenty years, or less, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.'"

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: These words were stricken out of that section before, and they ought to be restored, for without this provision this section loses nearly all its force. I was willing to give to the delegates from San Francisco their own choice as to the system of governing the waters of the Bay, and I consulted with them about it. Judge Hager suggested amendments which I incorporated, but when it came before the Convention it did not suit Judge Hager, and amidst confusion it was stricken out. If this is not adopted it will be impossible for other counties to grant easements for wharves, warehouses, etc. In other counties than San Francisco we wish this matter placed in the hands of the Supervisors, subject, as this amendment says, to legislative control, so that the State will still have control. I cannot see any objection to the amendment.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: These tide lands were granted to the State by the General Government.

MR. AYERS. They belong to the State by virtue of her sovereignty.

MR. ESTEE. Where the State got them does not make any particular difference. The State owns them. The lands are all under water a portion of the time, and a portion of them all the time. The lands are worth nothing unless appropriated. We propose to say here that they shall never be appropriated; that the State itself shall put the improvements on. The thing never would be done; never can be done, and the only result of the section would be to prohibit the State from having the benefit of its own property. The State never could sell it under this section. The State could do nothing with it under the sun. The most of the lands to-day that have been sold could not be sold to-day for what the State got for them. No man is going to put up any permanent improvements on a lease of twenty years. It is folly, and I move that the section be stricken out.

REMARKS OF MR. WILSON.

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: We are getting into very deep water here. The more a man studies the questions, as to what the powers of the State are over the navigable tide waters of the State, and what the powers of the General Government are over the same waters, and who has the right to say whether they shall be filled in or remain as they are, the more he becomes convinced that they are intricate questions, involving, as they do, the relations between the State and Federal Government. I have no hope that anything which I can say will move this Convention. They have just voted to confiscate vested rights; they have just voted that the people who hold title from the State to certain lands shall not have the use of those lands, and, therefore, when I undertake to talk upon this subject I have no hope to start in on. I speak simply to enter my protest against this invasion of private right, and this wrong that is being perpetrated. Now, I have not time to enter into any argument upon the relations between the State and the General Government. I hope, therefore, that this whole article will be stricken out. The first section is provided for elsewhere, and the balance of the section is absolutely vicious.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: Why were these tide lands purchased by parties? Because they wanted to control the frontage to navigable waters. I own some tide land. The State sold it to me for that very purpose. They took my money for the land. I paid them on that basis. The State sold it to me by metes and bounds, declaring it mine forever. Now, I have three hundred feet of bulkhead that I built. Now it is proposed that every ship which comes along may run up and land, and take possession of that bulkhead and use it, and I am to have nothing to say. That I have no right to stop them because they are the public. That is moonshine. I would like to see the public try it. I will guarantee free navigation to the man who tries it on, if I happen to be there. [Laughter.] The State has made a contract with me. I have fulfilled my part of the contract, and am holding the land under the contract, and I am going to hold it let come what will. If the gentleman desires to prevent any further sales of tide lands, that is all right; that is a mere question of public policy. I do not care to go over the argument again.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. STUART. I move we adjourn.

Carried.

And, at five o'clock and fifteen minutes P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

RESOLUTION.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I send up a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, Wm. Galt, Porter, has paid to Wm. Lewis out of his private funds the sum of two dollars and fifty cents per week for eighteen weeks of the session of this Convention; and whereas, the services of said Wm. Lewis were needed as Rear Porter, and were unprovided for by this body; therefore,

Resolved, That scrip to the amount of forty-five dollars be issued to said Wm. Galt in payment of his disbursements.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

HARBORS, TIDE WATERS, AND NAVIGABLE STREAMS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will resume consideration of the article on harbors, tide waters, and navigable streams. The Secretary will read the amendment to section three, offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, Mr. Ayers.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section three: "But sites for wharves, warehouses or other necessary incidents to commerce, excepting in the waters of the bay of San Francisco, may, upon application to the Boards of Supervisors in the counties in which such sites are situated, and after due public notice of such application, be leased by such Boards for a term of twenty years or less, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.'"

THE PRESIDENT. The first question is on the motion of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Estee, to strike out section three.

REMARKS OF MR. HOWARD.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I trust that that section will not be stricken out. It seems to me that the debate upon this subject has taken a curious turn. It has been assumed that this article attempted to interfere with private rights. It is not liable to any such imputation. That the right of eminent domain may be exercised to provide for all necessary access to navigable waters is a proposition too well settled to admit of controversy. All the American cases agree in this, that the right of navigation cannot be obstructed, and that any man who takes a grant of tide land takes it subject to that condition, that the right of navigation shall be protected. There is, therefore, no pretense that this article can by any possibility affect private rights. Again, these parties who hold lands in deep water which they have filled in, hold it by virtue of the sovereignty of the State, and they hold it subject to the rights of navigation; and it is well settled in all the cases, English and American, that a structure which interferes with navigation is a public nuisance and may be abated. That was in substance the rule in the celebrated Wheeling case, where a bridge was said to interfere with the navigation of the Ohio River. But, sir, we have passed from that first section; and even if a lot were filled in to deep water, if it interfered with navigation so as to prevent access to navigable waters, under the right of eminent domain it could be condemned, the owner first being paid therefor a proper compensation. Therefore, I think it is not necessary to comment upon that section, because we have passed over it. We are now on the third section, which provides, as proposed to be amended:

"SEC. 3. All tide lands within two miles of any incorporated city or town in this State, and fronting on the waters of any harbor, estuary, bay, or inlet used for the purposes of navigation, shall be withheld from grant or sale to private persons, partnerships, or corporations; but sites for wharves, warehouses, or other necessary incidents to commerce, excepting in the waters of the Bay of San Francisco, may, upon application to the Boards of Supervisors of the counties in which such sites are situated, and after due public notice of such application, be leased by such Boards for a term of twenty years or less, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law."

Now, sir, that section which is the only one before the Convention relates only to the manner in which the State shall dispose of its public property. That is the whole of it. Whether it is wise to grant this property out as we have been doing, in innumerable instances, so as to interfere with commerce, or whether we ought to lease it for terms of years so as to accommodate commerce and secure the interests of the public. Now, it must be apparent that these franchises if leased merely for a term of years, and the fees reserved to the State, that it can ultimately be a source of large revenue to the State, whereas if you grant them in the fee the State realizes nothing, and creates a monopoly of frontage which tends to destroy commerce. We have had an illustration of that in Los Angeles County. The Central Pacific Railroad Company having purchased the only two existing railroad outlets to the coast, they proceeded to buy up all the frontage of the bay of San Pablo, and have actually purchased it all up to a large extent, so that no other person, individual, or company can erect a wharf without their consent; the result of which is to enable one corporation to so fence in the ocean, as to monopolize the commerce of the ocean. I submit to this Convention that this is one of the abuses which it is our duty to correct. Therefore, it is, sir, that I think the third section as proposed is eminently necessary, eminently proper, and eminently judicious so far as the community interests of the State are concerned, and absolutely necessary so far as the protection of the commerce of the country is concerned in the prevention of a monopoly in a few hands. I trust, sir, that the policy which has heretofore existed of selling these lands in fee for a nominal consideration will be changed to one of leasing them for a term of years, which preserves the interests of the State and the rights and interests of commerce.

REMARKS OF MR. EDGERTON.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: The important question before the Convention, as I understand it, is a motion to strike out section three, and the amendment offered by Colonel Ayers of Los Angeles. Section three provides that tide lands within two miles of any incorporated city or town, fronting on waters used for the purposes of navigation, shall be withheld from grant or sale. The gentleman from Los Angeles proposes to modify that so that the State may grant, for a consideration, sites for wharves, warehouses, etc., for the period of twenty years. Now, sir, I assert that there is no necessity for such clause in the first place. The course of the Legislature in regard to this property has always been conservative. The Act of eighteen hundred and fifty-five withheld these lands from sale; and the Act of eighteen hundred and fifty-eight did the same. The first Act of eighteen hundred and sixty-one did the same. The Act of the following day provided for the disposition of these lands under the most guarded and conservative restrictions. The Act of eighteen hundred and sixty-eight provided for the sale of certain tide lands, and withheld from sale others; so that, so far as the course of the Legislature is concerned, it has always been in the line of the provision proposed in this article. Now, sir, I say it would be impolitic to adopt this plan. Take, for instance, Oakland——

MR. AYERS. Does the gentleman notice that the Bay of San Francisco is excepted?

MR. EDGERTON. But there are other bays on this coast. There are a great many other inlets and estuaries, and I am informed several of them are in the same condition. Are these mud-banks to lay there forever? Whereas, if they could be sold and filled in they would be covered with buildings, wharves, and warehouses. The arguments that would apply to Oakland will apply to fifteen or twenty other places. These mud-flats ought to be reclaimed and applied to the uses of commerce and buildings, wharves and warehouses erected where seagoing vessels can load and unload. It seems to me very unwise to put such a restriction as this in the Constitution. As to the other portions of the article, commented upon by General Howard, I do not care to argue it now.

REMARKS OF MR. ESTEE.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Los Angeles is even worse than I anticipated when I first heard it read. Now, there have been many sales of property, tide lands, in the Bay of San Francisco, and many rights acquired, and a large portion of that water front, or a great deal of the tide lands. If section three is amended as provided by that amendment it would result in this, that it would perpetuate forever all these water-right monopolies that exist there without any possibility of any competition whatever. The State, it is true, controls the water front around the City of San Francisco, but that is limited, as you will see, by looking at the map. This section provides that no more can be granted within two miles. The result would be, if that section should be adopted, that you will place in the organic law an inhibition against either leasing, or selling, or disposing of its rights along the Bay of San Francisco. Whether some provision may not be wisely made in an Act of the Legislature, is another proposition; but the idea of placing such an inhibition as that in the Constitution would be extraordinary, and contrary to the best judgment of this Convention. I am not addressing myself to the first and second sections. I speak only of the third. It will be merely perpetuating the great monopolies we know exist there. It will cut off all chance of competition. We want to have the thing open to commerce, and it is for that reason that I make my motion, and I think it will commend itself to the judgment of this Convention. The commerce of the Pacific coast comes into the Bay of San Francisco, and to put such an inhibition in the Constitution would be extraordinary, and I hope it will not be done.

MR. WYATT. Does not this except the Bay of San Francisco?

MR. ESTEE. That is the very thing it should not do. It says that in the Bay of San Francisco you cannot even lease a piece of land.

MR. AYERS. They may be leased by the Board of Supervisors in San Francisco.

MR. ESTEE. That would not be the construction put upon it. It provides that on the Bay of San Francisco it cannot be leased, and it cannot be sold, and the State will have no control over it, and it will only perpetuate these monopolies that exist there.

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The motion to strike out is the motion before the House, and I hope it will not prevail. The section under consideration, as I understand it, asserts a principle which is exactly in accordance with all that has been done in this Convention. It is to preserve the seashore of the State of California to free egress and ingress for purposes of commerce, and to protect that seashore from monopolies, of whatever character, sitting down there and levying toll upon the commerce of the world. The civil law system, in my opinion, is an improvement upon the common law system, or English system, which we have adopted in reference to the ownership of tide lands, and the tendency now is to retain within the control of the State this property. I maintain that that property never ought to be alienated from the State. It was a mistake that ever it was done, and it now ought to be put a stop to. The only question, then, is, how shall this property be used? I maintain that this provision, with some qualifications, which I will suggest, is the only proper method of regulation of this seashore; that is to say, by leasing the property for periods not beyond twenty years. I consider the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles, in reference to the Bay of San Francisco, to be erroneous. I consider it to be dangerous, from the construction which I can see may be placed upon it. A proper amendment would have been to have made the same rule that is made applicable to the Board of Supervisors apply to the Board of Harbor Commissioners. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman from Los Angeles will be voted down, and that the motion to strike out will also be voted down. The section may be imperfect as it stands now, but it can be corrected so as to obviate the objection I mention.

REMARKS OF MR. HAGER.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: This question of tide lands has been before the Legislature again and again. As we all know, a great many abuses have grown out of the management and sale of tide lands in this State. With regard to the City of San Francisco, an Act was passed authorizing the tide lands there to be sold at auction. It was a well guarded bill, and under it a great deal of money was realized by the State; but by an amendment to that Act the Commissioners in charge were authorized to compromise adverse claims, and to sell a large quantity, and then the mischief commenced. Under the authority of this amendment, the so-called Ellis grab, and others, were perpetrated. Now, take the City of Oakland, which has been referred to. At an early day a charter was granted to the City of Oakland, giving them a little strip of the water front. Some designing men came up afterwards to get a new charter for the City of Oakland; and they secured additional submerged land in the new charter. Again, when I happened to be in the Legislature, another party came up for a new charter, and they again extended the water front of Oakland so that it run up to Hunter's Point, on the San Francisco side, taking in Yerba Buena Island, part of Alcatraz, and the whole of the water front of San Francisco, giving it to those who held under the City of Oakland by a practice that they had resorted to to obtain from that city the whole of that water front. It was to inure to the benefit of those speculators who had divested the City of Oakland of her patrimony. The bill passed rapidly through the Assembly and came into the Senate; and it was there stated that it was a little local measure. I asked delay, and that night, in examining it, I found out what it was; that it was to give the water front of these two cities to those who had succeeded Oakland in the title that had been donated to her. Now, as I understand this section, it is intended to prevent that sort of thing; to prevent the Legislature from violating the Act of Congress under which California was admitted into the Union. It is intended to comply with the Act of Congress upon which we were admitted into the Union—that these navigable waters should remain open and free. Now, we do not know what the filling up of the harbors, or any portion of them, may result in. Engineers have told us that the filling in of the Bay of San Francisco has endangered the harbor of San Francisco, by forming bars and by deposits. I do not see any objection to the section as it stands. On the contrary, I see a great deal in it that recommends it to the Convention. In regard to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Los Angeles, it excepts San Francisco, and the same deviltry that has been going on in the past may go on in the future.

MR. ESTEE. Can the Legislature control it at all if that is adopted?

MR. HAGER. It does not say that the Legislature shall not authorize wharves to be let for the purposes of commerce. The Legislature has the exclusive control, and there is nothing in this amendment to prevent it.

MR. EDGERTON. Does the gentleman not know that the filling up of these mud flats and the building of wharves and warehouses where ships may go to load and unload facilitates commerce?

MR. HAGER. The stealing of the mud flats in the City of Oakland was never done for the purpose of commerce at all. It was done for the personal gain of those individuals who have it now, who had it then, and will have it in all time, and as much more as they can possibly get to the exclusion of the general public.

REMARKS OF MR. AYERS.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: This debate has taken a wide and curious range, one that I did not anticipate. Gentlemen have gone so far as even to say that this article, if engrafted upon the Constitution, will interfere with vested rights. How it can have any retroactive effect the gentlemen have not told us, and I cannot see. The gentleman from Marin said, with reference to his land bordering on the bay, that under this article if he had a wharf or bulkhead on his tide lands that he would be compelled to give it up or give free access to it to whoever should ask it. It is not so. The only way in which access can be had over his lands to navigable water, is in the usual way, and for a public use, and in no other way, and that is the principle which underlies this Act. No titles to these lands can be interfered with at all. That rule is laid down in all of the cases, and I refer especially to the case decided by Judge Anderson, in the thirty-second California Reports. Whatever rights may have been acquired by the purchasers of these lands from the State, must have been subservient to the greater rights of the public. This is a matter which has been decided in this State. I will ask the gentleman whether the public policy which has prevailed in this State with reference to the public lands for the last twenty-five years, has been a good one? Whether it has not resulted, or nearly so, in the monopolizing of every frontage upon navigable water in this State, on the rivers, on the ocean, on the harbors, on the inlets, and on the estuaries. Why, sir, there is hardly a point in this State where wagon, or rail, and ship can meet which is not successfully held and owned by private individuals, and from which the public is excluded. The higher interest of the public has been disregarded, and the lesser interest of individuals and corporations has had full sway. If that has been the case in the past policy of selling in fee these lands to private individuals and corporations, I say, is it not right, is it not wise, for us now to reverse that policy and to withhold these lands from sale? The State will have control of them. Whatever the interests of commerce may require, the State will be unable to give. I cannot see any force in the objections that have been made on this floor to the article, in whole or in part, and I think it would be a wise policy on the part of this Convention to adopt it with the amendment.

Messrs. Smith of Santa Clara, Larue, Shoemaker, Kelley, and Wyatt demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the motion to strike out section three, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Howard of Los Angeles, Brown, Doyle, Condon, and Larkin.

CITY, COUNTY, AND TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the article on City, County, and Township Organization.

THE SECRETARY read:

ARTICLE XI.

CITIES, COUNTIES, AND TOWNS.

SECTION 1. The several counties, as they now exist, are hereby recognized as legal subdivisions of this State.

SEC. 2. No county seat shall be removed unless two thirds of the qualified electors of the county, voting on the proposition at a general election, shall vote in favor of such removal. A proposition of removal shall not be submitted in the same county more than once in four years.

SEC. 3. No new county shall be established which shall reduce any county to a population of less than eight thousand; nor shall a new county be formed containing a less population than five thousand; nor shall any line thereof pass within five miles of the county seat of any county proposed to be divided. Every county which shall be enlarged or created from territory taken from any other county or counties, shall be liable for a just proportion of the existing debts and liabilities of the county or counties from which such territory shall be taken.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall establish a system of county governments, which shall be uniform throughout the State; and, by general laws, shall provide for township organization, under which any county may organize whenever a majority of the qualified electors of such county, voting at a general election, shall so determine; and whenever a county shall adopt township organization, the assessment and collection of the revenue shall be made, and the business of such county and the local affairs of the several townships therein, shall be managed and transacted in the manner prescribed by such general laws.

SEC. 5. The Legislature, by general and uniform laws, shall provide for the election or appointment, in the several counties, of Boards of Supervisors, Sheriffs, County Clerks, District Attorneys, and such other county, township, and municipal officers as public convenience may require, and shall prescribe their duties and fix their compensation. It shall regulate the salaries and fees of all county officers, in proportion to duties, and for this purpose may classify the counties by population; and it shall provide for the strict accountability of county and township officers for all fees which may be collected by them, and for all public and municipal moneys which may be paid to them or officially come into their possession.

SEC. 6. The Legislature, by general laws, shall provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification, in proportion to population, of cities and towns; and cities and towns heretofore organized or incorporated may become organized under and subject to such general laws. Cities and towns may become incorporated under general laws, whenever a majority of the electors voting at a general election shall so determine, and shall organize in conformity therewith.

SEC. 7. City and county governments may be merged and consolidated into one municipal government, with one set of officers, and may be incorporated under general laws providing for the incorporation and organization of corporations for municipal purposes. The provisions of this Constitution applicable to cities, and also those applicable to counties, so far as not inconsistent or not prohibited to cities, shall be applicable to such consolidated government. In consolidated city and county governments, of more than one hundred thousand population, there shall be two Boards of Supervisors or houses of legislation—one of which, to consist of twelve persons, shall be elected by general ticket from the city and county at large, and shall hold office for the term of four years, but shall be so classified that after the first election only six shall be elected every two years; the other, to consist of twelve persons, shall be elected every two years, and shall hold office for two years. Any casual vacancy in the office of Supervisor, in either Board, shall be filled by the Mayor.

SEC. 8. Any city may frame a charter for its own government, consistent with and subject to the Constitution and laws of this State, by causing a Board of fifteen freeholders, who shall have been for at least five years qualified electors thereof, to be elected by the qualified voters of such city, at any general or special election, whose duty it shall be, within ninety days after such election, to prepare and propose a charter for such city, which shall be signed in duplicate by the members of such Board, or a majority of them, and returned, one copy thereof to the Mayor, or other chief executive officer of such city, and the other to the Recorder of deeds of the county. Such proposed charter shall then be published in two daily papers of largest general circulation in such city for at least twenty days, and within not less than thirty days after such publication it shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such city, at a general or special election, and if a majority of such qualified electors voting thereat shall ratify the same, it shall thereafter be submitted to the Legislature for its approval or rejection as a whole, without power of alteration or amendment, and if approved by a majority vote of the members elected to each House, it shall become the charter of such city, or if such city be consolidated with a county in government, then of such city and county, and shall become the organic law thereof, and supersede any existing charter and all amendments thereof, and all special laws inconsistent with such charter. A copy of such charter, certified by the Mayor, or chief executive officer, and authenticated by the seal of such city, setting forth the submission of such charter to the electors and its ratification by them, shall be made in duplicate and deposited, one in the office of the Secretary of State, the other, after being recorded in the office of the Recorder of deeds of the county, among the archives of the city, and thereafter all Courts shall take judicial notice thereof. The charter so ratified may be amended at intervals of not less than two years, by proposals therefor, submitted by legislative authority of the city to the qualified voters thereof, at a general or special election held at least sixty days after the publication of such proposals, and ratified by at least three fifths of the qualified electors voting thereat, and approved by the Legislature as herein provided for the approval of the charter. In submitting any such charter, or amendment thereto, any alternative article or proposition may be presented for the choice of the voters, and may be voted on separately without prejudice to others.

SEC. 9. The compensation or fees of any county, city, town, or municipal officer shall not be increased after his election or during his term of office; nor shall the term of any such officer be extended beyond the period for which he is elected or appointed.

SEC. 10. No county, city, town, or other public or municipal corporation, nor the inhabitants thereof, nor the property therein, shall be released or discharged from their or its proportionate share of taxes to be levied for State purposes, nor shall commutation for such taxes be authorized in any form whatsoever.

SEC. 11. Any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws.

SEC. 12. The Legislature shall have no power to impose taxes upon counties, cities, towns, or other public or municipal corporations, or upon the inhabitants or property thereof, for county, city, town, or other municipal purposes, but may, by general laws, vest in the corporate authorities thereof the power to assess and collect taxes for such purposes.

SEC. 13. The Legislature shall not delegate to any special commission, private corporation, company, association, or individual, any power to make, control, appropriate, supervise, or in any way interfere with any county, city, town, or municipal improvement, money, property, or effects, whether held in trust or otherwise, or to levy taxes or assessments, or perform any municipal functions whatever.

SEC. 14. No State office shall be continued or created in any county, city, town, or other municipality, for the inspection, measurement, or graduation of any merchandise, manufacture, or commodity; but such county, city, town, or municipality may, when authorized by general law, and the public interest demands it, appoint such officers.

SEC. 15. Private property shall not be taken or sold for the payment of the corporate debt of any political or municipal corporation.

SEC. 16. All moneys, assessments, and taxes belonging to or collected for the use of any county, city, town, or other public or municipal corporation, coming into the hands of any officer thereof, shall, immediately on receipt thereof, be deposited with the Treasurer, or other legal depositary, to the credit of such city, town, or other corporation respectively, for the benefit of the funds to which they respectively belong.

SEC. 17. The making of profit out of county, city, town, or other public money, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any officer having the possession or control thereof, shall be a felony, and shall be prosecuted and punished as prescribed by law.

SEC. 18. No county, city, town, township, Board of Education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner, or for any purpose, exceeding in any one year the income and revenue provided for them respectively for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the qualified voters thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose, nor unless before or at the time of incurring such indebtedness, provision shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years from the time of contracting the same. Any indebtedness or liability incurred contrary to this provision shall be void.

SEC. 19. No public work or improvement of any description whatsoever shall be done or made, in any city, in, upon, or about the streets thereof, or otherwise, the cost and expense of which is made chargeable, or may be assessed upon private property by special assessment, unless an estimate of such cost and expense shall be made, and an assessment in proportion to benefits, on the property to be affected or benefited, shall be levied, collected, and paid into the city treasury before such work or improvement shall be commenced, or any contract for letting or doing the same authorized or performed. In any city where there are no public works owned and controlled by the municipality, for supplying the same with water or artificial light, any individual, or any company duly incorporated for such purpose under and by authority of the laws of this State, shall, under the direction of the Superintendent of Streets, or other officer in control thereof, and under such general regulations as the municipality may prescribe for damages and indemnity for damages, have the privilege of using the public streets and thoroughfares thereof, and of laying down pipes and conduits therein, and connections therewith, so far as may be necessary for introducing into and supplying such city and its inhabitants either with gaslight, or other illuminating light, or with fresh water for domestic and all other purposes, upon the condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges thereof.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: Being Chairman of the committee, I would like the Convention to indulge me to offer an amendment to section five.

THE SECRETARY read:

"In line five strike out 'compensation,' and insert 'terms of office.' In lines five and six strike out 'salaries and fees of county officers,' and insert 'compensation of all such officers.'"

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The object of the amendment is merely to correct the phraseology.

The amendment was adopted.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I offer a substitute for section six, changing a portion of it.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 6. Corporations for municipal purposes shall not be created by special laws, but the Legislature, by general laws, shall provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification, in proportion to population, of cities and towns, which laws may be altered, amended, or repealed. Cities and towns heretofore organized or incorporated may become organized under such general laws, whenever a majority of the electors voting at a general election shall so determine, and shall organize in conformity therewith, and cities or towns heretofore or hereafter organized, and all charters thereof framed or adopted by authority of this Constitution, shall be subject to and controlled by such general laws."

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: The intention is to make it appear distinctly that the Legislature shall have no power to create municipal corporations by special laws. My amendment restores the words struck out of the section during my absence, and leaves it so that the Legislature cannot create municipal corporations by special laws, but only by general laws. Then it has been stated that this was intended to take the charters beyond the control of the Legislature. Such never was the intention of this article. On the contrary, the charters are intended to be subordinate to general laws. To make it beyond all controversy I amend section six, so that the Legislature shall provide for the organization of cities and towns, by general laws, which general laws may be altered, amended, or repealed. I hope the substitute will be adopted.

Messrs. Schell, Larkin, Freeman, Mansfield, and Pulliam demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

The amendment of Mr. Hager was adopted.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section seven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add to section seven: 'Provided, that notwithstanding anything herein contained the Legislature may grant to any city or consolidated city and county, where the population exceeds one hundred thousand persons, a special charter defining its powers and duties.'"

MR. WILSON, of First District. Mr. President: I happened to be absent when this question came up before. Of course it is quite late now to present anything of such a radical character as the amendment which I have proposed, but I do it for this reason. I do not believe the City of San Francisco will ever be able to get along without a government somewhat of the character and nature of its present government. I therefore think that in this exceptional case charters might be left to the Legislature, and with that view I offer this amendment.

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I would like to ask my colleague if section eight does not offer all the machinery for obtaining a charter, under general law, and subject to the approval of the Legislature, by calling a Convention, which hitherto was the law applicable to San Francisco by special legislation? The Consolidation Act will remain in force in our city until a new charter is framed under general law, or under section eight by calling a Convention, whenever the people see fit to call a Convention, as our Convention here was called, and they frame a charter; they submit it to the people; the people ratify it or reject it, the same as a Constitution of this State. If it is ratified by the people it becomes the charter. I do not think it would be wise to adopt the amendment, because that brings back the special legislation again.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: It seems to me that my friend, the Chairman of the committee, has succeeded in bringing this matter to the sole control of the Legislature. It is true that section eight provides for a Convention to frame a charter, but that charter is subject to the approval and ratification of the Legislature, and this morning it is so fixed that the Legislature may, by a general law, create a city government anywhere. That general law is its charter, and so the whole thing has been ultimately brought back to the sole control of the Legislature, and this idea of secession in San Francisco has at last become a mere myth. Now, it seems to me that the amendment ought to be adopted; that the Legislature ought to have the power to make special provisions for certain localities. I do not now anticipate any, but it certainly might be true that a great many regulations would be proper for such a city as San Francisco that would not apply to other places, and it ought to be left to the Legislature to make specific provisions for them.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: As has been said by the gentleman from Sacramento, the circumstances surrounding San Francisco are peculiar. San Francisco needs special legislation, and in order to allow the people of San Francisco to form for themselves an organic law this Convention adopted section eight, which allows the City of San Francisco to call a charter Convention, and to frame a new charter for that city in accordance with the needs and wants of that city. Now, sir, if the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, be adopted, the Convention may as well strike out section eight, because if the Legislature have a right to step in and control them why have section eight? The argument of the gentleman from Sacramento proceeds upon the ground that every locality having peculiar interests of its own ought to have a right to have those interests determined. Our whole object in framing this Constitution has been to give local self-government; to establish, if possible, townships; to localize counties, and to allow the people of a particular locality to frame for themselves, as far as consistent, legislation applicable to that locality. If any people know what they desire to have in regard to commercial interests, shipping interests, manufacturing or mercantile interests, and all of the several and varied interests that are centered in San Francisco, it is the people of San Francisco. They are the most competent to judge. Now, if we are going to abandon the whole system we have adopted, then it would be wise to adopt the amendment.

MR. ESTEE. Under this article, if adopted, it will be impossible for the Legislature to legislate relative to San Francisco, will it not?

MR. BEERSTECHER. I do not know whether it will or not. I have my serious doubts.

MR. ESTEE. Admitting that it is true, I want to know if you, under our present Consolidation Act, can run San Francisco if they do not adopt a charter?

MR. BEERSTECHER. We will try to run it.

MR. ESTEE. That shows that you do not understand the matter, because I understand that you have to have appropriations every year by the Legislature, or the whole machinery of that government stops. That is the theory of our Consolidation Act. You have to have appropriations every year by the Legislature.

MR. BEERSTECHER. I have understood from the start that the gentleman from San Francisco favored section eight.

MR. ESTEE. I am in favor of section eight. I am not objecting to section eight except that it seems, upon examining the Consolidation Act, that the whole city government will stop unless there are appropriations made annually, or biennially, providing for the various funds. I am informed that that is the case, and if so, there has got to be some provision put in here.

MR. BEERSTECHER. If this is adopted it will make two conflicting clauses in the Constitution, and I agree with the Chairman of the committee, that it is not needed.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: If the amendment of the gentleman from San Francisco, Mr. Wilson, was adopted, it would be unnecessary to retain section eight in the article. I contend that the proper method to adopt for the government of the City of San Francisco, is for the people to adopt a charter, and the Legislature to ratify it. That is the only correct and sound doctrine. The amendment directly provides for special legislation. The power to create a special charter, would involve the power to amend the special charter. That would bring the whole thing back to the old noxious system of special legislation. Why, sir, under the proposition of the gentleman it would not be possible to widen a street in San Francisco, under this special charter, without going to the Legislature and obtaining a bill amending the special charter. Is not that the inevitable result of his proposition? The amendment will destroy the harmony of the system, and take us back to the noxious system of special legislation, against which this Convention has entered its protest.

Messrs. Dudley of Solano, Rolfe, Keyes, Brown, and Lindow demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

Upon the adoption of the amendment, the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Grace, Bell, White, Harrison, and Beerstecher.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I send up an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section eight: Insert after word 'city,' and before 'may,' in first line, the following: 'containing a population of more than one hundred thousand inhabitants.'"

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: This section was originally framed for the benefit of San Francisco, and has been claimed at all times that it was for the purpose of giving San Francisco a charter under this section. The words were stricken out in Committee of the Whole, and this is only to restore them as they were before. Section six, of this article, also provides for the incorporation of cities and towns. I think that section is ample for all other cities except San Francisco, and therefore this section ought to be made to San Francisco alone.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: The result of that will be that you will have a special provision in the Constitution for San Francisco, and you declare that there shall be none but general laws passed for San Francisco.

MR. MORELAND. Might there not be some other city in the State besides San Francisco that will have more than one hundred thousand inhabitants?

MR. ESTEE. It will be a long time.

MR. SCHELL. I would like to ask the gentlemen from San Francisco whether section eight was not passed specially for San Francisco?

MR. ESTEE. I cannot say whether it was or not. I know very well that it was made applicable to every city in the State. I do not say that it ought or ought not to be passed. I only say this, that you now say in the Constitution, that this whole article shall only apply to San Francisco; but you also say that there shall be no special legislation for its benefit; although you admit thereby that its wants and necessities are different from other parts of the State.

MR. SCHELL. Mr. President: I desire to detain the Convention only a moment. I am inclined to think, sir, that the amendment moved by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland, ought to pass. This was intended to relate to San Francisco alone; but as it stands now it will apply to every city, however small it may be, and before any small town may be incorporated, it must comply with the provisions of this Act. After a city or town have adopted a charter, they must come to the Legislature and have it ratified. Now, gentlemen, I desire to ask if that is not special legislation of the worst sort, and the very thing which it seems to me has been the policy of this Convention to avoid? In our legislative article we have enumerated a great many subjects upon which the Legislature shall not be permitted to pass special laws, and I say that if there is anything that this Convention has sat down on, it is this question of special legislation.

MR. ESTEE. By this amendment you admit that the necessities of San Francisco are different from those of the rest of the State. If that be true, why should there not be special legislation for San Francisco?

MR. SCHELL. I have no objection to special legislation for San Francisco; I voted for the proposition of Judge Wilson, of San Francisco, but it was not carried. But what I do object to is, that this will provide special legislation for the small cities and towns. I do not wish to discuss the proposition, but I say that if we desire to cut off this special legislation, we ought to adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I am not opposed to the amendment of the gentleman from Sonoma, Mr. Moreland, but before we vote for that amendment we ought to consider well what its provisions are, and not be misled. The proposition contained in section eight only goes to the method of obtaining a charter for an incorporated city. We have provided in section six, that no city can be chartered except by general laws, and that that charter shall be subservient to the general laws of the State. Section eight provides how the people of a city may proceed in framing and adopting their charter. These provisions do not go to the substance of the charter, or of any local legislation under the charter, but it only provides the method—how they shall obtain the charter, and how amend it. The main question to be decided in voting upon this amendment of Mr. Moreland is, whether or not the method adopted in section eight is a good method? If it is a good method for a city of one hundred thousand inhabitants, is it not a good method for a city of less inhabitants? That is the question at issue now. I assume, for the purposes of this argument, that the method is a good one, and that is the only thing contained in this section; it is the method whereby the people shall proceed to adopt, or to construct and adopt a charter. I claim that it is a good method. I do not believe that the Legislature could provide a better rule than that contained in section eight, for San Francisco, or any other city. I am inclined to vote against the amendment for these reasons, but I do not wish to vote against it for the purpose of tacking this method on to the smaller cities and towns if they don't want it. I am only throwing out these suggestions.

Messrs. Wyatt, West, Evey, Rolfe, and Biggs demanded the previous question, which was ordered by the Convention.

STATE AND MUNICIPAL INDEBTEDNESS.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on State and municipal indebtedness, on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the article, as follows:

ARTICLE —.

STATE AND MUNICIPAL INDEBTEDNESS.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not, in any manner, create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except, in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by some law for some single object or work, to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means, exclusive of loans, for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years of the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all moneys raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created, and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each county, or city and county, if one be published therein, throughout the State, for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people.

MR. CASSERLY. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to the article, to be added thereto.

THE SECRETARY read:

"The Legislature may, at any time after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same."

Adopted.

MR. HAGER. I don't know whether it is in order or not, but the title ought to be changed to "State indebtedness." It has no application to municipal indebtedness.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. I move to strike out the word "some," in the fifth line. It is an error.

So ordered.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of this article as a part of the Constitution. The Secretary will call the roll.

SCHEDULE.

THE PRESIDENT. The next business in order is the consideration of the article on schedule, on second reading. The Secretary will read.

THE SECRETARY read the article as follows:

SCHEDULE.

That no inconvenience may arise from the alterations and amendments in the Constitution of this State, and to carry the same into complete effect, it is hereby ordained and declared:

SECTION 1. That all laws in force at the adoption of this Constitution, not inconsistent therewith, shall remain in full force and effect until altered or repealed by the Legislature; and all rights, actions, prosecutions, claims, and contracts of the State, counties, individuals, or bodies corporate, not inconsistent therewith, shall continue to be as valid as if this Constitution had not been adopted. The provisions of all laws which are inconsistent with this Constitution shall cease upon the adoption thereof, except that all laws which are inconsistent with such provisions of this Constitution as require legislation to enforce them shall remain in full force until the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, unless sooner altered or repealed by the Legislature.

SEC. 2. That all recognizances, obligations, and all other instruments, entered into or executed before the adoption of this Constitution, to this State, or to any subdivision thereof, or any municipality therein, and all fines, taxes, penalties, and forfeitures due or owing to this State, or any subdivision or municipality, and all writs, prosecutions, actions, and causes of action, except as herein otherwise provided, shall continue and remain unaffected by the adoption of this Constitution. All indictments or informations which shall have been found, or may hereafter be found, for any crime or offense committed before this Constitution takes effect, may be proceeded upon as if no change had taken place, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution.

SEC. 3. The Legislature, at its first session after the adoption of this Constitution, shall provide for the transfer of all records, books, papers, and proceedings from such Courts as are abolished by this Constitution to the Courts provided herein; and the Courts to which the same are thus transferred shall have the same power and jurisdiction over them as if they had been in the first instance commenced, filed, or lodged therein. No officer elected at the first election after the adoption of this Constitution shall be entitled to draw any salary until he shall have been duly installed as such either by provisions herein or by Act of the Legislature.

SEC. 4. The Superintendent of Printing of the State of California shall, at least thirty days before the first Wednesday in May, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, cause to be printed at the State Printing Office, in pamphlet form, simply stitched, as many copies of this Constitution as there are registered voters in this State, and mail one copy thereof to the Post Office address of each registered voter; provided, any copies not called for ten days after reaching their delivery office, shall be subject to general distribution by the several Postmasters of the State. The Governor shall issue his proclamation, giving notice of the election for the adoption or rejection of this Constitution, at least thirty days before the said first Wednesday of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, and the Boards of Supervisors of the several counties shall cause said proclamation to be made public in their respective counties, and general notice of said election to be given at least fifteen days next before said election.

SEC. 5. The Superintendent of Printing of the State of California, shall, at least twenty days before said election, cause to be printed and delivered to the Clerk of each county in this State, five times the number of properly prepared ballots for said election that there are voters in said respective counties, with the words printed thereon, "For the new Constitution." He shall likewise cause to be so printed and delivered to said Clerks, five times the number of properly prepared ballots for said election that there are voters in said respective counties, with the words printed thereon, "Against the new Constitution." The Secretary of State is hereby authorized and required to furnish the Superintendent of State Printing a sufficient quantity of legal ballot paper, now on hand, to carry out the provisions of this section.

SEC. 6. The Clerks of the several counties in the State shall, at least five days before said election, cause to be delivered to the Inspectors of Elections, at each election precinct or polling place in their respective counties, suitable registers, poll-books, forms of return, and an equal number of the aforesaid ballots, which number, in the aggregate, must be ten times greater than the number of voters in the said election precincts or polling places. The returns of the number of votes cast at the Presidential election in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-six shall serve as a basis of calculation for this and the preceding section; provided, that the duties in this and the preceding section imposed upon the Clerk of the respective counties shall, in the City and County of San Francisco, be performed by the Registrar of Voters for said city and county.

SEC. 7. Every citizen of the United States, entitled by law to vote for members of the Assembly in this State, shall be entitled to vote for the adoption or rejection of this Constitution.

SEC. 8. The officers of the several counties of this State, whose duty it is, under the law, to receive and canvass the returns from the several precincts of their respective counties, as well as of the City and County of San Francisco, shall meet at the usual places of meeting for such purposes, on the first Monday after said election. If, at the time of meeting, the returns from each precinct in the county in which the polls were opened have been received, the Board must then and there proceed to canvass the returns; but if all the returns have not been received, the canvass must be postponed from day to day until all the returns are received, or until six postponements have been had, when they shall proceed to make out returns of the votes cast for and against the new Constitution; and the proceedings of said Boards shall be the same as those prescribed for like Boards in the case of an election for Governor. Upon the completion of said canvass and returns, the said Board shall immediately certify the same, in the usual form, to the Governor of the State of California.

SEC. 9. The Governor of the State of California shall, as soon as the returns of said election shall be received by him, or within thirty days after said election, in the presence and with the assistance of the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, open and compute all the returns received of votes cast for and against the new Constitution. If, by such examination and computation, it is ascertained that a majority of the whole number of votes cast at such election be in favor of such new Constitution, the Executive of this State shall, by his proclamation, declare such new Constitution to be the Constitution of the State of California, and that it shall take effect and be in force on the day hereinafter specified.

SEC. 10. In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the term of all officers elected at the first election under the same shall be, respectively, one year shorter than the terms as in this Constitution provided; and the successors of all such officers shall be elected at the last election before the expiration of the terms as in this section provided. The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law. Judicial officers and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall be elected at the time and in the manner that State officers are elected.

SEC. 11. This Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock meridian, so far as the same relates to the election of all officers heretofore provided for by law, and who are not named or provided for in this Constitution, and also such officers who are named in this Constitution, the commencement of the terms of officers, and the meeting of the Legislature. In all other respects, and for all other purposes, this Constitution shall take effect on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, at twelve o'clock meridian.

SEC. 12. All laws relative to the present judicial system of the State shall be applicable to the judicial system created by this Constitution until changed by legislation.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I move a verbal amendment to section eleven.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'officers,' in third line, up to and including the word 'Constitution,' in fifth line."

Adopted.

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section three.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out all after the word 'therein,' in the sixth line."

MR. BELCHER. Mr. President: These words either mean nothing, or they mean something that we ought not to say. If an officer is elected, when the time comes he is installed in office, and that is all there is of it.

MR. MORELAND. The only object of that is this: there might be two sets of officers claiming office at the same time. There is no law to enforce their duties until after the Legislature meets, and therefore the old officers could hold over until the new officers were inducted into office, and this was inserted to avoid paying two sets of officers at the same time. Probably the word "inducted," would express the meaning better than the word "installed."

MR. VAN DYKE. I concur with Judge Belcher, these words ought to be stricken out.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to strike out.

Carried.

MR. SHOEMAKER. Mr. President: I offer an amendment.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Amend section four by striking out the words 'provided any copies not called for ten days after reaching their delivery office, shall be subject to general distribution by the several Postmasters of the State.'"

MR. SHOEMAKER. Mr. President: The object of this is this: this Convention has no control over the Postmasters of this State.

MR. WEBSTER. It is absolutely essential that some mode be provided for the distribution of the documents which are not called for, or they will all go to the dead letter office.

The amendment was lost.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section eight.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Strike out 'day to day until all the returns are received, or until six postponements have been had,' and insert 'time to time, until all the returns are received, or until the second Monday after said election.'"

MR. ANDREWS. That compels the Board to adjourn from day to day, when, in many of the counties, the Board may know to a certainty that the returns will not be received for several days, thus entailing a useless expense.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Shasta, Mr. Andrews.

Adopted.

MR. MORELAND. Mr. President: I move to strike out the word "State," in the last line, and insert "other."

Lost.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

"Add and insert after the word 'provided,' in line six, the following: 'but the first terms, after the adoption of this Constitution, of the offices of County Clerks, Sheriffs, Recorders, Treasurers, Assessors, and Collectors, District Attorneys, Coroners, Public Administrators, and County Superintendents of Common Schools, of the several counties, shall commence at the expiration of the terms, as now provided by law, of their respective predecessors in office.'"

REMARKS OF MR. HERRINGTON.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: The necessity for this provision will appear when it is once considered that at the time the new officers will go into office it will be at the most busy season of office work. To make the change at that time would be difficult, and would work a hardship upon all the officers whose terms do not expire until the first of March following. It makes no difference with the new officers, who hold their offices for about eleven months; and the convenience of the State, and the various counties in the State, ought to be consulted rather than the convenience of the incoming officers.

MR. BEERSTECHER. We have had the pleasure of voting down that amendment three times.

MR. HERRINGTON. Only once.

MR. BEERSTECHER. It is exactly the same amendment. I hope it will be voted down again.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne. Mr. President: I hope the amendment will be carried. It is necessary to make some sacrifices somewhere, and it is better for the new officers to have their terms shortened than for the State and counties to suffer the inconvenience that will follow.

MR. WHITE. I wish to call the attention of the Convention to the fact that the new officers, under this amendment, would only hold office for seven months, which is too short a time to go to the trouble and expense of an election.

MR. ROLFE. I think this amendment is unnecessary, because I do not believe these statutory officers are cut off by any provision of this Constitution, unless I am mistaken. They hold under the statute. There is no need of the amendment, unless I am very much mistaken.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Santa Clara, Mr. Herrington.

Lost.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I offer an amendment to section ten.

THE SECRETARY read:

"SEC. 10. In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the term of all officers elected at the first election under the same, and whose term of office is four years or over, shall be, respectively, one year shorter than the term provided for in this Constitution, and the term of all officers whose term of office is two years shall be, respectively, one year longer than the term provided for in this Constitution, except the members of the Assembly, whose first term of office shall be one year; and the successors of all such officers shall be elected at the last election before the expiration of the terms as in this section provided. The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution, shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law. Judicial officers and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, at the first election under this Constitution, shall be elected at the time and in the manner that State officers are elected."

REMARKS OF MR. BARBOUR.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: The section of the report shortens the terms of all county officers, while this lengthens their terms by one year, and shortens the terms of four year officers to three years. I offer this amendment because I believe it is in the interest of good government, and founded on correct principles. Lest I should be accused of personal motives in offering it, I will say that I am not a candidate for any office, under this provision or any other provision of this Constitution. Now, sir, the Convention has gone ahead and provided for twelve-year terms and six-year terms, and when it comes to county officers they provide for terms of one year. These county officers will go out of office about the time they begin to get a knowledge of the duties of the office. I believe it is wrong in principle, and the best way out of the difficulty is to adopt this amendment. I don't know whether it is true or not, but gentlemen seem to be afraid that the party with which I am connected will obtain control of the State, and gain some advantage under this provision. If that be the case, all I have to say is that it is an extremely small motive to guide men in their course.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Stedman, Barbour, Huestis, Wellin, and Joyce.

The article was referred to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE ON REVISION.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: The Committee on Revision and Adjustment have ready to submit a report on five of the articles submitted to them. I will read the report with the changes proposed by the committee, and explain them as I go along.

Number One—Preamble and Bill of Rights. The preamble we leave untouched. The first and second sections are untouched. In section three it is a mere transposition of two sentences. The fourth and fifth sections we left stand. In the sixth section we strike out the word "or," and insert the word "nor." In the eighth section, amend by striking out the words "indictment or by," and insert the word "examination" after the word "after," in the second line. Strike out the words "commitment" and "examination" where they occur in line three, and insert the word "commitment" after the word "and;" and after the word "magistrate," insert the words "or by indictment, with or without such examination and commitment;" and strike out the word "but," in fourth line. The committee thought it necessary that the Grand Jury should have the right to file an indictment either before or after commitment or examination. In the twelfth section, the words "to be," in the last line, are stricken out. In section twelve, strike out the letter "s" after the word "causes."

MR. EDGERTON. I move that the report be printed, and that the several amendments to the article, as reported, be printed in italic, and words stricken out put in brackets.

MR. SHAFTER. In the seventeenth section, amend by inserting the word "acquisition" after the word "the," and the word "transmission" after the word "enjoyment," in the fourth line. The original section gives the right of possession, enjoyment, and inheritance, without giving the right of transmission.

MR. BARBOUR. I move the reported amendments be printed in the Journal.

THE PRESIDENT. If there are no objections it will be so ordered——

MR. CAPLES. And four hundred and eighty copies laid upon the desks of members.

MR. HAGER. I think the better way would be to adopt these recommendations at once, and then order it printed.

MR. EDGERTON. I move the Convention adjourn.

Lost.

[The printing of the partial report is deferred until the final report is made, in order to have it continuous.—ED.]

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I insist upon my motion to print.

Carried.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I wish to present a resolution with reference to instructing the committee in regard to the section on Chinese.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I hope no instructions will be given until we see what the changes are.

ADJOURNMENT.

MR. O'DONNELL. I move we do now adjourn.

Carried.

And, at five o'clock P. M., the Convention stood adjourned until to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock and thirty minutes.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOURTH DAY.

SACRAMENTO, Friday, February 28th, 1879.

The Convention met in regular session at nine o'clock and thirty minutes A. M., President Hoge in the chair.

THE JOURNAL.

MR. BEERSTECHER. Mr. President: I move that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, and the same approved.

So ordered.

RESOLUTION—SCHEDULE.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

WHEREAS, In sections four and five of the article entitled "Schedule," of this Constitution, this Convention has provided for the printing and stitching, in pamphlet form, and mailing and distribution of copies of this Constitution, and for the printing and distribution of ballots by the State Printer,

Resolved, That the State Printer be and hereby is requested to inform this Convention, as soon as practicable, whether, and to what extent, he will undertake to execute the provisions of said sections four and five, imposing duties upon him.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Convention immediately furnish the State Printer with a copy of this resolution, and of said sections four and five.

MR. JONES. Mr. President: The necessity of action like that on the part of the Convention, and of obtaining the information therein asked for, arises from the fact that sections four and five require that the State Printer shall perform duties which entail an expense; that is, not merely that printing shall be done, but we also have imposed upon him the duty of stitching and mailing the address to the voters of the State. Gentlemen will see in a moment that this involves a considerable amount of expense and labor not falling within the duties of the State Printer. For example, if one hundred and fifty thousand copies are to be addressed to the names of voters taken from the Great Register, the amount of labor will be very considerable. Hunting out the names and writing the addresses at the rate of one copy per minute, the time would be one hundred days of twenty-four hours each; and if three copies per minute should be supposed to be addressed, there would still be one hundred days at ten hours each. Then again, the postage will amount to some two thousand dollars, and the Convention has no funds with which to pay this postage, or to supply the printer with the means of paying it. Now, it is understood that there is a method by which the funds can be furnished and the work done, but as it is not within the direct duty of these officers, and as the Convention asks them to perform these duties, I think the Convention could not with prudence and propriety adjourn without some assurance that the work will be done. I have no doubt the State Printer will cheerfully give the assurance, and I hope that the resolution will be adopted.

MR. WEBSTER. Mr. President: I wish to suggest here that I think it is important that this resolution should be adopted. There have several members of the Convention interested themselves in this matter, and the whole scheme has been worked up satisfactorily, but that is no security to the Convention. The idea of this resolution is to get some official assurance from the State Printer that this work will be done in accordance with the promise which he has made to us. We have no doubt that he will do it. It is simply to get something official from that officer. We have made arrangements by which the Governor has agreed to furnish the necessary stamps to the State Printer, and the Printer has agreed that he will do all the work in his office.

Digitized by Google

The resolution was adopted.

CHINESE.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the article on Chinese be and the same is hereby referred to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, with special instructions to amend section (four) six of said article, so as to make the same conform to the suggestions of said committee, reported to the Convention on Thursday, February the twenty-seventh instant, and to report said article, as so amended, to this Convention without delay, for its action thereon.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. I rise to a point of order, that we should take up the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment seriatim, and dispose of each article and amendments as reported.

MR. EDGERTON. I am willing to wait until that time comes, then. Let it lie on the table temporarily.

So ordered.

REVISION AND ADJUSTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment. The committee has made a partial report and sent in five articles with certain changes. The Convention will take up that report.

MR. HOWARD. I move that it be accepted and taken up seriatim.

THE PRESIDENT. The acceptance adopts the report.

MR. HOWARD. I do not understand it so. However, I move that it be taken up.

So ordered.

THE SECRETARY read the first correction.

MR. VAN DYKE. I move that the correction be concurred in.

THE PRESIDENT. It will save a good deal of time if no objections are made to the corrections as read—to pass them, and then vote on the amendments to each article as a whole.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

[NOTE—Owing to the manner in which the suggestions of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment were acted upon, it would be difficult for the reader to see their applications in many places without the article before them. We shall, therefore, insert each article, with the amendments of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, as they were printed by order of the Convention. Words in brackets are stricken out, and words in italics are transpositions or additions.—REPORTERS.]

Following is the article on preamble and bill of rights as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing, and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

SEC. 3. The State of California is an inseparable part of the American Union, and the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land.

[SEC. 3. The Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land.]

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be guaranteed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness or juror on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when, in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require its suspension.

SEC. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted. Witnesses shall not be unreasonably detained, nor [or] confined in any room where criminals are actually imprisoned.

SEC. 7. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but in civil actions three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. A trial by jury may be waived in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, by the consent of both parties, expressed in open Court [expressed], and in civil actions [cases] by the consent of the parties, signified in such manner as may be prescribed by law. In civil actions [cases], and cases of misdemeanor, the jury may consist of twelve or of any number less than twelve upon which [that] the parties may agree [upon] in open Court.

SEC. 8. Offenses heretofore required to be prosecuted by indictment shall be prosecuted by [indictment or by] information, after examination [commitment] and commitment [examination] by a Magistrate, or by indictment with or without such examination and commitment, as may be prescribed by law; [but a] A grand jury shall be drawn and summoned at least once a year in each county.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact. Indictments found, or information laid for publications in newspapers shall be tried in the county where such newspapers have their publication office, or in the county where the party alleged to be libeled resided at the time of the alleged publication, unless the place of trial shall be changed for good cause.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right to freely assemble together to consult for the common good, to instruct their Representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by this State in time of peace, and no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner [to be] prescribed by law.

SEC. 13. In criminal prosecutions, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial; to have the process of the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and to appear and defend, in person and with counsel. No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. The Legislature shall have power to provide for the taking, in the presence of the party accused and his counsel, of depositions of witnesses in criminal cases, other than cases of homicide, when there is reason to believe that the witnesses, from inability or other cause[s], will not attend at the trial.

SEC. 14. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made to, or paid into Court for, the owner, and no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation other than municipal, until full compensation therefor be first made in money, or ascertained and paid into Court for the owner, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, unless a jury be waived, as in other civil cases in a Court of record, as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mense or final process, unless in cases of fraud, nor in civil actions for torts, except in cases of willful injury to person or property; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed.

SEC. 17. Foreigners of the white race or of African descent, eligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, while bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights in respect to the acquisition, possession, enjoyment, transmission, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State.

SEC. 19. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue but on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 20. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and [or] comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 21. No special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the Legislature; nor shall any citizen, or class of citizens, be granted privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not be granted to all citizens.

SEC. 22. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise.

SEC. 23. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

SEC. 24. No property qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote or hold office.

THE SECRETARY read the amendments separately.

The report, consisting of amendments to sections three, six, seven, eight, twelve, thirteen, seventeen, and twenty concurred in, and the article referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

SEC. 7. He shall see that the laws are faithfully executed.

SEC. 8. When any office shall, from any cause, become vacant, and no mode is provided by the Constitution and law for filling such vacancy, the Governor shall have power to fill such vacancy by granting a commission, which shall expire at the end of the next session of the Legislature, or at the next election by the people.

SEC. 9. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Legislature by proclamation, stating the purposes for which he has convened it, and when so convened it shall have no power to legislate on any subjects other than those specified in the proclamation, but may provide for the expenses of the session and other matters incidental thereto.

SEC. 10. He shall communicate by message to the Legislature, at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient.

SEC. 15. A Lieutenant-Governor shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner, as the Governor; and his term of office and his qualifications of eligibility shall also be the same. He shall be President of the Senate, but shall have only [only have] a casting vote therein. If, during a vacancy of the office of Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor shall be impeached, displaced, resign, die, or become incapable of performing the duties of his office, or be absent from the State, the President pro tempore [pro tem.] of the Senate shall act as Governor until the vacancy be filled or the disability shall cease. The Lieutenant-Governor shall be disqualified from holding any other office, except as specially provided in this Constitution, during the term for which he shall have been elected.

SEC. 16. In case of the impeachment of the Governor, or his removal from office, death, inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, resignation, or absence from the State, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the Lieutenant-Governor for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease. But when the Governor shall, with the consent of the Legislature, be out of the State in time of war, at the head of any military force thereof, he shall continue Commander-in-Chief of all the military force of [in] the State.

SEC. 17. A Secretary of State, a Controller, a Treasurer, an Attorney-General, and a Surveyor-General shall be elected at the same time and places, and in the same manner as the Governor and Lieutenant Governor, and their [whose] terms of office shall be the same as that of the Governor.

SEC. 18. No salary shall be authorized by law for clerical service, in any office provided for in this article, exceeding sixteen hundred dollars per annum for each clerk employed. The Legislature may, in its discretion, abolish the office of Surveyor-General; and none of the officers hereinbefore named shall receive for their own use any fees or perquisites for the performance of any official duty.

SEC. 20. The Governor shall not, during his term of office, be elected a Senator to the Senate of the United States.

THE SECRETARY read the amendments separately.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of this part of the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

MR. SHAFTER. This is article five, with the same caption as at present—executive department.

The report, consisting of amendments to sections two, three, four, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, and nineteen concurred in.

The committee recommended that the article be numbered five.

Concurred in, and referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

PARDONING POWER.

THE PRESIDENT. The next question is on the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment on the article on pardoning power.

Following is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE —.

PARDONING POWER.

SECTION 1. The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, pardons, and commutations of sentence, after conviction, for all offenses except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions, and with such restrictions and limitations, as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason, the Governor shall have power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature, at its next meeting, when the Legislature shall either pardon, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. The Governor shall communicate to the Legislature, at the beginning of every session, every case of reprieve or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence, [and] its date, the date of the pardon or [and] reprieve, and the reasons for granting the same. Neither the Governor nor the Legislature shall have power to grant pardons, or commutations of sentence, in any case where the convict has been twice convicted of felony, unless upon the written recommendation of a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court.

THE SECRETARY read the amendments.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in this part of the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

The report was concurred in.

MR. SHAFTER. This is article seven.

MR. ROLFE. The pardoning power ought to be a part of the executive department. I move that it be made section twenty of the article on executive department, and that section twenty, as now adopted, be made section twenty-one.

MR. SHAFTER. That idea occurred to the committee and they discussed it, but the Convention have made it a separate article.

MR. JONES. I see no necessity for such a change; the article is a separate article of the Constitution.

MR. ROLFE. I withdraw my motion.

The article was numbered seven, and referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

MILITIA.

THE PRESIDENT. The next article is the militia.

The following is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE —.

MILITIA.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall provide, by law, for organizing and disciplining the militia, in such manner as it [they] may deem expedient, not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States. Officers of the militia shall be elected or appointed in such manner as the Legislature shall from time to time direct, and shall be commissioned by the Governor. The Governor shall have power to call forth the militia to execute the laws of the State, to suppress insurrections, and repel invasions.

SEC. 2. All military organizations provided for by this Constitution, or any law of this State, and receiving State support, shall, while under arms, either for ceremony or duty, carry no device, banner, or flag of any State or nation, except that of the United States or the State of California.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

The report was concurred in, and the article numbered article eight.

Referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

CHINESE.

THE PRESIDENT. The next question is on concurring in the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment on the article on Chinese.

Following is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

Digitized by Google

ARTICLE —.

CHINESE.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall prescribe all necessary regulations for the protection of the State, and the counties, cities, and towns thereof, from the burdens and evils arising from the presence of aliens who are, or [who] may become, vagrants, paupers, mendicants, criminals, or invalids afflicted with contagious or infectious diseases, and from aliens otherwise dangerous or detrimental to the well-being or peace of the State, and to impose conditions upon which such persons may reside in the State, and to provide the means and mode of their removal from the State upon failure or refusal to comply with such conditions; provided, that nothing contained in this section [the foregoing] shall be construed to impair or limit the power of the Legislature to pass such police laws or other regulations as it may deem necessary.

SEC. 2. No corporation now existing, or hereafter formed, under the laws of this State, shall, after the adoption of this Constitution, employ, directly or indirectly, in any capacity, any Chinese or Mongolian. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to enforce this provision.

SEC. 3. No Chinese shall be employed on any State, county, municipal, or other public work, except in punishment for crime [crimes].

Sec. 4. The presence of foreigners ineligible to become citizens of the United States is declared [herein] to be dangerous to the well-being of the State, and the Legislature shall discourage their immigration by all the means within its power. Asiatic coolieism, is [being] a form of human slavery, and is forever prohibited in this State, and all contracts for coolie labor shall be [are null and] void. All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State, for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or for their location within prescribed portions of those limits, and it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. This section shall be enforced by appropriate legislation.

THE SECRETARY read the amendments.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I now call up my resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the article on Chinese be and the same is hereby referred to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, with special instructions to amend section (four) six of said article, so as to make the same conform to the suggestions of said committee, reported to the Convention on Thursday, February the twenty-seventh instant, and to report said article, as so amended, to this Convention, without delay, for its action thereon.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I move to lay the resolution on the table.

MR. WHITE. I second the motion to lay on the table.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: The committee have made no recommendation, but the object was to arrive at the intention of the Convention with regard to the words "or any other country."

MR. SHAFTER attempted to explain some defects in the section amid such confusion that he could not be heard.

MR. EDGERTON. In common with many other gentlemen, I misunderstood the gentleman yesterday. According to his statement now that committee has made no suggestion, and therefore that resolution has no ground on which to stand; I ask leave to withdraw it.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I object to its withdrawal, and for the reason that this section obviously requires some revision in conformity with the suggestion of the Chairman of the committee.

THE PRESIDENT. I understand the gentleman to object to the withdrawal of the resolution?

MR. HOWARD. Yes; because I wish the section to be harmonized. It must go back to the committee. You cannot punish an act as criminal committed in a foreign country; it is simply absurd, and the Chairman of the committee is right. It would subject the Convention to all sorts of ridicule.

MR. STUART. Does not the world look upon it in that light now?

MR. HOWARD. The question is whether they look upon the gentleman in that light, and the point is that this section attempts to punish intention. The Chairman is perfectly right, and therefore I am in favor of its going to the committee.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I oppose the return to the committee. I am opposed to any amendments or any explanations. All acts of that character fall by their own weight. An attempt to do wrong is always overdone. This article on Chinese has been discussed long enough. They knew at the time they were doing wrong. I protest against the passage of this article in the name of the State of California; for the honor of the United States Government, which has always been liberal and just; and in behalf of the manufacturers, the producers, and householders of the State of California, and in behalf of humanity.

MR. EDGERTON. I ask leave to withdraw my resolution.

MR. HOWARD. I object to it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on allowing the gentleman to withdraw his resolution.

The gentleman was allowed to withdraw his resolution, on a division, by a vote of 71 ayes to 25 noes.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I move that the portion of the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment relating to the article on Chinese be referred to the Committee on Chinese, with instructions to restore sections four and five of the original report.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. Upon reflection, I have come to the conclusion that the position of this article is precisely like that of a bill which has passed in the Legislature. It has been adopted; it has received the final sanction of this body, and it is not like an engrossed bill, which is subject to such a motion before the final passage of the bill. My point is, that this article has been finally acted upon by the Convention, adopted, and it is no longer open to amendment, or to recommitment to any committee.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that we are now acting upon the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment. That report is the property of this house, and, as I understand it, the Convention can do as it pleases—either adopt the report, amend the report, rerefer the report to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, or to the Committee of the Whole. If the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment were adopted, the position of the gentleman would be correct.

THE PRESIDENT. The article on Chinese has been adopted by the Convention as a part of the Constitution. They referred it to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment for the purpose of making grammatical corrections. That committee had no power to make any other corrections. They could not change the sense nor the substance of the article. The only way that the Convention could make any change upon it would be by the way of reconsideration, and no such motion could be entertained now as the time has expired. The only other way would be by unanimous consent. This article must stand as a part of the Constitution unless changed by unanimous consent. The motion of the gentleman from San Francisco is therefore out of order.

MR. LARKIN. I appeal from the decision of the chair.

Messrs. Barbour, Herrington, and Doyle seconded the appeal.

MR. DUDLEY. Mr. President: I would like to ask a question. If this can be so amended, then can the whole Constitution be?

THE PRESIDENT. Yes. The whole Constitution can be sent back, and every article of it.

MR. DUDLEY. I trust it will be voted down.

MR. ANDREWS. Mr. President: I desire to say this, that the position of the gentleman from Sacramento is not correct. This is not the position of a bill which has been passed upon its final reading. Its position is that of a bill which has passed its second reading. It has not passed upon its final passage, and a motion to recommit with special instructions is in order, and I am in hopes that the Chair will not be sustained.

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: It must be clear to anybody who reflects, that if the decision of the Chair is not sustained, we have only just begun the work of this Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

MR. CASSERLY. There is so much disorder that nothing can be heard.

THE PRESIDENT. The Convention will come to order.

MR. HOWARD. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Stedman, Larkin, Schomp, McCoy, and Harrison.

The roll was called, and the appeal laid on the table by the following vote:

AYES.

Belcher,	Keyes,	Schomp,
Biggs,	Lampson,	Shafter,
Blackmer,	Larue,	Shoemaker,
Boucher,	Mansfield,	Shurtleff,

MR. HOWARD. Mr. President: I move now, sir, to recommit this report on Chinese to the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, with instructions to report it back in conformity with the suggestion of the Chairman of the committee, for final action of this Convention.

THE PRESIDENT. That is the same motion.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I have written out a resolution of instruction which I will send up.

THE SECRETARY read:

"I move to recommit the article on Chinese to the Committee on Revision, with instruction to revise section four, as follows: In line four strike out the word 'Asiatic' and insert 'Chinese.' Strike out the sentence commencing with the word 'all,' in line six, and ending with the word 'prescribe,' in line eight, and insert: 'The organization of companies or corporations for the importation of Chinese coolies is hereby declared to be a felony, and the Legislature shall provide for the punishment of such crime.'"

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I make the same point of order in regard to this motion.

THE PRESIDENT. It falls directly within the ruling already made by the Chair and the Convention. The question is on concurring in the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

The report was concurred in, and the article was referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

RESOLUTION.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That Mr. Hiram Clock be allowed pay as Night Watchman of this Chamber and adjoining rooms, at the rate of four dollars per day, from the twenty-eighth day of October, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight, to the close of the session of this Convention.

Referred to the Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses.

REPORT.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: The Committee on Revision and Adjustment and their clerk worked until about half past two o'clock this morning, and completed their action upon some articles except drawing up the report. If the Convention is prepared to receive a verbal report upon some of them, we can proceed with them. Upon the question of boundary the committee report that article without amendment, and recommend that it be constituted article twenty-one. There seems to be a typographical error in it. The date of the treaty should be May thirtieth, instead of May thirteenth.

THE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection the correction will be made. The article will go to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

The article on water and water rights was ordered to be numbered fourteen, and then referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

Four hundred and eighty copies of the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, in the same form as previous report, was ordered printed.

RECESS.

At eleven o'clock and forty minutes A. M., on motion of Mr. Van Dyke, the Convention took a recess till three o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at three o'clock, President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called, and quorum present.

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

MR. MURPHY. Mr. President: I rise to a question of privilege. The following article appears in this morning's Record-Union:

"AN ACT OF BRUTAL DISCOURTESY.

"It was understood yesterday that the question of woman suffrage would come up again in the Convention, and the advocates of that measure had prepared themselves to speak upon it. For some time past the women of Sacramento and other parts of the State have been procuring petitions asking for the extension of the right of suffrage to their sex, and these petitions, numerously signed, had been presented to the Convention. In accordance with the parliamentary custom in such cases, Colonel Ayers had previously stated his desire to speak upon the question, and as a large number of ladies who were interested in the subject were in attendance, common courtesy would have demanded a respectful hearing of the petitions, and of the statements of their supporters. When the subject was reached, however, delegate Murphy sprang to his feet and moved the previous question, cutting off debate, and preventing the advocates of the proposition from saying anything. This Murphy has distinguished himself by similar acts, during such part of the session as he has been present, and in no other way. Apparently incapable of originating an idea himself; neither a speaker, a thinker, nor a worker; an absentee during about half the session, and doing nothing useful when present; he has learned just enough of parliamentary rules to enable him to move the previous question, and he has done this on several occasions when to do it was little short of an outrage. In the present case he has incurred, for the Convention, the responsibility for a piece of brutal discourtesy and unfairness. The women of Sacramento had a right to be heard on the question. Their petition was entitled to respectful treatment. Their advocates on the floor ought to have been allowed full latitude. So much liberty of remonstrance and appeal is allowed to all who live under a republican form of government, and no legislative body, and no individual legislator, could be warranted in refusing to accord them opportunity for making known their demands. The Convention is placed in a very mean and contemptible attitude when it undertakes to bulldose women, and though it is very probable that delegate Murphy does not know any better than to act like a boor, there are so many of his colleagues who possess greater delicacy and sense of propriety, that it is to be regretted they should be placed in so compromising a position by his unmannerly and discourteous behavior. It may now be said that the Convention was afraid to discuss woman suffrage, and that because it could not meet the arguments of its supporters in a manly fashion it took the coward's refuge of silencing its petitioners. It is to be hoped that the women of California will meet this insult to their sex in a spirited and effective way, and that every woman who values herself will henceforth do all she can to prove that the Convention has underrated woman's influence, by working against the new Constitution."

This is the first time in my short career as a public man that I have undertaken to reply to a newspaper article. I would not do it now, but the statement is so manifestly malicious, and so grossly unjust, that I would deem myself wanting in self-respect if I did not reply to it. In the first place, it starts out with the statement that Colonel Ayers was entitled to the floor. I don't know by what rule Colonel Ayers, a member of this body, was any more entitled to the floor than I was. In the next place, it is stated that the previous question cut off all amendments. It is well known that this question had been debated thoroughly in the Committee of the Whole and also in the Convention. I consider that, instead of being "an act of brutal discourtesy" on my part, that it was an act of brutal cowardice for a man to pen an article like that, and he deserves the contempt of every honorable man.

REPORT.

MR. WALKER, of Tuolumne, of Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses, presented the following report:

MR. PRESIDENT: The Committee on Mileage and Contingent Expenses have had under consideration the resolution offered by Mr. Beerstecher, to the effect that a warrant be issued to William Galt, Porter, for the amount of forty-five dollars, paid by him to William Lewis for rear porterage, and after a full examination into its merits recommend that it be indefinitely postponed.

The committee have also considered the resolution to grant pay to Hiram Clock, as Night Watchman of this chamber, of four dollars per day from the eighteenth day of October to close of session, and recommend that said Clock be allowed one ($1 00) dollar per night for his services as aforesaid.

WALKER, Chairman pro tem.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

MR. EDGERTON. I think the gentleman is entitled to this sum. I hope the Chairman will make an explanation, so that the Convention will understand it.

MR. WALKER. It seems that one Porter retired and another stepped into his place. Two warrants have been regularly issued to Galt and Jones. Therefore, the committee could not see how the third Porter can possibly demand pay from the Convention.

MR. EDGERTON. I understand that these two Porters could not do all the work, for the reason that the gas was shut off at night, so that they had to wait till morning, and this money was paid out for assistance.

MR. WALKER. It is a fact that he has paid the money out.

MR. EDGERTON. He did it for the convenience and health of this body. They had one hundred and fifty-six spittoons to clean out every day, and a large amount of other work to do.

MR. WINANS. I am also aware of the facts which tend to show that this man was compelled, by the necessities of the case, and the circumstances, to pay out this money; and if he had not assumed the responsibility of so doing, the Convention would have been indignant at the neglect of the work. The laborer is worthy of his hire, and this resolution should be adopted.

MR. EAGON. I hope the Convention will pay this small bill, which has been well earned. I have known this man a long time, and he would not ask for it if it was not justly due.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the first resolution.

Adopted.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring with the committee on the second resolution.

Carried.

COMMITTEE ON ADDRESS.

THE PRESIDENT. In conformity with a resolution of this Convention, I have appointed the following a Committee on Address: James E. Murphy, William J. Graves, Marion Biggs, William Van Voorhies, Charles S. Ringgold, George W. Schell, A. C. Freeman, Robert Crouch, D. C. Stevenson, Henry K. Turner, Henry Larkin, Lucius D. Morse, S. A. Holmes, C. W. Cross, H. Mills, Patrick Reddy, Edward Evey, H. C. Rolfe, Jacob R. Freud, Joseph R. Weller, A. H. Chapman, G. A. Johnson, and James S. Reynolds.

MR. REYNOLDS. Mr. President: I move that the committee be discharged from further service. I understand that this resolution was passed some three or four days ago. It was reasonably well known that this Convention would be able to adjourn by to-morrow night. I can see no reason why that committee should not have been appointed so as to have been given due time to consider its duty and prepare an address. It is now too late for them to do so. That is the reason I move that the committee be discharged.

MR. REDDY. Mr. President: I think the remarks of the gentleman entirely uncalled for, because the members of this committee were to be selected from judicial districts, and, certainly, no one not perfectly familiar with the localities could have done any better.

MR. RINGGOLD. Mr. President: I am not aware to-day whether I shall vote to ratify the Constitution or not, and I most respectfully decline.

MR. WELLIN. I hope the motion to discharge this committee will prevail.

Digitized by Google

MR. WELLER. I hope the motion will not prevail; it is better late than not at all.

MR. VACQUEREL. I hope the motion will prevail. The people will judge of our work by the work itself, and not by what we say about it.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to discharge the committee.

Division was called for, and the motion prevailed by a vote of 77 ayes to 20 noes.

REVISION AND ADJUSTMENT.

THE PRESIDENT. The next order of business is on the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment on the article on the right of suffrage.

Following is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE II.

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE.

SECTION 1. Every native male citizen of the United States, every male person who shall have acquired the rights of citizenship under or by virtue of the treaty of Queretaro, and every male naturalized citizen thereof, who shall have become such ninety days prior to any election, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year next preceding the election, and of the county in which he claims his vote ninety days, and in the election precinct thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may hereafter be authorized by law; provided, no native of China, no idiot, insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, and no person hereafter convicted of the embezzlement or misappropriation of public money, shall ever exercise the privileges of an elector in this State [that no native of China shall vote at any election; provided further, that no idiot, insane person, or person convicted of any infamous crime, shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector; provided further, that no person hereafter convicted of the embezzlement or misappropriation of public money, while holding office or employed in the public service, shall ever exercise the privileges of an elector, or hold any office whatever in this State.]

SEC. 2. Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the days of election, during their attendance at such election, going to and returning therefrom.

SEC. 3. No elector shall be obliged to perform militia duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 4. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas; nor while a student at any seminary of learning; nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum, at public expense; nor while confined in any public prison.

SEC. 5. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

The report of the committee was concurred in, and the article referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

THE PRESIDENT. The next question is on concurring in the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, on the article on distribution of powers.

Following is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

ARTICLE III.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

SECTION 1. The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, [the] executive, and judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except [in the cases] as in this Constitution expressly directed or permitted.

The report of the committee was concurred in, and the article referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing.

THE PRESIDENT. The next report is on the legislative department. The following is the article on legislative department as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment.

ARTICLE IV.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated The Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature [shall be biennial, and] shall commence at twelve o'clock M. on the first Monday after the first day of [Tuesday in] January next ensuing the election of its members, and, after the election held in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, shall be biennial, unless the Governor shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No pay shall be allowed to members for a longer time than sixty days, except for the first session [called] after the adoption of this Constitution, for which they may be allowed pay for one hundred days. And no bill shall be introduced, in either House, after the expiration of ninety days from the commencement of the first session, nor after [and of] fifty days after the commencement of each succeeding session, without the consent of two thirds of the members thereof [of said House].

SEC. 3. Members of the Assembly shall be elected in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at the time and in the manner now provided by law. The second election of members of the Assembly after the adoption of this Constitution shall be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, eighteen hundred and eighty. Thereafter, members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, and their term of office shall be two years; and each election shall be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature.

SEC. 4. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly, and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State three years, and of the district for which he shall be chosen, one year next before his election.

SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts, numbered as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators elected in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two from the odd numbered districts shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senators shall be elected every two years; provided, that all the Senators elected at the first election under this Constitution shall hold office for the term of three years.

SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial and eighty Assembly districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Senatorial and Assembly districts. Each Senatorial district shall choose one Senator, and each Assembly district shall choose one member of Assembly. The Senatorial districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, and the Assembly districts shall be numbered from one to eighty in the same order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of such [said] districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contains sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or of any city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the Legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust such [said] districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming a part of the population of any district. Until such districting as herein provided for shall be made, Senators and Assemblymen shall be elected by the districts according to the apportionment now provided for by law.

SEC. 7. Each House shall choose its [own] officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its [own] members.

SEC. 8. A majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner, and under such penalties, as each House may provide.

SEC. 9. Each House shall determine the rule of its [own] proceeding, and may, with the concurrence of two-thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

SEC. 10. Each House shall keep a Journal of its [own] proceedings, and publish the same, and the yeas and nays of the members of either House, on any question, shall, at the desire of any three members present, be entered on the Journal.

SEC. 11. Members of the Legislature shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, and shall not be subject to any civil process during the session of the Legislature, nor for fifteen days next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

SEC. 12. When vacancies occur in either House, the Governor, or the person exercising the functions of the Governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

SEC. 13. The doors of each House shall be open, except on such occasions as, in the opinion of the House, may require secrecy.

SEC. 14. Neither House shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any [other] place other than that in which they may be sitting. Nor shall the members of either House draw pay for any recess or adjournment for a longer time than three days.

SEC. 15. No law shall be passed except by bill. Nor shall any bill be put upon its final passage until the same, with the amendments thereto, shall have been printed for the use of the members; nor shall any bill become a law unless the same be read on three several days in each House, unless, in case of urgency, two thirds of the House, where such bill may be pending, shall, by a vote of yeas and nays, [deem it expedient to] dispense with this provision. Any bill may originate in either House, but may be amended or rejected by the other; and on the final passage of all bills they shall be read at length, and the vote shall be by yeas and nays upon each bill separately, and shall be entered on the Journal; and no bill shall become a law without the concurrence of a majority of the members elected to each House.

SEC. 16. Every bill which may have passed the Legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approve it, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, which shall enter such objections upon the Journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, it again pass both Houses, by yeas and nays, two thirds of the members elected to each House voting therefor, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the Governor's objections. If any bill shall not be returned within ten days after if shall have been presented to him (Sundays excepted), the same shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislature, by adjournment, prevents such return, in which case it shall not become a law, unless the Governor, within ten days after such adjournment (Sundays excepted), shall sign and deposit the same in the office of the Secretary of State, in which case it shall become a law in like manner as if it had been signed by him before adjournment. If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. If the Legislature be in session, the Governor shall transmit to the House in which the bill originated a copy of such statement, and the items so objected to shall be separately reconsidered in the same manner as bills which have been disapproved by the Governor.

SEC. 17. The Assembly shall have the sole power of impeachment, and all impeachments shall be tried by the Senate. When sitting for that purpose, the Senators shall be upon oath or affirmation, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members elected.

SEC. 18. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, and Judges of the Superior Courts, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall extend only to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust, or profit under the State; but the party convicted or acquitted shall nevertheless be liable to indictment, trial, and punishment according to law. All other civil officers shall be tried for misdemeanor in office in such manner as the Legislature may provide.

SEC. 19. No Senator or member of Assembly shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office of profit under this State which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which have been increased, during such term, except such offices as may be filled by election by the people.

SEC. 20. No person holding any lucrative office under the United States, or any other power, shall be eligible to any civil office of profit under this State; provided, that officers in the militia, who receive [to which there is attached] no annual salary, [or] local officers, or Postmasters whose compensation does not exceed five hundred dollars per annum, shall not be deemed to hold lucrative offices.

SEC. 21. No person convicted of the embezzlement or defalcation of the public funds of the United States, or of any State, or of any county or municipality therein, shall ever be eligible to any office of honor, trust, or profit under this State; and the Legislature shall provide by law for the punishment of embezzlement or defalcation as a felony.

SEC. 22. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and upon warrants duly drawn thereon by the Controller; and no money shall ever be appropriated or drawn from the State treasury for the use or benefit of any corporation, association, asylum, hospital, or any other institution not under the exclusive management and control of the State as a State institution, nor shall any grant or donation of property ever be made thereto by the State; provided, that notwithstanding anything contained in this or any other section of this Constitution, the Legislature shall have the power to grant aid to institutions conducted for the support and maintenance of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged [or sick, or disabled] persons in indigent circumstances—such aid to be granted by a uniform rule, and proportioned to the number of inmates of such respective institutions; provided further, that the State shall have, at any time, the right to inquire into the management of such institutions; provided further, that whenever any county, or city and county, or city, or town shall provide for the support of minor orphans, or half orphans, or abandoned children, or aged persons in indigent circumstances, such county, city and county, city, or town shall be entitled to receive the same pro rata appropriations as may be granted to such institutions under church or other control. An accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of public moneys shall be attached to and published with the laws at every regular session of the Legislature.

SEC. 23. The members of the Legislature shall receive for their services a [compensation,] per diem and mileage, to be fixed by law, and paid out of the public treasury; such per diem shall not exceed eight dollars, and such mileage shall not exceed ten cents per mile, and for contingent expenses not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each session. No increase in compensation or mileage shall take effect during the term for which the members of either House shall have been elected, and the pay of no attaché shall be increased after he is elected or appointed.

SEC. 24. Every Act shall embrace but one subject, which subject shall be expressed in its title. SEC. 9. The University of California shall constitute a public trust, and its organization and government shall be perpetually continued in the form and character prescribed by the organic Act creating the same, passed March twenty-third, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight (and the several Acts amendatory thereof), subject only to such legislative control as may be necessary to insure compliance with the terms of its endowments, and the proper investment and security of its funds. It shall be entirely independent of all political or sectarian influence, and kept free therefrom in the appointment of its Regents, and in the administration of its affairs; provided, that all the moneys derived from the sale of the public lands donated to this State by Act of Congress, approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two (and the several Acts amendatory thereof), shall be invested as provided by said Acts of Congress, and the interest of said moneys shall be inviolably appropriated to the endowment, support, and maintenance of at least one College of Agriculture, where the leading objects shall be (without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics,) to teach such branches of learning as are related to scientific and practical agriculture and the mechanic arts, in accordance with the requirements and conditions of said Acts of Congress; and the Legislature shall provide that if, through neglect, misappropriation, or any other contingency, any portion of the funds so set apart shall be diminished or lost, the State shall replace such portion so lost or misappropriated, so that the principal thereof shall remain forever undiminished. No person shall be debarred admission to any of the collegiate departments of the University on account of sex.

The amendments to sections two, three, and five were concurred in.

THE SECRETARY read the amendment to section six as follows:

"Amend section six. On line one, strike out the words 'primary and grammar,' and insert 'common;' and on line two, strike out the words 'evening schools;' and on fifth and sixth lines, strike out words 'primary and grammar,' and insert 'common' where 'primary and grammar' are stricken out."

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I move that the Convention do not concur in the report of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment in their amendments to section six.

THE PRESIDENT. The same result will follow if the Convention refuses to concur; it needs no motion.

MR. BLACKMER. Mr. President: I understand that the committee take it for granted that the intention of the Convention is to restrict the use of this money to these elementary schools; that was the intention of the committee when it was inserted. Now, we want to make such a clear definition that there cannot be any possible mistake. I know that that is also the intention of the Committee on Revision and Adjustment, but there is a question in this State, although not in the Eastern States, as to what are common schools, and I am not alone in that understanding of it. I went to the State Superintendent this morning, and asked him if there was any description anywhere in their system of a common school whereby we could be sure that, if we wished to restrict the use of such money to any particular schools, there was such a definition as there could be no mistake about? He says no; that in this State, in all of the school system as understood by the State Superintendent and others, the term "common school" has no distinct definition. Now, I have very great respect for the common schools as they are understood in the Eastern States; it was there that I received what little education I have. But, sir, it is a fact, that if we wish to say that the money from this State shall be confined exclusively to the support of the elementary schools, we should describe these schools that are so clearly defined that there can be no mistake about them. Now, I contend that the primary and grammar schools are clearly defined in our entire school system, and common schools are not mentioned. There is no course of study laid down for common schools, and for that reason I am anxious to have the words "primary and grammar" retained. I want it so that the Legislature cannot say hereafter, that common schools shall include other studies beside the studies that are now taught in the primary and grammar schools, so that the State money cannot be used for that purpose. Now, for another reason, I wish that we should not concur in this, because the committee have struck out "evening schools." It is said by the Chairman of the committee, that the time of day does not alter the character of the school. I think the gentleman is incorrect, because the school law makes a distinctive school of it. The gentleman will find, that in San Francisco, the schools called evening schools are entirely a different class of schools than any other; they are designated evening schools. I want to say further, that when they attempted to establish these evening schools in San Francisco, that this objection, that there is no recognition of any such school anywhere, was raised by those who were opposed to them as an argument to prevent their being established. It was for that purpose, and that alone, that they were included here; so that if these schools were established in any place, then they would be recognized as a part of the public school system, and consequently under the control of the public school officers. These evening schools embrace a very different course of study from the day schools in order to adapt them to those who may attend, because they are not confined to those of any particular age. In my judgment they should be retained.

MR. LAMPSON. I most sincerely hope that the report of the committee will be carried out as recommended here. Now, section four of this article specifies particularly that all the money shall be appropriated for common schools. In section six, it specifies that this same money shall go to primary and grammar schools, and the committee has changed it and placed it in a position which is perfectly correct. If this amendment is not adopted I think that probably all the schools will draw from the fund which is designated to go to the common schools. I hope that the report of the committee will be concurred in.

MR. BARBOUR. Mr. President: I make the point of order that the amendments moved by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment are exactly within the decision of the Chair, that no substantial interference with the language or idea contained in the section, can be proposed or entertained. Now, I suppose that it is competent, even under the ruling of the Chair, which I oppose, for the committee to make an outside suggestion. Now, for instance, in section twenty-one, of the article on Legislative Department, they have taken a liberty which I indorse. They have provided a penalty for persons convicted of the embezzlement of funds of the United States, an amendment which I admit to be a good one; but I now raise the point of order that this amendment is a violation of what the Chair has declared to be the rule; that it is not competent for the committee to tamper with the substantial idea, or the sense or meaning of the section. The committee has struck out the evening schools. I suppose that by the same theory they might knock off the Railroad Commission or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

MR. HERRINGTON. Mr. President: I believe that it is competent, so long as there is no change made in the substance of this whole article, to adjust it in any way to effect that result without tautology. Now, if we strike out the last clause of section six entirely, we will have done just precisely what we will accomplish by leaving it there. The latter part of section four declares that this money shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools throughout the State. Now, if that be so, there can be no necessity for repeating it. It is simply a repetition of what has gone before, and I think that by unanimous consent of this House that could be stricken out. I make that motion, since it does not interfere with the sense of the article.

MR. BARBOUR. I made a point of order.

MR. VACQUEREL. Mr. President: This term "common school," that is put there by the Committee on Revision, is exactly the same amendment that has been voted down three or four times by this Convention. It is Mr. Laine's amendment. It has been voted down often enough, and I do not see why it should be brought up again here. I hope the section will remain as it was adopted by the Convention, and that the Convention will not concur in the amendments of this committee.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: It appears to me that there is a clear and palpable distinction drawn by the language of the article on education itself, between the terms primary and grammar schools as here used and the term common schools; and I therefore submit that the point of order taken by the honorable gentleman from San Francisco is well taken. It is not only a material change in character and substance, but it is one which the Committee of the Whole distinctly repudiated and repelled. The question was then discussed, and discussed at great length and with much spirit. So far as the abolition of the phrase "evening schools" is concerned, I fail to see the propriety of such alteration. What was said with reference to evening schools by the gentleman from San Diego, and the distinction which existed between them and the ordinary primary and grammar schools, was correctly said. They are a different establishment. Now, I do not see any inconsistency between section four and section six. Section four, it is true, provides that the moneys of the State shall be inviolably appropriated to the support of common schools, and section six declares what are, in the meaning of the Constitution, common schools, and they are primary and grammar schools.

THE PRESIDENT. There is a point of order pending which the Chair is ready to decide. The Chair is of opinion that the point of order is well taken. He cannot undertake to determine that these amendments do not change the sense.

MR. SHAFTER. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Seconded by Messrs. Larkin and Walker of Tuolumne.

THE PRESIDENT. The Chair is perfectly willing to leave it to the Convention. The point of order is that the amendment reported changes the substance and sense of this section six. The Chair had considerable doubts upon the subject, but, upon examination and reflection, he entertains the idea that the point is well taken, and that these changes do effect a change in the sense of the article and in the substance of the article. An appeal has been taken from that decision. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention?

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I submit——

[Cries of "call the roll," and great confusion.]

MR. SHAFTER. I shall not be put down by this Convention. You may make all the noise you choose. The question is: Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Convention? If this Convention wishes to put such a stealing provision in the Constitution as this, they may do it; but not with my consent. I desire to know if these terms are synonymous. If they are, we simply change a word; if they are not synonymous, it covers up a steal of forty thousand dollars out of the funds of this State, and that is the intention of those who move it.

MR. BLACKMER. I say that the gentleman is entirely mistaken when he says there is an intention to steal forty thousand dollars. If the gentleman refers to me, and I happened to advocate the non-concurrence in this, I am certainly warranted in saying, that he is—entirely mistaken.

MR. SHAFTER. I do not think the gentleman would steal anything. The question raised by the decision of the Chair, as to whether there are two terms, "common" and "primary and grammar," are synonymous. Evening schools is an independent amendment, and has nothing to do with this question. What becomes of the evening schools I do not care. The committee went upon the ground that evening schools did not describe anything, any more than forenoon or afternoon schools would. The question is upon the "common," and "primary and grammar schools." Now, the gentleman from San Diego, Mr. Blackmer, undertakes to say, that the term primary and grammar merely defines the the term common schools, but the Chairman of the Committee on Education holds that the term common schools has a very different meaning, that it includes all kinds of schools, that there is a distinct and palpable difference between "common schools" and "primary and grammar schools"—I repeat his words, I think. If that is so, it is for the purpose of stealing these funds and appropriating it to schools that the Act of Congress did not apply it to. I know something about this term. It has been thrust in here by designing pedagogues, who want to take the fund which Congress designed for the common schools, for other schools. The Act of eighteen hundred and sixty-two was passed for the whole nation, not for California. That Act donated five hundred thousand acres of land for the support of "common" schools.

MR. BARBOUR. I made the point of order when striking out "evening schools," not on primary and grammar.

MR. SHAFTER. I did not so understand the gentleman. Evening school means nothing, and we struck it out because it did not. Now, according to the idea of the Chairman of the Committee on Education, a common school is one to which everybody has a right to go. Everybody can go to the University.

MR. WINANS. The University is not a common school; it is a college.

MR. SHAFTER. I begin to believe it is a place where money is to be spent.

MR. McCALLUM. Define the term "common school."

MR. SHAFTER. A school in which the rudimental branches of an English education are taught, and nothing else. I have taught common schools myself, and I know what they are. They do not mean teaching rhetoric.

MR. EDGERTON. Does this amendment, proposed by the Committee on Revision, change the sense of the section?

MR. SHAFTER. One of them says it does, and the other says it does not. I say that primary and grammar has no significance at all. They are just what these Boards of School Directors in the cities and towns have a mind to make them. Under the title of primary and grammar schools, which they claim are common schools, they ring in studies which never were intended to be included. They teach algebra—when I was a boy was algebra taught in the common schools? Never.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. As the Act of Congress donates this fund to common schools, if we divert it to any other would not Congress be authorized to withdraw the fund?

MR. SHAFTER. I have no doubt about it at all.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: It seems to me that these amendments do change the sense of the section, and the Chair ought to be sustained. It is in the direct line of the decisions which the Chair has made before and been sustained in by the Convention.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. Blackmer states that they mean the same thing.

MR. BLACKMER. I said that there was no definition of the common school in this State that was definite.

MR. SHAFTER. This money was donated for the common schools, and I want to see this State say that it shall go to the common schools.

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: So much confusion prevails that I do not know as I shall be heard. Gentlemen come here to attend to a public duty and they ought to do it, and not make this place resound with the hum of their noisy voices. Now, the terms primary and grammar are well understood and defined in our school laws, and well understood throughout the State. The primary school is a grade below the grammar school, and the grammar school is the grade below the high school. When it says that this money shall be appropriated to the primary and grammar schools, it means to the schools which are below the grade of these higher schools. which should be supported by local contributions alone. When the gentleman talks about a steal of forty thousand dollars, he makes a grave charge without supporting it by argument, and without explaining its meaning. Such arguments are not worthy of the intelligence and character of the source whence they come. Now, sir, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Upon which motion the ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Herrington, Lindow, Keyes, Condon, and Stedman.

The roll was called, and the appeal laid on the table by the following vote:

Heiskell,

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the amendment of the committee to section six.

The Convention refused to concur.

THE PRESIDENT. The amendments are non-concurred in.

[Applause.]

THE SECRETARY continued the reading of the amendments.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I ask that the Sergeant-at-Arms be sent to this quarter of the house to arrest fifteen or twenty members, for the purpose of restoring order.

THE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant-at-Arms will see that the members are all seated.

The amendment of the committee to section eight was ruled out of order on the same ground.

MR. WILSON. Mr. President: It strikes me that in section eight the word "common," in the last line, should be made "public." I make the motion to strike out "common" and insert "public."

THE PRESIDENT. It can be done by unanimous consent.

MR. BROWN. I object.

MR. TULLY. I object.

THE PRESIDENT. Objections being made, it cannot be done.

MR. McCALLUM. I make the point of order that it is perfectly legitimate revision to strike out the word "common" and insert the word "public." This Convention has now control over the matter of revision.

THE PRESIDENT. That question has been denied.

MR. McCALLUM. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

THE PRESIDENT. Nobody joins you in the appeal.

MR. SHAFTER. If the Convention will allow me to put in the word——

MR. TULLY. No.

MR. SHAFTER. That is the end of it then.

STATE INSTITUTIONS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will take up the next report.

Following is the article as reported by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE X.

STATE INSTITUTIONS AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

SECTION 1. There shall be a State Board of Prison Directors to consist of five persons, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall hold office for ten years, except that the first appointed shall, in such manner as the Legislature may direct, be so classified that the term of one person so appointed shall expire at the end of each two years during the first ten years, and vacancies occurring shall be filled in like manner. The appointee to a vacancy, occurring before the expiration of a term, shall hold only for the unexpired term of his predecessor. The Governor shall have the power to remove either of the Directors for misconduct, incompetency, or neglect of duty, after an opportunity to be heard upon written charges.

SEC. 2. The Board of Directors shall have the charge and superintendence of the State Prisons, and shall possess such powers, and perform such duties, in respect to other penal and reformatory institutions of the State, as the Legislature may prescribe.

SEC. 3. The Board shall appoint the Warden and Clerk, and determine the other necessary officers of the prisons. The Board shall have power to remove the Wardens and Clerks for misconduct, incompetency, or neglect of duty. All other officers and employés of the prisons shall be appointed by the Warden thereof, and be removed at his pleasure.

SEC. 4. The members of the Board shall receive no compensation other than reasonable traveling and other expenses incurred while engaged in the performance of official duties, to be audited as the Legislature may direct.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall pass such laws as may be necessary to further define and regulate the powers and duties of the Board, Wardens, and Clerks, and to carry into effect the provisions of this article.

SEC. 6. After the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, the labor of convicts shall not be let out by contract to any person, copartnership, company, or corporation, and the Legislature shall, by law, provide for the working of convicts for the benefit of the State.

The article was referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

CITY, COUNTY, AND TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.

THE PRESIDENT. The next article is on city, county, and township organization.

FoHowing is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE XI.

CITIES, COUNTIES, AND TOWNS.

SECTION 1. The several counties, as they now exist, are hereby recognized as legal subdivisions of this State.

SEC. 2. No county seat shall be removed unless two thirds of the qualified electors of the county, voting on the proposition at a general election, shall vote in favor of such removal. A proposition of removal shall not be submitted in the same county more than once in four years.

SEC. 3. No new county shall be established which shall reduce any county to a population of less than eight thousand; nor shall a new county be formed containing a less population than five thousand; nor shall any line thereof pass within five miles of the county seat of any county proposed to be divided. Every county which shall be enlarged or created from territory taken from any other county or counties, shall be liable for a just proportion of the existing debts and liabilities of the county or counties from which such territory shall be taken.

SEC. 4. The Legislature shall establish a system of county governments which shall be uniform throughout the State; and by general laws shall provide for township organization, under which any county may organize whenever a majority of the qualified electors of such county, voting at a general election, shall so determine; and, whenever a county shall adopt township organization, the assessment and collection of the revenue shall be made, and the business of such county and the local affairs of the several townships therein shall be managed and transacted in the manner prescribed by such general laws.

SEC. 5. The Legislature, by general and uniform laws, shall provide for the election or appointment, in the several counties, of Boards of Supervisors, Sheriffs, County Clerks, District Attorneys, and such other county, township, and municipal officers as public convenience may require, and shall prescribe their duties, and fix their terms of office. It shall regulate the compensation of all such officers, in proportion to duties, and for this purpose may classify the counties by population; and it shall provide for the strict accountability of county and township officers for all fees which may be collected by them, and for all public and municipal moneys which may be paid to them, or officially come into their possession.

SEC. 6. Corporations for municipal purposes shall not be created by special laws; but the Legislature, by general laws, shall provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification, in proportion to population, of cities and towns, which laws may be altered, amended, or repealed. Cities and towns heretofore organized or incorporated may become organized under such general laws, whenever a majority of the electors voting at a general election shall so determine, and shall organize in conformity therewith; and cities or towns heretofore or hereafter organized, and all charters thereof framed or adopted by authority of this Constitution, shall be subject to and controlled by [such] general laws.

SEC. 7. City and county governments may be merged and consolidated into one municipal government, with one set of officers, and may be incorporated under general laws providing for the incorporation and organization of corporations for municipal purposes. The provisions of this Constitution applicable to cities, and also those applicable to counties, so far as not inconsistent or not prohibited to cities, shall be applicable to such consolidated government. In consolidated city and county governments, of more than one hundred thousand population, there shall be two Boards of Supervisors or Houses of Legislation—one of which, to consist of twelve persons, shall be elected by general ticket from the city and county at large, and shall hold office for the term of four years, but shall be so classified that after the first election only six shall be elected every two years; the other, to consist of twelve persons, shall be elected every two years, and shall hold office for the term of two years. Any [casual] vacancy occurring in the office of Supervisor, in either Board, shall be filled by the Mayor or other chief executive officer.

SEC. 8. Any city containing a population of more than one hundred thousand inhabitants may frame a charter for its own government, consistent with and subject to the Constitution and laws of this State, by causing a Board of fifteen freeholders, who shall have been for at least five years, qualified electors thereof to be elected by the qualified voters of such city, at any general or special election, whose duty it shall be, within ninety days after such election, to prepare and propose a charter for such city, which shall be signed in duplicate by the members of such Board, or a majority of them, and returned, one copy thereof to the Mayor, or chief executive officer of such city, and the other to the Recorder of Deeds of the county. Such proposed charter shall then be published in two daily papers of [largest] general circulation in such city for at least twenty days, and within not less than thirty days after such publication it shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such city at a general or special election, and if a majority of such qualified electors voting thereat shall ratify the same, it shall thereafter be submitted to the Legislature for its approval or rejection as a whole, without power of alteration or amendment, and if approved by a majority vote of the members elected to each House, it shall become the charter of such city, or if such city be consolidated with a county [in government], then of such city and county, and shall become the organic law thereof, and supersede any existing charter and all amendments thereof, and all special laws inconsistent with such charter. A copy of such charter, certified by the Mayor, or chief executive officer, and authenticated by the seal of such city, setting forth the submission of such charter to the electors, and its ratification by them, shall be made in duplicate and deposited, one in the office of the Secretary of State, the other, after being recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the county, among the archives of the city, [and thereafter] all Courts shall take judicial notice thereof. The charter so ratified may be amended at intervals of not less than two years, by proposals therefor, submitted by legislative authority of the city to the qualified voters thereof, at a general or special election held at least sixty days after the publication of such proposals, and ratified by at least three fifths of the qualified electors voting thereat, and approved by the Legislature as herein provided for the approval of the charter. In submitting any such charter, or amendment thereto, any alternative article or proposition may be presented for the choice of the voters, and may be voted on separately without prejudice to others.

SEC. 9. The compensation [or fees] of any county, city, town, or municipal officer, shall not be increased after his election or during his term of office; nor shall the term of any such officer be extended beyond the period for which he is elected or appointed.

SEC. 10. No county, city, town, or other public or municipal corporation, nor the inhabitants thereof, nor the property therein, shall be released or discharged from its [their] or their [its] proportionate share of taxes to be levied for State purposes, nor shall commutation for such taxes be authorized in any form whatsoever.

SEC. 11. Any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws.

SEC. 12. The Legislature shall have no power to impose taxes upon counties, cities, towns, or other public or municipal corporations, or upon the inhabitants or property thereof, for county, city, town, or other municipal purposes, but may, by general laws, vest in the corporate authorities thereof the power to assess and collect taxes for such purposes.

SEC. 13. The Legislature shall not delegate to any special commission, private corporation, company, association, or individual, any power to make, control, appropriate, supervise, or in way interfere with, any county, city, town, or municipal improvement, money, property, or effects, whether held in trust or otherwise, or to levy taxes or assessments, or perform any municipal functions whatever.

SEC. 14. No State office shall be continued or created in any county, city, town, or other municipality, for the inspection, measurement, or graduation of any merchandise, manufacture, or commodity; but such county, city, town, or municipality may, when authorized by general law, [and the public interests demands it,] appoint such officers.

SEC. 15. Private property shall not be taken or sold for the payment of the corporate debt of any political or municipal corporation.

SEC. 16. All moneys, assessments, and taxes belonging to or collected for the use of any county, city, town, or other public or municipal corporation, coming into the hands of any officer thereof, shall, immediately [on the receipt thereof,] be deposited with the Treasurer, or other legal depositary, to the credit of such city, town, or other corporation respectively, for the benefit of the funds to which they respectively belong.

SEC. 17. The making of profit out of county, city, town, or other public money, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, by any officer having the possession or control thereof, shall be a felony, and shall be prosecuted and punished as prescribed by law.

SEC. 18. No county, city, town, township, Board of Education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability in any manner, or for any purpose, exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for it [them respectively] for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the qualified electors [voters] thereof voting at an election to be held for that purpose, nor unless, before or at the time of incurring such indebtedness, provisions shall be made for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on such indebtedness as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal thereof within twenty years from the time of contracting the same. Any indebtedness or liability incurred contrary to this provision shall be void.

SEC. 19. No public work or improvement of any description whatsoever shall be done or made in any city, in, upon, or about the streets thereof, or otherwise, the cost and expense of which is made chargeable or may be assessed upon private property by special assessment, unless an estimate of such cost and expense shall be made, and an assessment in proportion to benefits, on the property to be effected or benefited, shall be levied, collected and paid into the city treasury before such work or improvement shall be commenced, or any contract for letting or doing the same authorized or performed. In any city where there are no public works owned and controlled by the municipality, for supplying the same with water or artificial light, any individual, or any company, duly incorporated for such purpose under and by authority of the laws of this State, shall, under the direction of the Superintendent of Streets, or other officer in control thereof, and under such general regulations as the municipality may prescribe for damages and indemnity for damages, have the privilege of using the public streets and thoroughfares thereof, and of laying down pipes and conduits therein, and connections therewith, so far as may be necessary for introducing into and supplying such city and its inhabitants either with gaslight or other illuminating light, or with fresh water for domestic and all other purposes, upon the condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges thereof.

The amendments were concurred in, and the article referred to the Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

CORPORATIONS OTHER THAN MUNICIPAL.

THE PRESIDENT. The next article is on corporations other than municipal.

The following is the article as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Revision and Adjustment:

ARTICLE XII.

CORPORATIONS.

SECTION 1. Corporations may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special Act. All laws now in force in this State concerning corporations, and all laws that may be hereafter passed pursuant to this section, may be altered from time to time or repealed.

[SEC. 2. Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the corporators and other means as may be prescribed by law.]

SEC. 3. Each stockholder of a corporation or joint stock association shall be individually and personally liable for such proportion of all its debts and liabilities, contracted or incurred during the time he was a stockholder, as the amount of stock or shares owned by him bears to the whole of the subscribed capital stock or shares of the corporation or association. The Directors or Trustees of corporations and joint stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation or joint stock association during the term of office of such Director or Trustee.

SEC. 4. The term corporations, as used in this article, shall be construed to include all associations and joint stock companies having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships; and all corporations shall have the right to sue, and shall be subject to be sued, in all Courts, in like cases as natural persons.

SEC. 5. The Legislature shall have no power to pass any Act granting any charter for banking purposes, but corporations or associations may be formed for such purposes under general laws. No [but] corporation, association, or individual shall [make,] issue, or put in circulation, as money, anything but the lawful money of the United States.

SEC. 6. All existing charters, grants, franchises, special or exclusive privileges, under which an actual and bona fide organization shall not have taken place, and business been commenced in good faith, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall thereafter have no validity.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall not extend any franchise or charter, nor [or] remit the forfeiture of any franchise or charter of any corporation now existing, or which shall hereafter exist under the laws of this State.

The word "property," as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things real, personal, and mixed, capable of private ownership [real, personal, and mixed]; provided, that growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation. The taxes so levied shall be a lien upon the property and security, and may be paid by either party to such security; if paid by the owner of the security, the tax so levied upon the property affected thereby shall become a part of the debt so secured; if the owner of the property shall pay the tax so levied on such security, it shall constitute a payment thereon, and to the extent of such payment a full discharge thereof; provided, that if any such security or indebtedness shall be paid by any such debtor or debtors, after assessment and before the tax levy, the amount of such levy may likewise be retained by such debtor or debtors, and shall be computed according to the tax levy for the preceding year.

SEC. 10. All property, except as hereinafter in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, or district in which it is situated, in the manner prescribed by law. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this State, [The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads in this State, operated in more than one county,] shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization, at their actual value, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts; and all other property of railroads shall be assessed by the counties in which such property is situated.

The officers of the several counties of this State whose duty it is, under the law, to receive and canvass the returns from the several precincts of their respective counties, as well as of the City and County of San Francisco, shall meet at the usual places of meeting for such purposes on the first Monday after said election. If, at the time of meeting, the returns from each precinct in the county in which the polls were opened have been received, the Board must then and there proceed to canvass the returns; but if all the returns have not been received, the canvass must be postponed from time to time until all the returns are received, or until the second Monday after said election, when they shall proceed to make out returns of the votes cast for and against the new Constitution; and the proceedings of said Boards shall be the same as those prescribed for like Boards in the case of an election for Governor. Upon the completion of said canvass and returns, the said Board shall immediately certify the same, in the usual form, to the Governor of the State of California.

SEC. 9. The Governor of the State of California shall, as soon as the returns of said election shall be received by him, or within thirty days after said election, in the presence and with the assistance of the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, open and compute all the returns received of votes cast for and against the new Constitution. If, by such examination and computation, it is ascertained that a majority of the whole number of votes cast at such election is [be] in favor of such new Constitution, the Executive of this State shall, by his proclamation, declare such new Constitution to be the Constitution of the State of California, and that it shall take effect and be in force on the days hereinafter specified.

SEC. 10. In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the term of all officers elected at the first election under the same shall be, respectively, one year shorter than the terms as fixed by law or by [as in] this Constitution [provided]; and the successors of all such officers shall be elected at the last election before the expiration of the terms as in this section provided. The first officers chosen after the adoption of this Constitution shall be elected at the time and in the manner now provided by law. Judicial officers, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall be elected at the time and in the manner that State officers are elected.

SEC. 11. This Constitution shall take effect and be in force on and after the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at twelve o'clock meridian, so far as the same relates to the election of all officers, the commencement of their terms of office [the terms of officers], and the meeting of the Legislature. In all other respects, and for all other purposes, this Constitution shall take effect on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, at twelve o'clock meridian.

SEC. 12. All laws relative to the present judicial system of the State shall be applicable to the judicial system created by this Constitution until changed by legislation.

Amendments adopted and article referred to Committee on Reporting and Printing for enrollment.

THE PRESIDENT. This concludes the Constitution, gentlemen. It has all gone to the Committee on Enrollment. The Convention should now pass upon the preamble.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I move the previous question on the preamble.

THE SECRETARY read:

"PREAMBLE.

"We, the people of the State of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure and perpetuate its blessings, do establish this Constitution."

Adopted.

RESOLUTION.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That so soon as the Constitution agreed upon shall be reported as correctly enrolled it shall be submitted to the Convention for its action thereon as a whole, and the vote shall be taken by ayes and noes; and, if adopted, that for the purpose of authenticating the same, it shall be signed by the President and Secretary of the Convention, and by every member thereof present. That the Secretary of State allow any member of this Convention who has not signed the Constitution to do so within thirty days after adjournment.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I think that the resolution is somewhat defective, but we will have an opportunity during the recess hour to examine it, and I shall propose an amendment to it.

RECESS.

The hour having arrived, the Convention took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention reassembled at two o'clock P. M., President Hoge in the chair.

Roll called and quorum present.

[Mr. Murphy in the chair.]

RESOLUTION ON AUTHENTICATION.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I offer a resolution as a substitute for the resolution offered by the gentleman from Sacramento, Mr. Edgerton.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That as soon as the Constitution agreed upon by this Convention shall have been declared to be correctly enrolled, the same shall be authenticated by the signature of the President and Secretary of the Convention.

Resolved further, That the members of the Convention be requested to affix their signatures to the Constitution when so authenticated.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: The resolution of the gentleman from Sacramento requires the vote to be upon the Constitution as a whole. My resolution omits that. It further provides that the authentication shall be by the President and Secretary. The Act calling the Convention makes no provision for authentication. It is therefore left to the discretion of this body. The other resolution requires that it should be authenticated, not only by the signatures of the officers, but by the signatures of the members—all the members present, I believe. Some of them might refuse to sign, and then some question might arise as to whether the Constitution had been properly authenticated or not. I propose to avoid all such questions.

MR. EDGERTON. Mr. President: During the recess I have taken some pains to look up precedents. I find it is the usual course to be signed by the President, and then attested by the Secretary. Then follows the signatures of members, indicating who were in favor and who were against the Constitution. Now, there is one marked difference between the resolutions. My resolution provides that the Constitution shall be voted on as a whole. I wish some gentleman would produce elementary authority as to the proper mode of proceding upon the final vote.

MR. CAMPBELL. My resolution does not touch that matter at all.

MR. EDGERTON. That is what I complain of. As far as I am concerned, I desire my constituents to know what my position is. As far as gentlemen refusing to sign it, why might not the President refuse to sign it, or the Secretary? It binds nobody.

MR. MCCALLUM. Mr. President: I propose to offer this as an amendment to the amendment:

Resolved, That the vote shall be taken by ayes and noes on agreeing to and adopting the new Constitution when the same shall have been enrolled;

Second—That the Constitution shall then be authenticated by the President and Secretary of this Convention, and that the members be requested to sign the same.

Third—That members not now present may sign the same in the presence of the Secretary of State at any time within thirty days of this date.

The object in offering this amendment is this: I am in favor of the idea presented by my colleague. I have presented here three different propositions. I have looked up the precedents, and it seems to be the general practice to adopt the Constitution as a whole. Therefore I have embodied that which my colleague has left out. Now, my resolution is better than either of the others in that it provides that the Constitution shall be authenticated by the votes of all the members present. It could not be authenticated as they require unless every member present should see proper to sign it, and a question of its validity might be raised by some members refusing to sign it. This embraces the whole matter in three distinct propositions. I submit that this will be the better course to pursue.

MR. LAINE. Mr. President: I am satisfied from the reading of the Constitution that we must act on this as a whole, otherwise we have no instrument that we are authorized to submit to the people. I find upon examining various Constitutions that seems to have been the rule. I find that laid down by Jameson, in his work on "Constitutional Conventions." I think the original proposition of the gentleman from Sacramento is better than either of the substitutes.

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I submit that this Constitution is now adopted, and that if every member present was now to vote against it, it could not affect the result. Therefore it is that I favor the resolution of the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell. The first proposition would probably raise a question as to whether it had been authenticated if any of the members should fail to sign it. We do not choose to put ourselves in that position.

MR. TINNIN. I raise the point of order that the resolution offered by Mr. Edgerton is out of order, for the reason that it would allow of a change being made, and the President has ruled that no amendment can be made on third reading, and the Convention sustained that ruling.

THE CHAIR. The point of order is overruled.

MR. CAMPBELL. Mr. President: I hope the amendment of my colleague will not be adopted. These questions are not necessarily connected with one another. There seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether we are compelled to vote on the Constitution as a whole, or not. I want to separate the proposition from the question of authentication.

MR. MCCALLUM. I ask leave then to withdraw my resolution till the other is voted on.

Leave granted.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: I, for one, hope that there will be a resolution adopted whereby the whole of this Convention will vote upon the adoption or rejection of this Constitution. If you are for the Constitution, come up and vote for it. I am sure that at least two thirds of this Convention will be found in favor of it. I think we should adopt it as a whole; that is the way it is generally done, and I hope it may be done that way this time.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I agree with the gentleman who has just taken his seat; I am also in favor of voting on it as a whole, but I object to the resolution of the gentleman from Sacramento in reference to the mode of authentication; the latter part of the resolution might raise a serious question as to the authentication of the instrument, because it requires the signature of every member present. I have no objection to men signing it in the Secretary of State's office, who are now necessarily absent, but that too might delay the publishing of the instrument and therefore I object to it.

MR. CROSS. Mr. President: If a majority of this Convention are not in favor of this Constitution, I think we had better not submit it to the people. If we are not willing to father the instrument, how can we expect the people to indorse it? The Constitution provides that we shall submit this instrument to the people, not in articles, but as a Constitution, and certainly we ourselves must adopt it, not by articles, but as a whole. I find that precedent is in favor of having the names of members attached. The Constitution of the United States itself was authenticated in that way, and I find that the Constitutions of nearly all the States are signed in that way. As to the proposition that part of the members would withhold their names when they are required for the purpose of authentication, seems to me absurd. The President himself might be opposed to the Constitution, and yet when his signature is necessary to authenticate it, are we to suppose that he will withhold it?

MR. GRACE. Mr. President: I am in favor of the resolution offered by Mr. Campbell; if he had not offered that, I should renew my motion to table the resolution of Mr. Edgerton. I am opposed to leaving this Constitution open for thirty days for members to come in and sign. I am in favor of this Constitution as a whole, and I am willing to say so now, though there are things in it which I opposed. Taken as a whole I think it is an improvement on the old; we have instituted some great reforms, and I want to see it adopted.

MR. BROWN. Mr. President: It appears to me this subject has been discussed very nearly enough. Now, I do not see why the President and Secretary should not be enough to authenticate it, and then we can extend the privilege to members of signing it. As to adopting it as a whole, who ever heard of the Legislature, after having passed a number of bills, winding up the session by declaring that those were the statutes of that year. I fully agree with the gentleman from Los Angeles in his views on this subject.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. HALE. Mr. President: I believe the members of this body are sufficiently enlightened, and are ready to vote, and I now move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. McConnell, Chapman, West, and Lindow.

THE CHAIR. The question is: Shall the main question be now put? Carried, by a vote of 65 ayes to 34 noes.

THE CHAIR. The question is on the adoption of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Alameda, Mr. Campbell.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Lindow, Beerstecher, Grace, Doyle, and Van Dyke.

MR. WEBSTER. This is a matter of considerable responsibility, and it is eminently proper that it should pass. It will require a very large amount of stamps to send out this Constitution. THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: I hold in my hand the Constitution of the State of California, adopted by this Convention, correctly enrolled upon parchment.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen will please come to order; members will be seated.

MR. AYERS. I beg leave to submit the same to this honorable body for such further action as they may deem proper.

THE PRESIDENT. I understand the Chairman of the committee to report this as correctly enrolled?

MR. AYERS. Yes, sir.

MR. WHITE. I have no Constitution on my desk.

THE PRESIDENT. Does the Convention desire to have the Constitution read?

[Cries of "Read, read!" "No, no!" "Read, read!"]

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed to read the Constitution as it is enrolled, if there is no objection. The Convention will come to order, so that the reading can be heard all over the hall.

THE SECRETARY read:

CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

PREAMBLE AND DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

PREAMBLE.

We, the People of the State of California, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure and perpetuate its blessings, do establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing, and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

SEC. 2. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people, and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

SEC. 3. The State of California is an inseparable part of the American Union, and the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land.

SEC. 4. The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be guaranteed in this State; and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness or juror on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State.

SEC. 5. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require its suspension.

SEC. 6. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed; nor shall cruel or unusual punishments be inflicted. Witnesses shall not be unreasonably detained, or confined in any room where criminals are actually imprisoned.

SEC. 7. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate; but in civil actions three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. A trial by jury may be waived in all criminal cases not amounting to felony, by the consent of both parties, expressed in open Court, and in civil actions by the consent of the parties, signified in such manner as may be prescribed by law. In civil actions, and cases of misdemeanor, the jury may consist of twelve, or of any number less than twelve upon which the parties may agree in open Court.

SEC. 8. Offenses heretofore required to be prosecuted by indictment shall be prosecuted by information, after examination and commitment by a Magistrate, or by indictment, with or without such examination and commitment, as may be prescribed by law. A Grand Jury shall be drawn and summoned at least once a year in each county.

SEC. 9. Every citizen may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right; and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions for libels, the truth may be given in evidence to the jury; and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact. Indictments found or information laid for publications in newspapers shall be tried in the county where such newspapers have their publication office, or in the county where the party alleged to be libeled resided at the time of the alleged publication, unless the place of trial shall be changed for good cause.

SEC. 10. The people shall have the right to freely assemble together to consult for the common good, to instruct their representatives, and to petition the Legislature for redress of grievances.

SEC. 11. All laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation.

SEC. 12. The military shall be subordinate to the civil power. No standing army shall be kept up by this State in time of peace, and no soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in the manner prescribed by law.

SEC. 13. In criminal prosecutions, in any Court whatever, the party accused shall have the right to a speedy and public trial; to have the process of the Court to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and to appear and defend, in person and with counsel. No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense; nor be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. The Legislature shall have power to provide for the taking, in the presence of the party accused and his counsel, of depositions of witnesses in criminal cases, other than cases of homicide, when there is reason to believe that the witness, from inability or other cause, will not attend at the trial.

SEC. 14. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation having been first made to or paid into Court for the owner, and no right of way shall be appropriated to the use of any corporation other than municipal until full compensation therefor be first made in money or ascertained and paid into Court for the owner, irrespective of any benefit from any improvement proposed by such corporation, which compensation shall be ascertained by a jury, unless a jury be waived, as in other civil cases in a Court of record, as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt in any civil action, on mesne or final process, unless in cases of fraud, nor in civil actions for torts, except in cases of willful injury to person or property; and no person shall be imprisoned for a militia fine in time of peace.

SEC. 16. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts shall ever be passed.

SEC. 17. Foreigners of the white race, or of African descent, eligible to become citizens of the United States under the naturalization laws thereof, while bona fide residents of this State, shall have the same rights in respect to the acquisition, possession, enjoyment, transmission, and inheritance of property as native-born citizens.

SEC. 18. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, unless for the punishment of crime, shall ever be tolerated in this State.

SEC. 19. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable seizures and searches, shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue, but on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons and things to be seized.

SEC. 20. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against it, adhering to its enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the evidence of two witnesses to the same overt act, or confession in open Court.

SEC. 21. No special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the Legislature; nor shall any citizen, or class of citizens, be granted privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not be granted to all citizens.

SEC. 22. The provisions of this Constitution are mandatory and prohibitory, unless by express words they are declared to be otherwise.

SEC. 23. This enumeration of rights shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.

SEC. 24. No property qualification shall ever be required for any person to vote or hold office.

MR. MURPHY. I move to dispense with the further reading.

MR. BIGGS. I declare that we have a right to demand the reading of the bill.

MR. MURPHY. Did you ever see an enrolled bill read in your life?

MR. HAGER. Mr. President: I think this is a matter of so much importance I think it should be read before we act upon it.

[Cries of "ayes and noes," "read," "no, no," etc.]

MR. HOWARD, of Los Angeles. Mr. President: I take it for granted that we could not alter or change anything; therefore I see no sense in reading it over.

MR. BIGGS. By unanimous consent we can do anything.

MR. HOWARD. There will be no unanimous consent.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is on dispensing with the further reading.

MR. BIGGS. I rise to a point of order. When a member demands the reading of an instrument, they have a right to have it read.

THE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken. The question is on dispensing with the reading.

The ayes and noes were demanded by Messrs. Murphy, Burt, Cross, Barry, and McFarland.

The roll was called, and the motion was lost by the following vote:

SEC. 2. Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest on the days of election, during their attendance at such election, going to and returning therefrom.

SEC. 3. No elector shall be obliged to perform militia duty on the day of election, except in time of war or public danger.

SEC. 4. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this State or of the United States, or of the high seas; nor while a student at any seminary of learning; nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum, at public expense; nor while confined in any public prison.

SEC. 5. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

ARTICLE III.

DISTRIBUTION OF POWERS.

SECTION 1. The powers of the Government of the State of California shall be divided into three separate departments—the legislative, executive, and judicial; and no person charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of the others, except as in this Constitution expressly directed or permitted.

ARTICLE IV.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

SECTION 1. The legislative power of this State shall be vested in a Senate and Assembly, which shall be designated The Legislature of the State of California, and the enacting clause of every law shall be as follows: "The People of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows."

SEC. 2. The sessions of the Legislature shall commence at twelve o'clock M., on the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding the election of its members, and, after the election held in the year eighteen hundred and eighty, shall be biennial, unless the Governor shall, in the interim, convene the Legislature by proclamation. No pay shall be allowed to members for a longer time than sixty days, except for the first session after the adoption of this Constitution, for which they may be allowed pay for one hundred days. And no bill shall be introduced, in either House, after the expiration of ninety days from the commencement of the first session, nor after fifty days after the commencement of each succeeding session, without the consent of two thirds of the members thereof.

SEC. 3. Members of the Assembly shall be elected in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, at the time and in the manner now provided by law. The second election of members of the Assembly after the adoption of this Constitution shall be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, eighteen hundred and eighty. Thereafter, members of the Assembly shall be chosen biennially, and their term of office shall be two years; and each election shall be on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, unless otherwise ordered by the Legislature.

SEC. 4. Senators shall be chosen for the term of four years, at the same time and places as members of the Assembly, and no person shall be a member of the Senate or Assembly who has not been a citizen and inhabitant of the State three years, and of the district for which he shall be chosen one year, next before his election.

SEC. 5. The Senate shall consist of forty members, and the Assembly of eighty members, to be elected by districts, numbered as hereinafter provided. The seats of the twenty Senators elected in the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two, from the odd numbered districts, shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, so that one half of the Senators shall be elected every two years; provided, that all the Senators elected at the first election under this Constitution shall hold office for the term of three years.

SEC. 6. For the purpose of choosing members of the Legislature, the State shall be divided into forty Senatorial and eighty Assembly districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and composed of contiguous territory, to be called Senatorial and Assembly districts. Each Senatorial district shall choose one Senator, and each Assembly district shall choose one member of Assembly. The Senatorial districts shall be numbered from one to forty, inclusive, in numerical order, and the Assembly districts shall be numbered from one to eighty in the same order, commencing at the northern boundary of the State, and ending at the southern boundary thereof. In the formation of such districts, no county, or city and county, shall be divided, unless it contain sufficient population within itself to form two or more districts; nor shall a part of any county, or of any city and county, be united with any other county, or city and county, in forming any district. The census taken under the direction of the Congress of the United States, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and every ten years thereafter, shall be the basis of fixing and adjusting the legislative districts; and the Legislature shall, at its first session after each census, adjust such districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve them as near equal in population as may be. But in making such adjustment no persons who are not eligible to become citizens of the United States, under the naturalization laws, shall be counted as forming a part of the population of any district. Until such districting as herein provided for shall be made, Senators and Assemblymen shall be elected by the districts according to the apportionment now provided for by law.

SEC. 7. Each House shall choose its officers, and judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its members.

Digitized by Google

SEC. 8. A majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each House may provide.

SEC. 9. Each House shall determine the rule of its proceeding, and may, with the concurrence of two thirds of all the members elected, expel a member.

MR. EDGERTON. I move that the further reading be dispensed with. It is not possible that there can be any error in the Constitution to be corrected, for the copies which members are comparing it with were printed from the same forms of type as the enrolled copy from which the Secretary is reading.

MR. LARKIN. I want to hear the Constitution read, every word of it.

MR. HAGER. I am looking at the report of the Committee on Adjustment to see whether it corresponds.

MR. HERRINGTON. I rise to a point of order. This motion has been made and voted down.

THE PRESIDENT. Overruled. The question is on the motion to dispense with the reading.

If any bill presented to the Governor contains several items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more items, while approving other portions of the bill. In such case, he shall append to the bill, at the time of signing it, a statement of the items to which he objects, and the reasons therefor, and the appropriation so objected to shall not take effect unless passed over the Governor's veto, as hereinbefore provided. A copy of such charter, certified by the Mayor, or chief executive officer, and authenticated by the seal of such city, setting forth the submission of such charter to the electors and its ratification by them, shall be made in duplicate and deposited, one in the office of the Secretary of State, the other, after being recorded in the office of the Recorder of deeds of the county, among the archives of the city; all Courts shall take judicial notice thereof. The charter so ratified may be amended at intervals of not less than two years, by proposals therefor, submitted by legislative authority of the city to the qualified voters thereof, at a general or special election held at least sixty days after the publication of such proposals, and ratified by at least three fifths of the qualified electors voting thereat, and approved by the Legislature as herein provided for the approval of the charter. The Directors or Trustees of corporations and joint-stock associations shall be jointly and severally liable to the creditors and stockholders for all moneys embezzled or misappropriated by the officers of such corporation or joint-stock association, during the term of office of such Director or Trustee.

with its road to intersect, connect with, or cross any other railroad, and shall receive and transport each the other's passengers, tonnage, and cars, without delay or discrimination.

SEC. 18. SEC. 19. No railroad or other transportation company shall grant free passes, or passes or tickets at a discount, to any person holding any office of honor, trust or profit in this State; and the acceptance of any such pass or ticket, by a member of the Legislature, or any public officer, other than Railroad Commissioner, shall work a forfeiture of his office.

SEC. 20. No railroad company or other common carrier shall combine or make any contract with the owners of any vessel that leaves port or makes port in this State, or with any common carrier, by which combination or contract the earnings of one doing the carrying are to be shared by the other not doing the carrying. And whenever a railroad corporation shall, for the purpose of competing with any other common carrier, lower its rates for transportation of passengers or freight from one point to another, such reduced rates shall not be again raised or increased from such standard without the consent of the governmental authority, in which shall be vested the power to regulate fares and freights.

SEC. 21. No discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation shall be made by any railroad or other transportation company between places or persons, or in the facilities for the transportation of the same classes of freight or passengers within this State, or coming from or going to any other State. Persons and property transported over any railroad, or by any other transportation company or individual, shall be delivered at any station, landing, or port, at charges not exceeding the charges for the transportation of persons and property of the same class, in the same direction, to any more distant station, port, or landing. Excursion and commutation tickets may be issued at special rates.

SEC. 22. The State shall be divided into three districts as nearly equal in population as practicable, in each of which one Railroad Commissioner shall be elected by the qualified electors thereof at the regular gubernatorial elections, whose salary shall be fixed by law, and whose term of office shall be four years, commencing on the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election. Said Commissioners shall be qualified electors of this State and of the district from which they are elected, and shall not be interested in any railroad corporation, or other transportation company, as stockholder, creditor, agent, attorney, or employé; and the act of a majority of said Commissioners shall be deemed the act of said Commission. Said Commissioners shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to establish rates of charges for the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad or other transportation companies, and publish the same from time to time, with such changes as they may make; to examine the books, records and papers of all railroad and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have power to issue subpœnas and all other necessary process; to hear and determine complaints against railroad and other transportation companies, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt of their orders and processes, in the same manner and to the same extent as Courts of record, and enforce their decisions and correct abuses through the medium of the Courts. Said Commissioners shall prescribe a uniform system of accounts to be kept by all such corporations and companies. Any railroad corporation or transportation company which shall fail or refuse to conform to such rates as shall be established by such Commissioners, or shall charge rates in excess thereof, or shall fail to keep their accounts in accordance with the system prescribed by the Commission, shall be fined not exceeding twenty thousand dollars for each offense, and every officer, agent, or employé of any such corporation or company, who shall demand or receive rates in excess thereof, or who shall in any manner violate the provisions of this section, shall be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars or be imprisoned in the County Jail not exceeding one year. In all controversies, civil or criminal, the rates of fares and freights established by said Commission shall be deemed conclusively just and reasonable, and in any action against such corporation or company for damages sustained by charging excessive rates, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damage, may, in the discretion of the Judge or jury, recover exemplary damages. Said Commission shall report to the Governor, annually, their proceedings, and such other facts as may be deemed important. Nothing in this section shall prevent individuals from maintaining actions against any of such companies. The Legislature may, in addition to any penalties herein prescribed, enforce this article by forfeiture of charter or otherwise, and may confer such further powers on the Commissioners as shall be necessary to enable them to perform the duties enjoined on them in this and the foregoing section. The Legislature shall have power, by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each House, to remove any one or more of said Commissioners from office, for dereliction of duty, or corruption, or incompetency; and whenever for any cause a vacancy in office shall occur in said Commission, the Governor shall fill the same by the appointment of a qualified person thereto, who shall hold office for the residue of the unexpired term, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified.

ARTICLE XIII.

REVENUE AND TAXATION.

SECTION 1. All property in the State, not exempt under the laws of the United States, shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as provided by law. The word "property," as used in this article and section, is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things, real, personal, and mixed, capable of private ownership; provided, that growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation. The Legislature may provide, except in the case of credits secured by mortgage or trust deed, for a deduction from credits of debts due to bona fide residents of this State.

SEC. 2. Land, and the improvements thereon, shall be separately assessed. Cultivated and uncultivated land, of the same quality, and similarly situated, shall be assessed at the same value.

SEC. 3. Every tract of land containing more than six hundred and forty acres and which has been sectionized by the United States Government, shall be assessed, for the purposes of taxation, by sections or fractions of sections. The Legislature shall provide by law for the assessment, in small tracts, of all lands not sectionized by the United States Government.

SEC. 4. A mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or other obligation by which a debt is secured, shall, for the purposes of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an interest in the property affected thereby. Except as to railroad and other quasi-public corporations, in case of debts so secured, the value of the property affected by such mortgage, deed of trust, contract, or obligation, less the value of such security, shall be assessed and taxed to the owner of the property, and the value of such security shall be assessed and taxed to the owner thereof, in the county, city, or district in which the property affected thereby is situate. The taxes so levied shall be a lien upon the property and security, and may be paid by either party to such security; if paid by the owner of the security, the tax so levied upon the property affected thereby shall become a part of the debt so secured; if the owner of the property shall pay the tax so levied on such security, it shall constitute a payment thereon, and to the extent of such payment a full discharge thereof; provided, that if any such security or indebtedness shall be paid by any such debtor or debtors, after assessment and before the tax levy, the amount of such levy may likewise be retained by such debtor or debtors, and shall be computed according to the tax levy for the preceding year.

SEC. 5. Every contract hereafter made, by which a debtor is obligated to pay any tax or assessment on money loaned, or on any mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien, shall, as to any interest specified therein, and as to such tax or assessment, be null and void.

SEC. 6. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered or suspended by any grant or contract to which the State shall be a party.

SEC. 7. The Legislature shall have the power to provide by law for the payment of all taxes on real property by installments.

SEC. 8. The Legislature shall by law require each taxpayer in this State to make and deliver to the County Assessor, annually, a statement under oath, setting forth specifically all the real and personal property owned by such taxpayer, or in his possession, or under his control, at twelve o'clock meridian, on the first Monday of March.

SEC. 9. A State Board of Equalization, consisting of one member from each Congressional district in this State, shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts, at the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, whose term of office, after those first elected, shall be four years, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property of the several counties in the State for the purposes of taxation. The Controller of State shall be ex officio a member of the Board. The Boards of Supervisors of the several counties of the State shall constitute Boards of Equalization for their respective counties, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of the taxable property in the county for the purpose of taxation; provided, such State and County Boards of Equalization are hereby authorized and empowered, under such rules of notice as the County Boards may prescribe as to the county assessments, and under such rules of notice as the State Board may prescribe as to the action of the State Board, to increase or lower the entire assessment roll or any assessment contained therein, so as to equalize the assessment of the property contained in said assessment roll, and make the assessment conform to the true value in money of the property contained in said roll.

SEC. 10. All property, except as hereinafter in this section provided, shall be assessed in the county, city, city and county, town, township, or district in which it is situated, in the manner prescribed by law. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails, and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this State, shall be assessed by the State Board of Equalization at their actual value, and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts, in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities and counties, cities, towns, townships, and districts.

SEC. 11. Income taxes may be assessed to and collected from persons, corporations, joint-stock associations, or companies resident or doing business in this State, or any one or more of them, in such cases and amounts, and in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 12. The Legislature shall provide for the levy and collection of an annual poll tax of not less than two dollars on every male inhabitant of this State, over twenty-one and under sixty years of age, except paupers, idiots, insane persons, and Indians not taxed. Said tax shall be paid into the State School Fund.

SEC. 13. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry out the provisions of this article.

ARTICLE XIV.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

SECTION 1. The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated, for sale, rental, or distribution, is hereby declared to be a public use, and subject to the regulation and control of the State, in the manner to be prescribed by law; provided, that the rates or compensation to be collected by any person, company, or corporation in this State, for the use of water supplied to any city and county, or city or town, or the inhabitants thereof, shall be fixed, annually, by the Board of Supervisors, or city and county, or City or Town Council, or other governing body of such city and county, or city or town, by ordinance or otherwise, in the manner that other ordinances or legislative acts or resolutions are passed by such body, and shall continue in force for one year and no longer. Such ordinances or resolutions shall be passed in the month of February of each year, and take effect on the first day of July thereafter. Any Board or body failing to pass the necessary ordinances or resolutions fixing water-rates, where necessary, within such time, shall be subject to peremptory process, to compel action at the suit of any party interested, and shall be liable to such further processes and penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. Any person, company, or corporation, collecting water-rates in any city and county, or city or town in this State, otherwise than as so established, shall forfeit the franchises and waterworks of such person, company, or corporation, to the city and county, or city or town where the same are collected, for the public use.

SEC. 2. The right to collect rates or compensation for the use of water supplied to any county, city and county, or town, or the inhabitants thereof, is a franchise, and cannot be exercised except by authority of and in the manner prescribed by law.

SEC. 2. No individual, partnership, or corporation, claiming or possessing the frontage or tidal lands of a harbor, bay, inlet, estuary, or other navigable water in this State, shall be permitted to exclude the right of way to such water whenever it is required for any public purpose, nor to destroy or obstruct the free navigation of such water; and the Legislature shall enact such laws as will give the most liberal construction to this provision, so that access to the navigable waters of this State shall be always attainable for the people thereof.

SEC. 3. All tide lands within two miles of any incorporated city or town in this State, and fronting on the waters of any harbor, estuary, bay, or inlet, used for the purposes of navigation, shall be withheld from grant or sale to private persons, partnerships, or corporations.

ARTICLE XVI.

STATE INDEBTEDNESS.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall not, in any manner, create any debt or debts, liability or liabilities, which shall, singly or in the aggregate with any previous debts or liabilities, exceed the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, except, in case of war, to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, unless the same shall be authorized by law for some single object or work, to be distinctly specified therein, which law shall provide ways and means, exclusive of loans, for the payment of the interest of such debt or liability as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt or liability within twenty years of the time of the contracting thereof, and shall be irrepealable until the principal and interest thereon shall be paid and discharged; but no such law shall take effect until, at a general election, it shall have been submitted to the people and shall have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election; and all moneys raised by authority of such law shall be applied only to the specific object therein stated, or to the payment of the debt thereby created, and such law shall be published in at least one newspaper in each county, or city and county, if one be published therein, throughout the State, for three months next preceding the election at which it is submitted to the people. The Legislature may at any time after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same.

ARTICLE XVII.

LAND AND HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION.

SECTION 1. The Legislature shall protect, by law, from forced sale a certain portion of the homestead and other property of all heads of families.

SEC. 2. The holding of large tracts of land, uncultivated, and unimproved, by individuals or corporations, is against the public interest, and should be discouraged by all means not inconsistent with the rights of private property.

Should more amendments than one be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished, by numbers or otherwise, that each can be voted on separately. If the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments, or any of them, by a majority of the qualified electors voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of this Constitution.

SEC. 2. Whenever two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall deem it necessary to revise this Constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote at the next general election for or against a Convention for that purpose, and if a majority of the electors voting at such election on the proposition for a Convention shall vote in favor thereof, the Legislature shall, at its next session, provide by law for calling the same. The Convention shall consist of a number of delegates not to exceed that of both branches of the Legislature, who shall be chosen in the same manner, and have the same qualifications, as members of the Legislature. The delegates so elected shall meet within three months after their election, at such place as the Legislature may direct. At a special election to be provided for by law, the Constitution that may be agreed upon by such Convention shall be submitted to the people, for their ratification or rejection, in such manner as the Convention may determine. The returns of such election shall, in such manner as the Convention shall direct, be certified to the Executive of the State, who shall call to his assistance the Controller, Treasurer, and Secretary of State, and compare the returns so certified to him; and it shall be the duty of the Executive to declare, by his proclamation, such Constitution, as may have been ratified by a majority of all the votes cast at such special election, to be the Constitution of the State of California.

All companies or corporations, whether formed in this country or any foreign country, for the importation of such labor, shall be subject to such penalties as the Legislature may prescribe. The Legislature shall delegate all necessary power to the incorporated cities and towns of this State for the removal of Chinese without the limits of such cities and towns, or for their location within prescribed portions of those limits; and it shall also provide the necessary legislation to prohibit the introduction into this State of Chinese after the adoption of this Constitution. That all laws in force at the adoption of this Constitution, not inconsistent therewith, shall remain in full force and effect until altered or repealed by the Legislature; and all rights, actions, prosecutions, claims, and contracts of the State, counties, individuals, or bodies corporate, not inconsistent therewith, shall continue to be as valid as if this Constitution had not been adopted. The provisions of all laws which are inconsistent with this Constitution shall cease upon the adoption thereof, except that all laws which are inconsistent with such provisions of this Constitution as require legislation to enforce them shall remain in full force until the first day of July, eighteen hundred and eighty, unless sooner altered or repealed by the Legislature.

SEC. 2. That all recognizances, obligations, and all other instruments, entered into or executed before the adoption of this Constitution, to this State, or to any subdivision thereof, or any municipality therein, and all fines, taxes, penalties, and forfeitures due or owing to this State, or any subdivision or municipality thereof, and all writs, prosecutions, actions, and causes of action, except as herein otherwise provided, shall continue and remain unaffected by the adoption of this Constitution. All indictments or informations which shall have been found, or may hereafter be found, for any crime or offense committed before this Constitution takes effect, may be proceeded upon as if no change had taken place, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution.

SEC. 3. All Courts now existing, save Justices' and Police Courts, are hereby abolished; and all records, books, papers, and proceedings from such Courts as are abolished by this Constitution, shall be transferred on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty, to the Courts provided for in this Constitution; and the Courts to which the same are thus transferred shall have the same power and jurisdiction over them as if they had been in the first instance commenced, filed, or lodged therein.

SEC. 4. The Superintendent of Printing of the State of California shall, at least thirty days before the first Wednesday in May, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, cause to be printed at the State Printing Office, in pamphlet form, simply stitched, as many copies of this Constitution as there are registered voters in this State, and mail one copy thereof to the Post Office address of each registered voter; provided, any copies not called for ten days after reaching their delivery office, shall be subject to general distribution by the several Postmasters of the State. SEC. 10. In order that future elections in this State shall conform to the requirements of this Constitution, the terms of all officers elected at the first election under the same shall be, respectively, one year shorter

[Addressing the Secretary of State, Thomas Beck.] Mr. Secretary: The Constitutional Convention, convened here by authority of law for the purpose of framing a new Constitution for the State of California, have instructed me to place that Constitution, duly attested by its officers and signed by the members of the Convention, in your hands for the purpose of being preserved in the archives of the State. In compliance with that resolution I now place in your hands the Constitution which this Convention has framed and adopted. [Applause.]

[The Secretary of State stepped forward and received the Constitution.]

THE SECRETARY OF STATE. Mr. President: The new Constitution which you have placed in my hands I will safely deposit in the archives of the State, and I will duly transmit the same to my successor in office. [Applause.]

AN ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: A number of gentlemen on this floor have prepared an address to the people of this State setting forth the salient points of difference between the existing Constitution and the Constitution which we have adopted. At their request I now present it, and ask that the Secretary may read it, and I move its adoption.

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I raise the point of order that it is not an instrument emanating from any committee of this Convention, by the authority of this Convention. It is the act of a few gentlemen, and not of the Convention. Therefore I object to it.

MR. VAN DYKE. The gentleman can tell better what it is when it is read. I call for the reading of it.

[Cries of "read," "read," "read;" "question;" "no," "no," "no."]

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read it.

THE SECRETARY read:

"TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

"As your delegates, elected to revise the present Constitution and to frame a new Constitution, it is fitting that we should state in brief the most important changes proposed, and some of the reasons therefor.

"Our present Constitution has been in force for nearly thirty years, during which time our population, wealth, and varied interests have greatly augmented. However wise and judicious when adopted, it has now become wholly inadequate to subserve the present and future necessities of the people without material modifications and restrictions. To secure an efficient and economical administration of the several departments of our government, a new Constitution is an imperative necessity.

"It is not probable that a Constitution could be framed that would be entirely satisfactory to any one man in the State. Each would find in it something that he would exclude, and would insert something it does not contain. Our work should however be judged as a whole, and if better than the old Constitution it should be adopted. For many years the people of this State have been oppressed by the onerous burdens laid upon them for the support of the government, and by the many acts of special legislation permitted and practiced under the present Constitution. Its provisions have been so construed by the Courts as to shift the great burden of taxation from the wealthy and non-producing class to the laborers and producers.

"The presence of large and increasing numbers of an alien and non-assimilating race in our midst which threatens, by competition, to enslave our laborers, and by contamination to degrade our civilization, renders it necessary that the whole power of the State should be exercised to protect its citizens and prevent, as far as possible, the further immigration of Chinese.

"The only restriction upon a Legislature is the Constitution of the State and of the United States. It, therefore, becomes necessary that State Constitutions should contain many regulations and restrictions, which must necessary be enlarged and extended from time to time to meet the growing demands of the sovereign people.

"DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

"The principal changes in this article are as follows:

"In reference to the grand jury, it is provided that offenses heretofore required to be prosecuted by indictment may be prosecuted by information, after examination and commitment by a Magistrate. This change dispenses with the necessity of drawing and summoning a grand jury to act upon every case before a party accused can be put on trial, and will be a great saving of expense to the various counties of the State. But to guard against possible abuse or favoritism on the part of the prosecuting officer, and for the purpose of investigating the conduct of officials and supervising the management of county affairs, a grand jury is required to be drawn and summoned at least once a year in each county. The practice of prosecuting by information instead of by indictment has been adopted in several of the States, and found to work well."

MR. STUART. Mr. President: I rise to a point of order. [Noise, confusion, and stamping.] I don't know what time we will get through with this, and I move to lay it on the table.

MR. TULLY. I hope he will withdraw that motion and let it be read, and it will be voted down in time.

The Secretary proceeded with the reading amid great confusion.

"In respect to the trial jury, it is provided that in civil actions three fourths of the jury may render a verdict. This change from the old common law practice has also been tried elsewhere with satisfactory results.

"In criminal cases not amounting to felony a jury may be waived, and in like cases, as well as in civil actions, the jury may consist of a less number than twelve if the parties so agree.

"The only change made in the section relating to freedom of speech and the press, is that in prosecutions for libel for publication in a newspaper, the trial is required to be had in the county where the paper has its publication office, or where the party alleged to be libeled at the time resided, subject to be changed for cause.

"The provision limiting the exercise of the right of eminent domain has been amended so as the better to protect the rights of the citizen in the possession and enjoyment of his property. A new section has been added, declaring against monopolies, to the effect that no special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked, or repealed by the Legislature; nor shall any citizen, or class of citizens, be granted privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not be granted to all citizens.

"RIGHTS OF SUFFRAGE.

"It is provided that no native of China shall enjoy the elective franchise in this State. This amendment is intended to guard against a possible change in the naturalization laws so as to admit Chinese to citizenship, and it was necessary to exclude all natives of China in order to avoid the prohibition contained in the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States against abridging the right of citizens of the United States to vote on account of race or color. This completely closes the door against Chinese ever becoming entitled to vote in this State.

"LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

"The changes under this head are important. While securing equal if not greater efficiency in this department of the Government, the amendments proposed will do much towards purifying the public service, and will reduce the expenses of the State from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars annually. It is provided for the meeting of the Legislature on the first Monday after the first day of January, thus doing away with the holiday recess.

"The power of the Legislature has been restricted in every case where it would be safe to do so, in respect to the enacting of local or special laws. In view of these changes, and of the further fact that the Legislature heretofore have spent more than half their time in recesses and on local measures, we have shortened the regular sessions to sixty days. To prevent the heretofore dangerous practice of rushing through bad bills during the last hours of the session, and in the midst of excitement, it is provided that no bill shall be introduced during the last ten days of the session without the consent of two thirds of the members. The qualifications of members of either house are three years' residence of the State and one year of the district represented. In apportioning population for representation, Chinese are excluded. The pay of members is not to exceed eight dollars a day; the mileage, ten cents per mile, and the contingent expenses not exceeding twenty-five dollars. No pay is allowed to members during a recess or adjournment for more than three days. It is further provided that no bill shall become a law until printed and read at length on three several days, and shall have received a majority on an aye and no vote of all the members elected to each house. The Governor is given ten days after the adjournment of the Legislature to consider and sign or reject bills, and is also given power to veto any item of any appropriation bill without invalidating the whole bill. This is a provision of incalculable importance. The power of the Legislature to appropriate money for any purpose besides the support of the State government, and institutions exclusively under the control of the State, is prohibited, except in the case of certain worthy charities.

"Sales of shares of the capital stock of any corporation on margin are declared void, and the Legislature is directed to regulate or prohibit stock gambling. The Legislature is prohibited from giving or lending the credit of the State, or of any county, city, or other political subdivision of the State; also, from making or authorizing the making of any gift, grant, or subsidy to any person, corporation, or association. Lobbying, or the acceptance of a reward when in the service of the public, is declared a felony. No person is eligible to the office of Governor who has not been a citizen of the United States and a resident of this State five years. When convened in extra session the Legislature is limited to the legislation specified in the proclamation convening it.

"The Lieutenant-Governor is disqualified from holding any office except as specially provided during his term.

"The salaries of the State officers are considerably reduced. For the first two terms the salary of the Governor is six thousand dollars per annum; that of the Lieutenant-Governor the same per diem as is received by the Speaker of the Assembly, to be allowed only during the session of the Legislature; and that of each of the other State officers three thousand dollars per annum, in full for all services. And it is provided that they shall not receive any other fees or perquisites for the performance of any official duty. After the first two terms the Legislature may reduce, but cannot increase, the above named compensation.

"No Clerk in any office shall receive a salary exceeding sixteen hundred dollars per annum.

"The Legislature may, in its discretion, abolish the office of Surveyor-General. The Governor shall not, during his term of office, be elected a Senator to the Senate of the United States. No convict who has been twice convicted of a felony shall be pardoned, unless upon the written recommendation of a majority of the Judges of the Supreme Court.

"JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

"The Supreme Court consists of a Chief Justice and six Associate Justices, elected for twelve years. The Court may sit in departments as well as in bank, and shall be always open for the transaction of business. The plan of permitting the Court to sit in departments is new, and is intended to augment the working capacity of the Court. The increasing business devolved upon our Court of last resort renders it necessary to provide some relief; and the system proposed was adopted instead of creating intermediate Appellate Courts, as being more economical and better adapted to the speedy determination of causes, as well as giving more time for the thorough consideration of the same. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court thus constituted is substantially the same as in the old Constitution; but all decisions are required to be in writing, and the reasons therefor to be stated.

"The Superior Court takes the place of the District, County, and Probate Court, and the Criminal Courts in the City and County of San Francisco, except the Police Courts; and its jurisdiction includes substantially the same as all other Courts thus superseded.

"The number of Judges to each Superior Court, in the larger counties and in the City and County of San Francisco, is proportional to the amount of judicial business to be transacted, with power given to the Legislature to increase or diminish this number as circumstances may require. Wherever there is more than one Judge to a Court in a county, the coördinate power given to the Judges will enable the same number to dispatch more business than under the present system, where each Judge is confined to his own Court.

"The salary of the Superior Court Judges is paid, one half by the State and one half by their respective counties. Inasmuch as these Judges take the place of the District Courts, which are State Courts, and the County Courts, and which are now paid by the State and counties respectively, the expense of the new system to the State and counties will aggregate about the same as the one superseded, but much greater judicial force and facility for the dispatch of business is secured. It will also give to each county a Court of general jurisdiction, open at all times for the transaction of business, thereby, as it were, without delay, bringing justice home to every man's door.

"In order to remedy a growing evil in the delay of Courts in deciding causes, it is provided that, before drawing their salary, the Justices of the Supreme Court and Judges of the Superior Courts shall be required to severally file an affidavit that no case remains undecided in their Courts which has been submitted for ninety days.

"EDUCATION.

"The changes in this article are not numerous, but they are important. It is provided that two or more counties may, by authority of the Legislature, unite and form one district, and elect one Superintendent of Schools for such district. It is made mandatory upon the Legislature to provide for a system of free schools, which must be maintained for at least six months in each year.

"The public school system is, for the first time, clearly defined so as to include all public schools, thus bringing them entirely under the control of the school authorities; and it is provided that the entire fund furnished by the State shall be used exclusively for the support of primary and grammar schools. The text-book question has been taken from the Legislature and placed under the control of local authorities. The examination of teachers and the granting of certificates has been placed under the same control. The appropriation of public money for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, or for the support of any school not under the exclusive control of public school officers, has been prohibited. The University is, as far as possible, removed from the influence of politics, but it is made the duty of the Legislature to enforce compliance with the terms of its endowment, while the entire revenue of the Agricultural College grant is to be used exclusively for the support of at least one College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts. The responsibility of the State in regard to that fund is clearly recognized in the Constitution. No person can hereafter be refused admission to any of its collegiate departments on account of sex.

"STATE INSTITUTIONS.

"It is provided for the appointment of five Prison Directors, to hold office for ten years without compensation, except necessary expenses while in the discharge of official duty. They have charge and superintendence of the State Prisons, and appoint the executive officer and Clerk of the same. It has been shown that in reference to our Insane Asylums, the management of which has generally been unexceptionable, a good class of men can be secured to fill the office of Directors without salary. It is believed that this change will remove the management of our State Prisons from the domain of party politics. After January first, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, the letting out of convicts, under contract, is to cease, and they are to be worked for the benefit of the State.

"CITY, COUNTY, AND TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION.

"In this article a new system of local self-government has been established. It provides that county seats shall not be removed unless two thirds of the electors voting on the proposition shall vote in favor of such removal. A county cannot be reduced in population to less than eight thousand by the formation of a new county. A new county cannot be formed containing a population less than five thousand. The Legislature is directed to establish a system of county governments, which shall be uniform throughout the State, and by general laws to provide for township organization. Cities and towns may become incorporated under general laws, wherever a majority of the electors voting at a general election may so determine. City and county government may be consolidated into one municipal government. Any city of one hundred thousand inhabitants may form a charter for its own government consistent with and subject to the Constitution and laws of the State; but such charter, when ratified by the people, must be submitted to the Legislature for approval, and may be amended at intervals of not less than two years. Any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all necessary police, sanitary, and other regulations not in conflict with general laws. The making of profit out of county, city, or town, or other public moneys, or using the same for any purpose not authorized by law, is declared to be a felony. Counties, cities, towns, townships, Boards of Education, and school districts are prohibited from incurring any indebtedness or liability for any purpose exceeding, in any one year, the revenues provided for them respectively, for such year, without the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof, voting at an election held for that purpose.

"CORPORATIONS OTHER THAN MUNICIPAL.

"Under this head many restrictions demanded by the advancing ideas of the times have been provided for. The provisions of the existing Constitution respecting banks and banking have been retained, excepting the constantly violated restriction of such institutions to the deposit of gold and silver, and they are forbidden to issue paper to circulate as money. For the better protection of creditors and stockholders of corporations and joint-stock associations the Directors and Trustees are made liable for the embezzlement and misappropriation of funds by the officers. It provides for annulling all unused charters, claims of franchises, and special privileges.

"The Legislature has been prohibited from extending charters, or remitting forfeitures; and from authorizing any collusive alienation or leasing of franchises or property of corporations. The right of eminent domain, as to the franchises and property of all corporations, has been preserved. They have been prohibited from engaging in business, other than authorized in their charter; from holding real estate, other than that required for their business, longer than five years, and from making fictitious increase of their capital stock. The right of representation to all shareholders has been secured, and the formation of coöperative societies for agricultural, mechanical, and manufacturing purposes has been authorized. Provisions to secure the better management of corporations in this State have been made, and many other checks and guarantees have been provided for, which cannot, for want of space, be more fully specified here, and to which we invite the attention of the voter.

"The subject of railroad and other transportation companies has become of overshadowing importance. The Convention adopted the provisions to be found in a majority of modern Constitutions, declaring railroad and other transportation companies common carriers and subject to legislative control; granting the right to intersect and connect, and requiring the receipt and transport of passengers and freight without delay or discrimination; forbidding contracts between the companies and their officers; forbidding pooling, or combinations of earnings, for the purpose of monopoly; preventing the increase of railroad rates that have been reduced for purposes of competition, and prohibiting discriminations in charges or facilities for transportation. The right of the State to control the operations of railroad and other transportation companies, and to establish and regulate their rates of charges, have been established by the highest judicial authority. It is necessary to determine how that right shall be exercised to secure the best interest of all concerned. Convinced by the uniform experience of older communities that satisfactory regulation cannot be accomplished by the Legislature through general laws, a Constitutional Commission is proposed, composed of three, to be elected in districts, with power to regulate and establish rates, and to supervise the operation of railroad and other transportation companies of the State.

"The incidental powers necessary to make this power effectual, such as the authority to examine books, take testimony, issue subpœnas, and other process, hear and determine complaints, apply to the Courts for the enforcement of their decisions, and the correction of abuses, etc., are also conferred, and the Legislature is authorized to supply omissions. The right of action of any individual is not affected. For incompetency or malfeasance, the Legislature is authorized to remove any Commissioner by a two-thirds vote. This plan is submitted with confidence in its efficiency.

"REVENUE AND TAXATION.

"In the existing Constitution there is no definition of property. In the new Constitution property is defined. It includes moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, dues, franchises, and all other matters and things capable of private ownership, real, personal, and mixed.

"This definition is comprehensive, and includes every species of property. All property is to be taxed according to its value.

"The effect of this provision will be very important, as it will bring upon the assessment roll an immense amount of property in the hands of the wealthy which now escapes taxation under the decision of the Supreme Court. The only property exempted from taxation is growing crops, public property, and property exempt under the laws of the United States.

"The taxation of mortgages is provided for in this way, viz.: The owner of the land is to pay the tax on its value, deducting the value of the mortgage. The owner of the mortgage is to pay the tax on the value of his mortgage. This is on the principle that a man shall pay taxes on what he is worth, and on the same principle, if there is no mortgage but simply a note or credit, the Legislature is authorized to permit the holder to deduct his debts if they are due to residents of this State. This deduction can be made from unsecured credits only.

"If any contract is made by which a debtor is to pay the tax on any money loaned, the contract is void as to the interest to be paid, and also as to the tax.

"Another very important provision is that land and the improvements shall be separately assessed, and cultivated and uncultivated land, of the same quality and similarly situated, shall be assessed at the same value. The effect of this provision will be that extensive landed proprietors, unless they choose to pay the increased tax, will have to cultivate their lands or dispose of them to some one who will.

"Another important provision is that the Legislature shall require each taxpayer, annually, to deliver a statement, under oath, to the County Assessor, of all the property owned by him on the first Monday of March. This will prevent the fraudulent transfer of property in order to escape taxation.

"The Legislature is empowered to establish an income tax. But this is only permissive, and is intended to reach incomes derived from property not otherwise reached by taxation, such as foreign corporations, gas companies, and the like. The Legislature is required to pass all laws necessary to carry out the different provisions, and is empowered also to provide for the payment of taxes on real property by installments. State and County Boards of Equalization have been created, in order to equalize the assessment of property between the counties and individuals.

"WATER AND WATER RIGHTS.

"The peculiarities of our climate, its extreme wet and dry seasons, the extensive influence of water on mining, agriculture, manufactures, and domestic uses, thereby controlling nearly every avenue to wealth, and the additional fact of the control of nearly all the available water of the State by individuals and corporations, necessitated the adoption of stringent provisions for the use and control of water. So far as the public has an interest in such use, it is provided that when water is offered for sale or hire to the public, it shall become a public use and be regulated by general laws. In cities and towns it is compulsory on the Boards of Supervisors, or other governing bodies, to fix, annually, the price for which water shall be sold to the cities or towns and the inhabitants thereof, and enforce such regulations by suitable penalties.

"HARBORS, TIDE-WATER, AND NAVIGABLE STREAMS.

"Many of the landings and wharves being now monopolized by a few persons, under private ownership, and a disposition being manifest on the part of the owners to practice extortion upon the public, it is provided that no individual or corporation shall deny the public a right of way over their wharves and landings; and that the Legislature shall enact such laws as will give a liberal construction in favor of the public. It is also provided that tide lands, fronting on navigable waters, be withheld from grant or sale.

"FUTURE AMENDMENTS.

"Under the existing Constitution, a proposed amendment must pass the Legislature at two sessions before being submitted to the people. It is provided that amendments passed by a two-thirds vote of both branches of the Legislature shall be submitted at the next general election; and if two or more are submitted at the same time they shall be voted on separately.

"A Convention called to revise the Constitution may submit its work to the people in such manner as the Convention may determine, thus giving it power to submit articles separately if desirable.

"CHINESE.

"The subject-matter of this article is entirely new, and its appearance in the proposed Constitution arises from the peculiarity of our situation.

Digitized by Google

The article authorizes the use of the whole police power of the State to abate what no argument is necessary to prove is a nuisance—that is, the presence and influx of the Chinese. Their presence is declared to be dangerous, and the Legislature is directed to discourage their immigration by all the means within its power; to pass laws to prohibit their introduction into the State, and to delegate all necessary power to incorporated cities and towns to remove them without their limits. Their employment on public works is prohibited and all corporations are forbidden to employ them. These provisions are rendered the more necessary in view of the fact that the Federal Government has refused to grant us any relief from this overshadowing evil.

"MISCELLANEOUS SUBJECTS.

"Under this head the following provisions, among others, are made in the new Constitution:

"The capital is to remain at the City of Sacramento until changed by a majority vote of the people, under such rules and regulations as the Legislature, by a two-thirds vote of each House, may provide.

"Every person is disqualified from holding any office of profit or trust who shall be convicted of having given or offered any bribe to procure his election or appointment. Laws must also be passed prohibiting persons convicted of bribery, perjury, forgery, malfeasance in office, or other high crime, from the right of suffrage, serving on juries, or holding any office. Mechanics, artisans, laborers, and material-men shall have a lien for the value of their labor or material upon the property upon which they have bestowed their labor, or for which they have furnished material.

"The elections have been transferred from the odd to the even numbered years, and judicial officers are to be elected at the same time other officers are elected. Where, within four years, we have heretofore held from four to six elections—counting State, judicial, county, and congressional—it is now proposed to have but two.

"The State officers are to be elected on the even numbered years between the Presidential elections, so that State politics will not be mixed up or overshadowed by national. The expense of elections will thereby be very greatly reduced.

"CONCLUSION.

"In conclusion, we submit the result of our labor to you for your approval or rejection. Considering the climate, situation, and extent of our State, and the many, varied, and almost irreconcilable interests of our people, our task has not been an easy one. We have endeavored to remain faithful to our trust—to uphold the rights of the people at all times, feeling that of them we were a part, to them we were responsible, and that they must finally pass upon the conclusions reached by us.

"It remains with you to determine whether you shall continue under the old régime or approve the organic law we herewith submit to you.

"SACRAMENTO, March 3, 1879."

MR. GRACE. Believing that it is hurtful to talk, and as we have talked a good deal, I now move the previous question.

[Great confusion.]

MR. STUART. I move to adjourn sine die.

MR. PULLIAM. I move that the document be referred back to the gentleman who presented it.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen will take their seats and come to order.

MR. VACQUEREL. I rise to a point of order.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentleman demands the previous question.

MR. VACQUEREL. My point of order is, that there has been no committee appointed to draft an address.

MR. WINANS. We have not even heard it read; we could only hear part of it.

THE PRESIDENT. The gentlemen seconding the previous question will rise.

Seconded by Messrs. Stedman, West, Howard of Los Angeles, and Wyatt.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to adopt this address as the action of this Convention.

MR. REDDY. I rise to a point of order. I do not think the Act calling this Convention authorizes this Convention to publish any address at all; and after that, that they are not authorized to publish it at the expense of the State.

THE PRESIDENT. There is no such question before the Convention.

[Cries of question! Question! Question!]

THE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

MR. WATERS [After the roll call had been commenced]. Mr. President, Mr. President, Mr. President.

A PROTEST.

MR. SHAFTER. I believe the rule allows a member to protest against any vote. I protest against the document as being untrue in point of fact in its statements, and as being out of order after the work for which the Convention was called had been disposed of. I therefore enter my solemn protest against it.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. SHAFTER. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be presented to the Honorable Joseph P. Hoge, for the able and impartial manner in which he has performed the duties of presiding officer of this Convention, and that following the dissolution of this Convention Colonel Hoge will be accompanied by its sincere wishes for his future health, happiness, and prosperity.

MR. SHAFTER. We have been here one hundred and fifty-seven days altogether. I am sure that members will carry away with them nothing but pleasant recollections of his associations here, and a consciousness of having discharged their duties faithfully, each according to his own conscience. I am sure that I express the common voice when I say that you, Mr. President, will carry with you, not only the respect, but the best wishes of the members for your happiness, health, and prosperity. [Applause.]

THE SECRETARY. Gentlemen: The question is upon the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted unanimously.

MR. AYERS. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention are hereby tendered to Mr. Frank P. Thompson, Superintendent of State Printing, for the prompt, efficient, and thorough manner in which the work in his department for this Convention has been done.

Adopted unanimously.

MR. O'SULLIVAN. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Superintendent of the State Printing Office is hereby authorized to print nine hundred and sixty copies of the Constitution, as correctly enrolled, for the use of delegates.

Adopted.

MR. VAN DYKE. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the Address which has been adopted be published with the proposed Constitution.

MR. WATERS. Mr. President: I should have voted for this address, had it not been for one error which I have noticed. It states that the use of water is made a public use in those instances in which the public have an interest in it. That very proposition was flatly voted down twice by this Convention.

MR. VACQUEREL. I move an amendment: that the names of those who voted for and against it be inserted.

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION.

MR. STEDMAN. I move the previous question.

Seconded by Messrs. Wyatt, Gorman, Wickes, and Heustis.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the main question be now put?

Carried.

THE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the adoption of the Constitution.

Adopted.

PRESENTATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

MR. JOHNSON. Mr. President: I am commissioned by my fraters, on the floor of this Convention, to rise to a question of privilege. It is a matter, sir, which concerns vitally the feelings of this body, and as they believe, and so I believe, yourself as the President. In its retrospect it dates back to the organization of this Convention. In its prospect it reaches forward to the approaching close of our labors, when we shall bid a long adieu to this hall and return to our respective homes. Five months and more have passed away since we came to these halls comparative strangers. Here was the young man, just from college, crowned with the fragrant benedictions of Alma Mater; the matured lawyer, the victor of many forensic triumphs, fresh from his briefs; the old statesman, still well preserved and displaying all the fire, vivacity, and intellectual acumen, of which we have heard our seniors speak aforetimes. There were others representing other professions, other pursuits, and the dignity of labor.

In that motley group there came also one, the observed of all observers, "frisking beneath the burdens of three-score," and in his hands we placed the gavel of command. To govern such a heterogeneous body, to assuage their turbulence, to direct aright their efforts and aspirations, required a man of clear head, great intellect, and moral resources, a strong will, and I might add, an unimpaired physical constitution. We have found you, sir, equal to the emergency. During the prevalence of the stormy debate, you have preserved your own equanimity of mind and of temper. However complicated the questions which have arisen, your thorough knowledge of parliamentary law, and your long experience in presiding over deliberative bodies, have served you as the thread of Ariadne served Theseus, as a means of escape from the labyrinth. Your conservative demeanor, and gentle courtesies have also inspired us with the most friendly sentiments. Let these mute but learned witnesses by my side, attest the genuineness of this expression. Here is Dickens with his touching pathos and effervescing humor, as he tells of some new variety which he has just discovered in the genus homo. It may be some quaint original like "Little Paul Dombey," some quainter still like, "Jack Bunsby," or "Captain Cuttle," or some immaculate conception like "Agnes." Here is Motley, who discourses learnedly about a half submerged country where William the Silent laid the foundation of a great State. Here is our own Irving, never so entertaining, as when, with face all aglow, he talks about the legends of Sleepy Hollow, and the weird country of the Catskills. Here is De Quincy, the learned opium eater, who can discount the heathen Chinese himself in opium eating, or at least, he can describe its effects in words of more thundering sound; and here is that brilliant essayist, Montaigne, who has laid all history and personal observations under contribution to "point a moral or to adorn a tale." Here is Macaulay, who deems it not beneath the dignity of his pen to portray the changing manners and customs of a great people, in his history of England; and finally here, in order, Sheridan, whose oration on the charge against Hastings, extracted from Fox that famous eulogy, "All that I have ever heard, all that I have ever read, when compared with it, dwindled into nothing and vanished like vapor before the sun."

These learned witnesses, Mr. President, be pleased to take home with you, and knowing your eminently social turn of mind, we have no doubt you will give them a warm reception, and ensconce them in your best apartments. The shapes they assume are somewhat Protean, being an even hundred in number. So many guests at one time would ordinarily occasion some disarrangement of a household; but your record for hospitality we have never heard questioned. Laying aside all facetiousness, Mr. President, I will make my meaning more apparent, which is, that your friends in this Convention have requested me to present you, in their name and for them, one hundred volumes of standard literary works as a slight testimonial of their respect and regard. The arch to Titus, the column to Trojan; but the works of Dickens, and Motley, and Irving, and DeQuincy, and Montaigne, and Macaulay, and Sheridan, to Mr. President. [Applause.]

We came together, many of us at least, as I said before, as strangers; I might have added, with preconceived antagonistic notions. After the constant attrition to which our views have been subjected for the last five months, I doubt not here at this late day we entertain more respect for one another, and have abated some of the overweening confidence which we had in our formulas, and in our own peculiar opinions, as constituting the only safety of the State.

The State! what shall I say of her—this beautiful land of the Occident? Long after we shall have passed away, and nothing shall remain of us but

> The broken arch, the ruined wall,
> The chambers desolate, the portals foul,

May our goodly mother, the State, survive and flourish. [Applause.] Her fresh young face was beautiful three hundred years ago, when the white sails of Drake fluttered in San Francisco Bay; still later, it retained its beauty during the gentle sway of the Mission Fathers, with their depasturing flocks; despite the Mongolian blotch it is beautiful now, with the changing colors of the orange, the olive, the grape, the waving cereals, and with the cultivated look of her proud metropolis. But it will be more beautiful when, by the adoption of the new Constitution and its practical workings, labor shall be requited for all its pains, and from her otherwise fair features shall gradually disappear the Mongolian blotch. Then, and only then, will her beautiful face become the mirror, as it were, of a free, happy, homogeneous, and assimilating people.

But the shadows are lengthening. The gavel will soon be unheeded; the hand which now holds it will soon hold it no more; and after the uttering of a word my mission will have been accomplished. That word has been said time and again, by all classes and conditions of society. It was whispered it may be many years ago by some one on this floor, into the ear of some gentler being, some fond parent, some trusted monitor, the bulwark of his youth. It is a word which will be uttered by us many times to come, to wife, to child, father, mother, friend, but always in sorrow; a word which dissolving nature, before it breathes its last, will rally all of its energies to articulate; but all must say it, and all must feel it. That word is: Farewell!

> For who, to dumb forgetfulness a prey,
> This pleasing anxious being e'er resigned;
> Left the warm precincts of the cheerful day,
> Nor cast one longing, lingering look behind?

Mr. President, I have nothing farther to say on this question of privilege. "Finis" is written on the parchment roll which contains the new Constitution; that word which has been said so often and by so many in this changing kaleidoscopic life of ours; that word which is destined to intensify the bitter sorrow of so many hearts in time to come, whether they beat in the breasts of prince or peasant, the learned or the unlearned, must now be said by the Delegates of this Convention. My fraters say, I say, we all say, FAREWELL TO MR. PRESIDENT. [Applause.]

PRESIDENT HOGE. Mr. Chairman: I return to you, and the gentlemen you represent, my most grateful thanks for the kind and flattering terms in which you have caused this gift to be presented to me. It overpowers me. Mr. Chairman, I hope you will believe me when I say I am essentially a modest man. [Laughter.] The terms in which you have presented this very elegant, and to me, most appropriate gift, almost destroys the power of reply. I have endeavored, in the position in which this Convention in its kindness placed me, to perform its duties faithfully, impartially, and with the honest purpose of advancing the deliberations of this body and conducting them to a successful termination. If, therefore, in the exercise of those duties, I have succeeded in winning your appropriation, I am well rewarded. I shall treasure this beautiful gift for all time. Every time I look into its pages it will bring back pleasant memories of hours that we spent together here; and when I am gone they will be handed down to my children, to remind them, in after years, that their father had merited your kind consideration and approbation. Gentlemen, we are now about to part, many of us, perhaps, to meet no more; I beg, therefore, that you will hold me in kind remembrance, and I assure you that I shall hold you all in pleasant memory. I wish you a happy return to your homes and a prosperous future. [Continued applause.]

MORE RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention is hereby tendered to its several Secretaries and Journal Clerks for the efficient and faithful manner in which they have discharged their several duties.

Adopted unanimously.

ANOTHER PRESENTATION.

MR. ESTEE. Mr. President: [To the Sergeant-at-Arms.] I am commissioned by the members of this Convention to present you, as the Sergeant-at-Arms, with a slight token of our esteem. I am instructed to present you with this watch and chain, and I wish to remind you that it is not presented to you so much for its real value, as that you may, through life, bear with you a reminder that this Convention believed that you had faithfully performed your duty. [Applause].

MR. SHERWOOD. Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention: I accept this gift with heartfelt thanks to all the donors who participated in it, and at the same time return to each and every member, and to each employé of the Convention, my thanks for their uniform kindness throughout this tedious session. I have endeavored to do my duty in the position to which you elected me to the best of my ability, and this beautiful token reminds me that my efforts have not been in vain. I have only to say, farther, that I hope your earnest efforts here will be duly appreciated by the people of this State, and that the Constitution which you have framed will be adopted as the fundamental law. [Applause].

MORE RESOLUTIONS.

MR. FILCHER. Mr. President: I offer a resolution.

THE SECRETARY read:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Convention be and are hereby extended to the State officers, one and all, for their promptness in responding to the demands of this body, and the uniform courtesy they have extended toward members.

THE SECRETARY read:

MR. HUESTIS. Wait a minute, I have a resolution.

Adopted.

MR. LARUE. I move that the thanks of this Convention be returned to the Pages and Porters of this Convention.

Adopted.

MR. MURPHY. I would like to have thanks returned to everybody and everything—except President Hayes. [Laughter.]

MR. WINANS. Mr. President: I am requested by the Porters of this Convention to present to you this beautiful golden gavel as a token of their esteem.

MR. VAN VOORHIES. I move that the thanks of this Convention be returned to the "silent members."

THE PRESIDENT. The resolution is unanimously adopted. [Laughter.]

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE.

THE PRESIDENT. Gentlemen: I am now about to perform the last official act of my position, and before doing so I wish to express my thanks for the confidence which you have reposed in me, and for the manner in which you have assisted me in performing its arduous duties. I can say to you, because you have said it, that I have endeavored to perform the duties impartially, with the sole view of aiding you in your deliberations, and bringing them to a happy termination. I will leave these halls without a single unkind feeling towards any member of this body. The duties assigned to you by the people of this State, were certainly of the greatest importance, more so, perhaps, than any which devolve upon the citizen—the framing of a new Constitution for the government of a great State, perhaps for a long term of years. That you have performed your duties most faithfully, most honestly, I can bear testimony. [Applause.] Whatever else may be said, the truth of that assertion cannot be denied. You have done your work, and it remains now to be submitted to the people, and whatever may be the result—if it be the judgment that your work is good, or that it is ill, we must be satisfied. Gentlemen, my last duty now is to declare this Constitutional Convention adjourned sine die. [Applause.]

At one o'clock and fifteen minutes P. M. the Convention stood adjourned sine die.
