EDWARD RYNEARSON

EDWARD RYNEARSON

Edward Rynearson was a leader in the national development of education through the public schools. His work in Pittsburgh covered a period of 36 years, centering around the first quarter of the twentieth century when public education was developed as at no other time in the world's history.

It was Edward Rynearson, Director of Pittsburgh High Schools, who opened the high schools for evening classes, October 7, 1907. He was one of three to found the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, an organization of High and Preparatory Schools which gave organized amateur athletics its first big impetus in the Western half of Pennsylvania. He was also the founder of the Educational Association of Western Pennsylvania, which has become an educational power in the state. He was the founder and only president of The National Honor Society, which "Stands as an enduring monument to his keen insight, his far-seeing thought, and his sincere solicitude for the welfare and future of the youth of the secondary schools of America." This organization corresponds in general character to Phi Beta Kappa in collegiate circles. The National Honor Society exemplifies service, leadership, character, and scholarship. Since 1921 there have been over thirteen hundred chapters installed, with over ninety thousand members in our high schools, from Maine to Hawaii.

Edward Rynearson was a recognized authority in secondary education. He served in the summer sessions on the faculties of Boston University, Leland Stanford University, Colorado State Teachers College (at Greeley), University of California (at Berkeley), and during the summer of 1928 he was a lecturer at Cambridge University, England.

In 1908 he was sent by the Pittsburgh Board of Education to visit schools in Great Britain and on the Continent. In 1931 he served as a member of the Commission on Christian Education in Japan, and with Dr. Frank S. Padelford, of the Baptist Church, visited and made reports of the schools of the Japanese Empire South of Tokyo. The work of this Commission is summarized in "Christian Education in Japan", a book published by the International Missionary Council.

Mr. Ryneearson was a member of the first committee on the organization of the junior high school. Also a member of President Hoover's Conference on Child Welfare, called in 1930.

Mr. Ryneearson was a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Tau Delta, Kappa Delta Pi, Pittsburgh High School Principals Club, Pittsburgh Hungry Club, University of Pittsburgh Faculty Club, Pittsburgh Academy of Science and Art (President in 1904), National Society for the Study of Education (President Secondary Schools Department, 1916), Pennsylvania State Teachers Association, Educational Association of Western Pennsylvania (President, 1918), National Association of Secondary School Principals (President, 1922), National Association of Vocational Guidance (President, 1924). For many years he was a Director of the Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A. and a former trustee of Allegheny College.

From the PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH, May 26, 1932:
Editorial—

Pittsburgh has lost a useful citizen in Dr. Edward Ryneearson, director of vocational guidance in the public schools, who died yesterday from a heart attack. Dr. Ryneearson had been connected with the public schools for 36 years. He had much to do with the education of two generations of Pittsburghers, and doubtless the grandchildren of some of his old friends and pupils in the Central High School, where he taught biology in the late nineties, have also felt the influence of his work.

Dr. Ryneearson was a hard-working and efficient school-master, who had the none too common faculty of making his pupils feel that he was their friend.

From the CHRIST M. E. CHURCH BULLETIN, May 29, 1932:

As the bulletin goes to press word comes of the death of Dr. Edward Ryneearson, who, by his fine Christian character and devoted service had won the respect of Christ Church. Dr. Ryneearson joined the church 36 years ago and had served effectively as Sunday-School teacher, as Sunday-School superintendent, as trustee, and in other capacities. We shall greatly miss him, for he could always be counted upon to be in his place of worship and to do his full share in any worthy undertaking.

Innumerable lives are nobler because of his influence and now he has joined that glorious cloud of witnesses who inspire us to run with patience and courage the race that is before us.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to Mrs. Ryneearson and their sons, Dr. Edward H. and Sylvester H. Ryneearson, but we also congratulate them on having had such a husband and father, and on the rich memories that will go with them through the years.

Members of the National Council have given the following tributes to the memory of Edward Ryneearson:

EDWARD RYNEARSON

I am proud of the fact that I have intimately known Edward Ryneearson for over fifty years. We grew up together as lads in Ohio; we went to college at Ohio Wesleyan University together, and that warm friendship of those early days has continued throughout the years.

He was an outstanding boy; his companions highly respected him. That means that he was an unselfish boy, and was regularly trying to sympathize with and help his mates—a trait that seemed to be in-born, and lasted through life.

In college he was always a leader, and a most popular one; a conscientious student, and therefore of high scholarship, as shown by his Phi Beta key; prominent in fraternity circles, a member of Delta Tau Delta. He was absorbed in the work of the college Y. M. C. A. and very active in the church groups. He was blessed with parents of high character, and highly respected. Experienced with the drudgery of the farm, his humble home taught him to practice firm economies all through his college life.

Graduate work at University of Chicago and research work at Woods Hole prepared him exceptionally well to render fine service to the youth in Dayton, Ohio, and then to the end, at Pittsburgh. His devotion to young people naturally led him into vocational guidance work, and in that department he made his greatest contribution.

The National Honor Society was his hobby. To this organization he was most devoted. He personally visited many chapters, from Maine to Honolulu, and was always an inspiration to the members wherever he visited. What a monument he has left to hold his memory sacred!

No finer character ever graced the halls of any school, and therefore it is unnecessary for me to say that I was always proud of his friendship, and that to me also he has always been a great inspiration.

After a brief and unexpected illness his work came to an end on Wednesday, May 25, 1932. His wife and two sons remain to recall with great pride the record of their loved one.

H. V. KEPNER.

As hundreds of chapters of the National Honor Society and the thousands of its members assemble to do honor to other thousands of boys and girls yet to become members, they will not forget the name of Edward Rynearson, the father of their organization. One needs only to observe an induction ceremony of the society to realize its far reaching effects upon the student body and thus to vision the ideal that prompted Dr. Rynearson to give his time and efforts to perfecting an organization destined to stimulate millions of high-school pupils to strive toward more worthy goals. No greater compliment can be paid its author, its founder, and its faithful leader to his last moment. The name of Edward Rynearson will live forever in the hearts and ideals of the members of the National Honor Society.

He is gone from among us, but not forgotten by us. A friend of youth, a leader in education, our honorable president of the National Honor Society has answered the roll call "up Yonder". Mr. Edward Rynearson was loved and respected by all who knew him. His advice in this council will be greatly missed.

IRA W. BAKER.

Edward Rynearson was to me all that was honorable and upright. He was a suitable person to be president of a National Honor Society. His counsel was wise, his deliberations thorough, and his judgments just and fair. The Honor Society was a part of his life. Its welfare was never far from the center of his thoughts. But beyond that, his most vital interest was in boys and girls, and he lived the high type of life which more effectively taught them the best things than instruction by precept. Secondary Education has lost one of its best known and most loved leaders, and the Honor Society its very heart.

L. W. BROOKS.

Edward Rynearson passed away on May 25, 1932. Mr. Rynearson was the father, the founder, and the guardian of the National Honor Society. It was his child; carefully did he rear and fondly did he cherish this daughter of his brain. Every constitution of the more than twelve hundred chapters he read with care and discrimination. He spared neither time nor pains to have the basic regulations of the local chapters on safe and secure ground. The National Honor Society stands an enduring monument to his keen insight, his farseeing thought, and his sincere solicitude for the welfare and the future of the youth of the secondary-schools of America. The Fourth Handbook of the National Honor Society*, which he was never to see in its final form, closed his last loving labor for the chapters of the National Honor Society. A kindly, noble schoolman has done his work.

H. V. CHURCH.

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION GRANT

A Grant to the Department of Secondary-School Principals from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

In no other country in the world has secondary education grown so in the number of its pupils and in the sentiment for popular support as in the United States. And yet from the beginning of its rapid growth to the present it has been the target of criticism that is increasing in volume and in severity. The need for radical changes is generally recognized among the leaders of the profession; but so great is the power of tradition and of the supporting popular fetish, that the individual schoolmaster is all but helpless. Before the significant changes that are desirable can be generally effected they must be indicated and given support by some body of national authority.

Recognizing these facts, the Department of Secondary-School Principals at its meeting in conjunction with the Department of Superintendents at Washington, February, 1932, voted the appointment of a commission that would consider the problem and furnish the leadership that is generally acknowledged necessary. President W. W. Haggard appointed as a nucleus for the commission a small committee: Professor Thomas H. Briggs, Teachers' College, Columbia University, chairman, with Mr. Milo H. Stuart, Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Indianapolis, and Mr. Curtis H. Threlkeld, Principal of the Columbia High School, South Orange, New Jersey. This small committee with President W. W. Haggard and Secretary H. V. Church, met in Joliet, Illinois, on November 4, and outlined its plans.

It proposes that the commission shall consist of members characterized by a thorough knowledge of conditions, both in secondary schools and in society at large, by interest in the philosophy of education, by independence of thought and judgment, and by imagination, initiative, and practicality; that it be small enough to permit of free exchange of opinion about a table—say ten or twelve members,—and that it hold annually two meetings of one week each until its assignment is accomplished and a practical program is fairly on its way. All previous committees, such as the committee of Ten and the Commission on the Reorganization of Secondary Education, have been severely handicapped by the necessity of holding meetings, usually at educational conventions, that were all too brief and interfered with by other duties. The results of such meetings are inevitably unsatisfactory.

Among the duties of the proposed commission will be the following:

First, to formulate the issues that are inherent in secondary education at the present time and, after considering the principles supporting each alternative and the facts of practice, to present with the reasons for its approval the one that seems the better for further discussion and approval by the Department of Secondary-School Principals.

Second, to define the special functions of secondary education in the United States, and to present these in turn for popular approval after modification by the Department of Secondary-School Principals.

Third, to consider all the facts assembled by the National Survey of Secondary Education, which has recently concluded its work, and utilize them along with the conclusions from the first two items of the agenda in formulating a practical program for advancing secondary education.

Fourth, to ascertain what additional facts are necessary to be known and to stimulate their collection by either research or experimentation.

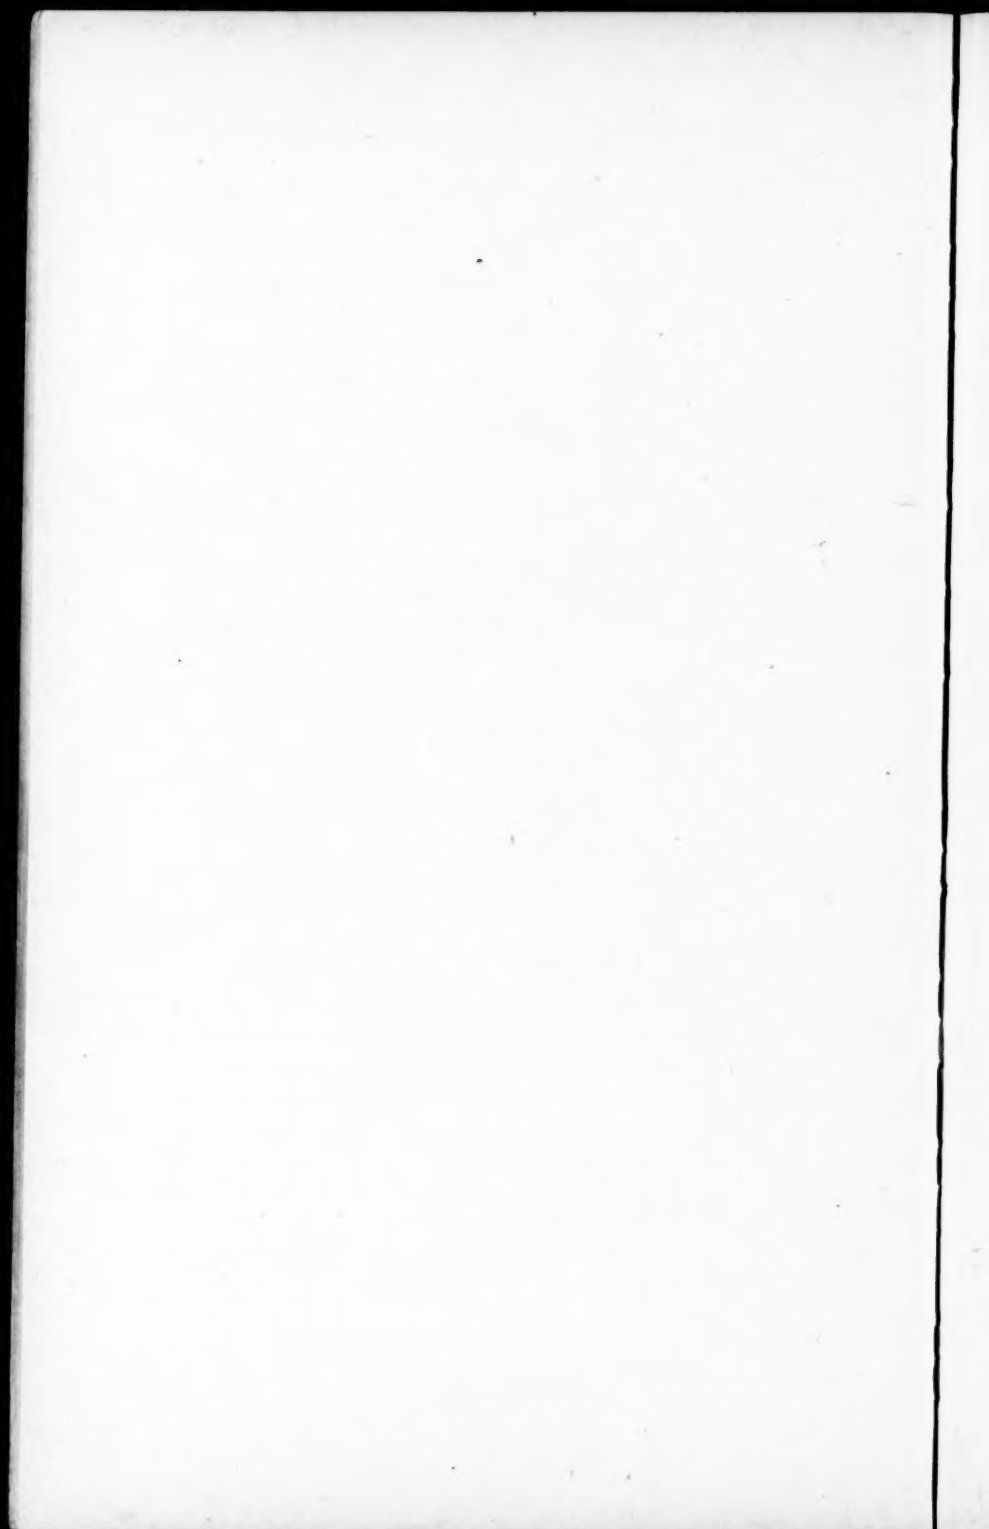

Fifth, to outline means of popularizing the proposed program both with the profession and with the public.

This is believed to be a peculiarly opportune time for undertaking such work as is proposed. Criticism of secondary education from many sources, some too authoritative to be neglected, has cumulated so as to disturb the public and to bewilder the profession; the National Survey is ready to report numerous facts, which should be used; the depression is forcing economies, which without wise direction may be very harmful; lack of employment opportunities is forcing even larger numbers of youth into public high schools; and some fifteen years have passed since the latest national commission made a report.

The members of the commission will be selected, after each one consents to give the required amount of time to the work for a period of years.

That an effective committee may be obtained it will be necessary to pay the expenses of the members for travel and for sustenance. It is estimated that the annual cost will be $15,000.00. Toward this sum the Department of Secondary-School Principals will be asked to contribute according to its means, but it will be necessary for carrying out the plan to find other resources. Therefore the nucleus committee asked the Carnegie Foundation to grant for the expenses of the commission $3000 annually for a period of three years. It is believed by the committee that the returns from each year of the program will be abundantly justified so far as it goes, and that each year in addition will cumulate increasingly large values.

A grant of $3000.00 a year for three years has been made by the Carnegie Foundation, and the chairman of the commission, Thomas H. Briggs, will present a report at the Minneapolis meeting.

ABSTRACTS

BOOKS

Woody, Clifford and Sangren, Paul V., Administration of the Testing Program. Yonkers-on-Hudson, New York: World Book Co., 1933. Pg. 397.

"For every child a community that recognizes and plans for his needs" is the objective of a program of scientific school testing. The testing program is a means to an end—the end revealing the child needs, making these needs intelligible to all who wish to improve their understanding of the child, and discovering remedies for them. A job analysis of the tasks confronted by the director of testing shows that a sound testing program is based upon a knowledge of how effectively to launch the program, how to score the tests, to tabulate and interpret the results, to write the report, to present the results to teachers and to the public, and to use the results so that the maximum educational returns may be realized from the educational and financial efforts expended. The use of standardized tests and scales has passed through three distinct stages of development: (a) curiosity, (b) the use of tests for determining existing levels of achievement in the various subjects, (c) use of the tests as a means for the improvement of instruction. These three also represent the approximate steps through which test utilizers still pass; but unless they finally arrive at stage three, they are likely to give up the use of tests and declare that the measurement movement is another educational fad.

Testing programs are undertaken for the purpose either of administrative and supervisory evaluation or pedagogical diagnosis and remedial prescription. In the former little attention need be given to acquainting the teachers with the nature of the program. In measurement for the purpose of the improvement of instruction, it is highly important that the teachers be acquainted with the details of the program and that they participate in its administration. There must be interest not only in learning that the children succeeded or failed on particular tests, but in ascertaining the underlying causes of their successes or failures. If properly directed, intensive professional study will follow and reorganization of curriculum material will take place. The program thus becomes one of the most potent incentives to the professional growth of teachers in service. The nature and extent of a testing program should be determined very largely by the conditions prevailing in the given school unit. Existing machinery for administering the testing program, experience of teachers with tests and testing techniques, the attitude of the community toward the testing techniques, the previous testing practices and policies of the school system, and the availability of suitable instruments of measurement must all be considered.

The maximum value of the tests can be obtained only when they are used as an instrument for the improvement of instruction, and participation of the teachers in the administration of the testing program is necessary if improvement of instruction is to result. Testing is a part of teaching; and if principals and teachers are familiar with the work through helping with each step, they will be readily receptive to any constructive suggestions derived from it.

A type of division of labor which provides an effective machinery for carrying on the whole program and at the same time allocates the responsibilities involved to the proper sources must be adopted. Test manuals, the best current articles, bulletins, and surveys furnish scientific guidance for each step of the entire procedure. The essential ideas to be stressed and the interests and abilities of the group for whom the report of the testing is prepared control the nature of the report. Statistical exhibits or highly specialized techniques and terminology should be avoided for the general public. However, it is a real asset to teachers and educational specialists to know the distribution of scores, central tendencies, deviations, probable errors, and correlations. The one using the tests must be able to interpret accurately and adequately the significance of the findings represented in the tabular and graphic exhibits.

Improvement of instruction results from two types of changes: administrative and pedagogical. The first includes the classification of pupils and the establishment of special classes and special curricula. Pedagogical changes refer to changes in the methods of actual teaching. The responsibility for changes in grade status should be in the hands of the teacher who is in possession of all the factors of the case. Thus, classification on the basis of instructional needs may represent a step towards individualization of instruction. Measurement per se does not increase effectiveness of instruction. Success in remedial efforts is due to a knowledge and understanding of the philosophy, psychology, and methods of teaching. Nothing has been found to do so much to stimulate teachers to study professional literature as the collection of information about teaching practices and techniques, following the presentation of test results and pupil personnel data in conferences. Controversial issues growing out of the conferences should lead to the setting up of scientifically controlled experiments. Many valuable investigations, less scientifically executed, will lead teachers to professional thinking and teach them a great deal about the technique of measurement and the science of experimentation.

Exhibits of test results in bulletins or on the screen, the administration of the tests to adult groups, and lectures furnish to the payer objective and impersonal data concerning existing levels of efficiency within the schools. Over-enthusiasm about "getting into the swim" and finding answers to school problems may prove disastrous to the testing program. Too much emphasis on clerical tabulations, using test results as a whip for forcing attempts at improved teaching, and the separation of the testing movement and the philosophy of education will undermine the ultimate purpose—the improvement of instruction.

Schutte, T. H. Orientation in Education. New York: The MacMillan Co., 1932 Pp. x+522.

Twenty-three prominent authors give condensed chapters on various fields of education in "a panoramic view of all that the study of education has to offer." Starting with the European Background of American Education, the chapters deal with as diverse topics as philosophy, psychology, measurement, principles of administration, supervision, guidance, certification, finance, and research. The European background raises the question, "To what extent at a given time have educational ideals shaped Western European civilization, and on the other hand, what social changes have from time to time changed education?" The chapter on Philosophy is developed from the questions, "What shall be the aim of education?" and "How shall this aim be realized?" and concludes that "the business of organic life is growth and continuance, adjustment to environment, and that the function of the school is to safeguard that adjustment by providing to each generation the experience and training that should make it possible." The editor gives a clear presentation of those statistical terms most used in present day procedures. In a chapter on child and adolescent psychology, Pechstein points out that "if teachers and parents will accept the guidance offered by the facts of adolescent psychology, they can predict and control behavior in such a way that fineness of adult character will normally result." Inadequacy of usual school marks and more objective marking of essay-type questions are discussed by Trabue, and the setting up of standard scales to obtain greater objectivity recommended. He says also that investigations have made it clear that the group tests of intelligence measure to a surprisingly large extent the same abilities as are measured by many of the group tests of achievement in subject matter fields. One hesitates, therefore, to "base any important decision on the doubtful assumption that one test score represents a pupil's native intelligence and another his educational accomplishment." The elementary school is shown by Gist as "the first agency outside of the home to establish and to broaden the social contacts of the child." It must discover and develop latent attitudes, train pupils in creative thinking, help them to acquire useful and interesting information, train them in the use of fundamental habits and skills, develop appreciation of the best things of life, help maintain or acquire a sound body and correct health habits, and develop right mental habits and attitudes. "The modern secondary school is the product partly of changes in scientific, industrial, economic, and spiritual environment, partly of an evolving complexity of the nature of the functions of a secondary school." The term secondary education has various meanings, both in Europe and America. It is suggested that secondary education should be thought of as beginning, not chronologically, or from the subjects included in the program, but rather "at that point at which respective pupils have achieved sufficient command or comprehension of the subject matter taught to proceed with an increased degree of intelligence." The historical development of the secondary school in America, the rapid growth of high schools, the changed personnel and social composition of the student body, the enlargement of aims, enrichment of curriculums and subjects result in new theories of creative and cooperative supervision. Educational administration can be static, with indifference or resistance to new ideas; dynamic, but still dictatorial and undemocratic; or it may be an organic management shared by the entire personnel of the administration, with sharing, participation, and cooperation its watchwords. The art and science of administration consists in "creatively integrating ideas, materials, and persons." Essential functions of administration are: (1) The maintenance of good will; (2) The policy-making or determinative function; (3) The fiscal function; (4) The personnel function; (5) The housing and material function; (6) The appraisal function; (7) The adjudication function; (8) The integrating function. The problems of administration are the problems of the entire personnel of the school, but administrative control may be autocratic, bureaucratic, or democratic. Conflicts may be settled by domination, compromise, or integration. Integration is "the right way." "When two demands are integrated, they are fused into a new and somewhat different demand." The chapter on extracurriculum activities indicates a strong tendency toward closer relationship between curriculum and extracurriculum activities, to the benefit of both. There is a strong tendency to arrange some point system to regulate pupil participation in activities. Six fundamentals lie at the base of teaching and study: (1) The aims of education; (2) The activities of pupils and teachers; (3) The materials of instruction; (4) Teaching procedures; (5) Standards of progress; and (6) The measurement of accomplishment. Supervision is a cooperative enterprise. Guidance is treated as dealing with those large problems confronting young people that lie outside the field of the classroom and for which the usual organization of the school does not provide. The great present need is for trained workers who have the vision and have developed techniques of assisting students in the solution of their problems. The techniques of guidance are concerned with: (1) Securing and assembling facts; (2) Counseling; and (3) Placement, follow-up work, and adjustment. The goal of instruction for the handicapped is stated as converting children who are potential liabilities because of limitations and handicaps into social and economic assets and into happy, contented, law-abiding citizens. A chapter on research by Smith calls attention to the fact that educational research is being more and more recognized as a "most significant phase of the teaching profession, its contributions extending into the fields of purposes, curriculums, supervision, administration, buildings, equipment, financial policies, teaching preparation, progress of pupils, etc." The rewards for expertness in this work by those gifted in it are attractive enough to justify careful preparation. Other phases of education are treated in other chapters.

Cox, Philip W. L. and Long, Forrest E. Principles of Secondary Education. Boston: D. C. Heath and Co., 1932. Pp. 620.

The American high-school pupil is expected to undergo experiences and develop habits, attitudes, and ideas that assure stability to an industrial civilization and give direction to its progress. The learning activities are successfully effected only in accordance with the laws of learning. In this regard a helpful starting point is afforded by Thorndike's three major laws, i. e., readiness, exercise, and effect. To insure the first of these, the teacher must use his ingenuity in stimulating the pupils to be ready for learning because they want to do the school tasks. Control of fatigue, of health, of competing interests, is essential to insure readiness for school work. The second law, exercise, practice, or drill in school should anticipate the activities to be engaged in when school days are over. The law of effect has been neglected more than others. The effect of learning should be pleasant, affording satisfactions, however difficult the work. Coercion cannot stimulate a desire to learn. The performance of tasks that are merely difficult does not improve efficiency in thinking and behavior. There must be in school, practice in applying the generalized knowledge derived from meaningful activities to new situations or the knowledge may never be dissociated with its original setting and associated with the new. The transfer is much more likely when a feeling of satisfaction accompanies the learning activity. To be effective, high school procedures must take into account the biological, social, and emotional character of youths and must assure them some measure of self-respect, happiness, and frequent success.

The secondary-school curriculum comprises all activities and experiences fostered by the school which prepare its pupils for participation in social life and afford the maximum degree of self-realization consistent with the welfare of the group. The purely academic curriculum with its artificiality is absurd for the modern youth, who sees his mother, older sister, and neighbors interested in parties, shows, magazines, athletics. These more thrilling things should be paralleled in equally thrilling activities and controlled experiences within the school.

The program of studies must be greatly diversified in the high-school grades. Subject matter in all courses must supply inspiration and challenges to youthful endeavor. The trend in secondary school subjects is in the direction of meeting actual needs in the light of conditions which actually exist.

Methods of teaching must conform to the laws of learning in which the rules for habit formation are of prime importance: (1) Repetition, (2) Distribution of practice, (3) Direct action, (4) Satisfaction, and (5) Self-motivation. Teaching is controlling conditions so that the desired learning is likely to take place. The old time recitation should give place to a socialized type, motivated by a problem or project in the solution of which teacher and pupils enter into friendly partnership. The teacher should not be the authority and the judge, but a helpful director of study.

The traditional methods of testing are unreliable; objective measurements have greater validity and reliability. However, many new type examinations test only subject matter and not the most essential element in education, i. e., adjustment to life's needs. They rarely give attention to incidental learnings of the class room, often more important than the primary.

Extra-curriculum activities,—athletics, dramatics, musical organizations, clubs, and councils,—give pupils a chance to learn by doing and participating. Effective education is also secured by helping students to adjust themselves to the jobs and activities of the homes and institutions which surround the school. All these extra-class learnings are ends in themselves which do not need justification by their effect upon specific subjects of instruction or to school virtues such as promptness, deportment, and good marks.

Pupil guidance helps students to set up and attain their own reasonable and worthy objectives. It is thus that they develop character. The great growth in secondary schools is not due to public favor but to changes in roads and conditions of unemployment. The new-comers represent the lower economic and intellectual levels for whom the old academic training is neither possible nor desirable.

The high school should prepare for participation in economical and political life, and in the life of a free and independent person with increasing leisure. It should keep the public informed and interested, gain the cooperation of all progressive groups, and listen with open-mind to changes in school programs suggested by well-informed community leaders. Teachers also should be encouraged to participate creatively in projects to improve the school.

Draper, Edward M. and Roberts, Alexander C. Principles of American Secondary Education. New York: The Century Co., 1932. Pp. 549.

The origins and the guiding influences of secondary education are complex in character. The first American high school was superimposed on the Boston elementary schools in 1821. Since that time the units of American secondary education have been administratively adjusted according to several plans. Steadily the trend has been to make these units more nearly synonymous with adolescent education. This book is concerned with the distinctive characteristics of the American high school. The historical development of the high school as the successor of the earlier secondary schools involved the changing of the national attitude toward the upward extension of free schools. The secondary schools of foreign nations are extensively treated to the neglect of the American secondary school. These schools are generally not democratic in their accessibility to the masses or in curriculum adjustments.

The four-year American high school has exhibited some fundamental weaknesses. These weaknesses are being overcome, at least in part, by downward and upward extensions of the high school to include two years of work formerly done in seventh and eighth grades and by the freshmen and sophomore years of college. The importance of articulating properly the various units is stressed. Revisions of the high-school curriculum are efforts to make it contribute more fully to the acquisition of essential skills and information. Adjustment of the secondary school to the student implies a knowledge of physical growth and development and the attendant changes in emotional life.

Individual differences involving variations of physical and mental traits demand a differentiation of curriculum materials to meet special needs. The factors or causes of elimination from high school require the closest scrutiny that adjustments may be made to fit the school to the children of all social strata. This is especially necessary if the school is to be influential in training for good leadership and good citizenship. Guidance and counseling are becoming recognized as of major concern to teachers at all levels of secondary education. This involves the training of staff members not only to teach, but to serve as counselors. The various activities of the high school, class and extra-class, assume significance as attempts are made to meet newer problems of social adjustment. Teachers should possess the necessary techniques for studying and analyzing the manifold problems of the secondary school. On the instructional side this implies an intelligent use of modern tests and measurements. The revision of curricula is one of the urgent tasks of the high-school staff and requires a knowledge of objectives and techniques. School buildings can likewise render a more effective service to secondary education if the fundamental principles of good planning are understood by executives and classroom teachers.

Jacobsen, Einar W. Educational Opportunities Provided for Postgraduate Students in Public High Schools. Teachers' College Contributions to Education, No. 523. New York: Teachers' College, Columbia University, 1932. Pp. vi & 74.

In 1929-1930 there were 29,225 postgraduate students in the public high schools of this country. This first study of the problem created by these students was intended to bring out such facts concerning postgraduates as would be helpful to the secondary-school principals and teachers dealing with them. Information from five hundred twenty-five schools, selected at random, is the basis of the report. This information indicates that the postgraduate students are generally equal to the seniors in intelligence, and are the children of living, American-born, comparatively well-to-do parents. They are taking postgraduate work for the following reasons: "Wait until September to enter college" (16%); "Make up college entrance requirements" (25%); "Get specific vocational training" (13%); "Occupied until position opens" (16%). Fifty-six per cent are enrolled in college preparatory subjects; thirty-six per cent in commercial subjects; and seven per cent in trade or other subjects. While no state makes any direct provision by law for postgraduate students, certain states require the public schools to accept as students all persons between certain age limits (for instance, six and twenty-one), and a considerable majority of the school officials consulted recorded themselves as favorable to postgraduate students. In spite of this official record, however, the conclusion "that postgraduate students are not welcomed in most of the schools studied" seemed to be indicated by restrictive regulation of attendance, closed classes, required classes, lack of special classes for postgraduate students, and extreme extra-curriculum restrictions. Moreover, the failure of most colleges to give advanced credit for postgraduate work was felt to be discouraging. The needs of the postgraduates are summarized as follows: "An appropriate program of extra-curriculum activities; a full program of directed activities; adaptation of studies to the age and experience of the postgraduate student; granting of advanced college credit for certain work completed; adequate counseling service and opportunities for further exploration."

Newlon, Jesse H. "Can the High School Stimulate the Intellectual Interests of American Youth," The Junior-Senior High School Clearing House, VI, (September, 1932), 21-5.

If the high school is to play a vigorous and constructive role, it must stimulate youth to think constructively, independently, and courageously on the problems of contemporary society. This process involves a freedom of teaching that is not now widely exercised. Our present schools emphasize too strongly the teaching of factual knowledge. What is needed is the ability to interpret knowledge, to formulate judgments, and to carry out policies. Gradually we are shifting our method, placing more responsibility upon the student for active participation in the learning process. Students are becoming more active seekers after truth. Whatever our professed intentions may be, we could scarcely point to our high schools as centers of intellectual curiosity in the realm of the social. The American people are not afraid of experimentation in the sciences, the applied arts and in business. But in politics, in government, in social affairs we have been sterile for more than a century. The school has been too much an instrument for the indoctrination of American youth in favor of the status quo. So long as censorship on ideas operates, the American high school will do little to stimulate intellectual curiosity. The youth is intensely interested in the problems of the day and this interest should be encouraged. The emphasis in creative education has been too much on the aesthetic side. New conditions demand new ideas, but creative thinking in these lines has been frowned upon. Great pressure has been brought on the school to enforce conformity. It is our business to make the high school a vitally constructive social force.

Ryan, H. H. "Adapting Instruction to Individual Differences in Mental Ability," Junior-Senior High School Clearing House, VII (September, 1932), 34-8.

Instead of attempting to provide for differing abilities by permitting varying rates of progress or by assigning varying amounts of work of varying degrees of difficulty, differentiation should be effected by selecting and presenting experiences which are different in kind. These differences in kind relate wholly to the means used for attaining objectives which are the same for all pupils. The basis for planning for differentiation is found in "what is known of differences between bright and dull children in characteristic habits of thought." For example, slow pupils need several experiments to make a scientific principle clear, but bright pupils can reach the same understanding through the vicarious experience of reading descriptions of instances of operation of the principle. Similarly, the attainment of skill or appreciation or expression or any other type of learning has its peculiar psychology, its peculiar relations to differences in intelligence, and its peculiar problems in adaptation. Effective differentiation requires: first, a clear conception of the objectives defined in terms of changes in the pupils; second, the selection and presentation of different experiences suited to the "characteristic intellectual processes of pupils of different levels of mental ability."

Allen, Richard D. "The Continuous Follow-Up Survey in the Senior High School," The Junior-Senior High School Clearing House, VII (September, 1932), 44-9.

The follow-up study of high-school graduates is a desirable feature of the program in progressive senior high schools. It is of value not only to those who must know the facts in order to use them, but counselors should be familiar with their schools, the pupils, and the occupational opportunities of the community, that he may perform his guidance duties more effectively. The Providence follow-up study covers a period of twelve years for every class counselor as follows:

1. Four classes are given a survey with a one, three, or five-year study—one such study being made each year.

2. Central office providing materials; mimeographing standard questionnaires; editing reports. The devices for obtaining information:
 - (a) Eleventh and twelfth grade pupils study previous follow-up studies to arouse interest.
 - (b) Counselor meets with class officers to plan reunion and to address notices in which questionnaires are enclosed; 30-60 per cent respond.
 - (c) A record questionnaire is sent to those failing to cooperate; 20 more respond.
 - (d) The adviser or officers call the remaining delinquents over the telephone.
 - (e) The other 5 per cent is reached through home visits.
 - (f) The result of the first year study is 100-97% return; three year study, 95% return; five year study, 90-85% return.
 - (g) Adviser treats questionnaires statistically with supervisor of placement assisting.
 - (h) Central office mimeographs and sends out to other advisers, principals, and class officers, combined reports of the same grades. The information secured falls under the following heads: (1) Further full-time education. (2) Full or part-time employment. And under each of these: regular progress and irregular progress with their causes.
3. The use of Follow-Up Surveys:
 - (a) Determine the curriculum.
 - (b) Give educational and vocational opportunities of a community.
 - (c) Provide prompt and continuous information concerning supply and demand in the various vocations.
 - (d) Estimate roughly the measure of effectiveness of vocational course.
 - (e) Use in placement offices.
 - (f) Aid unadjusted graduates.

- (g) Encourage and help the physically handicapped and pre-vocational groups.
- (h) Impress pupils in group-guidance courses by giving concrete examples.

Surveys must be continuous as information must be kept up-to-date, since occupations change and firms go out of business frequently.

Thayer, V. T. "The Report of the Commission on the Reorganization of Secondary Education," The Junior-Senior High School Clearing House, VII (Sept., 1932), 49-55.

The Report of the Commission, made some fourteen years ago, will always occupy a prominent place among American historical documents, for it expresses and summarizes the pre-war trends of education. The document itself attempts to apply a social philosophy of education to the reorganization of secondary education. This social emphasis colors its statements of educational objectives, or the "cardinal principles". Section IV of the Report dealing with the achievement of these objectives gives the Commissions interpretation of the principles enumerated. The application of these principles, however, has not been satisfactory; in fact, instead of adapting the schools to the needs of a changing society, the methods advocated have maintained the "status quo". The reasons for failure are given. In applying the "cardinal principles" to the organization of the courses of study, the schools have not followed the views of the Commission. The writer does not minimize the faults of the Report, but he says that it is still ahead of present practice, and it gives a social conception of education to which we might well return.

Aikin, Wilford M. "A Proposal for Better Coordination of School and College Work," School and Society, XXXV, (June 18, 1932), 842-5.

Recognizing the need of improvement in secondary education, and realizing that any significant change involves the cooperation of the colleges, the Progressive Education Association appointed, about two years ago, a commission on the relation of school and college. Last December, a generous grant of funds for the work was provided by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The commission desires to bring about such changes in the relation of school and college as will permit sound experimental study of secondary education. It is concerned with all pupils, but especially with those who plan to go to college, and it seeks to establish conditions under which schools may develop more fully in all pupils a strong sense of individual and social responsibility. The commission wishes, also, to make it possible for schools and colleges to help each individual shape his course so that it will be best fitted to his needs, and so that his work will have meaning and significance for him. The following plan is presented for approval: 1. A small number of schools, probably not more than twenty, will be chosen to carry on experiments in secondary education appropriate to the purpose of this plan. These schools will enter into an admissions agreement with colleges for an experimental period of five years beginning with the autumn of 1936. 2. A directing committee has been appointed to supervise all aspects of the plan, including the practical coordination between schools and colleges and the securing of effective educational procedure.

Admission to college for the experimental period will be based on the following criteria: (a) Recommendation from the principal of the cooperating secondary school to the effect that the graduating pupil is possessed of the requisite general intelligence to carry on college work creditably; has well-defined serious interests and purposes; has demonstrated ability to work successfully in one or more fields of study in which the college offers instruction. (b) A carefully recorded history of the pupil's school life and of his activities and interests, including results of various types of examinations and other evidence of the quality and quantity of the candidate's work, also scores on scholastic aptitude, achievement, and other diagnostic tests given by the schools during the secondary-school course.

The educational emphasis in this plan is based on a conviction that the secondary schools must become more effective in helping young people to develop insight, powers and self-direction necessary for resourceful and constructive living. The committee would like to provide for: (1) greater mastery in learning; (2) more continuity of learning; (3) release of creative energies; (4) clearer understanding of the problems of our civilization, and the development of a sense of social responsibility; (5) revision of curriculum materials and their organization; (6) guidance of students through secondary-school and college; (7) selection of teachers specially adapted to this work.

Betts, George H. and Hill, George E. "Current Practice in Character Education in the Public School," School and Society, XXXVI (July 30, 1932), 154-8.

For three hundred years American education assumed that character is a necessary by-product of learning and therefore only an indirect responsibility of the school. During the past decade this comfortable assumption has been breaking down and a distinct movement has been developing which makes character a definite responsibility as consciously sought in the school as skill in arithmetic or spelling. In September, 1931, an inquiry was sent out by the writers to some 2,000 superintendents of schools throughout the United States. Over 800 superintendents replied, giving information concerning time allotments, materials used, research activity and desired outcomes in character education. They also sent over 400 report cards which have been analyzed to determine the character outcomes mentioned. While this report does not purport to give a complete picture of all character education activities of the public schools, it does point to some interesting trends in the character emphases of these schools. Slightly more than one-fourth of the 836 cities reporting have time allotments for character education in one or more grades of the public school. Nearly one-fifth of the school systems have time allotments for character education in the elementary schools, 14 per cent in the junior high schools, and 6 per cent in the senior high schools. On the average nearly one clock hour a week is spent on character education in these public schools, this hour being allotted to various grades. Much of the materials used by teachers for this work is locally prepared. About one-fourth of the smaller cities and one-third of the large cities have teacher committees at work in this field. The outcomes of character education should be indirect.

Tinker, Miles A. "The Relation of Speed to Comprehension in Reading," School and Society, XXXVI (July 30, 1932), 158-60.

A survey of the studies concerned with reading performance reveals general agreement that reading ability is composed of at least two elements: namely, speed, and comprehension. True comprehension involves understanding, selection, correlation, and organization, all of which are influenced by the mental set of the reader. Analysis of results obtained with standard reading tests shows that "comprehension" measured on dissimilar textual materials does not yield comparable scores. The same is true for speed scores. Further analysis justifies the conclusion that there are many reading skills which are somewhat independent, rather than either a general silent reading ability, a general comprehension, or a general speed of reading ability. The only adequate method of discovering the true relation between speed and comprehension in specific reading skills is to measure rate and comprehension on the same or strictly comparable material. Data obtained by this method reveal very high intercorrelations. With the evidence now available, the only justifiable conclusion is that there is a close relation between speed and comprehension in reading.

Whitlow, C. M. "The Prevalence of Smoking and Drinking among High-Schools Pupils," School and Society, XXXVI (August 6, 1932), 177-8.

The data for this report were secured from the pupils of a six-year high school in the Rocky Mountain region. The school had a total enrollment of 750 pupils in grades seven to twelve, inclusive. The situation in this high school is probably typical of that in the average small-city high school. The information was secured by means of a mimeographed check-list placed in the hands of the pupils of the whole school simultaneously. Supervision was confined to seeing that each pupil checked his list individually. No opportunity was given for the pupils to discuss the answers they might make. Neither pupils nor teachers knew beforehand that the information was to be secured. No identification marks of any kind were placed on the papers. The pupils were assured that no embarrassment whatever would result from the responses made. They were urged to state facts. The general formula for securing the information desired was arranged on this plan: If you smoke habitually, put a cross mark here..... If only occasionally, put a cross mark here..... If never, put a cross mark here..... The items concerning smoking and drinking were but two of a total of 34 items checked by the pupils. It was found that 21 per cent of the boys and 4 per cent of the girls smoke habitually; that 44 per cent of the boys and 29 per cent of the girls smoke occasionally; and that 35 per cent of the boys and 67 per cent of the girls never smoke. Seventy-three per cent of the boys and 76 per cent of the girls believe that smoking is harmful to a high-school pupil. According to the data with respect to drinking, 5 per cent of the boys and 2 per cent of the girls drink habitually; 19 per cent of the boys and 10 per cent of the girls drink occasionally; 76 per cent of the boys and 88 per cent of the girls never drink. From these data, the following conclusions were drawn: (1) Smoking is far from a universal practice among high-school pupils; (2) one-third of the boys and two-thirds of the girls never smoke; (3) three-fourths of the pupils in the aggregate believe that smoking is harmful; (4) approximately two-thirds of the pupils believe that girls have as much right as boys to smoke; (5) drinking is far less prevalent than smoking; (6) three-fourths of the boys and nearly nine-tenths of the girls never drink; and (7) the influence of the school is a negligible factor in relation to these practices.

Wetzel, William A. "Characteristics of Pupil Leaders," School Review, XL (September, 1932), 532-4.

A brief study of pupil leaders made in the Trenton, New Jersey, Senior High School showed 75 per cent registered in the academic curriculum, 18 per cent registered in the commercial curriculum, and 7 per cent scattered among three other curricula.

In this school every pupil is given a reading-ability quotient. The median for the entire school is 91.5. The reading ability of pupil leaders was 110, or about 20 points above the average for the rest of the school. In scholarship, the average of the leaders was almost a "B", while that of the entire school was slightly below a "C".

Each pupil rates himself on a character rating scale. He is also rated by the teachers on the same scale. In each instance the leader rated himself higher than the school average. The teachers' ratings for the leaders was even higher than the pupils' ratings.

The composite picture of pupil leaders in this school shows: The chances are three to two that the leader will be a boy; he will probably be registered in the academic curriculum; he will have a reading ability quotient of at least 110; he will pass in all his work and his academic marks will probably be one "A", two "Bs", and one "C".

Davis, H. H. "Unit Cost of High-School Subjects," American School Board Journal, 85 (August, 1932), 45-6.

The current financial problems of most school systems and the unusual amount of discussion of the cost of so-called fads and frills bring into prominence the need for accurate cost accounting in education, especially for an accounting which will cover all costs and do it for individual grades or subjects. The plan used should begin with the present allocation of expenses recommended by the joint committee of the United States Office of Education, the Department of Superintendence, and the National Association of School Business Officials, and carry these figures down to a subject or class-unit basis; and the process must be such as to allow for separate treatment of independent variables. With these requirements in mind, the writer devised a technique for computing unit costs for the variables of pupil, teacher, supplies, and plant, with separate computation of costs due to depreciation and imputed interest on the investment, all based on the "unit" of one full-time subject carried for a school year. The results of a careful application of this technique to a small city high school are given, with comparative data for this school, a village high school, a consolidated rural high school located in a small town, and a large cosmopolitan high school. The pupil cost remains constant throughout a school since it is based on items which have no relation to the subject studied, but the range of this item between schools is from $2.60 to $10.27. Teacher costs vary, largely with salary and inversely with size of class, from $5.05 to $25.97. Plant cost variations are largely due to the size of room used in relation to size of class, from $0.52 to $7.53. Supply costs vary from $0.10 to $5.50 for typewriting, in which case typewriters are considered as supplies and traded in every three years. The total current cost varies from $10.12 to $33.32 per subject. The method is given for allocating each of the standard divisions of financial reporting to the variables chosen.

In the public schools today we are not teaching pupils in the complete literal use of that phrase. We are, however, more nearly approaching that condition than has been done in the past. Our present problem is to accelerate the rate of progress. The American philosophy of education has led to the attempt to teach all the boys and girls of all the people; universal compulsory education at the lower levels is generally accepted. In the time of Franklin, the emphasis in education was upon pure knowledge for its own sake; at the last meeting of the National Education Association, the central theme was character education. For several decades the trend has been very definitely toward the child. Progress at a normal rate in the learning situation involves four factors: the learner, the leader, the process, and the material. Each is essential, but the one for which all others exist is the learner. In making provision for individual differences, it becomes necessary to take into consideration not only variations in children's ability, intellectual capacity, aptitudes, emotions, and interests, but also to recognize variations in race, religion, and home training. Learning is an individual process; it demands activity on the part of the learner. Individual differences in improvement may be caused by differences in methods of work, in previous training, or in original nature. Variation exists at all levels. In the maze of subject matter, materials, and methods, we must keep ever in mind the child himself. Tests in ability, achievements, aptitudes, and ideals constitute only the beginning of an analysis of the child as a whole. Subject matter materials are effectual only as far as they develop power, impart skill, or result in the creation of ideals, appreciations, attitudes, and the like; in short, when they become a part of the child. The effective leader or teacher knows that part of his job is inspiration and encouragement not only for the weak but also for the strong pupils that they may progress even more rapidly. Unless there is learning, there is no real teaching. If we would teach pupils rather than subjects, we should organize materials and methods on the basis of the whole child—his soul, his intellect, his emotions, his physical make-up, his ideals, and his experiences. Moreover, it is essential that we should adjust the difficulty of materials to the level of the learner. Important, too, is the task of teaching the child how to study the particular material at hand, depending upon whether the goal is skill, appreciation, or factual information. In our effort to make learning as objective as possible, we must not forget that the child is a human being rather than merely a card in a filing cabinet or a number on a seat. Finally, we must keep in mind constantly the idea that the learner is the one for whom the whole plan of education exists.

Carr, William G. "The Riddle of Propaganda in the Schools," American School Board Journal, 85 (September 1932), 26.

Many people have the feeling that the schools belong to the public as individuals, rather than to the public collectively. As a result of this attitude they expect to use the school to foster pet enterprises, promote community drives, and as an advertising medium. Selfish purpose and individual gain is often woven into the program. A bombardment of propaganda is manifest in a series of special days and weeks, holiday programs and contests. These special occasions and contests often disrupt the orderly work of the classroom, discourage normal procedure and over-stimulate the children by rewards in place of normal satisfaction from good performance of a worthwhile task. Many state and city school superintendents have made powerful enemies by refusing to sanction some of these proposals. Vast quantities of free material with advertising purpose have found their way into the schools as samples or in exhibit cases. Textbook propaganda has been cleverly conceived as a means of selling either goods or ideas. There is a clash of opinion as to whether we should not accept free materials as having some educative value. It is undesirable to establish an inflexible policy which excludes from the classroom every bit of instructional material that is not provided at public expense. We should not ban every idea that does not emanate from the headquarters of the school system. The riddle of propaganda is far too complex to be solved by fixing blame on anybody—teachers, propagandists, advertisers, or the public. A solution can be found only through calm consideration of conditions, trends, opinions, and needs.

Barubart, E. W. "What Commercial Courses in Our Night Schools?" Education, LIII (September, 1932), 1-6.

Night school commercial courses are expected to meet community needs at a minimum cost to the school. The educational service of these courses follows certain definite objectives for those who attend them. The occupational upgrading objective, the occupational exploratory, try-out and preparatory objective, the economic adjustment objective, the increased command of fundamentals objective, and the social adjustment objective are outlined and explained. The efficiency of the service given in the commercial courses can be judged by external and internal factors. The most significant external factor is the number of pupils actually, appreciably aided in doing better work or in getting a job, as a direct outcome of the instruction given. A follow-up study is necessary to determine these results. Administrative provision should be made to determine whether objectives are attained by enough pupils to justify the expense. The internal efficiency basis has to be evaluated by appraising the work of the administrative system and the class work by conference with teachers and pupils. Investigation reveals that very few courses are designed for a particular occupation and that occupational value of instruction is hard to determine in courses with general objectives. Frequently teachers do not qualify for adequate understanding of the specific occupational requirements and processes. Occupationally competent teachers may not have effective training materials and methods. Training the teachers who are occupationally competent is necessary for the success of night-school instruction. The evening school should be examined critically to see that the administrator is qualified for that kind of work, to see that the proper courses are chosen, that vocational counseling is given. Large sums are being wasted upon futile evening school business training and the responsibility belongs to educational administrators to bring satisfactory results by careful scrutiny of the means available to improve and develop adequate courses under competent instruction.

Rice, Louis A. "Responsibility of Public Education for the Guidance, Placement, and Follow-Up of Its Product," Education, LIII (September, 1932), 33-7.

High-school administrators aid their pupils to select, enter, and succeed in colleges best suited to their needs; but are most indifferent to the pupils who have decided, or who are forced by circumstances, to find employment after graduation from high school. Giving assistance to those who enter positions not only distributes the school's service equally to all its pupils, but aids the school itself. Placement and follow-up activities afford the school administrator opportunities to obtain: (a) closer contact with the community, (b) a more accurate measure of the effectiveness of the training programs offered by his school, (c) a knowledge of adjustments which should be made in training programs, and (d) an additional means of studying individuals. Industry and business have long since learned the value of "following through" on their products and their customers. School administrators should do likewise.

Newlon, Jesse H. "A Public Relations Program for 1932-33," Schools Executives Magazine, 52 (September, 1932), 26-7.

Because of existing conditions the problem of public relations occupies an important place in the plans of school executives for the year 1932-33. In most communities the fate of education will be determined by the attitude of the public in regard to it; and the attitude of the public will, in turn, be determined by the nature of the community in question. The best guarantee of public support is a good, sound, comprehensive program of education. To what extent the public will support education will depend on the economic condition of the community and the situation with reference to taxes and by the sense of values that obtains in the local communities. To meet the first problem, the program must provide for concerted action on the part of educators to bring about legislation to prevent a recurrence of the suffering incident to a depression; to meet the second, the public must be educated so that the sense of values in regard to educational matters is right. Questions of vital importance to the schools must be settled by all the people and not by any one faction. To accomplish the desired results there must be a public relations program, well planned far in advance of the school year; and it must be constantly revised and modified. Such a program will involve the concerted efforts of the entire educational staff of the community together with the newspapers. Authentic news pertaining to budgets and financial problems, buildings and bond issues, meetings for the revision of courses of study, meetings for the study of educational problems, and reports on the accomplishments of boys and girls must be made available for the newspapers. The part of the superintendent is to interpret the schools to the public. This may be done by speeches concerning the work of the schools to parent-teacher organizations and other civic groups. The principal occupies a strategic position in regard to the public relations program because of his constant contact with the public. He may accomplish much through parent-teacher organizations, which, in turn, may become the best ally of the school in carrying out a constructive program. The best efforts of the classroom teacher are challenged by a forward-looking educational program.

Mallalieu, W. E. "Effective Measures to Reduce Fire Hazards," School Executives Magazine, LII (October, 1932), 76-8.

Six school fires between June 8 and September 15, 1931 emphasize the enormous loss of property and danger of loss of lives in school fires. An effective measure to reduce hazards is safety in construction with the use of approved fire-proof or fire resisting material. Because of stage scenery used by pupils, a sprinkler system should be installed above and below the gridiron on the stage in the auditorium. Fire doors should separate dangerous areas from the rest of the building and fire escapes approved by the national board of underwriters should be installed on buildings. Building supervision and regular inspections by officers or pupils trained in safety requirements are necessary. Fire drills conducted for the teaching of efficiency and self-control should be held twice a month with rigid discipline enforced. One drill should be an obstructed drill in which certain doorways are blocked, compelling the pupils to rearrange a line and go out another door. Fire alarms should be sounded at different periods of the day. The main objective of school authorities should be safety of their charges.

Pinney, Martha. "The Influence of Home and School in the Choice of a Vocation," Journal of Educational Research, XXV, (April-May, 1932), 286-90.

Although it is recognized that the choice of a vocation is without doubt one of the most important decisions we are called upon to make, and that it is the business of both the home and the school to provide effective vocational guidance for young people, little, if any, accurate information is available concerning the influence of the home and the school in choosing one's life career. Among the results obtained from 916 questionnaires given to high-school pupils in three entirely different types of communities, the following are significant:

1. Many high-school pupils do not begin early even to consider the choice of a vocation.
2. A large percentage of pupils are anxious to know more about vocations.
3. A very large percentage of the seniors do not know what kind of work they will probably follow.
4. Courses of study, as arranged in the three high schools investigated, are not particularly helpful in making a choice of a vocation.
5. School activities seemed to play an important part in seeking out special interests and abilities.
6. The father's vocation seemed to have but small influence.
7. The income of the family had no appreciable significance.

8. The income of the chosen occupation had very little bearing upon the choice made.

The summary of the results of the questionnaire indicate plainly that the home and school have failed to supply adequate vocational guidance. Especially is this true in the rural communities where first hand information about a variety of occupations is very limited.

Haefuer, R. "Casual Learning of Word Meanings," Journal of Educational Research, XXV, (April-May, 1932), 267-77.

Ninety-three pairs of adults were used in an experiment to measure casual learning by exposing twenty new words to them one at a time. Before a class entered the room a sentence was placed on the blackboard with a particular word underlined. No comment was made to the group and at the beginning of the period the teacher erased the sentence. A control group was used. By use of intelligence tests the two groups were found to be of approximately the same average intelligence. In the vocabulary tests that were given both before and after the experimental period, it was found that, compared with the control group, the experimental group made significant improvement and less retrogression. This experiment seems to prove that there is considerable casual learning from the use of posters, bulletin boards and other similar forms of observational learning. The same idea is involved in the selection of teachers who serve as examples in matters of speech, manners, and general conduct.

BOOK NOTICES OF NEW ACCESSIONS

GENEVIEVE DARLINGTON

Blohm, Albert & Raubicheck, Charles W., Adventures in Thought and Expression, a Course in Creative Writing. New York: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1932. Pp. 387. $1.60.

The course may be used as a basis for straight composition, or it may be used in connection with the work in literature; the latter will require two years for satisfactory completion. It can be used to best advantage by students in the third and fourth years of high school.

Smith, Elmer W. Extemporaneous Speaking. New York: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1932. Pp. 402. $1.60.

Based on the author's sixteen years of experience in extemporaneous speaking contests for high school boys. The popularity of these contests have convinced many educators of the desirability of requiring such courses as an educational discipline for all students.

Gilmartin, John G. Gilmartin's Business Speller. New York: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1931. Pp. 159.

Contains more than 6,000 words, thus giving the instructor a supply from which he may make a satisfactory selection. Some definitions, sentences, and lessons on correct usage and pronunciation are given, with tests which cover approximately the work of one month.

Benson, Ivan. Fundamentals of Journalism. New York: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1932. Pp. 333. $1.60.

The author's aim is to teach good journalistic writing based on the best professional methods and models. For secondary schools.

DEPARTMENT MATTERS

National Honor Society

Over ten years ago the Department of Secondary-School Principals (then the National Association of Secondary-School Principals) organized the National Honor Society with the end in view of stimulating scholarship in the secondary schools of the United States. To-day there are over one thousand chapters and these are in the best high schools in the country. The four objectives of the society are: to create an enthusiasm for scholarship, to stimulate a desire to render service, to promote worthy leadership, and to encourage the development of character. Every high-school principal who has a chapter is enthusiastic over the productive results of this organization in his school.

Direct all requests for literature to H. V. Church, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

Emblem, National Honor Society

The emblem is made in two sizes: a watch charm size, and a pin (smaller size). All pins have 10k safety catch. The prices are as follows:

14k Charm.....	$2.50	14k Pin.....	$2.00
10k Charm.....	$2.20	10k Pin.....	$1.75
Gold Filled Pin.....		$1.25

ALL ORDERS MUST HAVE THE APPROVAL OF THE PRINCIPAL AND WILL BE SENT C. O. D. ADDRESS ORDERS TO

H. V. CHURCH, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

WARNING

The National Honor Society has met with such great success that imitations are springing up in different parts of the country. These pseudo honor societies seem to have largely a commercial objective, and plan to exploit scholarship for financial ends. Members of our department are warned to beware of any plan to sell pins or emblems to pupils under the guise of scholarship, and are urged not to lend their aid or influence to such organizations.

The Department of Secondary-School Principals recommends only the National Honor Society and the National Junior Honor Society.

The National Junior Honor Society

The National Junior Honor Society is patterned very closely after the Senior Honor Society. The Junior Society is designed for ninth and tenth grades in four year high schools, and for eighth, ninth, and tenth grades in junior high schools. This organization is now a going concern, and already there are a number of chapters, both in senior high schools and junior high schools. The national constitution, the model constitution, and booklet of information as well as the application blank will be sent on request.

Direct all applications to:

H. V. CHURCH, Executive Secretary,
3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

Emblem, National Junior Honor Society

The emblem is made in two grades; ten karat gold and gold filled. All pins have safety catch. The prices are as follows:

Ten Karat Pin,.....	$1.50
Gold Filled Pin,.....	1.00

ALL ORDERS MUST HAVE THE APPROVAL OF
THE PRINCIPAL and will be sent C. O. D.

Address orders to: H. V. CHURCH,

SEALS AND MEMBERSHIP CARDS

Membership Cards—Since the organization of the National Honor Society there has been a growing demand for membership cards in the organization. Cards of membership both for members of the National Honor Society and for the members of the National Junior Honor Society are now on sale. The cards ($2\frac{1}{2}'' \times 3\frac{3}{4}''$) are engrossed on a fine quality of cardboard, have the emblem of the Society embossed upon them, and require only the insertion of the name of the member.

The price of the cards is five cents apiece.

Seals—The Seal ($1\frac{1}{4}'' \times 1\frac{1}{2}''$) is a gilt embossed sticker to be affixed on the diplomas of members of chapters. A replica of the emblem is embossed on the seal.

The price of the seals is five cents apiece.

Plaques—A bronze wall plaque has been designed and manufactured. Schools that have chapters of the National Honor Society will now have the opportunity of having this plaque. It consists of a solid bronze casting mounted on a walnut back. The size is thirteen by sixteen inches and the weight is ten pounds. A chain is furnished. All lettering, as well as the name of the school chapter and the emblem, is raised and polished above the bronze background.

The price is $25.00, which includes transportation and packing.

Order only from:

H. V. Church
3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

National Honor Membership Certificate

In response to repeated demands, the Department of Secondary-School Principals has prepared membership certificates $8\frac{1}{2} \times 11$ for members of the National Honor Society. These certificates are lithographed on artificial parchment with the die of a facsimile of the emblem stamped in gold. They sell for ten cents apiece postpaid. Direct orders to H. V. Church, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

UNIFORM CERTIFICATES

The Department of Secondary-School Principals has been distributing uniform certificates of recommendation for over ten years. At first they were sent out free to the members of the Department, but the demand for the certificates became so great that the printing and mailing charges became a burden to the treasury. Therefore, a change was made.

The blanks are used in transferring pupils from one secondary school to another and particularly from high school to college. The certificates are sent postpaid at the following prices:

Mailing from

Chicago	100	200	300	400	500	1000
1st zone -----	$.85	$1.55	$2.25	$2.85	$3.45	$6.10
2nd zone -----	.85	1.55	2.25	2.90	3.50	6.15
3rd zone -----	.90	1.60	2.30	2.95	3.60	6.25
4th zone -----	.90	1.60	2.35	3.10	3.80	6.50
5th zone -----	.95	1.70	2.40	3.15	3.90	6.65

8th zone -----	1.00	1.80	2.65	3.55	4.30	7.40

The blanks will be mailed on receipt of price, or C. O. D.

Direct orders to:

H. V. Church, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

THE STANDARD HIGH-SCHOOL PERSONAL RECORD CARDS

The standard record forms (5x8) which were approved by the Department of Secondary-School Principals at the meeting at Boston are printed on cardboard suitable for vertical filing systems. This card is especially designed for small and medium size high schools.

Space is provided on these blanks for scholarship records for five years. An extra year is included for pupils of four-year high schools who may desire to do graduate work. It is recommended that six year junior-senior schools use separate cards for the records of the junior and of the senior schools.

When the guidance information called for in the lower right hand corner seems to be of a changeable nature, as would often be true of such items as "Vocational Preference," it is suggested that it be written in pencil so that it can be erased and changed when necessary.

The schedule of prices, postpaid, follows:

Zones	100	200	500	1000
1 & 2 -----	$1.40	$2.70	$4.90	$ 8.90
3 -----	1.45	2.75	5.00	9.05
4 -----	1.50	2.80	5.10	9.20
5 -----	1.55	2.85	5.20	9.45
6 -----	1.60	2.90	5.35	9.60
7 -----	1.65	3.00	5.50	9.85
8 -----	1.70	3.10	5.65	10.00

The cards will be shipped on receipt of price, or C. O. D.

Direct orders to H. V. CHURCH, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

The Department offers to its members life insurance in its most inexpensive form. The salient features of the plan are:

1. Low premium. The premium is ten dollars a year a thousand for those insured for $3,000. See table below for rates for those over forty-five years of age.
2. No medical examination (with exceptions).
3. Total and permanent disability benefits. If an insured member becomes totally and permanently disabled, his insurance will be paid in monthly installments.
4. Conversion privilege. When an insured member leaves the profession to enter another professional or economic group, he may convert his group policy into any of the policies (except term insurance) customarily issued by the insurance company for the same amount at the current rates of the attained age.

5. Age limit is sixty-five years.
6. Individual policies. These show rights of insured, amount, and beneficiary.
7. Current protection. There are no savings, accumulation, or paid-up features. Insurance is for one year at a time, and is renewable each year, at the option of the insured member.
9. Amounts offered:
$3,000 for all ages from 21 to 45 (nearest birthday) inclusive. $1,500 for all ages from 46 to 65 (nearest birthday) inclusive.

Annual Rates per $1,000 for those 45 or older:

Age	Premium	Age	Premium	Age	Premium
45-----	$11.10	52-----	$16.90	59-----	$28.15
46-----	11.65	53-----	18.15	60-----	30.40
47-----	12.30	54-----	19.50	61-----	32.90
48-----	13.05	55-----	20.90	62-----	35.50
49-----	13.90	56-----	22.50	63-----	38.40
50-----	14.80	57-----	24.25	64-----	41.50
51-----	15.80	58-----	26.10	65-----	44.90

Send for application blanks to H. V. Church, Executive Secretary, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

The Department of Secondary-School Principals is now prepared to offer to its members reduced rates for automobile insurance. If you are interested in protection for your car at a lower premium than you are now paying, fill out the blank in the back of this bulletin and send it to H. V. Church, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois.

The members of the Department who own motor cars may now procure complete, sound automobile insurance protection with efficient nationwide service at annual savings of 25% off the usual cost of such coverage through the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Company of Chicago.

The "L-M-C", as the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Company is familiarly known, has been thoroughly investigated by this Department and the following facts concerning it have been fully verified:

1. Organization and Financial Strength

Founded in 1912, "L-M-C" has in twenty years advanced to a place among the three largest mutual casualty companies in the country. It has cash assets over $15,500,000, net cash surplus exceeding $2,200,000 and its annual volume of business exceeds $14,300,000. The company ranks fourth among all classes of carriers in automobile casualty insurance writings and leads all mutual companies in this field, ranking as the "World's Greatest Automobile Mutual." Mr. James S. Kemper, recognized as one of the nation's outstanding insurance executives, is president and general manager of "L-M-C."

"L-M-C" has probably the finest "depression" record of any insurance carrier in the country. It increased its annual premium income 56%, its assets 52%, and its surplus 45.4%, during the past three years.

2. Loss Payments and Service

Throughout its entire history "L-M-C" has had an unsurpassed record for the prompt, efficient, and fair adjustment of claims. The company has established and maintained a service organization of offices in principal cities and hundreds of trained claim representatives at other strategic points throughout the United States and Canada. From coast to coast, the "L-M-C" policyholder is always within easy reach of "L-M-C" claim service representative, a factor of great importance when on a motor trip.

3. Savings in Cost

As a mutual company, "L-M-C" has no stockholders for whom it must earn profits. The company is owned wholly by its policyholders, and the substantial portion of its income remaining after payment of losses and expenses and the creation of liberal reserves is returned to them in dividends, thus effecting substantial annual savings in insurance cost. The saving made on automobile insurance has never been less than 25% of the annual premium. During 1931 the total of dividend savings to policyholders exceeded $2,500,000 and the company has paid for losses and returned to policyholders in dividend savings over $60,000,000 since organization.

See application blank at the back of this bulletin.

If you will fill the application blank and send it to the Executive Secretary, he will quote the special rate to members. When you receive this quotation, you can then decide if you can save money by accepting this special rate.

The Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Company is licensed to write insurance in every state of the Union except Arkansas, Louisiana, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, and Wyoming.

FIRE INSURANCE

A new service, fire insurance, is now open with reduced rates to our members. This coverage is with the Central Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance Company. If you are interested, fill in the blank at the end of this bulletin and send it to the Executive Secretary, H. V. Church, 3129 Wenonah Avenue, Berwyn, Illinois. The secretary will be glad to give quotations.

General fire insurance can be written for the members in California, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin, District of Columbia, and Canada.

SPECIAL CLUB RATES FOR CONSUMERS' RESEARCH

The Department of Secondary-School Principals offers to its members a special club rate for subscription to Consumers' Research (one year) and to membership in the Department (one year) for three dollars.

Following are excerpts from a leaflet issued by Consumers' Research:

CONSUMERS' RESEARCH

Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York as a membership corporation

24 WEST 25TH STREET

New York City

Organized to provide unbiased information and counsel on goods bought by the ultimate consumer; not a business enterprise, not operated for profit.

What widely advertised hair remover, sold by department stores throughout the country, has poisoned a number of users?

What make of vacuum cleaner, out of seven tested, removed the highest percentage of dirt?

What kind of gasoline injures the valves of many cars?

What shaving soaps will reduce your shaving soap expenditure to three cents a year?

Consumers' Research Was Organized to Give You the Answers to These and Hundreds of Similar Questions.

The answers are given as confidential information to subscribers only and come from impartial technical experts, not from manufacturers, merchants, agents, or advertisers. Such information cannot be obtained by individual consumers from government bureaus or any other sources. All available data are supplied to Consumers' Research's subscribers in an annual Handbook of Buying listing by name recommended and not-recommended brands of hundreds of different commodities, and in periodic Bulletins which supplement the Handbook and bring it up to date. The Confidential Service costs $2 a year (Canadian, $2.50; Foreign, $3).

Consumers' Research Tests and Compares Many of the Things You Buy.

CONSUMERS' RESEARCH is organized, supported and managed entirely by consumers and devoted to their service. It is designed especially for those who cannot afford to spend unwisely either one dollar or one thousand dollars in a blind selection from dozens of competing articles, each asserted to be best. It is intended to fill the gap resulting from the failure of government adequately to protect the consumer against the advertising and selling of completely worthless or even dangerous commodities. With full allowance for the efforts of the Federal Trade Commission and the Food and Drug Administration, the government affords practically no protection against fraudulent and misleading advertising and selling. Consumers' Research is the only organization in the world which takes the risks of controversy with business interests involved in discussing inferior products in terms which anyone can understand and apply in the selection and purchase of goods in the retail market.

Nature and Extent of Benefits to Subscribers

Those most familiar with the work of Consumers' Research believe that if its subscribers follow the advice it furnishes, they will be enabled, with few exceptions, to make their incomes go farther, and their purchases serve them better and longer and with less risk to life, health, and comfort than they possibly could without its assistance.

The Cost of the Confidential Service

The Confidential Service is supplied for $2 a year (Canadian $2.50, Foreign $3). Subscription is open to any individual consumer who in good faith signs the application blank agreeing to keep the information confidential and remits the proper amount.
